the other (left) side of the way, a short street leads to the Fountain of Trèvi, the handsomest in Rome. About the centre of the thronged mass of irregular streets lying between the Corso and the long and wide Via Giulia, running close to the Tiber, is the Piazza Navona, with its numerous fountains and obelisk, already mentioned. Amongst the Palaces to be noticed in this quarter are the Rospoli, now used partly as a café, club-rooms, &c., and usually called the Café Nuovo. Its noble marble staircase is an object of just admiration. The Borghese, with its fine collection of Italian masters; the Chigbi, the Piombino, the Massimi, the Pio, the Sciarra, the Doria, the Torlonia (formerly known as the Bracciano, or Orsini), the Colonna (occupied as the French Embassy), the Altieri, the Venezia, and Palazzo Corsa,* all of which have some one or more attractive features of high art. There are also here, the Farnese, the Braschi, the Cancellaria, and the Spada, Palaces, which latter possesses, in its collection of ancient sculptures and marbles, the celebrated statue of Pompey,† which stood in the Senate House attached to Pompey's Theatre, and at the base of which Julius Cæsar fell beneath the daggers of his assassins, Brutus, Cassius, and the other conspirators. The Palazzo della Cancelleria was built in the pontificate of Sixtus IV., towards the close of the fifteenth century, by Cardinal Riario, with materials taken chiefly from the Colosseum and one or two others of the ancient structures of the city. Its cortile, or quadrangular court, surrounded by a portico of two stories in height, which is sustained by a range of antique granite columns, forms a noble memorial of the grand and harmonious conceptions of the celebrated architect Bramante, from whose designs the palace was erected. The chief apartments are occupied by the Cardinal-Chancellor of the Papal government and his subordinates

The Farnese Palace is situated in the Piazza of the same name, which is decorated with a pair of beautiful fountains facing the superb archway that forms the entrance to the cortile of the palace. This cortile is the most magnificent structure of the kind in Rome; its area is a regular square in its proportions, and is encompassed by a noble portico rising three stories one above the other, and supported by a range of columns of three separate orders of architecture—the Corinthian, the Ionic, and the Doric. The apartments, which are open to the public, are spacious and lofty, and are decorated with frescoes, rich cornices, and sculptured marbles, &c., and contain some few reliques of ancient art; but the gems of the Farnese collection have been transferred by the King of Naples to the Royal Museum of his capital. The palace at present forms the residence of the Neapolitan ambassador. It was founded by Pope Paul III., when Cardinal Farnese, who rifled for the purpose the Colosseum, and every other ancient structure, that possessed a marble slab, column, or statue remaining unappropriated in Rome. (A View of the Exterior is given at page 325.)

The Massimi Palace contains a fine collection of paintings by the best Italian masters, and one gem of ancient Greek sculpture, representing a figure in the act of throwing the discus or quoit.

On the Capitoline Hill there is the Senators' Palace, built upon the solid Etruscan masonry of the ruins of the ancient Tabularium, and crowned on its summit with a female figure bearing a cross—a representation of Christianized Rome, which forms a most conspicuous object from the Corso. The palace itself, which was erected about five centuries ago by Boniface IX. calls for no notice. Situated immediately adjoining it in the same Piazza (di Campidoglio), are the Capitoline Museum, the collection in which, though far inferior to that of the Vatican, contains, however, many valuable reliques of ancient art, amongst others, the well-known Capitoline Venus and the Dying Gladiator; and the Palazzo dei Conservatori, which contains a good collection of objects of ancient and modern art, not the least interesting portion of which is the large number of busts and statues of eminent Italian poets, painters, and men of science of the close of the last four centuries. The celebrated bronze group of the wolf suckling Romulus and Remus, which was dug up at the foot of the Palatine, near where it stood at the Ruminal Fig-Tree in old Rome, and which is referred to in the writings of several ancient authors, is placed in this Palace. A representation of this most interesting relic of ancient art is given in the group in the Frontispiece.

The portion of the Capitol represented in the Engraving at page 316 is the Piazza di Campidoglio, the ancient Intermontium, so called from being situated between the two peaks of the Tarpeian Rock and the Capitoline Hill, properly so called, which was crowned with the great Temple of Jupiter, on the site now occupied by the Church of Ara Coeli. The Piazza, which is approached by the series of broad steps or inclined planes in front, is of very limited extent, and scarcely deserves the title of square. It is, however, a locality to which the highest interest attaches, from the early period when Romulus fixed his asylum there, to attract a population to his new city, some seven or eight centuries before Christ, down to the present day. The edifices which now occupy the celebrated site, and which are seen in the View, are—the Senator's Palace, in front; on the right, the Palace of Conservators; and on the left, the Capitoline Museum. The monuments which decorate the Piazza are of great antiquity. At the bottom of the ascent on either side are two black granite figures of lionesses marked with red spots, of the very earliest period of Egyptian art: they are supposed to have belonged to the ancient Temple of Serapis, in the Campus Martius, near the ruins of which they were found. At the summit of the ascent are two groups of Castor and Pollux standing beside their horses; they were found about three centuries ago, near the site of the ancient Temple of Castor and Pollux, in the present Ghetto. The men are colossal, contrasted with the horses. On either side along the balustrade are sculptured groups of trophies, statues of Constantine and his son, and an ancient mile-stone, dug up on the Appian Way, one mile from Rome, and marked with the numeral I.—all rescued from the superincumbent soil at different periods. In the centre of the Piazza stands a colossal equestrian statue in bronze of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius.

The flight of steps seen on the left of the Engraving leads to the Church of Ara Coeli.

The Caffarelli Palace, the residence of the Prussian ambassador, is on the Tarpeian Rock.

The low, dingy collection of filthy lanes opposite the upper part of the Island of San Bartolomeo, is the Jew's quarter, or Ghetto, surrounded by an enclosure, the gates of which were locked every night and opened in the morning, previously to the accession of the present Pope, Pio Nono, who abolished that invidious remnant of bygone oppression.

The ruins of the Orsi Palace—so celebrated in Roman story for the tragic fate of the noble family, the Cenci, in the latter end of the sixteenth century—are close to the northern end of the Ghetto. It was from this inauspicious mansion that the beautiful Beatrice (whose portrait has been rendered immortal by the pencil of Guido) proceeded to the place of public execution in the Via de San Giovanni Decollato, where she was beheaded, along with her wretched relations, on the 11th of September, 1599.

Beyond the Ghetto, the Borgo, and the Lungara, the principal streets which lie on the left bank of the Tiber, the most conspicuous principal ones it contains are the Farnesina Palace, the Palazzo Salviati, and the Palazzo Corsini, where Queen Christina of Sweden, after her adoption of the Roman Catholic religion, long resided. Its picture-room some of the finest pleasure-grounds in Rome.

The Farnesina Palace deserves notice, not only for the perfection of its plan and the elegance of its construction, but also for Raphael's exquisite decorations, the principal of which are the frescos on the ceiling of one of the apartments on the ground-floor, representing the loves of Cupid and Psyche, their nuptials, and the council of the gods—the latter being a large central painting the size of life, around which are delineated, on a smaller scale, the various incidents of the fable; and the fresco of Galatea, on the wall of another apartment adjoining, in which the nymph is represented standing in an exultant posture in a shell drawn on the waters by dolphins, and escorted by Nereids, Tritons, &c. In this same chamber of Galatea, the frescoes on the ceiling by Volterra and Sebastian del Piombo also attract attention; and all are remarkable for the freshness which the colours preserve, being as little tarnished as though they had been but just painted, instead of being nearly three centuries and a half in existence. The Farnesina was built about the year 1508, during the pontificate of the warrior Pope Julius II. (A.D. 1503—1513), by his friend and treasurer, the banker Agostino Chigi; and, amongst other incidents of its history, not the least remarkable is a grand banquet which was given within its walls to Leo X., towards whom such excessive homage was exhibited on the occasion, that the rich cups and dishes—many of them of solid silver, gilt—were thrown into the Tiber, that no profane hands or lips might afterwards defile them by their touch. The Farnesina is in the occupation of the Neapolitan Consul.*

The Palace of the Vatican lies also beyond the Tiber, and is incorporated with the Church of St. Peter's. The history of its original foundation is involved in doubt; the most probable conjecture being, that some years subsequent to the completion of St. Peter's, viz. about the middle of the fourth century, the first buildings were erected for an occasional residence of the Popes or Bishops of Rome, who usually occupied the Palace of St. John Lateran as their dwelling. The buildings, however, whatever may have been the date of their origin, were of an inferior character, and greatly dilapidated in the twelfth century, when they were in part restored; and from that period to the present, almost every Pope who has sat in the chair of St. Peter has made additions, alterations, and restorations, the principal of which, with their decorations, were effected during the period of the revival of the arts, in the latter part of the fifteenth, and beginning of the sixteenth century.

On the wonders of the Vatican volumes have been written, without exhausting or even doing full justice to the subject. Within our limits we can only mention one or two of the features that are most worthy the notice of the educated tourist.

The principal feature of the palace is at the northern end of the portico of St. Peter's, by Bernini's celebrated staircase the Scala Regia, which conducts to a magnificent suite of apartments, containing amongst others the Sistine Chapel, built by Sixtus IV., and decorated in the succeeding reigns by Michael Angelo and other eminent artists in fresco, the principal painting being M. Angelo's "Last Judgment," on the wall of the choir over the altar. This most extraordinary production of the artist's pencil covers a surface 900 feet square, and occupied eight years in its completion; but at present the colours are much injured by the lapse of time and the effects of the smoke of wax tapers. The Pauline Chapel is als in this part of the palace: it was built by Paul III.; and here also M. Angelo's frescoes are much damaged from the same cause. About a quarter of a mile northward of this suite of rooms, the apartment or villa called the Belvedere is situated; and about midway between lies another large suite of rooms, which are in part appropriated to the Vatican library. These three separate buildings are united by a magnificent line of galleries or corridors running parallel on the western and eastern sides, so that the whole forms a continuous series of buildings, with large courts or squares of vast proportions in the centre. The first court is called the Cortile San Damaso; and the corridors along the sides are named Raphael's Loggie, from having been decorated by that artist and his scholars. The other courts are named the Cortile of Bramante and the Cortile of the Belvidere.

Raphael's Loggie are three stories high, with an open arcade to the court; and there, especially in the second story, on the walls and ceiling are to be seen those exquisite frescoes of that divine painter, which have been the admiration of succeeding ages, as well for the extraordinary variety and exuberant fertility of design they display as for the beauty and perfection of their execution and their rich colouring. From which has been derived that style of ornamental painting from its origin, Raffaellesque. Adjoining Raphael's Loggie is the corridor usually called the Lapidarian Gallery, from its being fitted up with ancient monuments, both of the Pagan and the primitive Christians, which were taken out of the catacombs. These interesting reliques of a most important epoch in Christian history are classified according to a most admirable arrangement, and the inscriptions are generally perfectly legible. The inscriptions on those of the Christians usually show, by their incorrect orthography, bad grammatical construction, and the frequent mingling of Greek and Latin words, that the first converts to the faith of Christ were the very humblest classes of the community. The following is an instance:—

ΔΗΜΗΤΡΙΟ ΕΤ LEONTIA
CEIRIKE ΘΕΙΑΙΣ ΒΕΝΕΜΕΡ-
ΤΙ ΝΗCΘΕC [μνησθη σου] ΙΗ. COYC [Ιησους]
Ο ΚΤΡΙΟC ΤΕΚΝΟΝ.

(Demetris et Leontia, Siricæ filiæ benemerenti. Μνησθη σου Ιησους ο Κυριος τεκνον)

"Demetris and Leontia to Sirica their well-deserving daughter. THE LORD JESUS REMEMBER THEE, O CHILD."

On many of these monumental slabs is also to be seen the hieroglyphic which the early Christians generally inscribed upon the tombs of new converts or catechumens, of the figure of a fish, or the Greek word signifying a fish, namely Ιχθυς, which is formed of the initial letters of the words Ιησους Χριστος, Θεου υιος, σωτηρ, Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Saviour.

The gallery named the Corridore Chiaramonti, after the family name of Pius VII., contains a vast collection of ancient and modern sculptures, which cover the present arrangement to Canova.

The various other galleries, apartments, museums, &c., which are decorated with frescoes and other paintings, are filled with productions both of modern and ancient art, such as sculptures, paintings, tapestries, objects of antique Roman, Grecian, Egyptian, and Etruscan art, the latter containing beautiful chapleis, fillets, and head-dresses of the most exquisite workmanship, and of virgin gold—the whole forming the most complete aggregation of the most admirable productions of human genius ever brought together in one place.

THE CHURCHES.

Numerous and remarkable as are the Palaces and Villas of Rome, the grand characteristic feature of the city is its CHURCHES, of which there are about three hundred and sixty. Of those in the neighbourhood of the Corso, we may mention San Lorenzo in Lucina, Santa Maria del Popolo, Santa Maria sopra Minerva, San Carlo al Corso, San Marco, and the two Jesuit churches of the Gesu and San Ignacio, the former of which contains a very gorgeous chapel, dedicated to San Ignacio Loyola, the founder of the order. Details of this chapel have already been given, as it is somewhat like another group in white marble, in the Transepts of the Church of St. Peter, representing the Trinity (the Father bearing the body of his Son, and the Holy Ghost in the form of a dove, beneath which is an altar-piece (the portrait of Loyola) painted by the artist Jesuit, Father Pozzi, who also designed the chapel. This altar-piece is made to slide on one side on great festivals, and display, in the recess behind, a statue of the same saint, said to be of solid silver, roped in precisely vestments; while, below, is seen his shrine or tomb, of gilded bronze, sculptured with the most consummate skill, and decorated with gems of great price—a perfect mine of wealth and costly workmanship. The pedestal of this altar, which bears the marble group mentioned, is sustained by columns fluted in bronze and lapis lazuli, which, with the gilded bronze candlesticks† on the altar-table, impart a splendid appearance to the whole structure.

There are also to be noticed the churches of San Marcello, Santa Maria di Loretto, Santa Maria in Via Lata, the Santi Apostoli—the latter originally built by Constantine the Great, but erected anew altogether in the fifteenth, and again restored in the beginning of the eighteenth, century. It contains among other monuments those of the Colonna and Rospigliosi families, and that of the celebrated Canganelli—Clement XIV.—whose hall for the suppression of the Jesuits in the last century has made his name remarkable in history. This monument is the work of Canova when in his twenty-fifth year; it consists of a colossal group in white marble, representing the Pope sustained by two female figures, Temperance and Chastity. Another monument by Canova, in this church, perpetuates the memory of his artist friend Volpato. Westwards, towards the Tiber, there are Santa Maria in Vallecella, Santa Maria dell'Anima, the ancient church of Santa Maria in Domnica (dating from the third century), Santa Anastasia, Santa Maria Egiziaca, San Giorgio in Velabro, and San Teodoro (said to be on the site of the ancient chief Temple of Vesta).

The Aventine, Palatine, Viminal, and Celian Hills have some churches and convents scattered through their fields and gardens. Of these, San Gregorio, on the Celian, is to be noticed for its frescoes by Guido and Domenechino; and midway between the Colosseum and St. John Lateran in the Via San Giovanni, is the very ancient church of San Clemente, named after one of the Popes or Bishops of Rome of the first century of the Christian era. The date of its original foundation, or rather of its edification and appropriation to the purposes of a church (for it was the house of St. Clement), is A.D. 91. The notices of its history are irregular and uncertain. It is mentioned in the early ecclesiastical records of the beginning of the fifth century, and again in the eighth and ninth centuries, when it was repaired and restored. It is a highly interesting relic of the ecclesiastical architecture of the earliest ages of Christianity, of which it preserves the characteristic features in a high degree of perfection. It possesses not only two excellent specimens of the ancient pulpit called ambo, but also, in the centre of its triple nave, the peculiar raised enclosure of early churches which corresponds with the choir of modern structures. This area is square, and its front wall (some five or six feet high) is of marble, wrought in the most curious perforated net-work imaginable. The pulpits, or ambones, also of rich marble, stand at the corners outside in the nave; that on the Gospel side being furnished with a slender pillar of white marble, to hold the candle lighted during the reading of the Gospel to the congregation. The high altar stands isolated in the centre, beneath a canopy. There are no side chapels; but, at the ends of the naves, there are two, containing some dingy frescoes.

In this quarter of the city is also the Church of San Pietro in Vincoli, remarkable for the celebrated colossal statue of Moses, by Michael Angelo. It occupies the central niche of the lower compartment of the monument of Pope Julius II. It is represented in the Frontispiece.

The Church of Santa Maria degli Angeli, at the extreme east of the city, is remarkable, not only for the beauty of its interior, but for having been formed by Michael Angelo, in the middle of the sixteenth century, out of a large oblong apartment of the Baths of Diocletian, which was in good preservation at the time, and is so still, the ancient vaulted ceiling, cornices, and granite columns sustaining the latter being as perfect, after the lapse of sixteen hundred years, as when they were first constructed. Amongst the paintings with which it is decorated is a series of large pictures, which are some the originals, and others copies of the mosaics in St. Peter's. On the rich inlaid marble pavement there is a large brass line, and other astronomical devices, by which the exact time of noon is ascertained, by means of a sun-beam, admitted through a hole in the roof, passing over the line at the moment.

In this quarter of the city there is another remarkable ecclesiastical edifice to be noticed—the Church of Santa Pudentiana, which gives name to the street in which it stands. Its site is that of the house of the Roman senator, Servilius Pudens, whose hospitality to the Apostles St. Peter* and St. Paul, while in Rome, led to his own conversion to Christianity, and that of his whole family; viz. his wife Claudia, the daughter of the British chieftain the celebrated Caractacus, who had changed her name, like her father, in honour of the Emperor Claudius;† his two sons, Timothy and Novatus; and his two daughters, Praxedes and Pudentiana.‡ Independently of the associations connected with the site, there is nothing calling for special notice, either in the exterior or interior of the church, which has been so often repaired, and in great part rebuilt, since the erection of the first little chapel that stood there in the early part of the second century, that scarcely any remains of the original structure exist, with the exception of the ancient marble columns of the nave, which are said to have belonged to the house of Pudens, and the antique altar-table in a chapel at the end of the nave, which is said to be the same altar at which St. Peter officiated when he resided in the house of Pudens. Whatever degree of authenticity is due to this statement, there is, at all events, one relic of the first age of Christianity which bears upon its front self-evident proof of the truth of its history—it is a portion of the tomb of the daughter of Pudens, which, with many other similar sepulchral slabs, now in the Lapidarian Gallery of the Vatican, and in the churches of San Lorenzo, Sant' Agnese, San Giorgio in Velabro, Santa Cecilia, the College of Romano, &c., was found in the Catacombs, where the early Christians not only lived, when hiding from the persecutions of the Emperors, but also buried their deceased brethren. It is let into the wall, and the words "Cornelia Pudentiana. Bene. Merenti," and some numeral letters, referring either to the age of the deceased or the year of her death, are traced upon it, in the style which characterizes many of these ancient monuments.

In the island of San Bartolomeo, the church of the same name occupies the site of the ancient Pagan Temple of Esculapius. It is said to contain the body of the Apostle St. Bartholomew, in a splendid sarcophagus of porphyry, which is below the high altar in the choir.

Beyond the Tiber, in the Trastevere, before ascending to the Janiculum, besides the Church of St. Cecilia (which was originally founded in the beginning of the third century, and which is remarkable for the beautiful shrine, and exquisitely sculptured statue of the saint, in white marble, representing her as she lay after her decapitation, with the head separated from the body, and at a little distance—the work of the sculptor Stephen Maderno), there are also the churches of San Francesco a Ripa (which contains some richly decorated chapels, also frescoes, oil paintings, statues, tombs, &c. of a high class of art), and Santa Maria in Trastevere, which, though the present building is little more than four hundred years erected, stands upon the site of the first public church of the Christians in Rome—the Emperor Alexander Severus having given permission to Pope Calixtus I. to build a place of worship there, A.D. 222.

On the high ground of the Janiculum stands the Church of San Pietro in Montorio, occupying the locality which tradition fixes as the scene of the crucifixion of St. Peter. The exact spot is marked by a beautiful little circular temple, or detached chapel, built in the cloisters of the convent, by the celebrated architect Bramante, just outside the northern flank of the church. In the floor of the crypt, underneath, there is a round opening, generally supposed to be the excavation in which the cross that sustained the body of the holy Apostle was elevated.

The celebrated "Transfiguration" of Raphael, which is now in the Vatican, was originally the altar-piece of the high altar of San Pietro in Montorio; but the French carried it away along with other valuable

* The Corsa is a circular brick building, situated off a small cross street—Via de Portoni—between the Piazza Colonna and the Corso, and in all that now remains of the magnificent mausoleum of Augustus, in the Campus Martius, in front of which stood the two Egyptian obelisks which now decorate the Piazza Quirinale and the front of the Palazzo Montecitorio respectively. The mass now stands, under its modern title of Corsa, is now used as a circus for an equestrian troupe.

† This noble product of ancient art, although the Parian marble is yet strong with age, much by no means derelict from the beauty of its appearance, is in perfect preservation. It is of colossal dimensions: the attitude of the figure is calm and majestic, and the countenance is singularly expressive of calm dignity. A globe, the emblem of power, a horse in the right hand. It was found in a small street near the Spada Palace, and in the immediate vicinity of the spot where it stood in the ancient city

‡ This street, or rather a short broad outlet from it towards the Tiber, is still the place of public execution, where criminals condemned to death suffer decapitation by the guillotine. It derives its name from the Church of San Giovanni Decollato, which it contains, and which has been consecrated in commemoration of the decollation of St. John the Baptist. The structure here represented is the Forum Boarium, which lies between the western point of the Palatine Hill and the Tiber.

* The greater number of the palaces are let out usually in apartments or suites of rooms to families or individuals, the reduced circumstances of the nobles frequently rendering the practice highly expedient.

† These were presented by the people of Rome to the Jesuits, as a testimonial of their admiration for the courage and devoted attachment by the members of the order in their unremitting attendance upon the sick and the dying during the prevalence of the cholera in Rome, in 1837.

‡ See Dr. Milner's "History of Winchester."

‖ Mention is made by St. Paul not only of Pudens and his wife Claudia, but also of Linus, the immediate successor of St. Peter in the Roman see. The Apostle, writing to Timothy, the first Bishop of Ephesus, says, "Linus and Epicle Chap. IV. v. 21, "Enbulus greeteth thee, and Pudens, and Linus, and Claudia, and all the brethren."

§ The lower and other parts of this church were a good deal damaged in the cross-fire of the French and Roman artillery in the various assaults of the late siege, but fortunately none of its frescoes or paintings were injured.

CASTLE OF ST. ANGELO.

FOUNTAIN OF TREVI.

plunder, and during the Empire it decorated the Louvre. On the return of the Bourbons it was restored to the Pope, and he placed it in the Vatican, where it now is. The unfortunate Beatrice Cenci was buried at the foot of this same high altar.

The Church of San Onofrio contains the monument and burial-place of the poet Tasso, the latter marked by a small marble slab in the floor, bearing an inscription stating the year of his death (A.D. 1595), the fact of his burial there, and the date of the slab (A.D. 1601), placed there by the friars. There are some rich monuments and fine frescoes (the latter by Domenichino and other masters) in the church. The large charitable institution of San Michele lies also on this side of the Tiber. In the Borgo the building which claims attention, next to Saint Peter's and the Vatican, though not a church, may be mentioned here; it is the great Hospital of Santo Spirito, which, besides comprising a lunatic asylum and a foundling, furnishes beds for upwards of 1200 patients. Indeed, by no one characteristic of a great capital is Rome more distinguished than by her numerous charitable institutions.

THE BASILICAS.

Amongst the Churches of Rome there are some six or seven which bear a relation to the others somewhat like the pre-eminence of Cathedrals over ordinary places of worship, but owing their distinction not so much to having cathedral jurisdiction as to the circumstances of their origin and history, and to their peculiar construction. They are called Basilicas, either from the fact of their having been originally public edifices of the imperial city so named, and converted to the purposes of a Christian church on the disappearance of paganism; or from having been erected according to the model of a Roman Basilica; and though in several instances, in the course of subsequent restorations, many modifications were introduced, the name was still retained as a mark of distinction.

The Basilicas of Imperial Rome were large oblong edifices, either consisting of a single nave, or divided into three or five naves, as was frequently the case, by rows of columns running along the interior from the entrance towards the upper end, and supporting an entablature, over which was a flat ceiling. Towards the upper end the floor was raised, so as to form a dais; and there was a large domed absis, or recess, in the wall at the farther extremity, and facing down the interior towards the entrance—in which was placed the Prætor's chair, where he sat while, in his capacity of judge, he administered justice. The portion of the edifice around the dais thus served as a court of law: the lower part, towards the entrance, was used in the capacity of what we should call an exchange; men of business and merchants assembled there and arranged their affairs, and the place generally was one of public resort for various purposes; some particular transactions being reserved for particular Basilicas—as, for instance, the manumission or emancipation of slaves by their masters, and the ceremonies pertaining thereto, took place generally, in the more recent periods of the Empire, in the great Ulpian Basilica of the Forum of Trajan.

FROM THE WALLS, NEAR THE PORTA SAN PANCRAZIO.

Buildings of this character, it is obvious, were readily adapted, with scarcely any alteration, to the uses of a Christian church. The absis at the upper end, with its Prætor's chair, served for the episcopal or archiepiscopal throne, which communicated to the church its cathedral character; the raised dais around it was enclosed with a low parapet, or balustrade, and was set apart for the celebration of the higher sacerdotal functions, and for the service or the altar, serving thus as the sanctuary or choir; while the great body of the nave accommodated within its capacious dimensions the large numbers which the daily spread of Christianity rescued from Paganism.

The dais was sometimes prolonged a considerable way into the interior, towards the church entrance, and a part only of it appropriated as the sanctuary, a space being left between the latter and the episcopal chair, so as to afford room, on great festivals, for processions to pass round, and for other special ceremonial purposes. In front of the sanctuary, facing the congregation, were placed two pulpits, one at each corner, from which sermons and homilies were delivered, and the Epistle and Gospel read aloud to the congregation. Over the entrance, and sometimes, also, along the sides of the church, galleries were erected for the accommodation of women exclusively. In front, the Basilica church had usually a large atrium, or courtyard before it, surrounded by an arcade or portico, where, at first, the new converts—the neophytes and catechumens, while yet their instruction in the Christian doctrine was incomplete, and they were, in consequence, unbaptized—remained during the performance of Divine service, not being deemed worthy, in their still unregenerated state, to assist within the church at the holy offices of religion. At a shortly subsequent period, another class was added to the occupants of the portico. When persons who had given great scandal to the faithful by the commission of any great public crime, or any notorious act of sin—such, for instance, as a denial of Christianity during the persecutions, through terror of the cruel tortures and horrid deaths inflicted on the martyrs, or the preaching or adopting of erroneous doctrines—when persons of this class repented, and claimed to be re-admitted into the fold of Christ, the sincerity of

PORTA SAN PANCRAZIO

VILLA SANTUCCI, HEAD QUARTERS OF GENERAL OUDINOT.

FARNESE PALACE.

PONTE MOLLE.

their repentance and their humility were tested, the public scandal was repaired, and the temporal punishment due to sin expiated by public acts of atonement and mortification performed before the eyes of the faithful, which were called canonical penances, and which were often extended over a long period of a man's life. Of these canonical penances, one of the most ordinary was exclusion from the church during Divine service, the penitent being obliged to exhibit practical proof of his unworthiness to enter the holy precincts, by kneeling, with some conspicuous mark of his degradation displayed upon his person, amongst the unbaptized converts in the portico of the courtyard. There was usually a fountain, called cantharus, placed in the centre of this atrium or courtyard, facing the principal entrance of the church, both as an ornament and to serve the purpose of ablution.

Such, then, were the chief characteristic features of the early Basilica churches, and the particular objects which they served; and though they are no longer retained, or are greatly modified, in modern churches, yet they are to be met with, either altogether or in part, in some of the most ancient ecclesiastical edifices of the city, the Church of San Clemente presenting, perhaps, the best specimen, though not generally dignified with the title of Basilica, which, apart from mere characteristics of construction, is applied, at the present day, to designate the exalted rank or magnitude of the sacred edifice which is so styled.

The Basilicas of the present period are St. Peter's, Santa Maria Maggiore, St. John Lateran, Santa Croce in Gerusalemme, San Lorenzo, St. Sebastian, and St. Paul's, without the walls. Of these, the last four do not call for any especial notice.

St. Paul's, previous to its being reduced to ashes about thirty years ago, was one of the great sights of Rome, but its restoration is at present not completed. It owes its origin to the piety of Constantine the Great; and its site, two miles from the city, on the Ostian road, was chosen on account of its proximity to the locality which tradition pointed out as the burial-place of St. Paul. The exact spot where the Apostle was beheaded is marked, about a mile further on, by three little chapels or shrines. St. Paul's Basilica had five naves.

The Basilica of St. Sebastian is also without the walls, on the Appian Way, and its origin dates from the time of Constantine, though the present edifice is comparatively modern. It is an instance of the single nave; the choir is likewise raised slightly; and the absis contains the high altar. The church is not very remarkable either for great size or particular embellishment; its chief attraction being the exquisite marble statue in one of its lateral chapels, representing the martyrdom of St. Sebastian. There is an entrance from the nave to the catacombs of St. Callixtus—the largest and most celebrated of all those subterranean passages in or around Rome.

STUDENTS OF THE PROPAGANDA COLLEGE.

San Lorenzo resembles the two former in the early period of its foundation; in its being situated without the walls—on the road leading from the gate of San Lorenzo, on the eastern side of the city, to Tivoli; and in its being built over a range or catacombs to which the name of Santa Ciriaca is given. It has a triple nave and several lateral chapels, and abounds with ancient and valuable marbles, besides some frescoes and other paintings. The date of the original structure is the middle of the fourth century, but repairs and restorations have not left much of the primitive construction. Its present condition is the result of restorations made in the pontificate of Innocent X., about two centuries ago.

Santa Croce was erected by St. Helena, the mother of the Emperor Constantine the Great, to serve as the shrine and depository of the cross on which our Saviour was believed to have been crucified. From the accounts left us of the matter by the various writers of the fourth and fifth centuries, who have noticed the subject, we learn that the pious Empress made a pilgrimage to Jerusalem to recover the holy cross, which, according to the universal tradition of that time, had been buried with the crosses of the two thieves in a pit on the hill of Calvary, and was likely to be found there if careful excavation were had recourse to for the purpose. St. Helena, confiding in the truth of the tradition, or at least in the probability of its correctness, as scarcely 300 years had elapsed from the period of our Lord's crucifixion, on her arrival at Jerusalem, had the ground of Golgotha opened in various places, and ultimately had her perseverance rewarded by the discovery of three crosses, and near them the inscription, which is mentioned in the Gospel as having been placed over our Lord's head, written in the three current languages of that portion of the Empire in the time of Christ—the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew; viz. JESUS OF NAZARETH, KING OF THE JEWS. These crosses, it was inferred, were the three crosses sought for, and, therefore, one of them must be the true cross on which the sacred body of our Saviour had been suspended; and, in order to discover it, the ecclesiastical writers state that the Divine aid was earnestly sought in prayer and fasting, and that the identity of the cross of Christ was proved by the miraculous cure of a sick person, who, having touched two of the crosses without any result, was immediately restored to health by touching the third cross. This tangible memorial of the mystery of man's redemption, prized by the Empress-saint as one of the most precious relics which Christianity could possess, was transferred forthwith to the capital of the Christian world, as its most suitable abiding-place, and a temple there was erected and dedicated by her to the especial purpose of its preservation, in or about the time when her son, the Emperor Constantine, obtained full sway over the greater part of the empire (A. D. 312.) TheChurch was, therefore, called Santa Croce in Gerusalemme (the holy cross in Jerusalem). It is situated close to the city walls on the south-east side, adjoining the enclosure of the amphitheatre of the Pretorian Camp, which is incorporated in those walls; and at the time of its foundation the grounds surrounding it were occupied by the Varian Gardens, which had belonged to the Emperor Heliogabalus. The church has been rebuilt more than once, and is present belongs to a monastery, the front of which is incorporated with its façade. The interior consists of a triple nave, and in its appearance is far less attractive than many of the most ordinary churches in Rome. There is, however, the distinctive feature of the absis and the dais of the choir, in the centre of which the high altar, a handsome marble structure, stands isolated surmounted by a canopy of the same material, resting upon columns. The crypt below is said to contain the inscription above referred to of the true cross.

OSTERIA.—PLAYING AT BOWLS

Of the three great Basilicas—viz. St. John Lateran, Santa Maria Maggiore, and St. Peter's—we can but indicate, within the confined limits of this memoir, a few of the most prominent and characteristic features; all of which, if fully and accurately noticed in detail, would of themselves form a goodly sized volume. Like the other Basilicas, these also date from the first half of the fourth century, when the stormy days of persecution having passed away, together with the ascendancy of Paganism, which had received a death-blow in the accession of a Christian Prince (in the person of Constantine the Great) to the universal sovereignty of the Empire, a period of peace and prosperity for the Church set in, under the fostering influences and favour of the Imperial protection and munificence.

St. John Lateran (the Basilica next in rank to St. Peter's, which is the first) is situated a short distance to the west of Santa Croce, and close to the city walls in what is now the uninhabited portion of the area contained within their circuit. The site was originally occupied by the grounds and mansion of the senator * Plautius Lateranus, who lived in the time of the Emperor Nero, and who—having been accused of being implicated in a conspiracy against the life of that tyrant—was, with many other nobles, put to death, and his property confiscated to the Imperial exchequer. From that period, the Lateran mansion belonged to the Emperors; and, on the triumphal entry of Constantine into Rome, after the conquest of his rival at the Milvian bridge, he conferred it, together with other tracts of ground and much valuable property, upon Pope Melchiades, and it then became the palace of the Popes. A few years later, Pope Sylvester, under the immediate auspices of the Emperor, and with the funds furnished by him for the purpose, erected a magnificent church on part of the Lateran grounds, and attached to the palace, and dedicated it to the Apostles St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist. Hence the name which the Basilica still bears. It has, ever since its first foundation, been regarded as the especial cathedral church of the Pope in his capacity of Bishop of the See of Rome, who accordingly, on his elevation to the pontificate, enters upon its possession with due ceremonial and formality, and there receives the triple crown or tiara, the fisherman's ring, and all the other Papal insignia which denote at the coronation of a Pope his investiture with the two-fold authority of a temporal prince and of the Sovereign Pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church. St. John Lateran is also celebrated for the great number of provincial and ecumenical† councils of the Catholic Church, which have been held in various ages within its walls.

The ancient edifice of Constantine's age is no longer in existence, having been destroyed by fire in the beginning of the fourteenth century. It was immediately rebuilt, and has since that period been frequently in part restored or repaired, the last occasion dating about a century ago, when the present façade was erected in the pontificate of Clement XII., by the architect Galilei. It consists of a magnificent portico raised upon a terraced basement, to which access is had by a flight of steps, and bearing an attic and balustrade. The centre of the portico projects considerably, and is surmounted by a pediment with a mosaic tympanum, which supports a colossal statue of Christ bearing the cross in one hand and pointing to the heavens with the other; ten or twelve other statues on either side give full effect to the whole. On the frieze of the entablature there is an inscription stating the dedication and the erection of the façade by Clement XII.; and immediately underneath a balcony opens, from which the Pope, surrounded by cardinals, prelates, princes, and nobles, and seated in a moveable throne called Sedia Gestatoria, from its being borne on men's shoulders, with extended hands, gives his benediction, once a year and sometimes oftener, on great festivals, to the whole Christian world, which is generally pretty fairly represented in the kneeling crowd below, by the inhabitants of almost every nation of the globe, many of whom make the pilgrimage to Rome for the purpose, among other objects, of being present on those occasions, and are to be seen attired in cowled gown and hempen girdle, and with scrip and staff, like the Palmers of the middle ages, presenting a striking contrast to the modern order of things and appearance of life around them.—a living picture of the past, such as is to be met with nowhere else in full reality. On each side of this, the central balcony, there are two others, and beneath five corresponding entrances lead into the interior of the edifice through the portico, which is decorated with an ancient colossal statue of the Emperor Constantine, found on the Quirinal. The façade, surmounted by a colossal figure of Christ, raised on a lofty pedestal in the centre of ten flanking statues on the balustrade of the attic, altogether presents a noble aspect, and looks towards the east, which is not usually the case with churches in Rome, which face every imaginable point of the compass indiscriminately. (The illustration, page 321, shows the principal front of the edifice.) The nave, which is about 300 feet long and 200 feet broad, is divided into five alleys by rows of enormous piers running up its length from the entrances to the choir, or sanctuary; the central division being considerably wider than those on either flank, and its piers, which contain niches in front filled with large marble statues of the Apostles, being of much more massive proportions than the others. All of them are covered on their different sides with marble monuments to popes, cardinals, and other distinguished personages. There are nine lateral chapels in the nave, five leading out of the southern and four out of the northern alley, all of which are decorated with rich monuments and altars, statuary, mosaics, &c., the most beautiful being the Corsini Chapel, the first from the entrance of the church on the southern side. It was constructed from the designs of the architect Galilei for Clement XII., in a style of the most superb decoration, its principal objects of admiration being the magnificent altar, with its mosaic altar-piece, antique marble columns, and bronze figures; and the gorgeous monument of Clement XII., in which is incorporated an ancient tomb of porphyry, which was found some four centuries ago in an excavation under the façade of the Pantheon.

No description, however detailed, could convey an adequate idea of the beauty of the Corsini Chapel, without the aid of coloured drawings. Within the choir of the Basilica, at the southern end, stands the altar of the Holy Sacrament, a splendid structure: its pediment is supported by four large columns of gilded bronze, which in the times of the Empire belonged to the great Temple of Jupiter in the Capitol, and are said to have been cast, by order of the Emperor Augustus, from the bronze of the ships taken from the enemy at the battle of Actium. The other end is occupied by the organ, and in the centre, opposite the middle alley of the nave, the high altar, with the confessional of St. John at its base, rears its lofty proportions, which terminate in a spire and pinnacles in the Gothic style. The whole structure, with the exception of the flanking columns of granite, is of white marble, and with its tabernacle, which is said to contain the heads of the apostles Saints Peter and Paul, and its bronze figures of angels, and other ornaments, has a most imposing effect when viewed from the centre of the nave. The front of the altar, instead of facing the nave, in the usual manner, looks the opposite way, so that the ecclesiastic celebrating mass at it stands with his face towards the entrance of the church. There are three other chapels beyond the transept or choir, at the western extremity of the church; and all of them, together with the various other parts of the Basilica, are ornamented with sculptures and monumental erections of the rarest coloured marbles, and with bronzes, mosaics, &c.

In immediate contact with the Basilica is the Lateran Palace, both forming, as it were, a twin structure united by a portico on the northern exterior of the transept. It is a large plain building, with nothing very remarkable about it, and was originally intended as a residence for the popes, but has been long used as a museum of inferior character. Its principal restoration was effected in the latter part of the sixteenth century, by Sixtus V., who restored the Leonine chapel and chamber of Leo III., built at the close of the eighth century, which originally formed part of the old Lateran Palace, but which Sixtus detached, and lodged therein the Scala Santa, or Sacred Stairs of marble, which is stated to be the identical stairs of Pontius Pilate's palace at Jerusalem, up which our Lord was led during his passion, and shown from the balcony, all covered with wounds, to excite the commiseration of the Jews, with the words Ecce Homo. Whatever may be the correctness or probability of the traditions or historical memoranda on which the belief of this identity rests, the means of affirming or denying their accuracy will always be judged according to religious bias. Let it suffice, therefore, to state, that by the Roman people at the present day there is no one relic regarded with greater veneration; and it is considered as a pious act of lively faith, by devout people, on certain great festivals of the Church, to make the ascent of its twenty-eight steps (which is always done upon the knees. The edifice is called, from the relic in question, the Scala Santa.

In the Piazza San Giovanni, and in close proximity to the Lateran Basilica, is situated the church called the Baptistery of Constantine, where that Emperor was baptized by Pope Sylvester, in a large stone font, which is still preserved there.

The Basilica of Santa Maria Maggiore is situated on a commanding site, at the extreme east of the inhabited parts of the city, in the centre of the great thoroughfare leading, under various names, such as the Via Felice, Via Sistina, Via della Quattro Fontane, &c., from the Pincian Hill, in a south-eastern direction, to the Basilica of Santa Croce. It ranks immediately after St. John Lateran, and has it has cathedral jurisdiction, a chapter and canons, &c. It is called St. Mary the Greater, from its being the largest of all the numerous churches in Rome dedicated to the Blessed Virgin. In the open area in front of its principal or south-eastern façade, a magnificent ancient Corinthian column of white marble, surmounted by a statue in bronze of the Virgin and Child, is raised upon a pedestal, which also serves as a fountain. This column, the fluted shaft of which is nearly fifty feet high, belonged to what is now known to have been the Basilica of Constantine, in the Campo Vaccino, but which was formerly supposed to be the ruins of the Temple of Peace; and accordingly Pope Paul V., who transplanted it from its original to its present position (A. D. 1614), has perpetuated the error in the inscription on the pedestal. The piazza in front of the north-western façade is decorated with the Egyptian obelisk described in another place.

The principal façade, consisting of a portico with three open balconies above (to serve the purposes of Papal benediction once a year, as at the Lateran, is surmounted by a balustrade at top, which supports a Madonna and Child and some other statues. The portico, the interior of which is richly decorated with marble pastors. cornices, and bas-reliefs, has five entrances both from the exterior and leading to the inside of the Basilica, notwithstanding that the nave has but three avenues, which are separated from each other by a range of magnificent ancient marble columns, supporting a continuous entablature, above which is an attic divided into compartments by pilasters reaching to the cornice of the ceiling, which latter is flat; and in all these characteristic features of a Basilica, Santa Maria Maggiore adheres most strictly, of all the others, to the ancient model.

Off the nave there are eleven lateral chapels, the greater number of which are more or less richly decorated in the manner of the great Roman Churches, and contain some monuments composed of variously-coloured marbles, and executed in a high style of art. The principal are the monumental Chapel of the Borghese family, erected by Pope Paul V., and opposite to it the chapel of the Blessed Sacrament. At the end of the nave the raised dais, according to the ancient model, forms the choir, which is terminated by the characteristic absis referred to in the description of the Lateran, which is richly embellished with mosaics. The high altar stands isolated at the entrance of the choir, and is surmounted by a domed canopy, supported by four porphyry columns and their entablature. On the top rests a group of angels, in marble, bearing a bronze crown and cross. Santa Maria Maggiore was built in the middle of the fourth century, by Pope Liberius.

The View at page 320 represents the south-eastern façade of the Basilica in the background, with the large marble Corinthian column in front, towards the left hand; the smaller column (which is of granite) in its vicinity being a modern erection, placed there to commemorate the ceremony of the reception of Henry IV. of France, in the year 1595, within the pale of the Roman Catholic Church, on his renunciation of the Protestant faith. In the foreground, on the right, is the church of St. Antonio Abate, remarkable alike for the quaint and grotesque delineation in fresco, on the walls of the nave, of the "Temptation of St. Anthony," and for the ceremony of the "Benedictions of Animals," which is performed at the door once a year on St. Anthony's Day, and its octave, which occurs about the middle of the month of January. Here, during those eight days, are to be seen, crowded together in an indiscriminate mass, the stately equipages and sleek horses of the Pope, the Cardinals, or the Roman nobles, the rude carts and rough horses of the Campagna peasantry, the hackney-coach horses, together with mules, donkeys, dogs, &c., all advancing in single file up to the church door, and there passing, as it were, in review before the priest, who stands on the steps attired in his vestments, and, as the motley cavalcade moves past, with asperges in hand, sprinkles the animals with holy water, at the same time pronouncing on them a short benediction in Latin, while his assistant receives a trifling fee from the driver, giving him in return a small brass cross to be worn by the horse, mule, or donkey, as the case may be; and, accordingly, almost every beast of the kind (particularly those of the peasantry) to be met with in and around Rome carries St. Anthony's cross on its forehead throughout the year. The scene is generally one of great merriment and rustic fun, as the light-hearted crowd is kept in a continual state of frolic at the contrast between the prancing steed and his blind spavined neighbour limping along at his side. The ceremony is, we believe, peculiar to the "Eternal City."

ST. PETER'S.—From what has been already stated relative to the general characteristics of Basilicas and to the particular features of those above-mentioned, it becomes unnecessary to enter into any relation professing to be a regular description of this magnificent temple, which differs from them not much in kind, but chiefly in degree—in the greater splendour and richness of all its details, and in the enormous extent and vastness of its colossal proportions. The indication of its greatest wonders, and a few historical memoranda, then, may suffice, the more so as fully detailed descriptions of St. Peter's have been given in every work of any authority upon Rome, whatever other monuments may have been passed over in silence; and a full notice would by its extent frustrate our object of presenting, as far as possible, within the limits of this memoir, an epitome of that extraordinary city which was itself justly styled in the days of its greatness "an epitome of the universe."

The present Basilica occupies the site of the original one erected by the Emperor Constantine on a spot where a little oratory was raised, A. D. 106, by the Bishop Anacletes, to mark the crypt or sand-pit (afterwards called catacomb), close to the circus of Nero, beyond the Tiber, in the Vatican fields, in which the body of St. Peter, on the night succeeding his crucifixion on the Janiculum, was laid by his people and friends, before it was deposited for greater security in the cemetery of St. Calixtus, at the other side of the city. In the time of Constantine the little oratory had long lain in the ruins to which it had been reduced during the persecutions of the second and third centuries; and the Christian Emperor, wishing to dishonour to the memory of the Prince of the Apostles, on the very spot where his mangled body was first laid in the earth, erected there the gorgeous Basilica, which was dedicated to the service of the true God, under the patronage and with the name of St. Peter. Its dimensions were about one half the extent of the present church, viz. about 300 feet long by somewhat more than 200 feet broad; and it was constructed according to the strict model of a Basilica, with absis, raised choir, and manifold nave (quintuple), and on the exterior with quadrangular atrium and portico, decorated in the centre with a large cantharus or fountain. This ancient structure, representations of which may be seen in the Vatican Museum, though frequently restored in succeeding ages, fell, however, after the lapse of 1100 years, fallen into such a state of dilapidation in the pontificate of Nicholas V., that that Pope resolved to rebuild it anew, and commenced his operations in the year 1450. From that period, during upwards of two hundred years, until the erection of the grand portico surrounding the great court or atrium in front, by the architect Bernini, in the pontificate of Alexander VII. (A.D. 1656-1667), the genius and talents of Bramante, Rafaelle, M. Angelo, and the numerous other great architects, painters, and sculptors of those prolific times, were employed with more or less continuous perseverance, until it became what it now is, the most stupendous and magnificent temple that was ever raised to the worship of the Almighty God. The approach, after crossing the bridge of St. Angelo, is by an inferior street called the Borgo Vecchio, which leads direct to the Piazza of St. Peter's—a large open area, which is contained in a quadrangular form up to the façade of the Basilica, and is surrounded throughout by the majestic portico or colonnade of Bernini, the enormous extent of which may be conceived from the arcade or covered way (which is sixty feet wide) being sustained by upwards of 280 columns and about 90 or 100 pilasters, bearing an entablature and balustrade crowned by an immeasurable array of colossal statues—the whole structure being about 70 feet high. The vast area, set as it were in this enormous frame, serves as the atrium of the Basilica, and in the centre of the oval part, the Egyptian obelisk, flanked by two beautiful fountains, all of which are noticed in another page, offer an agreeable rest for the eye, dazzled and bewildered at the first view of the extraordinary magnitude, the almost alpine proportions of the stupendous architectural pile that meets the gaze. The elliptical division of the Piazza is about 800 feet long by 350 broad, and the quadrangle something more than 360 feet square. The façade of the church has an eastern aspect, and consists of a portico, approached by a lofty flight of steps, and surmounted by five open balconies (from the central one of which the papal benediction is given on great festivals), corresponding with the five portals below entering the vestibule, and sustaining a noble frieze and entablature—the entire height of the façade being 150 feet, its width 365 feet. The great dome (built by M. Angelo) rises from the centre of the edifice to an elevation of 405 feet; while the two smaller ones, on each side, are 190 feet high. Within the spacious portico, at either end, stands a colossal equestrian statue of Constantine and Charlemagne; and the communication with the interior of the church is by five doors opposite to the external portals.* Three of these doors communicate with the central, the other two with the lateral aisles of the nave, which is of a triple form, divided by enormous piers, with large, lofty arches between, opening into the side aisles. These piers, on all their four sides, and the walls on almost every available space, are covered with marble statues, bas-reliefs, monuments, and monuments or cenotaphs, of the most varied character; which, combined with the mosaic pictures, enriched cornices and mouldings, bronze ornaments, varied and exquisitely contrasted hues of the different-coloured marbles to be seen in the choir and lateral chapels, form an ensemble of beauty, splendour, and magnificence, which at the same time delights, astonishes, and perplexes the vision of the beholder. Amongst the monuments in the nave are to be seen those of the old and young Pretender—the son and grandson of James II. of England—and of the wife of the former, the Princess Maria Clementina Sobieski; of Pope Innocent VIII.; of Innocent XI.; of Leo XI.; and of Leo XII.; of Christina, Queen of Sweden; of Innocent XII.; of Sixtus IV.; of Gregory XIII. Of the chapels, those named the Chapel of the Choir and the Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament are the most worthy of attention. The nave terminates in the transept, above which rises the matchless dome of Michael Angelo, supported upon four piers, one at each corner of the sanctuary, of such extraordinary size that their circumference measures 286 feet, the sides of each being faced with altars, surmounted by mosaics, and with bas-reliefs, medallions, marble groups, &c.; there being also similar altars in the absides, or recesses, at either end of the transept. In the centre, immediately under the dome, stands the high altar, with its lofty canopy of bronze, supported by four columns of the same material planted at the four corners of the altar; the whole structure, with its various appendages and ornaments, forming a moderately-sized temple in itself, and rising to a height of 95 feet. Underneath, in the crypt below, is placed the sepulchre of St. Peter. The altar table is of marble, and faces westward, with its back to the nave, from which it is separated by a large space, richly paved in mosaic, so as to form a semi-subterranean chapel, which is called the Confessional of St. Peter, and from which a passage leads to the crypt below, containing the shrine of the Apostle, on the site of the little oratory of the first century, mentioned above. The absis, or triune, at the extreme western end of the church, beyond the raised dais or sanctuary, by Pope Liberius, other objects, a large pontifical chair of bronze, resting upon four figures; and within it is preserved an ancient wooden chair, which was used by the Bishops of Rome in the earliest ages of Christianity, and is thought to have been used by St. Peter himself; it is at all events a relic of a remote age.

These few notes may serve perhaps to apprise the tourist of what he is to expect within the gorgeous interior of St. Peter's, the length of which, exclusive of the thickness of the walls, is 610 feet from the entrance at the east front to the triune at the western extremity, while the transept extends from north to south 400 feet or thereabouts, the church thus constituting the figure of a cross, and thereby deviating from the classical model of a Basilica, which was oblong and without a dome.

Before concluding our brief notice of the churches, there are two which require to be mentioned on account of the associations connected with them—viz. The Church of Santa Maria della Rotonda, usually called Santa Maria della Rotonda, and the church of Ara Coeli on the Capitol. The former (a view of the exterior of which is given at page 320) occupies one side of a small piazza of the same name, situated about midway between the Piazza Navona and the Corso, and is celebrated as being the most perfect specimen of an ancient Pagan temple now remaining.

It was built a few years before the Christian era by one of the most munificent of the decorators of old Rome, viz. Marcus Agrippa the friend of the Emperor Augustus Cæsar; and, notwithstanding the vicissitudes of nearly nineteen hundred years, and the various spoliations of which it has been the object, it retains its original circular figure in complete perfection; and its brick walls, formerly sheathed with marble, appear as though they would last nineteen hundred years more. The form of the roof is a flattened dome, which was originally covered with bronze; and the entrance is through a noble colonnade, which supports an entablature and pediment, and which is thought by many not to be of the same age with the rest of the structure itself. The frieze of the entablature bears the original inscription of the temple cut deep in the stone, for the purpose of holding the bronze letters (which have long since disappeared.); viz.—

M. AGRIPPA. L. F. COS. TERTIVM. FECIT.

The tympanum of the pediment presents a naked, deformed appearance, from the absence of the bronze sculptures with which it was formerly filled. In many places, however, the marble sheathing of the circular walls still remains; and the lover of the antique can have his eyes gratified with Marcus Agrippa's ancient bronze doors, which still turn as freely on their hinges as they did in the days of Augustus.

The interior is arranged after the usual manner of Roman Catholic churches, having lateral chapels on the sides; and in the large recess facing the entrance, which was formerly occupied by the statue of Jupiter, the high altar now stands.

The Pantheon, in modern times, derives additional interest from its being the burial-place of Rafaelle, A. Caracci, Zuccari, Peruzzi, and other eminent artists. But, independently of all associations, its beautiful interior—the circular figure of which is set off to the greatest advantage by a row of large Corinthian columns and pilasters, which sustain a magnificent entablature above, all constructed of rare marbles—will ever excite wonder and admiration.

The Church of Santa Maria d' Ara Coeli is remarkable as occupying the site of the celebrated temple of Jupiter Capitolinus; and, though placed in a most commanding position, on the top of the Capitoline Hill, the ascent to which is by a flight of 124 steps, its external appearance is mean and unfinished. The interior, however, formed in a triple nave, is spacious, richly decorated, and furnished with as many chapels as St. Peter's; and the columns, pilasters, cornices, marble sheathings, and, in fact, almost all the materials used in its construction, show, from their varied character, how numerous were the structures in ancient Rome which contributed to its formation. Its early history, nevertheless, is wrapt in obscurity, as well as the origin of its name.

* "Proximum necem Plauti Laterani, consulis designati, Nero adjungit, adeo propere, ut non compositi liberos, non illud brevi morte arbitrium permitteret."—TACIT. Annal.

† So called from the Greek word οικουμενη (sc. γη) i.e. the habitable globe, as the members of the general councils so named were summoned from every country of the civilised world.

* In the Basilicas of St. Peter, St. John Lateran, Santa Maria Maggiore, and St. Paul, the interior portal on the extreme right is always blocked up with masonry, having a brass cross inserted in its centre, except during the year of Jubilee, which occurs every twenty-five years, when the Pope or his cardinals come in state on Christmas-eve, and knocks upon the bronze cross for admission, and the masonry is removed. The portal then remains open until the following Christmas-eve, when it is again blocked up for the next twenty-five years. This gate is called the Porta Santa.

The ancient Egyptian Obelisks and the numerous Fountains constitute two remarkable features of modern Rome.

THE OBELISKS.

The Obelisks are twelve in number, and situated in various localities throughout the city, as follows:—In the Piazza del Popolo, on the promenade of the Pincian Hill, in the Piazza di Monte Citorio, before the Church of San Trinità de' Monti, in the Piazza Minerva, the Piazza Navona, the Piazza di Monte Cavallo, the Piazza of St. John Lateran, the Piazza Santa Maria Maggiore, the Piazza of St. Peter's, and the Piazza of the Pantheon, to which may be added a fragment in the grounds of the neglected Villa Mattei, on the Celian Mount. These relics of remote antiquity belong (according to archæologists) to three different epochs of Egyptian history: first, the period anterior to the Persian conquest, when the dynasty of the Pharaohs reigned over the valley of the Nile, and the countries adjoining: second, the period succeeding that conquest, when the royal race of the Ptolemies swayed the sceptre; and lastly, the age when the universal dominion of the Romans absorbed Egypt amongst the other provinces of the Empire. The Obelisks of the Piazza del Popolo, the Piazza di Monte Citorio, and the Piazza di San Giovanni Laterano, alone belong to the earliest period. The first of the three was brought to Rome by Augustus Cæsar, when he returned after his victory at Actium, and was erected by him on the Circus Maximus, and dedicated anew to the sun. Prostrated during some one of the disasters which befell the city in the decline of the Empire, it lay for centuries buried amidst ruins and rubbish on the spot where it had stood, until Pope Sixtus V. raised it (as wel. as several of the others, as already mentioned); and when the three fragments into which it had been broken were carefully united, under the direction of the architect Fontana, no other damage having been sustained by it, had it removed and planted on its present site, surmounted by a cross, as emblematic of the triumph of Christianity over the superstitious of Paganism. The shaft of this beautiful ornament consists of a single block of red granite, eighty-six feet high, and covered with hieroglyphics. It stands upon a square pedestal, approached by a flight of steps on each side, and in the centre of a large basin, into which the figures of four lionesses pour streams of water. The whole structure forms a grand and imposing ornament in the centre of the finest Piazza in Rome. This obelisk originally stood in front of the Temple of the Sun at Heliopolis. When it was re-dedicated to the sun by Augustus Cæsar, he caused to be cut on two of the sides of the pedestal an inscription to that effect, which is quite legible at the present day, a circumstance, however, not so very remarkable, since the Egyptian hieroglyphics appear as clear cut as though they were but just made. The inscription is as follows: "IMP. CAESAR. DIV. F. AUGUSTUS. PONTIFEX. MAXIMUS. IMP. XII. COS. XI. TRIB POT. XIV. EGYPTO. IN. POTESTATEM. POPULI. ROMANI. REDACTA. SOLI. DONUM. DEDIT." There are two other inscriptions, both by Sixtus V., one stating the fact of its recovery and removal to its present site by that Pope, in the fourth year of his pontificate, A.D 1589; the other, which is quite characteristic of the man, and refers to its original destination and its present position in front of the Church of Santa Maria del Popolo, is as follows:—"Ante sacra ulius Sedem, augustior interque urbis, ejus ex vero Sol Justitiæ exortus est" *

The Obelisk of Monte Citorio also stood originally before the temple of the Sun, at Heliopolis, in Egypt, and was transferred to Rome by Augustus, who placed it in the Campus Martius, where, according to a rather unintelligible account of it in "Pliny's Natural History," it was made to subserve the use of a gigantic sun-dial, formed at its base, on the pavement of which it would appear to have been the gnomon—hence its title, Obeliscus Solaris. The shaft is of granite, about 70 or 71 feet high, covered with hieroglyphics, and is surmounted by a gilt globe. When discovered it was broken into several pieces, which were cemented together, and otherwise repaired with the fragments of another obelisk. It now rests upon a pedestal an Attic base and cornice, similar to the former above-mentioned, and also two inscriptions relating to its restoration and erection, by Pius VI., in the year 1792.

The third of these ancient monuments of primeval civilization also owes its resurrection to Sixtus V., who had it dug up from a superincumbent heap of soil, nearly thirty feet in depth, in the ancient Circus Maximus, now the Via de' Cerchi, and erected in the year 1588 in its present situation, in the centre of an irregular area, formed by the convergence of several streets, and which, from the adjoining church of St. John Lateran, is called the Piazza di San Giovanni. It is the largest in Rome, being within a few inches of 106 feet high, and 10 feet across the base, and is formed like the two others, from a gigantic block of red granite. It stands upon a lofty pedestal, which is also a fountain, and the entire height of both united is not less than 150 feet. Its sides are covered with hieroglyphics; inscriptions on the pedestal, we learn that it was conveyed down the Nile by Constantine the Great, from its original position (in front of the Temple of the Sun, at Thebes), to Alexandria, whence it was transported to Rome by his son Constantius. There is a cross on its summit.

The obelisks of the second epoch are more numerous; they also have the hieroglyphics, but they are generally of a smaller size. The shaft of that at Santa Trinità de Monti is 48 feet high, crowned with a cross; it was found in the Gardens of Sallust, and was placed as at present by Pius VI., in the year 1789. The small shaft on the Pincian Promenade was discovered in the year 1822, in the ruins of the Equirine Gardens, and is supposed to have been brought to Rome by the Emperor Aurelian; Pius VII. gave it its present resting-place. The two small obelisks in the Piazza Minerva and Piazza della Rotonda (or the Pantheon) were both found in one excavation at the former place, and are supposed to have decorated the temples of the Egyptian deities Isis and Serapis, at Rome. The former is placed on the back of a white marble elephant, and its shaft is about 18 feet high. Its present destination is due to Alexander VII., about two centuries ago. That in the Place of the Pantheon has a fountain for its pedestal, and was erected about 180 years ago, by Clement XI. The shaft on the Piazza Navona is about 50 feet in height; but its pedestal, which is of considerable elevation itself, being raised upon a lofty basement that serves as a fountain, the whole structure to the cross on the top is nearly 120 feet in height.

The three remaining obeliaks have only the form and the material (red granite) in common with the others. They are devoid of hieroglyphics, and are, therefore, regarded as having been constructed in Egypt, either by the Romans or by Egyptians under their directions, in imitation of the ancient pillars, at the comparatively recent period when that country fell under the Roman dominion. That which is on Monte Cavallo, and the opposite the north front of Santa Maria Maggiore, are said to have been brought to Rome by the Emperor Claudius, and placed in front of the Mausoleum of Augustus Cæsar, in the Campus Martius; they are both about 48 feet high. The latter was raised upon its fountain pedestal by Sixtus V.; the former was placed in its present position, between the celebrated groups of "the men and horses," by Pius VI. The obelisk in the Piazza di St Peter's, was brought to Rome by the Emperor Caligula, and decorated the circus, known after wards as that of Nero, where the blood of so many Christian martyrs was shed by that tyrant; and of all the obelisks in Rome, it alone continued standing erect in its original position, through all the vicissitudes of fifteen hundred years, a curious but incontrovertible confirmation of the correctness of the historical account which is given of the selection of the site of St. Peter's by Constantine the Great. The site, we are told, was chosen because upon it stood the ruins of a little oratory or chapel, which had been erected A.D. 106, to mark the spot beneath which the body of St. Peter, after his crucifixion on the Janiculum, was first deposited by the Christians, in a crypt of the sand pits of the Vatican, which crypt was always spoken of, during the first three centuries of the Christian era, as being close to the Circus of Nero; the exact position of the Circus being indicated in modern times by the Egyptian obelisk of Caligula, as it stood before its removal in the sixteenth century to its present position. In the early ages of Christianity, before the general local aspect of the Imperial city had been obliterated by repeated captures, sack, and spoliation, there was little need of such an index as the Egyptian Obelisk to point out the site of Nero's Circus; the cruel tortures to which the martyrs were subjected, and the great number of them that were put to death upon its arena by that sanguinary monster, having associated with it recollections of too horrid and terrific a nature to admit of the indentity of its locality escaping from the minds of men. The original site of the obelisk is now occupied by the Sacristy of St. Peter's, on the south side of the church, whence the indefatigable Sixtus removed it to its present position in the Piazza facing the Basilica A.D. 1581

Of the obelisk in the grounds of the Villa Mattei only a small portion is ancient; but that is valuable as being covered with hieroglyphics. The pillar, however is altogether a piece of modern patchwork with that exception, and can scarcely be ranked among the obelisks of Rome.

THE FOUNTAINS.

The Fountains are so numerous at Rome, that it may well be questioned whether there is any other metropolis in the world where the supply of water is more copious, as there certainly is none where it is made to so great an extent subsidiary to the general architectural decoration of the external aspect of the city. The three principal are the Fontana Paolina, the Fontana Felice, and the Fountain of Trevi, The latter is far superior to either of the other two both in construction and design. It is situated in the Piazza di Trevi, an open area that lies between the Quirinal and the Corso, and it consists of a palatial structure, raised upon a basement of artificial rock, the façade presenting a prominent central compartment, flanked by retiring wings, whose surface is relieved by pilasters, the interstices of which are pierced for windows. In the centre, a niche, surmounted by an entablature resting upon columns, is filled by a colossal marble group, representing Neptune in his chariot, drawn by sea-horses, and heralded by marine deities. Two allegorical female figures occupy smaller niches on either side; and above are bas-reliefs illustrative of the history of the ancient aqueduct which feeds the fountain. The attic is surmounted by a balustrade, resting upon cariatides, and the arms of some one of the Popes (probably Clement XII., who erected the pile somewhat better than a century ago) crown the summit of the whole structure. The general effect is very fine. Rushing impetuously like a cataract over the face of the artificial rock, the waters plunge with a hoarse roar into a capacious basin, depressed below the level of the street; and the spray, as it dances up and mingles with the lesser streams that issue from the mouths of the marine monsters, envelopes the lower region of the substructure in a misty mantle of gauze—the ensemble suggesting to an active fancy the realisation of the Ocean God coming forth in majesty from some favourite retreat in his marine domain, and cresting in his chariot a mountain wave, the better to survey his troubled waters. A view of the fountain is given in the Illustration, page 324.

The aqueduct which furnishes water to the fountain was originally constructed by Marcus Agrippa, the friend of the Emperor Augustus, to supply his baths (the first of the kind erected in Rome), which stood contiguous to the Pantheon (another noble structure of his creation); and the spring, some two or three leagues north of Rome, whence the stream is conveyed in a circuitous route of twelve miles or so, is said to have been first pointed out to a body of Roman soldiers, by a young peasant girl—hence its name, Acqua Virgo, and the tradition forms the subject of the bas-reliefs above mentioned.

The aqueduct in the time of the Emperors, as at present, entered the city near the Pincian Gate, and being conveyed by means of a series of arches under the gardens of Lucullus, in a direction south and west towards the thermæ, it terminated in a reservoir, the site of which is now occupied by the façade of the Church of San Ignatio. In its course it passed not far from the modern Piazza di Trevi; and Pope Pius IV., during his improvements about the middle of the sixteenth century, having resolved to place a fountain in that spot (Trivium), so called because three ways met there, conveyed the Acqua Virgo to it by a short branch. The fountain of Pius was, however, a very insignificant erection compared with the present structure, in front of which not three, as formerly, but some five or six streets now converge.

The Fontana Paolina was constructed by Pope Paul V., and the noble artificial stream by which it is supplied is conveyed a distance of 80 miles to Rome, along the channel of the ancient aqueduct called Aqua Alsietina, which was constructed in the time of the Emperor Augustus. The fountain is at the extreme west of the city, close to the Porta San Pancrazio, on the Janiculum Hill, and the water bursts forth in five separate branches, with all the force and fulness of a mountain torrent. The site of the fountain is one of the finest and most commanding imaginable, and from its terrace one of the best views of all Rome can be obtained. The classical associations connected with the spot, too, are more than ordinarily attractive. To the lover of "Livy's pictured page" the name of the Janiculum will recall the glorious feats of King Porsena and the heroic Scævola; while the more modern ecclesiastical one will bring to mind the traditions of the Church, which fix the site of San Pietro in Montorio, immediately below, as the scene of St. Peter's crucifixion. The façade of the fountain consists of five arched recesses, flanked by Ionic columns, through the intervals of which, beneath the arches, the water rushes into an enormous basin, whence it is conveyed away to various localities by ducts, one of which is led across the Ponte Sisto, to the Trastevere, on the opposite bank; it feeds a fountain in the Via Giulia. Another branch supplies the fountains of the Vatican and St. Peter's.

The Fontana Felice is situated in the Piazza de' Termini, at the eastern extremity of the city, and consists of an architectural elevation, on the façade of which are three niches; that in the centre being occupied by a colossal statue of Moses striking the rock, and the side ones by allegorical bas-reliefs. Beneath the niches the water gushes forth in three streams into two basins one below the other. There is very little that may be considered really ornamental in the whole structure. The water with which it and several other fountains are copiously supplied, is brought to Rome by the aqueduct called Felice, after Sixtus V., who repaired the ancient aqueduct of Alexander Severus. Sixtus was the first of the Popes to re-conduct a portion of the ancient supply of water to modern Rome.

The most remarkable fountain is that of the Triton (so called), in the Piazza Barberini. It consists of a large basin, having in its centre an enormous figure of a triton erect and spouting water. Adjoining, there is a second fountain on a smaller scale, and differing somewhat in its general features. Urban VIII. (Barberini), who was one of the most active of the building Popes of the seventeenth and seventeenth centuries, constructed the two, as well as the boat fountain—Fontana della Barcaccia—in the Piazza di Spagna (supplied by the Acqua Virgine); the shape of which is said to have reference to the naumachiæ, or naval games, that were exhibited in galleys on an ancient lake in the vicinity.

In the Piazza del Popolo, the fountain enclosing the Egyptian Obelisk, into the basin of which four lionesses disgorge copious streams, has been already noticed. In the Piazza di Monte Cavallo, two large reservoirs, one above the other, receive the overflowing of a lofty jet of water. The lower basin is twenty-seven feet in diameter, and was added by Pius VII. (A.D. 1818), in whose pontificate it was discovered, in an excavation in the Forum. Within a short distance in the direction of the Porta Pia there are four fountains, at an intersection of the four the streets which run at right angles from the Piazza della Quattro Fontane. Returning to the immediate neighbourhood of the Corso, we find a handsome fountain in front of the Antonine Column, in the Piazza Colonna,

* This is a fine square, lying open on its eastern side to the main thoroughfare of the Corso: it is surrounded by two palaces, one of which is the Chigi, the other of San Bartolomeo, the Post-office, and another public building in the occupation of the Government. In its centre is the ancient obelisk of Sallust, which the square is named—a noble pillar, 160 feet high, composed of large blocks of granite, covered with bas-reliefs illustrative of the victories of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius Antonius over the Marcomanni and the other German hordes who at that period began to be troublesome on the frontiers of the empire. This column was supposed by the antiquarians to be that of the Emperor Marcus Antonius Pius, which had been erected in his honour by his adopted sons Marcus Aurelius Antonius (his successor) and Lucius Verus—until the mistake was corrected in the pontificate of Clement XI. (A.D. 1703), when these Antonine Column was dug up in the gardens of the heirs of the missionary priests of the order of St. Vincent of Paul, adjoining the Piazza di Monte Citorio, in the immediate vicinity. This column was of red granite, and the inscriptions and sculptured reliefs on its marble pedestal gave its history in very explicit terms. The granite shaft, being in a ruinous condition, was used to repair the Egyptian Obelisk in the Piazza Citorio, taking the Curia Innocentiana, as already mentioned; and the marble pedestal was placed, where it now is, in the Vatican Gardens. The marble column in the Piazza Colonna was then, with more probability, assumed, on account of the bas-reliefs relating to his military exploits, to be the one which it is known was erected to Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, during his reign, by the senate and people of Rome, A.D. 174; and the truth of the opinion was confirmed by the discovery, in the year 1777, in the same gardens of the missionaries of St. Vincent, of an inscription, which draws its waters from the Acqua Virgine, as, in fact, all the fountains in this part of the town likewise do.

In the cortile, or quadrangle, of the Curia Innocenziana there is a fountain, the reservoir of which was found in some excavations in the ancient Roman port at the mouth of the Tiber. The fountain of the Piazza of the Pantheon serves as the base of the Egyptian obelisk before noticed; and in the Piazza Navona the principal central fountain subserves a like purpose—also already referred to. The water flows in copious streams out of artificial caverns in the rocky substructure into a very large reservoir, which also receives minor jets from sea-lions placed on its edge, and from colossal figures of river-gods at the foot of the rock, in the centre. The other fountains are smaller: one consists of a large central figure of a sea-monster pouring forth water into a basin that overflows into a larger one beneath, which also receives the streams issuing from sea-monsters at the exterior or circumference. The third and fourth, though handsome structures, present no specific ornamental features. The Piazza Navona, which has been already mentioned as the chief vegetable market of Rome, occupies the exact site and preserves the shape of the ancient Circus Agonalis, in the Campus Martius, wherein games of wrestling, running, and various other gymnastic exercises were held; and so perfect is the preservation of the original form, that the ancient arched basement of masonry which sustained the seats for the spectators forms at the present day the foundation of the modern houses of the place.

A little to the south-west, and nearer the river, is situate the Piazza Farnese, which is decorated with two splendid fountains in front of the Farnese Palace; the basins are oval in form, and were found in the ruins of the Baths of Caracalla. In the same neighborhood, and at the southern end of the Via Giulia, the Fontana di Ponte Sisto is constructed against the wall of a cross street, so as to face up the Via Giulia, looking northward. The water gushes out in full streams from between columns which sustain a handsome façade, into two reservoirs, one below the other. The fountain is supplied from the Fontana Paolina, on the Janiculum, by means of a channel conveyed across the Tiber on the Sistine Bridge.

The list may be completed by the mention of the magnificent twin fountains of St. Peter's, the fountain of the Piazza Campidoglio, and that facing the north front of the church of Santa Maria Maggiore, but in every direction throughout the city, and in localities the most obscure, jets of clear pure water are to be found gushing out of walls, small stone pillars, and various other contrivances which have no pretension to be ranked as fountain-structures, though they furnish to all classes of the community a most copious supply of the liquid element for all the daily purposes of life.

THE VILLAS.

The Villas of the modern Romans constitute the characteristic distinction of their city and its environs, which most forcibly calls up the memory of their luxurious Pagan ancestors. The resemblance they bear to the Gardens of Imperial Rome, as the ancients designated their sumptuous suburban residences, is very great. The arrangement of the ornamental grounds around the mansion, is the same in the modern villa as it was in the ancient hortulus, viz. designed rather to afford the most eligible and varied points of view from which to contemplate the beauty and splendour of the prospect without, than to present any particular attraction in the scenery within the limits of the enclosure, local embellishments in groves, walks, fountains, and pieces of water decorated with statuary, being at the same time attended to, differing thus from our conception of a park, which has its view in the centre of the main object, just as the summer-house of a garden differs from a salon, or drawing-room, where the interior beauty is the grand object, while the summer house, however ornate in itself, refers in its purpose chiefly to the enjoyment of the exterior prospect.

The Villa Albani, the Villa Pandhi Borea, and the Villa Borghese are amongst the most magnificent. The two latter, however, particularly the Borghese, suffered considerable damage in the siege operations last summer—not so much from the French as from the Italians in the occupation of the city, who, in order to give a clear range to their guns in those directions where they expected an attack, cut down the trees and prostrated every standing object which they imagined might interfere as an obstacle to their efficiency of that service.

The Villas Corsina, Savorela, Giraud, Vanutelli, Mulesana, Spada, Santucci, Medici, Madama, Strozzi, Albani, &c., are also worthy of mention, either for their historical associations, the attractions of their architectural and artistic decorations, or as having been the scene of many a sanguinary rencontre in the hostilities of last year. Of these villas, many are within the walls; the others outside, and generally in the immediate vicinity of them.

The Villa Albani, situate just without the Porta Salara, or Salaria, on the north-east side of the city, is especially to be noticed, not only on account of its treasures of art within the casino itself, but also of its pleasure-grounds, which are laid out with great skill and taste in spacious terraces, with walks, green plots, and gardens, in which porticoes and summer-houses decorated with the newest story of the principal façade, consisting of a fine open portico, resting upon arches which are sustained by Ionic columns. The apartments in the interior are finished in a style of the most elegant decoration; the ceilings vaulted and plane, painted or stuccoed in the most exquisite manner, are surrounded by rich cornices of gilding upon the gilded capitals of pilasters or columns of the rarest and most beautiful marbles, which run along the walls at regular intervals, the intercolumniations being occupied with bas-reliefs and frescoes, or inlaid with jasper and verde antique, porphyry, and other specimens of various harmoniously-blending colours, yellow, grey, green, &c.; while the tesselated pavement and mosaics complete the magnificent embellishments, over the whole of which the most liberal expenditure and the most correct and elegant taste have presided. Various works of art, both modern and of the antique, are scattered through these splendid and spacious saloons, such as statues, tables, vases, and busts of alabaster and marble of the most valuable quality and of the richest colours, bronzes, sarcophagi, Egyptian deities, Etruscan sculptures representing the priests and priestesses of that ancient people in their true costume, columns, &c. The site of this beautiful villa is open and airy, and yet it is said to be infected with malaria, and hence its being uninhabited, save by its custodian or caretaker. Its origin and construction are due to the taste and magnificence of one of those Popular prelates of Rome, whose noble patronage has done so much in a succession of centuries to revive and develop the arts in modern times. Cardinal Albani had the villa erected according to his own plans, and under his own immediate inspection, about a century ago.

The villa in the direction of the suburb on the road leading from the Porta Pia, are also situated the Villas Patrizzi, Massimi, Torlonia, Bolognetti, &c. In a direct line to the west of the Albani Villa, and close to the public gardens on the Pincio, overhanging the Porta de. Popolo, are situated the Borghese Villa and Gardens, one of the chief resorts of the Roman citizens on Sundays. They were originally constructed by Cardinal Borghese, in the beginning of the seventeenth century, and have received numerous additions and improvements at various periods since, by members of the princely family to which the property belongs. The grounds are interspersed in several directions with bas-reliefs, broken sculptures, monumental slabs, belonging to the first ages of Christianity, which have been extracted from the catacombs, artificial ruins, representing Egyptian temples, porticoes, triumphal arches, a hippodrome in the form of a Roman circus, and imaginary erections of various kinds, imitative of those relics of ancient Rome which have endured to the present time. The walks are spacious, broad, and of considerable length, fountains and groves, at intervals, grace the pleasant place. The principal façade of the casino is furnished with a fine portico, through which the entrance opens into a spacious saloon, out of which leads a magnificent suite of apartments, to the decoration of which the productions of ancient and modern art alike contribute. Inlaid marble pavements, mosaics, sculptured and stuccoed friezes, silk and velvet curtains, enriched cornices, columns, pillars, pilasters, and massive portals and architraves, formed of the most precious marbles, brilliant frescoes, &c., busts and statues, in niches and in groups, are the characteristic features of the construction and decoration of those splendid chambers.

The collection of ancient works of art comprises beautiful vases, tables, sarcophagi, &c., of the finest white and coloured marbles; some porphyry baths, bronzes, &c., and the celebrated statue of the Hermaphrodite, which presents one of the most beautiful and symmetrical specimens of the female form that the genius of Greece ever produced. There is a corresponding suite of apartments on the second story, which also contain many rare and valuable works, the whole forming a collection worthy of a national museum, notwithstanding that many of its choicest treasures were plundered by the French, in the time of Napoleon, to enrich the Museum of the Louvre.

While in this quarter, we may notice the Villa Medici (usually called the French

* "Before the sacred seat of her, out of whose womb arose the Sun of Justice, I arise more august and joyous."

setting forth the permission of the Emperors Septimius Severus Augustus and Caesar Marcus Aurelius Antonius Cæsar to a freedman, named Antactus, to build a house on the site now occupied by the Post-office, in order the better to attend to the care of the colossal statue of which he was custodian, and which is mentioned by name as that of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, and not Marcus Antoninus. Original, it was surmounted by a statue, in gilt bronze, of the Emperor Aurelius; but this disappeared, and Pope Sixtus V., when making some repairs, supplied its place more suo by a statue in bronze of the Apostle St. Paul. The column should, therefore, be called the Aurelian, and not the Antonine; but the original error of the antiquarians having been confirmed by an inscription on the pedestal by Sixtus V., in whose time its true history was not known, the wrong name is perpetuated, and ordinarily it is still called the Antonine Column. Its summit commands a magnificent view.

* This description applies to the period preceding the late siege, during, or rather immediately previous to which, the grounds were subjected to the unfeeling operations of the Italian patriots.

ARTISTS' MODELS ON THE STEPS OF THE TRINITA DE MONTE.

PLAYING AT MORRA.

Academy), adjoining the Piazza della Trinità de' Monti, on the Pincian Hill. It was formerly, as the name imports, the property of a member of the famous Medici family, Leo XI., but has been for many years in possession of the French Government, and used as the French Academy for the study of the fine arts at Rome, where a number of French students, who, in the yearly exhibitions at Paris, have given promise of excellence, are supported for a fixed period, to enable them to complete their studies on the classic soil of art. The mansion was built just three centuries ago, and the façade is said to be from the designs of Michael Angelo. The site is most agreeable, commanding a fine prospect and view of the principal buildings of the City beneath. (The Illustration at page 321 represents the exterior of the edifice.)

The Villa Pamfili Doria is quite at the other side of the city, beyond the Tiber, outside the Porta San Pancrazio. Its grounds are very extensive, decorated with fountains and statues, and well planted. The casino presents a lofty façade, which commands a splendid view of St. Peter's. The interior is by no means of so ornate a character as that of the Albani or Borghese; but there are some rare articles of virtu, statues, busts, &c., in its apartments.

In the neighbourhood of Porta San Pancrazio, there are also the Villas Giraud and Corsini, which, as well the Pamfili, formed the centre of the French operations against the city. In the Pamfili grounds much damage was done by the Italian troops, previous to the French occupation; the Giraud, which is also commonly called Il Vascello, from its front elevation presenting the shape of a ship's bow, was, in consequence of its lying often in a cross-fire of artillery, dreadfully damaged; and the Corsini, also known as the Quattro Venti, suffered, if possible, still more, having been taken and retaken several times by the contending parties, at the commencement of the siege, as its site and position rendered it a post of great advantage. It may be fairly doubted, however, if the interests of art or architecture suffered in either case, as neither the Vascello nor the Quattro Venti had much to boast of in either respect; the latter was built by Pope Clement XII., when Cardinal Corsini, in the beginning of the last century.

CLIMATE.

Before closing this coup d'œil of the "eternal city," a glance at its Climate suggests itself. Peculiar in many things, Rome is most peculiar in this respect—that her most densely populated districts are generally the healthiest. Wherever the population is thin; where there are no human habitations, no fires, no stir and movement of busy life; where there are uncultivated fields, open wastes, neglected gardens—and each and all of these conditions present themselves with frequency within the walls that encompass the site of what was once mighty Rome—there the miasmata, extracted from the accretion of centuries of débris and from the volcanic soil, by the great heat of the summer's sun, generate the malaria and its low fever; notwithstanding that the locality may be elevated, and to all appearances the most salubrious and pleasant imaginable. Thus the Esquiline and the Cœlian Hills are infested with malaria in summer, when the low, filthy, crowded Ghetto on the Tiber's bank is quite healthy. In like manner, the thronged, impoverished Trastevere, on the other side of the water, is comparatively salubrious; while the sparse population of other districts on the same bank have the invisible, insidious miasma exhaling its pestiferous breath amongst them. The more thickly inhabited portions of the Pincian and the Quirical Hills escape this pest, and, therefore, are principally resorted to by foreigners. From the middle of September to that of May, however, the climate of Rome is in general most delightful, healthy, and exhilarating.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

The First Page presents in its upper compartment a View of the Exterior of St. Peter's Church and of the Castle of St. Angelo, sketched from the opposite height of the Pincio, across the Tiber. In the lower compartment, the interior of St. Peter's, crowned with the Papal arms, occupies the full centre, flanked on either side by the Column of Trajan on the left, and the Egyptian Obelisk of the Piazza del Popolo on the right, all of which are noticed under their respective heads. The objects represented at foot are, in the centre, the ancient bronze group of the She-Wolf suckling Romulus and Remus, which was found in an excavation at the foot of the Palatine Hill, close to where stood, in the times of the Republic and the Empire, a small temple appropriated to its reception, adjoining the Ruminal Fig-tree, under which, according to the legend, the infants were found by the shepherd Faustulus. The group was an object of great veneration with the Romans, and is mentioned by several of the classic writers. It is thought by many that the infants belong to a more recent period of art than the wolf. The group is now placed in the Palace of the Conservators, on the Capitol. On the left is the celebrated chef d'œuvre of ancient Greek art, usually known as the Dying Gladiator, but supposed by others to be a representation of a noble Gaul. It is deposited in the Capitoline Museum. On the right is represented Michael Angelo's colossal statue of Moses. In the transept of the Church of San Pietro in Vincoli, under which head it will be found noticed.

The Figure Subjects.—In order to convey some idea of the daily aspect of life in Rome, we present illustrations of some of the more striking features of novelty to be perpetually encountered by the tourist in his rambles through the city. The left-hand group, at top of this page, presents a sketch of characters peculiar to the streets of Rome, the artists' living models ready attired in some peculiar costume requisite for the painter or sculptor. They are chiefly to be seen waiting for hire on the lofty flight of steps ascending from the Piazza di Spagna to the Promenade on the Pincian Hill. On the left of the Illustration is a Bandit and Aged Man; in the centre, a Madonna, Infant, and St. John, with a "Gentle Shepherd" half reclining above them; and, on the right, other subjects dressed in character.

CAFFE GRECO.

The large Illustration at page 325, shows a scene to be always met with at the petty inns or the wine-shops of the Trastevere—the game of Bowls in which the costume of the humbler classes is depicted. Another game of which the people are very fond, and engaged at which they are to be found perpetually at those places, is the Neapolitan game of Morra (represented at the top of this page), in which one party suddenly holds up to view any number of the fingers of both his hands, while the other party in the game calls out not the number raised, but that which is held down; if he fails in giving the true number, he loses. It is a game no success in which requires long practice and a quick eye, with such sudden hands are the hands held up; and, as the parties standing around always bet upon one or other of the players, the degree of excitement attending it is very great.

The large Engraving on this page shows the interior of the Caffè Greco in the Via Condotti, which leads from the Corso to the Piazzi di Spagna. It is the great resort of the artist students of all nations in Rome, for early breakfast, or for coffee and cigars, and the best Roman punch to be had in the city. The fantastic appearance of the habitués of this well-known resort is given in the Illustration with great accuracy and spirit.

The Siege Operations by the French troops, last year, under General Oudinot, against Rome, were carried on almost solely at that portion of the walls beyond the Tiber which lies between the gates of San Pancrazio and Portese; and in the localities immediately adjoining, close to the former gate (Pancrazio), were the bastion No. 8, and its battery, the stronghold of the Roman forces, at which some of the severest fighting during the siege took place. We present two views in this locality (see page 324): one the Gate of San Pancrazio itself, with the rapid descent from its commanding height towards the Tiber; and the other a field of many a sanguinary affray in the vicinity, showing in front a cottage shattered and torn with cannon-shot, and the Villa Vanutelli a short distance in the rear.

The third View represents the Villa Santucci, the head-quarters of General Oudinot, from which he issued the order of the day dated June 1st, announcing the cessation of all negotiations, and an immediate commencement of hostilities. The casino itself is a very plain Italian country-house, belonging to Monsignor Santucci, and is distant from the city, on the side of the Porta Portese, between two and three miles. Two large pine trees standing near it distinguish it easily from the other villas in the neighbourhood. The upper windows command a magnificent view of Rome and the surrounding Campagna.

The subjects of the various other Illustrations are noticed under the respective heads to which they belong.

The Recent Return of the Pope to Rome from the dominions of his Neapolitan Majesty, in which the conduct of the Republican party, and the well-known events of last year, had compelled his Holiness to take refuge, forms the subject of an Illustration and descriptive notice, furnished by one of our Artist-Correspondents at present in the "Eternal City." They appear in this week's Number of the Paper, and form a suitable and characteristic accompaniment to the Memoir to which the present Supplement is devoted.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday, May 4, 1850.—Supplement.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 426.—Vol. xvi.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, MAY 11, 1850. [Sixpence.

PROTECTION TO BRITISH INDUSTRY.

The business or art of agriculture is one for which all men have both a liking and a respect. It is the oldest of all arts, and, at the same time, the most interesting and the most important. Every friend of his country must desire that the useful men who devote their time, their energies, their skill, and their capital to the cultivation of the soil should be successful and happy, and in the full enjoyment of those blessings of plenty which they are the agents of dispensing upon others. When such men complain, we may be sure that there is something wrong, which requires a remedy. If industrious farmers forsake their fields to go agitating in towns; if the loyal show disloyalty, and the peaceable become turbulent, there can be no doubt that there is a rottenness somewhere, which it behoves the wisdom of the nation to discover, and, discovering, to remedy.

At the great meeting of delegates from all parts of the country, which assembled at the Crown and Anchor Tavern, on Tuesday, under the presidency of the Duke of Richmond, to detail the woes of agriculturists, the proceedings were of a nature to fill the minds of all the well-wishers of the landlords, tenant-farmers, and peasantry of Great Britain with sorrow and perplexity. Though Lord Stanley, leader of this party in the House of Lords, and Mr. Disraeli, their recognised chief in the House of Commons, were both absent, it must be presumed, from the presence of so many well-known and highly-respected friends of the agricultural interest upon the platform, that the meeting was not only intended to represent, but actually did represent, the Protectionist party. No one can doubt the truth of the representations made by the various speakers, that they suffer from distress; but when we come to the remedy they propose, which is neither more nor less than a return to Protection, their case seems indeed hopeless. They want wheat to be 56s. a quarter. They allege that the soil o. England and Scotland cannot be properly cultivated if prices fall much below that standard; and they ask the Legislature to come to their aid by re-establishing the Corn-law. But they ask an impossibility. They may have a Corn-law, as they had before Sir Robert Peel (whose name some of them will not mention, because "it grates upon the ear of the British farmer") endeavoured to do justice to the whole people by opening the markets of the world; but will they have corn at 56s. the quarter? Was corn invariably at or above that price under the operation of the old law? Under their dearly-cherished system of Protection, was not wheat at times as low as 36s. a quarter? and have the farmers not been in distress ever since the peace or Waterloo? The cry of agricultural ruin does not date from the repeal of the Corn-laws. For five-and-thirty years it has been rung from time to time in the ears of the nation with an earnestness and a pertinacity which proved its reality, but which cannot have been caused by a system which at the present moment is not two years old. The agriculturists were distressed and protected in 1825; and if by any improbable chance they should be again protected in 1851, there is no certainty that they would not be again as distressed as they were before. As Mr. Drummond has remarked, "All the best heads of the country" have gone against them—and even those two heads in the upper and lower House, who still ostensibly belong to their ranks, refrained from showing themselves at this last great gathering, lest their chance of future usefulness should have been impaired by their participation in the proceedings of men who talk of repudiation and insurrection by farmers and farm-labourers as things not so very improbable under a Free-trade system. They demand from legislation what legislation is powerless to afford. They demand fixity in a changing world—a state regulation of the profits of business—and an artificial scarcity when Heaven decrees abundance. They lose their temper and speak sedition, as glaring as any for which unhappy Chartists have been consigned to penitentiaries or to penal colonies. The Duke of Richmond, on taking the chair, found it necessary to deprecate the use of disloyal language. "I hope," said his Grace, "that the expressions which may be made use of here to-day will show that, ill-used as we are, we are still loyal to the Sovereign, and still firmly attached to the British constitution."

The speakers did not take the advice of the chairman. A rural insurrection seemed to be present in the minds of most of them. "If the present prices of provisions should continue," said Mr. Chouler, "the occupiers of land would be altogether unable to employ or pay their people, and there was a determination among the tenant-farmers, not only from necessity, but from will, to send their unemployed labourers to the workhouse, instead of assisting them, as they had done last winter. The torrent might, perhaps, be stayed until after the harvest, but that was the outside; and, if the labourers then assembled in masses to obtain their just rights, it was not very likely that the English yeomen would mount their horses to prevent them." Mr. Ball, another farmer, was equally seditious. "His answer for himself," he said, "and he believed for the whole of his brother farmers, was, that they were disposed to risk all, to brave all, to dare all; and that, come when it might, and cost what it would, they were ready to take steps which were frightful for loyal men to engage in, but which long-continued injustice had brought them to the contemplation of." These expressions were loudly cheered; but, whether the noblemen and gentlemen on the platform took part in the applause, the reports of the morning newspapers do not state. It is melancholy that the farmers of England should so far forget themselves as to give vent, even when goaded by real suffering, to such thoughts as these. It is an ill example to set to the people, one of which, upon cool reflection, they will, doubtless, be sorry to have given them. But we think, nevertheless, that the farmers of England, however loudly they may "bark" sedition, will not "bite." The meeting on Tuesday sufficiently showed, notwithstanding their disloyal words, that they will vent their discontent in another fashion, when the worst comes to the worst with them. More than one speaker complained that the landlords had not reduced rents; and that the clergy, as well as the landlords, had manifested apathy in the cause of Protection. Let the Duke of Richmond and others beware of the spirit they are raising. A fair adjustment between landlords and tenants, and of the general taxation of the country, are what the tenant farmers require; but the adjustment is not likely to be fair towards the landlords, if they encourage, tacitly or openly, the tenant-farmers to indulge in such speeches as those which now seem to find most favour with them. The question lies, in reality, between the owners and the occupiers of the soil. With Protection, or without Protection, there will be distress among the farmers of Great Britain whenever Heaven shall vouchsafe to send a plentiful harvest or the toiling people of these kingdoms, unless by some arrangement which landlords and tenants may make among themselves, but which the Legislature cannot enforce upon them, they shall devise the means of equalising the profits of good years and bad ones, and subjecting the business of agriculture to the same rules of trade which every other pursuit and occupation of life must submit to, under the penalty of distress or bankruptcy. The agrarian war which some short-sighted Dukes and Earls are exciting will not be a war against the State, or against the people of towns engaged in manufactures; it will turn to a war against rents.

ROOK-SHOOTING IN PENSHURST PARK.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

Let the leaders of the Protectionist party pause in their career. Free-Trade, like many other right systems, may create suffering upon its first introduction; but it will ultimately work well, even for those who now complain of it, if all parties will unite, and patiently consider the real state of the country. The day has gone by, when any one interest, however powerful, can be considered all-powerful in such a society as ours of Great Britain; and should the unfortunate day ever arrive, when the mills of the north of England should be wholly stopped, even for one little month, the agriculturists would confess with sorrow, that a worse distress had come upon them than any they had previously suffered. Agriculture and manufactures are, in reality, dependent upon each other for success and prosperity, and ought to be no more estranged than the partners of one concern, or the members of one household. What agriculture requires is, in the first place, a re-adjustment of rents; and, in the second, a re-consideration of the whole taxation of the country. To attain the first object, the tenant-farmers must help themselves. To attain the second—which is equally essential—they will be aided not only by all the real statesmanship of the country, but by the now-hated manufacturers, and by the great bulk of the population both rural and urban. The rottenness of our system, which affects agriculture first, as the weakest part, dwells in the taxation of the country. A revision of that system is the necessary consequence of Free-Trade, and must take place sooner or later. England awaits the advent of the statesman who shall undertake it. Believing, we do so, that, in establishing Free-Trade, the great political parties did a right thing—and the only right thing in the circumstances of the country —we are anxious that the farmers should have the full advantage of it. There must be Free-Trade for them, as well as against them, and a reduction or removal of all burdens which oppress their industry. If they will open their eyes to this fact, and cease to clamour for a Protection which could do them no good if they had it, and unite with those best of all Conservatives who would create stability for our institutions by removing injustice and misery, they will do more good to themselves and to the State than by spouting sedition and disloyalty, and exciting one class of the community against the other. If they will only understand it, Free-Trade will prove their friend, and not their enemy.

ROOK SHOOTING IN PENSHURST PARK.

AMONG those rural diversions which partake of a sporting character, but do not rank with legitimate field sports, is rook shooting. It falls in a season of the year when spaniels and pointers rest from their sylvan labours, and the sharp note of the double barrel is no more heard in woodland or lea. By the second week in May the young rooks have acquired sufficient maturity to become the proper quarry of such as take their pleasure in the marksman's art. This passage of arms has for its scene, in many instances, some noble park, peopled with forest monarchs, befitting attendants on "Mr. Rook the stately homes of England." The rendezvous which forms the subject of the accompanying illustration of a party engaged in rook shooting, is in one of the stateliest of our insular domains. Penshurst, situated in the Weald of Kent, is the birth-place—one of those now flourishing in the Park is said to have been planted on the birth of that Sir Philip Sidney whom Queen Elizabeth styled "the jewel of her times." The gun is the only instrument that they seem to use in their pastime; but rifles, air-guns, and cross-bows also constitute the arms of rook-shooters. It is the merry month of May, and the callow family, new-filled with strength and joyousness, seated on the edges of their nests, or perched on the neighbouring branches, offer point-blank objects of aim. The siege of the feathered colony proceeds, and, sooth to say, many is the pitiful sight that awaits the looser on. "There is one trait," says a naturalist, "in the character of the rook, which I believe, peculiar to this bird, and which does him no little credit. It is the distress they exhibit when one of them has been killed or wounded by a gun. Instead of being scared away by the report, and leaving their wounded or dead companion to his fate, they show the greatest anxiety and sympathy for him, uttering cries of distress, and plainly proving that they wish to render him assistance.

While circling round and round,
They call their life's companion from the ground.

I have seen one of my labourers pick up a wounded rook, which he had shot at for the purpose of putting him up as a scare-crow in a field of wheat; and while the poor bird was still fluttering in his hand, I have observed one of his companions make a wheel round in the air, and suddenly dart past him, so as almost to touch him, perhaps with the last hope that he might still afford assistance to his unfortunate friend."

In the days of Falconry, moreover, the rook was one of the feathered tribe flown at with hawks. Malpré all this great discouragement, his local prospects remain are singularly portinacious. Where rooks have dwelt and perished prematurely for ages they continue to resort, and bid "welcome to their grey beds." Thus there exists, and has existed unto immemorially, a rookery in Hampton Court Park, which, as surely as spring comes back, there assembles in wholesale slaughter of the inhabitants. The locality is a plantation of limes; while hard by, in Bushy Park, there is a noble avenue of limes, tall and secure, which has never been haunted by the residence of a solitary scion of the species. Perched aloft, as has been premised, on the pleasant branches clad in fresh verdure, or on the threshold of his home, is the young rook, waiting the issue of the death-dealing tube. If firings, and the bird falls, yet he flies not in danger. In the aerial throe his footcold twines around the spot whereon he rested, and he is succeeded from a self-made exhaust. . . . Treating of this diversion, Colonel Hawker writes:—"Its careful hoe you find among rick-yards and buildings, and rea good loading your gun with either paper or tow. For in a kind of snock ing the sa est and best kind of wadding is leather. . . Young rooks, by being first skinned, and then soaked all night in cold spring water, make pies which are worthy the notice of the most scientific gourmand." The sporting colonel, indeed, did have said that, by a certain process of culinary transmigration, the body of a plague-pie. . . Rooks are gregarious, and are singularly exact ing flocks, making their flights in the morning to their feeding-grounds, and to return ing at night. During the breeding season, the male shares with the female the duties and cares of the nursery. They begin to build towards the middle of March, and not being over prone to the doctrine of meum and tuum, while the gentleman is abroad for materials, the lady watches for their safety at home, and vice versâ. When the young birds are able to fly, the family change their quarters—returning to them in autumn, when they repudiate their nests. Like the human race, the rook is occasionally eccentric after his kind. A pair of black rooks, with a passion for town life, have for the last twenty or thirty years regularly come up for the season, occupying the upper part of the tree at the end of Laurence-lane in Cheapside.

The naturalist before referred to thus winds up his theory of rookism —if it be true, how many removes is shooting these intellectuals from wilful murder? "Whoever, like myself, has observed the habits and manners of the rook, and is convinced, as I am, that they have the power of communication by means of a language known to themselves, and are endowed with a knowledge and foresight most extraordinary, will take as much interest in them as I do."

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

The spirit of reaction has at length produced to embody its hostility to the apprehended rather than to the actual domination of the Social and Red Republic, by an attack upon universal suffrage, which is regarded as the great stronghold of the Mountain.

M. Baroche accordingly submitted to the Legislative Assembly on Wednesday the new electoral law which is to crush the dreaded monster, and, in his exposé des motifs, he explained the causes which in the eyes of the Government justified the proposed measure.

He said that it was called for by the imperfect state of the existing law, which paralysed commerce, disturbed confidence, and placed the safety of society in jeopardy; and he contended that universal suffrage, as now exercised, filled the best disposed minds with apprehension, and that unless some serious modifications were introduced to check its pernicious influence, it would be attended with the most disastrous results.

The main feature of the measure thus prefaced is that every voter must have a three years' residence in one commune, and not a six months' habitation, as at present. The question of domicile is to be proved by the inscription upon the registry of the amount of his personal contribution, and domestic servants will be considered to have three years' domicile after living so long with their masters: the same rule shall apply to workmen lodging in the establishments of their employers; also to public functionaries residing in the offices where their functions are exercised, and to soldiers and sailors in the communes where their families reside. All persons condemned for crime and misdemeanour, all functionaries deprived of office on account of judicial sentences, and all those who may be condemned for mendicancy or as vagabonds, are to be deprived of the franchise; and in contested elections, where the candidate having the majority should not yet have obtained the number of the votes, it is proposed that there shall be three renewals of the scrutiny, and that then, should the result not be changed, the candidates having the relative majority shall be declared to be returned. With regard to the army, instead of their votes being published beforehand, the whole shall be sealed and transmitted to the Prefects to be confounded with the other votes. The time for filling up a vacancy is to be extended from forty days to six months, at the option of the Government

M. Baroche concluded by demanding urgency or the bill, as it was in strict accordance both with the letter and the spirit of the constitution. Several speakers opposed urgency, and the previous question was moved, which was put and lost by a majority of 256. Urgency was then carried, and the Assembly adjourned to Friday.

M. Eugène Sue, the new Socialist member for Paris, took his seat on Wednesday, for the first time, in the Legislative Assembly

The question as to the right to sell in shops journals for the sale of which otherwise than at the office of publication, or by supply to subscribers, permission had not been obtained from the Prefect of Police, was brought on Tuesday before the Correctional Tribunal. Three persons who had sold such papers were condemned to a fine of 25 francs each and the costs

M. Cauvin, who was condemned by default, on the 3rd inst., to a year's imprisonment and a fine of 1000 francs, for an inflammatory speech at an electoral meeting, appeared on Tuesday before a jury to take his trial. He was found guilty, and the same sentence was pronounced. An additional period of imprisonment of two years was also inflicted in consequence of the non-payment of the fine.

On Sunday the usual religious ceremony in commemoration of the anniversary of the death of Napoleon was solemnised in the Church of the Invalides. Several officers of the army of Italy appeared in the costume of their respective corps, were present, together with the President of the Republic and the members of the Bonaparte family now in Paris.

SPAIN

The final stage of the reconciliation between the courts of Madrid and London has been entered upon, and diplomatic relations between the two governments will be immediately resumed. The Madrid Gazette of the 3rd inst. contains the official decree appointing Don Juan Bautista Calvimonte, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from the Queen of Spain to the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland

ITALIAN STATES.

From Rome we learn that the Pontifical Government is much embarrassed by want of funds; and on the 26th ult. a proclamation was issued by the Minister of Finance, M. A. Galli, laying an extraordinary tax on landed property, "to meet the pressing necessities of the State, in consequence of the failures of the last two years." The treasury bonds of the Republic are to cease to be received in payment by the Government offices after the 10th inst.

PRUSSIA.

The principal part which Prussia appears desirous of playing in the dreamy drama of German politics, is that of promoter-general of impracticable federal assemblages either of States or rulers, whose distracted purposeless councils only succeed in showing how thoroughly unacquainted all the members of them many are with the science of Government. A Congress of Kings and Princes has been summoned by his Prussian Majesty to Berlin, to which some of the crowned heads have refused to pay attention, amongst them the King of Hanover. The King of Saxony and the Duke of Baden arrived on the 6th inst. at the Palace of Charlottenburg, with a view to attending the Congress, which shall be held forthwith.

UNITED STATES.

Accounts to the 30th ult. from New York have been received. At Washington, the question of the admission of California, and the recognition of slavery in new territories, still formed the chief subject of discussion. The Senate had rejected Colonel Benton's amendment, and determined to refer the subject of admitting California, and forming a territorial government for New Mexico, to a select committee of thirteen. The report of such a committee would probably be a recommendation to admit California, and the establishment of a government in New Mexico, without restriction as to slavery, and the Senate, it was thought, would probably concur; but there were substantial grounds for believing that, ultimately, no such measure would become law.

A disgraceful scene occurred in the Senate on the 17th ult. In the debate upon Mr. Berrien's resolutions of censure upon Mr. Foote, of Mississippi, made a personal allusion to Colonel Benton, and was proceeding to attack him in no very gentle terms, when the colonel, in a violent passion, rose from his seat and made an attempt to approach Mr. Foote. As everyone around him believed he was about to make a personal assault, several senators rose and attempted to stop him. He broke away from his detainers, when Mr. Foote, leaving his place, moved briskly to an open space before the vice-president's chair, drew a revolver from his pocket, cocked it, and awaited the approach of his antagonist. He was then surrounded by senators, and detained from approaching Colonel Benton. The Colonel then dashed away from those who held him back, presented his coat and breast to the latter, and dared him to fire. A scene of indescribable confusion ensued, and the vice-president, with very great difficulty, succeeded in restoring order. After some delay and much embarrassment, a committee of seven was appointed to investigate the matter. Colonel Benton disclaimed that he ever carried arms. Mr. Foote averring that he only did so for self-defence, and that he should pursue this subject out of doors.

The rumours of a modification in the Cabinet had somewhat died away.

Accounts from St. Louis, of the 19th ult., state that a band of Sioux Indians, headed by their chief, had recently attacked a family of Chippewas numbering fourteen persons, at Falls Croix, and murdered them all.

PROTESTANT ASSOCIATION.—The annual meeting of the Protestant Association was held on Wednesday, at Exeter Hall; the Right Hon. Earl of Rodon in the chair. The meeting having been opened by prayer, the chairman stated that, before he called upon the secretary to read the report, he could not help expressing his regret that some more efficient person than himself had not been selected to fill the chair; but, at the same time, he begged to assure them that there was no one at that meeting, nor in the country, who could take a deeper interest in the important objects of the society than he did. He felt most gratified in being engaged to assist in its proceedings. This was not a political society, but one which had the immutable word of God for its foundation. He could not, therefore, but feel it a privilege as well as honour to be enabled to promote so great object in which they were all anxiously employed. Their blessed Protestant cause was surrounded and attacked, not only by enemies confined to the Church of Rome, but from those in the midst of their own Church, who professed the same word. Protestant was now almost exploded, and even looked upon as a by-word by many who once deeply reverenced it. They were living in the most awful times, and it was the bounden duty of all Christians to grapple with the evils that impended over the Church, and to remember in the good cause what Scripture assured them, that if "God be for us, who can be against us?" The report stated that the financial state of the society was more favourable than last year, and the annual subscriptions were larger than they had been in any other year from its commencement. Several gentlemen addressed the meeting, and resolutions founded on the report were submitted to the meeting, and carried unanimously, stating that it was the bounden duty of British Protestants to oppose the political as well as the religious influence of the Church of Rome. After a vote of thanks to the noble chairman, the meeting separated.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.—The President and Fellows of Magdalen College have voted the sum of 100 guineas to the Bishop of Exeter towards defraying the expenses in his process with Mr. Gorham. The Bishop is a member of Magdalen College. This is said to be the only offer of pecuniary assistance which the Bishop has accepted from the numerous friends who have proffered their aid on this occasion.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—The Rev. Gilbert Elliot, to the deanery of Bristol. Rev. R. Gee, Vicar of Abbott's Langley, Herts, to be Rural Dean of Watford. Rev. J. M. M'Mahon to the rectory of Brandeston, Norfolk. Rev. Powell Jones to the rectory of Loughor. Rev. C. Bailey to the vicarage of Marsh, Yorkshire. Rev. Henry Thomas Mar, to the vicarage of South Petherwyn with Trewen, Cornwall. Rev. William Paull, M.A., to Handley rectory, Cheshire, void by death of Rev. Joseph Eaton; patrons, dean and chapter of Chester; value £233, with residence. Rev. H. H. Massie, rector of St. Mary's, Chester, to a minor canonry in Chester Cathedral. Rev. R. W. Gleadowe has been appointed sacristan by the Dean and Chapter of Chester Cathedral, in the room of Rev. J. Eaton, deceased. Rev. Mr. Oliver to the stipendiary curacy of Wilmslow, Cheshire, upon the nomination of Rev. Wm. Brownlow, the rector. Rev. R. Fitzgerald to Winslade rectory, Hants, diocese of Winchester; value £164, with residence; patron, Lord Bolton. Rev. W. W. Seleer to Bishop Abbas rectory, Hants, diocese of Winchester; value £327, with residence; patron, Rev. R. Wright. Rev. John Randall, Vicar of Lyonshall, Kington, has been appointed a surrogate for the diocese of Hereford

VACANCIES.—A minor canonry in Chester Cathedral. The precentorship in ditto, by death of Rev. J. Eaton. Head Mastership of Tavistock Grammar School, Devon; patron, Duke of Bedford; Rev. H. Colson, deceased. Stamford-St.-Ve-Vale V., with Colsterworth, Berks and Oxford, value £337, with residence; patrons, Dean and Chapter of Westminster; Rev. T. Sanders, deceased. Guernsey, Holy Trinity P. C., diocese of Winchester; value £200; patrons, trustees. Rev. R. W. Kyle, deceased. Felton V., Northumberland, with Long Framlingham P. C., value £275, with residence; patron, Lord Chancellor.

TESTIMONIALS.—The following clergymen have been recently presented with testimonials of esteem and affection:—The Rev. Henry Anthony Dove, of St. Marylebone, Westminster, from the congregation; the Rev. R. H. Goodacre, on resigning his curacy in Deek parish church, from the congregation; the Rev. T. S. Bonnin, curate of Sealcoates, from his congregation, as a testimony to his faithful discharge of the arduous duties which devolved on him during the late visitation of the cholera; the Rev. C. Kavanagh, from the people of Swansea.

THE GORHAM CASE.

A fortnight ago it was supposed that the Bishop of Exeter's resources were exhausted; but that was a mistake, and a precisely similar application to that made to the Court of Queen's Bench, for a rule to show cause why the proceedings of the Court of Arches should not be stayed, was on Thursday week made to the Court of Common Pleas. The arguments relied on were the same in both cases, with the difference that Sir Fitzroy Kelly showed that Lord Chief Justice Campbell had erroneously described the origin of the Acts of Henry VIII., referred to in the case, and that the date he assigned to the termination of the Chancellorship of Sir Thomas More. The Court of Common Pleas, because the question had been before the Court of Queen's Bench, has taken time to consider the decision, and announced on Wednesday that it will not give judgment this term. The Chief Justice has, however, stated enough to let us see that the decision will depend less on the statutes of Henry VIII. than on the practice of the court, and the construction put by that practice on the law, which in the Court of Queen's Bench was stated to have been uniformly opposed to the statement of the Bishop's counsel. The Court of Common Pleas seems not quite satisfied as to the propriety, and has taken time, accordingly, to examine it. This new and unusual application to one court to do what another court has refused to do, explains why the Bishop, when the question was last before the Court of Arches, was anxious for a delay the proceedings of that court.

The Bishop of Worcester (Dr Pepys) has written to Mr. Yorke, Rector of St. Philip's, Birmingham, in reply to a letter stating that an attempt is making to agitate the public mind at the present crisis upon the late judgment of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, some reasons for thinking there is no ground for such agitation. He says:—"By that judgment no point of doctrine was decided, or even called in question. Nothing more was determined, than that the variance on the part of Mr. Gorham with the articles and formularies of our Liturgy, if any, was not such as to justify the Bishop of Exeter in refusing to institute him to a benefice to which he had been presented by the Crown; and in justification of such a determination it was pleaded that various formularies similar to those professed by Mr. Gorham had been held by our early Reformers, as well as by Usher, Carleton, Pearson, and other eminent divines, who had, nevertheless, been permitted to retain their preferments." After referring to the schism in the Church on baptismal regeneration, the Bishop continues:—"By the judgment in the Gorham case no one's freedom of opinion was in any degree fettered. Those who have conceived that regeneration invariably accompanied baptism, as well as those who conceived that a prevenient act of grace was necessary in the case of infants for its fit reception, might still have performed their Saviour's work in their several spheres of usefulness. Although they might not exactly concur in opinion upon an avowedly difficult subject, it becomes certainly the duty of those who have been placed in authority to allay it as far as they can. With this view the Bishops have already held three meetings, which have been very numerously attended, and they are to meet again on Monday next, when probably some final result may be determined."

The Bishops did meet on Monday; and on that evening the Bishop of London laid on the table a bill for "abolishing all proceedings in matters of heresy and schism," the result of these meetings. The measure is said in no wise to infringe on the Royal prerogative, but to carry out the principle already known to the law, "that, to test the ability of a person presented to an ecclesiastical benefice belongs to an ecclesiastical tribunal." The bill proposes, that, as often as it shall be necessary for the Privy Council to determine any question of the doctrine of the Church of England, such question shall be referred in the form of a special case to the whole episcopate, to be convoked for that purpose by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the opinion of the majority, when duly certified in writing to the Council, to be binding on the latter, and to be speedily reported to the Queen. It is proposed that the Bishops shall on such cases act as a court, giving due notice of time and place of meeting to all entitled to be heard, and that the Prelates shall attest their decisions by their signatures. This was to constitute a purely ecclesiastical tribunal for points of doctrine, and is the first step towards a reasonable solution of the present difficulties. How the inferior clergy will like to be unwillingly excluded from such a tribunal—what additional influence it might give the Bishops—what effect it might have on the Crown, including it to select Bishops for their opinions—are important questions which will, no doubt, with many others, receive due consideration.

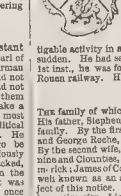
The number of clergy who have already subscribed memorials or declarations to their dioceses on this subject are said to be upwards of 1500, of whom, in the Archdeaconry of Worcester, are 150; and those of Coventry 121; Cornwall, 140; Derby, 100; Exeter, 140; Chichester, 120; Barnstaple, 90; Reading, 70; in the diocese of Lincoln, 118; and that of Gloucester and Bristol, 200. The Oxford declaration is signed by a large number of the junior clergy, and a great number of those who declined to sign it expressed their approbation of its contents.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

LADY SARAH FINCH.

HER Ladyship, whose early death was lately announced, was second daughter of Heneage, present Earl of Aylesford, grand-daughter, maternally, of George II., Earl of Brooke and Warwick, and sister of Lord Guernsey and Viscountess Lewisham. She was born June 21, 1823, and had, consequently, not quite completed her 27th year.

M. DE BLAINVILLE.



THIS eminent naturalist was the successor of George Cuvier in the chair of Comparative Anatomy at the Museum of Natural History in Paris. As a man of science and a lecturer, M. de Blainville was equally famous. He was perhaps the only one who, without wearying his audience, could deliver on points the most abstruse a lecture of two hours. He was latterly engaged with indefatigable activity in a work on fossil remains. M. de Blainville's death was awfully sudden. He set out on a journey to England: but while on his way, on the 1st inst., he was found dead in one of the carriages of the night train on the Rouen railway. He was at the time in his 73d year.

WILLIAM ROCHE, ESQ.

THE family of which this gentleman was a member is one of high respectability. His father, Stephen Roche, Esq., married three wives, and left a very numerous family. By the first wife he had John Roche, an eminent merchant in Ireland, and George Roche, Esq., of Granagh Castle, who claimed the peerage of Fermoy. By the second wife, Sarah, daughter and co-heir of John O'Brien, Esq., of Mayravine and Clonmines, he had four sons—Stephen, Edmund, Kilmurry, Thomas, of Limerick; James of Cork, a gentleman of the highest literary and classic attainments, well known as an able historical and antiquarian essayist; and William, the subject of this notice. William Roche, the latter life, was an eminent banker in his native city, Limerick. After retiring from business he was chosen M.P. for Limerick by his fellow-citizens, who elected him without his having sought the honour, and without his being put to any expense. He was the first Catholic representative of the city since the repeal of the penal laws. Mr. Roche was, in Parliament, a Reformer, but all parties looked with respect on the upright conduct and sterling independence of the man. Mr. Roche was obliged some years ago to abandon his parliamentary career, in consequence of his declining health. In private life Mr. Roche was much esteemed. His taste as an horticulturist was well known and appreciated; his gardens in Limerick, unique in design and construction, have long attracted the attention of travellers. Mr. Roche's death occurred recently, in his native and favourite city.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT

HOUSE OF LORDS—Monday.

ECCLESIASTICAL PATRONAGE

The Archbishop of Canterbury made a statement explanatory of the charges that had been made against him elsewhere, of having nominated his son to the reversionary valuable sinecure office of Registrar of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. The most rev. prelate said that it was true that he had nominated his son to the reversion of the office, but it was not true that the office was either valuable or a sinecure. In 1847 an act was passed which placed the office under the control of Parliament with respect to all future nominations; and should his son ever hold the registrarship, he would be obliged to fill it in person and to take the salary that would be fixed by Parliament according to the duties and responsibilities of the office. The value having been limited, and the succession having been taken away, he did not think he was chargeable with nepotism in having nominated his son to a reversion that was, computing all chances, almost worthless.

The Bishop of London instanced, as a proof of the most rev. prelate's disinterestedness, a case in which, when Bishop of Chester, he had a valuable office at his disposal, which he might have given to his son, but did not.

Lord Stanley presented a petition from Jamaica, complaining of the conduct and composition of the Legislative Council, and praying for a modification of the constitution of that island.

Earl Grey defended the conduct of the Legislative Council, and maintained that the constitution of Jamaica required no amendment.

ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

The Bishop of London laid on the table a Bill to amend the law relating to the administration of justice by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. He said that the measure had been agreed upon by his right rev. brethren almost unanimously; and by it he proposed, not to do away with the jurisdiction of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, but to direct a certain reference to be made in cases of appeal from the Ecclesiastical Courts.

The bill was read a first time.

The Parish Constables Bill was read a second time.

On the motion of Lord Campbell, the Administration of Criminal Justice Improvement Bill was read a second time.

The Process and Practice (Ireland) Bill was committed pro formâ, for the purpose of having amendments inserted in it.

Lord Wharncliffe presented a petition from coal-miners, praying for legislative interference with the hours of labour and regulation of wages.

The Earl Granville intimated that the subject engaged the attention of Government, but it was surrounded with difficulties, and they were waiting for the report of the commissioners.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Monday.

AUSTRALIAN COLONIES BILL

Mr. E. Denison inquired what determination the Government had come to with respect to the Federal Assembly of the Austrian colonies.

Mr. Labouchere acknowledged his entire approbation in the principle of the clauses submitted by them in the Australian Colonies Government Bill, but they were prepared to vary the application of that principle in a way to give the smaller colonies greater weight in the Federal Assembly than they would have had under the original clauses. The new clauses would be printed and proposed on the third reading of the bill.

On the motion to consider the Australian Colonies Government Bill, as amended, Sir W. Molesworth moved the re-committal of the bill, for the purpose of omitting all clauses which empower the Colonial Office to disallow colonial laws, to cause colonial bills to be reserved, and to instruct colonial governors as to their conduct in matters of the colonies; and for the purpose of adding clauses enumerating and defining imperial and colonial powers. The hon. Baronet was of opinion that the great question of colonial polity—what amount of self-government the colonies should possess, and how far they should be subjected to the Colonial Office—had not been discussed; and he contended that, by the bill, that full amount of self-government consistent with the integrity of the British empire would not be granted to the colonies. The hon. Baronet explained his plan in detail.

Mr. Labouchere considered that the proposal of the hon. Baronet would lead to endless confusion and misunderstanding amongst the colonies, and, therefore, he should oppose the motion. He thought that it would not be possible to define the prerogatives of the Crown in the way suggested, or to draw the proposed distinction between imperial and colonial powers. He implored the House not to consent to the re-commital of the bill for the purpose of discussing one of the widest schemes that had ever been propounded to Parliament.

Mr. Adderley trusted the House would not uproot the Colonial Office in the mischievous way proposed. It was the opinion of Earl Grey that the real prerogative of the Crown distinctly defined, and there could be no reason why the colonists should not participate in this feeling.

Sir C. Lemon referred to objections urged by Mr. Labouchere, and said that the evasion and uncertainty characteristic of Sir W. Molesworth's proposition were its chief blemishes, and it would, he believed, if carried, tend to promote a collision between the Imperial Government and the colonies.

Mr. Gladstone supported the motion, thinking that the difficulty of defining prerogative was no satisfactory reason why, in a case of such vast importance, it should not be attempted. He was desirous to see the colonists enjoy those rights the Colonial Office as regarded local matters, and did not think that English law ought to over-ride colonial law upon points in which the Imperial Government was not interested.

The House then divided, and the numbers were—

For the motion	..	42
Against it	..	165
Majority against Sir W. Molesworth		123

Mr. Gladstone then called the attention of the House to a question connected with the well-being of the Church of England in the colonies. He described her as labouring under many disadvantages there. The would not be the case in Western Australia, as being too insignificant, nor into that of South Australia, because he did not think Government had sufficient information on the subject, but he would propose to Van Diemen's Land and to New South Wales, taking the former as the best illustration. He explained that in this colony there was no distinction of Church, and that if the Churches of England, Scotland, and Rome were mentioned in the legislation, it was only because those churches comprised the majority of worshippers; but that the system was, that if any sect could gather together a suffic ent number of adherents to subscribe a certain sum, the State was bound to find a substance. But not only was the Church of England under negative disadvantages, but her Bishops, who had been sent out with sounding titles and apparently large functions, found upon arriving at their posts that the territory and that if they attempted to exercise Episcopal authority, they laid themselves open to prosecution at civil actions. In fact, the law-advisers of the Crown had been obliged to decide that her Majesty's own act, empowering the Bishop of Van Diemen's Land, was illegal. He went at detail into the practical working of this state of things, as it affected all the colonial clergy from the bishop down to the humblest missionary, and concluded by moving a clause enacting, that whereas doubts existed as to the rights and privileges of the bishops, clergy, and other members of the united Church of England and Ireland, in regard to the management of the internal affairs thereof in the Australian colonies, it should be lawful for the bishop or bishops of any diocese or dioceses, in the said colonies, and the clergy and lay persons, members of the Church of England, or otherwise in communion with him or them respectively, to meet together from time to time, and by mutual consent, or by a majority, with the assent of the Bishop, to make all such regulations as may be necessary for the better conduct of their ecclesiastical affairs.

Mr. Labouchere opposed the motion, believing that the establishment of any ecclesiastical court was not consistent with the principle of the voluntary that was demanded. His own conviction was that in the colonies the Church of England should neither receive exclusive favour, nor be placed under any exceptional disadvantages, and this certainly had been achieved, fulfilled in her present position in our Australian connexions. As a member of the Church, he could feel that retaining her in that position was the best mode of increasing her spiritual usefulness, and of ensuring her remaining, as he trusted she would for many an age remain, the means of diffusing religious light and instruction among the population of Australia.

After a discussion, in which Mr. A. Hope, Mr. Chisholm Anstey, Mr. P. Wood, Mr Roebuck, and Mr. Roundell Palmer took part,

Sir George Grey had not expected that the debate would result in a discussion of matters of so grave a character. He differed from Mr. Roebuck in the view he had taken of Church matters; but he also thought the question unrelated to impair the utility of the Colonial Church. While upon this subject, he could not help expressing his regret at the recent conduct of certain members of the Church of England, who had exhibited more in a state of melancholy disunion. (Loud cheers from the Ministerial benches followed this allusion.) As regarded the scheme of Mr. Gladstone, he must object to any ecclesiastical regulations having the weight proposed to be given to them, which was not only to make them binding vi foro conscientiæ, but also with the force of law—a proceeding directly calculated to curtail the prerogative of the Crown. The propositions were either dangerous or unnecessary: in the first case having a tendency to opposition in the spirit in which he desired to see the colonists legislate for the second, giving a power which those for whom it was sought already clearly possessed.

Mr. Adderley and Mr. Hume said a few words.

The Attorney-General would not have opposed this motion could he have deemed it serviceable to the Colonial Church, but he apprehended that it would produce discord in it. He would allay any alleged fears of "premunire" by apprising the House that premunire was a territorial enactment, not applicable to the colonies at all, even if it were not absurd to suppose that such a process would be attempted in such a case. He would suggest that the members of the Church who had anything to complain of should do so other churches had done, namely, meet and lay down rules for their own guidance. He thought the legislative sanction of such an assembly as that sought or was both unprecedented, needless, and dangerous.

Mr. Gladstone replied, and off red, if Government would give him a pledge that it would itself obtain information upon the subject, and, if his case were made out, would undertake that the Church of England should be placed on the same footing as other religious bodies, to withdraw his motion

The House then divided, and the numbers were—

For the motion	..	102
Against it	..	187
Majority against Mr. Gladstone		—85

Mr. Chisholm Anstey moved that Van Diemen's Land should in future be called Tasmania.

Mr. Wyld seconded the motion.

Mr. Labouchere thought it was hardly worth while making a change now; but it could be done hereafter if the colony expressed any strong feeling on the subject.

The motion was negatived without a division; and a clause which was next moved by Mr. Anstey (as to the issue of the first writs for the colonial legislatures) was not even seconded.

Mr. Wyld moved clauses for giving the Legislative Council of Van Diemen's Land the power of making regulations as to convicts, but he was also unable to find a seconder

Other amendments were postponed, and the bill, as amended, was agreed to, and ordered to be read a third time on Monday next

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in answer to Mr. Disraeli, said that he would announce on Friday what he meant to do with the Stamp Duties Bill.

On the motion for the third reading of the Distressed Unions Advances (Ireland) Bill,

Mr. Stafford protested against the bill as unjust, tyrannical, and oppressive.

The b l was then read a third time and passed.

Sir E. N. Buxton (on account of the indisposition of Lord John Russell) postponed the motion on the subject of slave grown sugar, which was to have been brought on this evening.—Adjourned at half-past twelve o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Tuesday.

Their Lordships sat for a short time, and, after the presentation of some petitions, adjourned to Friday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Tuesday.

ATTORNEYS' CERTIFICATE DUTY.

Lord R. Grosvenor stated, in reply to a question, that Ireland and Scotland had been by accident omitted from the Bill for repealing the annual duty on Attorneys' and Solicitors' Certificates, but that, unless the bill should be extended to Ireland and Scotland, he would withdraw it. The noble Lord added that he had received an intimation from the Government of their intention to oppose the bill on its next stage.

NOTICES OF MOTION.

Sir E. Buxton stated that the Government had given up to him Friday, the 31st inst., for the discussion on his motion relative to the importation of slave-produced sugar.

Mr. Fenwick, on the part of Mr. Cayley, gave notice that he would bring forward his motion for the repeal of the Malt Tax on the 30th inst.

Mr. Bright gave notice that he would, on next Tuesday, move for a commission to proceed to India to inquire into the obstacles that at present impede the growth of cotton in that country.

ENCUMBERED ESTATES.

Lord Naas inquired if it was by the advice and under the authority of the Government that the Encumbered Estates Commissioners had given notice of their intention to allow half the purchase-money which would otherwise be retained to stand over, in order to allow parties to avail themselves of the Solicitor General's bill, now before Parliament, for securing advances on those estates.

Sir W Somerville replied that the notice referred to was a judicial proceeding, and the authority of Government had not been asked.

To a question put by Mr. Baillie, Sir G. Grey stated that the Lord Chancellor was recovering, and would shortly be able to attend to his duties in the Court of Chancery The noble and learned Lord had performed the functions of his office at his own residence, and he (Sir G. Grey) believed no inconvenience had been sustained by his Lordship's absence.

THE EXHIBITION OF 1851.

Mr. Ainsworth inquired if there was any intention to ask Parliament for any money for the purposes of the proposed Exhibition or 1851? and if the Government would give an assurance that they would not, under any circumstances, sanction the advance of public money in aid of this exposition.

Mr. Labouchere answered that he did not anticipate that it would be his duty to ask Parliament to interfere with the conduct of the Exposition, which would be altogether dependent on voluntary contributions. He might have to ask Parliament to consent to a clause in a bill which he would have to introduce for the registration of designs, to prevent the piracy of which articles sent to the Exhibition might be exposed. As one of the Royal Commissioners, he could assure the hon. member that nothing was further from the intention of the commission that to ask Parliament for any advance of public money.

ADVERTISEMENT DUTY.

Mr. Ewart submitted a motion for the repeal of the advertisement duty. He contended that this tax was a grievous impediment to buying and selling, and to the diffusion of religion and knowledge. In 1833 the advertisement duty was reduced from 3s 6d. to 1s. 6d., and yet such had been the increase of the number of advertisements that the revenue derived from them, which had been £170,000, was now £157,000.

Mr. M Gibson seconded the motion.

Mr. Trelawny opposed it. He thought that the carrying of such a proposition would endanger the national credit.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer could not do more than repeat the arguments he had used on former occasions against the repeal of duties other than those he had himself proposed to take off. Everybody seemed now to have a desire to get a gift at the Exchequer, but the Exchequer was not in a condition to bear any further pulls this year.

After a few words from Mr. Hume in favour of the motion,

The House divided—

For Mr. Ewart's motion	..	39
Against it	..	208
Majority against the motion		—169

THE BAKERS OF THE METROPOLIS.

Lord R. Grosvenor moved for a select committee to inquire whether any measure can be taken to improve the sanitary condition of the journeymen bakers of the metropolis. The noble Lord described the horrid dens in which these men are compelled to work, and the hours, destructive to health, during which they are obliged to labour.

Mr. T. Grey objected to the motion, because he did not think it would lead to practical results An inquiry could only excite delusive hopes that the Legislature could not realise

Mr. A. Stafford considered that the refusal of the House even to inquire into the grievances of the working classes would have a most pernicious effect on them, shaking their confidence in the institutions of this country.

Mr. Bankes charged Lord Robert Grosvenor with being, if not a Socialist, the advocate of Socialism. These London bakers were mostly Scotchmen, of all men the best able to take care of themselves. There might be something horrible in the vile dens in which they were obliged to work in this metropolis; but, if so, there must have been something indescribably horrible in their own country, from which they had fled to come to it.

Lord D. Stuart supported the motion.

Mr. G. Thompson altogether repudiated the observations of Mr. Bright. Although a political economist, he would separate himself from its advocates if it could only be defended on the reasons adduced by the hon. member for Manchester. Mr. Thompson warmly supported the motion.

Mr. S. Crawford also supported it.

The House then divided—

For Lord R. Grosvenor's motion	..	44
Against it	..	90
Majority against the motion		—46

THE KINGSTOWN AND HOLYHEAD MAILS.

Sir R. Bulkeley moved for a Select Committee to investigate and report upon all matters connected with the contract for the conveyance of the mails between Kingstown and Holyhead.

Sir C. Barne explained the mode in which the contract had been made. He agreed to the committee, at the same time assuring the House that the Admiralty would maintain the contract they had concluded.

After a short conversation, the motion for a committee was agreed to.

The Benefices in Pluralities Bill was considered, as amended.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Wednesday.

The House sat from noon to six o'clock.

Mr. F. O'Connor inquired if it were true that Sir E. Buxton's motion, relative to the importation of slave-prod, ced sugar, was to be considered as one involving the question of confidence or want of confidence in the Government; if any correspondence had passed between Lord J Russell and Mr. Cobden on the subject; and if the noble Premier had, as reported, asked Mr. Cobden to remain in town, to lend his assistance and that of his friends to the Ministry on the occasion of the above motion.

Sir G. Grey replied that he had not heard the rumour referred to until that moment, and that he could give no information as to the first part of the question With respect to the alleged correspondence, he had not heard of it, nor did he believe that any such had passed.

Sir W. Somerville, in answer to Mr. Hume, stated that the defalcation of Mr. Matthews, who had held a situation in the Irish Secretary's Office, Dublin Castle, was of very trifling amount.

IRISH FISHERIES.

The second reading of the Irish Fisheries Bill was moved by Mr. Anstey, who stated that the object of the measure was to repeal the law of 1842 on the subject, and to transfer the regulation of all the Irish fisheries to the Board of Works.

Mr. Conolly moved as an amendment, that the bill be read a second time in six months. He objected to give to the Board of Works such extensive powers as were proposed by it, and he considered the bill an infringement of the rights of private property.

Mr. Scully seconded the amendment.

Lord Naas regarded the bill as necessary, in order to reconcile the contradictory state relative to Irish fisheries, and therefore he should support the second reading. The consolidation clauses of the bill would effect the object he had in view, and he should, in committee, move the omission of the other clauses.

Lord Dunne, Mr. Fagan, Mr. Lawless, and Mr. M. O'Connell supported the bill; Mr. Napier and Mr. S. Crawford opposed it.

Mr. Gaggan recommended a reference to a Select Committe.

Sir W Somerville advised the withdrawal of the bill.

The House having divided, there were—

For the second reading of the bill	..	37
Against it	..	197
Majority against the bill		—160

Mr. A. Stafford inquired if the Government, seeing the general opinion expressed during the debate that some legislation on the subject of Irish fisheries was necessary, would introduce any measure on their own responsibility.

Sir W. Somerville intimated that he was not prepared to do so.

Mr. Labouchere stated that inasmuch as he had been referred to as a select committee.

Mr. Labouchere had insuperable objections to the principle of the bill, which was to empower railway companies to undertake and conduct all the business appertaining to cemetery companies. Railway companies themselves had intimated their repugnance to undertake this business, and, even if they were willing to undertake it, the House could not permit them to add to their proper functions duties so opposed to their legislative traffic.

The House having divided, there were—

For the second reading	..	4
Against it	..	123
Majority against the bill		—119

Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Thursday.

POLICE-OFFICE IDEA OF AN OATH.

Mr. Richard Fox wished to ask a question of the right hon. Baronet the Secretary of State for the Home Department on a subject which had excited a good deal of interest within the last few days. It related to an occurrence which took place at the Clerkenwell Police court on Tuesday last. It appeared that a person named Reardon was placed in the witness-box of that court. A New Testament was handed to him for the purpose of his being sworn. Before swearing him, however, the officer whose duty it was to administer the oath requested him to make the sign of the cross, having ascertained that he was a Roman Catholic, which the witness refused to do, stating that he considered it an ill suit to be told that his oath taken on the Evangelists was not as binding without the cross as with it. Then it would seem that the magistrate, Mr. Combe, took it up, who stated that he had never known a Roman Catholic refuse to make the sign of the cross before; whereupon the witness still protested that this mode of proceeding could be intended as nothing else than an insult to himself. This called forth another explanation from the magistrate in the shape of an intimation to the witness that if a Roman Catholic priest were present, he would tell him that an oath taken by a Roman Catholic would not be binding, unless it were accompanied by the sign of the cross. The witness, however, persisted that he knew nothing of any such rule, and ultimately he was allowed to be sworn in the usual way, when he gave some evidence contradicting that of a former witness. But the magistrate said he did not believe him, and decided the case the other way. The witness Reardon then asked the magistrate if he, the magistrate, intended publicly to charge him with committing perjury? To which the magistrate replied that he certainly did. (Hear, hear.) He wished, therefore, to ask the Chief Secretary of State, whether it was his intention to notice the conduct of Mr. Combe, presiding magistrate of the Clerkenwell Sessions Court, towards a Roman Catholic witness of the name of Reardon, on Tuesday, 7th of May?

Sir George Grey said his attention had been called to the case by receiving notice of a question yesterday on the subject from his noble friend the Earl of Arundel and Surrey; and in consequence of that intimation he had looked over the report of the case in the newspapers. Upon reading that report he directed a communication to be made to Mr. Combe, the magistrate, requesting the gentleman to furnish him with any observations in explanation on the matter. The answer he had received to that communication found no fault with the newspaper report of the case, but stated that the witness being requested to make the sign of the cross was made in accordance with the usual practice of the Clerkenwell Police-court. The answer added that the magistrate did not discredit the evidence of the witness because he refused to make the sign of the cross, but because the evidence on the other side seemed to be the strongest, and the most to be relied on. (Hear, hear.) Now he (Sir G. Grey) must confess that this practice was one which he had never heard of before, while he had made inquiries of parties who were well informed on the subject, and they seemed to think that the act of making the sign of the cross was quite voluntary on the part of the witness, and no magistrate had a right to insist on it as performing the ceremony before permitting him to be sworn. It did not appear that the practice prevailed in any other police court, nor did it prevail in any of the common-law courts either in England or Ireland. (Hear, hear.) He had, therefore, directed a communication to be made to Mr. Combe, directing that the practice should be forthwith abandoned in the Clerkenwell Court. (Cheers.)

The Police Improvement (Scotland) Bill was discussed in committee.

The voluntary Churches Bill was read a third time, and passed.

The Court of Session (Scotland) Bill passed through committee, and was ordered to be reported.

The Railways (Ireland) Bill and the Railways Abandonment Bill also passed through committee.—Adjourned.

FETE OF THE REPUBLIC, IN PARIS.

On Saturday last, the Parisians commemorated the proclamation of the Republic by one of those grand out-of-door fêtes in the production of which they are such matchless adepts. The beautiful Place de la Concorde, which was the chief scene of the display on the occasion, was decorated for the purpose with a view to theatric effect. At the corners of the square were erected four lofty arches, on the model of Vespasian's triumphal arch. The one on the left, entering from the Rue de Rivoli, was dedicated to the Fine Arts, and was covered all over with inscriptions, paintings and sculptures, and surmounted with the figure of a Muse. Immediately under the feet of the figure were the names of the great French artists, amongst whom Claude Lorraine, David, and Vernet, were conspicuous. The corresponding arch at the entrance of the Champs Elysées, rose the arch which served as a counterpart, and dedicated to Industry and Commerce. The figures and emblems corresponded to the dedication; and the names of the inventors and manufacturers, of past and present times, who have added to the reputation and the wealth of their country, were also pre-eminent. At the corner next to the Pont de la Concorde, on the Champs Elysées side, three third-rate stood, inscribed to Agriculture, with its scrolls, its emblems, and its figures. The fourth arch was at the other corner of the bridge, between it and the Terrace of the Tuileries, similarly adorned, and its front displaying celebrated names. It was dedicated to Science and Literature; and the names of Laplace, Lagrange, Lacepède, Cuvier, Cornelle, Racine, Molière, Lafontaine, Bossuet, Massillon, La Bruyère, Voltaire, Rousseau, Chateaubriand, &c., stood forth in brilliant colours as the greatest representatives of both.

The Luxor obelisk had its basement covered with emblematic figures, suited to the character of this Egyptian monument. At each corner of the base was the figure of a gigantic sphynx; and on each face of the monument banners were placed in a sitting posture a sheave of flax.

From the fountain of the square beautiful tracery hung, extending from the upper to the lower reservoir, festooned with red, blue, white, and green lamps, in the form of grapes, with the exception of the intersticos, so that the water might play without extinguishing the lights. Round the base of the great reservoir was raised a bed of green turf. The façade of the hotel of the Minister of Marine and the Garde Meuble, on the Place de la Concorde, was covered all over with lamps, arranged in forms illustrative of the Republican Government and of Republican virtues. The square itself was enclosed by a series of columns representing the departments of France, interspersed with lofty poles with tri-coloured flags waving on the top, and rostral columns surmounted by statues. Balustrades encircled the vast space, with 88 antique vases mounted on tripods, and adorned each with three Greek figures, holding together by festoons of illuminated garlands. Four lofty masts, with flags waving from the tops, were placed in the centre. The Rue Royale had, on both sides, from the Madeleine to the square, a series of tripods covered all over with ornaments and figures; and along the grand avenues of the Champs Elysées, up close to the Triumphal Arch, were ranged similar rows of tripods and pillars with Chinese lamps, crowned with gilt ornaments; and, from one pillar to another, hung festoons of coloured lamps.

The Pont de la Concorde was adorned with tripods and statues over its whole length, to the very steps of the National Assembly; and the façade of the edifice, as also that of the Madeleine, was adorned in its six angles with six gilt vases of colossal proportions, while the columns of both edifices were covered all over with variegated lamps.

The most profound tranquillity prevailed in Paris the whole of Saturday, and the fête passed off without the slightest accident, notwithstanding the vast number that crowded the streets. In the evening the illuminations of the Place de la Concorde were magnificent beyond description, and the multitudes that assembled to view them were immense. The fountains were completely deserted. The National Assembly, the Ministeria. hotels, and other public edifices, were illuminated, but no private houses. No cries were uttered by the crowd, and the utmost regularity prevailed during the day and night. Before twelve o'clock the crowd had almost dispersed to their homes.

M. EUGENE SUE.

The return of M. Eugène Sue, the Socialist candidate for the department of the Seine, was recorded in our Journal of last week. We now present our readers with the latest portrait of M. Sue, who is well characterised by a contemporary as "a pleasant, jovial-looking, dark-complexioned man, seeming, of about forty-six years of age, although in reality forty-nine; rather corpulent; dresses with care, and is altogether prepossessing."

Of his wife will not allow us to do more than glance at the dramatis personæ of M. Sue. Before he attained literary celebrity, he served as lieutenant in the French navy; and, in reply to an accusation made during the recent election struggle, he published a letter detailing his services during six years; and stating that the captain of a vessel on board which he served made a summary letter expressive of his (the captain's) regret at M. Sue's quitting the service, and his satisfaction at his conduct. M. Sue also says he quitted the profession on account of the death of his father.

His romances of "Atar Gulle," "La Salamandre," and "La Vigie de Kost Ven" are of the same family of romance, powerfully imaginative, rich in descriptive graphic in pictures of naval life and manners, of beautiful contrasts of storm and calm: of portraitures of wreckers and pirates; of terrible crime and grand catastrophe, sanguinary and funereal. All these, M. Sue has painted with startling and picturesque vigour.

The tendency of M. Sue's later romances has just been fairly characterised a contemporary, in recording the choice of Sue as a candidate for the recent election:—

THE PARIS FETE.—ILLUMINATION IN THE PLACE DE LA CONCORDE.

"The works of Eugène Sue had long ago marked his place amongst the destructive spirits of this age, for his imagination gave a febrile attraction to the brutal excesses of his sensual pen, and his attacks had been incessantly directed against the principles of religion, morality, authority, and property. We doubt if any man can read such works as the Mystères de Paris' or the 'Juif Errant' without suffering more or less from the pollution of those foul productions. Therein lay his irresistible claim to the suffrages of Paris. His political capacity is, indeed, more doubtful; but a passage quoted from his writings by Citizen Miot, to the effect that 'no one has any right to superfluity as long as any one has not the necessaries of life,' was hailed as the grand solution of modern revolutions, and after fourteen hours of a debate which lasted from midnight to the afternoon of the following day, the name of Eugène Sue was triumphantly adopted as the candidate of the Red Conclave."

Among the election squibs of the recent contest, was a memorial, calling upon M. Sue to prove, practically, the sincerity of his declaration—"No one has a right to the superfluities while there is any one who has not the necessaries of life." He is then asked to place at the disposal of his poor Socialist brethren his splendid château of Bordes, and the magnificent grounds that surround it, as also his rich plate, his gorgeous furniture, his purple and his fine linen, his valuable stud, and his costly kennels of hounds. The apostle of Equality and Fraternity is asked to send back to the despotic Sovereigns the seven or eight crosses, stars, and ribbons they have decorated him with, as a homage to his talents as a writer—such baubles being unworthy of a Socialist philosopher. His dogs, horses, and carriages he is asked to sell, and apply the proceeds to the dismissed Socialist teachers. He is reminded that, even after having thus proved his sincerity to the creed, he will still, in case of his election, be better off than the vast majority of his electors, as he will have his allowance of 25f. a day as the representative of the people, not to speak of the produce of his pen, and the actual profits of his new work, "Les Mystères du Peuple."

M. EUGENE SUE.

In the Galerie de la Presse M. Sue is jocosely styled "Le Grand Amiral" of French literature; and he has not failed to paint in brilliant colours the adventures, the affrays, and excursions of his maritime experience. He next figured as a member of the Parisian Jockey Club, kept his racers and hunters, and, by steeple-chasing and kindred means, outrode his fortune; else, Lord Seymour and the Count de Cambis would have had a redoubtable rival on the course of Chantilly.

At M. Sue's literary career we can only take a glimpse. When his "Plick at Plock" appeared, in 1831, the literary taste of the day, satiated with historical romance, inclined towards nautical literature; and his vivid pictures of life at sea, his scenes of sail and shipwreck, and his terrific episodes showed his heroes and heroines borne between the ocean and the stormy skies, with the foam of the waves for a winding-sheet. It is, however, worthy of remark, that few persons spoke of this selection in the electoral clubs of Paris; and his name was said to represent only one thing—a romance in revolutionary times. "Du reste, Citizen Sue is as extraordinary a convert to Socialism as Citizen Girardin. In his romance La Vigie de Koat Ven,' M. Sue advocated the restoration of the 'ancient French monarchical and religious Constitution.' In that preface he says, 'Let us compare the moral results of these two systems—of that which requires conditions and guarantees indispensable to form part of certain classes of society to obtain certain employments, or of that which opens an unbounded career to every vile and disorderly passion summed up in this fatal paradox, 'All can aspire to all.' In the latter, do we not detect the cause of the present convulsed state of France heightened, unquestionably, by the return of M. Sue?"

INSTITUTION FOR CRETINS IN SWITZERLAND.

The Institution of the Abendberg was founded in 1840, by Dr. Guggenbühl, a young physician of Zurich, who resolved to devote himself to the peculiar study of Cretinism, and; if possible, to discover some means of cure for that miserable state of disease which prevails to so extensive a degree in the valleys of Switzerland and other mountainous countries. The sight of an unfortunate Cretin whom he beheld at Zeedorf, in the canton of Uri, repeating a prayer, without understanding the meaning, before a crucifix, excited his compassion so warmly, that he entered the cottage wherein the poor man lived. Learning from his mother that she had taught him the prayer when he was a child, he immediately decided to consecrate his life to the work of awakening the dormant mind of the Cretins; for, as he then wrote to a friend, "a human being in whom the thought of God can be awakened is worthy of every sacrifice; for it is of more value to save one human soul than to gain all the treasures of the world."

In order to prepare for this undertaking, he quitted the village where he had lived for two years, to the great regret of the poor peasants, to whom he had been a physician and friend. A peculiarly favourable situation for the proposed establishment offered itself on the mountain named the Abendberg, above the valley of Interlaken. A sheltered spot had been already brought into cultivation by the celebrated agriculturist Kasthofer, and was partly prepared for becoming a habitable residence. Dr. Guggenbühl had ascertained that Cretinism never exists above a certain elevation on the mountains; therefore, the first requisite for the Institution was a lofty position. The Abendberg is 3000 feet above the sea level, and has proved in every respect a very suitable locality, sheltered from the storms that are frequently very destructive in the immediate neighbourhood, and enjoying an unusual portion of sun in so alpine a situation. Two never-failing springs of pure water are among the advantages of the spot. More than 300 Cretin children have been admitted since the commencement. About one-third have returned home cured, healthy and active, fully developed in body and mind. A very large proportion of the children are poor, and pay nothing. The expenses of the establishment are considerable, especially in winter, when fuel and other necessaries are obliged to be carried by men up the mountain. Many improvements and experiments await only increased funds, which the long period of disturbances in Switzerland has kept in a low state. Travellers from various countries have visited the Abendberg, the fame of which is now spreading over Europe, and this the first institution of its kind is becoming the model for several others in different countries.

Dr. Guggenbühl has recently arrived in England for the purpose of making it better known to the benevolent of this country, and also to acquire information as to the extent of the prevalence of Cretinism in the United Kingdom. We understand that the Doctor has found the poorer classes in some parts of Somersetshire very much afflicted with Cretinism, an evil which most tourists in Switzerland have thought to be confined to that country, and not to be met with so near their own home.

Cretinism, although nearly allied with idiotcy, differs from it in this respect, viz. that it is capable of cure; and it is found by experiment that the amendment of the faculties corresponds with the improvement of the bodily health of the patient. Pure air is as essential to the cure as wholesome food; consequently, the lofty site has been selected near Interlaken.

It is calculated that the number of Cretins in and about the Alps averages above 100,000. We are sure that we only express the sentiments of our benevolent readers, in hoping that Dr. Guggenbühl will meet with support from the British public in this humane undertaking.

Dr. Forbes, in his very interesting work, "A Physician's Holiday," published last year, describes his visit to the Abendberg Cretin Establishment, and bears testimony to the enlightened character of Dr. Guggenbühl's view; he considers Cretinism, as a physical malady, consisting in an imperfect development of most of the bodily organs, and of the brain in particular, on the imperfection of which latter organ all the mental incapacity depends. Whatever be the special cause of the affection, he concludes that it is only by improving the bodily health generally—by strengthening and improving, that is, developing to a higher degree of functional activity, all the organs of the system, and among the rest, and in an especial manner, the brain—that any rational hope of benefit can be founded.

INSTITUTION FOR CRETINS AT INTERLACKEN, SWITZERLAND.

INTREPID. ASSISTANCE. RESOLUTE. PIONEER.

CAPTAIN AUSTIN'S EXPEDITION, SENT IN SEARCH OF SIR JOHN FRANKLIN.

CAPTAIN AUSTIN'S ARCTIC EXPEDITION.

THE Expedition under the command of Captain Austin has, within the past ten days, left our shores in search of Sir John Franklin, with the universal prayer that the object of his mission may be accomplished. The Expedition received their final orders and instructions by special messenger from the Admiralty on Friday night. The advance was paid on Friday. At ten o'clock at night the numerous visitors to the officers and men took their leave. From an early hour on Saturday morning, the people began to collect along the banks of the river at Greenhithe, to witness the departure of these brave men upon their perilous enterprise. About six o'clock the signal was given for their departure, when, amidst the farewell greetings and enthusiastic cheers of the multitude on shore, which were heartily responded to by the gallant fellows on board the Arctic fleet, the vessels quitted their anchorage ground, and left for their destination.

The Expedition consists of the Resolute, Captain H. T. Austin; the Assistance, Captain Erasmus Ommanney; the Pioneer, screw steam-vessel, Lieutenant-Commander Sherard Osborn; and the Intrepid, screw steam-vessel, Lieutenant-Commander, John Bertie Cator. The several vessels have been provided with a great number of scientific aids and appliances, of an interesting character. Lieutenant Reid, of the Austrian service, attended on board the vessels at Greenhithe to fit his conical signals. The Gutta Percha Company manufactured eight light gutta percha sledges or boats of 20lb weight each. These were ordered by the Admiralty, on the plan proposed by Lieut. Halkett, R.N., and so contrived as not only to carry from seven to eight cwt. of provisions, but also to float on the wooden sledges to which they will be attached when launched off the ice into the sea. When turned upside down, they will be found admirably adapted to serve as a shelter to the men during the night. Captain Austin has also taken with him two boats built of gutta percha, in the short space of seven days, on a plan suggested by Mr. Bonney, of St. John's, Fulham; their length about 17 feet; breadth, 5 feet 10 inches, depth, 2 feet 4 inches; stem and stern alike. Their buoyancy surprised Captain Austin, as they drew but three inches water, and are capable, at a pinch, of holding forty men.

Each ship is supplied with a standard compass, placed in a part of the vessel least liable to be influenced by the iron with which she is fitted. It is worthy of remark, that the malleable iron screw-propeller with which the Pioneer was fitted when she went down the river to Greenhithe, caused a variation of seventeen degrees in her binnacle compass.

The engines of the Intrepid, fitted under the superintendence of Mr. Humphreys, chief engineer at Woolwich Dockyard, worked admirably when she went down on a trial trip; and the vessel made an average speed of five knots per hour, although heavily laden; and her mean draught of water was twelve feet six inches.

Previous to the departure of the Pioneer and Intrepid screw-propelled steam-vessels, the well in the stern of each, which was made for shipping and unshipping the screw, was fitted with solid wood of the same thickness as the dead wood of the vessels, which can be shipped or unshipped when required, and when it is substituted in place of the screw, the strength will be equal to that of any other ship built for navigating amongst ice.

Amongst the latest articles put on board was a leather bag containing a number of letters addressed to Captain Sir John Franklin and the officers and crews of the Erebus and Terror discovery ships. A number of copies were also supplied to each vessel of a highly useful and easily understood vocabulary of the Esquimaux language, compiled by Captain Washington, R.N., from the larger works on the subject, and suitable for carrying in the pocket on land excursions or over the ice.

Mr. Shepherd has supplied nearly a waggon load of balloons, for the conveyance of messages: and every requisite has been provided for printing the slips and despatching them. Should the wind prove favourable on arriving at the edge of the ice, these aërial messengers will be sent up to announce the approach of the searching expedition.

The fur equipments have been supplied by Messrs. Ball and Jeffs, of Regent-street; they consist of seal-skin helmets, and gauntlets lined with lamb-skin, for the officers; seal-skin capes and mittens for the men; and white lamb-skins for socks, or wrappers for the feet, to be worn inside the boots, for sleeping in. The above firm has also furnished similar equipments for Sir John Ross and his crew, who will sail for the Arctic regions in a few days.

Captain Austin's Expedition is provisioned for three years, and has, besides a large surplus stock of stores and provisions, ice-saws, hammers, and other tools, and will fill up its magazines at the very latest period by drawing from the Maria Eugenia, which, laden with provisions, will accompany the Expedition as far as (if not beyond) the Faroe Islands. The Jasper, Advice, and Adder steam-tugs were ordered to attend the squadron, to tow it as far as shall be found practicable.

Before the sailing of the vessels, the officers entertained at dinner, on board the Resolute, Mr. James Biggs, late of Sir James Clarke Ross' expedition, and who acted as secretary in fitting out the ships under his command: in the course of the evening, the Senior Lieutenant, Robert D. Aldrich, on behalf of the officers of Captain Austin's squadron, presented Mr. Biggs with a very handsome silver salver, purchased of Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, Bond-street, and on which was engraved the following inscription:—"Presented to James Biggs, Esq., R.N., by the officers of Captain Austin's Arctic Expedition, 1st May, 1850."

Mr. Green, the experienced aëronaut, has constructed nine balloons for the Branch Arctic Expedition just fitted out at the expense of Lady Franklin. We have engraved one of them, which Mr. Green describes to be such as he has used for several years past to announce the ascents he purposed making from various towns. The balloons are of small dimensions, to contain only 30 cubic feet of gas, and can be inflated with hydrogen in a few minutes: they will remain in the atmosphere full twelve hours, and, with a moderate wind, travel from 500 to 600 miles.

The signals or despatches are connected to the balloon by a slow match of considerable length, by the combustion of which the suspended packets and parachutes are detached at certain intervals: the whole being protected from rain or night-dew by a waterproof cone, without which the match would soon be extinguished.

An experiment was made at Mr. Green's residence, Tufnell Park, Holloway, on the 11th of March, with a balloon (between five and six feet in diameter, and filled with hydrogen gas), bearing thirty-two packets, consisting of 3000 slips of silk and paper, which were to be detached at the rate of one every five minutes. The balloon ascended at half-past three, P.M., and, after it had proceeded some distance, the packets began to be liberated at short intervals. It took a south-western direction, and some of the packets were picked up at Chichester. The balloon then proceeded towards the Channel; and on March 18th Mr. Green received a letter from the Mayor of St. Denis, in Normandy, stating that the inclosed bill had been detached from the balloon on the 12th, within a short distance of the above town. Mr. Green has received other letters, stating that the balloon fell on the French coast, near the Bay of Biscay.

Lady Franklin witnessed the experiment at Tufnell-park with much interest.

MR. GREEN'S SIGNAL BALLOON, DESPATCHES, AND PARACHUTE, FOR THE ARCTIC EXPEDITION.

ANTIQUITIES AT WESTMINSTER.

ON the 1st of May, while the workmen were digging deep, in order to prepare the ground before laying the foundations of the new baths and wash-houses for the parishes of St. Margaret and St. John, Westminster, several curious earthenware bottles were discovered, one of which we have engraved. The site which is immediately over against the chancel of the church of St. Matthew, now in course of erection by Mr. G. Scott, has been hitherto occupied by a range of cottages and small houses of the very poorest description. It once formed part of the ancient orchard and fruit-gardens of the Abbey, through which several streamlets ran, and the narrow street derived its name from a chapel of St. Anne, situated where the modern workhouse stands, and abutting on the Almonry. The two famous musicians, Henry Purcell and Dr Heather, both resided here. It has been said that the poet Herrick, also, for some time, lived in the lane, but Wood, in the Athenæ Oxonienses, describes his house as being in the parish of St. Anne's, Soho. To the readers of the Spectator, the name will revive the recollection of Sir Roger de Coverley's boyish embarrassment in discovering the locality.

"FLEMISH GREYBEARD," FOUND AT WESTMINSTER.

The bottle stands about eight inches and a half in height, and is sixteen inches and a quarter in circumference. The shape is elegant, but the earthenware coarse, and of a mottled ruddy-brown cast, and the design rudely executed. Immediately under the neck of the vessel is a grotesque mask, and, apparently, a coat of arms, a pale fretty, with two griffins rampant, langued and armed as supporters, and a coronet for a crest; the whole being enclosed in a kind of roughly-drawn oval. The neck has three deep rims. The handle is broad and plain. The common name for these vessels is "Flemish Greybeards."

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, May 12.—Sunday after Ascension day.
MONDAY, 13.—Old May Day
TUESDAY, 14.—Length of day 15h 59m.
WEDNESDAY, 15.—Sun rises 4h 1m, sets 7h 42m.
THURSDAY, 16.—The 136th day of the year.
FRIDAY, 17.—Tally-rand died, 1838.
SATURDAY, 18.—Oxford Term ends.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 18, 1850.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M h m 2 5	A h m 2 43	A h m 3 21	A h m 3 45	A h m 4 10	A h m 4 30	A h m 4 50
M h m 5 13	A h m 5 53	A h m 6 31	A h m 6 55	A h m 7 20	A h m 7 40	A h m 8 0

FRENCH PLAYS.—COMBINATION OF TALENT.—M. REGNIER, MDLLE NATHALIE, and M. LAFONT.—On MONDAY EVENING, MAY 13 will be given, for the second time in this country, EMILE AUGIER'S New Play, entitled GABRIELLE, in which M Regnier and Mdlle Nathalie will sustain their original characters; with other Entertainments. The notice will be given of the most representation of LES DEMOISELLES DE ST CYR. The following Pieces are in active preparation:—LE MARI A LA CAMPAGNE; LOUISA; LE PAIN, LE PAIN, LE PAIN; UN CHATEAU DE CARTES; and IL FAUT QU'UNE PORTE SOIT OUVERE OU FERMEE.
Boxes and Stalls may be secured at Mr. MITCHELL'S Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street; and at the Box-office.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. BATTY.—Last Five Nights of Hinsbull's gorgeous Spectacle of Enchantment. Entire change in the popular feats of Equestrianism, supported by the accomplished Artistes of the Establishment.—On TUESDAY, MAY 14, 1850, and during the Week, the Entertainments will commence at Seven o'Clock, with (for the last five times) the magnificent Spectacle of the FOUR SONS OF AYMON, or the Days of Charlemagne, introducing the native Strut of Horses, Camel of the Desert, Zebra, and all the vast resources of the Theatre. To be succeeded by an unusually Extensive Selection of Batty's SCIENCE of the ARENA. To conclude with a favourite Farce. On WHIT-MONDAY will be revived, for the first time these seven years, on a scale of splendour, the immensely successful grand military spectacle (in three acts), entitled the AFFGHANISTAN WAR; or, the Revolt of Cabul, and British Triumphs in India. Box-office open from Eleven till Four.—Stage Manager, Mr. W. WEST.

MISS DOLBY and Mr. LINDSAY SLOPER beg to announce that their ANNUAL GRAND MORNING CONCERT will take place at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on TUESDAY, the 28th inst. To commence at Half-past Two o'Clock precisely. Vocalists—Mlle Catherine Hayes, Miss Dolby, and Miss Birch, Signor Marras and Signor Marchesi. Instrumentalists—Messrs. Blagrove, H. C. Cooper, and Lindsay Sloper. The Orchestra will be complete in every department. Leader, Mr. WILL. Conductors, Messrs. Benedict and Lavenu. Tickets, 7s each, may be had of the principal musical sellers; Stalls, 10s 6d, to be procured only of Mr. LINDSAY SLOPER, 201, Regent-street; Miss DOLBY, 2, Bindle-street, Manchester-square; and Mr. LINDSAY SLOPER, 7, Southwick-place, Hyde Park-square.

EXETER HALL.—WEDNESDAY CONCERTS.—WEDNESDAY NEXT MAY 15th will be the 13th of the Series of Wednesday Concerts, and the Committee have the pleasure of announcing that Mr. Sims Reeves has kindly consented to appear on that occasion, when he will sing the following Songs:—"Come into the Garden, Maud," and "Come, Rest in this Bosom," from Balfe's Opera of the Maid of Artois; "Tom Bowling," and "The Bay of Biscay." The Instrumental Music by the Grand Orchestra Band, under the direction of Mr. Alfred Mellon, assisted by Mr. Sloman, Mr. Blagrove, and Mr. Lindsay Sloper. Tickets, No. 4, Exeter Hall. Mr. Surman's Oratorio, ST PAUL, will be performed on WEDNESDAY, MAY 22nd.

MR. JOHN PARRY'S ENTERTAINMENT.—MUSICAL HALL, Store-street, Bedford-square. Mr JOHN PARRY will give his PERFORMANCE of his new and highly successful entertainment, entitled MONDAY EVENING, May 20th, and every following Monday Evening until June 3, to be had of Messrs. OLIVIER, 41, New Bond-street; and the principal Musicsellers.

ARTISTS' AMATEUR DRAMATIC PERFORMANCE, under the Immediate Patronage of her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and a large number of Noblemen and Gentlemen Patrons of Art.—A PERFORMANCE WILL TAKE PLACE, at the ST JAMES'S THEATRE, on SATURDAY, the 18th MAY, in aid of the Funds of the ARTISTS' GENERAL BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION. The Pieces selected are, "The Rent Day" and "The Poor Gentleman."—Tickets may be obtained from T. S. CAPE, Esq., Treasurer, 80, Newman-street.
WILLIAM LEE, Hon. Sec.

LOVE'S POLYPHONIC ENTERTAINMENTS.—VENTRILOQUISM EXTRAORDINARY.—FINAL CHANGE of PERFORMANCE.—These Celebrated Entertainments will be delivered on Monday next, 13, and every following Evening, at Gravesend. On Wednesday, May 15 at the Town Hall, Maidenhead. On Thursday, May 16 at the Town Hall Hall Windsor. On Friday, May 17, at the Town Hall, Reading. Boors, Bracknell on Monday May 20 at the Cage Hotel, Colchester. On Tuesday, May 21 at the New Lecture Hall Ipswich. On Wednesday, May 22 at the Town Hall, Hadleigh. On Thursday, May 23, at the Assembly Rooms, Woodbridge. On Monday, May 27, at the Schoolrooms, Stowmarket, and on Monday, June 3 at the Newburgh Rooms, Brighton.—Doors open at half past 7; begin at 8. Reserved Seats, 3s; Second Seats, 2s; Gallery, 1s. Books, containing Programmes, &c., to be had at the doors, price 6d

THE NATIONAL INSTITUTION for the EXHIBITION of MODERN ART, PORTLAND GALLERY, No. 3 & 8, Regent-street, opposite the Polytechnic Institution).—The EXHIBITION of the above INSTITUTION is NOW OPEN, from Nine till Dusk.—Admission, 1s. Catalogues, 6d. Single Season Tickets, 5s
BELL SMITH, Hon. Sec.

SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER-COLOURS.—The FORTY-SIXTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, at their Gallery, 5 PALL-MALL EAST, from Nine till Dusk. Admittance, One shilling. Catalogue, sixpence.
JOHN PRIP, Secretary.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS. THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of this Society is NOW OPEN at their GALLERY, 53, PALL MALL, near St. James's Palace. Daily, from 9 till Dusk. Admission, 1s.
JAMES FAIRLY.

HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY'S VISIT TO IRELAND Illustrated by a Grand Moving Dioramа, with some of the most charming scenery in that country. Forming the newly-painted Cartoons, Mr. F. Boyce, and Assistants at the Chinese Gallery, Hyde Park Corner. Daily at 3, Evening at 8. Admission 1s. Reserved Seats, 2s. An interval of eight minutes between the Morning and Evening Performance.

INDIA OVERLAND MAIL.—DIORAMA GALLERY of ILLUSTRATION, No. 14, REGENT STREET, Waterloo-place.—A Gigantic MOVING DIORAMA, ILLUSTRATING the ROUTE of the OVERLAND MAIL to INDIA, depicting every object worthy of notice on that long journey, from Southampton to Alexandria via Gibraltar, accompanied by descriptive detail and appropriate music, is now OPEN DAILY, at Half past Two and Eight o'Clock.—Admission, 1s; Stalls, 2s 6d. Doors open at Two, and at Half past Seven o'Clock.

TRAFALGAR.—A Large and Interesting MODEL of the BATTLE of TRAFALGAR is now exhibiting at 168, NEW BOND-STREET, next to the Clarendon Hotel. The great work of art is modelled to a scale of 30 feet to an inch, thereby rendering it perfectly distinct. It also possesses this great advantage over all paintings on the same subject, that visitors can walk round and notice the minute details of each ship as it was brought into action, and producing at the same time a series of beautiful pictorial effects from 6 to 9 in the morning, 12 to 3, and 6 to 10 in the Evening.—Admission, 1s.—Children, Half-price.

ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS, REGENT'S-PARK.—Admission EVERY DAY in WHITSUN WEEK, EXCEPT SATURDAY, at SIXPENCE, EACH PERSON.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—Dr. Bachhoffner's SECOND LECTURE on the PHILOSOPHY of SCIENTIFIC RECREATION, with Optical Effects, daily at Two and every Evening at Eight. Mr. Pepper's Entertainments by H. Pepper Esq., on the CHEMISTRY of HYDROGEN, with special reference to its application for carrying up Balloons Pyrotechnic and other Signals to Sir John Franklin daily at Half-past Three, and every Evening at Eight. DISSOLVING VIEWS, illustrating the Arctic Regions and Ceylon, also Views of London in the 16th Century, and as it now is. DIVED and DIVING-BELL, &c. &c. Admission to the Building, 1s. Children, Half-price. Analyses and Chemical Experiments conducted in the Laboratory, under the direction of J. H. Pepper, Esq.

LONDON and SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.—Suburban Residences.—Season Tickets, at Reduced Rates, for the Year or for shorter periods to One Month.—For the accommodation of suburban residents the Directors have lately reduced the rate of SEASON TICKETS, especially for the longer distances, so that persons having daily vocations in London may now live at any of the places named on this Railway within 40 miles of London, and be conveyed in a first-class carriage both ways, daily, at a weekly charge, varying with the distance, from 6s to 15s per week.
To give facilities to those whom circumstances compel to have their residences in London to move into the country during the summer months, Season Tickets are now issued at reduced rates for one month.

SCALE OF SEASON TICKETS.

Waterloo	Yearly.	6 Months.	3 Months.	2 Months.	1 Month.
To or from	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Wandsworth	12 0 0	6 13 0	3 12 0	2 10 0	——
Clapham Common
Putney	15 0 0	8 5 0	4 10 0	3 3 0	——
Barnes
Chiswick
Mortlake	15 0 0	8 15 0	4 15 0	3 7 0	——
Kew
Richmond
Kew	18 0 0	9 18 0	5 5 0	3 15 0	2 2 0
Brentford
Isleworth
Twickenham
Feltham
Ashford	20 0 0	11 0 0	6 0 0	4 4 0	2 8 0
Hounslow
Malden
Kingston
Hampton Court	22 0 0	12 2 0	6 12 0	4 12 0	2 12 0
Esher
Stanes
Wraysbury	21 0 0	13 4 0	7 4 0	5 0 0	2 16 0
Datchet
Windsor
Walton
Weybridge
Addlestone	25 0 0	13 15 0	7 10 0	5 5 0	3 0 0
Chertsey
Woking
Guildford
Godalming
Farnham	26 0 0	14 6 0	7 15 0	5 10 0	3 0 0
Ash

Second-class Season Tickets at 15 per cent. less than the above.
When two or more members of the same family subscribe at the same time, for the same period, and to the same station, a deduction from the above rates will be made on the following scale:—

When two subscribe .. .. 10 per cent. deduct.
" three " .. .. 15 " "
Children under 14 years of age to be charged half-price "
Application for Season Tickets to be made in writing to the Treasurer, A. Morgan, Esq., York-road offices.
The places enumerated, it will be observed, include the most beautiful suburban neighborhoods of London.
York-road, May 1, 1850. By order, WYNDHAM HARDING, Secretary.

CALIFORNIA AND ITS GOLD MINES

FREMONT'S OVERLAND ROUTE to OREGON, TEXAS, and CALIFORNIA, across the Rocky Mountains, made by order of the United States Government, illustrated by a Grand Moving Painting from Washington City, portraying the thrilling scenes that occurred to Colonel Fremont and party, and Sir William Drummond Stewart and party, while crossing the Rocky Mountains, and discovery of the great Gold Mines. NOW OPEN for public exhibition, at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, and exhibited every morning at Half-past Two; evening, Quarter to Eight—Admission, 1s.; Stalls 2s. Amphitheatre 6d

A FLORAL FETE and FANCY BAZAAR will be held at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on the 22nd 23rd, and 24th instant, in aid of the Funds of the ROYAL GENERAL ANNUITY SOCIETY.—Tickets may be obtained at the principal Music Warehouses, and at the Offices of the Society. Doors open on the first day at Ten, and the second and third days at Twelve o'clock. Contributions gratefully received
Society's Offices, 18a, Basinghall-street, STEPHEN J. ALDRICH,
May 10th, 1850 Secretary.

GREAT EXHIBITION in 1851.—NOTICE to EXHIBITORS. In pursuance of the directions of her Majesty's Commissioners the Westminster Committee request that all persons resident in the City and Liberties of Westminster desirous of becoming exhibitors will, before the 15th day of May inst., send to the Secretary of the Committee, Mr. G. H. DREW, 28, Parliament-street, a notice of their intention, with a general description of the nature of the articles they may be required for its exhibition.
Printed forms for the return may be obtained on application to the Secretary, and any further information from the undermentioned gentlemen, who have been appointed Local Commissioners:—

Mr. J. Brown, 236, Regent-street.	Mr. T. J. Millar, 7, Millbank-street.
Mr. J. G. Crace, 14, Wigmore-street.	Mr. W. G. Rogers, 10, Carlisle street, Soho
Mr. F. Graham, 37, Oxford-street.	Mr. R. Snell, 37, Albemarle-street.
Mr. Stephen Lewis, 193, Regent-street.

May 3, 1850.

ORGAN for JERUSALEM.—The small Organ built for the ANGLICAN CATHEDRAL CHURCH on MOUNT ZION, can be VIEWED at G. M. HODGINS'S Organ Factory, 4, Judd-place East, King's-cross, New-road, London, during the present month—MAY, 1850.

CANTERBURY SETTLEMENT.—Some of the First Body of intending Colonists attend daily at their rooms, 1a, Adelphi-terrace, from 10 till 5 o'clock; and a Meeting of the Body is held on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 12 o'clock Strangers desirous of communicating personally with gentlemen about to emigrate, are invited to visit the rooms.

CANTERBURY SETTLEMENT.—A Committee of the CANTERBURY ASSOCIATION sits daily at One o'Clock, and will be happy to communicate personally with intending Colonists who may prefer this mode of inquiry or reading the Canterbury Papers Nos. 1, and 2, published by PARKER, West Strand, price 6d. each. By order of the Committee of Management, H. F. ALSTON.
Office of the Canterbury Association, 41, Charing-cross, 20th April, 1850.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE BANK.—CAPITAL PAID UP, £75,0 0.
The Directors of the LONDON and WESTMINSTER BANK having accepted the Agency in London of the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE BANK, Notice is hereby given that the London and Westminster Bank receives Deposits and grant Letters of Credit on this Bank to persons proceeding to the Cape of Good Hope, or to those who may have payments to make there, payable in Cape Town, free of any charge whatever.
J. B. ESDEN, Chairman.

THE WEST of LONDON and WESTMINSTER CEMETERY, Old Brompton and Fulham-roads, two miles only from Piccadilly. Consecrated by the Bishop of London in 1840.—The Cemetery is open daily for the interment of all classes, from Eight o'Clock in the morning to sunset. Tables of charges may be had at the office, 19, Haymarket, or of the sexton, on the ground. JOHN HENRY REDDICK, Secretary.
N B —The public are asked to view the grounds during the daytime

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A SUBSCRIBER, Witney—The charge does not appear warrantable; but inquiry of the Secretary to the general Post-office will settle the doubt
CAMERA, Edinburgh—Th; views may probably be available. We shall be glad to hear again when the occasion arrives
B—, London, states that the cost of a marriage license, including affidavit and fees, is, in the country, 2l 5s 6d
G H, Bridport.—The Wife's Secret" is by Mr Lovel
HUBERT LIDDE—The Baron de Stenbile is not resident at Potsdam, in Brandenburg
VERNON, Bristol, cannot secure a patent as a small cost; but he may protect an invention for three years by registration, for a moderate sum
R N—The new work on Bees may be had, by order, of any bookseller
D Y, Norfolk, had better apply to the secretary to the Charity. Residence cannot be secured by solicitation, we fear
FAIR PLAY—Certainly not, unless some peculiar circumstances render the risk worth the Directors' incurring. They can insist upon those who may have payments to make there, payable in Cape Town, free of any charge whatever.
S K, Bristol—We cannot spare time to search the Sh pping Lists
H S—See the advertisements in the daily newspapers respecting the New American Church
H H—Knight at 97, Fleet-street, and Bennett at 65, Cheapside
A SUBSCRIBER—Mr Digby Wyatt is one of the secretaries to the Great Exhibition of 1851. address, 1 New Palace Yard
AN OLD SUBSCRIBER, Dublin, cannot do better
UNITHTADOR—The height from the pavement in the street to the top of the cross of St Paul's Cathedral is 404 feet
E B F has been misinformed; the height of Dorset square, Marylebone, does not exceed 70 feet. [illegible] has omitted 0 in his feet. See Mr W.'s new Map of London
LOVE AND MUSIC questions of the London strata
A F, Jun.—REVIEW shall be sent as soon as the work is published by Mr Wmale Holborn
F. Dublin.—A cheap book on Parrots may be had of Groombridge and Son, Paternoster-row
L N E—We cannot in form you. Horsham is a misprint for Horsham
W—We have not room for the letter
FOUR YEARS SUBSCRIBER Liverpool—Either in 1 vol. or 2 vols in 1
AN OLD SUBSCRIBER, Dublin, cannot do better
UNITHTADOR—The height from the pavement in the street to the top of the cross of St Paul's Cathedral is 404 feet
E B F has been misinformed; the height of Dorset square, Marylebone, does not exceed 70 feet. [illegible] has omitted 0 in his feet. See Mr W.'s new Map of London
LOVE AND MUSIC questions of the London strata
A F, Jun.—REVIEW shall be sent as soon as the work is published by Mr Wmale Holborn
F. Dublin.—A cheap book on Parrots may be had of Groombridge and Son, Paternoster-row
L N E—We cannot in form you. Horsham is a misprint for Horsham
W—We have not room for the letter
F T, Aberdeen—We do not understand the question
ANTHONY'S PATENT AMERICAN CHURN—In our Illustration, the week before last, there should have been indicated the handle through the handle, in the centre, it is fitted with a tap, not a "top"
C B, Dublin—El Dorado is literally "the gilded," or "golden," and was applied to the sovereignty trembling with precious metals, which had long been sought for in vain by Spanish adventurers
J G, Leeds—A letter addressed to the Animals' Friend Society will best settle the question. The reply has been made to your letter
WINDSOR—An account of the objects has been published by Mr Morrow
 Answers to several Correspondents are unavoidably deferred.

BOOKS, &c. RECEIVED.

Pride and Irresolution. 3 vols.—Michell's Ruins of Many Lands.—A Month at Constantinople. By Albert Smith.—Notes from Nineveh.—Oberfaulons on London Manners.—The White Cigarer.—Barter. Mowbray Lingard.—Philip the Second.—The Cricketer's Manual.—Lodge's Portraits. Vol. VII.—Pandemonium.—Jane Eyre.—Black's Guide to the Lakes.—Durscher on the Feet.
MUSIC.—The Canary Polka.—The Sophia Waltzes.—"Le Solr au Bord du Lac."—Fantaisie de Salon.—Canada Valse.—Bagatelle à la Valse.—Captain Bligh.—I heard a voice.—Peace Lyrics.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, MAY 11, 1850.

THE Chancellor of the Exchequer, proud of a surplus, which was no creation of his own, and proud of the manner in which he has disposed of it, stands upon a lofty pedestal, and looks down with something akin to contempt upon the pertinacious gentlemen, in the House and out of it, who talk to him of any remission of injurious taxes. He coolly pooh-poohs all their arguments, says he cannot carry on the public service without money, and deprecates, with a tone of injured innocence, any further argumentation. It was in this style that Lord Duncan's midshipman on the Window Duties; it was in the same way that he treated Mr. Milner Gibson's motion for the repeal of the taxes on Literature and Education; and in the same off-hand and cavalier manner he got rid of Mr. Ewart's motion for the repeal of the Advertisement Duty. But this method of dealing with questions affecting the health, the morals, and the business of the people will not answer; and the Ministry will find that an unpopular and inefficient Chancellor of the Exchequer is even more damaging to its reputation, and more dangerous to its stability, than an unpopular Premier. Sir Charles Wood says, "If the revenue is to be thus frittered away, no large or general measure for the remission of taxation can possibly be considered;" but he does not hold out the slightest expectation that he is prepared with any such large or general measure. The position he assumes is thus quite unwarranted. He himself having frittered away his surplus by an infinitesimal payment of a fraction of a farthing in the pound on the national debt, and by a remission of the excise duty on bricks, which will not benefit, to any appreciable extent, the owner or occupier of any house or building now in existence, ought not to manifest impatient wonder when he is informed of the existence of taxes having a thousand-fold greater claims to reconsideration than those which, in the exercise of his supreme wisdom, he has singled out as the objects of his favour. If he would bring forward the large and general measure of which he speaks, or if the Government would announce its intention to do so at the earliest period consistent with the financial necessities of the present year, he would be, to some extent, justified in assuming the airs of suffering virtue; but at present he has not the shadow of a claim to any exemption from the pertinacity of independent members of the House who seek the repeal or modification of existing taxes.

One thing is tolerably certain, which is, that if independent members do not continue to press upon the attention of the Government the fact that many deeply injurious and impolitic taxes exist, there will be still less chance than there is at present, that the Government will open its eyes to the real necessity of reforming our finances. A thorough revision of our fiscal system is imperatively required. It is to be hoped, if no party in the House have courage or ability enough to undertake it in all its completeness, that the guerilla warfare against isolated items of taxation which injuriously affect the public health and wealth will be renewed again and again, until the men in possession of power awaken to a sense of duty. The country needs an able and philosophic financier at this moment, who will not, in the delusive dream of an accidental surplus, forget the great fact, that the national affairs require to be adjusted, in order that income and expenditure may be balanced without impeding commerce or repressing industry. The Chancellor of the Exchequer fit for these times must go to his work in earnest, and must not think to postpone such questions sine die by the simple allegation that he wants money. Something more than this is required, as the present Ministry will find to their cost, if they do not bestir themselves.

SOCIALISM, Communism, Fourierism, Co-operativism, or whatever be the more correct designation of the ultra-Republican principle among our French neighbours, is proved by the recent elections to have so deeply pervaded the army and the people, as to render each new election a new danger for the Government. The advisers of Louis Napoleon, including all the former friends and supporters of Legitimacy and Orleanism who have seats in the Legislative Assembly, recommend, as a remedy for this state of things, a re-consideration of the Electoral Law. As universal suffrage placed Louis Napoleon in the Presidential chair, it might have been expected that no blow against that principle would have been aimed by his hand; but circumstances appear to be too powerful to allow him any discretion. The Commission charged to draw up a report on the subject has endeavoured, during the past week, to discover some plan by which, without actually annulling the article in the Constitution which gives the right of voting to every male citizen, the number of voters may be reduced by a few millions. They have succeeded in their effort. They recommend a three years' residence as a qualification for a vote, and declare incapable of the exercise of the suffrage all citizens, civil or military, who may have been condemned for any offence, however slight, or any breach of discipline, however trifling, and although the punishment of each may not have exceeded twenty-four hours' imprisonment.

The Commission is composed wholly of the friends and servants of the Bourbon and Orleans dynasties, the whole of the Republican party having held aloof and refused to serve. Will M. Thiers, and some other members of the Conservative majority—who neither care for the Republic nor for Louis Napoleon, and who only support Louis Napoleon because his present overthrow would be a revolution, and because they imagine that he is but keeping the place warm for the Count de Paris or the Duc de Chambord—are said to have declared their intention of resigning their seats, should the change in the electoral law be rejected by the Assembly. This question, then, will be the great battle-ground of French parties. The report is to be decided in reality, Republic, or No Republic; and as that form of government happens to be the form established by the law and constitution, the real revolutionists at the present time are the men of the ancient régime who wish to overthrow it. It would be more courageous on the part of M. Thiers, if he were to accept office, and bring the question boldly and manfully before the Assembly and the country, instead of ruling, as he now does, behind a mask, and wielding the power of a Minister without accepting its responsibility. A moderate and careful re-construction of the electoral law is, in fact, the great thing that France requires; and the minister who should accomplish the task successfully, without bringing it to an issue behind the barricades, would entitle himself to the gratitude of all the true friends of the country. But the prudence of hastening it forward at the present time is more than questionable. Disagreeable as the return of M. Eugène Sue may have been, it was surely not so terrible a blow as to warrant the proceedings which M. Thiers and his friends have threatened to resort to. They might have waited with greater tranquillity and precipitancy will only give the Red Republicans an advantage, which the members of that heterogeneous party will sooner or later turn to account against them.

CHURCH PASTORAL AID SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of this society took place on Tuesday, at Exeter Hall; the Right Hon Lord Ashley in the chair. The Chairman, in opening the proceedings of the day, expressed his conviction that the annual meeting of the Church Pastoral Aid Society was amongst the very best of those held at this period of the year. Its object was the diffusion of true religion, the maintenance of the principles of the Church of England, and the promotion of the eternal welfare of the people of those realms. He felt most happy in being enabled to congratulate the members of the society on the state of their affairs during the past year. (Hear.) Its finances had improved, its operations had been extended, and joyful fruits were exhibited as the results of their labours. The Rev. J. H. Pollexien (the clerical secretary) then read the report, which opened by expressing the gratitude the committee felt for the results of their operations during the past year. The committee regretted that since the last annual meeting the Bishop of Llandaff and the Bishop of Norwich had been removed by death. The Bishop of Manchester had retired from connexion with this society, and the names of the Bishops of Victoria and Prince Rupert's Land had been added to the list of vice-patrons. Their receipts for the year had amounted to £38,849, including a munificent legacy of £5000, three per Cent. Consols, by Mrs. Elizabeth Frank, who had been a generous contributor to this society during her life. The expenditure was £33,806. They had 18 more grants than last year—making the total number 1402 incumbents were added, averaging a population of 7102 to each. The average income of these incumbents was £195 per annum, and 160 of them were without parsonage-houses. By the exertions of this society, 2,144,000 persons had been procured with increased pastoral instruction. The report was adopted, and a committee for the ensuing year appointed.

BRITISH MISSIONS.—The annual meeting of the British Missions connected with the Home Missionary and the Irish Evangelical and Colonial Society, took place on Tuesday evening, at Exeter Hall; Mr. Samuel Morley in the chair. The chairman, in opening the proceedings, stated that the society materially needed to the increase of human happiness, and to the physical comfort of the people. Its object was the spiritual elevation of their fellow-countrymen; and, of all forms of mission, the home mission was the most useful... (Hear, hear.) The report stated that the increasing numbers, the activity, the influence of the Anglo-Saxon race in all lands, was a phenomenon deserving marked attention in the work of modern missions. The language, the commerce, and the religion of a people so undowed could not pervade all countries without producing the greatest changes. Home and foreign missions had become the glory of Britain. The Home Missionary Society was recruited in its operations, and it was desirable, as far as possible, so to concentrate their strength as to give increased efficiency to its operations. There were now employed by the society, or partially aided by its funds, 116 agents or missionaries, nearly 100 laymen, 1682 sunday-school teachers, whose ministrations were attended by more than 41,000 hearers, and about 15,700 scholars; their chapels or preaching-rooms numbered nearly 450, scattered amongst 400 villages and hamlets. The receipts for the past year amounted to £6189 7s 8d., and the expenditure £6360. The report was adopted, and several gentlemen having addressed the meeting, resolutions founded on the report were then submitted to the meeting, and agreed to. After a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated.

At the ordinary meeting of the Southwark-bridge Company, held at the Bridge-house, Queen-street-place, Thames-street, on Tuesday, it appeared from the report that the directors were in treaty with the corporation of the City of London for the sale of the bridge; but, as nothing definite had at present been settled, they forbore from entering into any detail.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

GROWING CROPS (IRELAND)

The Earl of LUCAN moved for leave to bring in a Bill on the subject of growing crops in Ireland. He wished to know whether the Government would introduce a measure for enabling vice guardians to be paid out of the rates?

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said the practice of vice-guardians might to be disused as far as possible, though he admitted that some peculiar cases might arise in which it would be advisable to pay vice-guardians out of the rates.

After a short conversation, the motion was agreed to.

The Duke of ARGYLL moved the resolution of which he had given notice, relative to the case of Mr Ryland, to the effect that that gentleman had been improperly deprived of certain salaries and emoluments by the Legislature of the colony of Canada, in violation of an express promise made by the Government; and that he was entitled to compensation from the Government.

After some discussion, in which the ministerial members opp sed the motion, the question was divided, affirming the motion by a majority of 12 against 10.

Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

MANCHESTER RECTORY DIVISION BILL.

On the consideration of the amendments to this bill,

Mr. GOULBURN moved that the incomes of the canons be raised to £750, instead of £600, as proposed by the bill.

After some discussion, the amendment was negatived by a majority of 193 to 60, and the bill was read a third time.

STAMP DUTIES BILL.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved that the order of the day for the committee on this bill be discharged, for the purpose of introducing a new measure on the subject; the principal features of which he stated to be:—The establishment of an ad valorem duty of 1 per cent. on all conveyances and transfers of property; that mortgages on land should be subject to an uniform duty of one-eighth per cent., which would be only 1s. 8d. up to £50; leases would continue as at present, except leases with fines in Ireland which should pay one-eighth per cent.; the stamp duty on settlements and moneys named on land should be 5s., and on memorials 2s. 6d., instead of 10s as at present; progressive duties to be imposed on all conveyances of £10, instead of £5 as at present: in cases of doubt as to the right stamp, a proper one might be affixed on payment of a duty of 10s. These were the chief features of the bill which he should ask for leave to introduce on Monday next.

The motion for the discharge of the committee was agreed to.

PARLIAMENTARY VOTERS (IRELAND) BILL.

On the order of the day for the third reading of this bill, Mr. J. WALSH moved as an amendment that it be read a third time that day six months.

After a discussion, in which the amendment was supported by Mr. Napier, Lord Jocelyn, and other members on the Opposition side of the House, and opposed by Mr. J. Young, Mr. Fagan, Mr. Shiel, Lord J. Russell, &c.,

The House divided:

For the third reading	254
Against it	166
Majority	88

The result was received with loud cheers.

The bill was then read a third time. Adjourned at one o'clock.

REVIEW OF THE 11TH HUSSARS BY PRINCE ALBERT.—Yesterday (Friday) morning, Prince Albert reviewed the 11th Hussars, on Wimbledon-common, preparatory to the removal of the regiment to Norwich. Shortly after nine o'clock the whole strength of the regiment (with the exception of the horses, the stores and the orderlies on duty at the Horse Guards), consisting of about 350 mounted men, arrived from Hounslow and Kensington barracks. At half-past ten o'clock, the Earl of Cardigan, colonel of the regiment, arrived and took the command; and soon after, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by the Hon Lieut-Colonel A. Gordon, Col. Wemyss, &c., came on the ground, and was received with the usual honours, the band playing the national anthem. His Royal Highness was attired in a staff undress uniform, the men, arms, and accoutrements; after which, having marched past in slow time at a trot, they went through the whole of the cavalry evolutions.

ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON.—At a special meeting of this club was held yesterday (Friday) afternoon, at the Thatched House Tavern, St. James's street; the Right Hon the Earl of Wilton (Commodore) in the chair. The chairman having opened the proceedings, Prince Labanoff Rostoff (Commander of the Imperial Club of St. Petersburgh) was elected an honorary member. The programme of matches for the year, and the names of newly-elected members, were then announced. Some other business having been transacted, a vote of thanks was passed to the chairman, and the meeting separated.

FIRE AT THE WINDHAM CLUB-HOUSE.—On Friday morning a fire of a most alarming character broke out in the well-known premises termed the Windham Club-house, situate in St. James's-square, and which for some time assumed such a fearful aspect as to threaten with destruction the mansions of several of the nobleman living in the square. The flames commenced in the strangers'-room, a most magnificently decorated and furnished apartment of vast extent. After the lapse of some hours the fire was entirely extinguished. The strangers'-room, however, was burnt out, and all its costly furniture and appointments destroyed. The other portions of the premises were damaged by water.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY AT CHARLECOTE PARK.—The seat of Mr. Lucy, of Charlecote, remarkable as well for its historical associations with the name of our great national poet as for the numerous and valuable articles of taste and antiquity which it has been pillaged in the most daring manner of several very valuable articles, amongst which were a large gold watch, by Tupman, London, a repeater; richly embossed old gold watch, also a repeater (one of the Lucy family crest, a deer, in gold, largest silver snuff-box two inches full nautilus shells, mounted in silver gilt, &c. A man calling himself Walters has been arrested on suspicion by the Birmingham police, but his real name has been ascertained to be Bradshaw. He made his escape some time ago from Worcester, when confined there on a charge of felony.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—On Friday (yesterday), Walter Watts, 33, was indicted for stealing an order for the payment of £1400, the property of George Carr Glyn, his employer. In other counts, the property in question was laid to be the property of Edward Goldsmith and W Tite. The circumstances of this case will be fresh in the recollection of the public. The prisoner, who was formerly lessee of the Marylebone and Olympic Theatres, was clerk in the Globe Insurance Company, and it was alleged that he took advantage of his position to steal a cheque for £1400 which was intended to cover a life policy. It transpired that the prisoner held two shares in the company.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

According to the accounts of yesterday (Friday), the general feeling in Paris respecting the new electoral bill, as far as is yet known, is that it is approved of by the friends of order, and denounced, but not violently so, by the democratic portion of the public. Some of the Socialist papers appear to have been much irritated at the measure, and hint at vengeance; but the Government have so well organised their plans, that resistance would appear to be altogether hopeless.

GREECE.

According to accounts of the 28th ult. from Athens, matters have been pushed to extremes there. All negotiations between Baron Gros and Mr. Wyse having failed to produce any favourable result, active operations were resumed by the vessels under the command of Admiral Parker, and after a blockade of twenty-four hours, accompanied by a threat to bombard the Piræus (Port of Athens), the Greek Government gave way, conceding every demand made by the British representative.

Since those transactions, Mr. Wyse has again taken up his residence at Athens. The country was tranquil.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

ROYAL SOCIETY.—The Earl of Rosse, as president of the Royal Society, held a levee of the members and fellows of that learned body on Saturday last, at his Lordship's mansion in Great Cumberland-place. The réunion was attended by a large number of distinguished visitors, including several members of the nobility and corps diplomatique. Amongst those present we remarked the Prince Lucien Bonaparte, his Excellency the French Ambassador, his Excellency the Russian Minister, his Excellency the Bavarian Minister, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Earl of St. Germans, the Earl of Charemont, the Earl of Lovelace, Viscount Hardinge, Viscount Mahon, M.P., Viscount Ebrington, M.P., Lord De Mauley, Lord Hotham, M.P., Lord Feversham, Lord Eddisbury.

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY'S FLOWER SHOW.—The first exhibition under the auspices of the Botanic Society took place on Wednesday, in the Gardens, Regent's Park. The weather proved most unfavourable, notwithstanding which, several hundred visitors were admitted to the grounds. Few expositions of flowers have rivalled the collections drawn together by the society on this occasion. Among these, the collection of Mrs. Lawrence, of Ealing Park, may be safely pronounced to have surpassed anything of the kind ever before shown, each plant being in itself worthy of compeling as an individual specimen. Mr. Fraser also exhibited a very fine grown plant, of the not very common though beautiful variety, A. indica amœna. The roses can hardly be overpraised, and maintained their queenly supremacy over all other flowers, whether under high culture or luxuriating in natural wildness. The hybrid pelargoniums, although fine, were backward; a superb last year's seedling "Diana," however, belonging to Mr. Hoyle, deservedly obtained considerable attention from amateurs. Of the specimen plants, Messrs. Veitch and Sons, of Exeter, and Messrs. Lucombe and Pince, of the same place, had remarkable kinds. The singularly-looking Mechinella bracteata, with its pendant racemes of pink flowers, was well deserving of notice; as was also an interesting specimen of Cunchond lancedata, the Peruvian bark plant, sent by the same successful growers. We might here mention, by way of parenthesis, that it would be exceedingly desirable, considering how little they are known, if more of the foreign plants thus useful for economical and medicinal purposes were introduced into these exhibitions. One of the most prominent features of the show was Messrs Lucombe and Co.'s Dendrobium carnuiecum, grown to an unusual size, and profusely flowered. We should not omit to notice a fine specimen of the fruit of the plantain, from the garden of Lady Rolle. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Colonel Seymour, rode up to the gardens, for the purpose of viewing the exhibition, at an early hour, although scarcely expected, in consequence of the unfavourable state of the weather. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge also visited the show in the afternoon. The company present were admirably sheltered under the magnificent marquées erected by Mr. Benjamin Edgington, about the grounds, within which they were regaled by the bands of the Household Cavalry Regiments, led by their conductors, Messrs. Waddell, Tutton, and Cooke.

WESTMINSTER RAGGED DOMESTIC AND COLONIAL TRAINING SCHOOL OF INDUSTRY.—The first annual meeting of this institution took place on Thursday, at St Martin's Hall, Long-acre; Lord Ashley in the chair. The report stated that in the spring of 1848 the attention of some gentlemen had been called to the necessity of applying a remedy to the alarming evil which prevailed among a large section of this densely populated locality, whose miserable fate seemed to be a training for vice and crime, and their future prospects totally neglected. Since the opening, the number had been 163 applications for admission from the streets, and 13 from various prisons, recommended by the chaplain. The funds were inadequate to meet the demand, and several were now leading lives of the most vicious kind, because the limited means of this institution would not allow their admittance. The meeting was addressed by several gentlemen, after which the report was adopted; and, after a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated.

LONDON MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of this society took place on Thursday, at Exeter Hall; Sir Edward North Buxton in the chair. The report stated that the affairs of this society had been conducted with perfect harmony and cordial unanimity. The receipts during the past year had been greater than for the preceding year; while the expenditure had been considerably reduced, without in any way diminishing the efficiency of the society. Their missionaries were now 170 in number, and the number of native agents 700. They had published and circulated 15,000 copies of the New Testament. Their receipts from all sources amounted to £69,146. 14s. 4d., leaving a balance of £3,469. The report was adopted, and a vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the day.

TOWN MISSION AND SCRIPTURE READERS SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of this society took place on Thursday, at the Hanover-square Rooms; Mr. J. Dean Paul in the chair. The report stated that the number of agents now employed by the society were forty-five. During the past year the total number of domiciliary visits had been 194,940, by 1,940 of which 25,011 of these visits had been paid to the sick and dying, being an increase of 4429 over those of the previous year. 1295 copies of the Bible had been disposed of, and 115 670 tracts had been distributed. The total receipts amounted to £4482 12s. 11d.; and the balance against the society last year, of £1787, had been reduced to £517. The report was adopted; and a vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the day.

THE SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.—The annual meeting of this society was held on Tuesday, at their house, Lincoln's-inn-fields. The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of St. Asaph occupied the chair; and amongst the members present were, the Bishop of Toronto, the Ven. Archdeacon Harrison, Rev. Dr. Russell, Rev. Augustus Short, Rev. S. Dr ffle, W. Cotton, Esq., E. Wyndham, Esq., G. W. Lyon, Esq; &c. The secretary (the Rev. T. B. Murray) stated that the Lord Bishop of Montreal having made an application by letter from Quebec for additional aid towards building churches in Canada East, the sum of £500 for the object would be moved for by the standing committee at the next meeting. The committee gave notice of their intention to propose a vote of £2,000 towards a new bishopric in Lower Canada. The Lord Bishop of Newfoundland, in a letter, stated that since his visit to the church-ships to the several settlements along the coast of Labrador, great need had been felt and expressed of the services of the clergy of grace to the inhabitants of these remote settlements, and his Lordship expressed his intention at once to proceed to the erection of churches or chapels, school-houses, and residences for clergymen, in the most long-neglected part of his diocese. The society granted eighteen sets of books for the furtherance of divine service for churches and chapels in Newfoundland, and gave great encouragement to the prospect of a grant of £1000 towards collegiate buildings in that colony, whenever the Bishop was prepared to make his election. An interesting communication was read from the Bishop of Adelaide, who gave a sketch of the kind of population of which the emigrants who are at present flocking into that province consisted, and of the character of the country. His Lordship stated that the college had received a Royal charter in 1838, and had been constituted on the principles of religion as taught by the Church of England: but it now appears to be suppressed as a body with which the Church of England can have any connexion, it being a part of the provisions of the charter of the University Act, that no religious test or qualification whatever shall be required of any person either learning or teaching in the same, and that no religious observance of any kind need be used therein. Five clergymen were labouring in his diocese, and supplies of books for parishes in Canada, were then voted. The audit-sheet of the society's income and expenditure was laid before the meeting. It appeared that the expenditure of the past year had been £4,000 in excess of that, a considerable increase above the last year had taken place in the issue of Bibles and Common Prayer Books. The addition to these books alone was as much as £8,500, whilst a decrease of £600 had occurred in the sale of Testaments. The total number of the books issued during the present year was 'Bibles, 140,775; Books of Common Prayer, 298,707; and New Testaments, 79,377. A list of donations was then read, and many grants of books for schools, lending libraries, and distribution in necessitous parishes, were voted. A vote of thanks to the right rev. Prelate terminated the proceedings.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN SCHOOL SOCIETY.—The annual general meeting of this society was held on Monday, in Exeter Hall. The Right Hon. the Earl of Carlisle, vice-president, took the chair for the third consecutive year. His Lordship urged on the meeting the necessity of merging all minor disputes and differences on matters of faith, which ought to stand silent and rebuked before the seething and fermenting ignorance that threatened to engulph their teeming population. The secretary, Mr. H. Dunn, read the report of the committee, and stated that the model schools continued fully to sustain the high reputation they have obtained, enjoying the conditions favourable for conferring great benefit on the surrounding district. Upwards of 1000 children are in daily attendance; 50,586 have been under instruction since the schools were opened. The normal schools continue prosperous; 149 students are under tuition during the year. Difficulty is said to be experienced in obtaining an adequate number of qualified young men, which is partly attributed to the want of normal schools, and partly to the high qualifications now required of candidates. The same want is not felt in the training-school for females, where 129 teachers have been under training during the year. A new normal school has been opened at Bristol, to which 11 candidates have been admitted. During the past year 72 new schools, accommodating 7,000 children, have been established, and 27 in Wales. The most interesting passage of the report relates to the connexion between the society and the Committee of Council on Education. With references to the minutes of 1846, the committee state, as a matter of history, that the communication of aid to the society had not been attended with the evils which were anticipated at the time. With the exception of the painful differences of opinion occasioned by the grants, the aid of the Government has been decidedly beneficial to the society, and in no single case has the slightest attempt been shown to interfere with the management, or to entrench upon the independence either of the local schools or of the society. The report concluded by cordially recommending the operations of the society in Europe and the colonies. The receipts include a donation of £100 from her Majesty the Queen; school subscriptions, £988 8s. 6d.; legacies, £1588 4s. 2d.; from the Council of Education, £250; total expenses, £2261; balance due to the treasurers, £3857 2s. 6d. On the motion of Mr. J. A. Smith, M.P., seconded by the Rev. G. Smith, the report was received and adopted.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF VETERINARY SURGEONS.—The sixth annual meeting of this college was held on Monday afternoon, at the Freemasons' Tavern; Mr. W. Robinson, in the absence of the President, presiding. The chairman briefly said, that the business included a report of the last 12 up the six vacancies occurring by rotation in the board of council. The ballot was then proceeded with, and the result declared the following gentlemen duly elected members of council:—Professors Spooner, Simmons, and Morton; Messrs. F. King, F. C. Cherry, and J. Wilkinson. The general meeting then resolved itself into a special meeting for the reception of the report of the council. The report stated, that some doubts having been raised as to how far the college had the power of enforcing the by-laws, it was resolved to obtain the opinion of three eminent barristers on the legality of the code prepared by the council. Sir John Jervis, Sir Frederick Thesiger, and Mr. Jago were the authorities selected for this purpose, but their opinions had not yet been obtained. The council congratulated the college on being not out of debt only, but with a very respectable balance in the bankers' hands. A loan of £800 has this year been finally liquidated; a debt of £1000 incurred in obtaining and carrying out the charter up to the present time have amounted to £2858 1s. 4d., which, the council was enabled to add, had been done without any extraneous assistance whatever, but solely from the legitimate source of income of the college, and the contributions of its individual members. During the past year forty-seven candidates have received the diploma of the college. The number of members admitted into the body corporate since the obtainment of the charter was 320. The financial statement showed the receipts for the year ending March 27, 1850, to have been £807 19s. 1d., and the expenditure £395 13s. 6d., leaving a balance at the bankers' in favour of the college of £412 5s. 7d.; and Mr. T. W. Mayer having presented the sum of £37 14s. 7d. as a contribution for the special purpose, it was determined to make inquiries as to the possibility of procuring a residence or place of meeting, the funds of the college being in a comparatively flourishing state. The report was adopted without a division.

CHURCH SCHOOLMASTERS.—The annual meeting of the Church 'of England Schoolmasters' and Schoolmistresses' Mutual Assurance Society took place on Wednesday evening, at Exeter Hall; the Lord Bishop of Lichfield in the chair. The report showed that the donations received had amounted to upwards of £100. The committee were desirous of putting within the reach of all for whom this society was established the means of making a provision for the time of sickness, old age, &c. They wished to make this society as extensive as possible by adding to it any other scheme for the assurance was the safest and most profitable of all branches of assurance, as not only did it readily defray the expenses of the management, but provided also a considerable bonus to be periodically divided amongst assured members. It was also proposed as far as possible to extend the qualifications for making life assurances, in order that a fund might be the more readily raised among the expenses. To this end a provision existed on the rules for effecting assurances upon a life for a sum not exceeding £200. Considering the short time the society had been in operation, quite as many policies had been effected as might have been anticipated. The meeting was then addressed by the Bishop of St. Asaph and several other gentlemen, and resolutions, to the following effect, carried unanimously:—That the meeting has great pleasure in the progress made by this society, and fait confident that, when its objects were more more fully known, a very general manifestation in its favour would be exhibited in all parts of the kingdom; and that all parties interested should come forward and enrol themselves as members, not only for their own advantage, but for the sake of protecting the temporal interests of others;—and that thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the meeting.

ROYAL NAVAL SCHOOL.—The annual meeting of the patrons of this institution took place on Thursday, at Willis's Rooms, St. James's; Sir George Seymour in the chair. The report stated that the average number of pupils last year was 161, of whom 24 were admitted gratuitously, or at less than £25; while in the previous year there were 174, of whom 28 were on the gratuitous or reduced list, showing a diminution of nine pupils. They had purchased £2000 stock, still leaving a balance of £286 in hand. The total number of stock now was £7994. The receipts for the past year were £5087, and the total disbursements £5121. The report was adopted, and, after a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated.

NATIONAL PROVINCIAL BANK OF ENGLAND.—On Thursday the half-yearly meeting of this company was held at the Banking-House, Bishopsgate-street; John Laurie, Esq., in the chair. The report stated the results of the profits for the half year, which on the past year, which on the past year, which were favourable, as follows: Amount of undivided profits, 1st January £91,987 1s. 7d. Net profits of 1849, after making allowance for bad debts, £30,135 4s. 5d.: making a total of £122,329 6s., which, after declaring a dividend of 6 per cent. for the year, amounting to £24,619 16s., now leaves a reserve of undivided profit of £96,572 10s. The report was adopted and Lord Ernest Bruce, M.P., elected a director in the place of the late Horace Twiss.

WESTERN GENERAL DISPENSARY.—On Wednesday afternoon a special meeting of the governors of this charity was held at the institution, Major-General Salter in the chair. The report of the secretary, Mr. J. Martin, stated that the number of patients treated since the opening of the charity, in 1840, had amounted to 107,170, and during the past year to 21,107. The receipts during the year reached £1760 18s. 8d.; and the expenditure left a balance of £262 1s. 4d. In favour of the institution. Mr. Robert Barnes was elected surgeon-accoucheur in the place of Henry Bennett, resigned.

FEMALE SERVANTS' HOME SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of this society was held at Exeter Hall on Thursday evening; the Rev J. Brown in the chair. The report stated that the number of female servants admitted since March 31st (last year) was 424; to which might be added 41 then in the "homes," making a total of 457, of whom 368 were provided with situations. From the commencement of registration, 3160 families had applied for servants, and 11,400 servants had registered. The receipts were £541, and the expenditure £52 The report was adopted, and, after a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated.

MANSION HOUSE FESTIVITIES.—The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress entertained on Tuesday evening the Deputies and Common Council and the ladies of the respective wards of Cornhill, Cripplegate Within and Without, Bowbridge, Farringdon Within and Without, Langbourne, Lime-street, Portsoken, Queenhithe, Tower, Vintry, and Walbrook, besides a large number of private friends. Covers were laid for 300. The evening was enlivened by a choice selection of glees, &c., and the party did not separate till a late hour.

The Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress have issued cards of invitation to a banquet to be given to Lord Gough on the 30th instant. The company will consist of Peers and Peeresses, of members of the House of Commons, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and of the Generals of the British Army and their ladies, &c. The number of cards issued is about 400.

THE COLDSTREAM GUARDS.—The officers of the Coldstream Guards are about to celebrate the approaching anniversary of the restoration of the regiment to the service, by a grand banquet, to be held on the 29th inst., at the Royal Highness Prince Albert has, for the purpose, granted the use of the banqueting-room in St. James's Palace for that purpose. The banquet will be in full uniform.

THE IMPROVEMENTS OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.—On Wednesday Mr. Daw, the clerk to the City Sewers Commission, received an official communication from the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, stating in reply to a request from the Court of Sewers that a deputation of their body should be permitted to wait upon the ecclesiastical authorities, with reference to the proposed improvement of St. Paul's churchyard, by the removal of the railings from the centre to that of that noble structure, the cathedral. The Dean and Chapter have named an early day for receiving the deputation.

ASSAULT OF ARMS.—After the assault of arms which took place on Saturday last, at Willis's Rooms, Henry Marshall, Esq., of Alfred-place, Bedford-square, stepped from a front seat to the centre of the room, and said:—"My lords and gentlemen, in February last I caused a challenge to be published in the newspapers, to the effect that I was prepared to back a gentleman with foils and spar against any man in the world, for £100 or £500 a side. The person alluded to in that challenge was Mr. Arnold, of Bond-street, a professor of fencing, who has since published a statement that I have not come forward to state in the public assembly that I am still open to back Mr. Arnold against any man in the world. Should any one feel disposed to accept my challenge, I am ready to make the preliminary arrangements and to stake the money." After a consultation between the Hon. Charles Maynard and Mr. Marshall, the challenge was accepted by the first-named gentleman, on behalf of Mr. George Chapman.

MURDER IN THE CLAPHAM-ROAD.—On Monday, Mr. Higgs, coroner, resumed the adjourned inquest touching the death of Sarah Snelling, aged 53, who was found dead in the house of Mr. Maddle, No. 14, Claremont-place, Vandsworth-road, on the morning of Sunday, the 28th of April, and who it was alleged had been murdered by some person who had broken into and robbed the house. The circumstances of the case were noticed last week, and nothing has since transpired to throw any light on this mysterious affair. The jury have returned the following verdict:—"That the said Sarah Snelling, on the 27th of April, 1850, was found dead under very suspicious circumstances; that there were no marks of violence or discoloration of the body, nor any trace of poison; that a post-mortem has been opened and examined by a legally-qualified medical practitioner, with an analysis of the contents of the stomach and bowels, and that there is no evidence to the jury as to the cause of the death of the said Sarah Snelling." A long and vague suspicion appears to be entertained of some parties not in custody being cognizant of the murder.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—Births registered in the week ending Saturday, May 4:—Males, 718; females, 738; total, 1456. Deaths during the same period: Males, 419; females, 410; total, 829. The above return shows a result which, if compared with that of the returns of corresponding weeks in ten previous years (1840-49), is less than in any week except those of 1841 and 1842. The average number of deaths in corresponding weeks in 1840-49 is 883, or raised in the ratio of increase of population, 963; on which a decrease is apparent in the deaths of last week, amounting to 134. From diseases of the zymotic or epidemic class, 194 deaths were registered, which is about the average of the last 10 years, and to take particular diseases, small-pox was fatal to 7 persons, or half the average; scarlatina and hooping-cough respectively to 17 and 35, also less than the average. Measles, to the number of 27, or about the usual amount. But croup destroyed 12 children, which is double the ordinary fatality from this complaint. Also the wife of a butcher, aged 36 years, died in Halsey-terrace, Chelsea, of "spasmodic croup (18 hours)." Typhus was fatal to 28 cases—considerably less than usual; erysipelas in 9; diarrhœa in 10—the two latter being near the average amount. Diarrhœa appears to decline, the deaths from it in the last three weeks having been 16, 11, 10; in the week corresponding to the last in 1845 and 1849, they were 10 and 30. The mortality from diseases of the respiratory organs differs from the amount that generally prevails at this season of the year: from bronchitis, pneumonia, and asthma there were respectively 44, 66, and 9 deaths, the last showing a large increase. It is sufficiently worthy of remark that consumption has recently carried off weekly much less than the usual number of its victims; last week the deaths from it were only 102, though in the corresponding weeks of ten previous years they ranged from 118 to 149, and the corrected average is 137. A man of 44 years died of purpura hæmorrhagica. A man and two children died of laryngitis; and three children of laryngismus stridulus. In the accidental and violent deaths, a child, aged five months, who was suffocated by impure air, occurred at 7, Hayward's-place, in St. James's, Clerkenwell—he was found dead in bed. His father was a jewellers-case maker. Dr Blaud-on-Lindsey, Finsbury, a bookbinder, aged 43 years, died of "drunkenness, vomiting, and atrophy." A pensioner of 65 years, died in Greenwich Hospital from "apoplexy a puta (13 days), pneumonia (6 days)." Last week, the deaths of 74 inmates of workhouses were recorded; 53 persons were registered in general hospitals; six in military and naval; eight in lunatic asylums; three in the Small-pox Hospital, Camdentown; and three in the Fever Hospital, Islington.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The daily mean reading of the barometer at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, was above 30 in. on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday; the mean of the week was The mean temperature of the week was only 43·5 deg. Taking, for comparison, the ten corresponding weeks of 1840-9, there is no instance in which the mean temperature was equally low; for it ranged in these weeks from 47·4 deg to 55 8 deg., the mean having been 52·6 deg. It was on every day of the week considerably less than the average of the same in seven years. On Sunday it was less than the average by 5·7 deg.; on Thursday, by 8 deg.; and on Wednesday, by 9·7 deg. Except on Friday and Saturday, the wind blew from the north and north-east.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

The eighty-second Exhibition of the Royal Academy is not the best we remember to have seen, even in its present quarters; but it is an exhibition that will give greater satisfaction to the artist-world and to the public generally than any exhibition of pictures which the Academy has as yet put forth. Works of excellence in the higher branches of the art are fewer in number than usual; but the Academy has exhibited greater fairness in the general arrangement of the pictures, and the old monopoly of the line, or that portion of the wall immediately on a level with the spectator's eye, has been broken up, and the position divided not only with the Academicians and Associates, but with younger candidates for distinction as well. The merit of breaking the enemy's line (an achievement of consequence in naval tactics) belongs to Messrs. Maclise and Hart, the "bangers" on this occasion. Every well-wisher to Art and to the Academy will thank these gentlemen for the manly way in which they have acted throughout their arduous duties: for it is no holiday task to select some fifteen hundred works from at least three thousand, and then to arrange them so as to give satisfaction to themselves, to the Royal Academy, to the great body of exhibitors, and to the many who pay their shillings to see what our artists have been about since the last exhibition.

Another striking feature connected with the present Exhibition has been the admission of "the press," for the first time, to the private view. The Royal Academicians have hitherto confined the privilege of admission to their own patrons, to well-known purchasers, to her Majesty's Ministers, and to the leading members of the aristocracy. On this occasion they have thought fit to extend it to twenty (we believe) of the London papers. More has been thought of their "condescension," as some of the Academicians have called it, than the extent and value of the favour would seem to deserve. It is chiefly with the members of the daily press that the favour can be of any advantage to the furtherance of art. The private view is always on a Friday—too late in the week for ourselves and for many of our contemporaries [illegible] the daily papers it is otherwise. The first day of opening is always a crowded day, and round the best pictures there is always a circle; so that, to see at all, requires more time and good temper than critics are usually supposed to possess. At the private view there is every opportunity of examination. This "condescension," therefore, is, after all, only a bit of "selfishness" on the part of the Academy, and "selfishness," too, that has been found out somewhat late, and, but for recent circumstances, somewhat unwillingly.

The Exhibition consists of 1456 works of art, contributed by twenty-seven Royal Academicians, seventeen Associates, five Associate Engravers, and some three hundred and fifty "outsiders." The absent members of the Academy are Shee, Cook, Mulready, and Herbert among the painters; Sir R. Westmacott, Gibson, Wyon, and Foley among the sculptors; and Barry, Cockerell, Hardwick, and the two Smirkes among the architects. The number of works contributed by the members attached to the Academy is, in all, one hundred and ninety.

The places of honour in the Great Room are assigned to Eastlake's "Good Samaritan;" to Stanfield's "View of Dort," painted for Sir Robert Peel; to Edwin Landseer's large picture of "The Duke' and the Marchioness of Douro visiting the Field of Waterloo;" and to a charming picture by Frost, "The Disarming of Cupid," painted for Prince Albert. In the Middle and West Rooms these central honours are somewhat broken up, and the general impartiality of the hangers is still more manifest. In the Miniature and Architectural Rooms the arrangements are necessarily very much as before. It is otherwise, however, with the Sculpture den. The place of honour in the centre of the room has been given to Mr. Westmacott's recumbent figure in Caen stone of the late Archbishop of Canterbury. The poetic figures and portrait-statues stand in rows on each side of the Archbishop—somewhat crowded, it is true but in such a cellar how little can be done, for even the most favoured.

NO. 151.—"PSYCHE RETURNING FROM THE INFERNAL REGIONS WITH THE CASKET OF BEAUTY."—PAINTED BY T. UWINS, R.A.

In the highest branch of Scriptural subjects, Mr. Dyce takes the lead with (72) "The Meeting of Jacob and Rachel," a well conceived and well painted picture, with a touch of high art of the best times about it. Mr. Eastlake follows with (73) his "Good Samaritan;" a picture that grows upon you the longer you look at it. Its somewhat unfinished state is sufficiently obvious. Mr. John Martin exhibits "The Last Man," with fewer of his defects than usual, and with some of his best qualities, especially in the middle distance, admirably made out. Mr. Poole contributes (389) "The Messenger announcing to Job the Irruption of the Sabæans, and the Slaughter of the Servants;" a picture of merit, but with several oddities of arrangement that render it somewhat unpleasant as a whole. Mr. G. F. Watts has sent (408) "The Good Samaritan," painted as an expression of his admiration and respect of the noble philanthropy of Mr. Wright, of Manchester; but a very imperfect tribute, at the best. Mr. F. R. Pickersgill exhibits "Samson Betrayed;" a large picture with excellences of its own, but spotty and inharmonious in its general arrangement. Mr. Armitage's "Aholibah" (486) has more merit than many who pass it by too quickly are willing to allow. "Aholibah" is no beauty, it is true, but she is full of character and truth. Of still greater excellence is Mr. Millais' "Christ in the Carpenter's Shop" (514), engraved for our present Number—a picture painted, it is said, on a wrong principle, but with a thousand merits, and many intentional defects. Mr. Millais has taken his subject from Zechariah xiii. 6: "And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends." What is called, somewhat slightingly, the pre-Raphaelite of this picture, is its leading excellence. We may look in vain throughout the whole of the Exhibition for another picture (Mr. Dyce's alone excepted) in which [illegible] in the heads of the principal figures at all comparable to this. The intentional deformities, such as the frost-bitten toes of Joseph, the sore heel of the Virgin, &c., are not at all to our taste; but the picture has so many merits, that all its eccentricities may be very well excused, though they cannot be overlooked.

In the class of subjects embodying poetry or illustrations from our poets, we may mention with approbation Mr. Maclise's "Spirit of Justice" (160), a finished picture of his famous fresco in the House of Lords; Mr. Elmore's "Griselde" (212), from Chaucer; and Mr. Redgrave's picture (233), though not so good, from the same delightful source. Mr. Cope contributes "Cordelia watching the dying Lear" (39)—a stride forward in the way of excellence; the principal heads especially good; life seems slowly receding from the lips of Lear, and every moment you expect will be his last. Stanfield has attempted the poetry of his art in "Macbeth and the Witches" (67), a picture hardly up to the Shakspeare mark, but with some qualities in the distant landscape that are very fine. Leslie exhibits the "Dying Katherine delivering her last requests to Capucius" (136); but the Queen is without that humility-like dignity which she wore so becomingly to the last moment; in other respects the picture is hard and poor. Uwins exhibits "Psyche returning from the infernal regions with the casket of beauty:" one of those pleasing pictures from classic sources which Mr. Uwins always renders with true poetic feeling. We have had it engraved for our present paper. Mr. F. Stone has sent "Ferdinand and Miranda," from "The Tempest" (342), and "The Gardener's Daughter" (135), from Tennyson—both affording examples that he can do something still bet-

"And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends."—Zechariah xiii. 6.

NO. 518.—PAINTED BY J. E. MILLAIS.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

NO. 350.—"JAMES II., IN HIS PALACE OF WHITEHALL, RECEIVING THE NEWS OF THE LANDING OF THE PRINCE OF ORANGE IN 1688."—PAINTED BY E. M. WARD, A.R.A.

ter than young gentlemen in green silk breeches, rich satin waistcoats, and coats of peculiar colours. There is merit in the attitude and look of Ferdinand, and beauty of a high order in the Miranda, but Prospero is only a "property" enchanter. Mr. Millais gives us "Ferdinand lured by Ariel"—a strange composition, but with merit, and certainly original in its treatment. Mr. Hollands exhibits "Jessica and Launcelot," from the "Merchant of Venice," a well painted picture, and with some Shakspeare character throughout. Mr. Kennedy contributes what he calls "L'Allegro;" and, but for a certain cold bricky appearance, the scene he has pictured is pretty well up to the mark. The longer we look at this picture, the more we are unwilling to agree with the poet—

Straight mine eye hath caught new pleasure.

But let no one slight it, for it has many merits. Mr. Frost's "Disarming of Cupid" (15), a commission from Prince Albert, and his "Andromeda" (304), are among the best examples of purity of taste and delicacy of execution in the whole Exhibition. In young Mr. Pickersgill's "Pluto carrying away Proserpine, opposed by the nymph Cyane," we have he same spotty defects as in his "Samson" already referred to.

In the class of History we have "The Escape of Francesco Novello di Carrara, Lord of Padua, with Taddea d'Este, his wife," painted by Mr. Eastlake for the Vernon Gallery; and the same subject, differently, but ably, treated by Mr. J. C. Hook. Mr. Eastlake represents them in a difficult mountain pass—Mr. Hook, while seeking shelter in a thicket. We have engraved Mr. Hook' proper compliment to the young er artist. Mr. Egg contributes (Great sess Catherine, his future i mpress, for the first time well told, and the whole treatment is of the best kind. Mr. E. M. Ward has sent "James II., in his Palace of Whitehall, receiving the news of the landing of the Prince of Orange." He has found his subject in Dalrymple's "Memoirs of James's Reign:" "The King turned pale," says Dalrymple, "and motionless; the letter dropped from his hand; his past errors, his future dangers, rushed at once upon his thoughts: he strove to conceal his perturbation, but, in doing so, betrayed it; and his courtiers, in affecting not to observe him, betrayed that they did." Though Mr. Ward has found his subject in the dry pages of Dalrymple, he has treated it in the broad effective manner of Mr. Macaulay. The action and look of the King are expressive and appropriate; Mary of Modena (his Queen) is well introduced, as is the little incident of the touching endeavour to call the King's attention to his infant son, the future Pretender. The quiet consternation of Father Petri, who is catching at the tablecover (as indicative of a last hold), is happily caught. Behind the King stands the future Duke of Marlborough, then only Lord Churchill. The whole scene is full of life and dramatic (not stage) effect; and the spread of consternation is well carried out in the way in which the messenger who has brought the news is beset by queries as he passes from the withdrawing-chamber. To help our an imperfect account of an admirable picture, we have brought the engraver to our aid, and allowed Mr. Ward to tell his own story much better than we can tell it for him.

The other painters from History are not so good as Mr. Ward. Mr. Delaroche supplies a repetition (369) of "Cromwell looking into King Charles's

NO. 316.—"FRAN[illegible] DI CARRARA AND THE LADY TADDEA ESCAPE FROM THE PRISONERS OF GALEAZZO VISCONTI."—PAINTED BY J. C. HOOK.

Coffin;" Mr. Lucy, "The parting of Charles I. with his two youngest Children, the day previous to his Execution;" and Mr. Joy, "Cromwell contemplating the Crown." Mr. Lucy has made a very mournful Charles, and Mr. Joy a whining hypocrite of Cromwell. Both have forgotten that Charles was never without dignity in his distress, or Cromwell without a bold front in the midst of his hypocrisy. We are sorry we cannot commend Mr. T. Cross, from whose "Richard and the Archer," at Westminster Hall, we had been led to expect a much better second effort than (491) "The Burial of the Princes in the Tower;" but there is merit in his work. Mr. Hannah's "Earl of Northumberland" (672), and Mr. Collins's "Queen Berengaria" (585), are both hung too high to be seen to advantage. The painstaking labour they evince can only be guessed at. Both deserved to have found better places.

Mr. David Lander's great work is the "Duke of Wellington and his daughter-in-law, the Marchioness of Douro, visiting the field of Waterloo." On the 15 of the picture is seen the Duke and the Marchioness, both on horseback, and both nearly the size of life. The Duke is saying something to the Marchioness, but what it is, more than "It is near dinner-time—and if we don't ride home pretty fast the fish will be over cooked," we are quite at a loss to conceive. Of any sentiment on the Duke's face, or in the Duke's action, at all suitable to the emotions which such a scene could not fail to call up, even in an "Iron Duke," the picture is utterly devoid. The Duke may as well be at Hyde Park Corner, or on Hounslow Heath, for any thing we see to tell that the Duke ever was on the same—that, as it was with Talleyrand, you can learn nothing from his face. There is truth in the remark; but the artist should have put the proper expression into, or taken the attitude from, the countenance. "A Dialogue at Waterloo" is as entire a failure as the "Sir Walter Scott in the Rhymer's Glen," by the same artist. Mr. Landseer can show the brute creation with thinking qualities, but he cannot catch the mind of man. He would make a sorry figure of "Paul Preaching," or "Xenophanes haranguing the Waves," or "Newton with the Prism." He would give to Dr. Johnson his so-called bouse way, but he would miss his colossal intellect. It is right to add that there is a pleasing group of peasants and rein-eaters on the left of the composition; but it is so much detached from the Duke and his daughter-in-law, that it looks like a picture within a picture.

We shall continue our critical remarks and our Illustrations in another Number.

ROME ILLUSTRATED.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

9, Lincoln's-inn-fields, May 7, 1850.

SIR,—I cannot resist the pleasure of offering my humble testimony in favour of the truthfulness, taste, spirit, and accuracy with which the late Number of your Journal on Rome is executed. It is desirable to supply any omission in so perfect a work. In the appropriate remarks upon the "Farnesina Palace" no mention is made of its architect, the celebrated Baldazzarre Peruzzi, of Sienna: all true lovers of art delight in hearing the name of that admirable man—painter and architect—no less remarkable for his modesty than for his genius; I cannot but think that you will agree with me that such a name should not be omitted on such an occasion.

A residence of three years in the "Eternal City" enables me to appreciate in the highest degree the merits of your last Number; to see it is like visiting Rome again. Feeling confident that you will rightly interpret my motive in addressing you, I have the honour to be, Sir, Your very obedient servant,

ARTHUR WM. HAKEWILL.

P.S.—I need scarcely remark that the "Farnesina Palace" and the "Massimi Palace" are two of the very finest architectural creations in Italy; both the works of the meritorious Peruzzi.

[No one, we are sure, can appreciate more readily than our intelligent Correspondent, the difficulty which our circumscribed limits presented, of avoiding, in the Illustrated Memoir of Rome, the omission of some of the points of interest which encompass, in such thronged profusion, the subject of the "Eternal City." We can sympathize with an ardent lover of art and an admirer of great genius and worth, when he misses, from any record of the subject, the name of a justly-esteemed favourite; but, in the present case, want of space alone prevented the insertion of an elaborate and full account of Palazzo Massimi, of whose glorious labours Rome constitutes the great monument, and amongst whom a high place of honour is due to Baldassare Peruzzi.]

The spontaneous approbation of contemporaries is always acceptable when founded on a sense of merit. We therefore feel pleasure in acknowledging the following testimony to the excellence of our last week's Number devoted to the subject of the "Eternal City:"—

(From the Morning Herald.)

VIEWS OF ROME.—ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—In the last Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will be found a pictorial history of ancient and modern Rome—a history to which recent events give a new interest; but a history, at the same time, so carefully and so ably written, that it must be even read with pleasure by those who are familiar with Rome and her "Roman story," and with great profit by all who are imperfectly acquainted with the varied fortunes of the Imperial City.

What Rome was, London now is—that which Athenæus designates ἡ βασίλευσα πολις—the queen city of nations—and the number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS that now lies before us may be regarded as a gratifying tribute from the dominant nation to the city which once occupied that position in the estimation of the world—which the capital of England now holds. The reception of such a paper in Rome cannot but be regarded as an event that in itself is the best proof the Romans have yet received of the interest felt in this country for all that affects their ancient Mistress. When it is considered how much literature and the arts are indebted to Rome for their best models, we do not know that a more grateful present could be offered to a Roman, proud of the glory that still clings to the name, than a copy of the magnificent Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS published on last Saturday.

(From the Morning Chronicle.)

ROME.—The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of Saturday, the 4th instant, is deserving of special notice, on account of a carefully compiled memoir on the "History and Topography of Rome," by Mr. William Joseph O'Hea, of more than ordinary interest at the present moment. The illustrations of this Number are chiefly devoted to the return of Pius IX. to the Holy City. A large panoramic view of Rome, taken from a point on the Janiculum, close to the gate of San Pancrazio, by Mr. G. Thomas, with a key and references to the prominent localities in the recent siege operations, accompanies the present Number. It is engraved with great care by Mr. Walter Mason.

(From the Morning Advertiser.)

ROME ILLUSTRATED.—The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of Saturday is peculiarly attractive. A fine large print of Rome is given with the (Double) Number, in the foreground of which are represented several French soldiers. The Supplement contains an interesting and well-written account of the Eternal City, and the Wood-Engravings are numerous and admirably executed.

(From the Morning Post)

The last Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS is occupied with a series of sketches designed to illustrate the return of the Pope to Rome, and is fairly entitled to be regarded as one of the most beautiful pictorial works have emanated from the newspaper press of London. A memoir on the history and topography of Rome, from the pen of Mr. William Joseph O'Hea, constitutes his chief literary attraction of the paper. He is written with much vigour and elegance, displays remarkable scholarship, and cannot fail to be read with interest.

(From the Sun.)

ILLUSTRATIONS OF ROME.—Nothing but the enormous circulation, and the facilities afforded by the long experience and admirable machinery of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, could enable the proprietors of that popular periodical to produce the splendid series of engravings published this week illustrative of the important events which have recently transpired in the Eternal City. A Double Number, or rather the ordinary Number accompanied by a Supplement, together with a large panoramic View of Rome, presented gratuitously to the subscribers, constitute the group of embellishments here offered to the notice of the lovers of art, and to those who are curious as to the aspect of the late ecclesiastical pageantry.

THE NURSE FOR THE NEW SCION OF ROYALTY.—We stated some time ago our belief that her most Gracious Majesty had determined that one of Caunda's daughters should act as foster-mother to the expected Royal stranger. We can now confidently announce that this high honour has fallen to the lot of a native of Llanefydd, in the county of Denbigh. Jane Jones, the party in question, whose original name was Lloyd, lived as servant a few years ago in the family of Mr. Ezra Roberts, draper, St. Asaph. She quitted service with the best possible character, and married an industrious and respectable man, now in the employment of the Chester and Holyhead Railway Company, at the Greenfield Station, Holywell. Queen Victoria's nurse will be a "Jane Jones."—Carnarvon Herald.

NEW QUALIFICATIONS FOR CUSTOM-HOUSE CLERKS.—The Commissioners of the Board of Customs have just issued an order that no person can be appointed to fill a clerkship in the customs hereafter who has not a knowledge of the French and German languages, and of arithmetic and algebra.

VALUABLE CHESS-BOARD.—An arrival has taken place, by a steamer from Rotterdam, of a very valuable and interesting importation, consisting of a chess-board and complete set of chess-men, the squares on the board being of gold and silver, and set round with precious stones, and the chess-men likewise of gold and silver, and also set with precious gems of a similar description. The value of the precious stones alone, with which the board and men are set, is understood to amount to several hundred pounds, and the articles, from their appearance and character, are believed to be of Eastern (probably of Chinese) manufacture.

At the Central Criminal Court on Thursday, Moy, the master baker, of Bridges street, Covent garden, who killed his wife by beating her, was found guilty of manslaughter under aggravated circumstances, and sentenced to transportation for life.

MUSIC.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

The instrumental pieces of the fifth programme were all crowded into the first part, which opened with Beethoven's eighth Symphony in F; next in rotation, only interrupted by Mozart's aria and chorus from "Il Flanto Magico," "Possenti Numi," impressively sung by Mr. Phillips, was Haydn's quartet No. 81, executed by Sivorius, Sainton, Hill, and Lucas; then, after the "Che faro," from Gluck's "Orfeo," excellently sung by Miss W. Williams, came Mozart's pianoforte concerto in C minor, performed by Mr. Lindsay Sloper; and after an air and chorus from Spohr's "Faust," "Ye lovely Dimensions," sung by Mr. Benson, this lengthy part was terminated with a MS. overture by Mr. J. H. G. Griesbach, entitled "The Tempest." We have, on a former occasion, questioned the policy of introducing quartets at these concerts; and the effect produced on the first and last occasions, despite of the undoubted skill of the executants, in no wise can convince us that nothing tends to render a sch me more thoroughly wearisome, and a more distressing of an auditory to enthusiasm, than to have a quartet played between a symphony and overture. Chamber compositions are quite out of place in the large concert-room, in which grand orchestral combinations are presented, and we are satisfied that very few of the Philharmonic subscribers relished this second infliction in one season. With the exception, the concert was excellent. The symphony was exquisitely executed, the allegretto scherzando being unanimously encored: the minuetto was also delicately played; and the terrible intricacies for the wood and brass in the tri ol-energetic scherzo, "the overture of fire and inspiration of genius," was in spirited sympathy with its subject. The concerto was performed classically and elegantly, and the cadenza was imbued with the Mozartian spirit. We never listen to Mr. Lindsay Sloper's playing without regretting that it has not been put in action: so thoroughly picturesque is the music, and so dramatic is Goethe's magnificent poem, it would make a startling drama. The overture, descriptive of the opening of the mysterious drama, was finely played by the chorus "Disperse" was most exciting, and the one in G minor, in which the wild and grotesque figures are made to scare the Christian host, so varying in time and theme, was sung with great precision. The chorals was a glorious piece of rich harmony, in the Bach forms. The entire execution of this work was highly creditable to the feeling and intelligence of the vocal and orchestral forces under Costa's energetic direction.

LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS.

The celebrated contralto, Mdlle. Angri, after her brilliant season at the Italian Opera House in Paris, is now in town to sing at concerts. She made her first appearance at Exeter Hall on the tenth concert of the spring season, and created the greatest enthusiasm. As a specimen of expressive singing, nothing could be more impassioned than her rendering of the air from Donizetti's "Maria di Rohan." "Son Regina ed adoro." The overture of the same opera, and created the composer. In the bravura school, her "Una voce," and the "Cenerentola" finale, "Non più mesta," quite electrified the auditory by the perfection of her cadences. In the well-known "Brindisi," from "Lucrezia Borgia," her energy quite took the room by storm, and it was doubly encored: indeed, she was called upon to repeat every piece in the programme, and she sang eight times.

Mr. Gustavus Ernest, a tenor, from Dublin, who has studied in Italy, also made his début in London, in the grand scena from "Der Freischütz," and in Macfarren's ballad from "Charles the Second." Though o'er life's pleasures roving" the latter was re-demanded. Herr Sigelli, the German tenor, was encored in Walter's ballad "There is a flower that bloometh;" and Mr. Sims Reeves was equally greeted in the "Death of Nelson." Miss Lucombe, Mrs. A. Newton, and Mr. Drayton were the other vocalists. The solo players were Doyaschek, the extraordinary pianist, and Guilo Regondi, the accomplished concertinaist.

DON M. D. ECHEVERRIA'S CONCERT.

Don M. D. Echeverria is a Navarrese, and was an officer in the Spanish service under Espartero previous to the loss of his sight. Having a natural taste for music, he cultivated the mandor or bandurria, and he draws from this small, ungrateful instrument much sweetness of tone, and displays surprising power of execution. He was very much applauded for his skill. His concert at the Hanover Rooms was a tertulia—great was the assemblage of black eyes and raven hair, and the telegraphic working of fans. When the two Cubras commenced their strumming on the guitars, there was an excitement that proved the auditory to be "Castilians à las derechas." "Expansion seems to me," If the castanets and tambourine had been added, the Iberian amateurs would have indulged in a salatory exhibition, and a bolero, fandango, or zarabanda might have ensued, so exhilirating was the Cachucha of the "Cubras—true "Zapateas." Then Madame de Lozano, who claims, in Viardot's absence, the speciality for singing Spanish melodies, sang some of the popular "refranes" with genuine gusto and gracia. The Spanish portion of the programme was further diversified by instrumental and vocal talents of Mrs. Anderson (pianist), M. Sainton (violin), M. Poignie (violoncello), Messrs. Ribas and Barrett (flute and oboe), and the singing of Madame Lemaire, Miss Taylor, Signori Marras, Ferrari, and Montelli; the conductors being Signor Filetti and Don S. Celos.

CHARTER-HOUSE CONCERT.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Hullah held his annual vocal concert in the great hall of this hospital. The programme was selected by the scholars of the first class, comprised both sacred and scenlar pieces; Mr. May accompanying on the piano, and Mr. J. Hullah conducting. The boys who sang numbered between forty and fifty, and were encored in several pieces. The duet of Messrs Suther land and Irvine, in Beethoven's "Sing of judgment, sing of mercies," met with an encore. "The hardy Norseman" was encored three times. The "Carmen Carthusianum" finished the evening's entertainment.

The great hall was full, and contained a fashionable and attentive audience, among whom were the Right Hon. Fox Maule, Mrs. Maule, and the Hon. Miss Abercromby; Sir R. H. Inglis, Bart., M.P.; Lord F. and Lady Godiva, Hon. J. and Mrs. Irvine, Lt. Hullah's daughters, Mrs. Laura Palmer; Venerable Archdeacon Hale, Master of Charter-House; Rev. Dr. Jelf, Rev. Dr. Russell, Rev. Dr. Saunders, and the other officers of the House; Mr. and Mrs. Funblanque, &c.

THE MUSICAL UNION.

The fourth meeting, on Tuesday, at Willis's Rooms, was one of the most interesting performances that have been given in connection with Mendelssohn. The Posthumous Quartet, No. 6, in E minor, Op. 80, finely performed by Ernst, Deloffre, Hill, and Piatti. It is stated that this work was composed whilst Mendelssohn was in Switzerland, mourning the death of his accomplished sister; and the character of the quartet is quoted as indicative of the gloomy feelings under which it was written. In form it differs from his other quatuors, as the customary scherzo, or minuetto, is replaced by a movement allegro assai, 3-4 time, in F minor, as well as the opening allegro vivace and finale, the adagio in E flat being the only movement in the major key, and a noble relief to the despondency of the other portions. There are more of the Beethovenish forms and ideas in this quatuor than in any other of Mendelssohn's works—unpleasant, yet proficient. Haydn's Quartet in C, No. 57, enabled Ernst to distinguish himself greatly. The début of the celebrated composer and pianist, Stephen Heller, in Beethoven's Trio in B flat, Op. 97, with Ernst and Piatti, was one of the most triumphantly successful. Heller played with consummate skill, and displayed a poetic sensitiveness and rich colouring of the gorgeous themes in the trio; and his intellectual and brilliant reading of the scherzo and finale were received with a grand burst from the auditory. The programme terminated with a "Romance," an "Intermezzo," and "Lied," from the "Pensées Fugitives" of Heller and Ernst, or piano and violin—elegant thoughts as elegantly expressed by the truly gifted interpreters.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF MUSICIANS.

Every year, a public morning rehearsal and evening performance of Handel's "Messiah" take place for the benefit of the widows and children of members of the society. The former came off at the Hanover Rooms on Monday, and the latter on Wednesday: Mr. Costa conducting the oratorio, for the first time, for the institution. The vocalists were Miss Rainer, Miss Dolby, Miss A. Williams, Messrs. Andrews, Burch, Ellen Lyon, Messrs. Lockey, Benson, Barnby, T. Williams, Lawler, A. Novello, and Phillips.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—Miss Bassano will give a matinée musicale this day (Saturday), at Beethoven Rooms, at which Mdlle. Angri, the young pianiste, will perform for the first time.—M. Billet's second soirée of pianoforte music took place last night, at St. Martin's Hall.——Of the first morning concert yesterday (Friday), at the It yal Italian Opera, and of the performance of Handel's "Israel in Egypt" last night, at Exeter Hall, by the Sacred Harmonic Society, conducted by Costa, we must postpone our notices until next week's Number.——The sixth concert of the Amateur Musical Society will take place on Monday, and the morning the first "Grand, Classical, Miscellaneous, Concerted Musical Entertainment," at Her Majesty's Theatre.——In addition to the dramatic attractions of Mr. Harrison's benefit, at the Princess' Theatre, on Monday night, there will be a concert.——Next Tuesday, Miss Dolby and Mr. Lindsay Sloper will give their morning concert.——On Wednesday evening will be the third meeting of the Beethoven Quartet Society, and the evening concert of Miss Elizabeth and Miss Eliza Birch.——On Friday (the 17th), the annual concert of the excellent institution, the "Choral Fund," will take place at the Hanover Rooms. Haydn's "Seasons" will be performed on this occasion, conducted by Benedict; and our principal vocalists will sing.——Mdme. Lemaire gave a matinée last Monday, at No. 46, Great Marlborough-street.——On Wednesday, Signor Briccialdi, at his residence in Fitzroy-street, commenced a series of flute matinées.——On Thursday, M. Blumenthal, the composer and pianist, had a matinée musicale at Lady Ashburton's mansion, in Hyde-park-corner.——Mr. John Parry delivered his entertainment last Monday at Kensington, and on Thursday at Crosby Hall.——Haydn's "Creation" was performed by the London Sacred Harmonic Society last Monday, at Exeter Hall, conducted by Mr. Surman; Miss C. Hayes, Mrs. Temple, Miss Kent, Messrs. Lockey and Lawler, being the principal vocalists.

MR. BUNN IN DUBLIN.—Mr. Bunn gave his "Shaksperian Monologue" last Saturday, for the first time, at the Theatre Royal, of which he was formerly lessee and director. He was most enthusiastically received. "A more deserved success," states the Dublin Evening Packet, "has never been achieved." The Lord-Lieutenant had signified his intention of being present at Mr. Bunn's benefit last Thursday. Next week he will be at Liverpool.

THE TEN HOURS ACT.—At a meeting of the Oldham committee, on the 6th instant, resolutions were adopted, condemnatory of the proposition to abandon the Ten Hours Act and to increase the duration of factory labour to 60 hours per week, and deprecating any addition to the working hours of young persons and females working in factories as settled by law in 1847.

PROTECTION TO AGRICULTURE.—MEETING OF DELEGATES

On Monday the delegates deputed by the various agricultural societies throughout the United Kingdom to confer with the acting committee of the National Association for the Protection of British Industry and Capital, assembled in preliminary meeting at the offices of the Association, at the South-Sea-house. An address was unanimously adopted, of which the following is the principal point:—"A dissolution of Parliament cannot now be remote, and may occur much earlier than is generally imagined. If Protection is to triumph, Protectionists must be prepared for the struggle as well bring. The two great points on which preparation is indispensable to success, are close and nothing attention to the registration of electors, and a timely selection of fit and proper candidates." The address proceeds with recommendations "for the efficient performance of these requisites," as applicable to country representatives, and, in some degree, to boroughs. The meeting was so numerous, that an adjournment took place to the great room at the London Tavern, where the proceedings were continued, under the presidency of Mr. H. F. Young.

On Tuesday the general meeting of the delegates and of the members of the National Association, relative to the present condition of agriculture and other native interests, was held in the large room at the Crown and Anchor, Strand. The chair was taken by his Grace the Duke of Richmond, President of the National Association. The meeting was a very crowded one; and amongst the noblemen and gentlemen present were his Grace the Duke of Richmond, K.G., in the chair; Major William Beresford, M.P., Richard Blakemore, Esq., M.P., Henry D. Blyth, Esq., London; James Blyth, Esq., London; Thomas William Booker, Esq., Viadura House, near Bridgwater; Captain Boteler, R.E., Llantrisaint Castle, Cowbridge, Glamorganshire; T. W. Bramston, Esq., M.P., Richard Bromridge, Esq., M.P., Sir Brook W. Bridges, Bart., Goodnestone Park, Wingham, Kent; Lieut.-Col. Anstruther Browne, M.P., Sir Charles R. Burrell, Bart., M.P., Viscount Combermere, G.C.B., Major Chetwynd, E. Cayley, Esq; Jon. Conrad Chatterton, M.P., E. S. Chandos Pole, Esq., Radborne Hall, near Derby; R. A. Christopher, Esq., M.P., the Most Hon. the Marquis of Downshire, the Hon. Baron Dunsdale, Grosvenor-place, Hatfield; Charles J. Dunsdale, Esq., Essendon-place, Hertford; John Whitehall Dod, Esq., M.P., the Right Hon. the Earl of Eglinton, Edward Fellowes, Esq., M.P., John Fleyer, Esq., M.P., the Right Hon. Lord Feversham, M. Frewen, Esq., the Right Hon. the Earl of Glengall, Ambrose L. Goddard, Esq., M.P., Howel Gwyn, Esq., M.P., Sir Alexander Hood, Bart., M.P., &c.

The noble chairman, in opening the proceedings, said:—"Gentleman, we are met here to day to hear from tenant-farmers in various parts of the county, the prospects of their different localities. Gentlemen, I fear that these prospects are very bad indeed; but still I will say, that before you hear what I have stated in Parliament—that I have the greatest confidence in the good feeling of the people of England (Cheers). I believe the tenant-farmers will follow the advice which I have received to give them, namely, to persevere. (Hear, hear) Let all of you, when you return home, tell your friends to persevere, and depend upon it justice will sooner or later be rendered to you. (Cheering.) I will not detain you longer than to hope that the expressions which may be made use of to-day will show that, ill used as we are, we are still loyal persons—true to the Sovereign, and firmly attached to the constitution of our country." (Great applause.)

Mr. Booker moved the first resolution. He said it was unnecessary for him to enter upon any lengthened argument, or address any elaborate statement of facts or statistics, to prove that the condition of Great Britain and Ireland, and her dependencies, was most unsatisfactory—(hear, hear)—their own experience would tell them that. On this point he would assume three propositions:—The first of all, that the agricultural interest was immeasurably the most important interest in the state; secondly, that that interest was in a state of great, and greatly increasing, depression; and thirdly, that depression was occasioned by the adoption of and continuance in that altered policy which the country now professed. (Cheers.) The speaker concluded by moving the following resolution:—

That the difficulty and intolerable distress pervading the agricultural and other great interests of the country, and the state of deprivation and suffering to which large masses of the industrial population are reduced, are, in the opinion of this meeting, fraught with consequences the most disastrous to the public welfare, and, if not speedily remedied, must prove fatal to the maintenance of public credit, will endanger the public peace, and may even place in peril the safety of the state.

Mr. Chowler, of Nottinghamshire, tenant-farmer, seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously, as also were the following.

Mr. Ball, of Barwell, Cambridge, moved the second resolution:—

That the indifference with which the just complaints of the people have been received by the House of Commons, and the determination to adopt any measures for removing or alleviating the existing distress, and the want of sympathy it has exhibited for the suffering of the people, have produced a widely-diffused feeling of mistrust and alienation; and that any course which is fast undermining their reliance on the justice and wisdom of Parliament, the best security for loyalty to the throne, and for the maintenance of the invaluable institutions of the country.

He would ask if that resolution was true? (Cries of "True, true.") Was it true that the House of Commons had shown great indifference to their petitions, and had rejected on, in a Parliament sworn to support and uphold Protection, to pass a measure of the very contrary nature? ("Yes, yes.")

Mr. J. Allen Williams, tenant-farmer, of Wiltshire, seconded the resolution.

Professor Low, of Edinburgh, editor of Edinburgh Magazine, then came forward, and was received with immense applause. He said he had been desired by the Scottish Protective Association to attend the meeting and read the resolutions. The hon. gentleman then moved the following resolution:

That this meeting attributes the depression and distress of the agricultural, colonial, shipping, and other interests, to the rash and impolitic changes in the laws which had repealed the remunerative duties of Protection, and that it is of opinion that those laws were based on the most just principles, and dictated by the soundest policy, that under their influence the British empire had attained a high degree of prosperity, and a proud pre-eminence in the scale of nations; and that their object and spirit in fostering and protecting native industry by fixing the remunerative limit of the most important interests of the State will be sacrificed, and the national prosperity and greatness be ruinously impaired.

Sir M. W. Ridley, Bart., of Northumberland, seconded the resolution. On behalf of the deputation from Northumberland, he had to state that they represented the feeling of the whole of that vast county; and he was desired to contradict the statement that had been made in the House of Parliament as to the condition of agriculture and the feelings of the farmers in a county which was known to be in the van of agricultural improvement.

Mr. John Joseph Allnutt, of Wallingford, Berkshire, moved—

That no relief from present and no real taxation which is consistent with the maintenance of national faith, and the efficient working of public establishments, can enable the British and colonial producer to maintain a successful competition with foreign productions; and that the only real remedy for the agricultural distress is to restore the interests in a state of prosperity, resting on the re-establishment of a just system of import duties.

Mr. Watson, farmer, Keillor, Scotland, said he came there with the Scottish farmers' petition, which he had agreed to read there, and he presumed that they were heart and soul with them; and, though they were rather late in the field, he might say he was certain that they would be joined by all the other great interests of Scotland. He seconded the resolution.

Mr. Caldecott, of Trating Lodge, Colchester, moved—

That the members from the various delegations from all parts of the United Kingdom, now present, cannot separate without recording their deep sense of the invaluable services rendered to the cause of Protection by the noble President of the National Association, and the other members of the National Association, in whom the whole agricultural community have the most deserved and implicit confidence.

Mr. Rigden, of Hove, in East Sussex, seconded the resolution. He wished especially to contradict a statement of the Times Commissioner, that a farm in the neighbourhood of Brighton, of 400 acres, had last year yielded a profit of £200. He said that was a falsehood.

The resolution was then agreed to amidst repeated cheers.

Mr. Boddington, of Sutton Coldfield, proposed the next resolution:—

That a memorial to the Right Honourable the First Lord of the Treasury be prepared, founded on the foregoing resolutions, in the most respectful manner against the continuance of the present system of unqualified "Free-Trade," and solemnly entering on the Admiralty Records a protest against the same, and respectfully referring the appeals of the people for the abandonment of that system; and that a deputation be appointed for the purpose of presenting the same to his Lordship, and of representing the most serious and alarming condition of many districts of the country, and of some of the most important colonial dependencies of the British Crown.

H. Higgins, Esq., of Herefordshire, seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously, amid loud cheering.

The last resolution was proposed by Earl Eglinton, and seconded by Lord J. Manners, which was carried unanimously, amidst the most vociferous cheering:—

That the cordial thanks of this meeting be cordially offered to his Grace the Duke of Richmond, K.G., for his manly and consistent maintenance of the cause of Protection on all occasions, and especially for the able and impartial manner in which he has presided over the proceedings of this day.

The Chairman, in returning thanks, said he disapproved of all violence, of all unconstitutional means, and of all resistance to taxation and constituted authorities. He hoped that the delegates elected their movement peaceably and reasonably, they would not only win the day, but do so with the respect and esteem of the country as a whole. He concluded by assuring them that he advocated Protection, not for agriculture alone, but all classes of native industry, and that he would give the blessing of God, to succeed in his endeavours, with the assistance of the yeomen of Great Britain and Ireland.

The meeting broke up at half-past five o'clock, having lasted four hours and a half.

In pursuance of the invitation of Mr. G. F. Young, at the close of the proceedings at the Crown and Anchor, Strand, on Tuesday, a large body of the gentlemen who constitute the delegations from the provinces met the committee of the National Association on Wednesday forenoon, at the South Sea House. Mr. Young, as chairman of the committee, presided on the occasion. Upwards of 200 gentlemen were in attendance, and amongst them were the Earl Stanhope, the Earl Talbot, Mr. Caley Worsley, &c. Several resolutions relating to the future conduct of the movement were agreed to.

The Dundee manufacturers have been successful in securing the greater portion of the Government contract for canvas and ducks, this year:—Of the 14,4.5 bolts, 7010 of 24 and 1045 of 18 inches have been taken by Messrs. Baxter, Brothers, and Co.; 4360 of 24 inches by Messrs. Wm. Fergusson, manufacturers there. The remaining 2030 of 24 inches have been given to Messrs. Wilmam and Sons, manufacturers, Bridport. One of the Dundee power-loom manufacturers has contracted for from 100,000 to 200,000 yards of ducks.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

HER MAJESTY'S HEALTH.

We rejoice to announce that her Majesty's recovery has advanced so satisfactorily during the past week, that the Court Physician on Wednesday last issued the following bulletin :—

Buckingham Palace, May 8, Nine A.M.

The Queen and the infant Prince continue well.

JAMES CLARK, M.D.
CHARLES LOCOCK, M.D.
ROBERT FERGUSON, M.D.

Her Majesty's recovery is so far advanced, that no more bulletins will be issued.

Her Majesty has been visited several times during the week by her augustmother, and on Monday the Queen of the Belgians arrived at Buckingham Palace from Claremont, and remains on a visit to the Queen.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent visited the Queen of the Belgians on Wednesday, at Buckingham Palace. The Countess de Neuilly, the Duke and Duchess de Nemours, and the Duc d'Aumale, also visited the Queen of the Belgians on the same day.

The nobility and gentry, to the number of several hundreds, have called at Buckingham Palace daily during the week, to make their dutiful inquiries after the health of her Majesty and the infant Prince.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent visited her Majesty the Queen on Thursday. In the evening her Royal Highness honoured the Royal Italian Opera with her presence.

COURT FESTIVITIES.—We are authorised to state that, upon the return of the Court from Osborne, about the middle of June, her Majesty the Queen will hold the usual Drawing-rooms; and that it is also her Majesty's intention to give Court balls, &c.

HER MAJESTY'S BIRTHDAY.—The anniversary of the natal day of the Sovereign, who presides at the festivities, the whole of the superb suite of rooms were thrown open on the occasion, and brilliantly illuminated. His Grace's private band, conducted by Mr. Charles Coote, were in attendance during the evening.

Lord Londesborough held a conversazione on Wednesday evening, at his mansion, on the terrace, Piccadilly, at which nearly 200 members of the literary and scientific world assembled.

Miss Coutts gave a magnificent entertainment on Wednesday evening, at her mansion in Stratton-street, to his Grace the Duke of Wellington, and a distinguished circle of the nobility. Upwards of 80 guests sat down to dinner. In the evening Miss Coutts held an assembly, at which nearly 400 leading fashionables were present. The whole suite of saloons were thrown open on the occasion, and the rich treasures of art and virtu contained therein were never seen to greater advantage.

Mrs. Burnaby gave her first soirée dansante on Monday evening, at the family mansion in Eaton-place. The réunion was attended by a brilliant circle of fashionable company.

The Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch and family arrived at their town residence, Montague House, on Saturday, from Northamptonshire.

The Duke and Duchess of Bedford have arrived in Belgrave-square for the season.

The Duchess de Colgny has arrived in town, from Paris.

The Marquis of Londonderry has issued cards for a grand military banquet, at Holdernesse House, on Wednesday, the 5th prosimo. The Marchioness of Londonderry will have an assembly on the same evening.

The Earl and Countess of Shrewsbury, accompanied by Miss Talbot, his Lordship's niece (who, we understand, is about to make her debut), are among the latest arrivals at Mivart's Hotel.

We are glad to hear that Lord John Russell, who has been indisposed, was much better on Wednesday.

COUNTRY NEWS.

LIMITATION OF HOURS OF LABOUR IN MINES.—A public meeting of the miners of the Potteries and neighbourhood was lately held at Stafford, for promoting a petition to Parliament in favour of the restriction of the hours of labour in mines. Mr. Daniels, an agent of the Miners' Association, was called to preside. The chairman, in stating the object of the meeting, remarked that, as the Legislature had passed a law restricting the hours of labour above ground to ten hours per day, it was most consistent with justice to ask that the poor miners who worked in the bowels of the earth should have their day restricted to eight hours, on account of grievances peculiarly their own, and which they were met in a legal and constitutional way to discuss them. Several resolutions were then passed for promoting a petition to Parliament for an eight hours bill. One of the speakers was G. Evans, a collier, who, in arguing for the legality of the meeting, referred to the case in the Potteries in 1844, remarking that, after that time, he had passed two years in one of her "Majesty's" colleges, for attending a meeting like the present, which was the only one he had taken part in for pretty near eight years. Mr. Roberts, "the Miners' Attorney-General," was present, and spoke at some length in seconding a motion in favour of a more extended system of union among the miners of North Staffordshire. In alluding to the propriety of the legislature stepping in to abridge the miners' hours of labour, Mr. Roberts asked whether eight hours per day was not in justice sufficient for a man to be working (and as mine, snatched from the light of the sun, breathing the air particularly in badly-ventilated mines) a polluted atmosphere, and every moment in peril of coming to an untimely end? The importance of well-ventilating, cleaning, and supporting the roof could not be too strongly urged upon the attention of employers. He had commenced to practise in the neighbourhood, and trusted that he should effect the same amount of good for the miners of North Staffordshire which he had accomplished for their brethren in the coal districts of Northumberland, Durham, and other places. He intended amongst them was to teach employers (such as did not know it) their duty, and to assist the men in redressing their grievances. The speaker strongly urged upon the meeting the necessity of forming themselves into a stronger bond of union, contending that by it they would obtain and secure those advantages which they could not gain without. Thanks being voted to the chairman, the meeting broke up.

THE TAILORS OF LIVERPOOL.—On Tuesday a public meeting of the operative tailors of Liverpool was held in the Amphitheatre (which was crowded), to consider a remedy for the slop, sweating, and middlemen systems. There were nearly 2000 present, several highly respectable gentlemen occupying seats on the platform. John Holmes, Esq., the Mayor, presided. The meeting was addressed by Messrs. Goodfellow, Heaney, Riley, Farren, Smith, Will ams, and Briggs, and resolutions in support of the object of the meeting were passed.

On Wednesday, at a special meeting of the Town-Council of Cambridge, held in the Guildhall, Earl Fitzwilliam, who was lately unanimously appointed to succeed Lord Godolphin as high steward, was inducted into that office. In the evening his Lordship was entertained at a grand banquet in the Town-hall, at which the Mayor presided, and about 100 other guests were present, including the high sheriff of the county (John Vipan, Esq.), Lord Monteagle; A. S. Adair, Esq., M.P., Hon. W. F. Campbell, M.P.; Professors Sedgwick and Pryme, &c. The festivities were prolonged to a late hour.

BRACKNELL SAVINGS-BANK.—The committee of investigation into the affairs of this bank have made a most satisfactory report. The total amount of deposits appears to be nearly £60,000, while the absent books only show the sum of £6,000, the amount of which such a depositor of £5 17s. 11d. has been discovered in Cambridgeshire, leaving a balance £4 9s. 2d. only still to be claimed.

NAILMAKERS' STRIKE.—The strike among the nailmakers in the Midland Counties still continues, and has extended from Sedgley throughout the whole district of Bilston, Tipton, Dudley, Oldbury, Hales Owen, and Stourbridge. Many thousands are out of employment, and without any visible means of obtaining a livelihood. Large meetings are held daily at Old-swinford, Dudley, Hales Owen, and elsewhere, and, after consulting with each other, the attendants break up into groups and perambulate the neighbourhood, seeking relief. From the extremely low rates of wages given, and the degrading nature of the attempted reduction, which is understood to consist in paying 18s. out of every 20s. really earned by the workmen, they have as yet been the objects of much sympathy, and have generally been kindly relieved where they have applied, and are likely to be, have so far conducted themselves peaceably and with strict propriety. The general feeling of all other classes is that the nailmakers are oppressed, and it is most sincerely hoped that the masters will not be compelled to persevere in imposing the reduction. Under the old system many families were in the habit of standing at the block from twelve to fifteen hours a day to obtain even the bare necessaries of life, and both the mental and bodily constitution is seen down by the evil effects of close confinement, aided by a wretched diet, until all the infirmities of old age are induced before the period when they should naturally attain the vigour of manhood; and the feeble, emaciated, half-clothed, half-fed children, and dirty homes, present a most deplorable contrast to the picture of healthy content for which the cottage of the Englishman was formerly proverbial.

The Board of Customs have, on a proposition of the Inspector-General of the Watergaard department, issued orders dispensing with the boarding of lodgwaiters on vessels laden with corn whenever a pressure of business in the Wa sgruard department may render such a course necessary, and that the amount of such cargoes may be taken from the certified returns of the sworn ser y meters; but it is to be understood that this mode of processing is to be str ctly confined to vessels discharging in the several metropolitan docks, and that, as frequently as practicable, a tidewaiter is to be employed, as hitherto, to take the amount of the cargo on the part of the Customs, as a check upon the City meters.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

ALEXANDRINA must show us the process by which she effects the checkmate. For example, in the Problem in question, mate must be given against the best defence Black can adopt, in four moves only: What was the method of play? "Alexandrina" suggests? Her very pretty diagrams afford us no clue, as we do not show only results

T. E. Winchester.—You have omitted to perceive that if Black, for his second move, take the Kt check (if White then play to R 5th), he is checkmated.

R D M. Problem No. 325, and Enigmas 326 and 370, the accuracy of which you so obstinately impugn are all correct, though evidently somewhat beyond your present chess power

SIR G S.—In such a very elegant as a end game to occur in actual contest

TYRO, Dundee.—We do not reply to ARGUS, LYRE, and others, in our Paper of the 27th ult. You are quite right

R E. Problem No 326 is perfectly correct; the error spoken of is in your calculation

CLERICUS.—If you remember rightly, the key move to Enigma No 349 is Kt ask a K B P (double check). The solution to Enigma No 350, is, R takes Kt.—We have only just now got your Problems No 4 and 5. They are a great advance on your former attempts

G B F, Dundee.—Your problem of three moves is impracticable. That in four, too easy

Q, Glasgow.—Engima No 369 is perfectly correct and the mate practicable in four moves

PATER FAMILIAS.—The regret you express at the rarity of the Rev Mr B Ison a contribution of late years is not a "fair grief," but one participated by all acquainted with that gentleman's profound and charming compositions. We are sorry to say, there is no probability of his adding much more to the admirable collection of Problems for which the Chess community are his debtors. His "farewell" effort, a masterpiece for depth and originality, which he has dedicated to Mr Staunton, is now in our hands, and will shortly appear

TYRO, Bayswater; B T B, Swindon.—You overlook the fact that Black would take the Pawn en passant with his Pawn, discovering check with the rook

M. A CONSTANT READER.—It is ingenious, and if original shall have insertion

J P, Hythe.—The key moves to Mr Eddey's clever Enigma, No 368, are—1. B to K 8 sq; 2. B to K 5th, &c. In Enigma 370 you overlook the equation of Black's Rook at Q Kt 8d when you check with the White Bishop at the second move. Your other solutions are right enough

CAPTAIN ROCK.—Complaints of the delay experienced in procuring the new Chess-men in country places are continually reaching us. We should recommend all parties who find any difficulty in getting them to address a line to the Editor of the Chess-Player's Chronicle, 17, King William-street, Charing-cross

DEVON.—1. There is a volume of Problems called "Chess Studies," published by Longman and Co., 1844, which appears to be the book you want; but, unfortunately, it has no notes. 2. Try Lewis's last Chess treatise. 3. Philidor's pawn play is deserving especial commendation: in other respects, his skill has been ignorantly over-rated

W B. 1. We cannot spare room for the solutions of the enigmas at present. 2. Problem No. 327 is without defence: if White, as you suggest, play 1, P to K B 4th, Black takes it in passing, and discovers check with his Rook

B W F.—No. 1 is too confused and deficient in point. No. 2, quite unintelligible, there being two White Kings on the board, and one of them in check. No 3 is an obvious mate in four moves, by first playing B to K R 4th. Let us see another game or two and be writing them out adopt the improved notation of the "Handbook;" i. e. 1. P to K 4th, instead of 1. P to K 4

SOLUTIONS by CHESSLING, P P P (on 327 and 364), H L, H D M, J S B, P G H, J P, Hythe, H D M, JUVENILIS, LILIAN, DARLTON, BULLAH, W W P, J A W, J R S, M E, HEV C L, REX, I S M, REV H T, D D, Oxford; M D, Aberdeen; THETA, Gottingen; A A D, J T, Teignmouth, M E L, CECIL, J R W, Homeford Chess Club are correct. All others are failures

JUVENILIS. A true bit

I H N.—Much too evident

C M I.—A manifest improvement on your first

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 328.

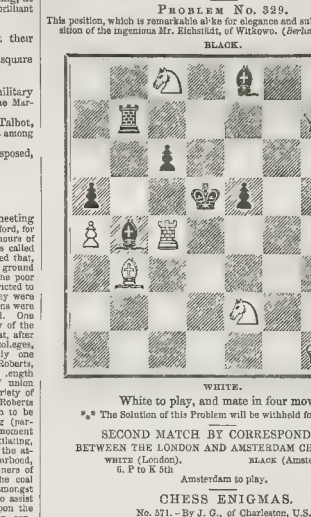
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. K B to K R 3d	Q to nar R 3d (ch)		to B 2d
2. Q takes Q	(a)	3. R to Q 4th (disch)	Anything
	B takes B, or R.	4. Q takes P—Mate.

(a) If B takes B, or P to Kt 3d, White rep lies with R to Q 4th, equally forcing mate in the stipulated number of moves; and in case of any other mode of defence, mates sooner.

PROBLEM NO. 329.

This position, which is remarkable alike for elegance and subtlety, is the composition of the ingenious Mr. Richstidt, of Witkowo. (Berliner Schachzeitung.)

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

 The Solution of this Problem will be withheld for a fortnight.

SECOND MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE, BETWEEN THE LONDON AND AMSTERDAM CHESS-CLUBS.

WHITE (London).	BLACK (Amsterdam).
6. P to K 5th

Amsterdam to play.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 571.—By J. G., of Charleston, U.S.

White: K at his Kt's 8th, R at K B 5th, B at Q B 3d, Kt at K B 6th, Ps at K R 2d and K 4th.

Black: K at his 3d, P at K 4th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 572.—By D. J., an American Amateur.

White: K at Q R 5th, R at Q 2d, B at Q Kt sq, Kt at K R sq; Ps at K 3rd and 5th, and Q Kt 3d.

Black: K at Q B 4th, Kt at Q B 7th, Ps at K Kt 6th and K 3d.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 573.—By the same Author.

White: K at his B 8th, Q at K Kt sq, R at Q 6th and Q B sq, B at K B 7th, Kt at B 7th, P at K R 7th.

Black: K at his 2d, B at Q B 7th, Kt at Q B 3d, P at Q Kt 2d.

White to play, and mate in three moves, without making another piece.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

CHESTER SPRING MEETING.—TUESDAY.

Although the card presented no feature of importance, it was sufficiently well filled to ensure a fair average amount of sport, and, notwithstanding the rain, to attract a large attendance.

The GROSVENOR STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 30 added.—Mr. Rolt's Clothing-wood (Bartholomew), 1. Mr. Howlin's Blister (W. Sharp), 2.

The PALATINE STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 100 added.—Mr. Merry's Baroness (J. Marson), 1. Mr. Greville's Seafield (Flatman), 2.

The MOSTYN STAKES of 10 sovs each.—Lord Chesterfield's ad. ch. f. by Slane, (Bartholomew), 1. Mr. Halford's Mr. Merryman (Mariow), 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 5 sovs each.—Mr. Watt's Puny (Hiett), 1. Mr. Stebbing's Osbaldeston (Basham), 2.

The CHESTERFIELD STAKES of 10 sovs each.—Mr. W. Moseley's Alonzo (Marlow), 1. Mr. S. Lord's Brecon (Flatman), 2.

The OPTIONAL SELLING STAKES of 5 sovs. each.—Mr. Osbaldeston's Sister to Cupid (Charlton), 1. Mr. Padley's Prior of Lanercost (Fenn), 2.

WEDNESDAY.

The SCRAMBLE HANDICAP of 5 sovs. each.—Mr. Jones's the Mesne (J. Evans) 1. Mr. Bell's Ormsby (G. Hatton), 2.

SIXTY GUINEAS, added to a Sweepstakes of 3 sovs each.—Sir C. Monck's Vanguard (Simpson), 1. Mr Jamieson's Tower (J. Evans), 2.

The TRADESMEN'S PLATE of 200 sovs, added to a Handicap of 25 sovs each.—Mr H. Pitt's Mousseer (Dockeray), 1. Mr. Isaac Day's Cockermouth (Crouch), 2.

The DUKE PRODUCE STAKES of 5 sovs. each.—Lord Chesterfield's nd. b. c. by Lanercost, 1. Mr. Howlin's Snilmalia West, 2.

The QUEEN'S PLATE of 100 guineas.—Sir C. Monk's Vanguard, 1. Sir J. Hawley's Fernhill, 2.

TESTIMONIAL TO DR. BROWNLESS.—On Tuesday evening, a numerous meeting took place at the Clarence Hotel, Aldersgate-street, at which William Pritchard, Esq., High Bailiff of Southwark, presided, for the purpose of presenting Dr. Brownless (who in October last received a handsome testimonial from between one and two thousand of his dispensary patients) with a testimonial on his retirement from the office of Physician to the Royal General Dispensary, Aldersgate-street, and the Metropolitan Dispensary, Forest. The testimonial consisted of a memorial, beauti ully illuminated; and of a magnificent piece of silver plate, weighing nearly two hundred ounces, of elaborate workmanship, and bearing an appropriate inscription.

In consequence of the late decision of the synod of Bishops in the question between the Rev. Charles Wagstaff, jun., incumbent of St. Andrew's ..ch at Aberdeen, and the bishop of that diocese, the former has resigned his c ino of a rule.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

His Royal Highness Prince Albert has granted his patronage to the first of the suburban schools of design for artisans, called the North London, and established in Camden-town. His Royal Highness has also graciously contributed £25 towards the funds of the school. This school was opened on the 1st of May, and already nearly 200 working-men and lads have entered themselves on the books. A class for females will be opened immediately

The Marquis of Downshire has commenced the opening of a coal-mine in the locality of his seat at Hillsborough (Ireland). The shaft has already descended a considerable length. It is said that his Lordship also intends to open a copper-mine in his own para, where it appears there is every sign of a plentiful supply of ore.

The extensive mill of a Mr. Thompson, near Trim, in the county of Meath, was totally destroyed by fire on Saturday night last Kirton Lindsey, in Lincolnshire, and Motherwell, in Lanarkshire, N.B., having been constituted post towns, the offices there are now opened for the issue and payment of money orders. The office at Hobbs Point having been removed to Pembroke Dock, money orders are now issued and paid at Pembroke Dock instead of Hobbs Point.

There was a rumour at Rome on the 26th ult. to the effect that new difficulties had arisen between his Holiness and M. de Rothschild concerning the loan. M. de Rothschild, according to this rumour, had paid the first instalment himself, but refused to have the remainder of the loan only on commission. To this course his Holiness refused to consent, as he had received other and more advantageous offers from other quarters; and therefore seemed inclined to refund the sums hitherto received, and to cancel the whole contract with M. de Rothschild, rather than consent to his proposal.

Mrs. Bridget Thornton is now occupying one of the six hospital houses at Bentham appropriated by Collingwood's charity to six of the oldest poor widows of the parish, and her son Thomas, aged 13, is at the same time domiciled in one of the adjoining six houses appropriated to the oldest poor widowers.

The two Chambers of the States General of Holland adopted, on the 24 last., the bill for conferring the regency of the kingdom on the Prince Henry in the event of the minority of the King.

The ceremony of the betrothal of the Prince Royal of Sweden and Norway and the Princess Louise of Holland, daughter of Prince Frederic, the brother of King William II., took place at the Hague on the 30th ult. The ceremony was performed in the palace of Prince Frederic. The King, Queen, and all the Royal family were present. The English Minister at the Hague gave a grand ball in honour of the Prince Royal of Sweden, and the Russian Minister had invited him to a splendid banquet

The ingenious Manchester operative, Michael Lyons, who a short time ago produced a pair of trousers without a seam, has just completed a still more difficult task, having made, on a machine of his own invention, a coat of blue worsted, throughout the whole of which, even to the furnishing of pockets and the fastening of the last button, no needle has been employed. Lyons is in very humble circumstances.

At the Silver-Mine Lime-Works, Linlithgowshire, the property of Robert Aitken, Esq., 3700 tons of stone were recently raised at one blast. The quantity of powder used to detach this immense weight of stones was 3 cwt. This, we believe, is the most extraordinary blast of rock which has ever been effected in Scotland.

The nobility of Rome have caused a medal to be struck in commemoration of the return of his Holiness. This medal bears the effigy of the Holy Father, with his name and the year 1850. On the reverse is the following inscription :—"Pio IX. Pont. Max. Sacris felicter redeunti prid. Idus Apr. MDCCCL. Ob manentem viri restitutam, civirm animes erectos, fortunas reluvatas optimates Romani"

Lord Bloomfield has erected a handsome monument at Newport, the family seat, in the county of Tipperary, to the memory of his late father, Lieutenant-General Lord Bloomfield, G.C.B., of the Royal Artillery, and who was for a long time commandant at Woolwich.

A beautiful cenotaph is about to be erected at Fullarton, in Ayrshire, on the property of his Grace the Duke of Portland, to the memory of the late lamented Lord George Bentinck.

Last week, whilst the Victoria and Albert, Royal yacht, was coaling in Portsmouth harbour, a convict labourer fell overboard, when a second convict, who was but a very indifferent swimmer, jumped after him, in order to save his companion in adversity from a watery grave. At this juncture a rigger named Glover, seeing the danger to which the men were exposed, precipitated himself after them and was successful in saving the lives of both.

On Thursday week, Thomas Taggart, one of the domestics of Grant's Hotel, Dunkeld, caught in the Tay, below Newty le Quarry, a salmon weighing 35 lbs. This, with the rod, is considered a weight unprecedented there. The hook caught the fish by the broad belly-fin, and, after an hour's fine sport, it had at last to be gaffed into the boat.

The Worcester Journal records a cruel joke played off upon a dairyman Some wags awoke him at midnight with a hurried announcement that his best cow was choking. He jumped into his small-clothes, and ran off to save the life of Grummie, when lo! he found a turnip stuck in the spout of the pump.

Last week, on Dunsley, the cottage ornée of Kent Kingdom, Esq., and on Friday Mount Wear House, the residence of John Follett, Esq., both in the neighbourhood of Exeter, were accidentally burned to the ground.

On Sunday afternoon, a fire broke out on the prem ses of Mr. Richard Stevens, flour factor, baker, &c., No. 1, Great Windmill-street, Golden-square, by which much property was destroyed, and the lives of the family much jeopardised. No casualty, however, occurred. The property was insured.

The deputation from the miners of Northumberland and Durham, which had an interview with the Government last week, presented a requisition to Professor Hann, of King's College, on the subject of the principle involved in the furnace paradox, first suspected and given in evidence before the Lords' Committee in the present session. On an investigation of the principle, they believe, will be found explained the cause of many of the explosions in coal-mines.

Nearly £300 have already been subscribed towards placing a window in Salisbury Cathedral to the memory of the much-lamented Dean of Salisbury. The subscription is still progressing.

The total amount paid into the Stamp Office for duty on fire assurances in Scotland during the past year amounted to £64,268. The sums insured on farm stock for the same year amounted to £4 000 326. The sums insured on farming stock in England within the same period amounted to £58,294,239. Of this enormous sum, £9,724,490 has been insured by the Norwich Union Office, and £3 007,353 by the Yorkshire

At the late Flintshire assizes, a thief, who had committed sacrilege by breaking into the parish church at Worthenbury, and stealing various articles, stated, in his defence, that he did it to raise money to get into the police force at Liverpool. He was sentenced to seven years' transportation.

A few days ago a net was put into the Ouse at Bletsoe, and at one haul six pike were taken, which weighed together upwards of 80 lb

The Nottinghamshire Guardian states that Mr. Tanner, of Buckholt, has lost nearly 230 sheep with red and saten sprouted corn, the seeds of which had been steeped in a solution of arsenic

We understand that the annual gathering of the Yorkshire cheesplayers will take place at the Assembly rooms, Leeds, on Wednesday, the 22d instant; and, from the great spirit evinced in connexion with it, we hear that the réunion on this occasion is expected to be one of no ordinary kind

In Perthshire a considerable rise on the let of grass parks this season has taken place, the difference, as compared with last year, ranging from 12 to 20 per cent. This is attributed to the present low price of lean stock, which is fully as much depressed as grass parks are enhanced.

At an inquest held on Saturday before Mr. Herford, the coroner for the borough of Manchester, a verdict of manslaughter was delivered against Joseph Wheeler, a railway officer employed by the Manchester Union, for neglecting to relieve an unfortunate man named Hannon.

Portugal is now garrisoned by the whole of the army which lately fought in Hungary. There are altogether four corps of 40,000 men each. This explains the falling back of the Russian regiments from the Prussian frontier.

The commission on manufactures which sits at the Luxembourg (Paris) has resolved on the abolition of the exemption duty from which the retention of that on dyed silks—advice which will not render the commission very popular at Lyons.

James Deary, convicted at the recent circuit court at Jedburgh, of the murder of William Fairbairn, at Kelso, and sentenced to death, has been respited and will now, it is supposed, be transported for life

A railway excursion from Birmingham to Exeter and back is announced for next week, at a halfpenny per mile. A cheap train is likewise announced from Bristol to Birmingham, the fare being 7s. for 181 miles.

The extensive bakery and stores of Mr. Hall, of Emmskillen, were destroyed by fire on Saturday.

The Risorgimento of Turin of the 30th ult. states that the chivalrous Polish General, Genera. Chrzanowski, has demanded and obtained his disc. arge from the Piedmontese army. He has refused every pecuniary offer, except a small sum for his journey. While the inquiry into the cause of the disaster of Novara was pending, he would accept of no salary; he wrote his own defence, in answer to the attacks he was exposed to on all sides, and gave it to the Government, but would not publish it, in order not to hurt the reputation of some whose names he had been obliged to mention.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.—THE FIRST CONFERENCE OF DEGREES, IN THE HALL OF KING'S COLLEGE.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

IN our Journal of last week we reported, as fully as our limits would allow, the Convocation of the University held on the 1st instant, in the Great Hall of King's College, for the purpose of conferring degrees and honours on such candidates as had passed their examination during the twelve months just expired. We now engrave the very interesting scene—a memorable one, on account of this being the first time the ceremony has been performed in public. The Right Hon. the Earl of Burlington, Chancellor of the University, presided.

The proceedings commenced with the reading of a short report by the Registrar, which stated that in the course of the last academical year her Majesty had been pleased to grant a supplemental charter, enlarging the powers previously conferred on the University. Her Majesty had also, by warrant under her sign-manual, been pleased to place in connexion with the University, in addition to the colleges and institutions previously authorised to issue certificates for degrees in arts and laws, the West of England Dissenters' Proprietary School at Taunton, and Saint Patrick's College at Thurles. During the past year, 167 gentlemen had been admitted to matriculation, of whom 11 had distinguished themselves when under examination for honours in mathematics and natural philosophy, and one had obtained an exhibition; and four had distinguished themselves in classics, one of whom had obtained an exhibition. 25 gentlemen had passed the first examination for the degree of Bachelor of Medicine, of whom one had obtained an exhibition in anatomy and physiology, another in chemistry, and a third in materia medica and pharmaceutical chemistry; several others had distinguished themselves, and obtained gold medals; 13 gentlemen had passed the examination for the degree of Bachelor of Medicine, of whom one had obtained a scholarship; two gentlemen had passed the examination for the degree of Bachelor of Laws, of whom one had distinguished himself in jurisprudence, and had obtained the University Law Scholarship; 53 gentlemen had passed the examination for the degree of Bachelor of Arts, two of whom had obtained the University Scholarships; seven gentlemen had passed the examination for the degree of Master of Arts; eight had obtained the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and one that of Doctor of Laws.

The presentation for degrees then took place, each student being introduced to the Chancellor by the tutor of his own college.

The presentation for honours and prizes came next in the order of proceedings. The names of all candidates who had obtained honours in the course of the past year were read; but those gentlemen only who had gained scholarships, exhibitions, medals, and prizes were presented to the Chancellor.

A deputation of graduates of the University then presented an address to the Chancellor and Senate, to which the Chancellor replied. The deputation then withdrew, and the proceedings terminated.

INDUSTRIAL INVESTMENTS.

A COMMITTEE, to devise some efficient and continuous mode of investing reproductively the Savings of the Middle and Working Classes, has just been appointed by the House of Commons, on the motion of Mr. Slaney.

According to the present Stamp Laws, a man may invest £5000 in land at 2½ per cent. expense; he cannot invest £50 in the same security at a less legal expense than 90 per cent. Freehold security for his savings is legally denied to the comparatively poor. He may invest them, or rather lend them, to a savings-bank, under the guarantee of Government, for a higher rate of interest than is given by ordinary bankers; but this guarantee is given at the cost of the nation, and the prudent man is constantly tempted, on the other hand, to withdraw his savings from a slowly frustifying treasury.

The only present alternative is the Benefit Building Society—a useful class institution, certainly; but, until very lately, based upon most inaccurate data and most erroneous principles, and fruitful of consequent disaster and disappointment. Even under the improved system of permanence, the security, as respects the class of small investors—the security, namely, of house property—is subject to constant fluctuation and depreciation in value. The value of house property—we mean the market value—is contingent upon a variety of circumstances, including taste, opinion, fashion. To-day, the regions of Bloomsbury yield, in estimation, to Belgravia; to-morrow, even the aristocratic Belgravia may succumb to the more recherché and more palatial districts of Hyde Park; and who knows but in the next generation the West End will be identical with the erst Ultima Thule of Bayswater.

While house property is thus inevitably doomed to the fate of depreciation, improvable land must constantly tend, to use a Yankee term of analogy, to "appreciate." Colonisation—the development of neglected waste lands, whether in these islands or in the remotest regions of the British world—is, therefore, not merely a heroical work and a solemn mission delegated to the Anglo-Saxon, but it is the surest, most profitable, and most profitable of investments. It has been estimated by Mr. Griffith, that millions of acres in Ireland, now not returning six shillings of produce per acre, might, by prudent and comprehensive investment, be made to render up as many pounds—increasing the aggregate produce from a few hundred thousand pounds to twenty millions sterling. What has not wise investment done for Chat Moss and the Lincolnshire Fens?

There are many moral as well as politico-economical reasons to deter the capitalist, large or small, from committing his savings, in the shape of share capital, into the hands of land speculators. But it is obviously open to the industrial portion of the community to combine their savings for this great and profitable purpose. It appears to us that the mode in which this might be accomplished is clearly enough indicated in a letter to Earl Grey, who, it seems, has intimated to the writer that, under the present régime, it is not in the power of the Government to facilitate the adoption of the principle in the manner suggested. This, then, leaves the question open. It is one of incalculable importance. The Committee referred to—"the Savings of the Middle and Working Classes Committee"—was nominated on Wednesday week, and consists of the following members:—Mr. Slaney, Mr. John Abel Smith, Mr. Labouchere, Mr. Cardwell, Mr. Greene, Mr. Ewart, Lord James Stuart, Mr. Jas. G. Marshall, Mr. Wilson Patten, Lord Nugent, Mr. Stafford, Sir Robert Ferguson, Mr. Littleton, Mr. John Ellis, and Mr. Frederick Peel.

PARLIAMENTARY PORTRAITS.

THE RIGHT HON. ANDREW RUTHERFURD, M.P. (FOR THE LEITH DISTRICT), LORD ADVOCATE OF SCOTLAND.

MR. RUTHERFURD was born in 1791, entered the High School at Edinburgh, of which Dr. Adams, the well-known author of the "Roman Antiquities," was at that time Principal, in 1799, soon took a lead amongst his fellow pupils, and was awarded the classical gold medal, the highest honour of the school, when he was but fourteen. In 1808 he entered the University of Edinburgh, and became a distinguished member of the Speculative Society, famous as a school of oratory and legal discussion. His contemporaries, amongst others, who afterwards attained distinction in the pulpit, at the bar, or in Parliament, were Lord John Russell and Lord Murray; and amongst his predecessors in the society, were Lord Jeffrey, Mr. Leonard Horner, and Lords Brougham and Lansdowne.

In 1812 Mr. Rutherfurd was called to the Scottish bar, at which, through his thorough knowledge of law, his skill as a conveyancer, and his aptness as an advocate, he soon became known, and was early and continuously successful. So far as his professional avocations admitted, he aided the agitation for the Reform Bill; and when the Whigs came into power, in 1832, he was known as a thorough Liberal, and one of the ablest lawyers at the Scottish bar, and was in that year, in conjunction with Messrs. Jamieson, Skene, Dundas, and Anderson (afterwards Scotch Tory Solicitor-General) appointed a member of the Commission to enquire into the state of Conveyancing, and the entire practice of the Law Courts in Scotland. Between 1832 and 1836, when its labours were completed, the Commission published several parliamentary volumes of reports, in the preparation of which, and especially in regard to conveyancing, Mr Rutherfurd took an active and laborious part. Their value is proved by the fact that they have since formed the foundation of most extensive reforms in the practice of nearly every branch of the law in Scotland.

THE RIGHT HON. ANDREW RUTHERFURD, M.P. (FOR THE LEITH DISTRICT), LORD ADVOCATE OF SCOTLAND.

In 1837, Mr. Rutherfurd, whose ability and complete acquaintance with the law had become known by his services as a member of the Commission, and his further success at the bar, was appointed Solicitor-General, and, in 1839, Lord Advocate. He was then returned, without a contest, for the Leith district of burgns, in the room of Lord Murray, his predecessor in office, and has since, at every election, been returned for the same place, without opposition. At his first election he declared himself an opponent of the immediate repeal of the Corn-laws; but, in 1843, voted with Mr. Villiers' motion for a Committee of the whole House to inquire into their operation, with a view to their repeal; and, in 1846, supported Free-trade.

At the period of Mr. Rutherfurd's first appointment to the office of Lord Advocate, the entire management of the prisons of Scotland was in the hands of the borough magistrates; they were bound to secure all prisoners, and to meet all the charges of the gaols. Not only criminal offenders, but debtors were committed to their keeping, and, in case of escape, the magistrates became liable to the creditors. The then condition of the gaols would now scarce gain belief. There was no classification; no separation of the convicted from those waiting trial; no attention to cleanliness, morality, or health; the prisons were damp, dark, filthy, crowded; certain moral destruction to all who were sent, even for a brief period, within their walls; and, in short, an abomination and disgrace to any civilised country. Mr. Rutherfurd, in concert with Mr. Fox Maule, brought in and carried an Act effecting an entire reform in the supervision, management, and discipline of the prisons; a general, unpaid Prison Board was established, consisting, amongst others, of the Lord Justice General, Lord Justice Clerk, Lord Advocate, the Solicitor-General, and certain noblemen and gentlemen named in the commission, and amongst whom Lord Melville continued to take an especially active part. The corporations of the several boroughs were also empowered to appoint local Prison Boards, subject only to the supervision of the central board. The result has been a complete change in the prisons of Scotland. They are not now behind any others in the kingdom; and the great Penitentiary at Perth has become almost a normal school of prison discipline and management, especially for the reformation and education of juvenile offenders.

Another measure of public importance, to which Mr. Rutherfurd, on taking office, early directed his attention, was the Scotch Bible monopoly. The right to print the Bible in Scotland was reserved exclusively to the Queen's printers. Lord Murray gave no small attention to the subject of the monopoly in 1837, and obtained a committee to inquire into its operation, with a view to introducing a bill for the abolition of the exclusive privilege of the Queen's printers. The way, however, was beset with difficulties; the Government were perpetually wavering between minorities and the smallest possible majorities, and it was quite certain that no measure could be framed which would have satisfied the House that the monopoly could be abolished, and the authentic version of the Scriptures preserved from innovation. The question, therefore, was waiting for Mr. Rutherfurd, when he took his seat in 1839. He at once gave up the idea of an act of Parliament, and pointed out that by Royal prerogative the office of Queen's printer could be put into commission, and that thus, by the appointment of an unpaid board, the monopoly might be abolished, and the authentic version of the Scriptures preserved. The suggestion was at once acted upon. In 1841, the Bible monopoly expired, and the commissioners for exercising the office of Queen's Printer became empowered to grant licenses to print the whole or any portion of the Scriptures to any persons whatever who might give bond for compliance with certain conditions. The practical working of the measure is, that the Secretary of the Board, who, with his readers, are its only paid officers, have the supervision of all publications of the Bible as the sheets pass through the press; they mark every error or alteration from the authorised version; without these are made, the license for publication is not given; but in every instance they are made, and nowhere is more perfect adherence to the established version of the Scriptures to be found than in those printed in Scotland since the abolition of the monopoly. The effect upon the price has been no small boon to the public. Bibles which, under the Queen's printers' monopoly, would have cost twelve shillings, are now sold for about one shilling and sixpence.

Mr. Rutherfurd went out of office in 1841; in 1840 took part with Mr. Fox Maule in his efforts to secure the right of independent spiritual government to the Church of Scotland; and twice brought forward motions for the abolition of the religious tests in the Scotch universities. In 1846 he was elected Lord Rector of the University of Glasgow, and was again appointed Lord Advocate; and in the following year brought in four bills founded upon the recommendations of the Law Commission, doing away with obscure and costly circumlocution, and saving no small amount of expense in the items of drafting, engrossing, stamps, and recording, and effecting an entire change in the practice of conveyancing in Scotland. But his chief measure of law reform was the abolition, in 1848, of the old Scotch Law of Entail, enacted in 1685, and under which entails were settlements in perpetuity that locked up the whole estate, made mortgages impossible, and stood in the way of any family settlements, or any moneys being raised for younger children, except by the costly course of life insurances. Mr. Rutherfurd's bill of 1848 assimilated, with some improvements, the law of entail in Scotland to that of England. Until these reforms were taken in hand by the Lord Advocate, they were admitted to be important, but were held to be impossible; and they would have been so to any one with a less complete knowledge of every point and detail of the matter to be dealt with, or who had less entirely the confidence of the profession and the public. The results of all the measures have amply justified this general confidence. The Entail Act has been taken advantage of to an extent that no one had ventured to predict, and the beneficial effects of the new practice of conveyancing are daily developing themselves. Nor has Mr. Rutherfurd yet given up his course of Law Reforms; he has at present a bill before the House for the Reform of Proceedings before the Supreme Court of Scotland. In 1815, the system of juries in civil actions was first introduced into Scotland. It has never worked well; the practice of requiring unanimity in the jury, contrary to the practice in criminal cases, has given rise to endless appeals and renewals of litigation: to avoid which, the present bill proposes to give the parties a certain discretion as to how their cause shall be tried—they may select their own jury or arbiters from one to seven in number; the trial is to be taken as now before the judge, that the arbiters may have his direction in matters of law; and the decisions are not to be subject to review unless in case of misdirection from the judge on points of law.

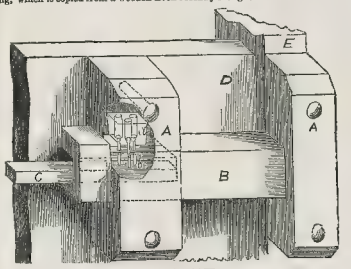
Mr. Rutherfurd has also devoted no small attention to the condition of pauper lunatics in Scotland, who are now left wholly unprovided and uncared for, and last year brought in a bill for the establishment of proper asylums for their protection and treatment. He has also a bill in hand for the general reform of the medical profession, and has been a diligent and active member of the Commission of Inquiry as to the Management and Improvement of the British Museum.

Mr. Rutherfurd has been the maker of his own fortunes—he had no interest to aid him but his own ability; and has worked his way to distinguished eminence in his profession and office in the state, by diligent attention to business, and laborious mastership of the law. Our portrait is from a coloured photograph by Beard.

EGYPTIAN LOCK.

On March 8th, there was read to the Institution of Civil Engineers a very interesting paper "On the Construction of Locks and Keys," by Mr. J. Chubb. The author commenced by stating that the most ancient lock of whose form and construction there is any certain knowledge is the Egyptian, which has been in use upwards of four thousand years. This lock was made more generally known in Western Europe through the French invasion of Egypt, at the beginning of the present century, and is described in M. Denon's great work on that country. It had, however, been previously described by Eton, in his "Survey of the Turkish Empire" (page 224), published in 1798. The evidence of its antiquity is chiefly derived from the figure of one being sculptured among the basso-relievos which decorate the great Temple of Karnac; by this it was shown that during forty centuries the lock had undergone no sensible alteration. This lock and its key were principally made of wood; but, in some instances it is probable they were made of metal.

The construction of the Ancient Egyptian Lock is shown in the annexed drawing, which is copied from a wooden Lock recently brought from Alexandria.



EGYPTIAN LOCK.

The Engraving represents the entire Lock and the mode of attachment. A A are two staples or cleats; the one fastened to the door-post (E), receives the bolt (B); the other is affixed to the door (D), and contains the contrivance for fastening, which consists in the adjustment of a small block (A) into the back of the cleat or staple, the bottom of it being in contact with the top of the bolt, but not resting on it; from the top of this small block, three or more holes, of about 3-16ths of an inch in diameter, are bored to within a quarter of an inch of the bottom, the holes are then continued quite through to about half the size of the upper holes; into these metal pins are inserted, with round flat heads, their lower ends passing into corresponding holes in the bolt; it is then locked. A mortice in the end of the bolt extending beyond the pins admits the key (C), which is furnished with pins pointing upwards, and exactly corresponding with the holes in the bolt; when, therefore, the key is raised, these pins meet those from the little block A, and lift them even with the surface of the bolt, it is then unlocked, and the bolt can be withdrawn. This is shown in the Diagram, by the supposed removal of a portion of the staple or cleat.

This Lock Mr. Chubb stated to be the foundation upon which most of the ingenious inventions of late years have been based, differing only in the forms of the moveable obstructions of the bolt, some of which act vertically, others horizontally—some with a rotatory motion, and many others in an endless variety of ways.

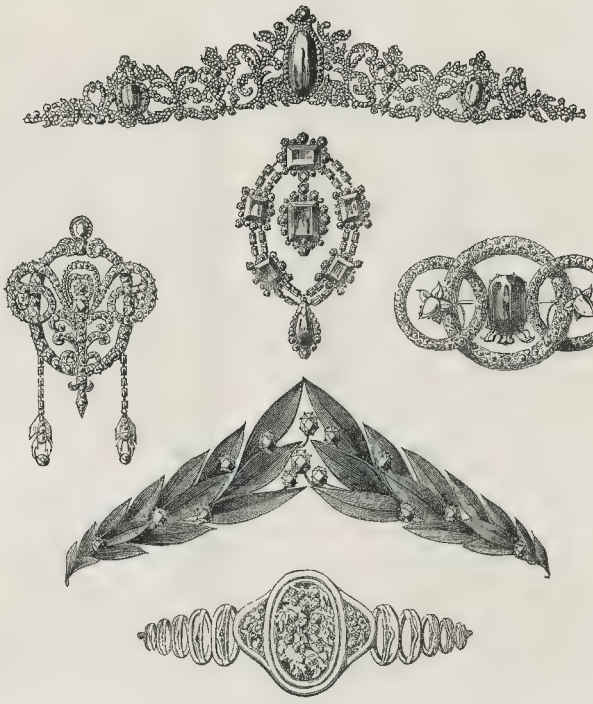
In describing Mr. Chubb's Lock, calculations were made to show the number of different combinations which might be made in it; when it appeared that, with an average-sized key, having six steps, each capable of being reduced in height twenty times, the number of changes would be 86,400. Further, that, as the drill pins of the locks and the pipes of the keys might be made of three different sizes, the total number of changes would be 2,592,000. In keys of the smallest size the total number would be 648,000, whilst in those of the largest size it would be increased to 7,776,000 changes.

The paper was illustrated by a series of diagrams, and a variety of specimens of the locks and keys noticed in the paper; and by a number of Gothic locks and keys of very elaborate workmanship, suitable for ecclesiastical buildings, &c., from Mr. Chubb's works in London. He has judiciously chosen the designs from rich windows, gable-crosses, and other embellishments of a florid class.

CORDINGLY'S FLOATING BATH.

A simple and ingenious novelty is now preparing for the convenience and comfort of those who may wish to enjoy a private bath in mid-day, on the Serpentine, or elsewhere. It is a boat, as represented in the Engraving, easily managed by one man. The bathing-place is situate at the stern, and is about four feet six inches wide, by six feet long, and from two feet six inches to five feet deep; the depth being regulated by the man, who, by working the windlass, can hoist or lower the bottom of the bath with great facility, as, being constructed principally of wood, the parts which slide into each other, like the tubes of a telescope, are so nearly buoyant as to be adjusted with little or no effort. Adjoining the Bath is a small but convenient place for preparation; the whole being enclosed with curtains. We understand it to be the invention of a working shipwright, who has registered it for three years, and intends it for sea, river, or lake bathing, as, from its lightness, it can be used for rowing; and the Bath being made to hoist up even with the bottom, the boat can be allowed to take the ground at any time without injury. We think such a convenience would be a delightful adjunct to many parks and pleasure-grounds, with a river or lake.

CORDINGLY'S FLOATING BATH.



JEWELS PRESENTED TO MADAME GRISI.

JEWELS PRESENTED TO MADAME GRISI.

During the stay of Madame Grisi at St. Petersburgh, the Emperor, on different occasions, presented the cantatrice with some costly and magnificent jewels, consisting of a tiara of diamonds and opals; and several brooches thickly set with diamonds, the larger gems being rubies and emeralds. Added to these is a richly-enamelled bracelet, set with diamonds: there are, besides, several rings of great value, and ear-rings too minute in detail to engrave. Some of the jewels were presented when Madame Grisi sang at the Imperial Palace, at the ceremony of christening the grandson of the Emperor. The "Norma Wreath," an ovation from the public, is very beautiful. The leaves are enamelled on gold; the berries are brilliants. We have engraved the two wreaths, brooches, and bracelets. The brooches are about half the size of the originals the tiara and wreath about quarter size.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

On Saturday, "I Due Foscari" was given for the first time this season, Coletti, Signora Parodi, and the new tenor, Bancardé, filling the principal parts. In the execution of his first air, "Oh! bella Venezia," Signor Bancardé fully realised the expectations which his previous performances had led us to entertain; and in the trio of the second act he quite surprised us by the energy and animation with which he sang and acted a parting scene hitherto ineffective. Mdlle. Parodi has few rivals in characters of a passionate nature, such as that of Hleira. She is evidently imbued with the spirit of Byron's Marina, and her performance won for her warm and well-merited applause. Coletti's performance of the broken-hearted old man is too well known, and too well appreciated by the English public, to need comment. On Saturday he fully equalled any of his previous impersonations. In the concluding scena he was encored, and recalled with the greatest enthusiasm.

After the opera, the overture to "Guillaume Tell" was played with such effect as to produce an unanimous call for its repetition. Then came the grand choregraphic feature of the night, "Les Trois Graces." Paul Taglioni's new divertissement. Nothing more beautiful can be imagined than the aspect of the stage at the rising of the curtain. On a green slope, sacred to the ruling deity of the "fantastic toe," groups of nymphs are discovered reposing; suddenly they awake, and fall into graceful poses. From the opening bowers they are joined by the Three Graces, Carlotta Grisi, Marie Taglioni, and Ferraris, who give you the living representation of the principal groups limned from the days of Praxiteles to those of Canova: the effect is truly bewitching. The different pas each subsequently performs are equally classic. The most attractive choregraphic display falls to the lot of Carlotta Grisi, who, although without a rival in coquettish dancing and graceful bounds, is certainly inferior in the statuesque poetry of dancing to Amalia Ferraris. Marie Taglioni also won her full share of approbation, and displayed great improvement and wondrous agility.

The divertissement concludes with a pas d'ensemble, which is accompanied by the whole corps de ballet, and which embodies the idea of the poet—

Junctæque nymphis gratiæ decentes,
Alterno terram quatiunt pede.

The general effect conveyed cannot be described; this "Pas de Trois" is much superior to the "Pas des Déesses" and the famous "Pas de Quatre," for it marks the whole improvement of dancing which lately has been immense. In a word, it is one of those sights which can only be seen at Her Majesty's Theatre.

On Tuesday "Ernani" was given, and Signor Lorenzo, Parodi, and Belletti sang and acted in a very remarkable manner. Belletti was encored, and Parodi was received at last with general cheering. Ernani is Mr. Sims Reeves' best part, and he was warmly and repeatedly applauded throughout.

In a lyrical point of view, the event of the week was the first appearance of Sontag and Bancardé in the "Puritani," with the two unrivalled bassi—Coletti in Ricardo, and Lablache as Giorgio: the cast was certainly such as to excite the most sanguine anticipations.

HAYMARKET.

The "Catspaw," by Mr. Douglas Jerrold, a new comedy long in preparation, and from which we had expected much, was produced on Thursday, and, as might have been expected from the title, proved to be sufficiently sarcastic and full of brilliant points. This commendation, however, is deserved by the dialogue rather than by the story, which is slender, both in character and incident. The hero is personated by Mr. Keeley, who, under the name of Snowball, is the prey of a parcel of schemers, his household physician being the chief. Snowball is hair to a Chancery suit or a widow, Mrs. Peachdown (Miss Reynolds); and dreading matrimony worse than law, prefers the suit to the lady. Mrs. Peachdown herself is willing to compromise the matter in the first instance, but being compelled to rest content with an amicable suit, which at last turns up in her favour just as Snowball has lost his last chance of effecting a reconciliation, takes her revenge. Doctor Fetgoose (Mr. James Wallack), to whom so much of the mischief is owing, shares in the wreck of his patient's fortune, but, nevertheless, trusts in the resources of his own genius for the future. On this character, as well as that of Snowball his victim, Mr. Jerrold has expended most of his strength; but, with respect to the former, the jest becomes dull from repetition, and is exhausted before the end of the play. Mr. Keeley's part was of a more grateful kind; and the manner in which he contrives to escape from his tormentors, by feigning rheumatism, if not new, amusing. Mr. Webster had also a character, one Coolcard, who, with many allusive plays many parts; but it is difficult to point out his exact bearing on the rest of the play. The pilot is not without merit, and concerns the loves of one Applyface, a drummer (Mr. Buckstone), and Rosemary, an abigail (Mrs. Keeley). Getting drunk and overstaying his leave of absence, he is saved from suffering as a deserter, being bought out of the army by the faithful girl. The mirth and pathos blended in the situation relieved the bitterness of sarcasm which was the staple of the general dialogue. The brilliancy of the author's wit will sustained the first three acts, but the want of action began then to be felt, and the scene seemed to labour altogether; we must record it as a comedy of conversation, rather than as one of intrigue and human interest. We laugh at the jokes, but care little for the persons. The author, however, has infused into the piece where he fails to keep up the spirit of his plot The appause, which was frequent during the first three acts, was, at the conclusion, universal. The principal performers received their curtain before the curtain, and Mr. Jerrold himself was called upon to acknowledge the gratulations of a crowded house.

MR. J. WALLACK, AS DR. FETGOOSE, IN THE NEW PLAY OF THE "CATSPAW," AT THE HAYMARKET THEATRE.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Even in the palmy days of French Grand Opera, when the lamented Falcon was the Valentine, and Dorus Gras, then in her prime, was Marguerite de Valois, Nourrit and afterwards Duprez, Raoul, and Levasseur Marcel, it may be doubted whether the ensemble in the execution of Meyerbeer's "Huguenots" approached that of Covent Garden at the present period. Grisi has wonderfully improved in Valentina: last season, although full of energy, it was wanting in contrast and repose, especially in the terror, suspense, and desperation of the scene in which the assassins of St. Bartholomew's Eve is arranged by her father, St. Bris, and his partisans; but Grisi has performed in this opera at St. Petersburgh ten times, and has materially improved in the details of the delineation, and, from the day we left Marcel, to the death scene, she excites the strongest emotions of fear and pity, frequently electrifying them by a hurricane of passion. Mario's Raoul is also more matured in conception and finished in execution. One of his best changes is the tender and delicate tone in the romance, "Ah, quel bianca," with the alto accompaniment, so charmingly played by Hill. The gallantry of the duo with the Queen, Mario now depicts more prominently. In the septuor of the third act, the brilliant outbreak on the high notes of confidence in Raoul's just cause, was never so fearlessly displayed by Mario; it caused the whole house to "rise at him," and cruelly, but irresistibly, to insist upon the repetition of the phrase, even long after the double chorus of the dispute had begun. Gosta resisting the demand until the band and voices were drowned by the excited audience. The dramatic passion in the duo between Valentina and Raoul was sustained by Grisi and Mario with overpowering effect; the acting on both sides, whilst the muffled funereal sounding of the tocsin was heard, was terribly in earnest. The hesitation of Raoul, divided between his Valentina and the calls of duty, was depicted by Mario in the most impressive pantomime. The duet of Fornes is quite a new creation; it is as opposite in conception to that of Sarasse as the Italian version of Marini was different from that of the French artist. Formes personifies the religious idea: he is "the statue of iron, in its strength half cast, among the aisles of some Protestant temple," as George Sand has felicitously imagined "the old serving-man—rude, intolerant, faithful to his master, cruel, irritable, a fanatic in cold blood, and tranquilly sublime in martyrdom." What George Sand has written, Formes realises; and it is only to be desired that his singing were equal to his acting; his "Pif Pa!" was admirable, but he was too kind in the duo with Valentina, and thorough drags the time too much. Madame Castellan is to be comp imented on her vast improvement in Marguerite since she sung it in 1848: she rendered the second scene of the first act extremely interesting. The Page of Mdlle. de Meric was so very well acted and sung, except in the second scene, that she cannot fail to improve in this her first piece. Tagliafico's St. Bris was stern and unbending; the Nevers of Massol gay and chivalrous; the Huguenot Soldier of Lavia jovial and daring; and the important secondary parts judiciously sustained by Mrs. Sohl, Polonini, Tagliafico, Rache, &c. The intricate concerted music, and the choral pieces which are so elaborated throughout this lyric masterpiece, were carefully executed—amongst which are the orgie and duel-trio, the oath of reconciliation in the first act, the chorusses of dispute in the second act, the "Conjuration and Benediction of the Pomarda" (executed rapturously) in the third, and the Scale in the fourth.

On Tuesday night the "Huguenots" was repeated; and on Saturday, Rossini's "Zora."

For the extra night on Thursday the first act of Rossini's "Donna del Lago" was performed, with Gras, Mdlle. de Meric, Mario, Zelger, Tagliafico, Polonini, Soldi, and Tamberlik; and the whole of Weber's "Der Freyschutz" with Madame Castellan, Mdlle. Vera, Mdlle. Cotti, Signori Maralti, Mei, M. Massol, and Herr Formes.

DRURY-LANE.

On Saturday the season closed, on which occasion Mr. Anderson addressed the audience, confessing a failure, charging the press with coolness towards his experiment, and complaining of the want of good dramatic literature. These representations are either absurd or untrue. Mr. Anderson's management was, at the beginning, encouraged both by the public and the press; but he soon lost his way, by losing sight of "the legitimacy of the national drama," which he still professes a desire to uphold. As to any want of an efficient dramatic literature in these times, those who are best acquainted with the subject are the readiest to acknowledge that dramatic genius and talent of all kinds superabounds. What is wanted of sufficient judgment and means to deal with it liberally, select from it wisely, and produce it with such accessories as are demanded by the improved tastes of a modern audience.

NEW STRAND.

A new farce, entitled "Not to be done," was produced on Monday. It is a piece distinguished for its whimsicality, being, in plot and treatment, of a most arbitrary character. Mr. Leigh Murray, as Cool, appears in the piece, which is under entirely new conditions, personating (by way of disguise) a drunken cobbler and a snuffy old woman. To this necessity he is reduced in order to counteract a fraud attempted by a friend, Jonas Downing (Mr. H. Farren), in regard to a wager, by which the one who remains single by a certain day is to lose a hundred pounds to the other, if married. Downyoung, determined "not to be done," trumps up a previous marriage with a scant-girl, whose pretended parents shock the young man's uncle by their coarse and vulgar manners. These offensive personages are the cobbler and the old woman already alluded to. Mr. L. Murray's portraits, though highly coloured, were artistic, and evidence a variety of talent in the actor well calculated to increase his popularity. The farce was successful.

ADELPHI.

A comic drama, called "The White Sergeants, or the Butterpilk Volunteers," was produced on Monday. The title explains the character of the piece. The wives of some tradesmen follow their husbands in military attire to a yeomanry meeting, where meet with some Hussar officers, who make love to them, but are outwitted by the adventurous white sergeants, who contrive to bring the Hussars' own wives to the spot and thus inspire them with jealousy of the Yeomanry. On outline we have thus indicated is filled up with certain apparently subordinate characters, but who really help to support the fun and interest of the plot An ill-humoured boots (Mr. Wright) and an amorous chambermaid (Miss Wostgar) have more than one effective scene; while a fancy baker (Mr. Munyard), and a tailor of the name of Snipp, according to their trades, (Miss Kathleen Fitzwilliam), are entrusted with a strong situation or two, and several very pretty songs. The piece is picturesquely mounted, and was successful.

ST. JAMES'S.

On Monday, M. Alexandre Dumas' comedy of "Les Demoiselles de St. Cyr," reduced from five to four acts, was performed, with M. Lafont in Roger, Vicomte de Saint Chevron. The piece was mounted with great splendour. Mdlle. Rose Deschamps, the demoiselle, Charlotte de Merlan, was charmingly impersonated by Mdlle. Nathalie; and, indeed, in all its parts, the play was admirably acted. The house was full.

SOUTH AFRICAN EXHIBITION.

Mr. Roualeyn Gordon Cumming, the author of "A Narrative of Adventures in the Deserts and Forests of Africa," has given his readers the opportunity of testing the correctness of his descriptions by inspecting, at the Chinese Gallery, Hyde Park Corner, a sort of plenary exposition of the hunting trophies, native arms, and costumes brought home by him from the far interior of South Africa. Here are in abundance skins and heads and entire skeletons of elephants, the head and horns of the rhinoceros, with the feet and other limbs and skins of both; with whatsoever may bear witness to the adventurer's acquaintance with the hippopotamus, the giraffe, the buffalo, the quagga, the gnoo, the bison, the boo, the brek ox, the eland, the oryx, the antelope, the gnu, the sea-sykyy, the koodoo, the waterbuck, the reit buck, the rhooye and vaal rhubok, the bleshok, and other animals too numerous and difficult to name. There also may be seen the arms and costumes of savage kings and warrior chiefs, according to their tribes, with the bows, quivers, and poisoned arrows used by the Boejesmen. Altogether, the Exhibition is both interesting and instructive, and will repay a morning's investigation.

COLOSSEUM AND CYCLORAMA.—These Exhibitions were honoured on Saturday by a visit from his Royal Highness Prince Albert, their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, Princess Alice, attended by Lieutenant-Colonel Alexander Gordon and Mr. Birch. His Royal Highness was pleased to express himself highly gratified with the various features of both establishments.

A beautiful stained glass window has been erected at the east end of the south aisle of Worcester Cathedral as an obituary memorial of the deceased lady of the Rev. Allen Wheeler, Precentor of the Cathedral; and also in commemoration of the completion of the fiftieth year of his ministerial service as one of the minor canons of that estab ishment.

The British and North American Royal Mail Steam-packet Company have just added another fine new vessel to their fleet, and it is stated to be built upon a very superior model for fleetness of sailing. She is named the Asia, and will leave Liverpool for Boston on the 18th instant.

IRELAND.

ANOTHER ROYAL VISIT TO IRELAND.—The Freeman's Journal contains the following:—"In a communication lately received, through Sir George Grey, by the directors of the Chester and Holyhead Railway, relative to his Royal Highness Prince Albert's visit to the tubular bridge, accompanied by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and their suite, we think it is declined; but we now announce to our readers the gratifying intelligence that her Majesty intends paying a visit to her loyal Irish subjects this summer, accompanied by her illustrious Consort and the Prince of Wales, making the line of railway her route to Ireland, visiting the stupendous structure, the Britannia Bridge, and its locality."

LORD GOUGH.—A public dinner is about to be given to Lord Gough by the corporation of Clonmel. His Lordship stopped to lunch at the country seat of Mr. Blanconi, the large car proprietor, on his way to Rathcoven, his Lordship's family seat. On his arrival at his home, he was met by his tenantry, with bonfires and other joyous tokens of welcome and respect, to which his Lordship responded by an expression of his warm thanks, and ordered several barrels of beer to reach his welcomers.

EMIGRATION FROM IRELAND.—The Cork Constitution thus refers to the progress of emigration from that port, which appears to be greater than from Dublin, whence the stream pours on without any symptom of cessation:—"Hundreds of farmers and peasantry continue to leave our quays daily for the United States. Few comparatively select the British colonies. On Wednesday the British Queen and Garland for Boston, and the Queen for New York, sailed with emigrants, and on Thursday the Alarm sailed for Quebec. Several vessels are in port preparing for sailing, and there is little doubt that all of them will obtain their regulated number. Emigration from this country is not confined altogether to the lowest order of the population, for occasionally men of high position and education take their departure, with families and a family, who had resided in the neighbourhood of Bandon, left for America."

STEAM NAVIGATION TO AMERICA.—The eminent success which has attended the establishment of Cunard's line of steamers between Liverpool and America, and the daily increasing trade between the two countries, together with the want of an extension of such communication between other parts of the United Kingdom, have resulted in the commencement of a new line from Ireland. The first steamer, which, it is said, will be despatched in August merely a preliminary or experimental trip, is announced to sail from Galway for New York on the 1st of June next.

DEPEDAL.—Saturday last, at the meeting of the Repeal Association on Monday, Mr. John O'Connell said that the Pope, on his restoration, would be to have an Irish body-guard formed; but that the answer of the British Government was, that such a guard when formed should not be employed to resist an insurrection should it break out at Rome, and that the British Government should appoint the officers; and he defied this to be contradicted. The rent for the week amounted to £222 10s. 6d.

SNOW IN THE MOUNTAINS.—The mountains of Wicklow and Dublin, within near sight of the metropolis, are now thickly bordered with snow.

EXTRAORDINARY OUTRAGE.—On Sunday last, while the Rev. Mr. O'Rourke and the Rev. Mr. Colgan were celebrating mass at the Whitefriars-street Chapel, Dublin, a man named Patrick M'Mahon suddenly approached the altar and struck each of the rev. gentlemen a desperate blow on the head with a heavy bludgeon, which knocked them down, and inflicted severe injury. The blow was instantly repeated, and would, no doubt, have proved fatal, but for the prompt interference of the police-station. The man is said to be a lunatic, and to have been before in custody as a dangerous maniac. Two medical gentlemen were in immediate attendance on the clergymen. The bludgeon was a most murderous weapon of whitethorn, and thickly knotted. The wretched lunatic, Francis Patrick Mahon, who, it appears, is deaf and dumb, was brought before the magistrate at the police-office, on Monday, and the usual long investigation of the case, was sent for trial at the next assizes. Dr. M'Sweeny, the medical witness who was examined, stated that he attended both the reverend gentlemen, and that the severe nature of the wounds on the head of each, he considered, although there was no fracture, that their lives were in danger.

SAILORS' ORPHAN GIRLS' EPISCOPAL SCHOOL AND ASYLUM.—The annual meeting of this society took place on Monday, at the offices of the Naval and Military Bible Society, Sackville-street, Piccadilly; Captain the Hon. F. Maude, R.N., in the chair. The chairman, in a brief address, urged the duty of pointing out in very brief but forcible terms the many claims the sailors' orphans had on the support of the charitable, more especially of the British public, who owed their very existence to the exertions of the brave bands and loyal naval service. (Hear, hear.) The report was then read. It stated that for the last seven years there had always been a debt incurred, amounting to about £71 per annum. The committee, at their meeting of last year, had to record the payment of the debt then existing to £35, and they had now the satisfaction of announcing that it was entirely liquidated, and a balance was left in the bankers' hands. An appeal made to the public after the lamented death of her late Majesty the Queen Dowager (by which this society had lost their best and kindest supporter), had resulted in the receipt of 100 guineas. Of the twenty orphan children received into the asylum, thirteen only had been brought into the new house, five having been placed in eligible situations, and two having returned to their friends. The receipts for the past year amounted to £653, and the expenditure to £653, leaving a balance of £20. A motion for the adoption of the report was then carried unanimously. The chairman expressed his regret that no asylum for such an object should possess such limited means, and alluded to the fact of there being only fifteen inmates as a proof their crippled resources. Resolutions founded on the report were then submitted to the meeting and carried. After a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS FOR THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The English Funds have been inanimate during the week, notwithstanding that Thursday was setting day for the May account. On Monday the opening price was 97¼, and the closing one 97¼, after having been 97⅝. Improving on Tuesday to 97⅝ to ¾ for Money and time, closing at 97⅝ for Money. Opening at the same price on Wednesday, a decline to 97⅝ soon followed, and, without material change, the close on either day was the same. Continuations were done at ⅛ to ¼ per cent, according to the credit of the parties. The settling on Thursday passed off without difficulty, and prices remained without material change, the market, however, being firmer. The Unfunded Debt continues in demand, and the terms of the public's indisposition to purchase Stock at the present high prices, while Continental affairs remain so unsettled, being general. A large sale of Reduced, on behalf of an insurance company, slightly affected the market on Tuesday, making the quotation a point below its relative value. The closing prices of the week are—for Bank Stock, ——; Reduced, 94¾; Consols, 95¾; New 3½ per Cent. Annuities, 97; Long Annuities, to expire Jan., 1860, 8⅛; India Stock, 266; India Bonds, 99 pm; Exchequer Bills, under £1000, 92 pm; Consols for Account, 96; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 71 pm; Ditto, £500, June, 71 pm; Ditto, Small, June, 71 pm.

In the Foreign Stock business has been limited within very narrow bounds, with fluctuations proportionately trifling. Danish Scrip has improved from ⅝ to ¾ premium; Mexican has scarcely varied a fraction; Peruvian closes a shade lower; Spanish is dull at 19¼ for New Active, on account of about 4 upon the week's prices; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents quote the same as on Saturday, but the Four per Cents are better by ¼ per cent. The last values of the week are—for Brazilian Bonds, 86⅝; Ditto, New, 1829 and 1839, 85¾; Danish Bonds, Five per Cent., 99¾; Ditto, Small, 6 pm; Ditto, Three per Cent., 1846, for Jan. Coupons, 28¾; Ditto, Account, 28¾; Peruvian Bonds, Four per Cent., Account, 79; Ditto Deferred, 30; Russian Bonds, Four-and-a-Half per Cent., 99½; Ditto, Scrip, 2¾ p; Spanish Bonds, Five per Cent., 1840, Account, 17¼; Ditto Three per Cent. Account, 37½; Venezuela Bonds, Deferred, 12½; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cent., 53½; Ditto, Four per Cent., 85¾.

There continues but little doing in Shares, and prices remain without any symptoms of permanent improvement. Closing figures are—Aberdeen, 7¼; Buckinghamshire, 16⅛; Caledonian, 7¼; Ditto, New, £10 Preference, 8⅛; East Anglian, £5, 5s. and £2, 5s. and D.; Eastern Counties, 7¼; Ditto, New, Preference, Six per Cent., 11¼; Ditto, Ditto, No. 2, 8 pm.; Great Northern, 6; Ditto, Half, 8, Six per Cent., 14; Ditto, Five per Cent., Preference, 10¼; Great Western, 59¼; Lancaster and Carlisle, 81; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 35; Ditto, Quarters, 7; Ditto, Fifths, 10; dis.; Ditto, Tenths, 2½; Ditto (West Riding Union), 2½; Leeds and Bradford, 88; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 79; Ditto, Preference, Five per Cent., 87; London and North-Western, 101; Ditto, New, Seven per Cent., 13; London and South-Western, 56; Midland, £50 Shares, 14; Ditto, Consol. Bristol and Birm., Six per Cent., 119¾; Norfolk, Extension, 17⅛; North British, 7¾; North Staffordshire, 7¼; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 15; Scottish Central, 12; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 12½; Ditto, G.N.E. Preference, ⅜; York and North Midland, 15¾; Orleans and Bordeaux, 2¾; Paris and Orleans, 29¾.

Intelligence of the payment of the Greek quotation having been received on Friday, Consols advanced nearly one-half per cent. The Three per Cents were done at 96 to ⅞, and the New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents 97¾. Bank Stock, 203½; India Stock, 266; New Annuities, to 1924, and Exchequer Bills, 66s to 71s pm. In Foreign Bonds and Railway shares very little doing.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE, Friday. The arrivals of English wheat for our market this week, coastwise and inland to 1916 quarters, by land carriage they have materially fallen off. To-day the show of samples of both red and white was trifling, and the few parcels offering sold at an advance of 2s per quarter. Foreign wheat has met a fair sale at 2s per quarter. Only 2230 quarters of foreign wheat have reached us since Monday, and the supply of that article is comparatively small. The trade rules firm, as an increasing demand in value of 1s per quarter. Barley was in short supply, and steady inquiry, at 1s per quarter more money. Beans, peas Indian corn and flour were held for rather more money. Arrivals—English: wheat, 1910; barley, 230; malt, 3030; oats, 1370; flour, 4970 sacks; wheat, 3230; barley, 760; oats, 3490 quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 32s to 43s; ditto, white, 41s to 49s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 28s to 41s; ditto, white, 41s to 43s; rye, 30s to 32s; grinding barley, 22s to 23s; distilling ditto, 22s to 24s; malting ditto 24s to 26s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 44s to 54s; brown ditto, 40s to 46s; Kingston and Ware, 48s to 54s; Chevalier, 52s to 54s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 14s to 16s; potato ditto, 16s to 19s; Lincoln and Cork, black, 13s to 14s; ditto, white, 15s to 15s; thick beans, new, 22s to 23s; ditto, old, 25s to 26s; grey peas, 28s to 29s; maple, 24s to 26s; white, 25s to 28s; boilers, 28s to 30s per quarter. Town-made flour, 32s to 37s; Suffolk, 27s to 29s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 27s to 30s per sack.

Foreign.—Dantzic red wheat, —s to —s; white, —s to —s, barley, —s to —s, oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s, peas, —s to —s, per quarter. Flour, American, 20s to 23s per barrel; Canada, 20s to 23s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—The demand for most articles has somewhat improved, and last week's prices are well supported.

Linseed, English, sowing, 54s to 56s; Baltic, crushing, 40s to 42s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 38s to 44s; hempseed, 38s to 39s per quarter; coriander, 16s to 18s per cwt; brown mustard-seed, 9s to 11s; white ditto, 6s to 8s; tares, 3s 6d to 4s 6d per bushel; English carraway-seed, 30s to 34s; Dutch ditto, 28s to 30s per last; rapeseed cakes, English, £9 0s to £10 0s; ditto, foreign, £8 0s to £7 10s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, £4 0s to £4 5s per ton; canary, 68s to 70s per quarter; English rape oil, —l. to —l. per cwt; linseed cakes, £3 5s to £3 10s per ton; linseed oil, —l. to —l. per cwt.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 6d to 8½d; of household ditto, 4d to 5½d per 4lb. loaf.

Provisions.—Wheat, 36s 11d, barley, 21s 6d; oats, 14s 7d; rye, 19s 11d; beans, 24s 8d; peas, 25s 4d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat 1s 6d; barley, 1s 0d, oats, 1s 0d; rye, 1s 0d; beans, 1s 6d; peas, 1s 6d.

Tea.—Public sales of about 14 000 packages have been held this week. About 3000 packages have sold, at, in some instances a slight fall in prices.

Sugar.—The West India market rules steady, and prices are fairly supported. Mauritius qualities, as well as inferior Bengal parcels have given way 6d per cwt. Refined goods are in moderate request. Brown lumps, 48s to 48s 6d; good ditto, 50s to 50s; good and fine, 51s to 52s; fine pale, 53s to 54s per cwt.

Coffee.—Ceylon about 1100 bags good ordinary to fine Cheriton have changed hands, at 40s to 40s 6d per cwt. Most other kinds of coffee are quite as dear as last week.

Rice.—The market is firm, and prices are well supported in every instance.

Provisions.—Notwithstanding that the supplies of foreign butter are large, the demand for that article is steady, as fully last week's prices. Fine new milk Friesland, 78s to 79s; fine Holstein and Kiel, 72s to 74s; and other sorts, 48s per cwt, and upwards. Bacon more business doing in old Irish bacon, but at irregular prices. A few small parcels of new fourth Derks have arrived, and sold at 64s to 65s per cwt. New Limerick is offering for the next three months at 70s per cwt., at which figure we have no buyers. English butter is very dull in sale, and rather lowerto purchase. Fine Dorsets, 96s to 100s per cwt; good ditto, 80s to 92s per cwt; fresh, 74s to 11s per dozen lb. We have no change to notice in the va.ue of Irish bacon, the demand for which is steady. Fine mild cured, landed, 52s to 56s: heavy, 48s to 49s, small Limerick, 46s to 48s per cwt. A few sales have taken place on board, at 49s to 50s per cwt. Small Waterford hams are quoted at 60s per cwt. Irish lard is selling at 50s to 52s; and Dogs, 48s per cwt. Hams are very slow in sale.

Potatoes.—The demand for potatoes is steady, at last week's quotations. P C. on the spot, 30s 6d to 37s; and for forward delivery, 32s 6d to 38s 6d per ton. Town tallow, 43s 6d to 44s per cwt, last cash.

Oils.—Linseed oil has given way 30s per ton. Otherwise, the demand is exceedingly inactive, at barely stationary prices.

Spirits.—Brandy, the stock of which is still increasing, moves off heavily, on somewhat lower terms. Fine Jamaica rum is quite as dear as last week: but the inferior qualities are lower. Fine old corn spirits have sold at 2s 10d per gallon.

Hay and Straw.—Meadow hay, £3 8s to £3 10s; clover ditto, £3 0s to £4 10s; and straw, £1 1s to £1 4s per load.

Wool.—The public sales are progressing steadily. About 8000 bales have changed hands, as in whom instances, a slight reduction in the quotations.

Potatoes.—Prime qualities are quoted at 120s to 130s per ton. In other kinds very little is doing, on lower terms. About 1000 tons have arrived from abroad since our last report.

Coals (Friday).—Brown, 12s 6d; Lambton, 15s 6d; Casson, 14s 9d; Gordon, 13s; Denison, 12s 6d; Ross, 13s; Goslerth, 13s 6d per ton.

Hops (Friday).—Although the holders of most kinds of hops, especially old parcels, have somewhat relaxed in their pretensions exceeding a little business is doing in our market. The nearest quotations are as follows:—

New Mid and East Kent pockets, £6 0s to £10 0s; New Weald of Kent ditto, £5 0s to £8 0s; New Sussex ditto, £4 10s to £7 10s; Farnham, £10 0s to £12 0s; Yearling Kents, £3 3s to £5 5s; Yearling Sussex, £3 3s to £3 15s; Old hops, £1 0s to £3 0s.

Smithfield (Friday).—For the limited number to-day was heavy, supplies with beasts, in full average condition. For all breeds, owing to the limited attendance of buyers, the trade was dull, at a very little variation from our last quotations. In the prices of 2d per 8lbs, and a clearance was not effected. The numbers of sheep were not quite so large as those noticed on Friday last. The mutton trade was somewhat active, at full rates of currency, the prices of old Downs out of the wool realising readily 4s 2d per 8 lbs. We had a steady sale for lambs, the supply of which was moderate, at fully last week's quotations. In calves next to nothing was being doing, at barely the late decline in value. Pigs were very dull. Milch cows were almost nominal, at from £14 to £18 each, including their sucklings.

Beef, 2s 6d to 3s 8d; second quality, 2s 2d to 2s 6d; inferior beasts, 2s 0d to 2s 2d; prime large oxen, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; prime small ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d.

Mutton, 2s 8d to 3s 8d; second quality, 3s 0d to 3s 4d; prime large sheep, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; prime small ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d.

Veal, 2s 4d to 3s 4d; large hogs, 2s 2d to 2s 6d; small ditto, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; sucking calves, 4s 6d to 5s 6d; and small porkers, 3s 8d to 4s 6d.

Lamb, 4s 6d to 5s 8d. Suckling calves, 18s to ——.

Head of cattle at Friday's market:—Beasts, 2,600; sheep, 23,000; calves, 120; pigs, 270. Foreign supplies: Beasts, 263; sheep, 1,000.

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday).—

Per 8lb by the carcase:—Inferior beef, 2s 10d to 3s 2d; middling ditto, 2s 2d to 2s 4d; prime large ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; small ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; large pork, 2s 2d to 2s 4d; prime ditto, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; inferior mutton, 2s 4d to 3s 0d; middling ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; prime ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; veal, 2s 8d to 3s 4d; small pork, 3s 4d to 4s 0d; lamb 4s 6d to 5s 6d.

HENRY HARBERT.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, MAY 7.

WHITEHALL, May 3.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed Wilkes Broadbent, of Liverpool, in the county of Lancaster, and John Henry Quartz, of Kingsbridge, in the county of Devon, to be Masters Extraordinary in the High Court of Chancery.

COMMISSION SIGNED BY THE LORD-LIEUTENANT.

FLINTSHIRE.—Sir Edward Samuel Walker, Knt, to be Deputy-Lieutenant

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

D EVANS, Merthyr Tydfil, carpenter. A WILLIAMS, Narberth, Pembrokeshire, draper.

BANKRUPTS.

J B NUNN, Colchester and Ipswich, tailor. G W TUCKER, Tottenham-court-road, furrier. S MEANLEY, Wood-street, Cheapside. J SPENCER, Liverpool, coal merchant. F DUNCAN, Liverpool, merchant. T S BROWNE, Manchester, patent-agent.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

H M'KERROW, Glenshannock, Ayrshire, farmer. D U GHANT, Forres, Elginshire, shipowner.

FRIDAY, MAY 10.

LORD CHAMBERLAIN'S OFFICE, MAY 9.

Notice is hereby given, that her Majesty's birthday will be celebrated on Wednesday next, the 15th instant.

WHITEHALL, MAY 8.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed William Bloodland, the younger, of Taunton, in the county of Somerset, and Richard Duke, of Liverpool, in the county palatine of Lancaster, to be Masters Extraordinary in the High Court of Chancery.

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORDS-LIEUTENANT.

Royal Cumberland Regiment of Militia: T Marshall to be Surgeon

Queen's Own Royal Regiment of Staffordshire Yeomanry Cavalry: I Thornycroft to be Captain, vice Earl Granville.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

E REES, Dudley, tailor.

BANKRUPTS.

R DART and J BROWN, Bedford-street, Covent-garden, corsch-lace-manufacturers. E KERSHAW, Park Village West, Regent's-park, advertising-agents. J T HOLLAND, Cowper's buildings. W HATHURST, Liverpool, coach proprietor. MARGARET MILNS, Manchester, grocer. B HOYLE, Manchester and Ardwick, check and gingham manufacturer. H WILSON, Kingston-upon-Hull, commission-agent.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

N FERGUSSON and CO., Edinburgh, curriers. R SUMMERS and SON, Hamilton, builders. J NIMMO, Edinburgh, printer. J and D JONES, Blackford, Perthshire, wrights. W RUSSELL, Tearie, coach-contractor. J LYELL, Dundee, merchant. A M'KECHNIE, Glasgow, dealer in shawls.

BIRTHS.

At Hopton, Lady Lacon, of a son.—At Moseley Cottage, Lee, the wife of Charles T Tucker, Esq, R N, of a son.—At Leigh, the wife of the Rev Herbert Hawkins, of a son.—At Cadelor-house, Bristol, the Countess of Caledor, of a son.—At 54, Tavistock-square, the wife of the Rev Charles Kingsley, of a daughter.—At Wymondham, Norfolk, the wife of the Rev R B Kennard, B A, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

At Marylebone Church, Richard Ashton, Esq, of Gorstance Hall, Cheshir., to Louisa, daughter of the late Sir John Lister Kaye, Bart, of Denby Grange, Yorkshire.—At Tring Church, Cheshire, the Rev James Drummond Money, of Stemsfield Rectory, Suffolk, to Clara Elizabeth Isabella, second daughter of the late Sir Francis Burdett, Bart.—At Umballa, Captain Henry Goodwyn, of her Majesty's 78th Regiment, to Fanny, daughter of Captain Naylor, of her Majesty's 39th Regiment.

DEATHS.

At Usk, Augusta Eleanor, the only child of the Rev Hyd Nicholl, aged 1 year and 11 months.—At Bath, Frances Jane Bayly, relict of Benjamin Bayly, Esq, surgeon-major.—Aged 70, Mary Jane, eldest daughter of the late Rev James Lloyd Wallace. Head Master of Queen Elizabeth's Hospital, Bristol.—At Bath, Elizabeth Hamilton, the Rev Edmund Goodenough, youngest son of the late Robert Gooch, M.D.——The Rev George Millett, vicar of Sidbury, Devon, and formerly fellow of Trin. Coll. Cambridge.—Emily Kathleen, fourth daughter of the Rev James Inkersole, Adcote-house, North Hyrnms, Shrop., aged five years and ——.—At 34, Queen s-road, Regent s-park, George Fiunis, Esq, Mayor of Hythe, in the 70th year of his age.

THE SARDINIAN WAR-STEAMER, "GOVERNOLE."

ANOTHER proof is afforded in this fine war-steamer, of the confidence felt by foreign Governments in the construction, in this country, of ships of war, and their steam machinery. The Governole has been built for the Sardinian service, by Mr. Pitcher, at Northfleet-yard; and the engines were manufactured by Messrs. Maudslay, Sons, and Field, of Lambeth. Her dimensions are as follows:—Length, 213 feet; breadth, 37 feet 6 inches; depth, 23 feet; burthen in tons, 1401 ⁸⁴/₉₄; draught of water, 16 feet 6 inches. with 850 tons coals, and all her armament on board, her speed, on a recent trial, between the Nore and the Mouse lights, was upwards of eleven knots per hour.

The Governole is built with one fighting deck, of enormous strength, on which she carries twelve 68-pounder broadside guns, of 65 cwt. each, and two 8-inch pivot guns of 95 cwt., being, as we are informed, a more powerful armament than that of any other steam-vessel of the same class afloat.

The engines are of the combined power of 600 horses, on the double cylinder principle, as patented in 1839 by Mr. Joseph Maudslay and Mr. Joshua Field, of the above firm; who have, since that time, manufactured engines on this principle almost of the largest power of 15,370 horses.

The Governole has been constructed in the best manner, and was equipped under the personal superintendence of the Marquis Ricci, an officer of great intelligence in the Sardinian service; whilst every minute point connected with the machinery has been attended to, so as to render this vessel suitable as a war-steamer of great efficiency

The boilers are very low in the vessel, in order to be as much as possible out of the reach of shot; the chimneys are on the telescopic principle, admitting of being lowered at pleasure, so as not to interfere with the sails, nor oppose resistance to the wind, when the ship is under steam alone.

The paddle wheels are provided with Mr. Field's patent disconnecting appa-

(Continued on page 344.)

NEW BOOKS, &c.

Now ready, 8vo, price 7s.,
DR. PUSEY on the ROYAL SUPREMACY.
JOHN HENRY PARKER, Oxford and

NEW CROCHET DOYLEY BOOK.
London SIMPKIN MARSHALL & Co

HOLMES'S POPULAR LIBRARY.
Now ready,
OLD HUMPHREY'S TALES and NARRATIVES, to be the first volume of a new series of Books for Youth; containing the writings of the last author, for young people, THOMAS HOLMES (Great Book Establishment), 76, St. Paul's Churchyard.

Just published, 8vo, price 5s.
INSANITY TESTED by SCIENCE, and shown to be a Disease rarely combined with, permanent Organic Lesion of the Brain, and, on that account, far more susceptible of Cure than has hitherto been supposed. By C. M. BURNETT, M.D.
London: SAMUEL HIGHLEY, 32, Fleet-street.

A NEW AND USEFUL WORK ON TURNING
Now ready, price 7s 6d, post free,
THE HAND-BOOK of TURNING.—"A book of practical instruction to the beginner, and of reference to those already advanced in the study of this beautiful art."—SAUNDERS and OTLEY, publishers, Conduit-street.

13, Great Marlborough-street.
MR. COLBURN'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.
To be had of all Booksellers.

I.
NOTES from NINEVEH, and TRAVELS in MESOPOTAMIA, ASSYRIA, and SYRIA. By the Rev J. P. FLETCHER, Minister of St Saviour's Church, Haverstock-hill. Two vols, 2 s bound

"A work of great merit: the remarks of a highly intelligent and acute observer. The work is not less acceptable as a book of travel than it is valuable as an auxiliary to the scriptural study of the Holy Scriptures."—Standard.

II
SKETCH-BOOK of MR. WARBURTON'S RELIGIOUS ROMANCE.

"As a historical romance, Mr. Warburton takes a first wrangler's rank."—Literary Gazette.

III
FRESTON TOWER; or, THE EARLY DAYS OF CARDINAL WOLSEY. By the Rev. RICHARD CHANNING, M.A., Author of "The History of Margaret Catchpole," &c 3 vols, with Six Illustrations (immediately

IV
SIN AND SORROW. A Tale. 3 vols.

"A correct, and individually varied — and it can claim place with the works of our most popular writers. It illustrates the British interior of the passing age."—Weekly Chronicle.

Just published, price One Halfpenny each,
EXHIBITION of 1851: a Popular Statement of the Nature and Objects of the proposed Great Exhibition of the Works of Industry of All Nations, and of its Interest to all Classes By HENRY HARRIS 16 and 306, St. Martin's-le-Grand. Sent, at One Halfpenny each, in parcels of 25 copies, at 6s, and in parcels of 100 copies, at 1s 6d. Sold by all Booksellers.

THE ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY VOLUME, Containing Sketches of Scenes in the Saga of Babylon The Writing on the Wall—The Last Night—The Journey—The Misfortune—Scenes of Babylon—The River Hiddekel—Nineveh—The Mission of Jonah—Nineveh in Sackcloth—The Fall of Nineveh—Recent Discoveries by Layard—Truth of Prophecy—Daniel's Vision, &c. Illustrated with Two Hundred Engravings.
London: GOOD, 14, King William-street, Strand.

New Edition, 20,000.
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING BOOK,
Containing a Series of Lessons on the most amusing and instructive subjects, selected with great care from the best English Authors, in Prose and Verse. The whole beautifully Illustrated with above TWO HUNDRED and FIFTY ENGRAVINGS. Price 2s
Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, London, and sold by all Booksellers and

THE ANGLO-SAXON for MAY, price 2s 6d, or post-free, contains Ancient Gold and Modern London: Old London, Letter to the Editor of "The Anglo-Saxon" on Recent Discoveries, Absurdity, the Vanguard of Progress, Learning Jew among the Anglo-Saxons—Circumcision—A Song for May—The Anglo-Saxon Colony—Western Australia—The English Language, the Indian Arch-pelago—Lobscuse; the Anglo-Saxon Race, by Martin F. Tupper—London in Form, Essay III.
The ANGLO-SAXON for 1849 forms a handsome volume, price One Guinea. London: J. BOSWORTH, 215, Regent-street.

Now ready (Gratis),
ORDISH'S NEW and ORIGINAL PLAN for supplying Families residing throughout the Kingdom with all the new and popular publications, Magazines, and Reviews, on a scale of liberality and economy hitherto unprecedented; together with a selection from the extensive Stock and Collection of the Manager, to be had on application (or forwarded by post if required).—THOMAS ORDISH, Librarian, 37, Lamb's Conduit-street, London.

Now ready, price 2s 6d, PART I. of HISTORIC QUESTIONS, a Series of Improvisations of Addy JEWSBURY. Gould's PLACE, FURNITURE, ARMOUR, &c., in Royal and Noble Families, from the Conquest to the Present Time. A GUIDE to INDIVIDUAL EMINENT in HISTORY and the Study of Heraldry and Ancient Costume. By JOSEPH WILLIAMS PART I contains: Anderson, William III., at Windsor Castle. Claude Anthon Charles I., St. Savoy, Ghent. Silver-gilt Cup, Margaret Beaufort, Charles V., Ghent.
To be completed in Ten Parts, price 2s 6d each. Large paper copies, 5s. Office, 198, Strand, London.

Now Publishing,
THE LADY'S LIBRARY. In Monthly Parts, Price One Shilling each
Part I. READING and EMBROIDERY.
Part II. CROCHET and LACE Work.
Part III. POINT LACE PATTERNS.
Part IV. KNITTED and NETTED EMBROIDERY.
(To be Published on the 1st of June).

"The Lady's Library is elegantly got up, the engravings are neatly executed and the general arrangement of the work is decidedly good."—Le Follet.

We can great pleasure in recommending this cheap and very elegant little work, which is to be continued in entirety. It is illustrated with numerous engravings, and is well worthy the attention of our fair readers."—Lady's Gazette of Fashion.

Published by WARD and CO., Paternoster-row, and all Booksellers.

POPULAR PUBLICATIONS for MAY 15.—
1. TWELVE ESSAYS on history, Self-Reliance, Compensation, Spiritual Laws, Love, Friendship, Prudence, Heroism, the Over-Soul, Circles, Intellect, Art, and Nature. By RALPH WALDO EMERSON. A New Edition of the first of SLATER'S SHILLING SERIES, in elegant fancy boards, price 1s; also cloth, 1s.
2. YATHEK; an Arab an Tale. By W. BECKFORD, Esq., with a Memoir of the Author by WILLIAM BECKFORD. A New Edition of the second of Slater's Shilling Series, in elegant fancy boards, price 1s; also cloth, 1s.
3. THE IRISH GIRL; or Other Tales. By MISS SEDGWICK. This fifth of Slater's Shilling Library, fancy boards, price 1s; also cloth, 1s 6d
4. THE HONEY BEE; with Hints on Hives. The second of Slater's Shilling Library, fancy boards, price 1s; also cloth, 1s 6d.
London: GEORGE SLATER, 359, Strand; and all booksellers

NOTICE.
AT BULL'S ENGLISH and FOREIGN LIBRARY, 19 Holles-street, Cavendish square, may be obtained for a perusal all the New Works, and in any quantity, in Town or Country. The following have been recently added:—
Reginald Hastings. By Warburton. Madame Palaky's Memoirs, Son. Sir Arthur Severne
Ways of the Hour. By Cooper. Norway in 1848-49. By Forrester.
Duke of Kent's Life. By Neale. New Work on Nineveh. By Layard.
Pride and Irresolution. Flemish Interior. By Mrs. Gore.
Tasso's Life. By Milman. Sin and Sorrow. By Bulwer Lytton. By Himself.
Pictures of Nuremberg. By Whitehead. Old Oak Chest. By James Month at Constantinople. By Alexander Smith.
Phantom World, The. By Christian. Fourth Estate. By Hunt.
Poor Jack. By Marryat. Popular Have Met. By Willis
California in 1848-49. By Ryan.

The new Library Circular, with terms, sent post-free to orders enclosing two stamps, addressed, Mr. BULL, Library, 19, Holles-street, Cavendish-square, London.

In one thick vol., the Tenth Edition, enlarged, price 12s.,
MURRAY'S DOMESTIC MEDICINE: A Popular Treatise, exhibiting the Nature, Symptoms, Causes, and most efficacious Treatment of Diseases; with a Collection of approved Prescriptions, and Directions for the Regimen, the means of a Family and other cases of emergency, Management of Children, a clear account of the Hydropathic System, &c. &c. A large Appendix on the Treatment of Disorders of the Eye, Forming a comprehensive Manual for Guide for the and Invalid. In the absence of their Medical Adviser.
By J. J. GRAHAM, M.D. &c.
"It is evidently the result of great professional talent, experience, and judgment; the Author every where appears conscientious and candid. The subject is prominently evident—it causes others to benefit as suffering fellow-creatures. To recommend a work like the present to our readers, is only a matter of proper regard for their Family Journal, Feb. 1842.
"The King of permanent popularity."—London Weekly Review.
Longman and Co., Paternoster-row; HATCHARDS, 187, Piccadilly, and TEGG and Co., 85, Queen-street, Cheapside. Sold by all booksellers.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

Just published, 18mo, 1s; 18mo, 3d,
THE CHURCH HYMN-BOOK and THE CHURCH HARMONIST. Parts I. The Hymns and Music, also by sale, for Associations and Whole families (in parts). The Parts will appear well in advance of the order to which they apply, and the great saving in expense, as compared with paper music, very large. Choirs and Congregations, the small for the poor, for children, and distribution, may be had separately. Hymn with its Tune
F. and J. RIVINGTON, St. Paul's Churchyard, and Waterloo-place; and ADDISON and HODSON, Regent-street.

Now ready, a new Musical Periodical,
THE CHURCH MUSICIAN and LIBRARY of CHURCH MUSIC, sixteen pages imperial 8vo, in new type, the largest publication of sacred music, eight of reading matter, practical and instructive. The Clergy and Congregations will find this of great use in advancing the interest of Church Service.
EDWARDS and HUMMES, Ave Maria-lane; and GOULDING and D'ALMAINE, Soho-square

NEW SONGS.—"THE RICH MAN'S BRIDE," "THE EXILE'S FAREWELL," "THE STRANGER'S GRAVE." Price 2s each (post free).
These songs are by the author of "Will we love me then as now." &c. They form a series of touching compositions, and are exceedingly graceful and effective. The "Rich Man's Bride" will be an immense favourite, both words and music are of a very superior description, and calculated to make a most favourable impression.
London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW MUSIC.
"The best and cheapest Music in London is in the Pianista."—Atlas, March 9th.
ITALIAN OPERAS, 2s each, full music size.
Don Pasquale, 1 acts, Don Giovanni, Norma, Semiramide, Puritani, Lucrezia Borgia, Cenerentola, Massaniello, Don Pasquale, Gazza Ladra, Barbiere, and twenty others, are in the PIANISTA, 2s each, full music size, with Overtures complete. Also Le Prophete, Les Huguenots, and Lucia di Lammermoor, in Two Books
Either number, as a specimen, by post for 30 stamps.
Logier, two stamps. Pianista Office: 67, Fauxhall-row, and 16a, Argyll-street, and Regent-street.
N.B. The "Pianista" is beautifully brought out, and is always correct. Specimens sent.
N.B.—Be careful to order the "Pianista," full music size.

CHEAP MUSIC, bound and classed in volumes.
Eighty shillings' worth at half the published price for 8s., comprising Overtures, Dances, Quadrilles, Piano Duets, Songs, Glees, and Sacred Music (Vocal), Quadrilles, Piano Duets, Songs, Glees, and Sacred Music (Vocal), by Rossini, Bellini, Donizetti, Auber, Labitsky, Strauss, Lanner, Schubert, and all the first authors. The publish will always be on sale, is all new, and clean copies. A choice of two hundred volumes always on hand. Lists sent by post. Retail Music Shop, Music Warehouse, 17, Soho-square. The new Catalogue gratis, on receipt of two stamps.

ARE you desirous of making a useful and elegant Present?—If so, purchase one of F. MEDAN'S Fashionable Work-Boxes, with or without the Sewing Machine, at the lowest discount, sold by all respectable Jewellers and Fancy Repositories.

THE NEW FISH-CARVING KNIVES and FORKS.—T. COX SAVORY and Co. respectfully inform their customers that they have a large stock of the above useful articles, of the newest pattern and best workmanship, in Silver Plate, the prices are from 24s the pair; in ivory, from 8s the pair. A pamphlet containing drawings and description of the above is published, and may be had gratis of the Manufacturers, post free, to any part of the kingdom.—T. COX SAVORY and Co., 47, Cornhill, London, seven doors from Gracechurch-street.

ELECTRO and SHEFFIELD PLATE.—Lowest Prices, with Drawings of Fiddle Pattern Plated Dish Covers, Stoves or Curry Dishes, and other requisites for the Dinner Table, post-free, on application to T. COX SAVORY and Co., 47, Cornhill, London, seven doors from Gracechurch-street.

SILVER PLATE.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS beg to call the attention of customers to the reduced prices at which they are now selling the best quality Fiddle-pattern SILVER SPOONS and FORKS, and Silver Tea and Coffee Services. Mr. Pamphlet, illustrated by Drawings, and containing the weights and prices of the various articles required in family use, may be had on application at the Manufactory, post-free, to any part of the United Kingdom, or the Counting-house of SAVORY and SONS, 14, Cornhill, London.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—A Pamphlet explaining the various constructions, and the advantages of each with a List of Prices, will be forwarded gratis, by post, if applied for by letter, addressed to T. COX SAVORY and Co., 47, Cornhill, seven doors from Gracechurch-street, London.

HANDSOME GOLD WATCHES, jewelled in four holes, with capped cases, and warranted to perform well, with each Watch HAWLEYS', 251, Regent-street, opposite the Polytechnic Institution, and 3, Birchin-lane, Cornhill, London.

JONES'S £4 4s SILVER LEVER WATCHES, and £10 10s GOLD LEVERS, at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House, are warranted not to vary more than a minute in any climate. The great reduction of price now made will, it is hoped, induce all the Swiss manufacturers of any other trade to purchase of the Maker, and thereby save the Country. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 5s., one will be sent down. Read JONES'S Season of Watchwork, Free for 2d or a Twopenny Stamp.

ELECTRO PLATE.—SELLING OFF, at 136 High-holborn, the entire STOCK of ELECTRO PLATE, at 25 per cent. under prime cost. Public is the only Establishment where they can purchase bargains, as the whole must be sold to liquidate the Partnership. Plated Dinner Dishes and Covers, £6 10s (of the set of four, forming eight dishes); Soup Tureens, £5 15s 6d. A splendid assortment of Cruet Frames, Tea Trays, &c. Chamber Candlesticks from 6s 6d; Table Candlesticks from 6s per pair; Toast Racks, 4s 6d; Electro-Plated Table Spoons or Forks, 24s per dozen; Dessert Spoons or Forks, 18s. Teaspoons, 10s 6d per dozen. Every other article equally low in price at WM. CRANBROOK and CO'S, 136, High Holborn.

ROYAL PAPIER MACHE WORKS and MANUFACTORY, NEWMAN-STREET, Oxford-street, Manufacturers by Authority of the Queen, Her Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the Royal Family.—Sheffield-street Wear, Belgrave-square, London, and Wolverhampton, Staffordshire.
LANE'S ROYAL PAPIER MACHE and PATENT PEARL GLASS Warehouse and Show-rooms, 206, New Oxford-street, corner of Museum-passage, are by special appointment of her most gracious Majesty and the Royal Highness Prince Albert.—These rooms contain tea trays, tables, chairs, cabinets, pole screens, and every description of Papier Mache Goods for the drawing-room, pearling on glass is exquisitely beautiful, rivaling in our well known variety. Chess-tables from 45s. to 20 guineas.

DECORATIVE PAPER-HANGING MANUFACTORY and General FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT, 31, KING-WILLIAM-STREET, CITY.—The Proprietor of ARCHER rooms an inspection of his superior Paper-hangings, which are marked in plain figures at the lowest remunerative, fitted up on the most extensive range of Show-rooms in Panels, &c. &c., in every style of decoration, and every variety of Paper-hangings, for all Rooms and Borders, Hangings of the first order. Brussels and Tapestry Carpets, at 3s 3d per yard. Rich Velvet Pile, Tapestry Brussels, Floor-Cloth 3 yards wide, cut to any dimensions, 2s 3d, 2s 6d and 2s 9d per

METCALFE and CO'S NEW PATTERN SPONGES.—Tooth-brushes, Nail-brushes, Hair-brushes, Combs, and Sponges, and cleanses them in a most expeditious manner. Ladies and Gentlemen will find it a most valuable assistant to the toilet. Particularly pronounced hair-brushes, with the bristles unbleached Russia bristles, which will not soften like common hair. Improved Clothes-brush, that cleans thoroughly in half the usual time. An immense Stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponges, at METCALFE, BINSLEY, and CO.'S only Establishment, 130, Oxford-street, one door from Holles-street.—Rotunda 4 Alkaline Tooth-Powder, 2s per box

THE TEETH.—A very curious invention connected with Dental Surgery has been introduced by Mr. HOWARD, of 52, Fleet-street, whereby the pain and expense attendant on the ordinary new operation of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures, is entirely obviated, and a perfect set of mineral teeth, as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer, may be had in a few hours. An immense Stock of gum-tin unbleached Smyrna Sponges, at METCALFE, BINSLEY, and CO.'S only Establishment, 130, Oxford-street, one door from Holles-street.—Rotunda 4 Alkaline Tooth-Powder, 2s per box

EARTH TOOTH POWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTINE.—A White Powder, compounded of the choicest and most recherché Oriental botanical productions, which imparts to the teeth a beautiful pearl-like whiteness, arrests decay, preserves the enamel, hardening the gums, fortifies and purifies the mouth, and renders the breath perfectly sweet and odoriferous. Being entirely free from acid, it is peculiarly adapted for children, whose teeth it quickly preserves from caries, and imparts a healthy action to the gums, rendering the teeth (it could be used with the finger) efficient and fragrant arrangers of the mouth. Sold by the Author, 1, Royalty also, on the sale of the Aristocracy's toughest Europe per box

Beware of imitations. To protect the Public from fraud, the words "A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN" are engraved on the Government Stamp affixed on each box. Sold by them and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

W. SHEATH, SILK-MERCER, 264 Regent-street, begs to draw the attention of the Nobility and Gentry to inspect his new and well-assorted STOCK of Silks, Satins, Figured Chene Gros, and Baroge Shawls, French Cashmeres, Barages, Lace Goods, &c. &c. For the convenience of Ladies residing out of the country, Patterns forwarded postage free to any part of the Kingdom, by addressing to
W. W. SHEATH, Silk Mercer, 264, Regent-street.

EXTRAORDINARY SALE OF MOIRE ANTIQUE SILKS.
the richest ever sold at 3s 6d the Robe
Co ors Pink, Sky, Ivory, Black, Mauve, Green, Drabs, Browns, Black, White, &c.
Patterns sent (post free) Address W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

THE RICHEST 2 WIDE GLACE FIGURED SILK SOIES, at 35s the full dress
Patterns sent (post-free). Address, W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

THE NEW 2 WIDE DOUBLE VENETIAN SILK, at 25s 6d the Full Dress.
Very rich Brocades, 42s and 55s the Full Dress.

FASHIONABLE ORGANDIE MUSLINS, (Fast colours), 1s 3½d per yd
The most English cotton, 6½d per yd
Extraordinarily rich Organdies, 8½d, 9½d, and 1s per yd
Superior plain Cotton, 1s 2½d per yd
Patterns sent (post-free). Address W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

THRESHER'S PURE BLEACHED HONEY.—Messrs. THRESHER and GLENNY respectfully announce their new and elegant Show-rooms for Lace and Lace Thread Stockings, bleached without brimstone or any deleterious matter whatever, and warranted to wear well and retain their pure white after washing—sold only by Thresher and Glenny, 152, Strand. N.B. The only House in London for Thresher's India Gauze Waistcoats

SAVE THE CARPETS—INCREASE THE BRILLIANCY OF YOUR FURNITURE by using ROBINSON'S PATENT PREPARED OIL-CLOTH, which will not soil more than four days in the most frequented Rooms. Wholesale and Export Stations, 21, Sidney-street, Commercial-road East. Carriage Paid by Rail for Cash with the Order.—Orders promptly executed

PATENT FLEXIBLE VELVET HATS, Patentees, JOHNSON and CO., 113, Regent-street, corner of Vere-street.—For years' experience has proved the value of this invention for Hats, together with their peculiar mode of ventilation—by means of a valve, they effectually prevent the accumulation of perspiration, render them at once superior to any that have hitherto been manufactured and at half the usual charge.—JOHNSON and CO., Patentees to the Queen and Royal Family, 113, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT is a garment made without gathers. "It may confidently be eulogized for its nicety of fit, and great ease of wearing."—Morning Herald. In all qualities and prices, at WILLIAM REID'S, 51, Cornhill, corner, Regent-street. N.B. Patent Bands for dressing-gowns, cravats, and bishops.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS.—Gentlemen desirous of obtaining Shirts in the Perfection of Fit, Comfort, and Elegance, which they can be made, are solicited to try FORD'S EUREKAS, the most unique, and the only perfect fitting Shirt made. Detailed catalogues, containing lists of prices, and directions for self-measurement, sent post-free. Patterns of all the new coloured shirtings and quadrille sent on receipt of six postage stamps.—Richard Ford, 185, Strand, London

THE CORAZZA SHIRT.—CAPPER and WATERS, Inventors, 28, Regent-street, St. James's.—Gentlemen can have the Corazza Shirt, or any other form of Shirt, by sending measures, taken tight, round the neck, round chest, waist, wrist, and height of collar, to the above address. The Corazza Shirts, with fine Linen Fronts, Collars, and Wristbands, at every price from 6s. to 12s., and Lounge Shirts 6s to 30s. each. Additional charge for Dress Fronts, 2s to 2s 6d. Capper and Waters can forward their goods to any part of the kingdom, on receipt of a money order for the price of the Shirt, with addition of two shillings, which addition is deducted from the amount of the set.

THE FLORIFORM PARASOL, Registered Act 6 & 7 Vict., c. 65.
Some time ago, the "Illustrated London News" Journal contained a letter from a Lady on the Shapes of Parasols, the Author of which, it is supposed, is a Parisian, as the Lady complains that in this respect the Parisian Ladies have the advantage of us. The suggestion, as far as is mechanically practicable, is carried out by the invention of the FLORIFORM PARASOL, which exhibits, when open, the exact outline of an expanded flower.
The PARASOL may be purchased of the Patentees, at first-class Mercers and Parasol Dealers throughout the Kingdom; and wholesale of JOHN ROWLAND and SON, Manufacturers, 36, Leadenhall-street, London ridge.

TO VISITORS from the COUNTRY.—All Ladies and Gentlemen desirous of purchasing Cheap Furniture, are invited to inspect the STOCK of CHAIRS, exhibited by MECHI, at No. 4, Leadenhall-street, Show Rooms (Continental-street, near the India House. Determined to take the Trade in hand, he has purchased the entire Stock and novel specimens in Papier Mache. Finding it impossible to display them in the limited space he occupies in Regent-street, he has fitted up a spacious Room, to which he invites those who are desirous of seeing the most brilliant assortment ever offered to the public. Each article is marked with admirable copies of Edwin Landseer's most popular paintings (with BOND, 28, corner of Wardour-street, Soho). Also, at 112, Regent-street, the Isle of Wight, and 4, Leadenhall-street, MECHI and BOND'S Cabinet in Use for Ladies' and Gentlemen's Dressing Cases, Work-boxes, Writing-desks, Envelope Cases, Tea Caddies, and work-table.—A, Leadenhall-street Illustrated catalogues gratis.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN.
ESTABLISHED in 1774.
LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN, and WEDDING and GENERAL OUTFITS for HOME, INDIA, and the COLONIES, are supplied by JOHN CAPPER and SON, 53, Cornhill-street, LONDON, in a Separate Department, under competent Female superintendence. Their prices are economical, the materials and good work excellent.
BABY LINEN, of superior work, decidedly CHEAP.
Parcels of £2 sent free to any part of London by all railway carriage.
SAMPLES, which may be returned, SENT for inspection, on application stating the kind of Linen required.
LISTS, with PRICE sent POST-PAID

BONNETS.—PARISIAN MILLINERY.—To Cash Purchasers wishing to avoid the charges of private Milliners' Accounts.—The following Bonnets, Trimmed with Rich Silk Bonnets, all colours, Cap, &c., complete, 12s 9d to 16s 9d; Mourning Satin, of Rich Silk, 14s 9d to 18s 9d; Ditto, of Rich Crape, 21s to 25s 9d; Flowers' Bonnets, with Double Crape Veil, 14s 6d to 18s 6d; White or Black Lace, with Satin Cap, and Veil, 16s to 18s 6d; Ditto, in all colours, drawn or on Paris net shapes, 14s 6d to 18s 6d. Paris Chips for Bridal, or Dress Bonnets, 5s 6d; very fine, 6s 6d to 10s; White Bermuda Chips, 3s 1d to 5s 11d; Dunstable White Straws, the new shape, 2s 6d to 3s 6d; Ditto, Rose Pink, 3s 6d to 5s 11d; Lingerie nets Prince of Wales shape, 3s 11d; very fine, at 5s 11d More Fashionable or more becoming Bonnets cannot be procured at any price, and the above are Wholesale Prices for Cash. Orders by Post, or at the Wholesale House, No. 39, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square.—Proprietors, Jr. WISE and Co.
Country Milliners supplied with Pattern Bonnets monthly

SPECIALITÉ de DENTELLES et de BRODERIES.—J. HAYWARD'S, 81, Oxford-street (opposite the Pantheon).
This House having been established upwards of seventy years, for the six new sale of LACE and EMBROIDERY, they are enabled to offer monetal advantages in executing Wedding Orders. In many instances manufacturing their own goods, and employing their own patterns, they can with confidence offer to the patrons and the public articles of superior taste and fabric, at a considerable saving in price.
Their extensive and very choice Stock of the following articles is particularly worthy of attention:—
Honiton Bridal, Squares and Scarfs, from 3 Guineas
Brussels and Honiton Point Collars, Capes, Dresses, Berthes, Handkerchiefs, Chemisettes, Sleeves, &c.
A wonderful Imitation of Lace and Embroidery, in Muslin, Lace, Cambric, Dresses, &c., at very moderate prices
Also Embroidered Handkerchiefs, in great variety, from 3s 6d to 8 guineas.
Plain Cambrics and Cambric Handkerchiefs of the best fabrics
The latest Novelties in Laces and Embroideries always ready for inspection.
HAYWARD'S (SIDDLE and CO.), Lacemen to the Royal Family, 81, Oxford-street, opposite the Pantheon.

AUSTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND, CAPE of GOOD HOPE, NATAL, &c.
PASSENGERS to the COLONIES, generally, may obtain their OUTFITTINGS of W. SILVER and Co., CLOTHIERS, &c., 66 and 67, CORNHILL, at wholesale prices. SILVER and Co. make nearly the whole of their Clothing themselves, and can confidently assert that the Cabin Fellow Furniture may become permanent Household Fix tures on arrival in the colony
They also engage PASSAGE, and give ship-sailing INFORMATION, for they purchase their Outfittings themselves. Those about being to give PASSAGE will also place themselves in their hands every benefit; and they forward small packages for their customers' friends, to any part of the kingdom, free of charge.
SILVER and Co. give DRAFTS on AUSTRALIA, at sixty days' sight, of £125 for every £100 paid here.
LIBRARY Fitting-on Branch No. 4, BISHOPSGATE-STREET, opposite the London Tavern, where Gentlemen may obtain Cabin Furniture, Bedding, &c., including bedding, may be obtained for FOUR POUNDS.
66 & 67, CORNHILL, LIVERPOOL

GERMANY.—Notice is hereby given, that Mr. [illegible] Frankfort-on-Maine, are the Agents in Germany for the sale of Mr. Morison's Vegetable Universal Medicines.—British College of Health, New-road, London, Feb. 1, 1850.

AS GOVERNESS.—A lady wishes to obtain a situation for her governess, who is of the Church of England, and has resided eight years with her daughter. She can instruct her pupils in French, German, Italian, and music, and finish their education with the occasional assistance of masters. A family residing part of the year in London would be preferred. The most unexceptionable testimony can be given. Letters addressed to A. B., at Mr. Morgan's, 8, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly.

AS HOUSEMAID.—A respectable young person, who can have an excellent character from her present and previous place, wants a situation as Housemaid. Address, A. B., 25, Queen's-road, Regent's-park

TO WORKING JEWELLERS and Others.—A very prosperous and lucrative TRADE for DISPOSAL in the Owner having gained many means from it. It has been established Twenty-five Years, in an excellent situation, and has a steady, regular trade attached to it, and would prove a valuable concern to any persevering man. Two workmen only used in the trade and constant employment. It also presents an excellent opening for the Watch trade. The sum required, about £1200. The books for the past years will be shewn, and the most honourable dealing may be depended on.—Apply personally to HASLUCK BROTHERS, 104, Hatton-garden, London.

CITY DOMESTIC BAZAAR!!!—The Proprietor of the above Establishment is desirous of making known to his patrons and the public generally, that he has REMOVED from 33, Ludgate-hill to 9, OLD BAILEY (first door from Ludgate-hill), where Ladies will find SERVANTS, with good characters, waiting their applications, and Servants may have meat with the acquisition of speedily being hired. March 28, 1850.

ROOK-RIFLES, AIR-GUNS, AIR-CANES, &c., for shooting rabbits, rooks, sea-fowl, &c. with ball; small birds with shot, fish with harpoon and line, &c.—Prices from £3s. to £7 7s. LILLY, Gun-maker, New Oxford-street.

CHILDREN'S CARRIAGES, Invalids' Wheel Chairs, &c. 19s. to 20 guineas, at the manufactory, Manchester-house, INGRAM 3, 29, City-road.—N B Illustrated catalogues.

Post-Office Orders sent 3d.

FIVE POUNDS of Superior Black, Green, or Mixed TEA, for 5s. Packed in a tin case, and sent carriage-free to all parts of England. ALEXANDER BRADEN, Tea Merchant, 15, High street, Islington, London.

COCKERELL & CO.'S BEST COALS ONLY.
Purfleet Wharf, Earl-street, Blackfriars; Baton Wharf, Lower Belgrave-place, Pimlico; and No. 1, Coal Exchange. Cash price, 24s per ton.

FIRE and ROBBERY.—Safety for Plate and Cash. CHUBB'S PATENT FIRE-PROOF SAFES and BOXES are the most secure depositories for deeds, cash, plate, account-books, &c., both from fire and burglars. All are fitted with their detector locks.—E. CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard, London; 30, Lord-street, Liverpool, and 16, Market-street, Manchester.

HAIR MEMENTOS.—DEWDNEY, Artist in Hair, 178, Fenchurch-street, City, London, beautifully makes and elegantly mounts in fine gold, Hair Bracelets, Brooches, Rings, Chains, Devices, &c., and sends the same to any part of the kingdom at about one-half the usual charges.—N.B. A Book of Specimens sent on receipt of Two postage stamps. Show Rooms, First floor.

REFORM YOUR TAILOR'S BILLS.—
DOUDNEYS, being honoured with Five Specials. Appointments from the Queen, Prince Albert, and Royal Family—recommend their NEW FAMILIES OF LOW PRICES, Grand.—Footmen's Liveries, £3 3s 17, Old Bond-street, 26, Burlington Arcade, and 49, Lombard-street. Established 1826.

GRAHAM and HEDLEY'S ROLL COCOA is perfectly pure, and so well prepared as to afford, when hot water or milk, a bland, aromatic, salubrious, and highly nutritious article of diet.—Signed ANDREW URE, M.D., F.R.S., Author of Chemistry and Professor of Chemistry."—Sold retail by all Grocers and Confectioners; wholesale, at Cox, Sweet-yard, Bishopsgate-street.

FULTON'S ESSENCE OF COFFEE should be tried by all who wish Coffee perfectly free from sediment, of a delicious flavour, and made ready without trouble. In Bottles, price 1s and 2s each. Sold by Grocers, Confectioners, and Chemists. Wholesale, from HENRY CARR, Agent, 8, St. Swithin's-lane, London; of W. FULTON, 4, Bridge-street, Manchester.

ATMOSPHERIC AIR and COAL GAS, in certain proportions, yield an INTENSE HEAT, which can be a vantageously employed for Chemical, Culinary, Manufacturing, and Domestic purposes, &c. In any room without flue, and without danger. For the above, and the PATENT AIR SYPHON VENTILATOR, may be seen at RICH'S Manufactory, Agar-street, Strand.

THE NEW PATENT SHOWER-BATH, and every improved Bath, at reduced prices. Purchasers should not fee de tuit; they have inspected our stock and compared prices (gratis and post-free).—R. and J. SLACK, 336, Strand, opposite Somerset-house.

THE TORRICELLIAN SHOWER-BATHS.—Purchasers should not decide until they have seen this, the last invented and most perfect Shower-Bath. By simply pulling a cord which hangs from the top, any quantity of water may be had without exertion. May be seen in operation, or prospectuses had (free by post), at 313, Oxford-street, and 63, Fleet-street. R. S. STEVENS, Sole Licensee, Lodging and general bath manufacturer and furnishing ironmonger, London-bridge

BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK.—The original, and by far the best, requiring no preparation, offers the surest means of protection for every variety of household linen and clothing, and is the only description of marking ink that can be careful to ask for the genuine article, prepared by the inventor, JOHN BOND, 28, corner of Wardour-street, Soho. Sold by most Chemists, Stationers, and Medicine-venders. Price, 1s a Bottle

GLOBES and ORRERIES by NEWTON and SON.—Patronised by her Majesty and Prince Albert.—The publics, country, and pupils in general, are respectfully informed that Messrs. NEWTON have constantly on sale a large assortment of GLOBES of all sizes and kinds of mounting, varying in price from 15s to 40 guineas per pair; also, a cheap article, suitable for presents, and from 2s to 30s each. School Globes, 12 inches in diameter, on an improved principle; 3 guineas per pair.—Manufactory, 136, Fenchurch-street.

ARTIFICIAL LEGS.—GROSSMITH'S NEW ARTIFICIAL LEG, with Patent-Action Knee and Ankle Joints, enables the patient to walk, sit, or ride, with ease and comfort, whereby concealment is impossible. Also, a similar article for persons, at the expense of the old style of cork leg, will last a lifetime, and is the only leg yet invented that ladies and children can walk without.—Artificial Leg, Eye, Arm, and Hand Manufactory, 75, Fleet-street. Established 1760.

MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT.—A new discovery has been experienced by a vast number of officers' persons, as to Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Paralysis, Spinal Affections, and universal Debility, from the perusal of a PAMPHLET, which may be had, gratis, of Messrs. BARCLAY, by addressing a letter, "DR. BROWN 3 Dapsensary, King's-Cross, London, with three postage-stamps enclosed, saying—Send Pamphlet as named in the ILLUSTRATED NEWS to the address as below
The testimony of the Rev. W. S. Landon, of Weymington, Bedfordshire, will be found an additional relieving himself of the Lumbago and Rheumatic Pains, from which he had suffered many years, also with other officers. The testimony of the Rev. C. W. Cavendish, of Wimbledon, whose daughter was relieved from a severe affliction which had resisted all medical skill, and, from the use of this Lubricant, is now a gentleman in his parish and neighbourhood, strongly recommends it to the nobility and gentry, as a cheap, safe, yet efficacious remedy for general suffering.

DR. BARRY'S PULMONIC BON BONS, the only safe, pleasant, and effectual remedy for all Disorders of the Chest, Voice, Lungs and Breath. In Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Difficulty in Breathing, Shortness of Breath, Il moving Phlegm, and Purifying the Breath. Being the results of thirty years' practice, they have obtained the unanimous approval of the faculty in their preparation the most delicate, soothing, and healing ingredients found to be indispensable to the successful cure of those dangerous and troublesome affections. In Boxes at 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, and 4s 6d; may be sent free per post, 2d, 4d and 8d extra for Postage.—DR BARRY and Co., 37, New Bond-street, London. Also to be obtained of their Agents: Barclay, 95, Farringdon street; Edwards, 67, St. Paul's Churchyard; Sutton, How Churchyard; Butler, 4, Cheapside; Prout, 229, Oxford street; Hannay, 63, Oxford-street; Newbery, 45, Paternoster-row; Hayward, and Co.; Bines Brothers; Evans, Lacon, and Evans, Langton Brothers, and Scott; Barrow and Harvey; Davy, Mr. Merido, and Dr. Landon; and Bryant, Mr. W. Bennett, Portman, Mason and Co., 1s 9d, Piccadilly; and through all respectable Chemists and Booksellers.

THE WAR-STEAMER "GOVERNOLE," BUILT FOR THE SARDINIAN GOVERNMENT.

THE SARDINIAN WAR-STEAMER "GOVERNOLE."

(Continued from page 342.)

ratus, so that, when sailing without the aid of steam, the wheels may revolve independently of the engines; and they are also fitted with toothed segments, crane motion, and friction screw brake, for turning round and holding the engines and wheels at any point, without the necessity of getting up steam.

In short, the Governole has been constructed and fitted in the best possible manner; and it is reasonable to expect that she will prove one of the most perfect and efficient war-steamers in the Mediterranean.

SHETLAND PONIES.

THESE eight ponies (three brown, and five black) have lately been sold to the agent of the Pacha of Egypt, by Mr. Orton, of 69, Wapping, who receives for sale ponies from the various breeders in Shetland. At the time Mr. Orton was first applied to, in January last, he had but four of the animals in stock, but he procured the other four from Shetland, taking care to obtain those of the smallest size: they are 35 inches in height, and their companions do not exceed 37 inches. Their present value is about £15 each. They were imported by the mail packet to Aberdeen, and thence by steamer to London.

Mr. Orton is breaking these ponies in harness, and drives them in fours every day; they are intended for the Pacha's children to drive—six in a small carriage now building by Kings, Long-acre; the harness, which is superb, is being manufactured by Messrs. Gibson and Co., New Coventry-street.

The ponies are rough at present, but they will be got into better condition before they are shipped, towards the close of the present month. The Pacha's agent is, we understand, a German veterinary surgeon, and Master of the Horse to his Highness.

SHETLAND PONIES PURCHASED FOR THE PACHA OF EGYPT.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, MAY 11, 1850.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 427.—Vol. XVI.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1850. [Sixpence.

PUBLIC LIBRARIES FOR TOWNS.

We see it stated that efforts are being made in various of the more opulent and important towns of the kingdom, to establish public libraries for the benefit of the trading and operative classes. Manchester and Liverpool seem well inclined to take the lead in this movement. The wealthier classes in Manchester have already entered into a liberal subscription with this object, and the Town Council of Liverpool have a motion before them with the same view. We need scarcely say that to all such efforts we wish the most complete success. The education of the adult people by their own agency, without the aid of Governmental grants, or the interference of official and officious functionaries, is a result in the highest degree desirable, and will be one of the most gratifying proofs of our advancing civilization.

Another movement in this direction has been made by Mr. Ewart, whose Bill for the establishment of Public Libraries in Towns has already made some progress through the House of Commons. Mr. Ewart proposes that Town Councils shall have the power to rate their parishes for this purpose. Various objections against the measure have been started in the debates that have ensued upon the first and second readings. Had the bill any prospect of becoming a law, it would be worth the while of all the friends of the moral, intellectual, and religious education of the toiling masses to consider these objections in detail; and if, upon investigation, they should prove well founded, to propose some means to obviate or remedy them. But, as there is little if any prospect of Mr. Ewart's being able to carry his measure to completion, it is scarcely necessary in the friends of popular education to meet the objections which have been started by those who deny the utility and expediency of literature for the people. We shall not attempt to do so, for we also object to Mr. Ewart's proposal. While avowing to the utmost extent our sympathy with his object, we must confess that, in our opinion, Mr Ewart has not taken the proper means to effect it. Colonel Sibthorp and others object, that, by such an act as Mr. Ewart contemplates, the dwellers in the rural districts would be taxed for the exclusive benefit of the towns. We cannot consider this objection to be wholly invalid. Others object that the bill would operate to the creation and extension of polemical and religious strife. Neither does it appear that this objection is a groundless one. If the Town Council of any town or borough are to have powers to establish a free library at the public expense, it seems clear to us that the next question for their consideration must inevitably be the character of the books to be purchased by the public money. This question will immediately open, in every place where it is discussed, the flood-gates of party and religious warfare. It would be a most unhappy spectacle at the present day, and in this intellectual country, to witness the growth and progress of acrimonious local squabbles upon the multifarious topics embraced in the wide range of literature. We should, in all probability, see the local celebrities of our cities and towns engaged in disputes that would tend to bring literature into the contempt of the very classes whom it is its privilege to educate and exalt. If the disputants left out of view the strictly doctrinal portion of the subject, we might still have a war of scientific neophytes, upon the rival claims of Dr. Buckland and Dean Cockburn to be the best geological instructor of our young men. We should have one party vehemently insisting on, and another as vehemently opposing, the introduction of Hume and Gibbon into the libraries of the people. We should have the rate-payers of our towns ranged into factions upon the morality or Christianity of a Byron or a Shelley. We should have battles between the foes and the friends of our erotic poets as the fit instructors and closet companions of our clerks and shopmen; and perhaps have to listen to angry debates upon the propriety or impropriety of introducing the historian and eulogist of Jack Shepherd to the same place in our lending libraries which we accord to men whose efforts have been uniformly exerted in the cause of public decency and virtue. We must admit, for our own parts, that we have no desire for the introduction of such polemics into the municipal assemblies of our towns and parishes; and that we consider Mr. Ewart's well-meant efforts to remedy what may considered to be a national want, that of large, well-assorted, and readily accessible libraries for the people, to be vitiated in this and other respects by the machinery which he proposes to employ.

THE GRAND SALOON AT DEVONSHIRE HOUSE.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

Notwithstanding these objections, we reiterate that the object aimed at has our cordial good wishes; and were there no other means of attaining it, we should be loth to express any decided hostility to Mr. Ewart's motion, upon either of the points which we have stated. We should then think it our duty to consider which of the two evils—the possibility of reconciling the pockets of the rural with the needs of the urban population in this important particular, and whether the "amenities of literature" might not, by some means or other, be cultivated among the members of Town Councils to the exclusion of all topics of dispute and ill-will. But, while there is another, a better, and a cheaper means of attaining the end in view; while there is a means which, instead of oppressing a tax-ridden community by a new impost, will relieve it from an existing burthen, and which, so far from exciting any unseemly strife, either upon doctrinal or literary points, will leave every man free to educate himself, we must express our dissent from Mr. Ewart's present proposal. What Mr. Ewart should strive for, and what the great towns should exert all their energies to bring about, is the total abolition of the excise duty upon paper. Mr. Ewart's motion would, if carried, add a tax to one already existing—which is in itself a serious objection to it. The measure we prefer would abolish a tax; and, instead of establishing a public library in every town, by creating a new tax, would so reduce the cost of literature as to enable every poor man to establish a library in his own home. If the Government would but consent to take the excise upon the paper-mill, and relinquish the amount of taxation which it levies upon the education of the people and the "raw material" of literature, there would be no necessity for any such scheme as that which Mr. Ewart proposes. The master-pieces of English literature in every department would be made accessible by the enterprise of our publishers to the humblest means of the humblest day-labourer; and there would be no necessity for charitable men to accord to them as a favour the education which they could purchase as a right. There would be no occasion for dispute or debate, and every workshop and cottage in the land might be rendered independent of the town library, by the possession of its own literary treasures. The poor man, instead of studying the daily history of the present time over a glass of gin or ale, in the public-house, would be enabled to purchase his daily broadsheet for the use of his household; and, instead of having to conform to some possibly inconvenient rules in obtaining the loan of a book for a short and stated period, he might make the prize permanently his own, for a moderate outlay. This is the means we prefer for the extension of literature among the classes whom the merchants of Manchester propose to benefit by charitable subscriptions, and whom Mr. Ewart and the Town Council of Liverpool propose to accommodate by a tax, of which the poor, like other people, would have to bear a portion. To tax the people for libraries, while the Government already taxes them upon the paper of which libraries are composed, is a cumbrous, a roundabout, an expensive, and an ineffectual mode of accomplishing what is desired. That object, as we understand it, is not so much the establishment of public libraries, as the literary education of the humbler classes; and we believe it would be not only more simply and more cheaply, but far more certainly secured by the abolition of the excise duty upon paper, than by any other which the philanthropy or charity of individuals can prompt, or the wisdom of Parliament can devise. The tax, though highly oppressive and injurious, is not so exceedingly productive as to make it worth the while of the Chancellor of the Exchequer to retain it in the face of repeated public protests against it. We trust that the efforts of men like Mr. Ewart, instead of being wasted in attempts to counteract its evil operation, such as the bill upon which we have commented, will be directed to the root of the matter. Untax literature, and the necessity for public libraries will be obviated by the creation of private ones. That is the remedy for the evil, which we submit to the consideration of all who take an interest in the moral elevation of the people.

FESTIVITIES AT DEVONSHIRE HOUSE.

His Grace the Duke of Devonshire had an assembly on Wednesday evening, at Devonshire House, Piccadilly, which was honoured with the presence of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, his Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and about 800 members of the aristocracy.

The Duke of Wellington arrived about eleven o'clock. His Grace wore the uniform of a field marshal.

The diplomatic circle was attended by nearly the whole of the foreign Ministers resident at the British Court, with three exceptions, those being the French Ambassador (who left town for Paris on Wednesday), and the Russian and Bavarian Ministers.

The general company included, among others, the following:—

Duke—Leinster, Norfolk, Leeds.

Duchesses—Grafton, Norfolk, Bedford, Sutherland, Richmond, Cleveland

Marquises—Donegal, Kildare, Camden, Ailesbury, Winchester, Westminster.

Marchionesses—Londonderry, Kildare, Bradford, Aylesbury, Westminster.

Earls—Wilton, Clare, Morley, Lucan, Bective, Grosvenor, Arundel and Surrey, Jersey, Kinnoull, Carlisle, Granville, Grey.

Countesses—Longford, Lucan, Wilton, Bective, Grosvenor, Arundel and Surrey, Jersey, Grey, Powis, Kinnoull, Sefton, Arundel and Surrey, Granville, Malmesbury, Beauchamp, Couper, Ellesmere.

Viscounts—Sidney, Jocelyn, M.P., Malden, Palmerston, Pollington, Hardinge, Strangford, Castlerosse, Lascelles, Mahon, Combermere, Canning, Emlyn, M.P., Eastnor.

Viscountesses—Hardinge, Enfield, Newport, Combermere, Canning, Emlyn, Duppin, Jocelyn, Palmerston, Mahon, Pollington.

The Duke's private band, conducted by Mr. C. Coote, were stationed in the grand saloon during the evening, and performed several solos and concerted pieces.

The Duke of Cambridge remained the guest of his Grace until after one o'clock; and it was nearly two o'clock before the general circle had separated.

The noble Duke will give a grand ball on Tuesday next, the anniversary of his Grace's birthday.

We are enabled to present our readers with an illustration of the principal of the superb suite of apartments in Devonshire House.

In Grand Saloon, two stories in height, is a magnificent apartment, and the decorations, designed by Mr. Crace, of Wigmore street, and carried out about two years since, under his superintendence, are in the most superb character, in the style of the celebrated artist Le Brun; and we believe it is the most extensive specimen of that kind of decoration which has been done for very many years past. The general arrangement may be gleaned from our representation; but the gorgeousness and harmony of the colours must be imagined, as, without the aid of polychromy, it is impossible to give an idea of them. The saloon originally was the entrance vestibule, but it now forms one of the most magnificent apartments in the building, a new grand staircase having been built by the Duke of Devonshire, on the old one, entrance done away with a few years since. The effect of the staircase is extremely chaste; the walls are of white scagliola, the stairs of marble, the balustrade of gilded brass, and the handrail of glass. The vestibule also surpasses the visitor entering the ball-room, and thence into the grand saloon, which, as before mentioned, is the subject of our illustration. When used as a ball room, the furniture of this saloon is, of course, removed, and seats, close to the walls, are raised one step, so that the sitters can observe the dancers with ease. The curtains are of Spitalfields manufacture, and the panel compartments on the walls are of Lyons brocade silk. The framing of the panels, looking-glasses, &c., is of the most beautiful design; and being pierced and gilded, adds very greatly to the splendour of the apartment. Over the doors there are some very fine portraits, and as the picture-frames are arranged so as to harmonise with the general style of the room, the best possible effects is produced. The other suite of rooms, open on similar festive occasions to the present, have been entirely re-decorated and re-embellished by Mr. Crace in the most sumptuous style.

Devonshire House was built by William Kent for William Cavendish, third Duke of Devonshire, about a century since.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE

The capital continues in a state of feverish excitement on account of the proposed Electoral Law. Numerous petitions have been prepared and signed by those opposed to the Ministerial project; and on Wednesday a number of these were laid upon the table of the Assembly. As though the Government were not quite satisfied as to the sufficiency of the provocation they have already given to the Ultras, they have renewed their attacks on the free expression of opinion by interfering with the publication of the Republican organs. La Presse publishes a letter from M. Boulé, the printer, stating that at half-past seven o'clock on Tuesday evening, at the moment when the papers La République, La Voix du Peuple, and the Estafette were set in type, a commissary of police entered the printing-house and affixed his seal on the printing presses.

The results of this proceeding have been increased dissatisfaction out of doors and a stormy discussion in the Assembly on Wednesday, when M. Dupont de Bussac declared that M. Baroche had committed a flagrant violation of the law by closing the printing-office of M. Boulé.

M. Baroche replied that the article 12th of the law of the 21st of October, 1814, empowered the Government to deprive of his license any printer convicted before the correctional courts of any offence against the law. Now, M. Boulé had undergone four condemnations—the first, on the 8th of September, 1848 (loud exclamations on the Left); the second, on the 15th of June, 1849; the third, on the 1st of December, 1849; and the fourth, on the 10th of April last. The Government was guilty of too much forbearance with regard to M. Boulé, but it had considered it its duty, when it was ascertained that he had printed a factious petition, the signers of which were being prosecuted, to stop the printer.

M. Pascal Duprat could not conceive how a Minister of the Republic could invoke a law of the Monarchy to excuse an act that crushed the liberty of the press. Why were ministers to indulge in such a course? M. Baroche, who incessantly recommended the Assembly to abdicate its power and commit the government to the President alone. No, it was not the printer the Government had struck, it was Le Voix du Peuple, an organ of the Republic, whose doctrines he had no mission to defend, but which had a right to be freely expressed. Were Ministers justified in their application of the law? How could they reconcile their treatment of the Republican journals? How could they tolerate the shameful monopoly of the street, secured by the Government to the Monarchical journal? The last Ministers of the Monarch never so barefacedly violated the law; and he excused M. Guizot, when he beheld his successors, men without either genius or talent.

M. Baroche said, that he would not reply to the violent attacks and insults directed against him by M. Duprat. Attacks coming from a certain quarter and certain men were a high honour, and he should only to tell the country, "Behold the men who attack me!" to merit its sympathy. This is the only reply he could return to insults, unbecoming the Assembly and himself. He would not cast a reproach upon the political conduct of M. Duprat previous to the downfall of the Monarchy. He merely remembered that he was the promoter of the state of siege in June, 1848, for which he did not blame him, and that he voted with the Ministry for the Press Law. Indeed, M. Baroche demanded the measure incriminated by M. Duprat, and contended that the law of 1834 invested the municipal authority with the right of permitting journals to be sold in the streets, and that he had confined himself to apply the law.

Several other deputies assisted in this recriminatory discussion, which cannot be supposed to have added much to the credit of the parties concerned.

On the old plan of making "announcing of coming trials," a strike of miners at Creuzot, assisted by the manifestations of some inconsiderate revolutionists, was magnified at Paris into an insurrection against the present state of things; and yet the insignificance of the demonstration may be judged of from the fact that a detachment of 250 men of the 13th Light Infantry, with a detachment of 30 gendarmes, were found sufficient to re-establish order. The ringleaders were arrested and taken to Autun. An additional military force was consequently on the point to prevent the recurrence of any disorder. The great majority of the workmen have resumed their labour, and the miners are the only persons who still keep up the strike.

There seems to be some soreness in political circles, on account of the untoward conclusion of the Greek difficulty; but it is believed that it will be easily removed.

The director of the Voix du Peuple was sentenced on Tuesday, by the Court of Assize of the Seine, to one year's imprisonment and 5000f. fine for a seditious article inserted on the 6th of April, and again on one year's imprisonment and 4000f. fine for a seditious article published on the 8th inst.

A letter from Toulon of the 12th inst. announces the arrival of the Salamander, with despatches from Admiral Parseval Deschenes, Commander-in-Chief of the French fleet in the Mediterranean, at Napoli di Romania, in the Gulf of Nauplia. It was reported at Smyrna that the British fleet was about to approach the coast of Italy, the British Government having some accounts to settle with the King of Naples and the Grand Duke of Tuscany.

The Moniteur publishes a decree of the President of the Republic, suspending the adjoints of the Mayors, as also the officers of the National Guard, who have signed the petition against the electoral law as published in the National.

M. Léon Faucher is named reporter of the Commission on the Electoral Law.

SPAIN.

The negotiations for a concordat between the See of Rome and Spain were so far advanced on the 10th, that they would probably be signed in a few days. The principal point of interest in this document is the recognition of the sales of the national property.

ITALY.

There is no news of importance from this quarter, except an account of some disorders that had occurred at Cassata, Tromello, and Mortara, in Piedmont. These troubles, however, appear to arise more from want of work and the distress of the labouring classes, than from any political cause.

TURKEY.

The Augsburgh Gazette of the 11th inst. gives the following news under date of Trieste, May 4:—"We have just received further details of the insurrection at Samos. Avaras, Petros, Tsamavalis, and Locatis were at the head of the insurgents. Mustapha Pasha, on the first outbreak, ordered the troops to remain on the defensive. This order, however, only excited the rebels to greater excesses. Thereupon the offensive was taken, and the Turkish troops, operating by land and sea against the rebels, put them to flight. Avaras was killed, Petros wounded, and Locatis has been sent prisoner to Constantinople."

AUSTRIA.

The differences as to the repository of the Central Power begin to assume a definite shape. It is said that Count Thun will make the following propositions on the part of Austria in the Congress at Frankfort; viz. to appoint a commission of nine members, of whom two to be named by Austria, two by Prussia, and one by Bavaria; the other four to be divided among the rest.

An extraordinary courier arrived on his Majesty at Gratz, on the night of the 9th, with despatches from Prussia, which are said to be of a satisfactory nature.

The wants of the state are so pressing, that a new loan or an emission of paper money must be resorted to.

PRUSSIA.

The members of the Congress of Princes assembled at Berlin paid a visit to Potsdam on the 12th instant, when they dined in the Royal Palace, and returned in the evening to a grand ball given by the Prince of Prussia.

According to letters from Erfurt, the re-opening of the German Parliament is expected between the 24th and 26th instant. The officials at present there have, it is said, taken apartments for the whole of the summer.

The Minister of finance, it appears, has succeeded in negotiating the whole of the loan of 18 millions of thalers by the Chamber at the end of last session. The Bank, the Commercial Marine Society, and an association of bankers and merchants, have each taken a third of the whole loan at 97 per cent.

The commission appointed by the Government for promoting and regulating the transmission of articles to the London Exhibition of Industry next year, has been very active in drawing up the necessary rules and instructions. They will be published in a day or two, together with the facilities which the Royal commission in London will afford to exhibitors. Among the facilities granted by this Government are the cost of carriage to and from London, through Cologne, Berlin, or Dantzic, which cities are appointed dépôts. The Government also undertakes the insurance of the articles against fire.

UNITED STATES.

We have intelligence this week from New York to the 2nd inst.

The treaty with Nicaragua, for making a canal through that territory, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, was before Congress, and its ratification by the American Government was considered certain; the terms appeared to give general satisfaction. Great Britain stipulates to relinquish her sovereignty over the Mosquito coast, her protectorate over the Mosquito King, and all her possessory right over that coast.

The agent of the Panama Railway Company had obtained several hundred labourers from the province of Papayan, who would commence active operations in a few days.

The House of Representatives has passed a bill increasing the power of the Mint, and empowering the Secretary of the Treasury to make advances on gold dust. A new coinage is to be struck, which will prevent the further exportation of dust to England.

The Senate had passed a resolution placing under the laws of the States navy the expedition proceeding to search for Sir John Franklin.

From Boston we learn that the counsel of Professor Webster, recently convicted of murder, have taken out a writ of error, upon the ground that the order of the Municipal Court for certifying the indictment up to the Supreme Court was not signed by both by the clerk of the former court.

Some shocking occurrences are recently reported from the great western prairies on the overland route to California. A Mrs. Ireland and her daughter, from Illinois, were frozen to death on Tuesday, at their residence in Downing-street. The Duke of Richmond, President of the National Association for the Protection of Industry and Capital throughout the British Empire, was prevented by severe illness from attending. The deputation consisted of Mr. George Bentinck, chairman of the acting committee of the National Association; Messrs. James Blyth, C. N Newdegate, M.P., and F. Cayley Worsley, deputy chairmen of the acting committee of the National Association; Mr. Augustus Beaugeard, &c.

Mr. G. F. Young read the address: and in the course of a discussion which ensued between the noble Lord and the members of the deputation, Lord John Russell said—and in that I feel it necessary to say is, that it has been truly stated by Mr. Young, that it would be quite useless to attempt here to discuss this, which is only one of several large questions involving the interests and prosperity of commerce, agriculture, and the general state of the country. I can only say that I take upon myself the whole responsibility of any advice which I may feel it my duty to give to my Sovereign. My experience leads me directly to the opposite conclusion to that arrived at by the deputation. The question, whether we ought to go on with free-Trade, or return to the principles of Protection and restriction; nor do I think it desirable to disolve Parliament in order to arrive at the sense of the country on the subject. With regard to the sufferings which I admit to exist, though I think much of what is said is incorrect, I have heard sufficient from some parts of the country to know that deep suffering does exist; and I am aware that that suffering is partly attributable to the recent commercial laws, and I believe it to be inevitable. Ten years since, I clearly saw that this country required some change of those laws affecting supply, as it was yearly becoming more commercial. My object was to make that transition so as to occasion as little suffering as possible. I advised that certain changes should take place, but they were rejected, not only with contempt, but with indignation. Other changes have since then taken place of a more decided nature than those which I originally proposed. I cannot say that a committee of agriculture and other interests decided that no necessity for any change of our system existed in 1840, though the opinion of Parliament in 1846 became completely changed. A general election followed that dissolution in 1847, which decided to continue the policy the House of Commons had laid down in 1846. I do not think it was very wise on the part of those interests in 1840 not to seek some compromise of the great question then pressed upon them by the agitation. I think it would be far more unwise now to pretend to re-impose protective duties; for, so far from that seeking the question, I believe it would give rise to fresh agitation for alterations in the law. I can therefore only counsel the protected interests themselves; and I believe that nothing could be more injurious to the permanent interests of the country than for Parliament to impose protective duties in 1851, which would open a field to agitation and strife as in 1839 or 1845. All return to the former system being, as I believe, impossible, it may be desirable to equalise, if possible, the charges upon land, which I believe to be the wish of all parties. However great or difficult the change, I believe the general aspect of the country is encouraging, and that it is the duty and interest of all parties to endeavour to adapt themselves to it. Entertaining these views, I feel it my duty, either as a Minister of the Crown or a member of Parliament, to act in conformity with them; and if I entertained your views, I should act accordingly.

PROTECTIONIST DEPUTATION TO LORD STANLEY.—After the deputation had left Lord John Russell's official residence, in Downing-street, on Saturday, they proceeded by appointment to wait on Lord Stanley, at the mansion of the Earl of Eglinton, in St. James's-square, where Mr. Layton, as chairman of the deputation, presented an address to his Lordship, in his "acknowledged character of leader of the great Protection party in the House of Lords." In his reply, Lord Stanley counselled patience and perseverance. Step by step, if not the quickest, was at least the soundest, policy. It was only by gaining first one man and then another, that, in a permanent body like the House of Lords, they could convert a minority into a majority in favour of Protective principles. His Lordship concluded his address as follows: "If you ask my advice, I say persevere in the course you have adopted. Agitate the country from one end to the other. Continue to call meetings in every direction. Do not fear—do not flinch from discussion. By all means accept the offer of holding a meeting in that magnificent building at Liverpool; and in the greatest commercial towns show that there is a feeling in regard to the result of our so called free-trade widely different from that which was anticipated by the Free-traders, and from that which is generally prevalent in the country. Your efforts may not be so soon crowned with success as you hope; but, depend upon it, let us stand hand to hand firmly together, let the landlord the tenant-farmer, and the shopkeeper—ay, before long, the manufacturer himself, be called on to show and to prove what the effects of this experiment are—and, sure as we stand together, temperately but firmly determined to assert our rights, we can, we certainly, at the supreme, it may be, of intense suffering, and perhaps of ruin to many—of ruin which, God knows, if I could avert I would omit no effort for that purpose—but ultimately, certainly and securely we shall attain our object, and recede from that insane policy which has carried ruin during the last few years. I have now only to return you my most grateful thanks for the compliment you have paid me in wishing me to receive this deputation. I have heard with the liveliest interest the statements of Mr. Layton. If in any part of the country—for now through you I address every district—if there be but one district in which a suspicion is entertained that I am flinching from or hesitating in my advocacy of those principles on which I stood in opposition with my late deeply-lamented friend Lord George Bentinck, I authorise you—one and all of you—to assure those whom you represent, that in me they will find no hesitation, no flinching, and no change of opinion; that, attached as I have ever been to the principle of Protection, that attachment remains unchanged; and I only look for the moment when it may be possible for us to use he memorable words of the Duke of Wellington on the field of Waterloo, and to say 'Up guards and at them!'"

DIMINUTION OF BANKRUPTCY.—During three months of 1849, commencing Feb. 9 and ending May 15, there were 417 bankruptcies advertised in the London Gazette. During the same period of 1850 there were only 256; thus showing a diminution of 161 in the present year, under the depressing (?) influences of Free Trade! Facts are stubborn things; and, as time ripens, they seem to increase in their magnety towards Protection.

ASSOCIATION FOR THE AID AND BENEFIT OF DRESSMAKERS AND MILLINERS.—The annual meeting of this society took place on Thursday, at the rooms of the Statistical Society, St. James's-square; the Earl of Arundel in the chair. The report stated that, in 1844, the number of assistants registered was 309, and they had gradually kept on increasing in number; and in 1849 the number registered free of cost was 1331. The amount of subscriptions for the year ending March 30, 1850, was £337 18s., and the expenditure during the same period £447 19s. The report was adopted, and, after a vote of thanks to the noble chairman, the meeting separated.

TULIP SHOW.—On Thursday a grand display of tulips was given at Groom's, Clapham Rise. The great bed of tulips, beneath an awning of 150 feet in length and sixteen feet in width, contained about 2000 of the finest varieties; including Victoria Regina, the Prince of Wales, Duchess of Sutherland, Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Devonshire, Nouvi Efendi, Calaani, Imperatrix Rosa, Addison, Sheaan Angelo, and Polyphemus. The show was remarkably fine, and was visited early in the day by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, and a highly fashionable company.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

GREECE.

Lord STANLEY remarked, that, since their Lordships had last met, he had heard that the good offices of France in respect to the affairs of Greece had not led to a satisfactory termination, and that, coercive measures having been resorted to, the Greek Government had been compelled to submit to terms dictated by our representative at Athens. His Lordship expressed his expectation that all the information necessary to elucidate these transactions would be laid on the table, and gave notice that, whether such information should be produced or not, he would, at an early period after Whitsuntide, call their Lordships' attention to the whole of the circumstances connected with our dispute with Greece.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE assured the noble Lord that all the information required would be submitted forthwith to Parliament. As the noble Lord had adverted to those transactions, unsatisfactory in one respect, but most satisfactory in other respects, he (Lord Lansdowne) would take the earliest opportunity of stating, that, in consequence of an accident of the winds, which caused a delay of three or four days, the negotiation carried on by the French negotiator at Athens had been broken off; and the Greek Government having desired to know the terms on which her Majesty's Government would be willing to receive submission, Mr. Wyse directly informed them what those terms were, and thought the time had arrived when he might make manifest to the world that the object Great Britain had in view was to assert a principle, and not to bear hardly on the resources of Greece. Her Majesty's Government highly approved of Mr. Wyse's moderation; and their Lordships would see with satisfaction that that gentleman so far relaxed the amount of our demands that the terms required by him, and acceded to by the Greek Government, were in substance not materially different from those which the Government of France, negotiating for this country, thought equitable. When their Lordships should be in possession of the papers, they would see that the Greek Government had obtained somewhat better terms, in a pecuniary sense, than the French negotiator had thought equitable. It would have been more satisfactory had the result been brought about by the French Government, but that had been prevented by an accident.

Lord STANLEY considered the accidental delay that led to the breaking off of Baron Gros's negotiation unfortunate; he likewise considered it unfortunate that Greece had been constrained to yield to our demands upon a threat of bombardment.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE observed that the fact of a threat of bombardment was altogether an assumption made by the noble Lord.

The Lord President laid on the table the papers relative to the renewal of diplomatic relations with the Court of Spain.

The Process and Practice (Ireland) Bill and the Parish Constables Bill were committed

The Distressed Unions Advances and Repayment of Advances (Ireland) Bill was read a second time, after a short conversation in which the Earl of GLENGALL, the Duke of LEINSTER, the Earl of MOUNTCASHEL, and other noble Lords took part. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

Mr. H. BERKELEY gave notice that he would, after Whitsuntide, move a resolution declaring that it was expedient that the Yeomanry force in Great Britain and Ireland should be discontinued and abolished.

To a question put by the Earl of March, Mr. LABOUCHERE admitted that the mode in which the corn returns are made is loose and inaccurate, but he did not see how a better mode could be put in operation without great expense and a new machinery. Should any plan be proposed by any one, he promised to give it his best consideration.

AUSTRALIAN COLONIES.

On the motion for the third reading of the Australian Colonies Government Bill,

Mr. GLADSTONE moved a resolution, as an amendment, to the effect that the House should withhold its sanction to the bill until there should have been afforded to the governors, legislators, and people of the colonies an opportunity of considering the provisions of the measure as they stood, in conjunction with the several proposals varying from them which had been submitted to the notice of the House. The right hon. gentleman criticised the bill in general, and particularly censured the outline of the federal state, which, under it, the Australian colonies were to be permitted to form. He contended that the whole project was drawn up without consulting the desires of the political wants of the colonists, and with the object of fostering some party interests in this country.

Mr. ROEBUCK supported the amendment, as he considered that the constitution to be given to the colonies should be well considered, final, and complete, and concurred in the proposal for delay.

Mr. HAWES condemned delay. He thought that sufficient evidence had been adduced to show that the colonists had maturely considered the question of their future constitution, and that they were generally satisfied with the measure proposed by the Government.

Mr E. DENISON did not think the bill a good one; and, therefore, would not hesitate to support the motion for its postponement.

Mr. ANSTEY, Mr. Aglionby, Mr. Thornely, Mr. M'Gregor, and Mr. Hume spoke in favour of the third reading; and Mr. Scott, Mr. Sumner, and Mr. Adderley against it.

The House divided—

For Mr Gladstone's amendment	.. .. ..	124
Against it ..	.. .. ..	246
Majority against the amendment ..		—98

Mr. ROEBUCK proposed the addition of a clause to enable the several Legislatures of our North American colonies to establish a general federative assembly.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL opposed it, and the clause was negatived without a division

Mr. AGLIONBY moved the addition of a clause providing for representative institutions and the means of self-government within the islands of New Zealand.

Lord J. RUSSELL said that a despatch had been received from the Governor of New Zealand, stating that the colony was in a satisfactory state that no reason existed for longer continuing the suspension of the act passed for the government of that colony. It was desirable to amend the New Zealand Act on certain points, but there was time enough for that purpose to do so; however, the Government trusted to be able to make the amendments they contemplated in the act during the next session.

Mr. AGLIONBY withdrew his clause.

Mr. E. DENISON moved a clause to enable the legislature of each colony to manage the waste lands within its limits.

The House having divided, there were—

For Mr. E. Denison's clause ..	.. ..	82
Against it	.. ..	222
Majority against the clause ..	.. ..	—140

The bill was then read a third time and passed.

STAMP DUTIES.

The House resolved itself into a committee on the stamp duties, and agreed to the resolutions necessary as the foundation for the new bill proposed to be introduced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

On the motion of Lord ASHLEY, the House went into committee on the Factories Bill, pro formâ, to admit the alterations proposed by the Government, and to hand the bill up in its amended form.

In reply to a question put by Lord J. Manners, Sir GEORGE GREY intimated that an early Government night would be devoted to the discussion of this bill.

On the motion of the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, the Select Committee on Savings-banks was nominated.—Adjourned at one o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

Lord PORTMAN moved for a select committee to take into consideration the laws respecting parochial assessments. He considered that the whole property of the country should contribute a fair proportion.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE made an opposition to the motion.

The Bishop of LONDON regarded this committee as the fulfilment of a pledge given by the Government some years ago. The inequality of local burdens was one of the greatest grievances of this country.

The motion was agreed to.

The Earl of WARWICK presented a petition from Warwickshire complaining of agricultural distress, and supported the prayer of the petitioners for protection to native industry.

The Estates Leasing (Ireland) Bill and the Judgments (Ireland) Bill were read a second time.

The Distressed Unions Advances and Repayment of Advances (Ireland) Bill passed through committee. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

METROPOLITAN WATER SUPPLY.

The London (Watford) Spring-Water Company Bill and the Henley-on-Thames and London Aqueduct Bill were thrown out, after considerable discussion and divisions.

AGRICULTURAL PROTECTION.

A great many petitions having been presented, complaining of agricultural depression, and praying for protection to native industry.

Mr GRANTLEY BERKELEY moved that the House should resolve itself into a committee of the whole House to take into consideration the acts relating to the importation of foreign corn. The hon. gentleman adverted to the distress which had been so long pervading the agricultural interests, and with respect to which meetings had been held throughout the country, and lately in the metropolis, and also alluded to the memorial presented on Saturday to Lord John Russell, all of which had been treated by the Government with opposition and contempt. Instead of increasing wealth and advancing prosperity, which were repeatedly asserted to be the consequence as a result of the repeal of the Corn-Laws, there never was a period when the state of the country was so deplorable, or when pauperism pressed so heavily—when wages were so depressed, and when the farmer was so unable to keep up the usual amount of employment. With wheat at its present price, it was impossible that the cultivator could be remunerated for his skill and capital. And was sought for at the hands of the Government, which, however, only offered bricks when bread was asked for. The result of the present state of things would be, first, the ruin of the farmers, then of the landlords, and with them the trading and manufacturing interests of the country. The commercial experiment of Free-Trade had been sufficiently tested in the three years of its operation, and had turned out to be a failure. All the prophecies of benefit promulgated by the Free-traders had ended in nothing, or worse than nothing. The hon. gentleman then referred to a great number of documents, in order to show that the impending ruin to the farmers could only be averted by a return to Protection. This return he did not expect would be now obtained, for it was impossible to control and counteract against the unconstitutional means by which the present Government secured majorities in that House.

Mr. A. HASTIE denied the accuracy of Mr. Berkeley's data, as well as the validity of his conclusions, and opposed the motion.

Mr. HUME thought would support the motion, though he expected no beneficial result from it. Without a dissolution of Parliament, it was hopeless to expect a return to Protection.

Mr. DARBY supported the motion, and said it was hard upon the agriculturists that all their complaints were met by prophecies of better times, which were never doomed to be realised.

Mr. SLANEY thought the agriculturists bore a greater proportion of taxation than the other classes of the community, and to that extent he thought they were entitled to Protection. He also thought that such Protection would be useful as a question of revenue. Still he would oppose the motion, in order to give a further trial to the experiment upon which they had entered. But if no improvement should then exhibit itself, he would vote for a moderate fixed duty.

The Marquis of GRANBY said there was a strong reaction throughout the country against the doctrines of Free-Trade, at which he was not at all surprised, considering the disastrous consequences produced by them not only in England, but in Ireland also, where its effects had been still more pernicious. He would support the motion, although he rested his hopes of the reversal of the policy of Free-Trade, not upon any motion at present made in that House, but upon public opinion out of doors, which would ultimately make itself heard within the walls of Parliament. The noble Marquis quoted documents to show that the average price of corn was only 36s 6d., and appealed to all who heard him to say of what value was a rise of one shilling or two upon such prices, which could not prove in any way remunerative to the agriculturist.

Sir B. HALL taunted the Protectionist members with agitating the country upon a question on which they felt so little interest, that at one period of the evening there were only 27 members on the Protectionist benches, and at another period of the evening only 17.

Mr. W. MILES replied to the taunt by referring the hon. baronet to the division lists, which would at once disclose who were the real friends of the agriculturist. Free-Trade, he contended, had proved fallacious to all classes, for the failing-off in the home trade had been injurious to a very great extent to the manufacturers

Mr. MITCHELL, in opposing the motion, said, he believed the future price of grain would be about 45s., a price which would be remunerative to the agriculturist when crops were favorable. He charged Mr. Sandars with having frightened the farmers into selling in which the Earl of GLENGALL, the Duke of LEINSTER, the Earl of MOUNTCASHEL, and other noble Lords took part. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

Mr. H. BERKELEY gave notice that he would, after Whitsuntide, move a resolution declaring that it was expedient that the Yeomanry force in Great Britain and Ireland should be discontinued and abolished.

To a question put by the Earl of March, Mr. LABOUCHERE admitted that the mode in which the corn returns are made is loose and inaccurate, but he did not see how a better mode could be put in operation without great expense and a new machinery. Should any plan be proposed by any one, he promised to give it his best consideration.

AUSTRALIAN COLONIES.

On the motion for the third reading of the Australian Colonies Government Bill,

Mr. GLADSTONE moved a resolution, as an amendment, to the effect that the House should withhold its sanction to the bill until there should have been afforded to the governors, legislators, and people of the colonies an opportunity of considering the provisions of the measure as they stood, in conjunction with the several proposals varying from them which had been submitted to the notice of the House. The right hon. gentleman criticised the bill in general, and particularly censured the outline of the federal state, which, under it, the Australian colonies were to be permitted to form. He contended that the whole project was drawn up without consulting the desires or profitable cultivation. Yet it is notorious, that, in all new societies, the scarcity of labour for hire has hitherto proved the main obstacle to their progress, and to the successful investment of capital. Where there is no labour at all capital cannot be employed, but will perish for want of hands to use it, as has been the case in many a modern colony. This difficulty will, it is believed, be effectually provided against in the Canterbury Settlement. Of the £3 charged for every acre of land, £1 will be set apart to form an immigration fund, of which 10s. will be returned to the purchaser towards the passage-money of himself and his family, and 10s. towards the expense of sending out labouring emigrants selected by him; so that every sale of land, from the very commencement, will defray the cost of importing the additional labour requisite for its cultivation. Of the remaining £2 per acre, £1 will be appropriated to religious and educational endowments, in connexion with the Church of England. The results of the laissez faire principle, as applied to these matters in our other colonies, have been such as to convince all thinking men that an adequate provision for man's moral and religious wants in a new country contains the primary element of successful colonization; not only on account of the importance of such provision per se, but also because thereby alone can a really valuable class of men be induced to join in the foundation and settlement of colonies. Of the remaining £1 per acre the intended application is as follows:—10s. per acre will be paid as the price of the land; the remaining 10s. will form a fund to defray the expenses of the preliminary trigonometrical survey of the territory, of the subsequent surveys of each section as it may be selected, of commencing the formation of the principal roads of the few temporary buildings required, of the Association in England, and of the necessary staff in the colony. Upon the provisions which have been thus generally indicated, the promoters of the design confidently rely for counteracting those waste which, as experience has shown, are incidental to communities founded on an opposite principle, or rather it should be said on no principle at all. They believe that their scheme will prove attractive to a class whom the tone of society prevalent in other colonies has hitherto operated to repel. That the capitalist will see in its economical features security for safe and profitable investment; and that thus, for the first time in the history of colonization, there will be a newly-planted colony, not languishing for years amidst difficulty and disaster, but springing at once into rapid prosperity.

SITE OF THE CANTERBURY SETTLEMENT, NEW ZEALAND.

We are happy to add that the ecclesiastical arrangements of the settlement of Canterbury are in a state of great forwardness, and that the Rev. Thomas Jackson, M.A., canon of St. Paul's, and principal of the training College of Battersea, is likely to be appointed the first bishop.

The site of the projected colony consists of 2,400,000 acres, on the east coast of Middle Island, in a favourable position, apart from older settlements, and from the vicinity of the natives. It comprises 1,765,000 acres of plain land; of wood land, 237,100 acres; and of mountain and hill land, 397,900 acres; the total population of the native settlements being 359

Mr. Walter D. Mantell, Government Commissioner, in a letter, dated Port Levi, Banke's Peninsula, August 16, 1849, says:—"The province of Canterbury will, as I said when it lay waste on the 'grand plain,' bear comparison, not only with any unsettled district in New Zealand, but with any of the already-formed settlements: this, as far as my own observation goes. In fact, now that its capabilities have become so publicly known, even the breaking up of the Association cannot prevent its 'going-a-head,' and becoming, and remaining for a long time, the leading settlement in New Zealand, and English capital of the country."

COMPARATIVE SIZES OF DINORNIS, OSTRICH, AND NEW ZEALANDER.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.

FOSSIL REMAINS OF COLOSSAL BIRDS OF NEW ZEALAND.

THE announcement of a lecture on the extinct gigantic birds of New Zealand, by Dr. Mantell, attracted a brilliant and numerous audience to the Royal Institution on Friday evening. The Duke of Northumberland presided. Professor Faraday, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Lord Chief Baron, Lord Londesborough, and many other distinguished persons were present.

Dr. Mantell introduced the subject by a general review of the facts which have established the startling conclusion that races of animals are limited in their duration, in like manner as the individuals of a species: some may be destined to continue only for a few centuries—others many thousand years—but the peculiar type at length becomes extinct, and new forms of organisation make their appearance; though of the nature of the law which thus determines the annihilation of a race of highly organised beings, and whose effects through countless ages recent geological discoveries have in part revealed, we are as utterly ignorant as of that which governs the first appearance of the minutest animalcule which the powers of the microscope enable us to descry: both are veiled in inscrutable mystery. After instancing the proofs of the effects of this law afforded by the colossal reptiles of the secondary strata, and of the mammalia of the tertiary formations, Dr. Mantell dwelt at some length on the extirpation of the large frugivorous pigeon, the Dodo, which abounded in the islands of the Mauritius, when those countries were first colonized by the Dutch, nearly 300 years ago. The lecturer next noticed the first discovery of the fossil remains of the Dinornis in New Zealand, and then described the collection of remains made by his eldest son, Mr. Walter Mantell, and transmitted to England in 1848; this Dr. Mantell placed in the hands of Professor Owen for description. By this series, the skulls, and beaks, and eggs were first determined. This collection is now in the British Museum.

At the close of last year, another highly interesting series of bones were received by Dr. Mantell from his son; these were collected from the Middle Island, and formed the chief illustrations of the present lecture.

The bones gathered from the North Island were from a sand-bed on the west coast, between Wanganui and Waitaia, near the embouchure of a small river, called Waingongoro.

Mr. Mantell states that between Tukikan and Ohawetokotoko is a wide flat of undulated sand, about two hundred yards across, the surface of which, on his first visit, was covered with bones of men, moas, seals, &c., which had been overhauled by the Rev. R. Taylor. Upon the same level Mr. Mantell had some deep openings made at the base of the ancient cliffs, under the Pa, or village Ohawetokotoko, and then came to the bone deposit. The bones were generally perfect in shape, but so soft, that, when grasped strongly, they became a plastic clay.

"Unfortunately," says Mr. Mantell, "the natives soon caught sight of my operations, and came down in shoals, trampling on the bones I had carefully extracted and laid out to dry. The natives affirm that this sand flat to Rangatapu was one of the places first dwelt upon by their ancestors; and this seems not unlikely, for, in digging in various places, I found circular beds of ashes, and charcoal, and bones, very ancient, and such as are generally left by the native fires that have been long lighted in the same place. Fragments of obsidian, native flint, two fishing-line stones, and a whalebone mat were also dug up. The natives told me, and their assertion was corroborated by the appearance of the place, that within their memory the entire area was covered by drift-sand; in fact, the bones always seem to be imbedded on or beneath an old surface-level. Columns of vertebræ, when uncovered, were lying en situ and perfect, with, in rare instances, skull and pelvis; but to preserve these precious relics was impossible while beset with the hordes of Maoris, and I could not drive or bribe them away. The largest femur, tibia, and fibula were lying in their natural connexion, the leg slightly bent at the knee. A chain of vertebræ of the largest size was discovered near them, and I doubt not the whole belonged to the same colossal bird. Mixed with the bones, but exceedingly rare, were the fragments of egg-shells. In coming down from Ugamoli I discovered a few more remains of eggs: one fragment is four inches long, and gives a good chord by which to estimate the size of the original. As a rough guess, I may say that a common hat would make a good egg-cup for it. And, if native traditions are worthy of credit, the ladies have cause to mourn the extinction of the Moa. The long feathers of its crest were prized by their remote ancestors above all other ornaments. Those of the white crane, which now bear the highest value, are mere pigeons' feathers in comparison.'

The last collection received from Mr. Walter Mantell was chiefly obtained from a morass, or turbary deposit, of small extent, situated in a little bay near Waikouaite, about twenty miles to the north of the Scotch settlement of Otago. This swamp is covered by the sea, except at low water, and is rapidly wasting away. It is a fetid dark brown mass, largely composed of the fibres of the New Zealand flax (Phormium tenax); and, from the state in which the bones occur, suggests the inference that many of the birds were mired in the morass, in like manner as the gigantic extinct Irish elk in the bogs of Ireland, and the mastodons and mammoths in Big-bone Lick, in America: the bones, too, are in a similar state of preservation. The most extraordinary relics obtained from this spot were the entire series of bones of the shanks and feet (twenty-six in number) of the same individual tridactyle (three-toed) bird. The upper part of the shank-bones (tarso-metatarsals) were alone visible above the soil upon the retiring o the tide, standing erect, one leg being three feet in advance of the other. These were carefully dug up, and numbered in their natural sequence on the spot: they have been put together since they were received by Dr. Mantell, and were conspicuous objects on the table of the Institution. They are unquestionably the most extraordinary fossil relics of this kind ever brought to light.

We annex a Sketch of one of these legs. The toes present the characteristic number of bones observable in birds: thus, the inner toe has 3 bones; middle, 4; the outer toe 5; had there been a hinder toe that would have consisted of but 2 bones. The foot, when recent, with the cartilages, claws, &c., must have been 16 inches long and 18 inches wide; the height of the bird to which it belonged was probably about 10 feet. But there are several bones of the thigh, leg, &c., that indicate greater proportions, and an altitude of 12 or even 14 feet.

The Sketch subjoined of the outline of the Dinornis or Moa (reduced from Dr. Mantell's original drawing of the natural size, exhibited at the lecture) will serve to convey some idea of the colossal magnitude of this extinct wingless race of bipeds. The figures of an ostrich and of a native chief are introduced as a scale of comparison.

After a luminous summary of the osteological and physiological phenomena presented by these remains, Dr. Mantell entered upon the consideration of the bearings of this discovery on that mysterious problem, the restriction of a group of peculiar animals and plants to particular regions. Thus, New Zealand at the present time affords a striking example of a centre or focus of creations; for its fauna is altogether unlike that of any other spot on the face of the globe. While there are 50 or 60 genera of birds, there is but one ascertained indigenous or native land quadruped, and that is a species of rat! And among its birds, there is the Apteryx, which has no living analogue. The flora, too, presents an anomalous character; the ferns predominating over the grasses to a degree unknown in other lands.

But our limits compel us to close this imperfect notice of a discourse which, though beyond the usual extent of the lectures of the Royal Institution, engrossed the earnest attention of the audience to its termination. We can only add that Dr. Mantell stated his conviction, that the origin of the bone deposits of New Zealand, though geologically modern, is of high antiquity in relation to the human inhabitants of that country; and that there is every reason to conclude that these stupendous birds formerly ranged over a vast continent, now submerged beneath the ocean, and of which the Islands of the Pacific are the culminating points; thus realizing the idea of the poet—

> Art, nature, earth itself, to change is doomed:
> Earthquakes have raised to heaven the humble vale,
> And gulfs the mountain's mighty mass entombed,
> And where the Atlantic rolls wide continents have bloomed.

FOSSIL FOOT OF DINORNIS.

We must not omit to mention that Dr. Mantell placed before the Institution the fossil arm-bone of the most stupendous land-lizard ever discovered, it was 4½ feet long, and 32 inches in circumference. According to the proportions of a living crocodile, the animal to which it belonged must have been 90 feet in length! It was from the strata of Filgate Forest; and from the quarry from which the celebrated jaw of the Iguanodon was obtained.

FETE OF THE ROYAL COMPANY OF ARCHERS, ON THE LINKS OF MONTROSE.

THE ROYAL ARCHERS' FETE AT MONTROSE.

On Friday, the 3rd instant, the Links of Montrose were the scene of a very interesting spectacle—a competition among the Royal Company of Archers, the Queen's Body Guard for Scotland; the prizes being a Silver Arrow, &c., presented by the town of Montrose. This was followed by a contest for prizes in the usual routine of Scottish games. As the archery was the finest display of the kind which has taken place in Scotland during the last century, we have engraved the exciting scene.

At an early hour in the morning, long trains on the Aberdeen Railway, from north, south, and west, poured thousands of visitors into Montrose; and, before eleven o'clock, the town was crowded with strangers from all quarters, about 4000 having come by the railway, besides a vast number from the more immediate neighbourhood. At a little before twelve o'clock, the Archers marched down to the Race-ground, preceded by the militia staff, the magistrates, and town-officers, the band playing national airs in the centre of the procession, the last column of which was composed of the scholars belonging to the public seminaries, in front of which a Waterloo veteran marched, sabre in hand, and a nine-shaped medal dangling at his breast.

At twelve o'clock, the Archers entered the lists, and began to shoot. The distance between the two butts was 100 yards; and the prize a piece of plate, valued at about 20 guineas, to be presented by the gentlemen in the town and neighbourhood. The wind was blowing strongly, and in gusts from the north, and the sky soon became overcast with rain, which fell heavily. This, however, did not interrupt the Archers; they fired on briskly, with thousands of keen eyes from under umbrellas following their arrows through the air, every arrow that stuck in the target producing a motion and kind of suppressed cheer among the spectators. Sometimes, four or five arrows were sticking in the target at one time, and we observed one strike within two inches of the bull's eye. Fortunately, the weather cleared up before two o'clock. When the contest with the bow ended, Alex. Duff, Esq., W.S., Edinburgh, was declared the gainer of the plate, and immediately the Archers marched off the ground in beautiful style.

The number of spectators was estimated at 15,000, by far the greatest number ever assembled on the Links of Montrose.

The archery was no sooner finished than the games began. These consisted of throwing the hammer, putting of the stone, leaping and racing, climbing of the pole, the cask race, &c.

In the evening a ball was given, at which the whole of the Royal Archers were present, and also the élite of Forfar and Kincardine Shires. The handsome suite of apartments in the Town Hall were thrown open on the occasion, and being tastefully decorated by Mr. Japp, and judiciously arranged, they were much admired by the distinguished party. At twelve o'clock upwards of 120 sat down to supper, at which the Provost presided, and James Hope, Esq., Sir John Stuart Forbes, Bart., of Fettercairn and Pitsligo, and Sir John Ogilvy of Inverquharity, acted as croupiers. After supper, the party again assembled in the ball-room, and the dance continued till an early hour in the morning.

THE ROYAL ARCHERS.

The Royal Company of Archers was established by James I. of Scotland, more than four hundred years ago, as the King's Body Guard for Scotland. In the turbulent times which followed the reign of James, it appears that the original documents pertaining to the Guard had been lost; but in the year 1677, we find the Royal Archers recognised by an act of Privy Council, and a prize of £20 sterling ordered to be given annually to the best archer at weapon shawings. In 1703 Queen Anne granted new privileges to the Royal Company of Archers, or rather restored the privileges they had lost by their adherence to the falling fortunes of the unfortunate family of Stuart; and the prize of £20, which had been withheld by King William, after the Revolution, was restored by George III. to the Royal Archers of Scotland, who claimed the protection of the Sovereign.

The civil administration of the affairs of the Royal Company, we believe, are managed by a council, consisting of seven, who are chosen annually, at a general meeting of the members. In other respects the body is entirely conducted by military rules and discipline. The Duke of Buccleuch is captain-general; the lieutenants-general are Viscount Melville, Right Hon. C. Hope, Lord Elcho, Sir J. Hope, Bart.; the majors-general, the Duke of Montrose, the Earl of Morton, and the Marquis of Dalhousie; the ensigns-general, the Duke of Roxburgh, the Marquis of Tweeddale, and Sir John S. Forbes, Bart.; besides a number of others, composed of the flower of the aristocracy and gentlemen of Scotland.

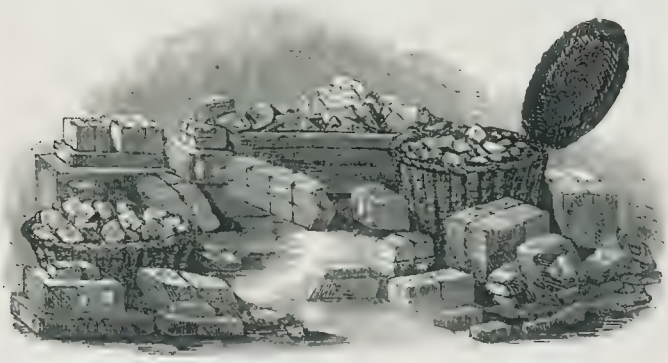
The Royal company consists of about 500 members. The field uniform is of dark green cloth, faced with black braiding, with a narrow stripe of crimson velvet in the centre. The hat is of the same colour, with a handsome medalion in front, and a plume of black feathers.

His Majesty King William IV. graciously presented the Royal Company of Archers, his Body Guard for Scotland, with new colours. The one combines both the old ones, with the words, "The Royal Company of Archers;" and the other bears the Royal Arms of Scotland, with the words, "King's Body Guard for Scotland." His Majesty expressly confirmed the appointment of the Royal Company to be "the King's Body Guard for Scotland;" the Duke of Buccleuch, as Captain-General, rode in the coronation procession of Queen Victoria.

The majority of the above details we have condensed from the Montrose Standard.

EXTRAORDINARY POSTAGE STAMPS CONTRIBUTION.

Some time since, there appeared in the public journals a statement to the effect that a certain young lady, under age, was to be placed in a convent, by her father, if she did not procure, before the 30th of April last, one million of used postage stamps. This caused numerous persons to forward stamps for the purpose of securing her liberty. In March last, a lady, a member of one of the first families in Derbyshire, residing not many miles from Derby, mentioned the conditions to her friends, and in a short time the lady began to receive packages by post and railway from every quarter, which poured in in such numbers, that, in ten days, during last April, she received parcels containg millions of stamps. The walking postman, who was in the habit of delivering a few letters daily at the mansion where the lady resides, became so loaded with letters and packages containing Queen's heads, that it was necessary to employ another man to assist him. On one morning between ninety and one hundred letters and packets arrived by post, and on another between 120 and 130. These were in addition to multitudes which arrived on other days. Boxes, bales, and packages also poured in by railway; and to such an extent that it became necessary to give public notice, by advertisements and printed circulars, that it was urgently desired no more stamps should be sent, as the young lady had procured the number she required. The accompanying Sketch gives some idea of the packages. One of them is a large wine-hamper; another, a large wine-cooler; next, a large clothes-basket. The two latter were used to put the smaller packets in as they arrived, being, altogether, many bushels. Next is a packet from a great mercantile house in London, and containing 240,000 Queen's heads. There was, also, a tea-chest full, sent rom another quarter. There were nine boxes between one and two feet long, a foot wide, and from four to ten inches deep; seven packages between one and two feet long, a foot wide, and about six inches deep. Smaller packets formed a heap two feet six inches long, one foot wide, and one foot six inches deep; and two baskets two feet long, one foot six inches wide, and one foot four inches deep were filled; besides which, many boxes full were not received, but sent back to the railway station. In addition to this accumulation, letters from all quarters arrived; many from persons of the highest rank, expressing the deepest sympathy and the most kindly feeling. Numbers of them stated that large collections of heads would still be sent if required.



EXTRAORDINARY ACCUMULATION OF POSTAGE STAMPS.

PARLIAMENTARY PORTRAITS.

HENRY TUFNELL, ESQ., M.P. FOR DEVONPORT, SECRETARY TO THE TREASURY.

The subject of our memoir—son of W. Tufnell, formerly M.P. for Colchester—was born at the city of Chichester in 1806. When about ten years of age he was sent to Eton, which he left in 1824, and entered Christ's Church, Oxford, where he took second class honours in classics. Whilst a student, he devoted himself to the study of German; and, in concert with George Cornwall Lewis, now M.P. for Herefordshire and Under-Secretary for the Home Department, published a translation in two volumes octavo of Müller's "Dorians." In connexion with this translation, it deserves mention that neither Mr. Tufnell nor Mr. Lewis were known to Dr. Müller, the learned Professor of History in the University of Gottingen; but that when, having made a considerable progress with their translation, they wrote, requesting his perusal of their manuscript, with the view of his making such corrections as additional research might have suggested to him or the rendering from the original require, Dr. Müller not only with the utmost care revised the manuscript, but so enlarged and corrected it, that the translation might have fairly claimed to be a new edition of the original. The same able author's "Introduction to a Scientific System of Mythology" was embodied in the translation, and his valuable dissertation on the "Early History of the Macedonian Nation" given in an Appendix. The value of the work is proved by the fact that it has become a standard at Cambridge and Eton, has passed through a second, and is on the eve of a third edition.

HENRY TUFNELL, ESQ., M.P. FOR DEVONPORT.

In 1829 Mr. Tufnell took his degree of B.A.; and, in 1830, married Anne Augusta, daughter of Sir Robert Wilmot Horton, Bart. In 1831, Sir Robert was appointed Governor of Ceylon, and Mr. Tufnell accompanied him to the colony as his private secretary. At that time, the native population of Ceylon were in a condition of serfdom that bordered closely upon slavery. They were subject to be called upon by the native chiefs to render service at any time. They must labour on public works for next to nothing, and must, at a moment's notice, lend their aid gratuitously in carrying the baggage of any civil or military authority who might happen to be upon a journey. In 1832, this compulsory labour system was abolished by an Order in Council dated the 28th of September, which was received by the natives in the colony with unbounded joy, and was soon followed by the disappearance of their former stubborn lazuess, and the appearance, in its stead, of the readiness to work for fair wages. To this new spirit Mr. Tufnell gave additional impetus by the early establishment of a savings bank at Colombo, a low-ing fee per cent upon deposits, and which rapidly rose in public estimation, and still continues popular and prosperous. He especially pointed out the importance of the bank as a security for the honesty of native servants; and, in employing them, the chief enquiry now came to be, "Have you got the bank ?" So that, after a little time, few servants failed to establish such guarantees of their faithfulness and good conduct Nor was this the only unofficial matter of public importance to the colony, to which Mr. Tufnell gave his attention. Between Colombo and Candy, a distance of 72 miles, Sir Edward Barnes had constructed as fine a road as any in England. After the true English model, it was broad, level, raised in the centre, well drained, and with grass-waved sides. Still, however had to go between Colombo and Candy must make the journey on horseback: the custom was to borrow the horses of friends along the line for the purpose; in this way Mr. Tufnell had, on one occasion, to make the journey, borrowing horses of five different persons, stopping at little wayside houses on the road, and spending some three or four days upon the distance. This brought him to the resolution of establishing a regular mail-coach, day and night, between the two places. Accordingly, a company was formed by the Governor, Mr. Tufnell, and a few people with more enterprise than faith in the project. The two-horse coach was about the first public conveyance in India, and had difficulties of its own sort to contend with at the commencement. The road was smooth enough, horses and coach easy to be had but no coachmen who could bear the heat—Europeans could not stand it. Native soldiers, after due practice, served very well, but the coach was usually driven by two drivers, so common natives had to be put into training. At length a sufficient number were made ready for the road, and the coach ran on and prosecuted carrying parcels, passengers, and the mail: and paying the adventurous shareholders, and so it still does, an excellent dividend.

But the most important measure to which Mr. Tufnell lent his influence was the improvement of the press. The system of the time was that of Sir Wilmot Horton, the Ceylon Gazette, a wretched publication, printed at the Government press, having one half of it taken up with the Royal arms and official advertisements, and the other half filled up so as to collect another portion, and without comment, most of it flat and old, was the sole public paper at Ceylon. There are now several of different political opinions, and all are free.

The first step, however, towards enfranchisement, was the starting, through the influence of Mr. Tufnell, of the Columbo Journal. The first number was published on the 7th of January, 1834. The paper wore in every respect an improved appearance from the Gazette. It was double the size, was published every Wednesday and Saturday; and, though still under control, was sufficiently free to attract attention in India, and especially to excite official indignation at Madras, where the press was under the sternest censorship. Many of the leading articles of the paper were written by Mr. Tufnell's correspondence, were written by Mr. Tufnell himself, and especially important were a series of letters from his pen, under the signature of Liber, in favour of the abolition of the Arrack monopoly, than which nothing could be more grievous to the proprietors and cultivators of the soil. Cinnamon was then a Government monopoly, and cinnamon trees peculiarly cared for. No man must plant them, or cut them down; and, in clearing away jungle, a cinnamon tree were wounded, the injurer must pay a fine, so that, instead of this luxurious spice being a blessing, it was in reality a plague to the island. Mr. Tufnell pointed out that the abolition of the monopoly, which was defended solely on the ground of revenue, would give rise to such increased production as would enable the Government to derive a larger revenue from a moderate tax than they realised by the monopoly, and by the abolition, to which these letters of Liber led the way, furnished results in proof of the soundness of the reasoning, beyond the expectations of the most sanguine.

In 1834 Mr. Tufnell returned to England, and in the following year was appointed private secretary to Lord Minto, First Lord of the Admiralty from September, 1835, to September, 1841. At the general election in 1835 Mr. Tufnell stood for Colchester, in opposition to Messrs. Sanderson and Smith. The whole actual sum of the popular and the sum of hands at the nomination were with him: but at the poll, which took place on the 8th of January, the numbers were —Sanderson, 637, S myth, 587; Tufnell, 503. One of the immediate results of the contest was the formation of a Reform association at Colchester, which, at the next election, brought the Blues to a compromise, and was successful in obtaining an open municipal corporation for Colchester. One of the largest meetings ever held in the city was held to celebrate the event, at which Mr. Tufnell spoke earnestly in favour of the extension to Ireland of the same corporate liberties as had been granted to England.

Immediately after the contest at Colchester, Mr. Tufnell was invited to become a candidate for North Essex, which he declined, preferring to keep open his connexion with the city which his father had represented, and where he himself had won so large a popularity.

At the general election, in 1837, Mr. Tufnell stood for Ipswich, and, after a severe contest, was returned, but unseated on petition. In Oct., 1839, he was appointed a Lord of the Treasury; and Sir Edward Codrington having retired through the influence of the command at Portsmouth, Mr. Tufnell, after a hard battle with the Right Hon. George Dawson, was returned.

In the debate on the sugar duties, May 17, 1840, Mr. Tufnell spoke ably in defence of the Government proposal to reduce the duty upon foreign sugars from about 200 to 50 per cent.; and retorted upon Lord Stanley's statement that those measures were brought forward by the Ministers when tottering to their fall, that, however that might be, "it was the system of the country so long weighed down the energies and productive industry of the empire was, at last, overturning its fall."

At the general election in 1841 Mr. Tufnell was again opposed by Mr. Dawson, but again, after a severe contest, was successful.

In 1842, the committee on Sir Robert Peel to office, in 1843, Mr. Tufnell, at the request of Lord John Russell, undertook the management of Parliament, or, as it may be better understood, the whip of the Whig party in Opposition.

In 1842, the committee on the Sudbury election reported the existence of systematic bribery and corruption, and recommended that the borough should be disfranchised. The bill for the purpose was carried in the Commons; but, on being sent up to the Lords, they also had to appoint a committee, and to inquire on their own account, which not being done until the following session, the ardour of the few honest men in the borough had meantime cooled: some of the more important witnesses examined before the Commons' committee kept out of the way of the Lords', who, considering the evidence before them insufficient to establish the case as reported by the committee of the Commons, threw out the disfranchisement bill. In the following session, June 13, 1843, on a motion by Colonel Rushbrooke for a new writ for Sudbury, Mr. Tufnell proposed, as an amendment, the appointment of a commission to take the evidence on the spot; and, amongst other matters, mentioned that in the fifteen years from 1826 to 1841, twelve elections had taken place in Sudbury, at which there had scarcely been an instance of two persons voting alike, and that many persons having been returned at consecutive elections; and it was stated in evidence before the hand-loom weavers' committee, that the electors were influenced in giving their votes by the mere consideration of how many days' employment the largest sum of money. The immediate result of the debate was the appointment, at the recommendation of Mr. William Wynn, of a committee to compare the evi[illegible] before the committees of the Lords and Commons; the question was however postponed until after the 10th of July; and, on the report of the comparison committee being brought up, the recommendation of Mr. Tufnell was adopted, and the commission sent to Sudbury having got at the facts, Sudbury, their report was sufficient, and convinced the Lords that the disfranchisement bill was passed, and, curiously enough, the number of members of the House of Commons has since been suffered to remain in a deficiency of two.

In February, 1845, Sir John Emerson Tennent, Secretary of Ceylon, issued a peremptory order that the coffee lands under cultivation by the civil servants should all within the period of twelve months be sold, and the cultivation at once—on pain of dismissal—as hindered by engaging in trade, and thereby neglecting their duties. Mr. Tufnell had set the example to the civil servants of taking up these lands, and the result was a rapid increase in the cultivation of coffee, so that in 1842 48,000 acres had been brought into cultivation, and important steps for general extension to the benefit of the entire colony. It was true that now the culture had so taken root in the colony, it was right the civil servants should have no further connexion with it, but not that they should be driven by sales forced on within so short a period. Mr. Tufnell's practical acquaintance with the colony enabled him to procure an extension of the term for the coffee plantation sales, and a despatch from the Colonial Office to Sir Colin Campbell, directing the withdrawal of the measure upon the same civil servants should exact of candidates is, that, if returned, they will really attend in the House." As it is, the duty of getting members to the House, or, on occasion, from it, devolves upon the Secretary to the Treasury for the Ministry, and upon the aspirants to that office amongst parties out of power.

At the general election in 1847 all parties in Devonport were ready to admit Mr. Tufnell's claims without opposition, if he would agree to share the representation with a Conservative. Deeming which, and determining to give his support to Sir John Romilly, he was opposed by Mr. Joseph Sandars, jun.; and the numbers at the close of the poll were—Tufnell, 1138; Romilly, 1018, Sanders, 893.

In 1844 Mr. [illegible] the Hon. Frances, daughter of the first Lord Strafford. 1835; Viscount and Earl, in 1847. She died in 1846, and in m[illegible], Lady Anne, daughter of the fourth Earl of Rosebery.

Our Por[illegible]s from a photograph by Kilburn.

Mrs. Packe Reading gave a grand concert on Wednesday evening, at her residence on R[illegible] terrace, at which the leading artistes of Her Majesty's Theatre assisted. His Royal[illegible]ighness the Duke of Cambridge honoured the re[illegible] season with his presence.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, May 19.—Whit Sunday.
MONDAY, 20.—Whit Monday.
TUESDAY, 21.—Whit Tuesday.
WEDNESDAY, 22.—Ember Week. Alexander Pope born 1688.
THURSDAY, 23.—Ember Week. Queen dies.
FRIDAY, 24.—Queen Victoria born, 18.9
SATURDAY, 25.—Princess Helena born, 1846.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 25, 1850.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M A M A M A M A M A M A M A
h m h m h m h m h m h m h m
7 43 8 2.0	8 19 8 49	10 15	10 50	11 25	11 59	This 0 20 0 46
1 5	1 31	1 56	2 20	2 45	3 10	3 36

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—GRAND EXTRA NIGHT, combining the talents of Mesdames Sontag, Giuliani, and Frezzolini, Signori Coletti, Ciabolleti, Fornasari, and Lablache, Eddles Carlotta Grisi, Adelaide Vestris, Mayo Taglioni and M Taglioni, will take place on THURSDAY NEXT, May 23rd, 1850, when will be performed Mozart's Opera of DON GIOVANNI. The Scenery by Mr Charles Marshall. Don Giovanni, Sig Coletti. Don Ottavio, Sig Ca'zolari: Masetto, Sig F Lablache, Leporello, Sig Lablache, Donna Anna, Mad Frezzolini. Donna Elvira, Mdme Giuliani; and Zerlina, Mdme Sontag. In the Ball Scene will be danced by Mdlle Carlotta Grisi and Mdlle Marie Taglioni, who will appear as a Spanish Cavalier). Mozart's Incidental Minuet in G, and also Mozart's celebrated Gavotte in A Minor, as performed by the Pupils at the Royal Opera Ber lin —Dress r of the Music and Conductor, Mr Balle

With various Entertainments in the Ballet Department. Including the new and original Grand Pas de Trois, by M Paul Taglioni, the music by Signor Pugni, entitled LES GRACES Espagnoles: Mdlle Carlotta Grisi, Mdlle Marie Taglioni, Eglisia, Mdlle Amalia Ferraris: Mdlles Julia Lamoreux, Rosa, Assandon, &

The Second Grand Divertissement. A Grand ENTERTAINMENT will take place on MONDAY MORNING, May 27th, 1850, supported by the Whole Strength of the Company. Applications for Boxes, Stalls, and Tickets, to be made at the Box-office of the Theatre. Doors open at Seven, the Opera to Commence at Half-past Seven o'Clock.

FRENCH PLAYS, ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Combination of Talent. MONDAY NEXT, MAY 20, the celebrated comedy of LE MARI A LA CAMPAGNE, with the following powerful Cast:—Cesar Ribeaupierre, M. Lafont: Ferdinand Colombert, M. Regnier; Ursule, Mdlle. Nathalie; Madame de Rohan, Mdlle. Rosanne; Pauline, Mdlle. Renard: And other Entertainments. The following popular pieces are in active preparation, and will be produced in rotation—LOUISON, comedy, en deux actes, par M Alfred de Musset; LA PAIX A TOUT PRIX, comedie, en deux actes, par M. Ernest Serret. UN CHEMIN PAR LA VIGNE, comedie en un acte, par M Bayard: and IL FAUT QU'UNE PORTE SOIT OUVERTE OU FERMEE, proverbe de M. Alfred de Musset. Boxes, 6s.; Pit 3s.; Amphitheatre, 2s. Stalls, 5s; and Tickets may be obtained at Mr. MITCHELL'S Royal Library 33 Old Bond-street; and at the Box-office of the Theatre, which is open daily, from 11 o'clock.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W Batty.—Enormous attraction for the Whitsuntide Holidays. First night of the revival of the Grand Military Spectacle of the AFFGHANISTAN WAR. In which will be introduced a variety of equestrian and other Feats, by the whole of the Company. On WHIT MONDAY, MAY 20th, 1850, and during the week, the entertainments will commence at Seven o'clock, in the first time these seven years, with the immensely successful grand national, military, equestrian, and dramatic spectacle, in three acts, entitled the AFGHANISTAN WAR. Or, the Storming of Cabul and British Triumph in India; concluding with every possible sure to all the original and magnificent effects call ing into action the unequaled resources of the establishment. A Brass Band engaged especially for the occasion, and a host of auxiliaries. To conclude with the laughable Farce of Lady's Pass of Equitation." in the Circus Olympique—introducing, for the first time, La Petite Jannette, the infant Prodigy, and the Wonderful Steed Bucephalus, in a peculiarly interesting and novel act of the Menage, being a miniature repr-s-n-tation of that accomplished artiste Mdlle Caroline, on the high school of equitation. To conclude with the Grand Pas of TWO GEEGORIES.—Box-office open from Eleven till Four. [illegible] Manager, Mr. W. West.

MUSICAL UNION. — FIFTH MATINEE, WILLIS'S ROOMS, TUESDAY, MAY 21.—Quartet in D, No. 79, Haydn; Concerto, D minor (Allegro), Bach: Sonata-quartet in C minor, No. 5, Op. 18, No. 5, Beethoven, Quartets on a theme, Kreutzer and Mendelssohn, Hungarian Vocalists. Recruitants Sabion, Delaffre, Hill, Patti, Howe: Pianoforte, Sainton. (his first public performance in London), Strasgurg Tickets, Half-a-Guinea each, to be procured at CRAMER and Co.'s. Members can introduce visitors by application to Mr. Ella, Secretary. J. ELLA, Director.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The Subscribers and the Public are respectfully informed, the SIXTH CONCERT will take place at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on MONDAY EVENING MAY 20. Programme.—Sinfonia in D, No. 4, Mozart.—Trio, violin and pianoforte, Messrs. Blagrove and Lucas, Op. 49, Mendelssohn. Corol.—Concerto in G minor, pianoforte, M. Thalberg: Mozart—Sinfonia pastorale, Beethoven Vocalist, Vocal Performers: Mdme. Madeleine Nottes (from the Theatre Royal, Hanover), and Herr Formes. Conductor, Sir Chas. Stegg (his last appearance). Single tickets (little), £1 10s, triple tickets (little), £3 3s; to be obtained of Messrs. Addison, 210, Regent-street. G W BUDD, Sec.

MR. HENRY WYLDE.—The Directors of the BLACKHEATH CLASSICAL SUBSCRIPTION CONCERTS announce that an EVENING CONCERT will take place on SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 8, when Mr. Henry Wylde will perform Mozart's Quartet, Beethoven's Quintet Op 16, and Hummel's Sonata Op. 7 The following Artists have been engaged for these Concerts; viz. violin, Herr Brandt: Mr. Willy, and M. Sainton: viola, Mr. Hill and Mr. Westlake, violoncello. Mr. Hausmann Vocal Performers, Mr. Lockey, Miss Durrant, Mr. J. Barnett, and Mr. Weiss.

MR. JOHN PARRY'S ENTERTAINMENT.—MUSIC HALL, Store-street, Bedford-square.—Mr JOHN PARRY will give his ENTERTAINMENT in the above Hall, on MONDAY EVENING, the 20th inst., commencing at Half-past Eight. Tickets, Stalls, and Boxes to be had at Mesars. OLLIVIER, 41 and 42, New Bond-street, and the principa. Music-sellers

MR. ALBERT SMITH has the honour to announce an ENTERTAINMENT, being a Reminiscence of his Trip to Constantinople and the OVERLAND MAIL, at WILLIS'S ROOMS, St James', on TUESDAY EVENING, the 28.h inst.

LOVE'S ENTERTAINMENTS.—POLYPHONIM EXTRAORDINARY.—These celebrated Entertainments will be delivered on Monday, May 20, at the Corn Hotel, Colchester; on Tuesday, May 21, at the Theatre, Woodbridge; on Wednesday, May 22, at the Assembly Rooms, Aldeburgh; Eddies Garden, White Hart, Saxmundham; on Friday, May 24, at the New Lecture Ha., Ipswich; on Tuesday, May 28, at the Public Hall, Ongar, on Wednesday, May 29, at the Public Hall, Romford; on Thursday, May 30, at the Town Hall, Higham Ferrers; on Friday, May 3., at the Town Hall, Welling-borough; on Monday, June 3, at the Newburgh Rooms, Brighton.—Begin at Eight—Tickets, Stalls, 3s.; unreserved seats, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Doors open half an hour previous.

ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS, REGENT'S-PARK.—Admission EVERY DAY in WHITSUN WEEK, EXCEPT SATURDAY, at SIXPENCE EACH PERSON.

GRAND HOLIDAY FETES.—First Appearance of Mons JULLIEN.—ROYAL SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—WHIT-MONDAY, MAY 20, and TUESDAY following days, Unique Gigantic Panorama of the PASSAGE of the ALPS by HANNIBAL and his ARMY, illustrated by MOVING FIGURES on the SIZE of LIFE SPLENDID MENAGERIE.—GRAND PROMENADE CONCERT, by the UNRIVALLED BAND of the Establishment. Solo Players, Messrs. Cooper, Agnew, Pratten, Lazarus, Collinet, Jarrett, Sommers, Somouberg, and Winterbottom; Mons. Jullien, Conductor. Daily at 1, Evening at 8 Admission 1s. Reserved seats, 2s. An interesting historical record of the event may be had at the Gallery.

PANORAMA of the LAKES of KILLARNEY.—Just Opened, at BURFORD'S PANORAMA ROYAL, LEICESTER SQUARE, a View of these celebrated and interesting Lakes, from Cora Castle, and surrounding Country, painted on the spot, and surrounding beautiful scenery The VIEWS of the ARCTIC REGIONS and of POMPEII are also open.—Admission, in each View, or 2s 6d to the three. Schools half-price. —Open from Ten till dusk.

NILE.—GRAND MOVING PANORAMA of the NILE, comprising all the Monuments of Antiquity on its banks, to which is added the interest of the great rosidential Temple of Abou Simbel, recently discovered by Messrs. Wilkinson, and Fahey. Also, a collection of Egyptian and Nubian Curiosities.—Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, daily at 12 and 8 o'clock. Stalls, 3s.; gallery, 1s. Children and schools half price.

TRAFALGAR.—An Interesting Model of the BATTLE of TRAFALGAR is NOW EXHIBITING at 191, NEW BOND-STREET, next to Clarendon Hotel, near the Burlington Arcade. The Model has lately been visited by his Grace the Duke of Wellington, Admiral Sir Edward Codrington, Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, Lord Ingestrie, and many officers present at that celebrated engagement.—From Ten in the Morning till Six in the Evening, brilliantly Illuminated.—Admission, One Shilling, Children, Half-price.

INDIA OVERLAND MAIL DIORAMA.—GALLERY of ILLUSTRATION, 14, REGENT-STREET, WATERLOO-PLACE.—Three New Scenes each day. A GRAND MOVING DIORAMA, illustrating the route of the OVERLAND MAIL to INDIA, from Southampton to Calcutta, accompanied by descriptive details and appropriate Music; a new one daily. Morning Performances at 12 and 1 o'clock, and in the Evening at Eight o'clock.—Admission, 1s.; Stalls, 2s. 6d. Doors open for each Representation half an hour previous to the above hours. Descriptive Catalogues may be obtained.

CALIFORNIA AND ITS GOLD MINES WHITSUNTIDE HOLIDAYS. FREMONT'S OVERLAND ROUTE to OREGON, TEXAS, and CALIFORNIA: across the Rocky Mountains, made by order of the United States Government, illustrated by a Grand Moving Panoramic Diorama from Washington City, portraying the thrilling events that occurred during the Journey, including Mr. William Fremont, and Mr. Stewart and party, while crossing the Rocky Mountains, and discovery of the great Gold Mines, NOW OPEN DAILY at the Exhibition, at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, every morning at Half-past Two evening, Quarter to Eight.—Admission, 1s.; Stalls, 2s. Ambhitheatre, 6d.

WHITSUN HOLIDAYS.
ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—During this week the ALPINE SINGERS will perform several of their National Airs, daily at Four, and Eight o'clock.
LOBOPHY of SCIENTIFIC RECREATION, with OPTICAL EFFECTS, daily at Two, and every Evening at a Quarter-past Nine.—LECTURE by J H Pepper, Esq. on the CHEMISTRY of INVENTIONS, with special reference to the application for and copying by Balloons Pyrotechnic and other Signals to Sir John Franklin, daily at a quarter-past Three, and every Evening at Eight. DISSOLVING VIEWS, illustrating the Arctic Regions and Ceylon, also Views of London in the 16th Century, and as it now is. DIVER and DIVING-BELL, &c. &c.—Admission, 1s; Schools, Half-price.

THE NATIONAL INSTITUTION for the EXHIBITION of MODERN ART, PORTLAND GALLERY, No. 316, Regent-street (opposite the Polytechnic Institution).—The EXHIBITION of the above Association is NOW OPEN, from Nine till Dusk.—Admission, 1s. Catalogues, 6d. Single Season Tickets, 5s
BELL SMITH, Hon. Sec.

HAIL INSURANCE, RETURN OF PREMIUM, AND REDUCTION OF RATES
A Return will be made on the Premiums paid by Parties insuring against loss by damage from Hail in the forthcoming season in the ROYAL FARMERS' and GENERAL FIRE, LIFE, and HAIL INSURANCE INSTITUTION
ESTABLISHED 1840 CAPITAL £500,000.
Upon the following scale:—

To parties insured five years in succession	.. ..	75 per cent.
To ditto, four years ditto	.. ..	60 "
To ditto, three years ditto	.. ..	45 "
To ditto, two years ditto	.. ..	30 "

The mode of insurance has been simplified by the adoption of one uniform rate of 6d per acre for the different crops, and the reduction to the quarters per acre. Wheat, Barley, Oats, Peas, Beans, Tares, Potatoes, Turnips, Rape, Turnip Tares, Vetches, or Tares (green), Buckwheat, Clover grown, Rye-grass grown, Mangel Wurzel and Beet
A great reduction has been made in the rates for insuring
Glass in Hothouses, Greenhouses, &c. 20s per cent and upwards.
LOSSES PAID IMMEDIATELY.
STAMP DUTY PAID BY THE OFFICE
Agents appointed in all the principal towns in the kingdom.
316 Strand, London. WILLIAM SHAW, Managing Director.

NEW LIFE TABLES.
THE ALLIANCE BRITISH and FOREIGN LIFE and FIRE ASSURANCE COMPANY, Bartholomew-lane, London.
Capital £5,000 000 Sterling.—Established 1824.
Securify, the large Invested Capital, and the personal responsibility of upwards of One Thousand Shareholders.
The Board, with a view of giving increased facilities to the Public in the transaction of Life Business, has recently entered the consideration of various Tables in addition to those they had previously in use 1 Non Participating, on Reduced Rates of Premium. 2. Tables on Increasing and Decreasing Scales. 3. Tables subject to a Limited Number of Annual Payments. 4 Tables for Endowment Assurances.
No minimum rates are charged. Fees abolished
Parties proceeding to any part of Europe without extra Premium. The Lives of Naval and Military Officers, not in actual service, are taken at the usual rates. A Commission to Solicitors and Agents bringing business is paid Detailed Prospectuses, with Tables of Rates and full particulars, will, on application, be forwarded by post, or may be obtained at the Head Office, 1, Bartholomew-lane, London; at the Office of the Company, 95, George-street, Edinburgh, and at the various agencies in England, Scotland, and Ireland. ⁂ Loans on the Deposit of Unencumbered Policies of the Company are made, up to their value, without legal expenses to the borrower. FIRE RISKS NOW are accepted at Home at the usual rates. The Company prosecute both Fire and Life Assurance Abroad on reasonable terms.
A. HAMILTON, Secretary
F. A. ENGELBACH, Actuary

LONDON and SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.—Suburban Residence.—Season Tickets, at Reduced Rates, for the Year or for shorter periods to One Month, are granted to the accommodation of suburban residence, the Directors have lately reduced the rate of SEASON TICKETS, especially for the longer distances, so that persons desirous of residing in the country may now live at a more beautiful spot on this railway within 40 miles of London, and be conveyed in a first-class carriage both ways, daily, at a weekly charge, varying with the distance, from 8s. to 16s. per week
Families of the middle classes who have their residences in London to move into the country during the summer months, Season Tickets are now issued at reduced rates for one month.

SCALE OF SEASON TICKETS.

Waterloo To or from	Yearly.	6 Months.	3 Months.	1 Month.	1 Month.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Wandsworth	1 0 0	0 12 0	0 7 0	0 2 6	—
Clapham Common	1 0 0	0 12 0	0 7 0	0 2 6	—
Putney	1 0 0	0 12 0	0 7 0	0 2 6	—
Barnes	1 0 0	0 12 0	0 7 0	0 2 6	—
Chiswick	1 0 0	0 12 0	0 7 0	0 2 6	—
Mortlake	1 0 0	0 12 0	0 7 0	0 2 6	—
Kew	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Wimbledon	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Richmond	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Hampton	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Teddington	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Isleworth	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Twickenham	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Feltham	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Ashford	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Hounslow	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Staines	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Kingston	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Kingston Court	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Esher	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Weybridge	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Woking	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Godalming	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Guildford	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Farnham	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Farnham	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Basingstoke	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Aldershot	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Ascot	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Sunningdale	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Staines	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Woking	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Godalming	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Guildford	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Farnham	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Farnham	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Basingstoke	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Aldershot	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Ascot	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—
Sunningdale	1 0 0	0 16 0	0 10 0	0 3 6	—

Second-class tickets about 15 per cent. less than the above.
When two or more members of the same family subscribe at the same time, for the same period, and to the same station, a deduction from the above rates will be made on the following scale:—

When two subscribe	10 per cent. reduction.
" three "	15 "

Children under 14 years of age to be charged half price. "
Application for Season Tickets to be made in writing to the Treasurer, A. Morgan, Esq., York-road, Waterloo.
By order, WYNDHAM HARDING, Secretary
May 1, 18.0.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

THE WARTHILL BIRD is thanked for the request of the New Forest sport, though we have not room for it.

A SUBSCRIBER.—We should have readily thought it possible that, at the time of the birth a Prince of Wales, the Royal Arms should be altered, as you state it was in Lancashire. We think however, that there are numerous good reasons for the change.

A SUBSCRIBER FROM BIRMINGHAM.—The Act of Parliament referred to is 26 Geo 3, c. 57, and not 27 Geo 3, as you have stated. The Act is entitled "An Act for the more effectual preventing of Frauds from time to time committed in the Assize of Bread, and for other purposes therein mentioned."

WILLOUGHBY HUSSEY.—The honorary secretary of the Chetham Society is William Fleming, M.D

T B S.—We can trace no arms to the name of Bisford, of Devon

FYNES.—England was first divided into counties by King Alfred

A CONSTANT SUBSCRIBER.—The only means by which an illegitimate son can become entitled to arms or crest is by grant from the Kings of Arms, at a cost of seventy-five guineas

W H.—Your case is a one Fat Sikka piece for Bengal, struck in the 37th year of the reign of Shah Alem

INQUIRER.—An imitation of one of the jettons of Louis XIV., struck by Cornelius Lauffer, is described in Rapkeisen's work.

A GARDENER, St. John's Wood.—A sixpence of Elizabeth, if in fine preservation, is worth from 5s to 6s

G T H, Charlottetown, cannot be supplied direct

A DUNCE.—If seeing, you will not be the fallen

AK The addition of "Esq." to an M.D is quite superfluous

HERALDIC.—The motto "Amor vincit omnia." belongs to the family of Ussher A motto may be changed at pleasure, but arms and crests are hereditary

A LOVER OF POETRY should apply to the publisher of the work in question

W S G, Dublin.—Both are used by your friend

HADLEIGH CHURCH.—We shall be glad to be favoured with a sketch, without, which we cannot judge

H R. Birmingham is thanked; but we have not room for the subject

A CONSTANT SUBSCRIBER.—Is a second-sized Bible of Cranmer, who died A.D. 79 (Judges Capts). Judging from the impression, the coin is valueless

AN ATLANTIC TRAVELLER.—Our space is limited, but we can only give a very brief summary of the facts in the Gorham case. We mentioned the Archbishop of Canterbury's letter to Mr Masters, and que of the phrases which we regarded as the pith of the letter

A SUBSCRIBER FROM NORTH SHIELDS.—Your letter will submit to us, in as concise a form as possible, the exact point on which we desire information, we will endeavour at next supply streets in defence of the principle of universal suffrage, assailed by the Government in their project of Electoral Reform. The alarm, however, has partially blown over in both; although, in the case of the Greek dispute, and the mediation of Baron Gros, the French agent, an amount of distrust and ill-will has been created which threatens to remain on the minds of the French people and their rulers, and produce future perplexity and estrangement. The whole business, from first to last, has been unworthy of a great nation; and the ultimate settlement of the dispute has not been effected with that courtesy to France which was justly due to her national pride, and to the nature of her proffered and accepted mediation.

H B [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The project of Electoral Reform, by which several millions of voters will be disfranchised, cannot fail to be a source of future troubles for France. Although the extreme party will not take to the streets in defence of universal suffrage, their very refusal to do so, combined with their determination to agitate by other means, will inevitably keep France in a state of embarrassment and turmoil for a long period yet to come. A three years' residence (not two years', as supposed in our last) will be a severe test to apply to all claimants for a vote at elections, and will disfranchise vast numbers of persons. The National, the organ of the Republicans of the sella, the men who effected the Revolution, and whose statements in reference to any acts of the present Government must be taken cum grano, calculates that 4,800,000 electors in all will be disfranchised by the measure. If this return be anything like correct, the disfranchisement will be fully one-half of the present constituency of France, inclusive of the vast number who will lose their votes under the clauses which disfranchise those found guilty by the tribunals of any offence, however trifling, and those by which servants and workmen cannot vote without a certificate from their employers. Two classes of persons for whom the Government feels no favour—namely, the soldiers who voted for Eugène Sue, and the journalists found guilty of attacks on the Government—are not affected by the project. The intention originally was that all persons convicted of délits de presse, however trifling, should lose their votes, and that soldiers should not have the privilege of voting till they had served for three years in the army. These portions of the measure were, however, abandoned, on re-consideration, for fear of further estranging the affections of the army—a very palpable danger under the present circumstances—and for fear of exciting all the intellectual activity of the French capital against the present régime—another peril by no means to be lost sight of. It would have been far wiser on the part of the Ministry of Louis Napoleon to have allowed M. Eugène Sue to take his seat, without frightening themselves that the "crack of doom" was about to burst over them. The legislation of terror is never prudent; as we anticipate the French themselves will confess before many months have passed away. The return of twenty Eugène Sues was not worth the struggle which the Government has commenced.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

The House met to-day at four o'clock, when the Royal Assent was given by commission to the Exchequer Bills (£9,200 000), the Brick Duties Bill, the Commons Inquiry and several other bills.

THE RECAL OF THE FRENCH AMBASSADOR.

Lord BROUGHAM again referred to the sudden departure of the French Ambassador from this country, which, he understood, had been caused by the serious dissatisfaction of the French Government at the conduct of England in the affairs of Greece.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE briefly explained, that M. Drouyn de Lhuys had not presented himself at court, and had been the cause of his departure; but was owing to that cause; but declined entering into further explanations until all the documents were produced.

Some other routine business was disposed of, and their Lordships adjourned till Monday se'nnight, 17.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

The House met at four o'clock.

RECAL OF THE FRENCH AMBASSADOR.

The departure of the French Ambassador was also made the subject of a question here by Mr. Disraeli.

Lord J. RUSSELL admitted that, the negotiations having failed, M. Drouyn De Lhuys, who had been sent here to carry them out, had been recalled. He expressed his regret that any ill-feeling should exist on the part of the French Government, with regard to the conduct of England in the affairs of Greece.

In answer to questions from Sir John Walsh, Mr. Roebuck, and Mr. Anstey, Lord J. RUSSEL said that the Marquis of Normanby had not been recalled, and he hoped there would be no necessity for doing so.

In answer to Mr. Willoughby, Lord J. RUSSELL said there was no intention of bringing forward, during the present session, any measure for equalising or reducing the burdens upon land. The noble Lord further stated that it was the intention of the Government to bring in the estimates on Thursday next, in order to explain their conduct with regard to Greece.

THE LORD LIEUTENANCY OF IRELAND.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL then moved for leave to bring in a Bill to abolish the office of Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, and to provide for the appointment of a fourth Secretary of State, with a seat in the Cabinet, to whom the Irish department of affairs would be entrusted.

Mr. HENRY GRATTAN opposed the bill in a speech of some length and much animation, in the course of which he reviewed and strongly censured the policy of this country with regard to Ireland, concluding by moving that the bill be rejected.

A debate ensued, in the course of which Mr. Grogan, Mr. Maurice O'Connell, Sir Lucius O'Brien, and Mr. Reynolds, opposed the measure; and Mr. Fagan, Mr. B. Osborne, and Mr. Disraeli, spoke in favour of it.

Colonel Sibthorp moved the adjournment of the debate, which, on a division, was negatived by a majority of 213 to 19.

The House then divided on the main question, when there appeared—For the bill, 171; against it, 17.

The bill was then brought in, and read a first time, and ordered to be printed. The other orders of the day were then disposed of.

The House adjourned at two o'clock.

EXTENSIVE FIRE IN FINSBURY.—On Thursday evening, shortly after six o'clock, a fire broke out in the premises of Mr. Samuel Knightley, carpenter and builder, at 7, Paul-street, Finsbury-square. The flames commenced in the manufactory, a brick and timber build ng about fifty feet long. In the course of a few minutes the fire made most fearful progress, completely enveloping the whole of the manufactory. The firemen succeeded in getting the mastery over the flames, but not until Mr Knightley's stock in trade was reduced to ashes, and the building burned down, and considerable damage done to the rest of the furniture and building by fire, water, and dirty removal of the contents. Unfortunately the sufferer was not insured for a single farthing.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Government has received a telegraphic despatch, announcing that the disturbances at Creuzot had been entirely quelled, the miners having resumed work.

Yesterday (Friday) intelligence was received in London of the formal recall of the French Ambassador from St. James's. As a pendent to this, the Morning Herald Paris correspondent says, "I have before me my eyes a letter from Havre, written this morning, in which there is the following: 'Orders have been received here this morning to levy all the sailors of from 20 to 40 years of age. This very comprises seven-tenths of the seamen of the Inscription, which is never done except in contemplation of war.' A Cabinet courier left this morning with despatches for St. Petersburgh. It is rumoured that an intimation has been sent to Lord Normanby that his passports are at his disposal; although this rumour is not correct, yet the departure of the British Ambassador is expected to follow—leaving England to be represented by a simple Chargé d'Affaires."

It is almost needless to state, that, notwithstanding all this, the prospect of a war with England must be far from pleasing to the French Government, even though they may be backed by the questionable support of Russia.

LOMBARDY.

The Corriere Mercantile states from Milan, the 7th inst., that the Lombardo-Venetian loan has barely found voluntary subscribers to the amount of 3,000,000, up to the last day, and that it therefore is to become a forced loan, to be divided as follows: 20,000,000 upon capitalists, bankers, &c.; 20,000,000 upon landed proprietors, and 20 000,000 upon persons exercising a trade or profession. Three forts more are being constructed at Milan, and another fort is in construction at Lavena. A notification has been published, inflicting an imprisonment of three months upon any person caught in the act of illegally crossing the Swiss or Piedmontese frontier. Great difficulty is experienced at Milan in obtaining passports for foreign parts.

RECAL OF THE FRENCH AMBASSADOR.

(Express from Paris.)

On Thursday afternoon General Lahitte, Minister of Foreign Affairs, announced to the National Assembly, that the explanations given by Lord Palmerston, relative to the affair of Greece, not being such as France had a right to expect from the good understanding that existed between the two Governments, the President of the Republic had directed him to recall M. Drouyn de Lhuys from London, leaving M. Marescalchi as Chargé d'Affaires. This announcement was received with loud cheers by all parts of the House except the Mountain. The French funds fell nearly 1f. when the news became known. They declined still further after the Bourse, in the Coulisse, closing at 95f. 80c. On Thursday evening, Lord Normanby was still in Paris.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

ANNIVERSARY OF HER MAJESTY'S BIRTHDAY.

Wednesday, the day appointed to celebrate the 31st anniversary of her Majesty's birthday, was kept as a holiday at the Stamp-office, Excise, Custom-house, and other Government departments, with the exception of the Post-office.

At one o'clock the Park and Tower guns fired Royal salutes, which were responded to by those at Woolwich and Sheerness.

During the morning the metropolitan railway stations were crowded with persons desirous of availing themselves of the temporary cessation of the usual holiday to enjoy a trip to the favourite resorts of Richmond, Hampton Court, Windsor, and other places in the vicinity of London.

At Woolwich there was a review of the Artillery, Marines, and Sappers and Miners stationed at that garrison.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL.—The Apposition on Wednesday was well attended. Among the audience were the Bishops of St. David's, St. Asaph's, Bangor, Manchester; Sir R. Inglis, and the principal members of the Mercers' Company. A great many ladies were present. The proceedings were begun with a commemoration of Dean Colet, founder of the school, spoken by the pantalain. Messrs. Lawrance and Cooper then recited their poems—first and second prizes—on "The Conquest of Peru." Both were much applauded. These and the other prizes having been distributed, recitations from Sophocles, Shakespeare, Terence, and Aristophanes, were given by several of the scholars, one of whom (Lord) was particularly happy in the spirit with which he delivered his parts. An announcement that, at the request of the Bishops, eight days' additional holidays would be granted, terminated the ceremonial.

METROPOLITAN SANATORY ASSOCIATION.—A meeting of this society, in favour of the Interment Bill, now before Parliament, was held at the Whitehall Club-House, in the Strand, on Monday evening, Lord Ebrington, M.P., in the chair. Amongst the gentlemen on the platform were Viscount Ebrington, M.P.; Mr. Mackinnon, M.P.; Mr. Wyld, M.P.; Mr. George Thompson, M.P., and a great number of the Metropolitan Sanatory Association. The Chairman commenced the proceedings by stating that the subject they had met to discuss was one of the most vital interest to every one present, as well as to the country at large ("Hear, hear," and hisses), it being to provide for the best means of giving decent interment to the dead of all classes. The patriarch Jacob had enjoined the "burial of the dead out of sight," and all nature had spoken in the same warning voice, that, if they had any regard for the survivors' welfare, they should follow that injunction. The chairman concluded, amidst much uproar and confusion, by stating that the bill had commended itself both to his sympathy and support, from the very great benefit which would be reaped from it by the working classes. Mr. Mackinnon, M.P., moved the first resolution, which was seconded by Lord Ebrington, and was carried by a large majority. Mr. George Cruikshank then endeavoured to move the second resolution; but a tremendous row took place from the rejection of that, and a crowd at the back of the room, which carried everything before it, and created a most painful sensation lest some accidents should occur, and the meeting was adjourned amidst the most violent uproar and confusion.

KING'S COLLEGE HOSPITAL.—A public meeting on behalf of the building and endowment fund for the enlargement of this hospital, was held in the large hall of the college on Wednesday; his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury in the chair, supported on his right by the Duke of Cambridge. The report stated that the amount required for the building fund was £30 000, of which £24,214 11s. 7d. had been raised, leaving the large sum of £25,785 8s. 5d. still to be procured. It appears £500 000 has been bequeathed anonymously to the individual. The report having been adopted, the assembly was addressed by the Duke of Cambridge, and several of the Bishops and noblemen present; when, after a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated. In the evening the eleventh anniversary festival was held in the New Hal., Lincoln's-inn. Upwards of 500 gentlemen were present, and the party did not break up till a late hour.

THE METROPOLITAN INTERMENTS BILL.—A public meeting convened by the Anti-State Church Association, took place on Thursday, at the London Tavern, for the purposes of adopting measures for obtaining an alteration in those clauses of the above bill which secure a perpetuity to tombs already erected to the clergy, in compensation for the loss of fees, consequent on the discontinuance of interments in existing burial grounds; Chas Gilpin, Esq., in the chair. A very long discussion took place relative to the contents of the bill, and a resolution to the following effect, was carried, "That this meeting, while it recognized the necessity of discontinuing the practice of interment in populous localities, demanded that any legislative measure, having in view that object, should be framed on sound and equitable principles. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the day.

PHARMACEUTICAL SOCIETY.—On Wednesday evening a highly interesting conversazione was given by the president, P. Squire, Esq., her Majesty's apothecary, at the rooms of the society, in Bloomsbury-square. The president received his numerous scientific and distinguished guests at the council-room, the walls of which were decorated with specimens of botany. On the long table, in the centre of the room, were exhibited objects of rare and remarkable interest. Amongst these were two volumes of beautiful drawings of Madura plants, executed by the lady of Sir Emerson Tennent, two large flowers modelled in wax, by Miss Tayspill—the Amherstia nobila and Victoria regua: the latter was a beautiful fac-simile of the flower produced by the gigantic water-lily at Chatsworth, illustrated in No. 269 of our Journal. Well-executed specimens of electrotypes, by Mr. Johnson, secretary to the College of Chemistry, with photographs by Mr. Mayall, in the Strand, were much admired. Captain Shea contributed the dried fruits of the mangosteen and lychee. The curious effect of melanine on the dried specimens of the Rose of Jericho (Egropodenum) was exhibited: from Mr. Sowerby's collection, a beautiful specimen of the pitcher plant. Sir James Clarke, her Majesty's physician, contributed perfect specimens of the winter worm, or vegeto-animal plant, from New Zealand. Exotic medicinal plants covered the walls of other parts of the society's rooms, their several products being placed in the front of each. A variety of useful and ingenious inventions for sanatory purposes, ventilation, &c., were exhibited in particular notice. The hall and staircase were festooned with choice shrubs in flower. In the upper rooms were exhibited Varnish's new silvered glass, with Shore's beautiful silvered glass; a splendid collection of wines from Portugal; Pontey's neat collection of the several tints of glass, from Messrs. Phillips, to show the effect produced in glass by the several oxides of metals; a case of curious and rare minerals, from Mr. Tennant in the Strand; a quantity of stone apparatus for chemical use, from Mr. Green. Here again was arranged a quantity of new medicinal plants; the whole of these were supplied—with the exception of the Aloes Socotrina (from Mr. Terry) and the pines (from Messrs. Lee)—from the Royal Botanic Garden in the Regent's-park. In the gallery were arranged, on either side of a beautiful drawing by Mr. Withers, the property of Mr. Morson) several mirrors, of a new invention, which reflected most perfectly. We are informed that gentlemen intend to extend the usefulness of the society, by forming in the mechanical and invisible appliances of electricity and galvanism; suffice it to say this réunion was unique in the scientific character of its numerous visitors, and was rendered extremely agreeable and interesting by the care and courtesy of its president.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.—The annual meeting of this society took place on Thursday evening, at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street; Mr. James Harmer in the chair. It appeared that there had not been one single application for pension or temporary relief from a subscriber during the past year; one non-subscriber in distinte circumstances applied, and was relieved. Their first dinner, at which Mr. C. Dickens presided, produced them £900. This had enabled the society to increase the permanent capital to £1200. The financial statement showed the receipts to be £287, and the expenditure £230. The report was adopted, and a vote of thanks to Mr. Charles Dickens for presiding at the dinner carried unanimously. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the evening.

MARRIAGE WITH A DECEASED WIFE'S SISTER.—A numerous meeting of the nonconformists of London and its neighbourhood was held at Finsbury Chapel on Wednesday evening last; S. Morton Peto, Esq., M.P., in the chair, when the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

"That, in the opinion of this meeting, marriage with the sister of a deceased wife a not contrary to the law of God, and that its being for ... bidden by the 99th Canon of the Church of England forms no valid reason for its being prohibited by the Imperial Legislature in the United Kingdom; a large majority of the clergy comprehended in the Canon having declared the pale of the church established by law."

Resolutions were then passed, expressing thanks to the Right Hon. Stuart Wortley, for introducing the Bill to repeal Lord Lyndhurst's act, and appointing a deputation to wait on Sir George Grey, Bart.

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.—May 16: Special Meeting, London: C. Ru sell, Esq., in the chair.—A long discussion took place upon the subject of the salaries to be paid to the officials, which the late committee of consultation proposed to reduce; while the directors reported in favour of a more modified scheme. After five hours' discussion the meeting was adjourned until the next day, to take a poll upon the question. Yesterday (Friday), on the vote being taken, there appeared for the amendment 55 proprietors, representing 812 votes; and against the amendment, and in favour of the directors, 1490 proprietors, representing 16,198 votes; resolutions were also carried adopting the other parts of the directors' report.

BRITISH REFORMATION SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of this society was held on Thursday at the Hanover-square Rooms; George Finch, Esq., in the chair. The report stated that at no period in the recent history of the church were the hopes of Rome more sanguine in reference to this country, from the spread of Romanistic opinions and ceremonials which now existed under the guise of Tractarianism in the Church, but this society, by its meetings, lectures, and publications, had been productive of the most beneficial results in counteracting those evils. Their total receipts during the year had amounted to £2,868, and their expenditure to £2,785, leaving a balance of £114. The report was adopted, and, after a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated.

PROVINCIAL BANK OF IRELAND.—The annual meeting of this company took place on Thursday, at the offices, 49, Old Broad-street, City; Oliver Farrer, Esq., in the chair. The report stated, that the disastrous circumstances caused by the failure of the potato crop in 1846, 1847, and 1848 had greatly tended to diminish the resources of the country, and had produced a most depressing effect upon the condition of the people, rendering the business of banking more difficult and less productive than in ordinary years. It was satisfactory to know that an improvement had taken place during the past year. The total amount of undivided profits in March 30th, 1850, was £110,182 7s. 6d. A dividend of 4 per cent. for the half year was declared, and, after a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated.

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL, PADDINGTON.—An entertainment in aid of the funds of the above charity took place at the London Tavern on Wednesday evening; the Duke of Cambridge in the chair. Upwards of 200 noblemen and gentlemen sat down to an excellent dinner. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Mr. N. J. Sporle, assisted by Miss E. Lyon, Mr. Leffler, &c. After the cloth was drawn the usual loyal toasts were drunk, and the meeting addressed by the Duke of Cambridge and several of the gentlemen present. In the course of the evening the several amounts of subscriptions in the list amount of £2,000. His Royal Highness and the principal guests retired before eleven o'clock.

FISTULA INFIRMARY.—The fourteenth anniversary of this excellent institution was celebrated by a public dinner at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, served in excellent style by Messrs. Staples. The chair was filled by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor; supported by Mr. Sheriff Nicoll, Sir James Law Lushington, K.C.B., Mr. Masterman, Mr. Frean, Q (Hugh-Sheriff of Surrey), Mr. Alderman Copeland, the Rev. Dr. Vivian, the Rev. Mr. Taylor, Mr. Fred. Salmon, surgeon to, and founder of, the institution, and about 140 other friends of the institution. After the usual loyal and patriotic toasts had been drunk by the meeting, Mr. Alderman Copeland proposed the toast of the evening—"Prosperity to the Fistula Infirmary"—and pointed out in forcible terms the great advantages which had been conferred by it to the community at large for the nine years he, as Lord Mayor, occupied the chair, in 1836, on the occasion of its first anniversary. He also dwelt at length upon the appreciation which those parties who had been relieved by the institution, and their friends, had of its usefulness, as shown by the fact of an auxiliary society, consisting principally of the weavers of Bethnal-green, of which he had the honourof being treasurer, subscribing by their pence and their farthings during the last few years nearly £400 in aid of this institution. Since the establishment of the infirmary about 1,200 patients had been received, of whom the great majority had been cured, and nearly all relieved. It was to be regretted that the infirmary was not enabled to receive more than one or two in every twenty of those who applied for relief, and he earnestly hoped that every exertion would be made to increase its usefulness by the establishment of a fitting hospital, where much greater relief could be afforded than the means of the present establishment would allow. The toast was received with acclamation; and several other toasts, including the health of Mr. Salmon, having been drunk, and various gentlemen having urged on the company the great necessity of putting the institution on a firm and enlarged basis, the company broke up, about £800 having been added to its funds in the course of the evening, of which nearly £40 was received from the Army and Navy.

SUICIDE FROM THE TOP OF YORK'S COLUMN.—A frightful suicide was committed on Tuesday morning from the top of the above-named monument, which is situated between St. James's-park and Pall-mall. The doors opening into the interior are locked, and are opened daily at ten o'clock, when persons are permitted to ascend to the summit on the payment of 6d. each. The doors had scarcely been opened more than ten minutes, when a well-dressed man paid his admission fee and ascended. The top of the column is surrounded by a square iron railing; and according to custom an attendant followed him up, for the double purpose of giving information as to the neighbouring objects of attraction, and with a view of preventing such occurrences as that which on the present occasion took place. Before the attendant could reach the gallery, the deceased suddenly threw himself over the railing at the south east corner, and fell upon the granite pavement, with a most fearful crash, and was, of course, instantaneously killed. His body was horribly bruised in every part—his spine, his left leg, right arm, and several ribs being broken; the blood tinging not only the pavement, but even some portions of the basement of the column, against which the body first struck in falling, and rebounded thence to the flagged way from which the monument springs. The policemen took the mangled corpse on a stretcher to St. Martin's workhouse to await a coroner's inquest. When the pockets of the deceased were searched, the only thing found were a small white handkerchief marked at one corner H. S., a small purse containing 1s. 6d. in silver, and the copy of an agreement entered into between himself and the secretary, of the Italian Opera House, signed in March last, by which the latter gentleman agreed to give him a salary of £3 6s. per week, as a performer on the horn, commencing in March, and intended to last until the close of the season about August next. From this document it appeared that his name was Henri Stephan; he was brother-in-law to M. Petit, the maitre de ballet at the same theatre. He was a native of Paris, and a married man, his wife residing at No. 1, Bonny St. Denis, Paris, but he was in the expectation of her arrival hourly in London. An unquest was held on Wednesday on the body of the unfortunate man, in the board-room of the workhouse, by Mr. Bedford, Coroner for Westminster. The jury, having viewed the body, and heard the evidence of the monument-keeper, the surgeon, and several witnesses of the shocking spectacle, returned a verdict ascribing the act to "temporary insanity." They, at the same time, expressed themselves strongly against the unprotected state of the gallery of the column, and recommended the immediate erection of railing.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—Births registered in the week ending Saturday, May 11:—Males, 643; females, 677: total, 1320. Deaths during the same period: Males, 430; females, 427: total, 857. Taking ten corresponding weeks of the years 1840-9, it appears that the number returned is less than in the years 1847-9, that it is also less than in 1843, but greater than in the same week of the other six years. The average of the ten weeks is 870, or, corrected for increase of population, 949; as compared with the corrected average, the mortality of last week shows a decrease of 92 deaths. The total deaths from the zymotic epidemic class of diseases continue to be less numerous than usual, amounting only to 91 in the corresponding average; to 79; from small-pox there were 4, from measles 14, from hooping-cough 36, and typhus 25; the mortality from each of these epidemics being less than the average. From diarrhœa there were 8, which is about the average; this disease exhibits a decline in the fatal returns. But scarlatina shows an increase, the numbers in the last three weeks having been 21, 17, and 25, whilst the average for last week is 24. Five children under five years of age died of infantile or remittent fever; four persons died of influenza; and seven of erysipelas. A woman of 54 years died of scurvy. Diseases of the respiratory organs, exclusive of hooping-cough and consumption, were fata. to 137 persons which is about the corrected average; from laryngitis there were four deaths, from bronchitis 51, from pneumonia 56, from pu risy 5, and from asthma 13. The mortality from consumption continues unusually low; this disease carried off 116 persons, whilst the corrected average is 140, and in the corresponding weeks of 1840-49, it averaged 117 to 141. A boarship-keeper, aged 46 years, died of "hæmatemesis (68 hours.)" He is reported to have been an habitua. drunkard. The classification of deaths by public institutions shows that 77 persons were registered as having died in workhouses, 37 in hospitals, five in military and naval establishments, and six in lunatic asylums.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The mean daily reading of the barometer for the week at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, was 29·570". The mean temperature was 46·7°, and was less by 5·4° than the average of the same week in seven years. On every day it was less than the average, but especially on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, when the decrease was from 7° to 9°. The wind was generally in the north-east and south-west.

CAPTURE OF CHINESE PIRATICAL JUNKS.

THE only important intelligence received by the last mail from China was an interesting account of the destruction, in a bay about 35 miles from Hong-Kong, of thirteen piratical junks. At the request of the Chinese authorities at Canton, opposite Hong-Kong, her Majesty's steamer Medea was dispatched, on the afternoon of March 4th, with a Mandarin on board: this being the first instance in which the Chinese have sought British assistance in such a case. She returned the following day with the intelligence of having discovered the pirates, of having killed about 220 men, and destroyed thirteen of their junks. About 600 men got on shore and escaped.

The following is an extract from Captain Lockyer's official dispatch, addressed to Captain Morgan, senior naval officer in China:—

H. M vessel Medea, at Hong-Kong, March 5, 1850.

SIR,—I have the honour to report to you that on my arrival at Kut-o, at 5.15 yesterday evening, I found thirteen piratical junks and four cargo junks at anchor.

On the appearance of her Majesty's steam-vessel under my command, twelve of the piratical vessels swept in shore, one of the largest remaining at anchor without offering the slightest resistance; the crews jumped overboard, endeavouring to make for the shore, but upwards of 150 of them were destroyed by our shell and musketry.

It soon became so dark, that I was compelled to dispatch the paddle-box boats of this steam vessel, under the command of Mr. William Brodie, acting-master, with orders to take possession of the junks which had swept in shore, but find that he was too late, I proceeded to his assistance in the gig, accompanied by the pinnace of her Majesty's ship Hastings, commanded by Lieut. Webber, the Royal Marines under Lieut. Holland, with the Medea's cutter, under the command of Lieut. Gibbons, and found Mr. Brodie very closely pressed by a very great number, who made strong endeavours to recapture the junks. We soon repulsed these pirates with a considerable loss on their parts, and the capture of five prisoners; but, owing to the darkness and the very heavy rain which unfortunately came on, we were unable to follow up our pursuit of them on shore.

RETURN OF HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT AND HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON FROM THE REVIEW ON WIMBLEDON COMMON.

I therefore brought the junks to the ship, and this morning destroyed eight, one having during the night caught fire and blown up, and the remaining four having been given up to their owners, who were pointed out by the Mandarin.

During my absence the ship was placed in a position of considerable danger, from the close approach of the burning junk; but, by the able exertions of Lieutenant Wood, who was left in charge, she was cleared.

Early next morning, the island was scoured, and fifteen prisoners were taken but the greater part of the pirate crew had escaped.

Four of these junks were very large, of upwards of 250 tons, mounting ten or more guns of various calibre, and resembling those formerly destroyed on the west coast; the remainder were evidently recent captures, hastily fitted up for piratical purposes.

This service was not attended with any casualties or loss on our side.

The accompanying Illustration is from a sketch by an officer who took a prominent part in the affair.

GRAND REVIEW ON WIMBLEDON COMMON.

ON Friday (last week) Field Marshal his Royal Highness Prince Albert reviewed and inspected the 11th Hussars on Wimbledon Common, in the presence of the Commander-in-Chief, General Viscount Combermere, General Sir Willoughby Gordon, Lieutenant-General Wyndham, Major-General Brotherton, Major-General Brown, and a very numerous staff.

At ten o'clock the troops, numbering about 280 men, arrived on the ground, formed into line under the direction of the regimental major.

The Prince Consort arrived on the ground at eleven o'clock. His Royal Highness was attended by Colonel the Hon. Alexander Gordon and Colonel Bouverie. The staff, on entering the circle, was received by the troops with the usual military demonstrations.

Lieutenant-General Wyndham, the Colonel, and the Earl of Cardigan, the Lieutenant-Colonel and Commanding Officer of the regiment, then accompanied his Royal Highness, the Duke of Wellington, and staff round the line, and a minute inspection of the corps was made. The troops then marched and trotted past in troops and squadrons, and subsequently galloped past, accomplishing each movement with great precision. Having then formed into line, skirmishers were sent out, and a sharp random fire was kept up for some minutes. The men afterwards performed a variety of other evolutions incidental to a field day, and concluded by making a general advance and saluting the staff. Each man was supplied with ten rounds of ammunition. The ground was kept by a body of the Royal Horse Guards.

The Earl of Cardigan subsequently entertained upwards of 250 members of the nobility, gentry, officers, &c., at a sumptuous déjeûner, in a superb marquee erected near the review-ground by Mr. Benjamin Edgington. The déjeûner was furnished by Messrs. Gunter, of Berkeley-square.

At the déjeuner, after the usual loyal toasts, Viscount Combermere proposed, "Prosperity to the 11th Hussars," coupling with the toast, "The health of the noble host." The toast was received with the warmest acclamation.

The noble host returned thanks; and the company shortly afterwards separated.

The soldiers, on return to the barracks, were entertained at a substantial repast, by order of the noble and gallant Earl.

CAPTURE AND DESTRUCTION OF THIRTEEN PIRATICAL CHINESE JUNKS, IN MIR'S BAY, BY H. M. STEAMER "MEDEA."

FERRARIS. TAGLIONI. C. GRISI.

THE "PAS DE TROIS DES GRACES," AT HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

HAYMARKET THEATRE.

SCENE FROM THE NEW COMEDY OF THE "CATSPAW."

Our Artist has illustrated, in the above, one of two episodal situations in Mr. Jerrold's new comedy, illustrative of the manner in which the hero was accustomed to be "done." The whole story of the episode is contained in two scenes, in which Mr. Webster, as the begging-letter impostor with many aliases, passes himself off as a French Count, the Chevalier Podoxy, and in that character imposes himself on the coward Snowball as the second of Captain Burgonet. Snowball declines the duel, on the score of his rheumatism. We quote the scene:—

Enter COOLCARD as PODOXY.

Coolcard. Monsieur Snowball, I have de honneur—

Snowball. Don't come near me. Doctor, tell the Chevalier how bad I am.

Peipoose. Mr. Snowball is in an alarming condition. The action of his heart is specific. The rate of his pulse terrific. His sanguineous system mephitic—and in short, not a single symptom that is not mortific.

Snowb. You hear, sir?

Peipoose. I wouldn't say as much before any patient, but I know Mr. Snowball's moral strength. His body is weak, but his mind tremendous. Yes, a sword—a DAMASCUS blade in a brown paper scabbard.

Coolc. C'est bien. For de sconer he sall draw de sword—

Snowb. I draw a sword! Look at me. Couldn't draw a toothpick.

Coolc. C'est bien. Den you sall fight with pistolets.

Snowb. Pistols! With pleasure, but—look at me!—couldn't pull a trigger.

Coolc. Bah! A leetel new-born babe sall pull a trigger.

Snowb. Yes, but—look at me!—I can't stand.

Coolc. C'est bien—you sall sit. Den if de bullet hit you—tant mieux—you sall not tomber—tumble.

Snowb. (Forgetting himself.) Zounds, sir—I—oh There—you see! (Drops in a chair.)

Peipoose. (To SNOWBALL.) You will use the sword—you won't think of the paper! (To COOLCARD.) What is this, sir? Why do you break in upon—(to SNOWBALL)—will you allow me the expression?—a dying man?

Coolc. Dying man no need of wife. Mr. Snowball sall give up Mrs. Peachdown—

Snowb. Never! I'll perish first—that is, when I'm well enough to perish.

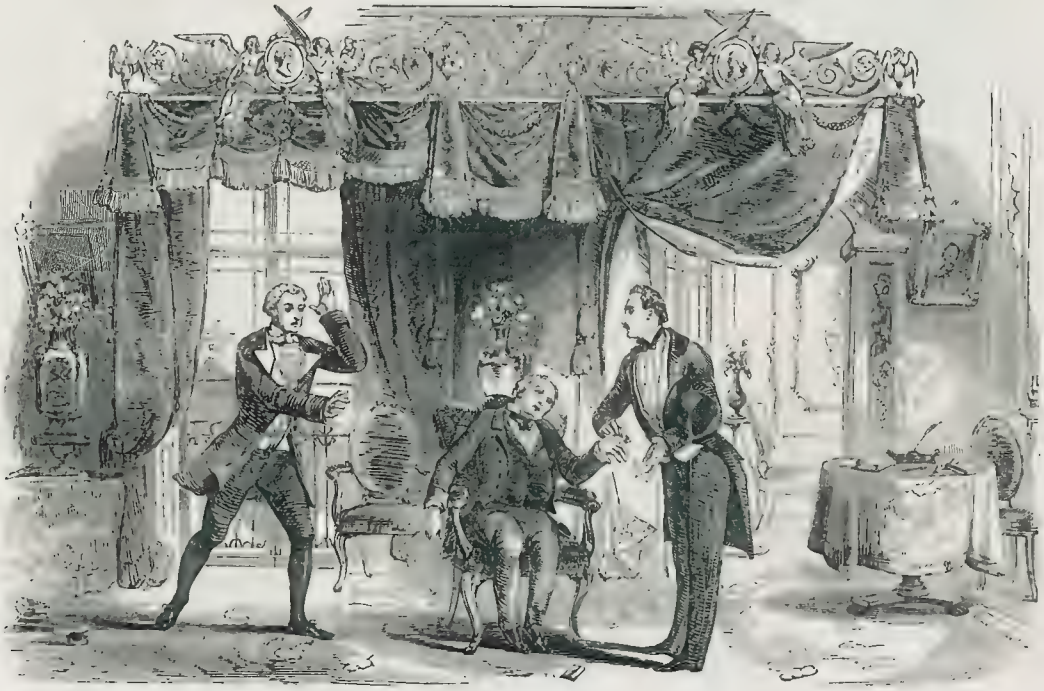
Peipoose. Very right. For to perish in your present state would be no compliment to any woman.

Snowb. Sir,—You are Captain Burgonet's friend—his bosom friend?

Coolc. Assurément. I carry him round and round my finger, as you carry dat sparkling ring.

Snowb. Say, then, when I'm well, I shall be only too happy to fight—describe my condition and will you do me another favour—accept this ring?

Peipoose. Mr. Snowball!



SCENE FROM THE NEW COMEDY OF "THE CATSPAW," AT THE HAYMARKET THEATRE.

Snowdi. And, however this matter may end, wear it for my sake. Gently. (Offers his finger.) Gently.

Coolc. (Tenderly taking off ring.) Monsieur! Are you better now?

Snowdi. I do feel relieved. And I may count upon your friendship?

Ferpouc. Can't do otherwise. Real friendship, now—goes upon a diamond.

Cook (Aside.) Luck beyond my hopes! And now to make off, while the luck lasts. Monsieur, I sail tell how sick you are, and I sail come every day to watch your pillow, and say a leetel prayer. And so, courage! You sall soon be upon your leg—sall soon receive a billet like a lion, and fall like a man.

Snowdi. Thank you

Cook. Adieu, mon cher ami. (Embracing SNOWBALL.)

Snowdi. Murder! My nerves!

Cook. Pardon ma sensibilité. The capitan sall wait. Pardon—et encore, adieu —adieu. [Exit.

The Chevalier reappears in the last act, when Snowball, knowing himself to have been cheated, hurtles the cheese-plate in his face from the window-sill.

The latter parts with it willingly, having exchanged the diamond for a paste imitation.

Both scenes were admirably acted by Mr. Webster and Mr. Keeley, and proved very effective.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

Want of space last week obliged us to limit ourselves merely to notice the successful production of "I Puritani." We now give a more detailed account of the representation. We have seldom witnessed a performance so satisfactory, each of the characters being filled by talents of the very first order. First comes Madame Sontag: and we do not think she had ever more success than in the part of Elvira; nor is there, in our opinion, another opera so peculiarly suited to her talents, for in it she finds her unrivalled powers of execution, as well as her singular talent of dwelling upon a note whilst giving it an ever-varying expression put into almost constant requisition. This was exemplified in a striking manner in the allegro of her air, in the second act, ("Vien diletto"), where, after a series of chromatic scales, she rests on a note, giving it such an inflection as to express the most poignant anguish. After this air, Madame Sontag was honoured with an encore, both on the first and second performances of "I Puritani," as vehement as that which she previously received in the well-known polacca, "Vergine vezzosa." On a par with the success of Madame Sontag, was that of Signor Bancardé, who, although labouring under a cold, by his impersonation of Arturo has added another claim to the succession of Rubini. In "A te O Cara," the sweet mellow tones of his voice told with great effect on the audience, who rewarded him with a well-merited encore. In "Dah Vieni" his success was equally great, and his whole performance left nothing to be desired. Lablache and Coletti gave their famous duo, "Suoni latromba," with great power, and were immensely applauded. On both occasions the house was crowded to the ceiling.

On Tuesday Mozart's chef-d'œuvre "Le Nozze" was repeated, and Madame Sontag's delightful impersonation of Susannah was still more warmly received on this than on previous occasions, by a most numerous audience. The whole performance, from beginning to end, was in the highest degree successful; which is not astonishing, considering the matchless cast of this opera, besides Sontag, Lablache, Coletti, Belletti, and Parodi, including Calzolari, who made much of the small part of Basilio—affording another instance of the truth of the French proverb, "That only small talents fear little-parts."

Thursday was one of the longest nights amongst the long Thursdays. The whole of "Barbiere," "Lucca and Guillelmo," "Les Graces," and the "Ice Ballet," formed the enormous bill of fare of the night; to which was added "God Save the Queen," in honour of her Majesty's birthday. The house was crowded in every part.

The celebrated Frezzolini arrived on Tuesday; and both M.' Scribe and M. Halévy have reached London, for the immediate final rehearsals of the "Tempest."

Our artist has portrayed, in the accompanying Illustration, one of the most felicitous poses of "Les Graces."

"Il Don Giovanni," to be performed on Thursday, will be enriched in its distribution of characters by the tragic power of Madame Frezzolini in the part of Donna Anna. All the recent successful novelties in the ballet will be given, including "Les Graces," with Carlotta Grisi, Marie Taglioni, and Amalia Ferraris, the Zarelanda, and the skating ballet.

The valuable assistance of M. Thalberg has been secured for the Grand Morning Concerted Entertainment, to be given on Monday, May 27, 1850.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Meyerbeer's "Huguenots" fills the theatre to overflow on every occasion it is presented. Last Saturday night, at the third representation, there was a fashionable audience, and the enthusiasm with which the house received the duo-trio-chorus "Benediction of the Poignards" and the duo of Grisi and Mario—was received was unbounded. Such was the attraction, that the directors announced its repetition for the extra night on Thursday.

Grisi's acting and singing on Tuesday night, in the first act of "Norma," was surpassingly grand and imposing. She was in splendid voice, and several times in the trio finale roused the enthusiasm of the house to the highest pitch of excitement. The tenor, Tamberlik, also sang magnificently, and created a powerful sensation. He shared with Grisi in the ovation at the close of the act, which the whole of Weber's "Der Freyschütz" was presented. If this opera were performed with Viardot in the part of Agatha and Tamberlik as the tenor, the cast would be then unexceptionable. Mario sings consistently the text, but his organ is not sympathetic in its quality, and in no character is Mdme. Castellan heard to less advantage than in Agatha. The Caspar of Formes, with its rough, almost savage energy, is a grand conception, and the Ameiea of Mdlle. Vera is most charming. The overture is of course encored, and the choral singing is first-rate. It is a treat of the highest order only to listen to the orchestral accompaniments as played under Costa's skilful direction.

The débût of Rennoni in Nabucco, and the production of "Roberto il Diavolo," with its new and powerful cast, are the next novelties, but these have been rather slow in coming to pass after such repeated announcements.

ST. JAMES'S.

The comedy of "Gabrielle," by M. Emile Augier, was produced for the first time on Friday. It is in five acts, and in verse, and is a production of an eminently legitimate character. It is a thesis for conventional marriage, a defence of existing manners. The heroine (Mdlle. Nathalie) is a young wife, suffering from ennui, and fain to dispel it by a flirtation with one of her husband's friends, Julien. The husband (M. Regnier) acts a generous part towards the culprits. He seeks to touch the lover's honour by confiding to him his grief at his wife's coolness, with no other effect, however, than to induce the inamorato's determination to abscond with the lady. This leads determination, however, the husband manages to overrule, by coming in the very nick of time, and expostulating, by means of a parable, with the guilty parties, whom he thus warns of the misery that must ensue upon their taking the fatal step. With their contrition and repentance the piece concludes. The success of the drama depends on its eloquence and brilliant writing, not on its action; which former, aided by the moral sentiment, commended it to the applauses of a discerning and fashionable audience.

SADLER'S WELLS.

On Tuesday, the benefit for the Industrial Exposition of 1851 came off, the first four acts of "Henry VIII." being performed for the occasion. After the tragedy, the trial scene of "The Merchant of Venice" was enacted, when Mr. R. H Horne, the author of "Orion," gave, for this occasion only, a poet's version of the part. The same gentleman had also contributed to the amusement of the evening by an introductory address, which was spoken by Mr. Phillips. The evening's entertainments concluded with a concert, and the farce of "The Silent Woman." The Duke of Cambridge presided on the occasion, and the Duchess of Sutherland had a private box. Several noblemen were present, and also Mr. Charles Dickens, with other members of the literary and managing committee. The house was, of course, crowded.

THE LAKES OF KILLARNEY.

Mr. Burford has opened, at his Panorama, Leicester-square, a view of the Lakes of Killarney. Of these delightful and romantic lakes, many descriptions have been written, in prose and verse, both since and before Dr. Burton's visit to them. That of the Queen and Prince Albert's last year renewed our acquaintance with them, and abundant delineations of their beauties, in words and lines, have graced the columns of our journal. The view in the panorama now exhibiting is taken from the tower of Ross Castle, on Ross Island—a favourable point for including the greatest variety of interesting objects, viz., the Lake, with its islets, Ross, Innisfallen, and Rabbit, and their smaller companions, with the singular and fantastic pieces of rock named in association with the legend of O'Donoghue, the Sovran Prince of Munster, Mucruss, Mangerton, the Turk, the Eagle's Nest, the Glenna, Tomies, the Reeks of Mackilleaddy, with Macarthy More's country, the Aghadoe, and the town of Killarney, remotely skirted with the mountains of Glena. All these points are admirably depicturad, the atmospheric and watery effects being skilfully introduced. Mr. Burford has been assisted in the painting by Mr. H. C. Selous, from drawings taken by the former in 1840; it is executed, also, in the manner and with all the elaborate care of a panorama painter. Mr. Burford's diorama, indeed, have always claims on the public as works of art, and not simply as mere temporary exhibitions.

THE CHINESE COLLECTION.—Mr. Barnum has purchased the Chinese Collection (so popular in this country), and is exhibiting the same, with a Chinese lady and female attendants, in Broadway, New York, where the receipts for admission average 350 dollars daily. Tom Thumb is exhibited in Philadelphia to spectatorties of 600 dollars daily.

PANORAMA OF NEW ZEALAND.—Mr. Bress has removed his truthful picture to the Linwood Gallery, and reduced the admission to 1s

VICTORIA DOCKS.—On Monday the preamble of this bill for the establishment of new docks, in connexion with the Eastern Counties Railway, opposite Woolwich, was declared proved. It is proposed to have a capital of £400,000, with power to borrow £133,000, and to run the line of docks and canal nearly parallel to the river Thames at 600 yards from the bank, communicating with the river at either end by locks.

MUSIC.

CONCERTS.

Two remarkable concerts have been given at Her Majesty's Theatre and the Royal Italian Opera—the former took place last Monday, the latter on the 10th inst. In both programmes the entire strength of the respective establishments, and the full chorus and orchestras, were brought into requisition. At both houses, the praiseworthy innovation of reduced prices of admission secured large attendances. Of the immense array of talent at both concerts, the following list will afford a notion. At Her Majesty's Theatre:—Mdme. Sontag, Mdlle. Catherine Hayes, Mdme. Giuliani, Mdlle. Parodi, Mdlle. Ida Bertrand, Signori Calzolari, Bancardé, and Mr. Sims Reeves (tenor); Signori Lablache, Coletti, Belletti, Lorenza, Tagliafico, and Herr Pischer (bass); the chorus of 80 voices (36 males and 24 females), and the band of 75 performers, the whole under the direction of Mr. Balfe. At the Royal Italian Opera:—Mdme. Grisi, Mdme. Castellan, Mdlle. Vera, Mdlle. De Meric, Signori Mario, Marini, Lavia, and Tamberlik (tenors); Signori Tamburini, Tagliafico, Polonini, MM. Massol and Zelger, and Herr Formes (bass); the chorus of 90 voices (40 female and 50 males), the band of 84 performers, the whole under the direction of Mr. Costa. In respect to the compilations of the two schemes, that at Her Majesty's Theatre was infinitely the best in variety and classic interest; in point of execution, the advantage, as regards the ensemble, must be awarded to the Royal Italian Opera. At both entertainments, however, there were items to interest the connoisseur as well as general amateur. The singing of Sontag was exquisitely beautiful; she gave Sir Henry Bishop's ever popular ballad, "Home, sweet home," with touching feeling, and it was enthusiastically encored. In Eckert's Swiss airs she luxuriated in her fanciful divisions, and again was the encore irresistible. In Weber's grand scena from "Oberon," she sang to the fifty dramatic echoes of Herr Pischer's air from the "Creation," "On mighty pens," her classic style was finely manifested. She sang also with Miss C. Hayes and Mdlle. Parodi, in Rossini's trio for three soprano, from "William Tell." "A te ritorno il figlio," and, like a true artiste, did not disdain to sing in the choruses from Beethoven's Mass in C. Mercadante's duo from "La Vestale," "Il conforto," was beautifully sung by Miss C. Hayes and Mdlle. Parodi. Mr. Sims Reeves's energy in Parcelli's "Come il you dare" was twice called into action. Calzolari, by his skilfulness in some florid passages in Donizetti's air (the one he introduced in "Medea"), had also to repeat it. Signor Lablache, in the comic duo from Cimarosa's "Il Due Baroni," came in for their share of the applause: and Miss C. Hayes's "Kathleen Mavourneen" (encored) is replete with pathos; in her national melodies she is charming. The orchestral pieces were Beethoven's 8th symphony, and the "Euryanthe," and "Fidelio" overtures of Weber and Cherubini. Amongst the concerted music, there were Spohr's "Ah! Godan lor felicitade," from "Faust," a portion of the finale from the first act of Beethoven's "Fidelio," and a trio from Beethoven's "Fidelio;" the quatuor from Weber's "Oberon," "O'er the dark blue waters;" the pistol trio for three basses, from Ricci's "Chiara di Rosenburgh," sung by Coletti, Belletti, and Lablache; the trio from Rossini's "Armida," "In quale amene sponde," for three tenors, sung by Bancardé, Calzolari, and Sims Reeves (encored); and a scene from Gluck's "Armida," with all the principals and chorus. Our citations prove the interesting and piquant variety of the judiciously selected but rather too lengthy programme, which was carefully and zealously conducted by Balfe, although additional rehearsals of the German "gleanings" would have been of advantage. Possibly the "feature" was the principal point of attraction in the Royal Italian Opera scheme; and, although it is now becoming somewhat hackneyed from repetition every season, the magnificent execution ensured the gratification of the auditory; nothing could be finer than the choral singing in the "Ein Feste Burg" which Formes had the solo, and in the fugued "Amen." As a specimen of refined part singing, the unaccompanied quatuor, "Quando corpus," sung by Grisi, De Meric, Tamburini, and Mario, must be cited. Castellan and De Meric's duo, "Quis est homo," by Tamburini in the solo, "Pro peccatis," Grisi the "Inflammatus," which she sang with enormous power, De Meric "Fac me vere," Mario "Cujus animam," and Mdlle. Vera, De Meric, Tamberlik, and Tagliafico "Sancta Mater." The miscellaneous selection forming the second part only contained two novelties—Festa's madrigal, "Down in a flowery vale," in which the chorus was deservedly encored; and a grand scena from Gluck's "Armida in Tauris," sung by Massol and chorus, but which was galloped through in no very creditable style by the conductor. Mario was encored in the serenade, "Com è gentil," and with Grisi had to sing twice the duo from the same opera; and Formes was encored in Mozart's air, "Il dissen bellagen," from "Il Flauto Magico." Tamberlik's singing of the air from Donizetti's "Maria da Rohan," "Alma soave," was one of the most gratifying pieces of the morning. The only instrumental selections were Weber's "Euryanthe" overture, and Mendelssohn's Wedding March from the "Midsummer Night's Dream," superbly played, of course. On the whole, the programme was poor, and not worthy of the great resources of the establishment; albeit, what was done was unexceptionably executed, save the Gluck scena. Two encores ought to have been announced -that at the Royal Italian Opera on Friday next (the 24th), and at Her Majesty's Theatre on Monday week (the 27th). The former will be strengthened by the addition of Rocconi, and the latter by the grateful advent of Madame Frezzolini.

There was a full attendance at the first meeting of the eighteenth season of the Ancient Concerts at the London Tavern last Monday evening. Handel's Coronation Anthem, "Zadok, the Priest," and Mozart's Mass in G, No. 12, were the chief items in the first part, with a duo by Mr. Henry Smart, "Oh, give thanks!" and a sacred canzonet, by Mr. T. Cooper, "O Lord, in our fleeting days." The second part included Haydn's "Stay, limpid stream," opened the second part. Messrs. Lazarus and Clinton played a clarionet and flute duet in E flat, composed by the latter. Mendelssohn's quartet, "When the west," was also sung: and two original pieces by Mr. Henry Blagrove, viz., by Landner; D. G. Bach's aria, "Porto se vol cosi." The overture and selection from Weber's "Euryanthe," a chorus from Weber's "Preciosa," and Dr. John Bull's version of the National anthem, terminated the scheme. The principal vocalists were Misses Birch and Dolby and Messrs. Lockey and Lawler. These excellent concerts will be resumed next year.

Miss Bassano's "Matinée Musicale," at the Harley-street Rooms, last Saturday, was very fully and fashionably attended. The bénéficiaire sang, with taste and skill, compositions in different schools. She was assisted by her sister Miss Josephine Bassano, Miss Ransford, and Miss Catherine Hayes, Messrs. Reeves, Swift, and Patten. The solo instrumentalists were Miss Goddard, the youthful pianiste, whom genius was noticed a few weeks since, in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS; Mr. Brinley Richards, pianist; M. Bezoth, violin; Mr. Lucas, violoncello. Mendelssohn's trio in C minor was beautifully rendered by Miss A. Goddard, Mr. Bezoth, and Mr. Lucas. Miss A. Goddard also performed Thalberg's "Masaniello" fantasia, in which her mechanism proves her to be competent to attack any difficulties. Mr. Lucas was the conductor.

On Wednesday Miss Dolby and Mr. Lindsay Sloper gave their annual morning concert at the Hanover Rooms, which were quite filled. Miss Dolby sang (with Signor Marchesi) the duetto, "Bella image," from Rossini's "Semiramide," Mercadante's air "A la tua pace," Meyerbeer's romance of "Valentine," from the "Huguenots," an Irish ballad, a Scotch song, and, with Miss Catherine Hayes, two of Mendelssohn's duets, "The Sabbath Morn" and "Farewell." Whether she sings in the simple ballad, or the classical exponent of the German school or of the impassioned Italian style, Miss Dolby displayed her rich unctuous organ to the fullest advantage. No vocalist has more steadily pursued a path than this gifted artiste, her musical taste is now perfection. Mr. L. Sloper gave a touch of his quality as a classic pianist in Mendelssohn's Concerto in D minor, and as a composer in a Serenade Study in A and Galop—three of his very clever productions. Signor Piatti played a larghetto by Mozart, and Mr. H. C. Cooper the first movement of one of Viotti's concertos; and Miss Catherine Hayes, Miss Birch, Messrs. Benson and Smythson, and Signor Marras, aided in this attractive concert, of which Benedict and Lavenu were conductors. Mr. Willy's band was also engaged.

The sixth concert of the Amateur Musical Society, conducted by Signor Negri, took place last Monday, at the Hanover Rooms.

Miss Birch and Miss Eliza Birch gave their morning concert on Wednesday, under the patronage of Prince Albert and the Duke of Cambridge, with Mr. Willy's band, the conductor being Mr. Lindsay Sloper. The two sisters afforded the numerous and fashionable company filling the Hanover Rooms, the highest gratification by their singing of compositions of Mozart, Weber, Spohr, &c. Miss Birch, as a singer of the sacred school, is in the first rank; and Miss Eliza Birch warbles ballads very sweetly. They were assisted by Miss Clara Loveday, the accomplished pianiste, Mr. Henry Blagrove, violin; Mr. Richardson, flute; and Miss C. Hayes, Mdme. F. Lablache, Miss Dolby, Messrs. Whitworth, Lockey, and Phillips, Signori Marras, F. Lablache, and Marchesi, vocalists.

Space is such an imperative rule in our hebdomadal summary of "things musical," that we can but briefly refer to the third glorious meeting of the Beethoven Quartet Society, in the new locality, 27, Queen Anne-street, at once elegant, convenient, and comfortable. On Wednesday evening, a select assemblage of cultivated amateurs and professors were present amongst whom were the Earl of Falmouth, Molique, the composer, Charles Hallé the pianist, Mr. Macfarren, Mr. Braxton, &c. The quartets in the scheme were No 5 in A, Op. 18, composed in 1800, and dedicated to Prince Lobkowsky, grandfather of the gallant Prince of that name, so cruelly assassinated at Frankfort; No. 10, in E flat major, Op. 74 (1810); and No. 15 (posthumous), in C sharp minor, Op. 131, (1826-7). The executants were Messrs. Sloper and Goodban, first and violin; Hill, tenor; and Rousselot, violoncello. To state that each artist was at the hauteur de sa maison will readily be concluded from the names, but the perfect intonation, delicacy, and precision of execution, and intensity of expression of Mr. Sloper were more conspicuous. The trio in B flat Major, Op. 97, for pianoforte (Stephen Heller); violin, (Ernst); and violoncello (Rousselot), was magnificently played. It was a masterly conception of the first on the part of Heller, most poetically and brilliantly carried out. The execution of the entire programme was elevating, inspiring, and thrilling—a rare intellectual treat without alloy.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—The sixth Philharmonic Concert will take place next Monday. Lindley will perform a violoncello solo for the last time, and Thalberg will appear. A German prima donna from Hanover will sing for the first time, and Herr Formes is engaged. The symphonies will be Beethoven's "Pastorale" and Mozart's No. 4.——On Monday morning Madame Puzzi will give her annual concert at Her Majesty's Theatre, with the whole strength of the troupe. On the same evening John Parry will present his entertainment at the Music Hall.——On Tuesday the fifth meeting of the Musical Union will take place, at which M. Sainz, the young composer and pianist from Amsterdam, whose works are creating much interest, will play for the first time in London.——Next Wednesday night, at St. Martin's Hall, Mr. Hullah's singing classes, with professional aid, will sing Mendelssohn's "Lauda Sion," and Leslie's Hymn. There will be two matinées musicales on Wednesday—that of Signor Briccialdi, the flautist; and that of M. Godefroid, the celebrated harpist.——On Thursday, Mr. R. Blagrove will commence his concertina concerts.——On Friday, the Sacred Harmonic Society will perform Handel's "Israel In Egypt," for the last time, conducted by Costa, with Misses Birch, Dolby, Messrs. Sims Reeves, Machin, and Phillips, as chief vocalists.——M. Bilet's third pianoforte soirée is also fixed for Friday; and on Saturday will be the third concert of the Royal Academy of Music.——The second Royal Italian Opera House concert will take place next Friday, the 24th inst.——The Misses Sherguld—sisters three—a violinista, a pianiste, and vocalist—had a soirée on the 17th, in Dutch Ambassadors, assisted by MM. de Bassier, Billet, Rousselot, Pilotti, and Mr. Drayton. ——The performance of Haydn's "Seasons," for the benefit of the Choral Fund, conducted by Benedict, took place at Exeter Hall on Friday. Mr. Mc. John Parry gave his entertainment at Kennington on Thursday. ——Jerusalem evening Mr Geo. Buckland presented his new entertainment at Crosby Hall, entitled the "Market Town," written by Mr. John W. Ros.——Mr. Carte delivered a lecture on musical instruments, at the Marylebone Institution, last Monday.——Mendelssohn's music to "Œdipus," which has only been performed once in this country, at the Palace, will be executed at the Royal Italian Opera, by permission of her Majesty, at Mrs. Anderson's annual concert.——A concert will take place next Monday night, at the Sussex Hall, at which Ernst will perform for the first time in the City, and the Hungarian Vocalists will sing.——Alari, the composer, has arrived in London for the season.——Mr. Osborne's third and last matinée will be given next Thursday.

FOREIGN MUSICAL NEWS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

Alboni's début last Friday, at the Grand Opera, as Fidès, in Meyerbeer's "Prophète," is the musical event of the day. Her success was decided, without at all affecting the original disinclination of the part by the child of genius, Viardot. Alboni did not "make up," to use the stage phrase, for the maternity Fidès; she trusted, as a critic observes, to her "embonpoint tant sont peu Hollandaise"—that is, to her Dutch rotundity—to give herself the maternal aspect. She presented Fidès as the quietest and most inoffensive of beings—approximating too closely to insipidity—until the cathedral scene, and then she warmed into action. Her lovely voice made the deepest impression in the air in which Fidès blesses her son, for having saved her life at the moment of the burning of the alfresco inn, Berthe. She was not impulsive in the whirlwind of passion in the last act as Viardot; but her delicious organ told in the slow movement of the grand duo with the tenor, and was lauded to the skies by the audience. Alboni, however, sufficed to carry her through the difficulties of the part of Fidès successfully; and, in the absence of her predecessor, she will be a welcome substitute. It is a great relief to Meyerbeer, Gouin, and Lavasseur to the three Arabapuna characters but ill-sustained in the London version. Brémond's Count Oberthal is also perfect. Roger has his happy moments, but he has too frequently the ambition of Jean of Leyden to rest satisfied in the musical expression.

Letters from Berlin describe the third representation of the "Prophète" (in German) as most triumphant. The King and Queen of Prussia, with the Princes and Princesses of the Royal Family, were present; and Meyerbeer was again personally congratulated by his Majesty. The members of the orchestra, through their chef, Herr Ganz, presented the composer with a crown of laurel in massive silver. Mdme. Viardot quite electrifies her audiences as Fidès. The following is the list of operas in which the "Prophète" has been produced, in the order of representation:—Paris, London (in Italian), Marseilles, Amsterdam, the Hague, Hamburg, Dresden, Vienna, Frankfort, Schwerin, Leipsig, Darmstadt, Antwerp, Dusseldorf, Cologne, Sondershausen, and Berlin.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The Newmarket Second Spring Meeting was, without exception, one of the least interesting we ever attended, and, had it not been for the necessity of being on the spot to take advantage of any improvement which might arise in the great event about to come off at Epsom, very few would have "honored the course with their presence." Altogether, it was a flat week for racing, and so will be the ensuing one, albeit that true sporting and most spirited town, Manchester, promises days of good sport, commencing on Wednesday. Harpenden, a promising meeting on a small scale, and Coggleshall take place on Wednesday, and Southwell on the following day. The cricket matches for the week are Surrey against Middlesex, at Lord's, and the Gentlemen of the C. and Ground against the University of Oxford on Thursday. There will also be a match on the last-mentioned day, at Kennington Oval, between the Benedicts and the Bachelors of the Surrey Club. The aquatic gatherings are confined to the Hammersmith and Jersey regattas on Monday.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The horses most in demand this afternoon were The Nigger, Pitsford, Penang, and the two first favourites. Mavors went to 20 to 1 and the Italian to 25 to 1, the former, however, "coming" again near the close, and leaving off at 15 to 1. Ghulie Callum was friendless.

DERBY.

5 to 1 agst Hollingbroke	15 to 1 agst Penang	30 to 1 agst Delocon (t)
10 to 1 ——— Colcher	15 to 1 ——— Mavors (t)	35 to 1 ——— Blarney (t)
12 to 1 ——— The Nigger (t)	16 to 1 ——— Mildew (t)	40 to 1 ——— Carlisco (t)
13 to 1 ——— Pitsford	20 to 1 ——— Ghulie Callum	50 to 1 ——— Alonzo
13 to 1 ——— Voltigeur	25 to 1 ——— The Italian (t)	66 to 1 ——— Brennus

DERBY, 1851.—50 to 1 agst Trunnion (t)

LATEST BETTING AT NEWMARKET.

DERBY

11 to 8 agst Hollingbroke	17 to 1 agst Penang	40 to 1 agst Ghillie Callum
11 to 2 ——— Colcher	17 to 1 ——— Mildew	40 to 1 ——— Sweetheart
11 to 1 ——— Pitsford	20 to 1 ——— Italian	1000 to 15 ——— Capt. Grant (t)
13 to 1 ——— The Nigger	30 to 1 ——— Delocon	1000 to 15 ——— Dickens
13 to 1 ——— Voltigeur	33 to 1 ——— Nutshell	1000 to 10 ——— William the Conqueror
15 to 1 ——— Mavors	40 to 1 ——— Carlisco (t)
	1000 to 10 agst Royal Hart

PANIC.

7 to 1 agst Glenfiddich	11 to 1 agst Rivoli	13 to 1 agst Countess (Mr. Gratwicke's)
10 to 1 ——— Exotic filly (t)	15 to 1 ——— Kisaa Middleton

NEWMARKET SECOND SPRING MEETING. TUESDAY.

The racing, as will be collected from our return, was not by any means interesting. The attendance, however, owing to an expectation that Bolingbroke and Penang would show for the Rowley Mile Place, was quite as good as we usual y see at a Second Spring Meeting.

HANDICAP SWEEPSTAKES of 10 sovs each.—Sir J. Gerard's Jest (Barlhoiomew), Mr. Wigram's Rose Prof Belle (W. Boyce). 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 10 sovs each.—Mr. Watson's Nineveh (E. Sharp), 1. Lord Exeter's Visite (Flatman), 2.

MATCH, 100, h ft.—Duke of Bedford's Mahratta (F. Butler), 1. Mr. Ramsbottom's Isis (Flatman), 2

FIFTY POUNDS, for three-year-olds.—Mr. Thomas's Royal Hart (Abrahams), 1. Mr. Rolt's Wanszkye (Pettit), 2.

FIFTY POUNDS.—Mr. Barnes's Tuftbunter (F. Butler), 1. Col. Peel's Vasa (Flatman), 2

WEDNESDAY

THE CHAMPION STAKES of 50 sovs each.—Duke of Bedford's Bordeaux (E. Pettit), 1. Lord Exeter's Nutcracker (Flatman), 2.

HANDICAP PLATE of 50 sovs Mr. Cassidy's Dilligence (T. Smith), 1. Mr. G. Hodson's Lanercost (Pettit), 2.

THE SUFFOLK STAKES of 15 sovs each.—Mr. Snewing's St. George (Hiett), 1. Mr. Nevill's Herbert (Flatman), 2).

THE JOCKEY CLUB PLATE of 80 sovs. —Duke of Bedford's St. Rosalis, walked over

At a meeting of the committee of the Newmarket Subscription Rooms, held on Wednesday afternoon, the following resolution was passed:—"The committee are of opinion that no horse has been known up and published by the Hon. Captain Rous in his book 'On the Laws and Practices of Horse-Racing,' should be adopted in all cases which may hereafter arise to which the same are applicable. (Signed) W. S. Stanley, Chairman; W. Rudston Read, Francis Clarke, Edward Hyde."

THURSDAY.

HANDICAP SWEEPSTAKES of 20 sovs each.—Mr. Mure's The White Lady (Flatman), 1. Mr. W. S. Stanley's Jo (F. Butler), 2. Mr. Gye's (W. Boyce), 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 10 sovs each and 50 added.—Lord Clifden's Coticula (Pearl), 1. Mr. Payne's Citadel (Flatman), 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 10 sovs each.—Mr. Stephenson's Brother to Willingham (Dockeny), 1. Mr. Armstrong's Banker (Hiett), 2.

HANDICAP PLATE of £80.—Mr. Neville's b c, by Gladiator (Hiett), 1. Mr Stephenson's Goodwood (Harlock), 2.

FORFEITURE OF MEDALS.—A circular memorandum has lately been issued to the military authorities to the effect that medals granted to soldiers for services in the field will be withdrawn from such men as are sentenced to transportation or discharged with ignominy from the service, when the medals are to be transmitted to the Adjutant-General for the purpose of being returned to the Mint.

AN IRON FLAG-SHIP.—The iron steam-frigate Megæra, built by Fairbairns, and fitted with screw propelling engines of 350 horse-power by Rennie, is selected by the Admiralty to bear the broad pendant of the new Commodore, to be second in command in the East Indies, in the room of the Cambrian, 36, Commodore Plumridge. She is ordered to be fitted out at Sheerness, with dispatch, for this service, and will most likely be commissioned the second week in June.—United Service Gazette.

SIGNAL BALLOON.—Mr. Green has ascertained that one of his balloons (see page 333, in our Journal of last week), sent up from Tufnell-park, it is'owny, on the 9th inst., fell on the evening of that day, at Lisesaint, eight leagues south of Paris

During the past week a somewhat novel occurrence took place in the Taunton Union. Mr. Welsh, who, some time since, [illegible] nation to the board of guardians, when about to leave the union, was presented by the paupers with a handsome silver spoon, which had been purchased by subscriptions raised amongst them, many of them giving their little all for that purpose, as a small testimony for the great kindness, consistent with the duty of the house, which he had ever observed towards them.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

HER MAJESTY'S BIRTH-DAY.

The "event" in Court life during the week has been the celebration of her Majesty's birthday, on Wednesday last.

At ten o'clock in the morning, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Sir E. Bowater, Colonel the Hon. C. Grey, &c., went to the Horse Guards, where he was received by the Dukes of Cambridge and Wellington, when the customary parade took place.

The D ichess of Kent paid a visit of congratulation to her Majesty in the course of the day.

Her Majesty's Ministers and several of the great officers of state, gave grand banquets in celebration of the day, the guests at which were attired in full official costume.

The illuminations throughout the metropolis were on the usual scale of splendour—the residences of the nobility, the club-houses, and the Royal tradesmen being especially brilliant in their display.

The ceremony of christening the infant son of Colonel the Hon. Charles and Mrs. Grey took place on Saturday morning, in the private chapel of Buckingham Palace, in the presence of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Earl and Countess Grey and Lady Alice Lambton, Colonel the Hon. Charles and Mrs. Grey, Lady Mary Wood, Lady Georgina Grey, Hon. and Rev. Francis and Lady Elizabeth Grey, Hon. Lady Grey, Lady and Miss Farquhar, Sir Walter Farquhar, Mr. and the Hon. Mrs. Harvie Farquhar, Mrs. and Miss Clive, and the members of the Royal household in waiting. The ceremony of baptism was performed by the Hon. and Rev. Gerald Wellesley, her Majesty's domestic chaplain, the infant being named Charles. The sponsors were his Royal Highness Prince Albert, Earl Grey, and Lady Farquhar.

The Countess de. Noailly and the Duchess de Orleans visited the Queen at Buckingham Palace on Saturday. On Tuesday the Countess de Neuilly, with the Prince de Joinville and the Duke d'Aumale, visited the Queen of the Belgians at Buckingham Palace.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent visited the Queen on Thursday.

ARRANGEMENTS OF THE COURT.—The Court will proceed to Osborne, Isle of Wight, on Wednesday, the 22nd of May, and will not return to Buckingham Palace until Tuesday, the 18th of June, and that the christening of the infant Prince will be solemnised on Saturday, the 22nd of June. Drawingrooms will be held on Thursday, the 20th of June, and Tuesday, the 25th of June, and a levee on Wednesday, July the 3rd. It is also understood to be her Majesty's intention that State balls shall take place on Wednesday, the 26th of June, and on Wednesday, the 10th of July; and concerts on Monday, the 1st of July, and Monday, the 15th of July.

FASHIONABLE REUNIONS.

Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston entertained at dinner, on Saturday evening, at their mansion in Carlton Gardens, the Duke and Duchess of Bedford, the Earl and Countess of Besseborough, Viscount and Viscountess Sydney, Viscount and Viscountess Jocelyn, Lord and Lady Cowley, Lord Brougham, Lord and Lady Ashley, and Mr. Henry Greville. At a later hour, Lady Palmerston held an assembly, at which nearly all the leading members of the political and fashionable world now in London were present. The Duke of Wellington arrived early. His grace came from the opera, and was looking remarkably well.

Lord and Lady Stanley gave a grand dinner party on Saturday evening, at their mansion in St. James's-square, to a distinguished circle of the nobility. After the banquet, Lady Stanley held her first "reception" this season. The reunion was attended by a very brilliant circle of the aristocracy. His Grace the Duke of Wellington took opportunity to pay his respects to her Ladyship on the occasion; and among the general company were—his Grace the Duke of Buccleuch, the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, the Duke and Duchess of Cleveland and Lady Augusta Paulett, the Duke of Montrose, the Marquis and Marchioness of Westminster and Lady Octavia Grosvenor, the Marchioness of Ailesbury, the Marquis and Marchioness of Camden, the Marchioness Dowager of Sligo and the Ladies Browne (two), the Marquis and Marchioness of Ely, the Marquis and Marchioness of Kildare, &c.

ALMACK'S.—The last ball of the first series of the fashionable réunions took place on Thursday. The ladies patronesses on this occasion were all attended with large parties, and tickets were accepted by several of the highest members of the aristocracy.

Married, at Berlin, on the 4th ult., Carl Nesaler, Professor of German History and Music, to Agnes, sole daughter of Richmond Morres, M.D., formerly of St. John's Hall, Camoridge, grand-daughter of Henry Redmond, the ninth Baronet, cousin to Viscount Mount Morres, of the kingdom of Ireland, and of the late Bartholomew Parker, Esq., of Thorney Abbey. The ceremony was performed by the bride's chaplain to a most crowded cathedral congregation, in the High German style, at 3 P.M.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, attended by the Baroness de Speth, went to Kew on Tuesday, and paid a visit to their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge. Her Royal Highness visited the Duchess of Gloucester on Thursday at Gloucester House.

The Prince and Princess de Joinville arrived at Claremont, from Portugal.

His Excellency Mehmed Pasha, the Turkish Ambassador, having been appointed by his Imperial Majesty the Sultan on a special mission to congratulate his Majesty the King of the Netherlands on his accession to the throne, will shortly take his departure for the Hague. His Excellency's absence will not exceed a few weeks.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Abercorn and family have arrived at Chesterfield House, from Baron's Court, county Tyrone, for the season.

The Earl of Ellesmere and party have arrived at Gibraltar in the Erymus yacht, en route to Egypt and the Mediterranean Islands.

Lady Feversham has issued cards for a grand ball on the 18th proximo.

Miss Coutts's concert, to meet their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, is fixed for Friday, the 31st instant.

Lady Sykes gave her first ball for the present season on Tuesday evening, at the family mansion in Grafton-street. The company began to arrive at half-past ten o'clock. His Excellency the Turkish Ambassador, his Excellency the American Minister and Mrs. and Miss Laurence, and the Duchess of Leeds and the Misses Lane Fox, were among the early arrivals.

CABINET COUNCIL.—A Cabinet Council was held on Thursday, at the Foreign Office. It was attended by Lord John Russell, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Earl of Minto, Sir George Grey, Viscount Palmerston, Earl Grey, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Francis Baring, Sir John Hobhouse, the Earl of Carlisle, the Right Hon. H. Labouchere, and the Right Hon. Sir Fox Maule. The Council sat three hours.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN SAILORS SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of this society was held on Tuesday night at the London Tavern; the Hon. W. Cowper, M.P., in the chair. The chairman stated that the great object of the society was to give spiritual instruction to British and foreign sailors, a class of all others most required it, from the very position in which they are placed. By being sent away across the seas, far away from any parish church, they were utterly prevented from receiving that religious tuition which happily was dispersed throughout all society. The report stated that in the port of London it was the privilege of the society to seek out the men to whom commerce was so materially indebted, and by augmenting their religious happiness to lessen the amount of wickedness and misery. At the Sailors' Church, Wellclose-square, religious service was held thrice every Lord's day and three times during the week. The word of God has also been conveyed on board ship by their missionaries, and 2360 seamen had been under the Thames missionaries. They had held 649 meetings on board ship, and 1107 services on shore. The number of seamen in attendance had exceeded 21,400. The committee had two objects in view: one was the establishment of a nautical college, in which every branch of science connected with the professional improvement of masters, mates, and others might be taught; and the other, to secure one or more lodging-houses. The report concluded by stating that the receipts during the past year had amounted to £3815, and the expenditure to £3923, leaving a balance of £31, besides a legacy of £100 due from the late W. Hordle.

THE PROJECTED IMPROVEMENT OF ST PAUL'S CHURCHYARD.—On Monday a deputation waited by appointment upon the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's Cathedral, with references to the projected improvements proposed by Mr. Barber, of the firm of Barber, Hawse, and Meade, St. Paul's-churchyard. Alderman Wilson pointed out the necessity for setting back the rails, should it be determined eventually to preserve them as a venerable testimonial of antiquity, and reminded the Chapter that, 80 years ago, Parliament had foreseen the probability of such an alteration at a future period. Mr. Blake and Mr. Deputy Harmon contended for the total removal of the rails as likely to cause a great public improvement, both as regarded the cathedral itself and the traffic convenience. Mr. Cockerell (architect to the cathedral authorities) denied that the removal of the railing would at all improve the appearance of the magnificent structure, and strongly contended for leaving things as they were. Mr. Barber said the opinions entertained by several surveyors and architects of high eminence were opposed to those of the gentleman who had just opposed the project. He had received letters from such advocates, thanking him for the efforts he had been making to accomplish the object of removing what almost everybody now considered to be a nuisance and an eyesore. Mr. Haywood showed that the carriage-way was not at present as wide in all its parts as either the entrances from Cheapside or from Ludgate-hill.—Sir James Duke said the City contemplated further improvements, and had abstained from building on the vacant ground at the end of Cheapside, because of the contemplated formation of that street in a direct line with Newgate-street. He hoped the heads of the Church would reconsider the subject, and feel disposed to meet the wants of their fellow-citizens and to further the interests of this great city, when they could accomplish such an object with great promptitude and without any inconvenience to themselves. He thought the Court of Aldermen would agree to remove the cab stand, if that were considered desirable.—The Dean could not see that there would be any use in widening the churchyard, unless the end of Ludgate-hill, where, he contended, all the stoppages occurred, were widened. The authorities, he said, intended to open the churchyard for the use of foot-passengers, and the deputation, after they had heard the deputation, would re-consider the subject, and send an answer.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A PROVINCIAL—Any member of the St George's Chess-club can introduce you as a stranger once or twice; but it is about to be proposed that no person unless belonging to the club shall be admitted unaccompanied by a member

C W P—Your solution of Enigma No 378 is—1. Kt to Q 5th (ch); 2. Q to her Kt 6th; 2. Q to Q B 8th—mate

C M C—Not at all a good move. The best play is 6 P to Q 4th. See the "Handbook," page 291

MARIAN—We have received the same solution of No 379 from a hundred other town opponents, but a moment's consideration would have shown to each its fallacy. Suppose, in reply to your 3d move, of R to Q B 3d (disc ch), Black answers with 3. K takes B how will you mate next move?

W G—Mr Bristol's problem is certainly without flaw of any kind

BUTLER—We doubt if any one could give such a score odds

W W W FOORET—See the notice above to MARCH 9

E I W—The solution of Enigma No 378 is—1. Kt to Q 5th (ch); 2. Q to Q B 8th—mate

Further specimens of Boston play will always be acceptable

A C, York—Examine it one more

H H H—We can trace no arms registered to the names in question

SIR K I M—We believe any untitled gentleman bearing arms would be right in having the side-head dressed—their helmet on his escutcheon. A captain in the militia is not, however an such captain, an esquire

IVANHOE—The words you are "Or, three candlesticks sa., within a bordure sa. Crest A dove's head ppr. Motto: "Providentiâ non consilio." One branch of the name dispenses with the bordure in the arms; and another bears "Or, two candlesticks in saltier sa., and a mullet in base gu.;" and for Crest, "An anchor and cable ppr."

CIVIS, Little Britain—We have no doubt you may obtain the "Examine, Chess-mate," in ivory, in Wedgewood's beautiful carrara, and in box and ebony, at Mechi's celebrated emporium Leadenhall-street

HILARY—Many thanks. They shall not be forgotten

HELGOLANDER—You may get the Chess-books in question at Westerton's capital library, St John's Gate, Clerkenwell

M—Kyte place, Hyde Park

MANUSCRIPT—You should study the "Handbook," published by Bohn, and the back volumes of the Chess-Player's Chronicle, all obtainable from Hastings, the publisher, in Caney-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields

H Uxbridge—Yours is certainly nothing very beautiful in such a solution, which is merely child's-play

E L, Bradford, United States—You have failed, we are sorry to say, in the "Stuttgardt Sphynx."

No correct solution in the Number for April 13th

ALPHA BETA—A good problem, like that in our last, admits but of one solution. You are very welcome.

W P T S will oblige us by suggesting his future communications to the office

B H G—The suggestion is a good one, but it could not be adopted without the sanction of Mr Bolton, and that we fear would not be easily obtained

W F N—Address a note to Mr Horwitz George and Vulture Hotel, Cornhill

J B T, Fredericton, New Brunswick—1 Your solution of the Stuttgardt problem is defective. 2 In the position you have forwarded mate may obviously be given in two or three ways

B W F—1 It is pronounced Mis-ki-e. 2 The games and problems are inadmissible.

F F, Surry St Edmunds—Much too simple

SOLUTIONS of Problem 379, by CAMERON. Sec the notice above to MARCH 9

SOLUTIONS of Problem 380, by J S, CAROLUS, Lancaster, P H, M J, BARON, T T, SIR EDMUND M P, REV H T, D D, Oxford; L L D, REV S S, MILO, A A Z, PHILIP, D C, BATH ECO. R R, PHILO-CHESS, are correct

SOLUTION of Mr Rohstadt's Problem, 379, by G M G, Newport; T L R, R F, Royal Artillery; JUVENTAS, S L B, R V, J P, Sydney HERMES, F G B, BOLTEN, R D M C S, Romford Chess-club, H B B, F, Bolton; J G Dumfries, J E, Hackney-road; W L D, CECIL, C B H G, G O F, M E K, W B, J K, W L, Dorking; L C, Devizes, SIR EDMUND, M H, Huddersfield; AN AMATEUR, Manchester; H H G, J H N, J W, Hull Chess-club, are correct. All others, amounting to nearly one hundred, are wrong

PROBLEM NO. 330.

Beautiful End-Game, composed and presented by Mr. PREUSS.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White, playing first, to checkmate in four moves.

SECOND MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (London).	BLACK (Amsterdam).
6.	Kt to K 5th

London to play.

CHESS IN THE UNITED STATES.

The visit of Herr Löwenthal has given an unusual impetus to the march of Chess in the United States. In addition to the matches already finished between Messrs Stanley and Turner, and Löwenthal and Turner, the particulars of which we gave in a late Number, a third has been commenced at Lexington, in Kentucky, between Mr. Löwenthal and Mr. E. A. Dudley, one of the finest players in the States. This contest is to be won by the first scorer of eleven games, and by the last account stood thus:—Löwenthal, 7; Dudley, 5: drawn, 4.

Game in the late match between Messrs. LÖWENTHAL and TURNER.

(Sicilian Opening.)

WHITE (Löwenthal).	BLACK (Turner).	WHITE (Löwenthal).	BLACK (Turner).
1. P to K 4th	P to Q B 4th	19. Q to K Kt 3d	Q Kt to K 2d
2. P to K B 4th	P to K 3d	20. R to Q B sq	Q to her Kt 3d
3. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	21. P to Q Kt 3d	Q Kt to Q 4th
4. P to Q B 3d	P to Q 4th	22. B takes Kt	Kt takes B
5. P takes P	P takes P	23. Q to K B 3d	Kt to K B 3d
6. P to Q 3d	K B to Q 3d	24. R to K sq	B takes R (ch)
7. Q Kt to Q R 3d	P to Q R 3d	25. B takes R	B to Q B 3d
8. B to K 2d	Q to her B 2d	26. Q to K B 3d	Kt to his 5th
9. P to K Kt 3d	K Kt to B 3d	27. Q to K 2d	P takes P (a)
10. Castles	B to K R 6th	28. Q takes Kt	P to Q B 7th
11. K R to K sq	Castles on the K side	29. Q to Q B 5th (ch)	B to K B sq
12. Q Kt to Q B 2d	P to K R 3d	30. B to Q 2d	P to B 8th (discovering ch)
13. Q Kt to K 3d	P to Q 5th
14. Q to K Kt 2d	K B to K sq	31. Q Kt to K 3d	P takes Kt P
15. K Kt to K 4th	R to K 3d	32. P takes P	Q takes P
16. B to Q 2d	Q R to K sq	33. Q Kt to K B 5th (ch)	Q to Kt 8th (ch) (c)
17. Kt to K B 3d	K takes R (ch)	34. K to B 2d	Q to Kt 3d (ch)
18. Kt takes R	B to Q 2d	35. P to Q 4th

The game was prolonged for many more moves, and finally drawn.

(a) This is enterprising indeed, in a match game.

(b) Playing the other Kt to K B 5th seems to us far preferable.

(c) It was considered by the leading players that Mr. Turner ought now to have taken the Q P. In that case, however, White could have forced an exchange of Queens advantageously, we think. We should rather have played

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
33	P to Q 8th, Queens (ch)	K B 3d or check with
34 B takes Q	Q to her 8th (ch)	this Q, he must lose	P takes Kt
35 K to B 2d (ch)	Q takes B	the game.	Q to her 3d (ch)
36 K to K Kt 3d (ch)	Q to R 3d	33. K moves	P takes Kt
37. Kt takes Q B		34. Q takes Q R P (ees)	Q checks
(If White take the		And Black has the better game.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 574.—We extract the following from a Madras newspaper, called the Athenæum, which, to gratify the increasing taste for Chess, devotes a column weekly to Games and Problems.

White: K at Q Kt 5th, R at Q 4th, Kts at K Kt 6th and K 3d, P at K B 7th.

Black: K at Q 3d, K at Q R sq, Bs at K R 6th and Q R 3d, Kts at K Kt sq and K sq, Ps at K 2d, Q 4th, and Q Kt 3d.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

No. 575.—By Mr. H. B. B., of Lynn.

White: K at Q Kt 2d, Bs at K Kt 2d and Q 6th, Kt at K B 6th, P at Q B 4th.

Black: K at Q R 5th, R at K B 2d, B at K Kt 3d, Kts at K R 5th and Q Kt 4th; Ps at K 6th, Q Kt 2d, and Q 4th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 576.—By Mr. W. G.

White: K at Q 7th, R at Q Kt 2d, B at K sq, Kts at K 8th and K Kt 5th, P at K R 6th.

Black: K at K R sq, R at Q R 5th, B at Q Kt 5th, P at Q B 4th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 577.—By W. GRIMSHAW.

White: K at K Kt 7th, R at Q R 4th, B at Q Kt sq; Pa at K Kt 2d, K 2d, and K 6th.

Black: K at K Kt 4th, B at K R 5th; Ps at K R 2d and 4th, K Kt 6th, K B 3d, K 2d, and Q Kt 6th.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

A melancholy phenomenon, which always follows in the train of great political commotions, is at present manifested at Vienna, viz. an extraordinary number of cases of mental aberration. Not a week passes in which several persons in that capital are not seized with this terrible malady; and at present the number of cases in the hospital for the insane, which before the revolution averaged from 150 to 200, is nearly doubled, being increased from the age of 20 to 30 years, the period of life when the passions are the strongest.

The promotion of Mr. Jerningham to the post vacated by the death of Lord W. Hervey, Secretary of Embassy at Paris, will create a vacancy in the place of Secretary of Embassy at Constantinople, which it is understood will be supplied by Mr. Crampton, secretary at Washington, but now in London. Mr. Crampton, it is said, will be succeeded by Mr. Augustus Paget, at present attaché to the British embassy at Paris.

The Ulverstone Advertiser announces that the trustees of the savings-bank in that town have discovered a defalcation to the amount of £832 in the accounts of the actuary. No loss will, however, accrue to the depositors, as the bond of the actuary is for £800.

The directors of the East India Company have appointed the Rev. W. E. Buckley, M.A., to be professor of classics at the company's civil college, Haileybury, in the room of the Rev. J. Amiraux Jeremie, D.D., appointed Regius Professor of Divinity at Cambridge.

A meeting of provincial mayors and chief officers of cities and boroughs is to take place on the 21st instant at the Railway Hotel, in Derby, to make arrangements for inviting the Lord Mayor of London to an entertainment in the metropolis, or elsewhere, in return for the munificent hospitality with which his Lordship entertained the mayors of the provinces a short time since at the Mansion-house, when the Prince Consort was present.

The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress have issued cards to a large party for the 25th instant, to meet her Majesty's judges, the masters in Chancery, the serjeants-at-law, the Queen's counsel, and others in the legal profession.

The Augsburg Gazette of the 8th inst. contains the following, under the date of Rome, 30th ult.: "Dr. Townsend, canon of the Cathedral Church of Durham, lately presented to the Pope a memorial. The doctor being the bearer of a letter of recommendation from the Archbishop of Paris, the Pope gave him a most cordial reception, and promised to examine his memorial. Dr. Townsend recommends Puis IX. to convoke a council, composed of ecclesiastics and secular deputies from the different Christian countries, whose object should be to devise the means of uniting all the Christian sects."

As a satisfactory evidence of an improved state in the social condition of the people of Ireland, it may be mentioned that an increase in the monthly consumption of tea in that country has taken place for the last month, to the extent of more than 94,000 lb., although there had been a steady decrease of consumption for several months previously.

A monster tenant-right meeting has been held at Castlebar, in the county of Mayo, the use of the Connaught House having been given for the purpose by the High Sheriff. This is the first appearance of the spread of this movement towards the west; upwards of 30,000 persons are stated to have attended.

From a return laid before the House of Commons, it appears that the number of petty sessions in Ireland is 595, which furnish employment to 555 clerks, 47 of whom hold two, and 7 three petty sessions. The amount of fees paid to clerks was, in 1849, £16,201 10*d*.

On Saturday last, the Star steamer, with 60 passengers on board, when on her voyage to Bristol from the port of Cardiff, and about 200 yards from the harbour, sprang a leak, and began to fill rapidly. There was but one boat connected with the vessel, and that was only capable of holding six or eight persons; but a steam-ting made for the leaky packet, and took off her passengers. The Star was then run upon the mud, as the only chance of preventing her sinking.

A few days since a granary was set on fire and destroyed, at Shinfield, near Reading, the property of Mr. T. C. Cobham; fortunately, there was no grain, or anything else of value, in the building.

On Sunday morning last, a plantation belonging to E. Collins, Esq., situate at Crindle Down, in the parish of Quethiock, Cornwall, was maliciously set on fire by some person unknown, and about twenty acres of the same destroyed before the fire could be got under.

When a measure similar to the Bishop of London's Bill for a council of Bishops was, in the reign of Elizabeth, presented to the legislature by Archbishop Parker, it was met by this reply: "No by the faith of God, we will pass nothing before we know what it is, for that were to make you popes: make you popes who list; for we will make you none." (Speech of Sir Peter Wentworth, 1571.) And hereupon the bill was lost.

The wages of labourers through the south and south-east of Beds were lowered 8*s.* per week some time ago, and at Meppershall to 7*s.* A further reduction was hinted at; but the labourers in the employment of five of the seven farmers in that parish turned out, and refused to work under 8*s.*

A return of the expenditure of poor-rates in Ireland for the year ended 29th September, 1849, and of the number of persons relieved, gives the following particulars:—In-maintenance £797,324; out-relief, £679,603; establishment and other expenses, £700,782: total, £2,177,580. Number of persons relieved during the year: In-door, 262,284; out-door, 1,210,482.

On Friday and Saturday last, Perthshire was visited with several showers of sleet and hail, and on the hills the snow fell to the depth of an inch. The sun's rays on Saturday cleared the south sides of the lower range of the Grampians, only to be covered again through the following night. The thermometer on these nights was several degrees below the freezing-point, with thick hoar-frost on the low grounds.

During the last fortnight the salmon-fishing in the Tweed has been very poor. Since the commencement of the season, the success has been variable; at some of the sea-side fishings occasional good takes have been got, but those at the river have generally fared badly. The retail prices continue steadily keep at a high figure, ranging at present from 1*s.* 6*d.* to 1*s.* 10*d.* per lb. for salmon, and trout from 10*d.* to 1*s.*

On the night of the 7th instant the parish church of Easingwold (Yorkshire) was broken into, and two pewter flagons, two brass candlesticks, an inkstand, a book, and a bunch of keys were taken away.

The dispute which has been so long pending between Mr. Jefferies, the late keeper of the Racquet Court of the Royal Artillery, and Captain Talbot, the treasurer (which, it will be remembered, led to an action at the Kent assizes, in which a verdict was taken by consent for Mr. Jefferies), has terminated by the payment to Mr. Jefferies of the whole of the costs and £200 damages, amounting to nearly £400. It is expected that the Racquet Court, which has been so long closed, will now be re-opened. The payment of the money is due to the result of a court of inquiry, which the Master-General of the Ordnance directed to assemble.

M. Soyer has sent in his resignation to the Reform Club.

The provincial journals give accounts of several French fires, all of which are the work of incendiaries. A farm-house connected with the château of La Queuille (Puy-de-Dôme) has been burnt down. The loss is estimated at 25,000f. Three fires have lately taken place in the arrondissement of Rambouillet. Two houses have been burnt down in the village of Piffaudière.

The captain of a company of the National Guard of Mayenne (France), who, a late evening, came on the ground in a bonnet Phrygien, has been suspended for two months by the Conseil de Discipline. The offender will have to answer for his conduct before the Court of Assizes.

There are eighty-four candidates for the vacant chaplaincy of Sheffield parish church. On Tuesday last the church burgesses of Sheffield were occupied from ten o'clock in the morning to six in the evening, and by adjournment for four hours more, in examining the testimonials. The candidates were selected from the whole number to preach before the burgesses.

The late Hon. and Rev. G. V. Wellesley's "dormitory," in the cloisters of Durham Cathedral, has given place to a noble hall, now nearly completed, which will be used as a library and music-room. It will extend in length 200 feet, and in breadth 24.

Two convicts were drowned at Woolwich on Sunday afternoon. The accident occurred while raising a boat at the stern of the convict hulk stationed for the Royal Arsenal; the landing giving way, three of the convicts were precipitated into the river, and two were drowned.

It is a remarkable fact, that, since the opening of the North British Railway to Galashiels, the fares have all moved off from the covers on the estate of Langlee, below Galashiels. The railway runs through the cover, which was one of the most celebrated in Scotland.

Her Majesty's steam sloop Cormorant, Commander H. Schomberg, lately captured at the Brazils an empty slave barque of 382 tons. On the passage from the Brazils to St. Helena, a discovery of between five and six thousand dollars headed up in a farina cask was made between decks.

The Giornale di Roma publishes the ordinances of the Emperor of Austria, of April 18, decreeing that Bishops may henceforth receive the decisions of the Pope without any authorisation from the civil authorities.

The Staats Courant of the 13th of May publishes the official patent, under date of the 8th of May, 1850, appointing their Royal Highness Prince William Frederick Henry, generally designated Prince Henry of the Netherlands, Regent of the Kingdom of Holland, the Regency to commence at the moment the King shall have ceased to exist. The document is signed by the King, and countersigned by Rosendhal, the Minister of Justice; and Van Rappard, Councilor of State and Director of the Royal Cabinet.

On Sunday his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge attended divine service at the chapel of the Foundling Hospital. After the interesting ceremony of eighteen young persons returning thanks for their preservation and education by means of the charity, a very eloquent sermon was delivered by the Venerable Archdeacon Robinson, D.D., Master of the Temple, &c. In the afternoon a second discourse was delivered by the Rev. William Rogers, M.A., when an appropriate and touching appeal was made to a very full and attentive congregation.

The Danish Government is now preparing a bill for the purpose of making the old port of Copenhagen a free port. This measure will be one of the highest importance, not only for Denmark, but for the whole Scandinavian country, where, for ages, there has never existed a free-port.

The body of a Custom-house officer, named Stapleford, whose disappearance from the Dutch brig Palas, at Portsmouth, about two months since, caused considerable excitement, was picked up floating near the shore off Hayling Island, on Sunday last.

WARWICK MAY FAIR SHOW.

THE PROCESSION NEAR THE CORN EXCHANGE.

THIS annual pleasure fair took place on Monday last. The weather, which for some days previous had been exceedingly inclement and foreboding, was most cheerful and auspicious on the occasion. From an early hour in the morning, crowds of pedestrians, and vehicles of every description, flocked into Warwick from all quarters; and, as the day advanced, the trains from Birmingham, Coventry, and even London, added considerably to the crowds of pleasure-seekers who thronged the streets. The town was most brilliantly, and in many cases elegantly, decorated; arches and festoons being raised in many of the streets, and beautiful garlands suspended from the houses.

In the Market-place was erected the Dancing Pavilion, 200 feet in length, and capable of holding 1500 persons. From the centre of this arose the Maypole, hung with sixteen garlands, presented to the committee of management by the young ladies of Warwick; this was surmounted by a crown. The exterior of the pavilion was decorated with festoons of flowers and banners, as also was the whole Market-place, presenting a coup d'œil of great beauty. The interior was elegantly fitted up for dancing, and brilliantly lighted with gas; and the ceiling tastefully arranged with pink and white drapery, with festoons of flowers and rosettes.

The procession, which started from the pavilion at twelve o'clock, included several of those celebrated characters whose names have become identified with the history of this most interesting and ancient borough. Amongst others, Henry VIII., founder of the Collegiate School and noted charities of the town; Sir Thomas White and Thomas Oken, names of wide celebrity as the munificent benefactors of their borough; then the stately Queen Elizabeth, who rested at Warwick on her route to the "Princely Pleasures" of Kenilworth Castle, in her "Roomers Progresse" of 1575, where she was entertained by Robert Dudley Earl of Leicester: an event described with matchless power in the immortal pages of "the great wizard of the North." The name of Robert Dudley is connected with the annals of Warwick as the founder of the institution known as "Lord Leicester's Hospital," a beautiful pile of building, situated in the High-street. The personation of the Earl in the procession was excellent. Last, though not least, we may mention the representation of the renowned hero of the old borough, the Champion Guy, "armed to the teeth." It were needless here to recount or dilate upon the manifold claims of this "valorous knight" to a prominent position in a Warwick pageant. The respective orders of Odd Fellows presented a most brilliant appearance, and added considerably to the attractive character of the procession. Among the Foresters rode the exceedingly good impersonations of Robin Hood, together with his blithe companions, Scarlet and Little John, with Friar Tuck, the jovial chaplain of these rangers of "the merry greenwood." The view of this brilliant cortège passing along some of the arched and festooned streets presented a spectacle of great spirit and beauty, and very suggestive of the courtly pageantry of the olden time. The Warwickshire Yeomanry Cavalry being out on a week's duty at the time, added much to the enlivenment of the occasion.

The English ballad-singer's joy,

Dancing commenced at the pavilion about four o'clock in the afternoon, and was kept up by an immense company until twelve o'clock, at which hour, as had been announced, the pavilion closed. It was again opened the following evening, when a large and respectable concourse assembled.

The following is the order of the procession, as correct as we have been able to obtain it, as it proceeded through the principal streets of the town:—

The Band of the Warwickshire Yeomanry Cavalry, in full uniform. Three Females on Chargers, bearing Banners. Carriage drawn by four grey Horses, combining a portion of the Committee; the remainder on Horseback.

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD FELLOWS, M.U.

Warden on Horseback. Royal Standard. Earl of Warwick Lodge Dispensation. Hosts bearing Cross Keys. Past and Present District Officers, with white wands. Regalia—Crown borne by Four Boys. Banner—motto, "Faith." The Band of the 17th Regiment of Infantry Children on Horseback. Lodge Officers, bearing Regalia. Emblem. Banner.

HENRY VIII.

Lodge Officers, bearing Regalia. Banner—motto, "Hope." Warden on Horseback. Loyal Oken's Dispensation. Brothers, two and two, bearing Regalia. Emblem.

SIR THOMAS WHITE AND THOMAS OKEN.

Brothers, two and two, bearing Regalia. Banner—motto, "Charity." Children on Horseback. Warden on Horseback. Loyal Ross Dispensation. Flag. Brothers, two and two, with wands.

BRITANNIA,

With representation of the four quarters of the globe, drawn by four black chargers. Emblem. Brothers, two and two, with wands. Children on Horseback.

NOTTINGHAM ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,

Preceded by a Military Brass Band, in full uniform. Drums and Fifes. The Tylers of their respective Lodges, Banner of the Order, Past and Grand Masters, Officers, &c. Members of the respective Lodges. Banner. Imperial Feathers on Horseback, with Supporters bearing Regalia. Members of the Order.

A SPLENDID TRIUMPHAL CAR,

Drawn by Four Horses, bearing a National Representation, supported by Cambria, Caledonia, Hibernia, attended by a Sailor and his Bride, &c. Children on Horseback. Banner. Grand Imperials on Horseback, with Supporters bearing Regalia. Members of the Order. Children on Horseback. Banner. Charter of Confirmation. Vice-Grands, with Supporters Streamer. Children on Horseback. Members of the Order. Banner. Wardens on Horseback, bearing Regalia.

THE ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,

Advancing with their splendid brass band. Drums and fifes. Two Foresters, in full regalia, each bearing a union jack. Dogs. Three Foresters, mounted, bearing a broad axe.

Page.	ROBIN HOOD.	Page.
LITTLE JOHN.	WILL SCARLET.	FRIAR TUCK.

The Foresters and their "merry chaplain of the greenwood," mounted and attired in appropriate costume. Handsome silk streamer. District Officers, mounted in full regalia. Court Dudley Earl of Leicester Dispensation. Officers of Dudley Earl Leicester, mounted, in court uniform Children on Horseback. Members, two and two, bearing clubs. The band of the 5th Regiment of Infantry. Two juvenile Foresters, mounted, in ancient costume. Streamer. Children on Horseback.

QUEEN ELIZABETH,

attired in a white riding robe, with a regal mantle of purple velvet, and mounted on a handsomely-caparisoned steed. The maiden Queen was attended by superbly dressed and mounted. These characters were represented as they appeared at the entry of Kenilworth Castle, in 1575. Children on Horseback. Officers of Court Warwick, mounted, in full regalia. Banner. Members, two and two, bearing clubs and axes. Children on Horseback. Two juvenile Foresters, mounted, in full uniform. Streamer. Three Foresters on foot, each bearing a club. A young Forester, mounted, in regalia, carrying a fawn. Three Foresters, mounted, in full regalia, each bearing an axe. Two Pages, in demi-suits of armour, bearing the shield and tilting pole of the noble and renowned hero, mounted, in full armour, and attended by two Esquires, mounted, in demi-suits, bearing the war weapons of the Knight, and his helmet, surmounted by a representation of the Dun Cow, "That monstrous wild and cruel beast."

ROBERT DUDLEY, EARL OF LEICESTER,

GUY, EARL OF WARWICK,

Children on Horseback.

A SPLENDIDLY DECORATED CHAR-A-BANC,

Drawn by four beautiful horses, representing the forest of Robin Hood, with park adjoining, containing Shepherd and Shepherdess, with lambs, dogs, lions, foxes, birds, &c., decorated with garlands, and the whole surmounted with the Royal Arms. A Bear, led, with attendant carrying a ragged staff, emblematical of the celebrated crest of the noble house of Warwick, closed the procession, which extended to a very considerable length.

We have engraved the pageant at three points of its progress.

THE PROCESSION PASSING ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

A MONSTER PLURALIST.—In the fourth edition of Mr. Whiston's pamphlet, "Cathedral Trusts and their Fulfilment," just published, he gives, at page 80, the following list of ecclesiastical income, tithes, and benefices held by a single clergyman:—Prebendal income, £1,000; tithes of Doddington, £347 10s.; ditto of Blythe West, £12; ditto of Lympne, £503; ditto of Lyndham, £755 12s. 6d.; ditto of Stone, £218 3s. 6d.; Rectory of Saltwood, £585; cum Hythe, £95 18s.; rectory of Cliffe, Rochester, £1391 16s. 10½d.; glebe of ditto, 30 acres, £35; total, £5053 14s. 10½d. "To look," says the author of "Ecclesia Dei," at Cliffe church, and think of ——, is one of the most painful sights and scenes of home travel which a Christian man can witness and weep over." Mr. Whiston notes too that: "The canonical rector has not moved from his cathedral orbit to Cliffe more than once in the last twelve years." And in his preface Mr. Whiston states that to the sum of £5053 14s. 10½d. "are to be added, great tithes of Lyndsted, £627 13s. 10½d.; great tithes of Iwade, £536 16s. 3d.: total, £1183 10s. 1½d.; making the real total of £6217 5s.; to which reports grace something more." Neither Mr. Whiston, nor the writer of "Ecclesia Dei," adds the name of this unfortunate churchman. As, however, we have before remarked on the case without any such false delicacy, we may now repeat that he is the Rev. Archdeacon Croft.—Daily News.

TOWN TALK AND TABLE TALK.

I REMEMBER, some years ago, visiting, with a party of summer hunters after the picturesque, a quaint old-fashioned little town in the far north of Scotland. We paid our respects to the few and not very fierce lions of the place—the mouldering abbey [the river's banks, the mouldering feudal castle upon the rocks, the busy harbour crowded with something like an hundred sail of herring fishing-boats, and a score or so of Dutch luggers and Irish schooners; but in all our perambulations we were steadily accompanied by two not particularly agreeable comrades—to wit, one of those fine persevering Scotch rains, which, like the conscientious drummer in "Pickwick," never left off, and a poor half-witted creature, a sort of town fool, who, it seems, always made it his business to follow the steps of strangers, and who, upon this occasion, kept perpetually sidling up to the members of our party one after another, and whispering in their ears, in a sly deprecatory tone, with a superabundance of gestures, intended to imply that the matter was to be kept a profound secret. "You'll be good enough, sir, to excuse the weather," "You'll please, sir, to overlook the climate," and so forth; just as if the weather or the climate had some claim to indulgence as being poor silly stupid things who knew no better. Now, really before the partial change which has gladdened the last day or two, I had begun to think that some such functionary as the weather-apologising town fool might be appropriately appointed in London to walk up and down Regent-street, and make what excuses he could for the bleak east wind and the pelting rain which day after day have made our skies black and our streets desolate. The only bar would be the real impossibility of framing any recommendations to mercy on behalf of the cold and the wet, which a common-sense public would be likely to entertain. We can only hope, however, that Summer is bestowing all his disagreeabilities upon us in a lump, and that, the infliction over, blue skies and sunny days are to be our portion until the winds of Autumn begin again to blow.

Without meaning in the remotest degree to trench upon the here forbidden

THE PROCESSION PASSING THE HOSPITAL.

COLOSSAL STATUE OF LORD NELSON.

grounds of politics, I may remark upon the new social move of the Protectionist party as forming one of the funniest features of Town-talk, at present to be heard in club or tavern. The plan is not yet actually promulgated, but the Standard is throwing up straws and putting forth feelers, and we may soon expect to hear more of one of the most wonderful crusades ever preached. Mr. Ferrand has the merit of being the "Peter the Hermit" of the new movement; which is, in fact, no other than the formation of a mighty League, pledged against calico—sworn to wear neither cotton shirt nor gown, nor carry cotton umbrella—repudiating alike the raw material of our Yankee friends, and the spinning jennies of our Lancashire friends—patriotically sticking to the fleeces of our own sheep and the flax of our own fields, and chivalrously determined to man the ancient spinning-wheel against the steam-whirled spindles of modern days. "Why," says the evening champion of this hopeful scheme, "why can't we do as we did before we ever heard of the cotton-tree? Our forefathers were content to dress in plain homespun linsey woolsy, and why should not their children follow their example?" Why, indeed? Besides our forefathers, of a remoter age still, were content to dress themselves by means of a paint-brush and a pot of red ochre—why should we not go back to the one period, as well as the other? The proposal for setting old women to work spinning-wheels, in opposition to steam-engines, whirling jennies of 1500 spindles each, is a wonderful thought. We may soon expect to hear of a string of pack-horses, pitted against the London and North-Western; or a succession of sails-covered coaches, started against the Transatlantic line of Cunard steamers.

I have seen a letter from America giving an account of the recent outrage in the Senate, at Washington. Foote, the senator, was levelled and cocked a pistol at Benton, is a Mississippi gentleman, and has long borne the character of a very cross, crusty, and spiteful personage. His defence is that he expected Benton to rush in upon him, and produced the revolver in self-defence. Like many other incidents, the character of which is to be judged from minute individual actions and movements, the catastrophe in question has given rise to at least a score of versions, and Foote, I am told, is not without his advocates. The whole transaction, however, has greatly scandalised the States. Such things had happened before in the House of Representatives, but never in the Senate, which has always been pointed to as exemplifying the highest breeding in the country. Let the place however, of the States being a young and particularly circumstanced country, have what weight they may, the fact seems unquestionable that there must be something exceedingly coarse, ungovernable, and ferocious in the society which produced a man in Foote's position, with whom such a brutal practice as bringing loaded fire arms to a legislative assembly, could be literally possible. Never, we believe, since our Parliament was a Parliament, has anything approaching to the shadow of such an outrage disgraced its assemblies. Even the steel-breathed Barons, who, according to the custom of the times, sat in legislative conclave, their ponderous Gothic swords grasped in their mailed hands, never were known to draw their blades upon each other—while, as for the House now-a-days, there is something of the most exquisitely ludicrous in the notion of Mr. Disraeli suddenly jumping up and attacking Lord John with an agricultural pitchfork, or the stout-hearted little Premier repelling the onset with a blunderbuss snatched from beneath the scarlet cushions of the Treasury Bench!

I may append to the foregoing paragraph a literally true story of the artistic appreciation of one of the many hundred American travellers now journeying in Italy. Our transatlantic friend was maintaining to an English compagnon de voyage the superiority, in every respect whatever, of the dollar-making continent over all Europe. "What!" said the Englishman, "superior even in art! and it was only yesterday we looked at the Venus de Medici!" The instance pointed out appeared to pique the Yankee pilgrim. He fidgeted for a minute, and then exclaimed, "Ah, not them stone gals—I guess I can't abide them nohow!"

The money for the grand Exposition of 1851 comes in, I hear, but slowly. Some £50,000 have, however, been already subscribed. The ces dit goes that the galleries and corridors will extend to a length of between six and seven miles—a goodly walk among chef-d'œuvres of industry and skill. I hear of great things to be done in the way of getting up excursions from all reasonably accessible parts of Europe to the grand focus of London; and it is even rumoured that fleets of extra and special vessels will convey passengers across the Atlantic. London, at all events, will be gay enough and crammed enough. The theatres expect to do unrivalled things, and are preparing to make unrivalled exertions. "They need something in the way of a lift." I was informed, on good authority, "last Easter has been the worst in the recollection of the oldest theatrical manager."

The opening of the Exhibition is beginning to supply the artistic title tattle usually in vogue in the merry month of May. It is whispered about that Delaroche's duplicate painting of "Cromwell" has been in the main executed by one of the master's pupils, receiving only its finishing touches from the hand of the great artist himself. Landseer's large picture of "The Duke on the Field of Waterloo" has found a purchaser, at the great price of £3000. It will, doubtless, make a most popular engraving. By the way, talking of Landseer, many of our readers may recollect his glorious painting of a dead lion in the last year's Exhibition; that painting the poetry of which was well described when it was called "The King of Beasts Lying in State." The picture was, I believe, studied in part from the carcass of a lion, which died either in a caravan or at one of the zoological establishments in London. When, however, the cart containing the remains of the defunct monster stopped at the painter's door, the servant, who was requested to inform her master of the arrival of his model, and who must have been a lady of most peculiarly unexcitable and matter-of-fact habit of mind, went leisurely up stairs, and, in just the same tone as she would have inquired at what hour dinner was to be served, drawled out, "Oh! please, sir, have you ordered a lion?"

A good story of despotism in a small way is afloat, touching the Emperor of Russia. The narrators of the anecdote tell you that his Imperial Majesty having lately introduced Italian opera into one of his court theatres, condescended to superintend the proceedings of the new conductor, who was arranging his forces in the orchestra. "But I see," observed the Imperial amateur, "that you put the horns, and trombones, and drums, and so forth, just beneath my box." The musician hastened to explain that he was proceeding after the most approved fashion, and that the brass and bass were always placed so as to back up the weaker and lighter instruments. The reply was highly characteristic. "That may all be quite correct; but here, it is not musical laws, but my laws, which prevail; and I shall certainly not have all that brass braying under my ears. You will therefore please to re-arrange the position of the instruments!"

The poets are, I presume, agog, for Government have not as yet filled up the Laureateship. It is melancholy, however, to reflect how scanty are the ranks from which Wordsworth's successor must be chosen. Poor Tom Moore has outlived his faculties; Rogers is not in a position to make the emoluments of the nominal Court post of importance to him; and Government have lately—and very properly—taken this consideration into question. At the time when the Laker was chosen, the name of Leigh Hunt was brought forward as a candidate; but, since then, if I mistake not, the poet-essayist has been meagrely enriched with a pension. One or two of the Edinburgh journals have brought forward the well-founded claims of the writer of the "Isle of Palms," and have urged upon Lord John that the appointment of Professor Wilson would come with the more grace, inasmuch as it would form a fitting tribute from a political opponent to those poetical and literary endowments to which no party strife ought to render men insensible. It is now, I believe, pretty clearly understood that the Laureateship is a mere pension—that there is no quid expected to be rendered for the quo of the commuted butt of sherry. Wordsworth, indeed, specially stipulated that he was to be called on to write no birth-day odes, or, indeed, no odes of any kind. He did produce one specimen, however. It was, if I remember right, volunteered upon the occasion of Prince Albert being made Chancellor of the University of Cambridge. Those who recollect the flagging fancy and stumbling versification of the lines, will, however, be induced to think that the poem was produced, after all, rather from a sense of duty than as a live outburst of uncontrollable fancy. It is an eternal truth, that Pegasus will not amble pleasantly in harness. Curb and spur do not suit the celestial courser. If his paces are to be glorious, he must start when he likes, and stop when he pleases.

A. B. R.

COLOSSAL STATUES.

THESE colossal statues of the greatest military and naval hero of our age—the Duke of Wellington and Lord Nelson—have been sculptured in stone by Mr. Milligan, of Old Cavendish-street, for Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, and are intended to be placed upon a monument eighteen feet high, to be erected upon Southsea-common, near Portsmouth. The height of each statue is seven feet.

MILITARY TROPHIES FROM INDIA AND CHINA.—PRESENTS TO LORD GOUGH.—The Lords of the Treasury have caused Mr. Hayter, one of their Lordships' secretaries, to acquaint the Commissioners of Customs that Lord Gough having informed their Lordships that he expects to receive, in the course of the present month, from Calcutta, on board a vessel from that place, certain guns which have been presented to him by the East India Company and by the Rhye of Gwalior, together with other military weapons and trophies of war, as well as more fragile memorials of the places and men against whom he has been engaged during the period of his services in China and in India, their Lordships have been pleased to express their desire that every possible care and attention, consistently with the regulations and the security of the revenue, may be observed in the examination, on arrival of the cases and packages alluded to, and that the guns and other military trophies may be delivered to the noble and gallant Lord free of duty; and the necessary arrangements will be made for carrying their Lordships' wishes in the matter into effect.

SIR JOHN ROSS'S ARCTIC EXPEDITION.—The Glasgow Steam Navigation Company have generously offered to tow Sir John Ross's Arctic vessel some hundreds of miles on her way to the Arctic regions, and it is expected that a great number of persons will proceed on the excursion in the steamer.

EMIGRATION FROM THE UNITED KINGDOM.—On Wednesday the tenth general report of the Colonial Land and Emigration Commissioners was printed, giving some interesting information connected with emigration from the United Kingdom. The emigration from the United Kingdom during the ten years ending the 31st December, 1846, amounted to 986,892 persons, giving an average of 85,659 emigrants a year. During the years 1847 and 1848 the number of emigrants was 258,270 and 248,089 respectively, being nearly double the largest number that had emigrated in any previous year. During the year 1849 the emigration had reached the unprecedented number of 299,498 persons, of which number 266,817 proceeded to North America, 219,450 went to the United States, and 41,367 to British North America. The commissioners estimate that in 1849, exclusive of cabin passengers, £1,743,500 was expended on emigration, of which only £228,300 was paid out of public funds, leaving more than £1,800,000 as the probable amount provided out of private or parochial funds.

THE ENGLISH CHAPEL, UPPER TOWN, BOULOGNE SUR-MER.

THE Rev. Thomas Harvey, who has for several years past been seeking to obtain redress for his removal from the chaplaincies of Genoa and Antwerp, has lately purchased the English Chapel in Upper Town, Boulogne-sur-Mer, and become minister of the same. This chapel, not being endowed, is supported exclusively by the seat rent and by voluntary contributions. There is, evidently, a strong feeling in Mr. Harvey's favour at Boulogne; for, since he has taken possession of the chapel, the congregation and communicants have much increased, the former averaging nearly 400, and the latter about sixty monthly.

The chapel has been established since 1819; but has been entirely re-embellished since Mr. Harvey became the proprietor. The reverend gentleman has received high testimonials to character, as a Christian, and a minister; and during his residence on the Continent, he is stated to have upheld the Anglican Church, both by doctrine and conduct. Upon leaving Antwerp, Mr. Harvey received an address from a large majority of the English residents, in which they state that "they should be abandoning every rule of honour and justice if they allowed him to lay down his ministry without a declaration that he was unimpeached in his moral or clerical character—that no accusation had been brought against him as a minister or a man—and that, although the world might form an opinion to his prejudice upon the proceeding of the Bishop, he retired from that city with their unfeigned regrets, sympathy, and respect."

COLOSSAL STATUE OF THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.

On the 14th of April, Mr Harvey delivered in his chapel at Boulogne, an affecting discourse upon a text from Joshua xxiv, 15, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." It is generally known in Boulogne that the son of the rev. gentleman is an officer in the Austrian service, and that after having passed, at the expense of a few scratches, through all the perils and dangers of the Hungarian and Italian wars, he had on his road home been laid up for a considerable time by alarming sickness. In this discourse, the rev. gentleman thus pathetically alluded to his son's return:—

> If, my brethren, when speaking of spiritual things, it be ever permitted to those who minister to allude to the ordinary affairs and affections of a perishable world: if on any occasion I might with propriety ask your sympathy from this place, and invite you to rejoice with me, who have so much reason to rejoice, it is on this day so memorable to me and mine! To you who are parents I need not dwell upon the happiness of an union with a beloved child, after so many years' separation; but I would call upon you to join with me in holy gratitude, not only for his preservation, when the Almighty "covered his head in the day of battle" when "a thousand fell beside him," and the sword and the bullet scarcely came nigh him; but I implore you, above all, to bless His glorious name, that He has enabled him to be present with us to-day, not in the house of feasting, but in the Temple of the Lord, here to record these mercies, and to testify, that although he has sworn allegiance to a foreign earthly Sovereign and serves under foreign colours, he has not cast off the religion of his forefathers, but comes forward to make open profession of his faith before the altar of his Saviour, there to partake of, for the first time—yea, to receive from his father's hands—those holy mysteries, the emblems of that body which was broken, and of that blood which was shed for him, let us devoutly hope and pray, "to his great and endless comfort." No better reward, surely, can be "give unto the Lord for all the benefits that He hath done unto" him, than "to receive the cup of salvation," and to call upon His name who saved his life from destruction, having defended him "from the pestilence that walketh in darkness, and from the arrow that destroyeth by noonday."

THE ENGLISH CHAPEL, UPPER TOWN, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER.

THE GORHAM CASE.

A NUMBER of lay members of the diocese of Gloucester and Bristol have presented an address to the Bishop, in which they express a deep sense of the danger to the faith and vitality of the Church of England involved by the decision of the Privy Council; complain of the inapness of the Council to decide such questions; and entreat his Lordship to take council with his reverend brethren to provide a remedy for these evils. The Bishop replied, on the 10th instant, that he was gratified so large and influential a body of laity took a lively interest in the well-being of the Church; that he hoped the late decision would produce no other effect than temporary excitement; that it left the doctrine of the Church concerning baptism unaltered; and that he had already taken counsel with his reverend brethren, in preparing a bill, which had been submitted to the House of Lords, for constituting a different court of appeal on points of doctrine, and which he hopes will be generally satisfactory to the Church.

A petition to the Bishop of Oxford, from the graduates, under-graduates, &c., being members of the Convocation, has been prepared at Oxford, and lies there for signature. It declares the belief of the parties that the baptism each of them was made "a member of Christ, a child of God, and inheritor of the kingdom of Heaven." They further say that they have heard with sorrow that the Privy Council has arrived in a recent judgment that a contrary doctrine is not inconsistent with the doctrines of the Church of England, and they pray that the Bishop would take measures for the effectual declaration and maintenance of the doctrine of Infant Baptism, and for checking those who are aggrieved by the judgment of the Council denying that article of faith.

A letter from the Rev J. W. Brooks, of St. Mary's, Nottingham, informs us, in relation to a paragraph which we published a fortnight ago, that there has been no meeting of the clergy of Nottingham on the subject of the judgment of the Privy Council, nor any address forwarded to the Bishop of Exeter from that town, that he is aware of. "An effort was made (he says) to get up a meeting of laymen only, who did agree upon a letter or address to the Bishop, but out of a population of 100,000, only 34 persons attended at the meeting." We copied the paragraph referred to by him from one of the morning papers, and we are now inclined to suppose that it might refer to some of the clergy of the county of Nottingham, not exclusively to those of the town.

An address is in course of signature to the Bishop of Peterborough, by both clergy and laity in the diocese, praying him to withhold his assent to the decree of Baptismal Regeneration, and entreat his Lordship to consult with his most rev. and right rev. brethren on what steps can, or ought to be taken for constituting a Court of Appeal, of bond fide members of the Church of England, as a tribunal for the judicial decision of all causes involving the doctrine or discipline or that Church.

A declaration from Archdeacon Thorp, and the clergy of Durham, having 114 signatures, has been presented to the Bishop of Durham, in which, in reply, he expresses his concurrence "that regeneration is, and by baptism, is the doctrine of our Church."

Addresses of thanks have been presented to the Bishop of Bath and Wells, for having still declined, signed by nineteen out of twenty-three of the clergy of the deanery of Glastonbury, and fifteen of the clergy of the southern district of the rural deanery of Axbridge.

The President and Fellows of Magdalen College have voted the sum of 100 guineas to the Bishop of Exeter, towards defraying the expense in his process with Mr. Gorham.

"PLAIN STATEMENTS FOR PLAIN PEOPLE," by a Layman, is the title of a plain-speaking, practical pamphlet, which takes the Bishop of Exeter's view of the doctrine of the Church as to baptismal regeneration, and carries it out logically to its conclusion of the separation of the Church from the Church. If the "indifferent" (of the Privy Council) "be carried out, and the evil consummated." The writer speaks of the Articles of the Church, which he treats with some contempt, and the Catechism, as having equal and co-ordinate authority with the Creeds, the Prayers, and the formularies of the Church; "they are but explanations of, and deductions from these, and therefore, wheresoever they differ, they must yield to the authority of the latter." He states the doctrine of the Church on the subject of infant baptism as it is set forth in the "Prayer-Book." "The Church tells us that a sacrament is an outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace given unto us, ordained by Christ himself, as a means by which we receive the same, and a pledge to assure us thereof. Now these words can only be received through the medium of the Church's authority, and Apostolic character. Those ministrations, again, can only be performed by "ministers lawfully appointed by ordination," when "the Bishop shall say the awful and impressive words—receive the Holy Ghost: the minister can work a spiritual miracle, and he only who is commissioned and ordained by the imposition of hands." "Regular rights of daily preach the Gospel, and administer the sacraments, unless he be thus sent." The writer, therefore, asserts that the doctrine of the church is that of apostolical succession in the Church, and that the sacrament of baptism can be duly administered by "those thus qualified to act on this ordination." Proceeding to private baptism, the author shows that the Church teaches "that defilement is purged away by baptism, that 'the child by baptism by the church minister' is regenerate with the holy spirit, is received to God's own child by adoption, and is grafted in the death of Christ, and will be also in the resurrection. "Our Church," he says, "declares that the baptism of young children is according to the institution of Christ. She speaks not of the benefits to be received by the child, but upon obtain the grace, the prayers of those present must be offered from a faithful and true heart." "She does not speak of any prevenient grace" The writer denies that the doctrine of Rome, "that in cases of extreme necessity, it is lawful for any person to baptize a child, using the form prescribed, is now the doctrine of our church, though it was, but she has freed herself from the error, and "now declares that the sacrament is necessary generally, or its blessing imparted, except by one of her duly authorised and appointed ministers." "But by such baptism, whether performed in private or in public, according to the rites of the Church, the child grows in sin unconditionally made a member of the children of God, and heir of everlasting life." The author thinks the offices of godfather and godmother unessential, and wishes they were modified or done away. "The mere act of baptism, the child being born of water and the spirit," is that without which he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven.

Having thus pronounced a very strong and plain opinion as to what are the doctrines of the Church, the "Layman" speaks of the present condition of the Church as humiliating, when a party is sworn to decry, and in the most virulent and strange doctrine, and to correct and punish those who are unquiet, disobedient, and criminous, is resisted "by an unfilial, irreverent son," who, "taking cruel advantage of the Church's bondage to the sceptre of the State, scorns those insulting tyrants who have no knowledge of her laws or reverence for her words, and, armed with their authority, seeks, and until and unrepentant as he is, to set aside and throw contempt on hers." The Archbishop of Canterbury is spoken of with almost as much virulence as Mr. Gorham. He "was the chief authority" in the Church's household; "but he is the abettor of his mother's tyrants; he is the man to the enemy where the assault may be most successfully made, and how it may be best masked. Through his advice, learning, and subtle reasoning, and, we fear also, his want of faith, has the shame been effected, that it is declared to the Christian world that the Church of England has no fixed, determinate doctrine on the subject of baptism." The judgment of the Privy Council is described as a "compound of words misapplied, of doctrines confused, of facts misrepresented or misstated, and of reasoning the most evil dish." "If this judgment, if such must be the answer to our loyal petition on the Church or its members, shall not be carried out," the Layman thinks the members of the Church "may remain quiet." "But if the judgment be carried out, and the evil consummated—if the archbishop of Canterbury shall, by himself or any other, and sanctioned only by the tyranny of the State, force Mr. Gorham into the benefice of Brampford-Speke—then no longer can the true sons of the Church communicate with him or his abettors." "We would most earnestly and affectionately beseech these among our Fathers in God to whom we look up in this tribulation," it is further said, "if all other means to right this wrong shall have failed, entirely to disregard every temporal consideration, and, trusting in God's great mercy, and having in themselves the true fire from the altar by which the succession of duly-appointed ministers may be preserved, to burst the gilded fetters of their State bonds, to come out and be separate—to free us from its enervating and corrupting influence."

The vehemence of the writer speaks for his sincerity. He is consistent between his premises and his conclusions. In all respects he is a zealous supporter of the Bishop of Exeter. Some passages of his pamphlet are eloquent, and it will we think, command attention.

EXPOSITION OF INDUSTRY OF 1851.—The Riga Gazette publishes an order from the Government to the people to take part in the projected Exhibition of Industry of all Nations. To promote this object a steam navigation has been appointed at St. Petersburgh, under the presidency of the Councillor of State, Von Tengoborsy, the well-known writer on political economy. Another commission is appointed at Odessa. The expenses for the transmission from the central commission to St Petersburgh, and the southern commission at Odessa, of articles destined for the London Exhibition, will be paid by the Crown.

A deputation of Irish members, to press upon the attention of the Home Secretary the necessity of considerably extending the jurisdiction of the Assistant Barrister's Court in Ireland, and placing the Assistant Barristers, as much as possible, upon an equal footing with the County Court Judges of England by abolishing fees, and substituting payments by fixed salaries, had an interview with Sir George Grey on Tuesday, at the Home Office.

COMMANDER FORSYTH'S ARCTIC BRANCH EXPEDITION.—Upwards of £1700 has been subscribed towards the fitting of the branch expedition to proceed in search of Franklin under the command of Captain Forsyth. The lifeboat presented by Messrs. White, of Cowes, is of the value of £250; and Messrs. Searle, the eminent boat-builders of Lambeth, have also presented the expedition with a boat of similar dimensions, made of gutta percha.

LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY TRAFFIC.—The receipts for the week ending the 12th inst. show an increase of £6785 over those of the corresponding week of 1849. The increase of traffic since the commencement of the year over the corresponding period of last year has been £545,630, being a weekly increase of £9400, or at the rate of £124,800 per annum!

On Saturday the Master in Chancery Kindersley proceeded with the settlement of the affairs of the Westpoint Newspaper Association, which failed in 1848. It was in the hands of a large body of Wesleyans, who became involved by the conduct of those to whom its management was entrusted. About 13 per cent of the partners are now fixed with liability by the Master to pay off the £5000 outstanding debts, and for the discharge of which a call of £4 per share is made on the 1240 shares held; but, as this has not been fully responded to, another call of £2 per share is expected.

COUNTRY NEWS.

ALARMING COLLISION ON THE NORTH BRITISH RAILWAY.

A collision of an alarming character, by which the lives of about sixty persons were placed in jeopardy, occurred on Saturday forenoon, at the station of the North British Railway, below the North bridge. The station for the departure of the mail train for London, which leaves Edinburgh at eleven o'clock A.M., having been given, the engine-driver immediately turned on the steam full at the first revolution of the machinery, the crank of the axle of the driving-wheel of the engine snapped in two, by which the locomotive was completely disabled. The superintendent instantly dispatched a pilot engine to the repairing works, at St. Margaret's, for a fresh engine, and in the meantime the carriages were moved backwards to the turning table, and shifted to the centre line of rails, leaving the disabled engine on the line on the platform. Scarcely had the train been removed to the centre line when the engine expected was seen to emerge from the Calton Hill tunnel at a rapid speed. The break seemed to have been applied, but the active agent in the propulsion of the train is the motion of steam, and at an apparent rate of more than 20 miles an hour, the alarm of the officials, and such of the passengers who saw its approach, became excessive. The enemy advanced on the same line of rails which the train occupied, and dashed into it with great force. The concussion was tremendous; but the passengers, beyond the excessive alarm occasioned by the collision, suffered comparatively trifling injury. It is difficult to account for the occurrence of the collision. The engine-driver, of the name of Jackson, was one of those who participated in consequence of the recent strike of the regular engine-drivers and stokers, from an attempted reduction of their wages by the introduction of some new regulations. The regular stoker was absent, and the man employed for the engine was acting in that capacity when the collision took place. Neither of them sustained any injury.

PROFESSIONORS' MEETING.—On Wednesday evening, a large meeting of tenant-farmers, &c., was held in the Scientific Hall, Doncaster; R. Cryer, Esq., in the chair. The meeting was addressed by Mr. Farrand, who, at great length, preached a crusade against the cotton lords. Several resolutions were carried, and the meeting separated. Upwards of 700 people were present.

From Cambridge we learn that the continued cold weather is having a very destructive effect upon the wheat crops in the fens. The ravages of the Fly-worm are daily upon the increase, which nothing but a change from the severely cold weather we have had for a period of six weeks can stay. Many pieces of wheat, which a few weeks ago looked most promising, are being ploughed up, and potatoes planted.

FORGERIES IN THE COTTON TRADE.—On Monday, Mr. William Threlfall, a cotton-spinner, of Addingham, near Otley, Yorkshire, was committed for trial by Mr. Rushton, at the Liverpool police-court, on a charge of uttering a bill for £2000, drawn on the firm of Messrs. Rathbone and Hill, Liverpool, to which the acceptance of Mr. Joseph Eylands, the manager of the company, had been forged. The prisoner had also issued another forgery on the same party for £2100; and from papers found in the prisoner's bag, it was clear that he meditated an extensive issue of similar bills. Mr. Rushton refused to admit the prisoner to bail

The parish church of Drumington was broken into recently, and completely ransacked by several persons who effected an entrance at a window. Including two large and handsome communion books, with gold cross on their outside backs, which were lately presented to the vicar by his parishioners; an antique brass alms-dish, with the representation of the Temptation on it, supposed at the Duke of Buckingham's sale, and presented to the parish by the present vicar; and also all the Bibles and prayer-books belonging to the congregation to which were of any value.

On Sunday last the mail from the north was delayed nearly a full hour, in consequence of the obstruction which the train met with from snow. The carriages on their arrival at Preston were partially whitened on their tops with snow-flakes.

IRELAND.

The Dublin Evening Herald publishes an address adopted by the Grand Orange Lodge of Ireland at the annual meeting held in Londonderry on Wednesday last, copy and a half of which have been forwarded to each of the 66 Lodges, and that of those seven have reported of most lapses, and desire to be again incorporated with the body.

TYPE DISEASE.—The King's County Chronicle says—"We regret to state that the potato disease is again manifesting its symptoms in the locality. During this week the earl of Rosse's gardener presented some specimens of new potatoes at our office, which were entirely infected by a disease having all the appearance of late and early blight. The specimens, however, were cultivated under glass, and not in open exposure."

COUNTY CLARE.—Three inquests are reported from Kilrush. They were all respectively on the bodies of a woman aged 25, a man of 42, and a man of 31 years of age; and the verdict in each case was "Died of starvation."

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Although transactions in the English Funds at the beginning of the week were only of a limited extent, yet a greater firmness was apparent in the price of Consols from the favourable state of the Paris Bourse. On Monday, the closing prices being 96¼ for Money and 96⅝ to ⅞ for Account. These quotations were maintained on Tuesday, and were again the closing prices on Wednesday. But the influence of adverse rumours from Paris had considerably depressed the market on Thursday; the market in consequence becoming flatter. Exchequer Bills continue in demand, a difficulty in delivering bills having been experienced within the last few days. Bank Stocks also maintain the rate, the heavy stocks but little business has been doing. At the close of business quotations were, for—Reduced, 96¼ Consols, 96⅛; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Annuities, 96⅛; Long Annuities to expire in April, 1859, 16⅞; Bank Stock, 196, 8; India Stock, £10000, 91 pr; Ditto, under £10000, 91 pr; Consols for Account, 96⅛; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 71 pr; £500, June, 71 pr; Small, June, 71 p.

The Foreign Market has been unusually animated, particularly since Tuesday, the day appointed for the settlement of the Account. A large foreign speculation in Peruvian made a delivery of the stock almost impracticable, and buying in was resorted to. The accounts for the Peruvian Government appeared as pur chasers. Together, an extraordinary impetus was given to prices, and from Monday's price of 70⅞, a rise of eight per cent. was gradually registered by Thursday. This has since, however, met with a check. A second proposition regarding the overdue and future payment of the dividend on Peruvian Stock has caused considerable speculation, attended with an advance from 29½ ⅛ to 31. In July last, a proposition was made to the bondholders which the present is intended to supersede. The proposal now reported by the committee appointed to wait upon the Finance Minister, differs from the last convention in the following points:—Instead of 4,500,000 dollars of the indemnity money, 3,500,000 dollars is the amount now stated; and the interest is to carry it as low as 3 per cent., instead of 3½. On the other hand, the guarantee for future payments is extended to the entire import duties of the Republic, of which 30 per cent is to be set aside for the bondholders, in place of the partial grant of 20 per cent. previously contemplated; and there is a provision for an ultimate sinking fund. Another advantage, also, is, perhaps, to be found in the circumstance of the present scheme being intended to be permanent, while the other was to be open to new modifications, if circumstances favourable," on the 1st of July, 1859. On the whole, therefore, it can hardly be considered inferior to the convention of last year, which was regarded as satisfactory by the leading supporters of the country, and the negotiation of which, subject to confirmation, entitled Mr. Roberson to the thanks of the bondholders. At the same time it must be remarked, that Mr. Roberson's convention contained a clause that the bondholders should resume their old rights in case of any further default, while nothing on that essential head appears in the present document. It would appear that the project has been left in suspension, whatever may be taken of the new offer. But it is important to add, that, at present, the project has not received the sanction of Congress; and more unlikely things than a change of Ministers and measures may have occurred ere this, setting aside this scheme in the same way as the former one.

The animation in Consols, added to the speculative influence already described, produced an increased firmness and buoyancy in Foreign Funds generally, but towards the close of the week a slight reaction occurred. The last prices are—for Brazilian Bonds, 18; Buenos Ayres Bonds, 6 per Cent. Account, 54; Danish Bonds, 1826, 5 per Cent., 98; Ditto, Scrip, 8; Equador Bonds, 3½; Grenada Bonds, 1¼ per Cent.; Mexican 5 per Cent. 1846 (Ex Jan. Coupons), 31; Ditto, Account, 31; Peruvian Bonds, 4 per Cent., 76; Ditto, Account, 76⅛; Ditto, Deferred, 33½; Portuguese 4 per Cent., 33½; Russian Bonds, 4½ per Cent., 96; Ditto, Scrip, 3 pm; Spanish Active, 19⅛; Ditto, Account, 17⅞; Ditto, 3 per Cent., 37⅛; Belgian, 4½ per Cent., 98; Dutch 4 per Cent., 85¾.

Shares have been rather firmer, but prices have not shown any decided improvement. Railway Reversions, Newcastle and Darlington, 4½; Ditto, Newcastle, 4½; Ditto, Shrewsbury and Chester, 1½; Eastern Counties, 7½; Ditto, New, £2, Preference, 2½; Eastern Counties, 7½; East Lincolnshire, Guaranteed 5 per Cent., 2½; Edinburgh and Glasgow, New Shares, 1½; Great Northern, 9½; Great Western, 94; Hull and Selby, Half Shares, 46½; Lancaster & Carlisle, 30; Lancashire & Yorkshire, 1st, 104; Ditto, 2nd, 104; Ditto, 3rd, 104; Ditto, 4 per Cent. 1st, 104; Ditto, 4 per Cent. 2nd, 104; Leeds and Bradford, 84½; London and Blackwall, 4½; London, Brighton, and South Coast, New, Guaranteed Six per Cent., 85½; London and North Western, 103; Ditto, New Quarters, 101; Ditto, Fifths, 11½; Lowestoft, Guaranteed Four per Cent., 14½; Midland, 35½; Ditto, £50 Shares, 14; Ditto, Consolidated Bristol and Birmingham, Six per Cent., 118½; North British, 7⅞; North Staffordshire, 7½; Scottish Central, 8 pm; Scottish Midland Junction, 2½; Scottish Union, 18½; Ditto, Registered, No. 4, 4½; Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth, 39½; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 13½; Ditto, Newcastle Extension, 5; Ditto, G.N.E. Preference, 14; York and North Midland, 10½; Ditto, Preference, 7½; Boulogne and Amiens, 6; Central of France (Orleans and Vierzon), 13½; East Indian, 5½; Namur and Liege, 6½; Rouen and Havre, 20.

SATURDAY MORNING.—In consequence of the withdrawal of the French Ambassador, Consols opened yesterday at a fall of one per cent., quoting 95½ to ⅝. After being done at 96, the price rallied, and 96⅞ became the closing quotation. In the Foreign market Mexican was 30¾, with a tendency to fatness. In shares no change of importance occurred.

THE MARKETS.

CORN-EXCHANGE (Friday).—The quantity of English wheat received up to our market this week, sometimes, has been but moderate, viz. 2640 quarters. By land carriage and sample the receipts have been small. To-day scarcely any parcels were offering and a clearance of them was speedily effected, at prices quite equal to Monday's, when they obtained on Monday last. From abroad, 8670 quarters of wheat have arrived, and the demand for it has been active, at full and even higher prices than on Monday last. Barley, beans, and peas have moved off freely, at fully previous rates; and a steady business was transacted in the middling and inferior kinds, at late figures. The supply of barley was limited. Grinding parcels were offered in some moderate quantity, and sold at full prices. Although the supply of malt was reasonably good, the trade ruled steady, at very full prices. Very few oats, either English or Foreign, were on sale to-day. The trade was dull, at 1s to 2s per qr. lower. Linseed and rapeseed, as well as cakes, were in limited request, at late prices. Flour, American, 24s to 25s per barrel; Canada, 24s to 25s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Our market, generally, is firm, and prices have an upward tendency. Canary has advanced 5s per quarter.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 2640 qrs.; barley, 410; oats, 58; flour, —. Foreign: wheat, 6670; barley, 4100; oats, 58; flour, — quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, fine, 40s to 44s; ditto, white, 42s to 50s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 38s to 42s; ditto, white, 42s to 48s; rye, 30s to 32s; grinding barley, 19s to 21s; distilling ditto, 23s to 26s; malting ditto, 24s to 27s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 46s to 48s; brown ditto, 42s to 45s; Kingston and Ware, 48s to 52s; Chevalier, 53s to 55s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 15s to 17s; potato ditto, 18s to 20s; Scotch ditto, 16s to 18s; Irish ditto, 14s to 16s; ticks beans, new, 24s to 25s; old ditto, 26s to 28s; harrow ditto, 28s to 30s; grey peas, 28s to 30s; white, 32s to 34s; boilers, 32s to 37s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 35s to 37s; Suffolk, 37s to 39s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 37s to 39s per 280 lbs.—Foreign: Dantzic and Konigsberg red wheat, 42s to 44s; white, 44s to 46s; barley, 18s to —; oats, 14s to —; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 24s to 25s per barrel; Canada, 24s to 25s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Our market, generally, is firm, and prices have an upward tendency. Canary has advanced 5s per quarter.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 2640 qrs.; barley, 410; oats, 58; flour, —. Foreign:

NEW BOOKS. &c.

This day is published, in one vol., post 8vo, with numerous Illustrations, price 8s., handsomely bound and gilt,

NINEVEH and PERSEPOLIS: an Historical Sketch of Ancient Assyria and Persia, with an Account of the recent researches in those countries. By W. B. VAUX, M.A., of the British Museum.

London: ARTHUR HALL, VIRTUE, and Co., 25, Paternoster-row.

Now ready, price 2s 6d, PART I. of

HISTORIC RELIQUES;

a Series of Impressions of ARMS, JEWELLERY, GOLD and SILVER PLATE, FURNITURE, ARMOUR, &c., in Royal and Noble Collections, Colleges, and Public Institutions, &c., and which FORMERLY BELONGED to INDIVIDUALS EMINENT IN HISTORY. Drawn from the Originals and Etched by JOSEPH LIONEL WILLIAMS. —PART I. contains: Arundel Castle, William III., at Windsor Castle. Cande-abrum, Charles I., St. Swithun, Ghent. Silver-gilt Cup, Margaret Beaufort, Christ's College, Cambridge.

To be completed in Ten Parts, Price 2s 6d each. Large paper copies, 5s. Office, 196, Strand, London

AN ELEGANT PRESENT
Price 5s., a New Edition of

THE ILLUSTRATED NEW TESTAMENT

(authorised version), with upwards of 120 Engravings, beautifully bound in cloth, embossed and gilt sides, gilt edges. The illustrations are from drawings executed by eminent artists, engraved in the first edition, with notes historical, explanatory, and descriptive, and embellished with a novel Panoramic Picture of the Holy Land, and a View of Lower Egypt, showing the route of the Israelites from Egypt to the Land of Canaan; presenting at one view the principal scenes and places mentioned in the Old and New Testament, assisted by a Map.

London: Published at the office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, and sold by all booksellers

In one thick 4to vol., with 700 Illustrative Wood-Engravings and Steel Maps (nearly 21 lb. in weight), handsomely gilt edges, £2 2s

COBBIN'S DOMESTIC BIBLE; with Expository Notes, Practical Reflections, Marginal References, Improved Readings, a Connected Chronological Order, and Copious Indexes for Family Examination. Also in 14 Parts, to be completed for £1 7s.

London: PARTRIDGE and CAKEY, Paternoster-row, and all Booksellers

Now ready, royal 8vo, price 6s., an Elementary Treatise on

SCRIPTURAL DRAWING AND PAINTING,

Principles of Light and Shade, the Theory of Colours, &c.

JOHN WOOD. The Illustrations comprise Sinillenata. Perspective, the Characteristics of Light, Foreground Facts, Examples in Light and Shade, and in Colours.

Also, by the same Author, in royal 8vo, price 8s., the Third Edition of

A MANUAL of PERSPECTIVE, being a familiar explanation of the Science, and including the Projection of Shadows, Reflection in Water, &c. &c.

WH. TYKAKER and Co., London; WOOD, Worcester.

JOHN'S SHILLING SERIES (the Double Volumes, 2s 6d).—IRVING'S WORKS will be completely published in succession of the monthly volumes, as announced. The SKETCH BOOK and TALES of a TRAVELLER are ready this day. MAHOMET and HIS SUCCESSORS, and the LIFE of GOLDSMITH, were published in April. The SIEGE of GRANADA will appear next week; COLUMBUS and the remaining works, during the months following. As there are various cheap Editions in the course of publication, attention is invited to these, which are much the best printed.

HENRY G. JOHN, York-street, Covent-garden.

RAILWAY LIBRARY.—NEW VOLUME.

Price One Shilling, or in cloth 1s 6d. each.

"Each Volume contains a complete Work, printed with a clear type, on good paper and bound."

LONGSWORD, BY CHARLES MACKAY.

Also, in the Popular Series,

The Light Dragoon	Last of the Mohicans
Spy.—Pilot	Pairfax.—Clarence
Sense and Sensibility	Pride and Prejudice
Red Rover	Emma
Jane Sinclair	Lionel Lincoln, &c. &c.

London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and Co., Soho-square; and all booksellers, newsmen, and railway stations

WASHINGTON IRVING'S COMPLETE WORKS.

THE LIBRARY EDITION. Seven Volumes now ready, price One Shilling each, in fancy cover; or cloth gilt, 1s 6d.

WASHINGTON IRVING'S COLUMBUS. 2 vols.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S CONQUEST of GRENADA.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S TALES of the PRAIRIES. 1s 6d.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S SKETCH-BOOK.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S TALES of a TRAVELLER.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S BRACEBRIDGE HALL.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S LIFE of MAHOMET
WASHINGTON IRVING'S LIVES of the TWO ARMIES

WASHINGTON IRVING'S LIFE of OLIVER GOLDSMITH
WASHINGTON IRVING'S LIFE of MARGARET FULLER OSSOLI.
MRS. MEYNELL'S MODO, and MR. TROLLOPE'S WARDEN.

* * In ordering, specify the POPULAR LIBRARY.

London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and Co., Soho-square, and all booksellers, newsmen, and railway stations.

In a few days,

STORIES from the HISTORY of the REFORMATION. By the Rev. B. JONES, Head Master of the Grammar-school, Dulwich. Illustrated with One Engravings on steel, from original designs, by Anna Mary Howitt.

London: DARTON and Co., 58, Holborn-hill

Now Publishing,

THE LADY'S LIBRARY. In Monthly Parts, Price One Shilling each.

PART I. BRAIDING and EMBROIDERY.
PART II. CROCHET and KNITTING.
PART III. PRINT LACE and NETTED EMBROIDERY.

(To be Published on the 1st of June)

"Decidedly the best work of the kind, a thorough lady-like work."—English Gentlewoman.

"The Lady's Library is elegantly got up, the engravings are neatly executed, and the arrangement of the matter is remarkably good."—Le Follet.

"We feel great pleasure in recommending this cheap and very elegant little work, which is to be continued monthly. It is illustrated with several engravings, and is well worthy the attention of our fair readers."—Lady's Garden of Fashion.

DARTON and Co., Holborn-hill, and all Booksellers, &c.

TAYLOR'S BEE-KEEPER'S MANUAL.—FOURTH EDITION This day is published, 12mo, cloth, price 5s., the Fourth Edition, with nearly 100 Engravings, price 5s.,

THE BEE-KEEPER'S MANUAL; or, Practical Hints on the Management and complete Preservation of the HONEY SEE. By HENRY TAYLOR

GOODMANSTONE and SONS, 1, Paternoster-row.

Just published,

THE HANDBOOK of ARCHERY, containing all information essentially requisite for the attainment of practical excellence in the "Archer's Art," and every large Store sufficient for Shooting with the Regular Long-Bow." Price One Shilling. Sent free on the receipt of postage stamps, by GEORGE JACKSON, Archery Warehouse, 32, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross, London.

GUIDE TO THE ENGLISH LAKES,

TO TOURISTS. BLACK'S PICTURESQUE GUIDE to the ENGLISH LAKES, Fourth Edition, Enlarged and Improved, including an Essay on the Geology of the District, by JOHN PHILLIPS, F.R.S., Professor of Geology and Mineralogy in the University of Dublin. With a Geological Map, by W. HUGHES, Author of "A Week at the Lakes, by a Rambler," &c. &c. A Map of the Country, by various distinguished Artists, and an ample itinerary of all the Routes, with the distances accurately laid down. In a small portable volume, price 10s.

"It is a Picturesque Guide in every sense—its descriptions are characteristic—its intelligence is ample and minute—and its illustrations are admirable specimens of art."—Atlas

A. and C. BLACK, Edinburgh; and Sold by all Booksellers

BOOK FOR THE DRAWINGROOM

Now ready, handsomely bound, price 6s 6d

THE DOMESTIC JOURNAL and HOME MISCELLANY of INSTRUCTION and AMUSEMENT.

The illustrative portion of this work comprehends upwards of Three Hundred Drawings, by the best artists of the day, being copies from celebrated paintings and pictorial illustrations of history, art, tales, fancy needlework, &c.

The literary department has been under able supervision, and will be found to contain, amidst a vast collection of useful and entertaining matter, Tales, Sketches, Biographical Notices, Historical Memoirs, &c., the greater portion from the pens of celebrated living authors.

This work, aimed at the innocent happier, and to amuse whilst it instructs, will, it is hoped, meet with a cordial welcome.

London.—W. M. CLARK, 12, Warwick-lane, City.

Just published, 8vo, price 5s.

INSANITY TESTED by SCIENCE, and shown to be a Disease rarely connected with permanent Organic Lesion of the Brain. Also, that Insanity is far more susceptible of Cure than has hitherto been supposed. By C. M. BURNETT, M.D.

London: SAMUEL HIGHLEY, 32, Fleet-street.

Just published, 8vo, the Tenth Edition, enlarged, price 16s.,

MODERN DOMESTIC MEDICINE: A Popular Treatise, exhibiting the Nature, Symptoms, Causes, and most efficient Treatment of Diseases; with a Collection of approved Prescriptions, Directions for Diet and Regimen, the means of affording Assistance in accidents and other cases of emergency, Management of Children, Principles of Medicines, a clear account of the Hydropathic System, &c. Also, a large Appendix on the Treatment of Disorders of the Mind and Nerves. Forming a comprehensive Medical Guide for the Clergy, Families and Invalids, in the absence of their Medical Adviser. By C. J. GRAHAM, M.D., &c.

"It is evidently the result of great professional talent, experience, and judgement; the Author every where appears conscientious and candid . . One object is prominently evident—a sincere desire to benefit his suffering fellow-creatures. To recommend a work like the present to our readers, is only to manifest a proper regard for their welfare."—Literary Journal, Feb., 1846

"It is altogether deserving of permanent popularity."—London Weekly Review.

London: Paternoster-row: HATCHARDS, 187, Piccadilly: and FAGG and Co., 65, Cheapside.—Sold by all Booksellers.

Just published, price 2s.,

THE CANARY POLKA, composed by FRED. T. DAWSON, Author of the "Jasmine Polka."—"A very pretty composition."—"We infer that, like the 'Jasmine,' it will be a great favourite amongst the curious of Terpsichore."—Illustrated Carnival Chronicle.—London: CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond-street.

WHY DO SUMMER ROSES FADE? Ballad. Words by CARPENTER; the Music by GEORGE BARKER, the Author of "Mary Rhine." 2s 6d.—"Like the summer roses, human affections may wither and die, but only to be renewed again in a still more bright and vernal life without friendship and love."—Vide Berwick Warder, Jan. 26

NEW VOCAL DUETS, by STEPHEN GLOVER; written by Mrs. CRAWFORD (i.e. "The Moonlighter." "The Murmuring Sea," elegantly illustrated in colours, 2s 6d each. Also, "The Maid of the Night," Echo Duet, 2s 6d; and a New Edition of his "What are the Wild Waves saying?" ditto, "A Voice from the Waves," each 2s 6d.—London: Messrs. BEALE (Groves and Co., New Burlington-street, Publishers to her Majesty. To be had of all Music sellers CHEAP MUSIC, bound and classed in volumes. Eighty shillings' worth in all the best music for 20s., comprising Overtures, Airs from operas, Piano Music, easy and difficult; Waltzes, Quadrilles, Glees (Madrigals, Songs, Duets, and Sacred Music (Vocal), by Rossini, Bellini, Diabelli, Jullien, Labitzsky, Strauss, Schubert, and all the first authors. The public will observe the Music is all new, and clean copies. Any one article, separately or not, always on sale at WALKER'S Old Established Cheap Music Warehouse, 17, Soho-square.—The new Catalogue gratis, on receipt of two stamps.

ELIZA COOK'S JOURNAL.—POEMS from that Journal having appeared in the "Weekly Despatch" as original contributions, the Proprietor of EDGE BOOK thanks it right to acquaint her Friends and Readers that she has now no connexion whatever with that paper, nor with any connected with the profession.

The aim of this Journal is to supply Tales for the Young and the Old, Essays upon every Holiday, and Day, adapted for Family Reading; and Literature generally, addressing itself to the heart.

Just Published, price SECOND VOLUME, cloth, 4s. 6d. Also in Weekly Numbers at 1½d., and in Monthly Parts

London: J. O. CLARKE, 5, Racquet Court, Fleet-street.

Price One Shilling, or, Post-free, 1s. 6d.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON COOKING BOOK.

This work is rendered peculiarly attractive by the EASY ARRANGEMENT of the RECIPES, which smoothes all difficulties ascertained by beginners, and by the REASONING UPON EACH HEADING LESSONS, which unites the learner to advance of his own accord. The whole is ILLUSTRATED by UPWARDS of FORTY HUNDRED and SEVENTY BEAUTIFUL WOOD-CUTS of objects and scenes connected with cookery for the most enlivening introduction to learning ever published. (144 Pages.)

A few Copies left of the Two Shillings

The Trade and Schools supplied on Liberal Terms for Cash only.

Just published, price 1s., the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, London; and sold by all Booksellers

TO CONTINENTAL TRAVELLERS AND STUDENTS.

Just published, 18mo, cloth, price 5s., neatly bound,

THE FRENCH PROMPTER;

a complete Handbook of Conversation, for the use of Families, Travellers, Students, Schools, and Masters. By Mons. LE PAGE, Professor of the French Language in London, Author of "L'Ecole des Faits," "Petit Musée de Littérature Française," &c.

"It will enable the student to converse in French with altogether invaluable to that large class which modestly confesses that it only knows a little French."—Athenæum.

London: EFFINGHAM WILSON, 11, Royal Exchange.

FRENCH AMUSINGLY TAUGHT

New and Improved Edition with Additions, price 3s.,

CHERVILLE'S FIRST STEP to FRENCH, indispensable to, and in harmony with, all French Grammars being a selection of progressive familiar conversations in French and English, showing a parallel between the pronunciation, etymology, and syntax of the two languages, on a new plan of teaching them languages, with grammatical observations on a new plan.

"The author's plan is better adapted to ensure a sound and comprehensive knowledge of the language."—Observer

EFFINGHAM WILSON, Royal Exchange, and Messrs. LONGMAN.

Dramatic Recitations before Parties, Fireside Stories, valuable Recipes, Family Secrets, Cottage Gardening, &c.

THE FAMILY ECONOMIST contains all the above subjects, written in a plain, vigorous style. It is one of the most entertaining and useful periodicals published in the PRAIRIES, and the cheap periodicals which better deserve encouragement than the above I know not. Morning Herald "It is admirably adapted for distribution among the poor, and even the rich might derive benefit from it."—Sun.—Belle Assemblée. Price 1d. a month, in. a year.

VOLUMES FOR ALL

THE FAMILY ECONOMIST, Vols. I. and II., 1848, 1849. As a present to a friend, or for a school, nothing could be more acceptable volumes cannot be selected. Price 8s. 6d. boards, in. paper wrapper. Upwards of 60,000 copies of the bound volumes of this work have been sold.

CUTTAGE COOKERY, in a Series of Letters. This work is intended for the use of Cottagers, and contains a Series of Letters, addressed to a Young Wife, on the Economical Cooking of Meat, Vegetables, Puddings, &c. Price 1d.

STORIES FOR SUMMER DAYS and WINTER NIGHTS. Nine Numbers are already out. They are most delightful and instructive stories. Price 1d. each, three form a volume, price 3s. Also, by the same Editors,

SALVATION the MEANS of HEALTH: being the first of a Series of Tracts for the Elementary Catechesis for Home and School. Price 6d.

HOOMDRIDGE and SONS, Paternoster-row, and all booksellers

PUBLIC LIBRARY, CONDUIT-STREET —At the extensive and valuable Library, from which the Nobility and Gentry in town and country are supplied, Subscribers have the choice of the newest publications of the most fashionable Works of the English, French, Italian, and German Languages, and of all the New Works as they appear. Subscribers have the right of purchasing after the first Demand any that may be desired at half the published price. Catalogues are gratis, and sent post free. Open from 10 to 6.—Belle Assemblée. Prospectus, and free to orders, inclosing two stamps, addressed to Messrs. SAUNDERS and OTLEY, publishers, Conduit-street.

ELECTRO SILVER PLATED SPOONS and FORKS, of the best quality.—Table Spoons or Forks, 40s per dozen; dessert spoons or forks, 30s per dozen; tea spoons, 18s per dozen; gravy spoons, 30s each; soup ladles, 14s each.—W. COX SAVORY and Co. [illegible] A., 37, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street).

THE BEST ENGLISH WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, 3, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, have constantly on sale a large assortment of their Gold London made PATENT LEVER WATCHES, which are manufactured by themselves in their own house. In Silver Cases, with the Detached Escapement and Jewelled, the prices are 5 guineas and upwards. Every Watch is fully timed, and Eight Guineas each; or, in Gold Cases, Ten, Twelve, Fourteen, and Fifteen Guineas each; and Repeaters, Quarters, and Chronometers. The selection includes every description, enabling a customer to select that which is more particularly adapted to his own use. Each watch is warranted.

MUSICAL BOXES.—An extensive assortment of fine-toned BOXES, of superior quality, by the celebrated manufacturers Nicole Brothers, Geneva, playing upwards of 800 airs, overtures, &c., selected from the works of Mozart, Weber, Rossini, Bellini, Donizetti, Auber, Meyerbeer, the Professor of Instrument Music, Conservatoire, A Catalogue of the Music, with lists of prices of new publications, sent free on application to A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street).

ORNAMENTAL CLOCKS.—Recently received from Paris, a large variety of FOURTEEN-DAY CLOCKS, striking on the hours and half hours, in Ormolu, Marble, and China. These unique and beautiful Clocks are Historical, and furnish a few of great merit in the style of Louis XIV. The price is four, five, and seven guineas each, and upwards. R. B. SAVORY and SONS, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Statue of the Duke of Wellington.

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES, and £10 10s. GOLD LEVERS, at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House, are warranted to go within a minute per week. The great reduction of price now presented to the Public will, it is presumed, ensure a ready sale. Also, for those advertised at lower prices are foreign work. A post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s. or £10 10s., will secure a Watch. Good Jones's Sketch of Watchwork, Free for 2d or a Twopenny Stamp.

SARL and SONS, WATCH MANUFACTURERS and WORKING GOLDSMITHS, 18, Cornhill, invite attention to their extensive and very extensive STOCK of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES. The patterns are of the latest style, and the movements of the most reliable description. Every one can be had The following prices will convey some idea of the stock, combining economy with quality.

	Gold Cases	Silver and Dials.
Watches of the horizontal make, jewelled in four holes, maintaining power, last size	£5 10 0	£3 15 0
Ditto, finished	7 10 0	5 5 0
Ditto, 3rd size	8 10 0	5 10 0

Patent lever movement, detached lever, centre, jewelled in four or six holes, 2nd size

Ditto, with the fit fashionable style, with the most highly-finished movements, jewelled in 10 extra holes, 3rd size	14 14 0	8 18 0
	9 9 0	5 15 0

All Watches are warranted for accurate performance if given with every watch, and a Swallowtail's trial allowed. A very extensive and splendid assortment of fine Gold Rock Chains, a yard and a quarter long, at the following very reduced prices, according to the weight of sovereigns:

No.	Pattern	Each, double Bright link
1	The weight of 2 sovereigns	£1 1s. weight of 3 sovereigns £1 5s.
2	The weight of 4 sovereigns	£1 10s. weight of 5 sovereigns £1 15s.
3	The weight of 6 sovereigns	£2 0s. The weight of 7 sovereigns £2 5s.

Gold Guard Chains charged according to the same scale. A Pamphlet, containing a List of the Prices of the various articles in Gold and Silver, may be had gratis.—SARL and SONS, 18, Cornhill.

PARASOLS.—W. and J. SANGSTER respectfully inform the Nobility and Public that their Parasols this season are much larger than usual, owing to the peculiarity of their make, are also much lighter. They are made of gros de Naples striped silks, of great variety, and are sold at 4s. 6d. each, being a handsome and elegant description. W. and J. S. have also a large assortment of the most admired Swiss Parasol, forwarded on receipt of 30,000 postage stamps, which is the least amount.—140, Regent-street; 94, Fleet-street; 10, Royal Exchange, 75, Cheapside.

THE NEW SILKS, BAREGES and MUSLINS

The Richest Striped and Checked Silks at 21s 6d the full dress.
Rich Striped Poult de Soies at 25s 6d
Broadcast Poult de Soies, at 27s 6d.
Black and the last-new Taffeta Glacés, at 2s 9d per yard
The Finest French Muslins and Barages, at 8s 9d and 11s 6d the full dress Patterns sent for inspection (postage free) to any part of the United Kingdom, India, America, and the Colonies. Address, KING and CO., Silk Mercers, 243, Regent-street, London.

N.B.—All parcels above the value of £5 sent carriage free.

BLACK FLOUNCINGS, SHAWLS, SCARFS, VEILS, &c., in REAL LACE, also an extraordinary IMITATION of the same description, which is sold at a very moderate price, at HAYWARDS (Biddle and Co.'s), Lacemen to the Queen, 59, Cornhill, and 100, Regent-street. They respectfully solicit the attention to an extensive variety of articles of the newest and most style of fashion in made BLACK GOODS, consisting of Flounces, Jackets, Coatees, Sleeves, Cravenets, Berthes, Chemisettes, Coiffures, Collars, &c., from the simplest and least expensive kind, HONITON and BRUSSELS LACES of all descriptions. Patterns of Laces sent by post, or articles forwarded for choice, on receipt of order and reference. Observe—HAYWARDS (late Biddle and Co.), 59, Cornhill, and 100, Regent-street.

NEW SILK, MUSLIN, and LACE MANTLES, Coatees, Jackets, &c., of the most approved Parisian fashions, at HAYWARDS (Biddle and Co.'s), respectfully invite the attention of Ladies to their Manle Department, which is now supplied with a pleasing and elegant variety, from the simple Mantle, suitable for the morning walk, to the richest Lace Shawl, of the expanded Mantelle, beautifully trimmed with black lace, and now the prevailing style. HAYWARDS (Biddle and Co.), 59, Cornhill, and 100, Oxford-street, opposite the Pantheon, London; and 37, King's-road, Brighton.

ELEGANT MUSLINS.—Thousands of elegant MUSLIN DRESSES are now offering at 2s 11½d the dress, or any length out at 4½d the yard. They are the newest patterns, fast colours, and good wear. Any length cut for patterns, for the postage-stamps, a dress or any of the fashionable colours, namely, Orange, Rose, Blue, Green, Lilac, Pink, White, or plain black, with an assortment of patterns, will be forwarded. Beautiful long cut for full dress, twelve yards for 3s 11½d; prime fancy Irish linens, at 8½d; and a rich black damask silk dress for 12s 6d. Merchants and wholesale buyers will find this a desirable opportunity. Address, RAWLAND HOOPER, muslin printer, 64, Oxford-street.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN.

LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN, and WEDDING and GENERAL OUTFITS for the HOUSEHOLD and INDIA, are supplied by JOHN CAPPER and SONS, 77, Oxford-street, LONDON, in a Separate Department, under competent Female Superintendence. The prices are economical, the stock is large and needlework unrivalled.

BABY LINEN, of superior work, [illegible] Parcels of £5 and upwards forwarded to any part of the country, carriage paid. SAMPLES, which may be returned, SENT for inspection on receipt of a London reference or money-order.

LISTS, with PRICES sent POST-PAID.

BONNETS.—PARISIAN MILLINERY.—At To Cash Purchasers waiting to avoid the charges of private Milliners. Compare the following prices:—French Satin, or Glacé Silk Bonnets, all colours, Cap, &c., complete, 12s 9d to 16s 9d; Mourning Satin, or Crape Bonnets, 12s 9d to 16s 9d; Ladies' and Children's Dress Bonnets, with Double Crape Veil, 14s 6d to 16s 6d: White or Coloured Chip Bonnets, 2s 9d each; Straw, in all colours, 1s 6d each; colours, drawn or on Paris satt shape, 1s 6d to 4s 6d; Paris Chips for Riding, 2s 6d; Flats and Flax Bows 250 to 3s 6d; 3 in the White Bermuda Chips, 3s 1d to 5s 11d; Dunstable Whole Straws, the new shape, 5s 6d to 11s 6d; Fine Rice Straws, 3s 1d to 5s 11d; Leghorn Hats, Prince of Wales shape, 5s 11d; very fine, at 8s 11d More fashionable or more deceiving Bonnets cannot be procured at any price; Bonnets, Caps, Head-dresses, Flowers, Feathers, Lace, Ribbons, Silks, Velvets, &c.

This suggestion, as far as is mechanically practicable, is carried out by the invention of the FLORIFORM PARASOL, which exhibits, when open, the elegant outline of an expanded flower or graceful bell. The Floriform Parasol may be purchased of all first-class Mercers and Parasol Dealers throughout the Kingdom; and wholesale, of JOSEPH and SON, Manufacturers, 80, Piccadilly, London-bridge.

GREAT BARGAINS in SILKS, including One thousand several Lots introduced this season by the Sybil-hall-street Manchester, and Spitalfields manufacturers. Messrs. BEECH and BECH-HALL re-peatfully solicit an inspection of the above, feeling assured they will meet with such support as their liberality and punctuality not to be exceeded. For instance—

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, 25 inches wide, 2s 9d and 1s 11½d per yard
Elegant Glacés, and Satin Striped, 2s 6½d and 2s 9½d per yard
Rich Striped Broadcloth Glacés, 2s 9d and 3s 6d per yard
Richest Broadcloth do., 4 wide, 3s 9d to 4s 9d; real value, 4s 6d to 5s 11d
Brocatelle, Glacé, and Satin Striped, 4 wide, 1s 9½d and 1s 11½d per yard
Ditto, ditto, 2 wide, 2s 9d per yard
Very Rich Poult de Soies, 4 wide, 4s 6d; usual price, 5s 6d
Plain Rich Poult de Soies, 4 wide, 3s 6d; usual price, 4s 6d
Damask Silks, Ottomans, Armures, &c., and Black Dress Satins, at one-third the usual prices.

Patterns of the above forwarded to any part of the country, postage free

Address, BEECH and BERRALL, 63 and 64, Edgeware-road.

THE ALL ENGLAND SILK COMPANY, 247, Regent-street, England, Ireland, or Scotland, carriage paid, with the utmost dispatch, and safely guaranteed.

PIANOFORTES.—CHAS. HOLDERNESSE and Co., Manufacturers, 444, New Oxford-street, London, have always on Sale, at the very lowest prices for which a really good and warrantable instrument can be made, a choice stock of new Pianofortes, which, for elegance of design, beauty of tone, and durability of manufacture, cannot be surpassed, and are the present result of a variety of Improvements, for which Brown, Collard, and other esteemed makers, from £18.—Every description of musical instrument tuned, repaired, and exchanged.

PAPER HANGINGS.—Cheapest in London! Attic papers, 4d per yard, 8at-ins, 8d; Flocks, 8d per yard. 81,000 Rolls, Foreign Decorations, Borders, Friezes, &c., for sale, as cheap as other papers. Patent Cash. Established 80 years.

W. CROSBY, Manufacturer, 23, Lowther Arcade. N.B. Three doors from the Strand.

PAPER-HANGINGS.—COTTERELL BROTHERS, 500, Oxford-street (a few doors from Holborn), invite attention to their extensive assortment of PAPER-HANGINGS, selected with the utmost care from all the principal French and English manufactories. A stock of from 70,000 to 80,000 Rolls is always on hand, and they can supply any quantity, of every grade, class, and colour, for immediate use. Parties in the country should send for a Set of Patterns. The Oxford-street Paper-Hanging Warehouse, No. 500, a few doors from Holborn; also at Bristol and Bath.

DECORATIVE PAPER-HANGING MANUFACTORY and GENERAL FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT. CARPET and FURNITURE WAREHOUSE, 431, Oxford-street. S. T. ARCHER solicits an inspection of his superior Paper-Hangings, which he can publish with confidence, fitted up on the walls of the very extensive range of Show-rooms in Panels, &c. &c., in every style of decoration, and every kind of material. By this mode of fitting the rooms are furnished with superior Furniture (marked in plain figures the price), giving at one view a drawingroom for the reception, Bedroom, Dining-room, Library, &c. &c. French and other Foreign Hangings of the first fabric. Brussels and Tapestry Carpets, at 2s 3d per yard. Rich Damasks, Chintzes, and all sorts of Cotton Goods, in every variety, adapted with scarf and fringed, and made to suit any dimensions, 2s 3d, 2s 6d, and 2s 9d per yard

BRIGHT and CO.'S PATENT POWER-LOOM CARPETS. These Goods are strongly recommended to the Trade and the Public on the following grounds:—They are woven by Steam Power, and are, therefore, more firmly and regularly woven than by the common hand-loom. They have the same good quality of Worsted throughout, whereas in the common Brussels and Tapestry Carpets only the face is worsted, the back being of inferior materials. They are printed by a patent process, and by patent machinery; and the colours are more durable, and will stand more severe tests than those of any other description of carpet. The patent printing admits of an almost unlimited variety in the designs, and produces a more imperfect, more delicate, as there is greater scope for design. They can be offered at a price about 25 per cent. below that of goods of equal quality printed by the common method. Patterns sent, and Orders executed, and in print, the Patent Power-Loom Brussels Carpets offer great advantages to the Public.—Wholesale, 20, Skinner-street, Snow-hill, London; 25, New Brown-street, Manchester.

WANTED, AGENTS.—Twenty to Two Hundred Pounds per year may be realised by a SHOPKEEPER in every town, and Boxkeeper's, or a respectable YOUNG MAN, in all towns and villages in Great Britain and Ireland, by the sale of an article of great interest and general consumption, in 6lb up as packets 41 la each. A sample packet may be had post-free, on receipt of 18 stamps. Apply to T. WADDELL, No. 1, Old Jewry, Cheapside, London.—Wanted, Three COMMISSION TRAVELLERS for England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland.

INSTITUTION for NURSES, Established for supplying MONTHLY, SICK, and WET NURSES, under the management of a Committee of Eminent Medical Men. A Register of recurring Nurses whose competency and integrity are certified by the Committee of the Institution, may obtain them upon an application to the Joint Secretary, S. S. LONG, Esq., at the Office, 63 Cornhill.

ROYAL PAPIER MACHE WORKS and SHOW-ROOMS. JENNENS and BETTRIDGE, Manufacturers, by distinct appointments, to the Queen, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Russell West, Belgrave-square, London; and 99, Constitution-hill, Birmingham.

ROK-RIFLES, AIR-GUNS, AIR-CANES &c., for shooting rabbits, rooks, sea-fowl, &c. with ball; small birds with shot, fish with harpoon and line, &c.—Prices from 6s each.—REILLY, Gun-maker, New Oxford-street.

FRESH SELTZER WATER. — FIRST ARRIVAL.—J. SCHWEPPE and COMPANY have just received the first parcel of this year's filling from Germany. Soda Potass, Magnesia Waters, and Lemonade manufactured, as usual, upon the largest scale.—51, Berners-street.

JOHNSON'S PATENT BEDSTEADS require neither straps, lacing, nor screws. May be used without mattress or bolster, and converted into a sofa in a few moments. Officers in the army may have a complete outfit of portable articles for £28 10s.—ALEXANDER JOHNSON, sole patentee, 160, Piccadilly.

TRELOAR'S COCOA-NUT-FIBRE MATTING WAREHOUSE, 42, Ludgate-hill.—There are many worthless imitations of this much-approved matting, but the best and only genuine article is that manufactured by T. TRELOAR, 42, Ludgate-hill, London.

THE NEW PATENT SHOWER-BATH, and every improved Bath, at reduced prices. Purchasers should see the bath they have inspected over stock, or send for Catalogue (gratis and post-free).—R. and J. SLACK, 336, Strand, opposite Somerset-house.

ELEGANT COMBS.—The largest and best stock of Tortoiseshell Combs of every kind, and very superior colours and workmanship, will be found at PROUT'S Brush and Comb Manufactory, 220, Strand, London, seventh house from Temple-bar. First floor.

THE REGISTERED ALBUM of ORNAMENTAL HAIRWORK sent free for two stamps. Ladies and Gentlemen may see their own hair worked in any souvenir without extra charge. Instructions for self-practice, mounted in the Albums for inspection.—C. OLIFIERS, Artist in Hair, 35, Old Compton-street, Soho.

HAIR MEMENTOS.—DEWDNEY, Artist in Hair, 173, Fenchurch-street, City, London, beautifully makes and elegantly mounts in fine gold, Bar, Bracelets, Brooches, Rings, Chains, Lockets, &c., and sends the same to any part of the Kingdom, at about one-half the usual charges.—N.B. A Book of Specimens sent free on receipt of two postage stamps. Shows-rooms, First floor.

CITY DOMESTIC BAZAAR!!!—The Proprietor of the above Establishment is desirous of making known his extensive and beautiful assortment of ELECTRO-PLATED GOODS, 35, Ludgate-hill, to 3, OLD HALLEY, one door from Ludgate-hill, where Ladies will find SERVANTS, with good characters, waiting their approval, and Servants may here meet with the acquisition of speedily being hired. March 28, 1850.

SHIRTS.—E. FLINT continues to supply gentlemen with the best SHIRTS, six for 30s., Quilt and Coloured Shirts; also Boys' Shirts. N.B. Single Shirts at Wholesale Prices. FLINT'S old-established Warerooms, 48, Ludgate-hill, London, and 70, King-street, Brighton.

THE CORAZZA SHIRT.—CAPPER and WATES, inventors, 25, Regent-street, St. James's.—Gentlemen can have the Corazza, or any other form of Shirt, by sending measures, taken right, round the neck, round chest, waist, wrist, and height of wearer.—Excel ent Long Cloth Shirts, with fine Linen Fronts, Collars, and Wristbands, at 40s. 42s. 45s. 48s. 54s., and Linen Shirts 50s. to 55s. each. Additional charge for Dress Fronts, 5s. for Self-measure Shirts are sent to any part of the kingdom, on receipt of a money order for the price of the Shirt, with addition of two shillings, which addition is deducted from the amount of the act.

BERDOE'S SUPERIOR LIGHT OVERCOAT. the WATERPROOF PALLIUM.—This well-known garment, which has obtained the distinction of universal and respectable artizan, at the lowest possible cost for cash, and who requires a more ample cape protractors and superior finish, can be had at the manufacturer, and guaranteed to resist any amount of rain for 24 hours. Price 42s. Large stock to select from.—W. BERDOE, 96, New Bond street, and 69, Cornhill (only)

THE NICOLL PALETOT, or Patent Coat; and the surgical invention, the Registered Paletot (6 and 7 Vic., c. 65) The West-end Warerooms, for the display of these specimens of dress, are in Regent-street, and extend from No. 114 to No. 116 inclusive, and those in the City are at 22, Cornhill, the existing department being in the rear.—Mr. Nicoll, Mary Ann assumed the use of the word paletot, but H. J. and D. Nicoll are the sole proprietors and patentees of the articles other than by name. The prices are one, two, and three guineas, according to the climate or purpose for which they are required.

AUSTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND, CAPE of GOOD HOPE, NATAL, &c.

PASSENGERS to the COLONIES, generally, may obtain their OUTFITS from S. W. SILVER and Co., CLOTHIERS, 65 and 67, CORNHILL, at wholesale prices. SILVER and Co. make nearly the whole of the articles connected in the outfit of passengers, so that the Cabin Folding Furniture may become permanent Household Furniture on their arrival in the colony.

They also engage PASSAGES, and give ship-sailing INFORMATION, for they neither make money nor pay a commission, good being to give PASSENGERS who place themselves in their hands every benefit, and they forward small packages for their customers (gratis) through the GENERAL POST OFFICE.

SILVER and Co. give DRAFTS on AUSTRALIA, at sixty days sight, of £125 for every £100 paid here

The EMIGRANT Fitting-out Branch is at No. 4, BISHOPSGATE-STREET, opposite the London Tavern, where a complete fit-out, for sale or hire, including bedding, may be obtained for FOUR POUNDS.

A Branch of each at St. GEORGE'S-[illegible] CITY.

NUMBER ONE, SAINT PAUL'S CHURCHYARD.—Economy is the Order of the Day.—THIS Economy is to procure of the best and most serviceable description, and at the lowest possible cost, whatever is required. There is no greater error in everyday life than in purchasing a thing" because a low price is asked for it. All Tea pays 3s 2d a pound duty to Government. There is what is called Tea advertised at 4s 8d a pound, and again at 5s 4d, but there is no Tea at less than 5s 4d a pound after the 5s 4d-standard fine Tea, possessing strength, flavour and quality, which is sold at 4s a pound by DAKIN and COMPANY, TEA MERCHANTS, Number One, Saint Paul's Churchyard.

MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT.—A new discovery in the Art of Beautifying the Hair, founded on natural principles, and which once used will at once supersede the filthy stuff sold as Bear's Grease, Circassian Cream, or various oils with nonsensical names, which pervade not the slightest power to restore baldness. MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT, used as directed in a Treatise on the Hair sold with each pot, will soon convince the Public of its value and purity. Price 3s each.

Sold by all perfumers and medicine venders in town and country. Wholesale London Agents:—Messrs. Barclay and Sons, Farringdon-street; Hannay and Co., Oxford-street; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; and Hannay and Co., Corn

KING'S NORTON CHURCH, LEICESTERSHIRE, STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

THE CHURCH OF KING'S NORTON, STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

THE Church of King's Norton, represented in the accompanying Views, is one well known to most of the inhabitants and visitors of Leicestershire: many persons who, perhaps, never thought of the higher lesson which its graceful spire, pointing heavenwards, was meant to teach, may remember it well as the striking object which has fixed in their memory the events of some day of keen enjoyment in the hunting-field. To those who are familiar with the history of the decline and revival of Gothic architecture, the most remarkable thing relating to it will be the time when it was built, about 1750. It is probable that Mr. Forbrey, its founder, was the only person in his age who conceived and executed the design of erecting the best Gothic church that the imperfect architectural knowledge of that period could plan. He expended more than £20,000 in the pursuit of this object. It is not known what architect he employed; but the result has been a building which, amidst many incongruities, possesses many points of great beauty. So far as material and workmanship are concerned, nothing was spared to make it a perfect church. The stone is a well-coloured and durable freestone, brought by land carriage from quarries in Rutlandshire. The woodwork is of the best Norway oak, carefully selected, in the more conspicuous parts of the building, for the beauty of its grain, and, in many places, delicately carved. The windows have stone mullions, and their heads are filled with tracery, which, although not in strict taste, is both substantial and elaborate. The space within the communion rails is floored with marble. An open parapet runs round the whole building. Each buttress is crowned by a pinnacle. The workmanship of every part was of the most careful and expensive kind. The tower, containing a peal of eight bells, with chimes, was surmounted by a spire, which formed the chief beauty of the building. It is not known whether this was an original design of the architect, or whether it was copied from some older church; but it is certain that its proportions were so faultless as to give pleasure not only to unpractised eyes, but also to those of learned ecclesiologists. This beautiful feature is now entirely destroyed. On Monday, May 13, during a sudden storm of thunder and lightning, which seemed to break immediately over the village, a flash struck the spire, and (without any exaggeration) shivered it in a moment into a thousand fragments. Of two eye-witnesses, one who was near the foot of the steeple at the time when it fell, compares the flash to the sudden descent of a ball of fire. Another, who saw it from the window of one of the neighbouring houses, states that the tower seemed to her quite surrounded by flames. The vicarage-house, in which the Rev. Mr. Parry, assistant curate of the place, and Mrs. Parry were residing at the time of the accident, is a little, low building, standing not above thirty feet from the foot of the tower: the stones fell on almost every side of it, but, providentially, not one broke through its roof. The damage done is not confined to the loss of the spire: a great part of the roof and of the gallery at the west end has been crushed by the fall of huge fragments. The stone which formed the finial of the spire fell upon and crushed the font. The parish which has sustained this great misfortune is a very small one, containing less than 1000 acres of land. It is, moreover, the second calamity of the kind which has befallen it within the last seven years. This same spire was struck a first time in February, 1843, when damage was caused to the amount of £200; and the few inhabitants had only paid off the debt occasioned by the first stroke a few weeks before the time when the second fell. Under these distressing circumstances, it is to be hoped that the public, and especially the inhabitants of Leicestershire, will aid the more immediate sufferers in restoring a building, which was an ornament not only to the parish, but to the whole county.

We have engraved the stricken tower, as well as the spire entire.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.

In a Convocation holden on Tuesday, a letter of thanks to the Rev. Frederick William Hope, M.A., formerly of Christ Church, for a very splendid and extensive collection of entomological subjects, together with a considerable library of scientific books, prints, &c., lately presented by that gentleman to the University, was read and approved, and the University seal ordered to be affixed thereto.

In the same Convocation, the few remaining clauses required to complete the new examination statute were agreed to without opposition. The second examination will now, therefore, take place in Easter Term, 1853.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—The Rev. Richard Dawes, Vicar of King's Sombourn, to be Dean of the Cathedral Church of Hereford. The Rev. C. Elkington, to be a Canon Residentiary of Chichester Cathedral. The Rev. W. H. Massie, to a Minor Canonry in Chester Cathedral. The Rev. R. Fitzgerald, to the Rectory of Winslade, Hants. The Rev. W. Paull, to the Rectory of Handley, Cheshire. The Rev. W. W. Spicer, to the Rectory of Hebon Abbas, Hants. The Rev. J. B. Gordon, to the Rectory of Clonbeg, Tipperary. The Rev. J. Vere Benson, to the Rectory and Vicarage of Castleconnell and Killeagarif, diocese of Killaloe. The Rev. J. Exshaw, to the Rectory and Vicarage of Kinnitty, Litterluna, and Roscomroe, King's County. The Rev. T. Wood, to the Rectory of Powerstown, Kilkenny. The Rev. John M'Mahon Wilder, to the Rectory of Brandiston, Norfolk. The Rev. Edward Allfree, to the Rectory of St. Swithin's, Cannon-street.

VACANCIES.—Ingram R., Northumberland; diocese Durham; value, £469, with residence; patron R. L. Allgood, Esq.; Rev. J. Allgood, deceased. Louth Holy Trinity P. C., county and diocese Lincoln; patrons trustees, Rev. E. Richardson, promoted.

TESTIMONIALS.—The following clergymen have been recently presented with testimonials of esteem and affection:—The Rev. F. S. Bolton, 11 years classical and mathematical master in the Bridgnorth Grammar-School (where he received his education), from the mayor, borough magistrates, aldermen, town-councillors, clergy, dissenting minister, and other inhabitants of Bridgnorth, of various religious and political opinions. The Rev. Edward Waylen, late Minister at Largs, diocese of Glasgow. The Rev. Thomas Baker, Rector of Whitney, from his parishioners, in commemoration of having held that benefice for the long period of 40 years. The Rev. Thomas Hugo, Curate of Bury, from the parishioners, on his departure. The Rev. John Beetham, Master of the Lancaster Grammar-School, from his pupils and friends.

INCORPORATED SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE ENLARGEMENT, BUILDING, AND REPAIRING OF CHURCHES AND CHAPELS.—This society held its meeting for the present month on Monday last, a week earlier than usual, the proper day being Whit Monday. His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury took the chair. There were also present his Grace the Archbishop of York, the Bishops of Winchester, Bangor, Gloucester and Bristol, Ripon, Worcester, Lichfield, and St. Asaph; Earl Howe, Earl Fowis, Rev. Dr. Spry, Rev. J. Jennings, and Messrs. James Cocks, Edward Hussey, William Salt, and William Davis. Grants were made in aid of the erection of new churches at Ilfracombe, South Ossett, near Wakefield; St. Stephen's District, Devonport; and Lydbrook, in the Forest of Dean, Gloucestershire; towards rebuilding, upon a new site, the church at Hawes, Yorkshire; and towards various alterations and improvements in the parish churches at Catterick, also in Yorkshire; Tregare, near Raglan, Monmouthshire: Compton Bishop, near Cross Somerset; St. James's, Holloway, in the parish of Islington; St. Werburg, Derby; Dunstable, Bedfordshire; West Drayton, Middlesex; Uffington, near Farringdon, Berks; and Waltham, near Melton Mowbray: making fourteen grants in all.

FESTIVAL OF THE SONS OF THE CLERGY.—The anniversary festival of this society was held on Thursday, by a sermon preached by Archdeacon Musgrave, in St. Paul's Cathedral; after which a dinner took place at the London Tavern, the Lord Mayor in the chair, supported by the Duke of Cambridge and the Archbishop of Canterbury. After several formal toasts had been drunk, the secretary announced the subscriptions of the day at £564. The company separated early.

RAGGED SCHOOL UNION.—The sixth annual meeting of this excellent society was held on Tuesday evening at Exeter Hall; the Right Hon. Lord Ashley in the chair. The meeting was densely crowded, more tickets having been issued than could possibly be accommodated. After an eloquent address from the chairman, the secretary proceeded to read his elaborate report, from which it appeared that the society was prosperous in every way; its benevolent supporters being gratified with the intelligence that, of 200 boys and young women sent out to Australia, almost every one had found remunerating employment. The local schools number 94; voluntary teachers, 1350; children attending on week-days, 5174; children attending on week evenings, 5090; on Sunday evenings, 10,966; number of paid teachers, 156; school-masters and industrial classes, 1200. The subscriptions this year amount to £630, exceeding those of last year (£338), exclusive of the emigration fund. After deducting payments, expenses, &c., there remains a balance in hand of £369 10s. 6d.; balance of emigration fund, £634. The report was adopted amid great applause. Several other resolutions were then carried, a vote of thanks passed to the noble chairman, a doxology sung, a benediction pronounced, and the meeting separated.

CURIOSITIES.—XVI.

THOMAS A'BECKET'S GRACE-CUP.

THE beautiful Cup shown in our Illustration is the property of H. P. Howard, Esq., M.P., with whose family it is historically associated, having been presented by the valiant Admiral Sir Edward Howard to Catherine of Arragon. At the Queen's death it reverted to the Earl of Arundel, and can be traced in the family ever since. During this long period it has been called the Grace Cup of St. Thomas hBecket; and the legends and initials upon it, which may have been retained from some earlier decorations, vouch for this ancient and interesting tradition.

Round the lid is the motto, "Sobrii Estote," with the letters T. B. supporting a mitre. Round the body of the Cup is chased "Vinum tuum bibe cum gaudio."

THOMAS A'BECKET'S GRACE-CUP.

Round the neck of the top is the name "God Feware," probably the name of the goldsmith.

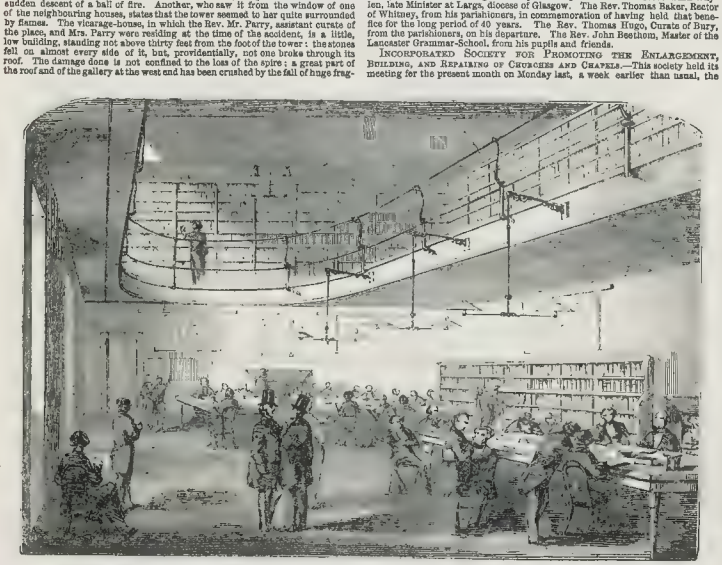
Our Illustration and foregoing description are copied from Scott's "Antiquarian Gleanings in the North of England." The Ivory Cup itself is very probably a relique of the great Archbishop Becket; but the mountings are certainly of not earlier date than the latter part of the fifteenth century, if so early.

POST-OFFICE NOTICE.—The following notice has been sent to the deputy post-masters by command of the Postmaster-General:—General Post-office, May 12, 1850.—It is found that many postmasters still forward, on the Saturday night, in their "London through" bundles, letters and newspapers which ought to be kept over for the despatch to London of the following day, viz. letters for London and the London district; letters for foreign parts; inland letters, prepaid by money; unpaid letters; letters for Guernsey and Jersey, and newspapers. Particular attention must be paid to the previous instructions, which direct that the "London through" bundles are to contain none but stamped forward letters, and the State's or Government letters. No registered letters, unpaid letters, or letters prepaid by money, or newspapers, are to be sent, nor any letters addressed to London or its London district, except the Government letters. Postmasters at the outports must, however, forward to London, as usual, all foreign, colonial, and ship letters landed at those ports.



NEW READING-ROOM AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND, OPENED ON WEDNESDAY.

NEW READING-ROOM AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

ON Wednesday afternoon, a handsome reading-room, which has just been formed for the Bank of England Library and Literary Association, instituted by the directors for the use of the clerks, was opened by Thomson Hankey, jun., Esq., Deputy-Governor of the Bank. There was a very numerous meeting of the members; when the Chief Cashier, as President, and the Chief Accountant, the Treasurer of the institution, moved and seconded a vote of thanks to the Court of Directors for the handsome manner in which they had fitted up the Library, and for the liberal support which had been accorded the Association.

The Court of Directors collectively have voted £500 for the purchase of books, and several of the Directors have made handsome donations. Thomas Baring, Esq., presented the committee with £100, to be expended by them in books; while others, including K. D. Hodgson, Esq., J. B. Heath, Esq., &c., have contributed largely to the Association. W. H. Mullens, Esq., sent a cheque for £25, and many of the clerks have presented valuable works; in short, the Bank of England Library and Literary Association, aided by the exertions of the committee, and their hon. secretary, Mr. J. R. Durrant, of the Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Office, bids fair to become one of the most remarkable institutions in the metropolis.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLER, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1850.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 428.—Vol. xvi.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1850. [Sixpence.

THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT AND THE GREEK QUESTION.

The unhappy demands of the British Government against Greece have thrown Europe into a ferment of agitation by the unexpected turn which they have taken in embroiling the Governments of Great Britain and France. At the end of last and the commencement of the present week, nothing short of a European war seemed to be the solution which would satisfy the over-excited politicians of the French and English capitals. The recall of M. Drouyn de Lhuys from London was to be followed by the dismissal of Lord Normanby from Paris: the pleasure-seeking English in that gay capital rushed to the Embassy for their passports, for fear of being made prisoners of war; even the holiday-makers at Boulogne-sur-Mer caught the contagious alarm, and taking their carpet-bags in their hands, crowded back to Dover and Folkestone with all convenient or inconvenient rapidity. Better to them was Cockney Margate in security, than genteel Boulogne in peril of imprisonment. But as the week wore on the alarm cooled down, the blinding dust which had been thrown in men's eyes by General de la Hitte and the other members of the French Government cleared away, and both Frenchmen and Englishmen began to see that the real key of the enigma was more likely to be found in the domestic politics of the Republic than elsewhere, and that there did not exist any just ground of quarrel, though possibly there was some pretext for coolness, between France and England.

There has evidently been a misconception of each other's meaning between the five diplomatists engaged in this originally very paltry business. The affair has been an unlucky one from the beginning, and reflects no credit upon the great nation that entered into such a squabble with such a power as Greece. But, while Englishmen deplore that such a dispute should have arisen, they say with Polonius—

M. E. DROUYN DE LHUYS.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

> Beware
> Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in,
> Bear it, that the opposer may beware of thee;

and will not rashly condemn the conduct of those Englishmen whose duty it was to bring it to an issue. The fact is, that in the negotiations that have taken place, Messrs. Gros and Wyse, in Athens, M. de la Hitte in Paris, and M. Drouyn de Lhuys and Lord Palmerston in London, do not seem to have exactly understood each other. From the voluminous correspondence published by the French Government—which is more than sufficient to fill the forty-eight dreary columns of the London morning newspapers—there seems to have been but one man engaged in the transaction who really knew from the beginning what he intended in the end, and that was Lord Palmerston. His Lordship evidently meant, either by persuasion or by coercion to compel the Greeks to pay the demands of Messrs. Finlay and Pacifico, as far as they could be proved to be just and well-founded. What the Baron Gros and M. de la Hitte meant is not so clear, unless it were by means of the offered mediation of France to support the views of Russia in the east of Europe, and to strengthen the alliance of the once imperial house of Bonaparte with the now imperial house of Romanoff. Whatever the designs of the present Government of France may have been, there does not appear, even in the version of the story which they have published, more especially after the explanation of Lord Palmerston, to have been any justifiable ground for the disturbance of cordial relations between the two Governments. We thought at first that the French Government had been uncourteously used, but the published correspondence does not show that the discourtesy was wilful. It may be asserted confidently, that, had the matter occurred six months ago, when the position of the Republican party in France towards Louis Napoleon was so different from what it is at present, no withdrawal of the French Ambassador would have been the result. The misunderstanding would have been cleared up to the mutual satisfaction of Great Britain and France without all this pother; M. Drouyn de Lhuys would have continued, as before, to make friends of all the people in London who came into contact with him; Lord Normanby would have remained, as usual, the most honoured and trusted of all the guests in the periodical gatherings at the Elysée; and the British alliance would have been conserved, as it ever has been by the French liberal party, the best guarantee for the peace of Europe, and for the progress of France in constitutional freedom.

GRAND BALL AT DEVONSHIRE HOUSE, ON TUESDAY—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

But M. Thiers and M. Molé are the real governors of France. Although they keep in the background, and have not the courage, to accept office, they rule the country by their policy. Messrs. De la Hitte and Baroche play their game, and the President allows himself to be made the victim, while he thinks he is the master of the movement. M. Thiers hates England with an intensity which has often shown itself before now. His policy, as the minister of Louis Philippe, was notoriously anti-Anglican. It is the same now, when he is out of office and in very altered circumstances. He and all the Absolutists of Europe, have an especial hatred of Lord Palmerston. His Lordship is the firm friend of constitutional government, rightly arguing that the best chance for the peace, prosperity, and happiness of all European countries is their gradual but steady absorption into the great family of free states. Wherever there is a despotism in Europe, the diplomacy of that despotism hates Lord Palmerston as a matter of course. Some public writers in this country unfortunately lend themselves to the views of M. Thiers and those foreign diplomatists, by systematically attacking all the doings of this accomplished and far-seeing statesman; but, as in all the various occasions of complaint which have been found with his Lordship's proceedings on the Continent, he has been found in the long-run to have taken the right course, these attacks have but served to bring into clearer light the consummate ability which he has displayed in managing the business of his department. It will, we think, be found that the actual case is no exception. Lord Palmerston's explanations on Thursday night were very clear and precise, and show that M. Gros is more to blame than any one else, in having misconceived the extent of his powers. When the present hubbub has entirely blown over, and when M. de la Hitte and his secret adviser M. Thiers are disavowed by the French people, and a ministry appointed in France that will not goad the French Republicans into insurrection—the whole blame of the misunderstanding that now exists between Great Britain and France will be laid upon those who made a slight diplomatic error the pretext of a serious quarrel. The French, sensitive as they are upon points of honour, are not so blinded as not to be aware that the English alliance is the best, the wisest, the safest, and the most permanent alliance that France can form; and that an Absolutist alliance with Russia would be impolitic and short-lived.

The French Government stood in a critical position towards the French people when the Greek negotiation took so unexpected a turn. It stood in a situation of peril; and, in the struggle which it had provoked, had no reliance upon the moral force of the country—no reliance whatever except upon the army. That reliance was not so strong as was desirable for the success of those who wish to put an end to the Republic; and the bold advisers of the President were at a loss how to gain and retain the diminishing affections of the army. This misunderstanding between Gros and Mr. Wyse opportunely occurred. Nothing could have been more fortunate for the views of the anti-Anglican M. Thiers. Perfidious Albion had insulted France, and the warm blood of the nation and the army was to be raised to fever heat to resent the injury; the Republican party was to be tongue-tied in the quarrel; and, amid the din, the noise, and the smoke, the bill for the disfranchisement of 4,800,000 Frenchmen was to be hurried through the Chamber. It seemed for a day or two that the project was likely to be successful; but calm reflection has dispelled the mist which had been over the French mind, and the bold stroke seems (as if it would be unsuccessful. The Anti-Anglican fury has not been excited to the extent desired; the coup has failed; the moderate Republicans, and even those immoderate Republicans whose traditional hatred of England was to the greatest extent calculated upon, have held aloof, and will be well satisfied to see the various diplomatists engaged shake hands (on paper) with as much good-feeling and rapidity as they may. Perhaps the principal result of this untoward dispute may be the resignation of the present French Ministry—a circumstance which will be exceedingly fortunate for the French people and for the President of the Republic.

As regards the original quarrel with Greece, every well-wisher of this country can but deplore that we should have resorted so suddenly to such extremities against a powerless though perfidious state. A gentleman gains no credit by fighting a costermonger or a sweep; nor can Great Britain gain any credit by having bullied and coerced Greece. The diplomatic dispute with France that has arisen out of it, is quite another matter; and, although the English public may deplore that France should have had any real or even fancied subject of complaint, they will not side with M. de la Hitte and his secret prompters, or treat the matter as one that France ought to have taken up so seriously.

FESTIVITIES AT DEVONSHIRE HOUSE.

DEVONSHIRE HOUSE was on Tuesday night the scene of most magnificent hospitality; upwards of eight hundred of the highest members of the aristocracy having assembled within its gorgeous saloons, at the invitation of the Duke of Devonshire, to celebrate by a grand ball the recurrence of his Grace's natal day.

The grand saloon, when crowded with company about midnight, presented a brilliant scene, of which none but those who had the good fortune to witness it could form the remotest conception. The magnificence of this apartment was only eclipsed by the beauty and splendid costumes of the guests whom it contained, these numbering at one moment a Prince and Princess of the blood Royal, some two dozen Dukes and Duchesses, and three that number of Earls and Countesses, to say nothing of nobles of an humbler grade.

The company began to set down as early as ten o'clock.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge honoured the noble Duke with their presence, arriving about eleven o'clock, attended by the Lady Augusta Cadogan and Mr. E. St. John Mildmay.

His Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar came from the Opera shortly before midnight.

His Royal Highness the Infante Don Juan (of Spain) and the Archduchess Beatrix of Este, were among the early arrivals.

His Grace the Duke of Wellington arrived about half-past ten, and remained more than an hour the guest of the Duke.

The diplomatic circle included his Excellency the Russian Minister, the Baroness Brunow, and Riddle, Olga de Lechner, his Excellency the Belgian Minister and Madame Van de Weyer, the Portuguese Minister and the Viscountess Monserrez, his Excellency the Bavarian Minister and the Baroness de Cetto, his Excellency the Minister for the Netherlands, the French Chargé d'Affaires, the Austrian Chargé d'Affaires, Baron Wydenbruck, M. De Berg, &c.

The general company included the following:

*Duke*s.—Bedford, Norfolk, Manchester, Roxburgh, Leeds.

Duchesses.—Buccleuch, Norfolk, Leeds, Sutherland, Bedford, Montrose, Roxburgh.

Marquises.—Londonderry, Exeter, Kildare, Ely, Breadalbane, Drogheda, Douro, Granby, M.P., Donegall, Bute, Perth.

Marchionesses Londonderry, Westminster, Exeter, Kildare, Ely, Blandford, Allesbury, Breadalbane, Drogheda, Douro.

Earls.—Sefton, Listowell, Grosvenor, Spencer, Clare, Wilton, Morton, Morley, Powis, March, Kinnoull, Granard, Jersey, Bradford, Bruce, Mansfield, Beasborough, Talbot, Strathmore, Mulgrave, Belfast, Gifford, Carrington, Mount Charles, Darnley, Portarlington, Talbot.

Countesses. Shrewsbury, Clanwilliam, Mulgrave, St. Germans, Newburgh, Grey, Sefton, Listowell, Spencer, Portarington, Jersey, Wilton, Morton, Morley, March, Craven, Wicklow, Mansefield, Falmouth, Somerton, Glengall, Lichfield, Kinnoull, Powis, Bradford, Bruce, Beasborough, De Ross, Strathmore, Chesterfield, Minto.

Viscounts.—Campden, Mahon, M.P., Villiers, M.P., Newport, M.P., Dungarvan, Canning, Lascelles, Hinton, Chelsea, Barrington, Jocelyn, M.P., Eastnor, Clifden, Malden, Pollington, Ingestre, Maidenlie, Amco, M.P., Villiers, M.P., Duppin

Viscountesses.—Combermere, Campden, Mahon, Villiers, Hardinge, Newport, Dungarvan, Jocelyn, Barrington, Pollington, Ebrington, Villiers.

The ball was opened at 11 o'clock with a quadrille, in which the Duke of Devonshire led off with the Hon. Miss Eliis.

The festivities were kept up with unflagging spirit until one o'clock, when a superb supper was served to the guests; after partaking of which dancing was renewed, and it was daylight before the party broke up.

The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge remained the guests of the noble Duke until nearly two o'clock.

During the evening, a very splendid pyrotechnic exhibition took place in the gardens at the rear of the mansion.

The orchestra for both ball-rooms was supplied by the artistes of the Duke's private band, led by Messrs. Chas. Coote and Tinney. The "Sturm Marsch Galop" was introduced during the evening with excellent effect

Amongst the recent additions to the treasures of art contained in Devonshire House, we must not omit to mention a beautiful group in white Carrara marble, occupying a commanding position at the foot of the grand staircase. It is the work of a German artist, and illustrates with marvellous effect the annexed lines, entitled

THE HUNTER AND THE WOOD NYMPH

Turn—turn thy backin'd foot, thy ruthless axe restrain,
And leave in peace these holy shades, Young Hunter of the plain;
Nor hare, nor spotted fawn, in this lone wood is seen,
Only the slighter lawn mingle its thickets green.

But still his axe the Hunter plied, and his reckless step sped on,
Till where the crashing saplings fell thistrave daylight shone;
And the last fawn he slaughtered, its life-tide beams betray'd,
A Dryad, white as the drifted snow, ay couched in the greenwood glade

Oh! turn thy backin'd foot, thy ruthless axe restrain.
Pleaded anew the trembling Nymph—but her pleas and prayers were vain.
The stern, dark man slew these—for she found lay low—
No shade remained to screen her rest, no leaves to bind her brow!

But, weep not, lovely one! the generous Hunter cried;
My heart and soul are thine to share, my guest—my joy! my bride!
Then on the Wood Nymph's lips what smiles of rapture stole!
She had lost her home in the greenwood shade, and gain'd a human soul!

The Grand Ball-room, engraved in the preceding page, is a very long apartment, formed by throwing two rooms into one; a recent alteration, effected by throwing an arch across at the junction. The arch itself is most elaborately ornamented. The furniture and fittings of the room are of the most gorgeous character, and there are some magnificent pictures on the walls. The ball-room is by no means lofty, the ceilings panelled and richly gilded, and, as the room was erstwhile two, there are different ceilings in it. The draperies are of French silk brocatelle, in blue and gold. There are no chandeliers to the room, but there is a profusion of lights on the chimney-pieces, on console-tables, and between the windows; and a peculiarity in the mode of lighting the arch and the junction of the two rooms deserves especial mention, from its novelty and the exquisite effect produced. It consists of a series of globe lights round the arch in either room, and, from the globes being tinged a faint rose-colour, when lighted, their appearance is truly beautiful.

The ball-room opens into the grand saloon, of which we gave an illustration in our Journal of last week.

M. DROUYN DE LHUYS.

M. DROUYN DE LHUYS, whose recent recal from the representation of the French Republic in England has been the leading topic of the past week, was born in 1805, and is a son of one of the wealthiest landowners in the department of Seine and Marne (Melun), his father being in possession of between £14,000 and £15,000 per annum, a considerable fortune in France. He was educated at the College of Louis le Grand, where he obtained the prize of Honour in 1819. Being destined for the bar, he took his degree as Docteur en Droit; then changed his views, and studied at the Ecole de Médécine, and received the degree of Docteur. He next directed his attention to diplomacy: by the interest of his friends he obtained the post of attaché to one of the German Courts, and was subsequently appointed Secretary to the Embassy in Madrid; and in 1838-39 succeeded M. de Lavour Maubourg as Ambassador.

In 1842 M. Drouyn de Lhuys was elected to the Chamber of Deputies in place of the Duc de Praslin, on his elevation to the dignity of a Peer of France. M. Drouyn de Lhuys next filled the office of Directeur Commercial in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; and in 1844 he gave offence to M. Guizot in the discussion respecting "the Pritchard affair," when M. Guizot admitted the propriety of opposition from the public functionaries as a vote intercuse; which M. Drouyn de Lhuys sealed himself of; but on his name appearing in the list of the Moniteur, M. Guizot reproached his subordinate, and, in a fit of ill-temper, dismissed him

After the Revolution of February, 1848, M. Drouyn de Lhuys was returned to the Constituent Assembly for the department of the Seine and Marne. He then attached himself to the centre gauche (opposition dynastique), and was appointed to the Committee of Foreign Affairs. He voted against the Communist measures, the Cuba, and the State Workshops, of which preliminary step was the occupation of the port alone, although the march upon Rome had been previously decided upon by the Cabinet.

On June 2, 1849, M. Drouyn de Lhuys resigned his post, and was succeeded by M. de Tocqueville.

The subsequent appointment of M. Drouyn de Lhuys to the Court of St. James', and his stay in London, are, doubtless, within the recollection of our readers. He is a man of considerable literary attainments, and contributes to a Moderate journal established by himself and his friend M. de Chambotte

M. Drouyn de Lhuys, by his marriage with Mdlle de St. Cruq (conjoined with his own fortune), is expected to become one of the richest men in France.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The very precipitate withdrawal of the French Ambassador in London by his own Government, notwithstanding the menacing aspect of the affair at first, will not, it is generally understood, lead to anything beyond the inconvenience of a temporary cessation of the amenities of diplomatic intercourse between the Governments of the two countries. In Paris the general opinion among the opponents of the French Government is, that the whole of the affair was got up not from any real displeasure felt at the conduct of England in the Greek affair, but as a grand diversion to gain temporary popularity, and to draw off the attention of the people from the dangerous question of the Electoral Law, which is to deprive four millions of them of the electoral franchise. If this solution be the correct one, then has it exceeded the most sanguine of national indignation so far succeeded in its object that it has elected from the army patriotic sentiments, which have done quite as much to discourage the Red Republicans from any attempt at demonstration against the proposed restriction of the elective franchise, as the gigantic preparations of the Government against the apprehended insurrection have.

The great event of the week has been the discussion in the Legislative Assembly on this same Electoral Law.

The debate was opened on Tuesday on the question of urgency—in other words, whether the bill should be at once, and without any further preliminary, submitted to the discussion of hon. members. The affirmative was carried by 461 against 239.

General Cavaignac then ascended the tribune, and spoke on the provisions of the bill, which he opposed, as being unconstitutional, ill-timed, and dangerous.

M. Desselours de Chauvin replied to the gallant officer.

M. Victor Hugo highly eulogised the principle of universal suffrage which the Constitution guaranteed, and charged the Government with endeavouring to provoke a mild and well-conducted people to violence and outrage.

M. J. de Lasteyrie replied to that hon. gentleman, and enforced the necessity of the measure upon the present and, without its adoption, the public tranquility would be in continual danger. The bill, said the hon. member, had been condemned as being contrary to the Constitution; but he maintained that the supporters of the Constitution never intended that the exercise of universal suffrage should be made an instrument for evil passions or evil doctrines, by which the peace and happiness of the country might be jeopardised.

M. Pascal Duprat opposed the bill, because he believed that it would disfranchise several millions of individuals, which would be a gross violation of the principles of universal suffrage, as embodied in the Constitution.

On Wednesday the debate was resumed by

M. Béchard, who spoke in favour of the project as being both constitutional and necessary.

M. Cannet took the opposite side of the question.

M. Montalembert supported the measure.

Both on Tuesday and Wednesday, at the opening of the sitting, a vast number of petitions were presented against the measure, the signatures to which an Opposition member estimated at 100,000

M. Lamartine, pamphlet-editor of the Voix du Peuple, appeared before the Court of Assizes on Monday, to take his trial for having published in that journal, on the 8th of April, articles exciting to hatred of the Government. He was declared guilty by the jury, but with extenuating circumstances, and was condemned to six months' imprisonment and 2000f. fine. A few days ago he had been condemned, by default, on this charge, to a year's imprisonment and 5000f. fine.

Paris is quiet, but the troops are kept in readiness in the event of any outbreak. A trifling degree of agitation was manifested in the faubourgs during some evenings, but it soon disappeared.

Letters from several of the ports state that the levy of seamen was proceeding most energetically.

The Democratie Pacifique has stopped publication, for want of funds.

SPAIN.

The last accounts from Madrid speak of the satisfaction of the Minister for Foreign Affairs, on being informed that Lord Howden had been appointed Minister of England in Spain, and Mr. Ottway, First Secretary of the Legation. It was believed that M. Isturitz would before the close of May be installed in the Spanish Legation in London. Lord Howden was not expected at Madrid before the end of June.

ITALIAN STATES.

From Rome we learn that at the latest date (the 14th inst.) political affairs still continued in the most inert state, the Papal Government not having as yet produced any of the expected measures. The people, however, were in a great degree contented, owing to the improvement in their material prosperity, consequent on the return of the Pope, and the general tranquility prevailed.

In Piedmont the abolition of ecclesiastical privileges still creates discussion, as the clergy refuse to acknowledge the right of the Parliament to do away with those exceptional cases.

AUSTRIA.

The German papers publish the financial budget of the Austrian empire for the year from Nov. 1, 1848, to Oct. 31, 1849. They give the following list of income and expenditure:—

Income	..	..	..	..	144,013,736 florins
Expenditure	..	..	..	..	238,864,624 ,,
				Leaving a deficit of	94,850,888 florins.

The court-martial of Arad, in Hungary, has again published thirteen sentences, of which three are capital ones. The punishment in each of those three cases has been commuted into incarceration for a term of sixteen years.

The name of General Bem, we have been condemned (in contumacy) to capital punishment and confiscation of his property, has been publicly affixed to the gallows.

PRUSSIA.

The sham Congress of Princes at Berlin has come to an end without any result. The negotiations were chiefly directed to establish three points, viz.: To limit, and consequently to create, the functions of the President of the League; to define the position of the Council of Princes; and to create the Cabinet of the League. But nothing definitive has been done.

The Berlin journals complain that no League has been constituted, but merely a provisional League which is neither one thing or the other; that instead of purifying the League from its discordant elements, they were retained to work further mischief; and that the representation of the League at Frankfort was sacrificed to the prejudices of some States.

UNITED STATES.

The intelligence this week from New York dates to the 10th inst. The great question of the day, the recognition or prohibition of slavery in all new states admitted into the Confederation, which has been raised on the occasion of the claim of California for admission into the union, remains still undecided by Congress.

The committee, appropriately termed the "Slavery Compromise Committee," to which it has been referred, have made their report. This Committee was appointed (on the suggestion of Mr. Clay) in the confident expectation that it would be able to recommend to Congress some plan by which the acrimonious dispute on the subject in either House could be compromised, and peace between the contending factions restored; and as it has recommended the admission of California upon a sort of neutral ground as to slavery, neither party is satisfied, each thinking that a little more decided leaning to its own opinions would have been but a reasonable and just deference to truth and justice.

Mr. Clay has undertaken to defend the report against the nitrus on both sides, whether abolitionists or advocates of slavery, and a fierce contest in Congress is looked forward to immediately on the subject.

The Icarian community of Nauvoo are expecting a large reinforcement to their numbers by the arrival of a number of Swiss and French families. On this account, they have greatly enlarged their milling operations. They are about to apply for naturalisation, in order that they may enjoy all the rights and privileges of American citizens.

Another crevasse has occurred on the Mississippi, in the parish of St. James, which, at the last accounts, was 200 feet wide and six deep. Several plantations had been covered with water, and it was feared that immense damage must be occasioned before the crevasse was stopped.

The cholera has made its appearance on several steamboats on the Mississippi river, and is proving fatal in almost every case.

Great destruction of property has been occasioned by the sudden rise of the Hudson, Merrimack, and Connecticut rivers, and the smaller streams in New York, Northern New Hampshire, and Vermont. On the line of the Vermont Central Railroad the damage is supposed to be not less than 200,000 dollars.

The anniversary of the proclamation of the French Republic (on the 4th inst.) was celebrated by a public banquet, in the hall of the Coliseum, New York, on that day. The United States Minister, Count Sartiges, was present at the réunion, which included several distinguished invited guests, and among them were the Italian patriots, Signor Forresti and Gomera. Avezzana. The evening was passed in the interchange of patriotic sentiments on the part of the assembly, and social hilarity, eloquent addresses being delivered by M. Paul Arpin, the president of the festival, and others.

The British Ambassador, Sir H. L. Bulwer, has addressed a letter to the Secretary of State, showing a favourable disposition on the part of the English Government as to opening the navigation of the St. Lawrence to American shipping. Mr. Bulwer states that this measure will be agreed on by his Government, provided the Reciprocity Bill now before Congress shall pass that body.

CALIFORNIA.

We have dates from California to April 1, by the steamers Empire City and Georgina, which had arrived at New York, bringing the passengers and mails of the steam-ship California, which reached Panama on the 23rd ult., with 1,700,000 dollars of gold dust on freight, and 230 passengers, who would again for a somewhat smaller amount to Messrs. Alonzo Gross and Joshua Holdrige, merchants of the same place, for a very high premium. Your own knowledge, temperance readers, will again have offered 8200 dollars for it above its intrinsic value. It is estimated that there are about four pounds of common quartz mixed up with the precious metal, as is generally the case in large specimens.

The snow is said to retard operations on certain sections of the placer, especially those far up on the Yuba and Feather rivers. We have seen several who have come down within the last few days, preferring to wait a little longer. Mr. D. S. Wilberby came down on Monday last, with another lump of gold, weighing some six pounds, which he found within a few rods of the 14 lb. lump that was taken out by his party, at the Auburn dry diggings, three or four weeks ago. This specimen contains about two pounds of quartz; hence the lump is not so intrinsically valuable as Mr. W. would like to have it. He has been offer d, however, 1000 dollars for the prize, and we think it worth more, as it is unquestionably a very fine specimen

We have seen the eighth wonder of the world—we have held in our hands the Sonorian lump of gold, weighing 23lb. 6 oz. The following is a brief history and description of this splendid specimen of the precious metal. During the month of January of the present year, three Sonorian Mexicans were following their mining pursuits in the arroyo of the town of Sonora, and discovered this "pile;" but they (possessing rather erratic tempers, being flushed with their wonderful success, and soon dissipating all of the rosy coin) in a few days, had squandered the whole amount in "riotous living." The prize afterwards fell into the hands of our worthy friends, the firm of Lansford and Co., of Sonora, who sold it again for a somewhat smaller amount to Messrs. Alonzo Gross and Joshua Holdrige, merchants of the same place, for a very high premium. To our own knowledge, temperance readers, we again have offered 8200 dollars for it above its intrinsic value. It is estimated that there are about four pounds of common quartz mixed up with the precious metal, as is generally the case in large specimens.

WEST INDIES.

The mail which arrived this week brings no news of interest from the islands, the accounts from which are rather more favourable. The weather having improved for the growing crops. The introduction of cotton planting in Jamaica was exciting a great deal of attention, and from the experiments made there seems to be but little doubt that the cultivation of this important plant will be very successful.

Some of the cocoa fields on the north side parishes have been attacked with a disease similar to that which affected the potatoes in England. The islands generally were healthy, but stood in much need of rain.

INDIA.

Accounts to the 17th ult. from Bombay, from Calcutta to the 6th, and from Madras to the 13th, have been received. These advices are unfavourable to the probability of railway communication being established in India.

In Scinde active hostilities continue on the Kohat frontier: the Affredies hold the fastnesses, and a new expedition is preparing against them, which has been hastened by a new atrocity committed by those savage highland borderers. Dr. Healy, of the Bengal army, lately posted to the 1st Punjab Cavalry, new stationed at Kohat, was proceeding to join that regiment by the western pass, which was supposed to be still open, when, on the 20th of March, within a few miles of Kohat, he was set upon by the hill men, his groom and grass-cutter killed on the spot, and himself so severely wounded that he died immediately after reaching Kohat, whither he was carried by Captain Daly, who went to look after him with a party the moment he heard of the attack. The fatal wound was a gash in the skull eight inches long.

A disturbance having broken out in Oudh, a detachment of our troops, consisting of a wing of the 10th Bengal Native Infantry, and a couple of guns, with artillerymen, was ordered on the 9th March to proceed by the eastern tured from pirates, a little out of this harbour, three fishing Junks lately taken from the owners, some of whom had been wounded and killed. The pirates had transferred their guns, firearms, and spears to their prizes, being better adapted for their purposes, and had just received a reinforcement of men, ammunition, and provisions from this settlement. Of the pirates, 15 were brought in prisoners, 15 are supposed to have been drowned, and the remainder, about 20, escaped.

Our advices from Shanghae are down to the 20th of March. The population of the town and neighbourhood of Shanghae were suffering from severe famine, consequent upon the late inundations, and it was feared that pestilence might follow.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

The House met for the first time after the Whitsun recess on Thursday.

OUR RELATIONS WITH FRANCE.—LORD PALMERSTON'S EXPLANATIONS.

Lord PALMERSTON rose to make a statement in reference to our relations with France in connexion with Greece. He said that there had been certain imputations of inconsistency between the statement he had made in the House on Thursday last and the knowledge he was then supposed to have possessed of the state of affairs. He detailed the interviews which he had had, de die in diem, with M. Drouyn de Lhuys, so to that Thursday, and contended that, inasmuch as he (Lord Palmerston) could have no idea that General de la Hitte would have taken the step of reading his letter to the French Assembly before that body were even in possession of the documents necessary to explain it, and as he had reason to think that the explanations he had given M. de Lhuys, and had requested him to communicate to his Government, would have modified, if they did not remove, the dissatisfaction on the part of France, it would have been most mischievous and culpable in a Minister to have declared to that House that a feeling existed which had probably ceased, and to have thereby fastened the French Government to a dissatisfaction. He next examined the letter of General de la Hitte, which, he said, charged a breach of faith on the part of the English Government. The papers in the possession of members would show that the functions of Baron Gros were not suspended in consequence of any act of Mr. Wyse, but solely by the Baron himself. Mr. Wyse had not only desired their continuance, but had refused to admit the validity of the grounds of their termination. And, after Baron Gros had communicated that suspension, Mr. Wyse, so far from taking an early opportunity of hostility, made, through Baron Gros, a proposal to the Athenian Government, which, if accepted, would have satisfied our undisputed claims, and left untouched those upon which Mr. Wyse and Baron Gros differed. The Baron received this proposal on the 24th of April, declaring that he was no longer an official mediator, and therefore could not communicate it officially, but could do so non-officially, and he thought that by five o'clock on the 25th it would be accepted. Mr. Wyse suspended all hostilities till after that hour had passed without any such acceptance. His Lordship then stated that there had been no departure on Mr Wyse's part from the original understanding on the subject. We had accepted the good offices of France for the sake of obtaining that satisfaction which we had already begun to obtain for ourselves. He cited the earlier despatches of the French Ambassador (especially those of the 16th and 22d of February, and 22d of March), and also a subsequent despatch of General de la Hitte, to show that the "principles" of our claim were not to be taken into consideration by the mediating Power. Now, the point on which the last disputes arose was the demand by Mr. Wyse that the Greek Government should give an undertaking to examine M. Pacifico's claim in regard to the destruction of his Portuguese documents, and to pay the amount when settled. To this demand Baron Gros agreed, but subsequently altered his mind and retracted his consent, asserting that Pacifico's claim did not deserve any serious attention, and that he could consent to its being examined only, without any further undertaking being given. But this Mr. Wyse considered a direct negation of the principle of our demand, and could not consent to it, or to refer it (as desired by Baron Gros) to his Government at home in the face of his original instructions, and still less in that of the instructions sent him on the 25th of March. He expressed regret at what had taken place; remarked that he had said nothing to increase the misunderstanding which existed; and added that he could not dismiss the hope that it might be set satisfactorily. He entreated members, if the matter were to be discussed before the result was known, not to use language likely to annoy the French nation; and he concluded by saying, that, whatever might be the issue of the affair, France would do her Majesty's Government the justice to admit that it had shown no want of good intentions or of friendly feeling.

After a few words from Mr. J. Walsh, Lord Mahon, Mr. G. S. Smythe, Mr. H. Drummond, and Colonel Dunne,

Mr. DISRAELI ironically congratulated the Government on the frankness of its present explanation, but could not understand why we could not as well have had it a week ago. He did not conceive that any adequate reason had been assigned for the presence of our fleet in the Mediterranean, and he believed that the real cause was kept back. He thought, however, that it might in some degree be inferred from other documents than those contained in the present question; and he hinted that a demonstration had been rendered necessary by a "crossing" of the two "stars" our Colonial and our Foreign Minister—the Maltese Mediterranean pensioners. After the statement of Lord Parliament ought to have had these papers as early as the French Assembly, he commented upon Lord Palmerston's defence as containing no allusion to the three principal points of the question, namely, the Convention, the Islets, and the feeling of Russia. He wondered that, after a week's cramming, no better defence could be made. He had gathered from the despatch from Lord Normanby to Lord Palmerston that the French Government considered it had been disingenuously treated, and he did not think that Government believed that, when it sent an Ambassador here to settle the question, the question was to be settled at Athens. Passing in sarcastic review our ruptured relations with other nations, he called upon Lord John Russell, as the stand up like a man, and inform the House whether her Majesty had any allies left.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL explained that there was no necessity for Lord Palmerston's laying any stress on the convention of the 18th April, inasmuch as on the 23rd Baron Gros had declared his mission ended, and the four or five days between those dates were insufficient for making the London convention available in Athens. One of the first points, he continued, which had been settled by the French Ambassador, on opening the negotiation here, was, that the question involved in Athens. Adverting to his replies on Friday night, the noble Lord said, that when he spoke he had not read the letter of General de la Hitte, but had only read Lord Normanby's despatch, describing his interview with General de la Hitte. In that despatch the General was represented as having said that the recal of the Ambassador was natural, the mission on which he was sent having ended. But he stated that, in a despatch received that day from Lord Normanby, these words were stated to have been used only in a civil and complimentary way, and that General de la Hitte had disclaimed the remembrance of using them, and therefore Lord Normanby could not hold him to them. But Lord John Russell said, that it was not his fault if he had placed a more pacific meaning upon words before him than they really bore. He regretted that words had fallen from Mr. Smythe which were likely to increase the misunderstanding, and he deprecated any such tone; concluding by saying that there was no reasonable effort to restore good feeling between France and England which her Majesty's Government was unprepared to make.

The subject then dropped.

The House then went into Committee of Supply, when several votes were taken on account of the Navy Estimates.—Adjourned.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

DEPARTURE OF THE COURT FOR OSBORNE.

Her Majesty the Queen, we rejoice to announce, has perfectly recovered from her recent accouchement, and with the infant Prince continues to enjoy excellent health.

On Tuesday morning, at half-past nine o'clock, the ceremony of churching her Majesty was performed in the private chapel at Buckingham Palace, by the Hon. and Rev. Gerald Wellesley, her Majesty's domestic chaplain. His Royal Highness Prince Albert and the Dowager Lady Lyttelton were present. In the course of the morning, her Majesty and the Prince Consort walked in the gardens of Buckingham Palace, and subsequently received a visit from his serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen.

On Wednesday afternoon, the Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, Prince Alfred, the Princess Royal, the Princess Alice, the Princess Helena, the Princess Louisa, and the infant Prince, and attended by the Countess of Gainsborough, Lady in Waiting; Hon. Caroline Cavendish, Maid of Honour in Waiting; the Master of the Household; General Wemyss, Equerry in Waiting; Lieut.-Col. Francis Hugh Seymour, Equerry in Waiting to Prince Albert; and Mr. Birch, left town for Osborne House, Isle of Wight. Her Majesty and his Royal Highness were conducted to their carriage by the Lord Steward, the Lord Chamberlain, the Master of the Horse, the Vice-Chamberlain, Lord Waterpark, Lieut.-Col. the Hon. C. B. Phipps, Viscount Clifden, Colonel the Hon. A. N. Hood, Colonel Wylde, Captain Francis Seymour, and Lieut.-Col. the Hon. A. Gordon. The august party went from Buckingham Palace in five carriages to the Nine Elms station, and travelled by a special train on the London and South-Western Railway to Gosport, from whence they crossed to Osborne in the Fairy Royal steam yacht.

During the week her Majesty has received visits from the Duchess of Kent, the Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke of Cambridge, the Duchess d'Orleans and the Prince de Joinville, the Duke and Duchess de Nemours; and on Monday her Majesty granted Lord John Russell an audience at Buckingham Palace.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent arrived at Osborne on Thursday, on a visit to the Queen and the Prince Consort.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Viscount Clifden, Captain Francis Seymour, and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. A. Gordon, honoured the Earl of Rosse with a visit on Saturday evening, at the noble Earl's levee, as President of the Royal Society.

THE QUEEN OF THE BELGIANS.—Her Majesty the Queen of the Belgians took leave of the Queen and Prince Albert on Wednesday, and quitted Buckingham Palace at seven o'clock, attended by the Countess Van der Straten (Dame du Palais) and Colonel de Meerkerke, for Clarence House. St. James's, where her Majesty partook of luncheon with her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, and afterwards left, at half-past one o'clock, for London-bridge terminus, proceeding to St. Leonard's, attended by her suite.

FASHIONABLE ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Marchioness (Dowager) of Downshire gave a grand banquet on Monday evening, at the family mansion in Grosvenor-square, to her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester and a select party. Her Royal Highness arrived in a sedan chair shortly before seven o'clock, attended by Lady Georgiana Bathurst and Colonel the Hon. A. Liddell. There were assembled to meet her Royal Highness, the Duke of Cleveland, the Marquis of Ely, the Earl and Countess Talbot, Viscount Combermere, the Dowager Lady Cowley, Lord Sandys, Lord Marcus Hill, Lord Redesdale, Lord and Lady Lyttelton, Lord Charlotte Chetwynd, and Colonel and Lady Mary Wood. Later in the evening her Ladyship received a select circle to meet the Royal Duchess.

Lady Combermere assembled the élite of the aristocracy on Friday last, at her beautiful mansion in Belgrave-square. His Grace the Duke of Wellington was among the earliest to pay his respects to the noble Viscountess, and about 300 leading members of the aristocracy were present at the réunion. Mademoiselle Anichini was in attendance during the evening, and delighted the company by her exquisite performance of several vocal morceaux.

Her Majesty the Queen of the Belgians and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent went to Kew on Monday, and paid a visit to her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge. On Saturday her Majesty, accompanied by the Duchess d'Orleans, paid a visit to her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, at Gloucester-house.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester received her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge and a select party at dinner on Thursday, at Gloucester-house. The Royal Duchess afterwards received a small evening party.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge returned to town on Tuesday, from the Royal Military College, at Sandhurst. The Royal Duke paid a visit to her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, at Gloucester-terrace, in the afternoon. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge have taken up their residence at Cambridge House for the season.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

An excellent meeting at Manchester has been the sole feature of the present week, as regards sport; in the betting circles, however, the movements have been highly important, the favourites having fluctuated to an extent that proves the Derby to be one of the most "open" races known for many years. It is expected that six or seven and twenty will go to the post, and lucky will be the prophet, who, from such a host of evenly-matched competitors, can select the winner. It is scarcely necessary to say that the ensuing week will be devoted to the great carnival on Epsom Downs, commencing on Tuesday, and occupying four days. The Derby comes off on Wednesday, and the Oaks on Friday, and each will, for the first time, be the second race. The Craven and Woodcote Stakes will be the "attraction" of Tuesday, and that day it did not thin out, as is usual on the third—there is every prospect of good entries for the plates, &c. The aquatic register is "blank," and the only cricket fixture is the Alphabetical match at Lords, on Monday.

TATTERSALLS.

THURSDAY.—There was a full attendance this afternoon, but not much done beyond checking books: the horses most fancied were Bolingbroke, Nigger, Miser, and Voltigeur; Clincher slightly worse, Pitsford "weak," and the Italian on the "go."

DERBY

9 to 2 agst Bolingbroke (t)	12 to 1 agst Voltigeur	40 to 1 agst Blarney
5 to 1 — Gilbelter	25 to 1 — Italian	50 to 1 — Lady Geraldine
8 to 1 — Miner	33 to 1 — Gladiateur	Field
8 to 1 — Nigger	40 to 1 — Cariboo	1000 to 10 — Python
10 to 1 — Pitsford	40 to 1 — Maroon	1000 to 10 — St. Fabian
	1000 to 15 agst Alonzo

OAKS.

8 to 1 agst Tingle	8 to 1 agst Eliza Middleton	10 to 1 agst Exotic filly
	10 to 1 agst Gilly flower

MANCHESTER RACES.—WEDNESDAY.

The TRIAL STAKES of 5 sovs each, and 40 added.—Mr. Nicoll's Woolwich, 1. Mr Dawson nd. Mark Tapley, 2.

The BIENNIAL STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 50 added.—Mr. Merry's Louis Napoleon, 1. Mr. J. Osborne's Black Doctor, 2.

The UNION CUP of 200 sovs, added to a handicap of 10 sovs each.—Mr. Colllingwood's Administrator, 1. Mr. A. Phillips's Zayda, 2.

The WELTER CUP of 100 sovs, with 50 added.—Mr. W. Kemp nd General Sale 1. Mr. Nichols nd Antelope, 2.

The PLATE of £60.—Mr. White's Panope, 1. Captain Lane's Baronet, 2.

THURSDAY

The ST. LEGER STAKES of 10 sovs each.—Mr. Hesseltine's Penang (Bartholomew), 1. Mr. Davies's Made Safe, 2.

The MANCHESTER TRADES CUP of 300 sovs.—Lord Stanley's Legerdemain (Charlton), 1. Mr. Murphy's Dough, 2.

The ARTISAN STAKES of 10 sovs each, and 50 added.—Capt. Cunningham's The Meane (Evans), 1. Mr. Hasseltine's Andalusian, 2.

The TWO-YEAR-OLD STAKES of 10 sovs each, and 50 added.—Lord Caledon's b c by Simoom out of Urganda (Marlow), 1. Mr. J. Osborne's Black Doctor, 2.

HER MAJESTY'S PLATE of 100 Guineas.—Mr. Murphy's Dough (Magee), 1. Captain E. Haworth's Baroness, 2.

The SELLING STAKES of 5 sovs each, and 30 added.—Mr. W. Green's Clara (Whitehouse), 1. Mr. Davies's Made Safe, 2.

FRIDAY.

The CASTLE IRWELL STAKES.—The Monk, 1. Fernhill, 2.

The TWO-YEARS OLD STAKES.—Tightwaist, 1. Valentine, 2.

The SALFORD BOROUGH CUP.—Woolwich, 1. Uriel, 2.

HARPENDEN RACES.—WEDNESDAY.

The TWO-YEAR-OLDS STAKES, of 5 sovs each, and 30 added.—Baron Rothschild's br f (Simpson), 1. Mr. Webb's Vigilant (Crickmere), 2.

The LADIES' PURSE of 30 sovs.—Mr. Leigh's Reindeer (Captain Little), 1. Mr. Stephenson's Goodwood (Captain Douglas), 2.

The HARPENDEN HANDICAP of 5 sovs each, and 40 added. Mr. Douglas's Sir Gilbert (Abrahams), 1. Mr. Salt's Sam Rood (R. Johnson), 2.

BURNING OF THE "OCEAN QUEEN."—An instance of spontaneous combustion of coal, by which a fine vessel, the Ocean Queen, belonging to London, upwards of 600 tons burden, was totally lost, was reported on Monday at Lloyd's. The vessel cleared at Cardiff on the 4th inst. for Alexandria, and was bound to Suez, for the supply of the Indian steamers. On the 21st of December, the captain was informed by one of the crew that smoke was issuing forth from the hold forward, and he suspected the coal had ignited. The hatches were at once removed, when instantly flames burst forth, and every effort made to subdue them proved unavailing. The ship was then in lat. 22° 30' south, and lon. 53° east, some 700 or 800 miles distant from land. The crew, after an unsuccessful attempt to confine the fire to the hold, were compelled to take to the boats, and, after enduring much suffering, they were picked up by a French homeward bound ship, 400 miles from the spot where the Ocean Queen was burned. They were safely landed at the Mauritius. By a recent return there appear to have been no fewer than 14 ships destroyed by fire from similar causes during the last four years.

COMPOSITE COLUMNS.—No. V.

BY ALBERT SMITH.

THE PANORAMANIA.

OW many more of these entertaining exhibitions we shall have in London, it is impossible to tell. The tide has set in so strongly in their favour, that the world will be unable, in a year or two, to furnish new subjects. Already we hear talked of, amongst others, panoramas of "The Paddington Canal, from its mouth to the Second Cataract, at the locks on the Harrow-road;" of "The Overland Mail from the City to Greenwich;" of the course of "The Queen's Visit to Claremont;" of "The Thames, from Chelsea to Rotherhithe," with many others. Still more in detail, we find some spirited young artists about to produce a panorama of "Smith-street, Westminster," with every house; and we ourselves have a grand notion of "Oxford-street, from its rise in Holborn to its fall into the Bayswater-road." We shall also depict every house, on both sides of the way at once, by a novel perspective arrangement; and, for a small consideration, shall allow tradesmen to attach what placards they choose to their establishment. Amongst our "effects" will be Tottenham-court-road, by sunrise; The Somnos, at the Regent Cornus, with clouds of dust; The Pantheon by Night, with the illuminated clock at the Princess's Theatre (safe for applause); The Departure of a Caravan (by order of the police) from the corner of Vere-street; The Broken-down Hansom, by sunset; a touching spectacle; and Night on the Hyde-park Proverbs, with bivouac of vagrants. We calculate upon making a great deal of money by this exhibition.

We have heard, and are allowed to speak, of two other panoramas now painting. The first will be "Captain Cook's Voyages Round the World." To this stupendous work even the beautiful diorama at the Gallery of Illustration will be as nothing. It will take a month to see—moving night and day; and a building is being erected on the site of the old Fleet Prison, with every accommodation for visitors. A post-office, beds, food, messengers, &c. &c., will be established. The hungry traveller will find ready for his consumption; and if over heated by the excitement of the tour he may share in the

THE GREAT PYRAMID OF CHOPS

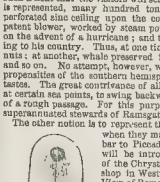
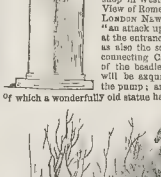
RUIN OF THE TEMPLE OF ICES

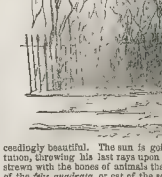
with equal facility. In certain latitudes, stoves will raise the temperature to such a heat that the visitors will scarcely be able to breathe; and when a storm is represented, many hundred tons of water will be forced down through the perforated zinc ceiling upon the company. An immense application of Clark's patent blower, worked by steam power, will blow everybody from their places on the advent of a hurricane; and the restaurateur will change his carte according to his country. Thus, at one time he will have nothing but yams and cocoanuts; at another, whale preserved in oil, as sardines are; anon, cockatoo pie; and so on. No attempt, however, will be made to carry out the anthropophagic principles of the natives of the South Sea Islands, as being repulsive to educated tastes. The great contrivance of all is one which will cause the entire building, at certain sea points, to swing backwards and forwards, producing all the results of a rough passage. For this purpose, the attendants have been chosen from superannuated stewards of Ramsgate and Boulogne boats.

The other notion is to represent the course taken by Mr. Straggles and party when they made out the north-west passage from Templebar to Piccadilly. Every object of interest on the route will be introduced, commencing with the Bounding Ball of the Chrystal Fountain, in the window of the first fillershop in Westminster, after passing the City gates. The View of Rome from the office windows of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will next be shown. A striking episode of "an attack upon travellers by a horde of savage Bus-cads, at the entrance of the Strand," will be especially effective; as also the solemn grandeur of the lonely Exeter Pass, connecting Catherine and Wellington-street, with a view of the beadle by moonlight. The Covent-garden oasis will be exquisitely portrayed, with a halt of pilgrims at the pump; and the great Leicester Desert (in the centre of which a wonderfully old statue has been lately discovered) is spoken of as exceedingly beautiful. The sun is going down behind the Western Literary Institution, throwing his last rays upon the dreary waste in question. The track is strewn with the bones of animals that has died there—at present, chiefly those of the fells quadrata, or cat of the squares. A solitary Orienta figure, carrying a broom, is seen in the distance; and at the side of the road some dervishes are dancing, howling, and offering relics for sale. These chiefly consist of long alphabets, or amulets, and magic compounds for turning halfpence into half-crowns, and making brass candlesticks glow as silver in the neon sun.





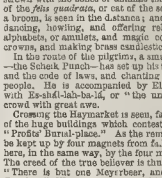
In the room of the pilgrims, a small but holy man, of most diminutive stature—the Schick Punch—has set up his tent, and is teaching his amazing philosophy and the code of laws, and chanting verses of the Koran in a shrill voice to the people. He is accompanied by Et Tobi, or the holy dog; and his arguments with Feejee-Islande-la, or "the unconvinced stranger," are listened to by the crowd with great awe.



Crossing the Haymarket in seen, far down to the left, the Opera House—one of the huge buildings which excites in the mind of the humour of being the "Profits' Burial-place." As the remains of Mahomed are fabulously reported to be kept up by four magnets from falling, so the remains of singers are sustained here, in the same way, by the four morning papers.

The creed of the true believer is thus translated: —

"There is but one Meyerbeer, and Marlo is his prophet." We must confess, in this place, to a great horror of Washington Irving's. Mahomed did not die as he has represented. Driven by contentions from Mecca and Medina, he came over to England, and established shampooing baths at Brighton and Ryder-street, St. James's, which are still extant.



The last point of interest is the Egyptian Hall—the Karnac of Piccadilly. It is the point of the junction of the Mississippi with the Nile, which so long puzzled travellers; and its central portion has been proved to be inhabited by pigmies, Indians, Boajeamans, and wonderful things generally. It was founded by the great traveller Belzoni, during the Georgian era, nearly thirty years before Lind; and in it were deposited the treasures of the still older Memphis. This will conclude the panorama.

DON'T BE LOVE ALL MOANEY!

The Duke of Cambridge points out the course to be taken by that learned body:—

The commission, as is reported to have been officially declared in the House of Commons, would be without power to compel evidence. This being so, persons in positions of trust in the University, and in colleges, may think it their duty to decline giving evidence before the commission on the matters committed to their trust. And if this should occur the whole evidence brought before the commission will be that of persons who have no official knowledge of the state of the case, and may very possibly be coloured by partial feelings and opinions adverse to the University and its recent proceedings.

The Earl and Countess Brownlow and the Ladies Cust have arrived in Belgrave-square from Belton-house, near Grantham, for the season.

LICHFIELD "GREENHILL BOWER," ON WHIT-MONDAY.—THE PROCESSION PASSING THE STATUE OF DR. JOHNSON.

LICHFIELD "GREENHILL BOWER."

This very ancient festival was celebrated on Whit-Monday, at Lichfield, with more than its usual ceremonies. The origin of it was a "Court of Arrray or View of Men and Arms," in existence long anterior to the Charter of Incorporation of the City, which had its first establishment in the reign of King Edward the Second, in the year 1387, so that the festival cannot be less than 500 years old! In the olden times, processions were made by the public officers of the city, and the dozeners (constables) of each ward bore tutelary saints, for which are now substituted posies, or emblems of their trade.

The origin of this mixture of a religious and military custom, which is very ancient in this city, has been variously explained. It is most probable that the Campus Martius gave rise to this practice, which was an annual assembly of the people upon May day, when they confederated together to defend the kingdom against all foreigners and enemies, as mentioned in the laws of Edward the Confessor. Until within the last thirty years, the procession was a great feature of the day, but since then, and up to the last three or four years, the "Bower" had not maintained its celebrity, but increased vigour, and the entire support of the civic authorities and the principal inhabitants, brought it into new life, and this year was entirely successful.

At an early hour in the morning the bells of the different churches were ringing, and the streets were decorated with triumphal arches, and the roofs of the houses gaily decked with laurels and flags. The railway trains from Nottingham, Leicester, Derby, Birmingham, Dudley, Walsall, the Potteries, and all parts upon the London and North-Western line, deposited their myriads of people at the Lichfield stations; and there could not have been less than 20,000 persons conveyed into the city by these and other conveyances.

The procession, at eleven o'clock, made its appearance through the great gateway of the handsome Guildhall, amid the firing of the bells from the adjoining belfry of St. Mary's Church. This proceeded in the following order:—

Constables with Halberds
Tabor and Pipe, decorated with Ribbons
Tom Fool and Maid Marian
Morris Dancers dancing Sarabands, clashing their Staves
Two Men with Banners
Herald on Horseback, in full suite
The City Arms
Esquire on Horseback, in full suite
Full Band of Music
Police
Men with Banners
Wombwell's Brass Band
A KNIGHT OF LYCHFELD,
Tom. Richard III., in Bataille arale, bearing on hys Banderolle yn Cross of Sainte George; hys hors rich with Trappinge
The High Constables
Chief Superintendent of Police
The High Sheriff
City Police
Gaoler and Sheriff's Officer
City Chief
Sergeants at Mace
THE WORSHIPFUL THE MAYOR
The Magistrates
The Town Clerk
Citizens and Bower Committee
Men with Banners
Police, &c. &c

Up Bore-street, St. John-street, Bird-street, Market-street, St. Mary's-square (round Johnson's house and statue), Tamworth-street, on to the Greenhill, where, according to custom, a good old English fare was partaken of in the gaily ornamented "Bower." The healths of the Mayor, H. Greene, Esq., and the "Knyghte," having been drunk, the Mayor (John P. Dyott, jun., Esq.) toasted the inauguration of the festival, and gave "Success to trade and the supporters of this ancient Bower." The authorities then returned with the procession to the Guildhall. The opening ceremonies having been duly performed, and the "Court of Array" proclaimed, Wombell's menagerie, Holloway's and Douglas', and many other shows now besought the holiday and pleasure seekers, and the life and bustle of the Bower set in.

The Committee and the posies, with bands of music, perambulated the city all day long, calling at the houses of the principal citizens to invite them to the Bower, and taste their Staffordshire ale and old-fashioned dry port wine.

The magnificent Gothic Cathedral, which had been kindly ordered by the Dean to be set open all day, was a great attraction to thousands of enthusiastic admirers; while the beautiful Stowe Valley and far-famed Borrow Cop had an abundance of admirers. The weather was, on the whole, extremely favourable, and all classes co-operated in the enjoyment of this old and valued festival, affording an amusement to the people of the good, time-honoured, and purely English character.

WHITSUNTIDE HOLIDAYS.

The South-Western Railway.—A far greater number of passengers left the terminus on the Waterloo-road on Monday last than has been known to travel on the line since its opening. Excursion tickets were issued at half fares to almost every station on the line. Before twelve o'clock at noon upwards of 2000 persons paid to go to Hampton Court station, whilst many thousands availed themselves of the cheapness of the fares to Richmond, Kew, and Twickenham. The traffic during the day to Windsor was greater than on any previous occasion. The excess of traffic was not confined to the short or pleasure lines, but an immense number went to Southampton, Gosport, Portsmouth, and other distant stations. To meet this excess over the ordinary traffic special trains were despatched at certain intervals, and, with the exception of the extra work to the guards, porters, and officials of the railway, and a little extra pushing and squeezing upon the platform, every thing passed off remarkably well.

The Great Western Railway.—The directors of this company, in order to cater for the amusement of the holiday folks, issued excursion tickets from Paddington to Reading at remarkably low fares, viz. third-class, there and back, at 3s. This had the effect of drawing vast crowds of the inhabitants from London into Berkshire; whilst some thousands of the country folks, on the other hand, anxious to see London, came by the cheap trains, and at once set off to visit some of the most popular places of amusement.

The Brighton and South Coast Railway.—Excursion trains, on a most extensive and unprecedented low scale, were run on this line during Monday. The announcement of from "London to Brighton and back for 3s. 6d." attracted such an immense concourse of persons as was never before seen waiting at London to visit that popular watering-place. Trains of vast extent were, however provided for the accommodation of the public.

The Gravesend Railway.—From the hour of opening the doors of the terminus of this railway on Monday, an immense crowd besieged the place, anxious to pay a visit to famous old Gravesend and its many attractions. To meet the accommodation of the public, extra trains were run at stated intervals, and each succeeding hour or half-hour discharged such countless crowds as have been rarely seen in the town.

The same state of things occurred with little modification on Tuesday, and in some degree on Wednesday.

SERGEANTS AT MACE. SWORD BEARER. CIVIC

LICHFIELD "GREENHILL BOWER."

LICHFIELD "GREENHILL BOWER."—THE MORRIS DANCERS.

PROCESSION UP HOAD-HILL, THE SITE OF THE MEMORIAL.

TESTIMONIAL TO SIR JOHN BARROW, BART.

On Wednesday week, the 15th inst., the foundation-stone of the Barrow monument was laid, with great ceremony, on the Hill of Hoad, near Ulverston. At an early hour, the bells of St. Mary's Church rang merrily, and above the Town Bank (associated with the early life of Sir John Barrow) waved the national flag, sent from the Admiralty-office for the occasion. The town, as early as eight o'clock, presented an animated appearance: some hundreds of the inhabitants might then be seen congregated in groups in every quarter, which, as the day advanced, were swelled by thousands more, who flocked in from the surrounding neighbourhood, to wait the formation of the procession.

MEMORIAL TO SIR JOHN BARROW, BART.

It began to move at about one o'clock, under the direction of Sergeant-Major Bates (W.), of the Duke of Lancaster's Own Yeomanry Cavalry, in the following order:—

Superintendent Davidson, and the members of the Ulverston Constabulary.
The Ulverston Brass Band.
The Pensioners, Naval and Military
The Members of the various Friendly Societies of the Town, with the Flags, Banners, and Emblems of the different Orders, arranged according to seniority, viz.:—
The Union Friendly Society
The Morecam'e Lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows.
The Lightburne Star Lodge (branch) of the Independent Order of Oddfellows
The Furness Star Lodge of the Grand United Order of Oddfellows.
The Friendship, Love, and Truth Lodge (branch) of the Grand United Order of Oddfellows.
The Band of the Messrs Salmon.
The Scholars of the Public Schools, arranged also according to seniority, headed by their Masters and Teachers, as follows:—

The Town Bank Scholars (day).	The Independent Chapel Scholars (Sunday)
The Town Bank Scholars (Sunday).	The Roman Catholic Scholars (day and Sunday)
The National Scholars (day).
The National Scholars (Sunday).	The Ulverston Union Workhouse Scholars
The Wesleyan Scholars (Sunday).

The Regimental Band of the 32nd Light Infantry.
SIR GEORGE BARROW and MR. JOHN BARROW and friends, accompanied by the Committee and Subscribers.
Mr. Trimen, the Architect.
Mr. Smith, Contractor for the Works.
Messrs. Brocklebank, bearing Trowel and Level.
The Clergy, Magistrates, and Inhabitants of the Town and neighbourhood.

In this order the procession advanced at one o'clock, proceeding from the Market-place, through King-street, up Sontergate, by the Town Bank School, where it halted, whilst some verses, written by Miss Agnes Strickland, for the occasion, were sung by the children of the Infant School.

At the foot of the Bank, a triumphal arch, decorated with evergreens and flags, had been erected, inscribed, "Be his the palm that merits it;" over which was placed the arms of the Barrow family. Within a few yards, but of smaller dimensions, another was placed over the gateway of the occupation road, leading to Hoad, bearing the motto, "Virtus survives the grave." Flags were also seen flying on the site of the Monument; on the steeple of St. Mary's Church; on the vessels in the port; and upon the straw-roofed cot in which the late Baronet first saw the light. King-street, Market-street, Upper Brook-street, &c., appeared one continuous display of flags, banners, and mottoes.

The procession then advanced by the serpentine road to the summit of the Hill of Hoad, in the order shown in the accompanying Illustration. This hill has many claims for this mark of respect to be erected on its summit. It was the favourite resort of Sir John in his days of boyhood. The marks of his spade upon the hill bear witness of this, for he was one of those who first laid out the walks and erected a building there, the foundation of which building was only cleared away last summer. From Hoad may be seen the cottage of his birth, at Dragley Beck; the school in which he was educated—the town through which he daily passed to school, and the churchyard in which lay the remains of his parents. The prospect from the summit comprises some of the finest scenery in the Lake district.

The procession having taken ground, and so placed as to give a clear and uninterrupted area round the base of the Monument, the ceremony commenced by the children singing a hymn, written for the occasion, by Mr. John Stanyan Bigg, and set to music by Mr. R. Daniel, organist of the parish church.

Mr. Smith, the builder, in a brief address, presented a beautifully wrought silver trowel, with ivory handle, to Sir George Barrow, together with a bottle containing the several current coins of the realm; also a copy of the Ulverston Advertiser; which having been deposited by the son of Sir George Barrow in the cavity prepared for its reception, Sir George proceeded to lay the foundation-stone, assisted by his brother, Mr. John Barrow, amidst the cheers of the multitude. The stone bears the following inscription:—

ON THE 15TH MAY, A.D. 1850,
IN THE 14TH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF
HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY, QUEEN VICTORIA,
SIR GEORGE BARROW, BART.,
AND JOHN BARROW, ESQ., F.R.S., DEPOSITED THIS STONE TO RECORD THE COMMEMORATION OF THE TESTIMONIAL TO THE LATE SIR JOHN BARROW, BART.
ANDREW TRIMEN, ARCHITECT.

Three times three cheers were then called for, which were given in a most enthusiastic manner.

Sir George Barrow then said—My esteemed friends, I had almost said my fellow townsmen, from the hearty reception I have met with. This is a memorable day for Ulverston. I am here not to assist in raising a family monument only, though I hope that in the duty I am performing, I am obeying one of God's commandments, the first with promise, in honouring my father, but I am here, on the part of the noblemen and gentlemen of England, who are subscribers to the monument, to lay the foundation of a testimonial to record the high sense they entertain of the public worth of your revered townsman and my beloved parent. It is with just pride and real gratitude that I find myself called upon to take so prominent a part in this interesting ceremony; and the more so, as I am assured that you are content that the immediate descendant of your honoured townsman should hold that position which might have been conferred on some eminent person. I rejoice to think that the departed worth of one who was born here will now be brought home, as it were, to your daily memories by the erection of this memorial; and I fervently trust that it may continue for ages an ornament to this beautiful district—a place of resort for its inhabitants and for strangers, where many a tribute of respect will be paid; a beacon for the shipping of the bay, and an encouraging token for the guidance of the rising generation in the paths which lead to honour and renown. My kind friend your excellent pastor will pray for a blessing on this undertaking; but I will offer one petition to the Author of all Good, in which I am sure you will all join:—

O Lord! prosper Thou our work upon us—
Prosper Thou our handy-work.

The Rev. R. Gwillym then delivered an impressive prayer; which was followed by the Lord's Prayer and Benediction.

Soon after the devotional part of the ceremony was concluded, three times three were given for Lady Barrow, which Sir George Barrow acknowledged.

Cheers were then given for Mr. John Barrow; the Lancashire Witches; for Major Davis; the Rev. R. Gwillym; and the Clergy.

Four verses of the 112th Psalm were then sung to the music of the 100th, by the children

The ceremony concluded by the Regimental Band playing the National Anthem. This band, twenty-four in number, sent forth the most ravishing martial strains, and was certainly one of the great attractions of the day.

Never has the hoary Hill of Hoad witnessed an exhibition so imposing as that which the proceedings presented. The congregated thousands who had gathered from all quarters to witness the ceremony; the troops of bright-eyed children belonging to the various day schools in the town; the members of the different Friendly Societies, each bearing their appropriate badges; the banners of the various orders flaunting in the sunshine; the bursts of martial music that at intervals startled the echoes that slumbered in the surrounding valleys and rural dells—all conspired to form a very impressive scene.

The procession having re-formed, returned by the western side of the hill, on the serpentine paths recently made, agreeing by the gate at Oubas Hill; thence by the Canal-head, Sunderland-terrace, Fountain-street, King-street, to the market-place, and dispersed.

The Friendly Societies were afterwards treated to dinner at their several Lodges. The children of the Infant School were regaled by their patron, the Rev R. Gwillym, at his residence, at Stockbridge; and all the other scholars (with the exception of those of the workhouse) at the National School, in the Ellers. The Workhouse children, at the expense of B. Gilpin, Esq., partook of dinner at the Braddyll's Arms Inn, previous to the setting out of the procession; and at its conclusion, after partaking of refreshments at the workhouse, in the evening were regaled by the same gentleman at his cottage at Dragley Beck, and encouraged in a succession of sports in the grounds and meadows there, which were kept up by the party with happy glee till evening.

The company assembled on the Hill of Hoad at the above ceremony were computed by the military gentlemen present at 8000.

In the evening, Sir George Barrow, Bart.; his brother, Mr. John Barrow, F.R.S.; Major Davis, and other friends of the family, were entertained in honour of the event at the Athenæum Assembly-Room; Bernard Gilpin, Esq., in the chair. There were about eighty guests, and the dinner comprised every delicacy of the season. We regret that our limits will not allow us to report the interesting proceedings.

The design of the Monument is by Mr. Trimen, architect, and consists of a stone tower (a sea-mark), 100 feet in height, by 40 feet diameter at the base. It will stand upon the summit of the Hill of Hoad, which rises abruptly above the town to the height of 450 feet above the level of the sea.

The cottage at Dragley Beck, where Sir John Barrow was born, was visited in the course of the day, as also the Town Bank School.

COTTAGE AT DRAGLEY BECK, IN WHICH SIR JOHN BARROW WAS BORN.

Upwards of £1000 have been subscribed; and the list includes the names of many of the nobility and gentry of the land, together with the most distinguished officers of the Royal Navy.

THE WOOLWICH GARRISON AND THE WHITSUN HOLIDAYS.—A very just and proper order was issued during the latter part of last week, announcing that no permissions would be granted to any of the troops in the garrison to proceed to Greenwich fair during the Whitsun holidays, as several of the men had misconducted themselves when they were permitted to visit Greenwich fair at the Easter holidays. The drills in the garrison were also carried on from three to five o'clock P.M., instead of two to four, and the tattoo roll was beat at eight instead of nine o'clock at the Royal Artillery and Royal Marine barracks. A strong piquet, consisting of one captain, two lieutenants, six sergeants, and one hundred rank and file of the battalion, one lieutenant, two sergeants, and fourteen rank and file of the Royal Horse Artillery, paraded on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday afternoons, and the horses, after parade, were taken to the stable and kept ready saddled, in case their services should be required, or any attempt made to disobey the orders which were issued for the benefit of the men, and to prevent any chance of differences betwixt them and the civilians, should any of the former bad feeling which was shown at Easter continue to exist amongst either party. A sergeant of the Royal Artillery, and a sergeant of the Royal Marines were stationed at each of the stations of the North Kent Railway at Woolwich, and a sergeant of the Royal Artillery and Royal Marines at each of the steam-boat piers. The piquet were stationed on the Greenwich and Woolwich roads, and the whole three days of the fair passed over very orderly, without any attempt on the part of the men of the garrison to disobey the injunctions of their superiors. The officers of the garrison intend to have races on Monday next, and have subscribed liberally for the amusement of the men on that day; and a committee, consisting of Brigade Major Walpole, Royal Engineers, President; Captain Ward, Royal Horse Artillery; Captains Wodehouse and Radcliffe, Royal Artillery; and Captain Hounslow, Royal Marines, has been appointed to award prizes to the men for leaping, running, running in sacks, climbing poles, and other entertaining amusements after the races are over.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, May 26.—Trinity Sunday.
MONDAY, 27.—Sir Humphrey Davy died, 1829.
TUESDAY, 28.—Cardinal Beaton assassinated, 1546.
WEDNESDAY, 29.—Restoration of Charles II., 1660.
THURSDAY, 30.—Corpus Christi.
FRIDAY, 31.—Sun rises 3h. 52m., sets 8h. 3m.
SATURDAY, June 1.—Nicomede.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 1, 1850.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M. h.	m.	M. h.	m.	M. h.	m.	M. h.	m.	M. h.	m.	M. h.	m.	M. h.	m.
3	10	3	50	4	30	5	13	5	40	6	4	6	30
4	5	4	45	5	25	6	0	6	35	6	55	7	15

FRENCH PLAYS, ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Concentration of Talent.—On MONDAY EVENING, MAY 27th (for the second time), Alfred de Musset's Proverbe, IL FAUT QU'UNE PORTE SOIT OUVERTE OU FERMEE. Le Comte, M. Lafont; La Marquise, Mdlle. Nathalie. In addition to (for the first time) the amusing Comedie of LES DEUX MENAGES. Principal characters by M. Regnier, M. Leguet, Mdlle. Nathalie, and Mdlle. Brasseur. With other entertainments. The favourite Comedy of LE MARI A LA CAMPAGNE will be repeated during the week.

The First Performance of the eminent Tragedienne Mdlle. RACHEL is definitively arranged for MONDAY, JULY 1st.—Boxes and Stalls will be engaged at MR. MITCHELL'S Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street, and at the Box-office of the Theatre, which is open daily, from Eleven till Five o'Clock.

PRINCESS' THEATRE.—MR. J. M. MADDOX, Sole Lessee and Manager, Regent-street.—For the BENEFIT of Messrs. MACFARREN and LODER, on MONDAY EVENING, 27th MAY, 1850, when the following Artists will appear:—Mrs. Catherine Hayes; Miss Birch, Mdlle. Rose, Madame Macfarren, Mrs. Weiss, and Miss Louisa Pyne; Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Allen, Mr. Corri, Mr. Lazier, Mr. Weiss, and Mr. W. Harrison. Miss Louisa Howard, Miss Squarey, & Mr. S. Wyatt.

Herr Ernst will perform a solo on the violin; Mr. Lucas will perform a solo on the violoncello; Mr. Macfarren will perform a quartet on the pianoforte; Mr. Surenne will perform a solo on the flute.

The Performances will comprise the First Act of Mr. G. A. Macfarren's opera KING CHARLES THE SECOND; a Concert; the Second Act of Mr. Loder's Opera, NORMAN LESLIE; and the Extravaganza of the FIRST NIGHT. Dress Circle, 5s; Upper Circle, 4s; Pit, 2s; Gallery, 1s; Stalls, 5s; Private Boxes, £3 13s 6d, £2 2s, and £1 1s 6d.—Places may be had of Mr. Mitchell, 33, Margaret-street, Cavendish-square; and of Mr. Loder, 163, Albany-street; of the principal Musicsellers; and at the Box-office of the Theatre.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, MR. W. BATTY.—Immense success of the Holiday Attraction. Crowded houses to witness the "Afghanistan War" (which, as a novelty, has been received with the utmost enthusiasm): it will be repeated every evening, in conjunction with the Whitsuntide powerful Equestrian Novelties.—MONDAY, MAY 27, 1850, the Entertainments will commence, at Seven o'Clock, with the Grand National Military Spectacle, entitled the AFFGHANISTAN WAR; or, the Invasion of Cabool and British Triumph in India—produced on a scale of splendour almost of unrivalled, and a Military Brass Band, in addition to the unequalled resources of the theatre.—To be succeeded by an Interlude, in which Mr. Batty's popular FEATS in the HIPPODROME including the sagacious exercises of that accomplished zebra, Mdlle. Gerdoni, on the Tight Rope; and La Petite Jeannette, the Infant Prodigy, and her pet Steed "Hannibal," whose intended and interesting performances, in the high art of Equitation, à la Valentine, have been nightly greeted with every expression of astonishment and admiration.—To conclude with a favourite FARCE.—Box-office open from Eleven till Four.—Singer-Manager, Mr. W. WEST.

MR. BENEDICT'S GRAND ANNUAL MORNING CONCERT, under the immediate Patronage of her Majesty the Queen, H.R.H. Prince Albert, H.R.H. the Duchess of Kent, and their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge.—MR. BENEDICT begs respectfully to announce, that his ANNUAL CONCERT will take place on the STAGE of HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE, on FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 21, with the entire Opera Company and Orchestra, at which occasion he will be supported by all the eminent artistes of that Establishment, including Madames Sontag, Frezzolini, Parodi, Giuliani, Ida Bertrand, Miss Dolby, Signori Gardoni, Calzolari, Bendelari, Coletti, Belletti, F. Lablache, and Lablache, under the direction of Mr. Balfe. Piano, Messrs. Balle, Osborne, Lindsay Sloper, and Benedict; violin, Messrs. Ernst and Molique; violoncello, Signor Piatti; and French horn, M. Vivier. Engagements with other distinguished artists are pending. Prices of Admission:—Boxes, Two, Three, and Four Guineas; Pit Stalls, £1 1s; Pit Tickets, 10s 6d; Gallery Stalls, 5s; Gallery, 2s 6d. Application for Boxes, &c., to be made at the principal libraries, music warehouses, the box-office of Her Majesty's Theatre, and to Mr. Benedict, 4, Manchester-square.

MR. BRINLEY RICHARDS begs to announce that his CONCERT will take place on FRIDAY EVENING next, MAY 31, at the Hanover-square Rooms, under the immediate patronage of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge and his Grace the Duke of Newcastle.—His Royal Highness Prince Edward Saxe Weimar, Miss Messent, Miss Dolby, and Madame Macfarren; Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. W. H. Harrison, Mr. W. H. Seguin, Signor Marchesi, and Herr H. Drayton, Mr. Benedict, Mr. G. Cooper, and Mr. Hy. Nicholson, to the leader of the Queen's Band, Signor Piatti, Conductors, Messrs. Benedict and Lindsay Sloper.—Single Tickets, 7s; Reserved Seats, 10s 6d.—To be had at the Music Shops, and at Mr. Richards', at 31, New Bond-street.

MR. HENRY WYLDE.—The Directors of the BLACKHEATH CLASSICAL SUBSCRIPTION CONCERTS announce that the THIRD CONCERT will take place on SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 8, when MR. HENRY WYLDE will perform Mozart's Quartet in E flat; Beethoven's Quintet, Op. 16; and Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 13. The following artists have been engaged for these Concerts, viz.:—Violins, Herr Ernst, Mr. Willy, M. Sowinski, Viola, Mr. Hill, Mr. Blagrove; Violoncello, M. Hausmann. Vocal Performers: Mdlle. Schloss, Mdme. Durand, Mr. J. Barnett, and Mr. Durand.

LONDON WEDNESDAY CONCERTS, EXETER-HALL.—WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5th, will be held the Thirteenth CONCERT, and Last but Two of the Season, when the celebrated vocalist, Mdlle. Angri, Herr Stigelli, and other eminent plaudits, Herr Dreyschock (his last appearance), and Mr. Lucas, will perform a Grand Duet for two pianofortes. Arrangements are pending with other celebrated Artistes. Full particulars will be duly announced. Tickets, 1s. and 2s. Programmes gratuitously. Stalls, 7s. May be had of Mr. Hyde, 229, Strand; of Mr. Jarrett, Managing Director, at the Office of the Concerts, 4, Exeter-Hall; and of all Music-sellers.

TRAFALGAR.—An Interesting Model of the BATTLE of TRAFALGAR is NOW EXHIBITING at 26, NEW BOND-STREET, next to the Clarendon Hotel, near the Burlington Arcade. The Model has lately been visited by his Grace the Duke of Wellington, Lord Nelson, Lord Hardinge, Sir Edward Codrington, Sir Howard Douglas, and many officers present at that celebrated engagement.—From Ten in the Morning, till Ten in the Evening, brilliantly illuminated.—Admission, One Shilling; Children, Half-price.

NILE.—GRAND MOVING PANORAMA of the NILE, comprising all the Monuments of Antiquity on its Shores, to which is added the interior of the great rock-cut Temple of Abou Simbel, painted by Messrs. Warren, Bonsall, and Fahey. Also, a collection of Egyptian and Nubian Curiosities.—Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, daily, at 3 and 8. Stalls, 3s; pit, 2s. gallery, 1s. Children and Schools half price.

COLONEL FREMONT'S OVERLAND ROUTE to OREGON, TEXAS, and CALIFORNIA across the Rocky Mountains, made by order of the United States Government, illustrated by a Grand Moving Painting from Washington City, portraying the thrilling scenes that occurred to Colonel Fremont and party, and Sir William Drummond Stewart and party, while crossing the Rocky Mountains, and discovery of the great Salt Lake. MOVING PANORAMA of the Scenery on the Mississippi, Missouri, &c., Piccadilly, and exhibited every Morning at a Quarter to Three, Evening, a Quarter to Eight. Admission, 1s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Stalls (in front), 3s.; Children, half-price.

EXHIBITION of TULIPS.—HENRY GROOM, Clapham Rise, Florist (by appointment) to her Majesty the QUEEN, and to his Majesty the KING of SAXONY, respectfully informs the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public, that his superb COLLECTION of TULIPS is now in FLOWER, and may be viewed EVERY DAY, from Nine o'Clock until Six, Sunday excepted.—Admission, 1s.; Children, half-price.

HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY'S VISIT TO IRELAND.—Illustrated by a Grand Moving Diorama, with scenes of the most charming scenery in that country, by Mr. F. Phillips, now open daily at the Chinese Gallery, Hyde Park Corner. Daily at 3, Evening at 8. Admission 1s.; Reserved Seats, 2s. An interesting historical record of the event may be had at the Gallery.

LONDON and SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.—Suburban Season Tickets at Reduced Rates, for the Year or for shorter periods to Gentlemen residing at convenient distances from the Suburban Stations, have lately produced the rate of SEASON TICKETS, especially for the longer distances, so that persons having daily occasion to London may now live at any of the beautiful spots on this railway within 40 miles of London, and be conveyed in a first-class carriage both ways, daily, at a weekly charge, varying with the distance from 5s. to 20s. per week.

To give facilities to those whom circumstances compel to have their residences in London to move into the country during the summer months, Season Tickets are now issued at reduced rates for one month.

Waterloo	SCALE OF SEASON TICKETS. Yearly.	6 Months.	3 Months.	2 Months.	1 Month.
To or from	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Wandsworth	12 0 0	6 12 0	3 12 0	2 10 0	—
Clapham Common ..	12 0 0	6 12 0	3 12 0	2 10 0	—
Putney	—	—	—	—	—
Barnes	15 0 0	8 5 0	4 10 0	3 5 0	—
Chiswick	—	—	—	—	—
Mortlake	—	—	—	—	—
Kew	16 0 0	8 16 0	4 16 0	3 7 0	—
Wimbledon	—	—	—	—	—
Richmond	—	—	—	—	—
Brentford	18 0 0	9 18 0	5 8 0	3 15 9	2 3 0
Isleworth	—	—	—	—	—
Twickenham	—	—	—	—	—
Feltham	—	—	—	—	—
Ashford	20 0 0	11 0 0	6 0 0	4 4 0	2 8 0
Hounslow	—	—	—	—	—
Staines	—	—	—	—	—
Egham	—	—	—	—	—
Hampton Court ..	22 0 0	12 2 0	6 12 0	4 12 0	2 12 0
Esher	—	—	—	—	—
Walton	—	—	—	—	—
Weybridge	21 0 0	12 1 0	7 4 0	5 0 0	2 6 9
Datchet	—	—	—	—	—
Windsor	—	—	—	—	—
Walton	—	—	—	—	—
Weybridge	—	—	—	—	—
Ascot	25 0 0	13 15 0	7 16 0	5 5 0	3 0 0
Chertsey	—	—	—	—	—
Woking	—	—	—	—	—
Guildford	—	—	—	—	—
Godalming	—	—	—	—	—
Farnham	36 0 0	14 6 0	7 16 0	5 10 0	3 4 0

Second-class tickets about 15 per cent. less than the above.

When two or more members of the same family subscribe at the same time, for the same period, and to the same station, a deduction from the above rates will be made on the following scale:—

When two subscribe	10 per cent. reduction
" three "	15 "

Children under 12 years of age to be charged half price.

Applications for Season Tickets to be made in writing to the Treasurer, A. Morgan, Esq., Parliament-street.

As prices are considered, it will be observed, include the most beautiful suburban neighbourhoods of London.

By order, WYNDHAM HARDING, Secretary.

York-road, May 1, 1850.

MR. ALBERT SMITH has the honour to announce that he will give a Literary, Pictorial, and Musical ENTERTAINMENT, at WILLIS'S ROOMS, on TUESDAY EVENING NEXT, the 28th instant, entitled being a Reminiscence of Travel in the route from Southampton to Boulogne, via the Desert, Cairo, the Pyramids, the Nile, Malta, Marseilles, and Paris. The Illustrations have been painted, from Original Sketches, by Mr. W. Beverley. No stranger will be taken at the doors

THE OVERLAND MAIL,

Tickets, 5s. each; Stalls, 3s.; to be had only at SAMS'S Royal Library, 81, James's-street. The doors will be opened at Eight o'Clock, and the Entertainment will commence at Half-past Eight precisely.

LOVE'S ENTERTAINMENTS.—POLYPHONISM EXTRAORDINARY. These celebrated Entertainments will be delivered, on TUESDAY, MAY 28, at the PUBLIC HALL, CUNDLE; on Wednesday, May 29, at the Assembly-Rooms, Melton Mowbray; on Thursday, May 30, at the Assembly-Rooms, Peterborough; on Friday, May 31, at the Town-Hall, Wellingborough, and on Thursday, June 13, and Monday, June 17, at the Newburgh-Street Rooms, London. Doors open on each occasion at Eight, begin at a Quarter past Eight. Reserved Seats 2s.; First-class Seats, 1s., Second-class, 6d. Books containing programmes of the Entertainments, Memoir of Mr. Love, with an Explanation of the Phenomena of Polyphony, &c., to be had at the doors, price Sixpence.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—During this week the ALPINE SINGERS will perform several of their National Airs, daily at Four, and in the Evenings at half-past Seven and Nine.—The BACHOFFNER'S SECOND LECTURE on the PHILOSOPHY of SPIRITUAL MANIFESTATIONS, with OPTICAL EFFECTS, daily at Two, and every Evening at a Quarter-past Nine.—LECTURE by J. H. Pepper, Esq., on the CHEMISTRY of FIREWORKS, with special reference to its application for conveying by Balloons Pyrotechnic and other Signals to Sir John Franklin, daily at a quarter-past Three, and every Evening at Eight. DISSOLVING VIEWS, illustrating the Arctic Regions and Ceylon, also Views of London in the 16th Century, and as it now is. DIVER and DIVING-BELL, &c. &c.—Admission, 1s; Schools, Half-price.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS.—The SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of this Society is NOW OPEN at their GALLERY 53, PALL MALL, nearly opposite St. James's Palace. Daily, from 9 till dusk. Admission, 1s.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER BANK issues CIRCULAR NOTES for the use of Travellers and Residents on the Continent. These notes are payable at every principal town in Europe, and a traveller to any part of the world without inconvenience. No expense is incurred, and, when cashed, no charge is made for commission. These notes may be obtained at the Head Office of the London and Westminster Bank, in Lothbury; or at its branches—viz. 1, St. James's-square; 214, High Holborn; 3, Wellington-street, Borough; 87, High-street, Whitechapel; and 4, Stratford-place, Oxford-street.

J. W. GILBART, General Manager.

NEW LIFE TABLES.

THE ALLIANCE BRITISH and FOREIGN LIFE and FIRE ASSURANCE COMPANY, Bartholomew-lane, London.

Established 1824.

Security, the large invested Capital, and the personal responsibility of upwards of One Thousand Shareholders.

The Board, with a view of giving increased facilities to the Public in the transaction of Life Business, have directed the construction of New Tables in addition to those they had previously in use. 1. Non-Participating, on Reduced Rates of Premium. 2. Tables on Increasing and Decreasing Scales. 3. Tables subject to a Limited Number of Annual Payments. 4. Tables for Endowment Assurances.

No entrance fees are charged. The Assured may proceed to any part of Europe without extra Premium. The Court of Directors, the Military Officers, not in actual service, are taken at half Premium.

Prospectuses, with Tables of Rates and full particulars, will, on application, be forwarded by post, or may be obtained at the Head Office, 1, Bartholomew-lane, London; at the Office of the Company, 8a, George-street, Edinburgh; and at their various agencies in England, Scotland, and Ireland. ⁂ Loans on the Deposit of Unencumbered Policies of the Company are made, up to their value, without legal expense to the borrower. FIRE ASSURANCES are accepted at Home at the usual rates. The Company prosecute both Fire and Life Assurances Abroad on reasonable terms.

A. HAMILTON, Secretary.
F. A. ENGELBACH, Actuary.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

AN ARTIST.—The large views published with the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, may be had as follows:—London and Rome, in each; Paris and Edinburgh, 2s each

C. H. S., Hull.—We have no memorandum of the Medal mentioned.

CIVIL ENGINEER.—See Mingaud's "Treatise on Billiards"

ARCHER, Bradford.—The Exhibition of the Great Exhibition of 1851 has not yet been fixed

A. DE THIER, Holland.—Address, the agent, 97, Newgate-street

R. G. D.—Pain is the most certain sign of Mr. Hebdet Brown

B. C. B., Bristol, should write to the publishers.

Abnormal is irregular, deviating from nature

ARTS YEE MARTS.—Indeed it is Horsequaeris or Ordnance offices

ALPHA, Throgmorton-street.—Johnson gives "Monarchical"

R. B. Leeds, is thanked, but has been more than paragraph

A. O. Y., Islington.—By the regulations, published last week, persons desirous of admission to the Library of the British Museum are to send in their applications in writing, specifying their christian and surnames, rank or profession, and places of abode, to the principal librarian (Sir H. Ellis), or, in his absence, to the gentleman who may be acting as under-librarian, and subscribed by such persons, or by their applications before the next meeting of the trustees. Every person app ying is to produce a recommendation satisfactory to a householder of the establishment. Applications addressed to any other person in this respect will not be attended to. We cannot inform A. O. Y. as to the Thames Bed dispute

ROSE D'AMOUR.—"Blind Leading Blind" again, "—is CLOSED. Additions to the text of Shakspere

JERSEY SUBSCRIBER should order the Saturday's edition of our journal

A. V. Chatham.—The view, though very fine, has, we think, been too often engraved to be again attractive

J. L. B.—The first number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS appeared May 14, 1842

AN ARDENT ADMIRER, Limerick.—Our notice of the Royal Academy Exhibition will be returned next week

A. SUBSCRIBER, Durham.—We do not possess Dr. Guggenbuhl's address

A SUBSCRIBER, Greenwich.—The work of Dr. S. L. is published by Longman and Co

G. W., Lombard-street.—The marble arch at Buckingham Palace is said to have cost £83,000; including the statue on the top of it, at the time of building, stated to cost but £79,000

GORDON.—We had rather not give the recommendation in question

JUSTITIA.—A 4-year is a good salary for an institution

A CONSTANT SUBSCRIBER AND READER.—Received

T. W. C.—"Gallgani's Guide to Paris." There is a "History of Paris," in 2 vols, 8vo

H. H. Greenwich.—We believe not, but will make inquiries

A. B.—We should say by joint means, but we are not in the secret

J. G. B.—We think at Drury Lane Theatre. Barry Cornwall's "Life of Kean" will decide

AN ORIGINAL SUBSCRIBER, Glossop.—Apply respecting the new American Chum to the agent for the sale, 27, Newgate-street

B. H. N., Peckham.—The vacancies are filled up as they occur

J. B.—The work in question may be had of any bookseller

R. R., Lower Tooting.—We do not know. We cannot advise you

VERAX.—Mr. Power, the comedian, was a native of Ireland. Proceeding to St. Patrick's-town (confusion,") he was driven by stress of weather to Kilpatrick, at the mouth of the Clyde, Scotland, between Dumbarton and Glasgow

R. S.—Apply at Mr. Hodges's, 10, Parker-street

OMICRON.—It is not common to the correct name of the genus of greenhouse shrubs, natives of the Cape of Good Hope, succeeding admirably in the British colonies

A. A. A. C. Portland Town.—See a little work on the National Debt and the Funds, published by E. Wilson, Royal Exchange

CHEVNOR, Dunmore.—We have not received the Sketch

CORALLIUM.—We cannot inform you

J. B., Birmingham, has been misinformed

F. B., Ipswich.—A passport is indispensable

H. W. J., Devonport.—"Words are like Leaves"

J. H. W., Chatteris.—We think not

"Linas to a Lark" we have not room for

A. M. S., Dublin.—The married lady

R. W., Manchester.—Declined

J. E. J. has been misinformed

Several notices to Correspondents are deferred for want of space.

⁂ We have received £70 from Mrs. R. Collis, of Weston-hill, Norwood, to be distributed among the discharged bankers in the Hudson's Bay Company, and the money will be forwarded for distribution to any accredited person who will apply by letter for the same.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—We are compelled, by press of Illustrations of the News of the Week, to defer our Engravings from Pictures at the Royal Academy until next week, when they will appear in

A SUPPLEMENT, GRATIS.

THE COLDSTREAM GUARDS.—Next week we shall illustrate the Bicentenary Festival of the Officers of the Coldstream Guards, given at St. James's Palace on Wednesday. At the same time we shall engrave the Entertainment given on the above day, at the Portman-street Barracks, to the non-commissioned officers and privates of the regiment.

BOOKS, &c. RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

The Budget, by J. Samuda.—Alphonso Barbo, a tragedy.—Gorham on the Efficacy of Baptism.
MUSIC.—The Ada Maiurka.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1850.

THE Overland Mail brings intelligence of the death of Tao Kwang Emperor of China, a victim to the barbarous funeral ceremonies of his country. He is succeeded by his son Tih Chu. In the present state of the world, the death of such a Potentate is an event of little importance beyond the confines of his own territories; though it is supposed that the accession of a new Monarch will lead to the installation of a more intelligent minister than has lately held power in the Celestial Empire, in the person of Keying. Keying is in favour of the legalisation of the opium trade, and of a more extended intercourse between China and Europe. It is to be hoped, whatever may be his views upon the opium traffic, that he has both the will and the power to relax the jealous severity with which the Chinese Government and people have hitherto shut themselves out from the more advanced civilisation of the world. But whatever be his views or means, China will not always be allowed to remain in the stunted and stagnant state in which she has been held for centuries. Events are proving too great and too rapid in their march, even for Chinese prejudice and obstinacy to resist. The day seems to be approaching when the all but hermetically sealed interior of that vast empire, as well as of the rich and populous islands of Japan, will be laid bare to the scrutiny of the European and American mind, and to the influence of European and American trade. The discovery of the rich treasures of California has already operated to some extent upon the sluggish nature of the Chinese. Some hundreds of them have found their way to the "diggings," and are said to be among the most ardent of the immigrants—a proof that even they are not so utterly self-sufficient and "self-contained" as to be able to resist those golden attractions which exercise such powerful sway over other people. The rapid increase of population in California, and the establishment on the shores of the Pacific, in close and convenient proximity to China and Japan, of an active, growing, restless, and enterprising Anglo-Saxon state, will inevitably lead, sooner or later, to a break-up of the old exclusiveness of the "Celestial" people, and their, if possible, still more exclusive and jealous brethren of Japan. The sharp-sighted men of the West have already begun to calculate and to speculate upon the chances of finding or making a trade in that direction, and of opening up those long-hidden regions. By fair means or by foul, they will succeed. Brother Jonathan, who is always pushing on to the westward, cannot fail to push westward from California. He will then find himself in the East, in face of an empire that has no more right, in the eyes of such enterprising and go-ahead folks as he, to shut itself up within itself like a tortoise in its shell, than, in the eyes of the same kind of people, a man has to shut himself up in his own house in a village, and refuse all intercourse with his neighbours. His neighbours will look in upon him, whether he likes the intrusion or not; and if he refuse to receive them graciously, will put a door open with a jemmy. Hitherto, these great and jealous Oriental states have been without neighbours who could do them any violence in this respect. Great Britain has had a longing, and has made an attempt, to look in upon them; but she has laboured under the disadvantage of extreme distance. But the Californians are settled in the most convenient spot for this purpose, and will some fine day make an exploration of the flowery land and the adjacent islands, and declare their instincts and their origin. The great Eastern empires will not be for ever able to withstand the curiosity or cupidity with which it will put a stop

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

REMISSION OF TAXES

On the motion for going into Committee of Supply,

Mr. BLACKBURNE moved for leave to bring in a Bill to repeal so much of the Act the 3rd and 4th Victoria c. 17, as imposes an additional duty of ten per cent. on assessed and window taxes.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that during the present session it had been his duty to oppose several attempts for taking off various taxes, and in doing so he had had occasion to express his regret at not being able to comply; but he must say that, on the present occasion, he did not feel many scruples at being compelled to oppose the present motion. (Hear, hear.) He thought that few less objectionable taxes could be imposed than these, as they were imposed principally on articles of luxury. If gentlemen chose to keep a large number of servants, to have several coaches, and to wear hair-powder, they must be content to pay the taxes for it.

The House then divided, when there appeared—For the motion, 65; against it, 130: majority, 65.

OUR FOREIGN POLICY.

Mr. B. COCHRANE brought under the consideration of the House the foreign policy of the Government. He could not allow one supply night to pass without taking the opportunity of expressing to the House, and through the House to the country, the general, the universal feeling of discontent with which this country was regarded in every part of the Continent. (Hear, hear.) Having taken a general review of our foreign policy in all countries, especially Greece and Italy, the hon. gentleman concluded by declaring that the Governments of Italy, and of every other country, assigned their calamities to the intervention of Lord Palmerston. (Hear, hear.)

Lord PALMERSTON said he could only say that the speech which he had just heard led him to alter an opinion which he had formed, namely that it was desirable that an Irish gentleman should travel around the world in order to understand foreign affairs. (Cheers and laughter.) It certainly appeared to him that the hon. gentleman (Mr. B. Cochrane) was quite as good a judge of foreign affairs before he went abroad. (Renewed laughter.) The hon. gentleman could scarcely have met the Duchess of Lord Minto.

Mr. B. COCHRANE.—I have read every one of them.

Lord PALMERSTON said that he was sorry to hear that the hon. gentleman's time had been misspent, for he perused had left but little impression on his mind (Loud laughter.) It was never intended to effect a revolution in Italy, nor was it attended with that effect. Lord Minto had had a totally different object in view, and that was to reconcile those revolutionists. (Cheers.) He (Lord Palmerston) must say, his opinion undoubtedly was, that, if the advice which Lord Minto was instructed to give when asked, but not till asked, had been more generally followed, disastrous consequences which they now deplored would not have taken place. (Hear.)

The House then went into Committee of Supply; Mr. Bernal in the chair.

THE NEW HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.

On the vote £18,000 for defraying expenses connected with the erection of the New Houses of Parliament, Sir DE LACY EVANS moved, as an amendment, that the item of one thousand guineas for decorating the Peers' private refreshment room be struck out.

On a division, the committee agreed to the amendment by a majority of 94 to 75.

On the vote £18,000 for repairs of Dublin Castle, Maynooth College, &c.,

Colonel SMITHORPE moved that the item £1240 for the repairs at Maynooth be struck out.

On a division, the amendment was rejected by 124 to 47.

Some other votes were agreed to, and the House resumed.—Adjourned.

VESTRY ELECTIONS.

ST. PANCRAS.—On Thursday evening the contest in this parish, after a three days' poll, was brought to a close. For Messrs. Brettingham and Heale (or the pink list) there were 1886 votes; for Mr. Douglas (or the blue list), 1042 votes; giving a majority of 844 in favour of the pink list, who are now vestrymen for the ensuing year.

ST. JAMES'S, WESTMINSTER.—The poll finally closed on Thursday evening, when there appeared 801 votes for the Parochial Reform Association list, and 594 for the Ratepayers' Association, leaving a majority of 207 for the former. The following gentlemen are therefore elected vestrymen for the next twelve months:—Lord de Ros, Hon. V. Smith, M.P., Messrs. Atkins, Bulgrove, Campbell, Cumming, Grant, Green, Nelson, Poulson, Rowland, Walker, and Hull.

ST. GEORGE'S, HANOVER-SQUARE.—The thirty-six noblemen and gentlemen proposed by this parish, including Earl St. Germans, Viscount Canning, Lord Feversham, Lord Saye and Sele, Lord Sondes, &c., have been returned without opposition.

ADMISSION OF ATTORNEYS IN MICHAELMAS TERM, 1850.—The periodical list, in reference to the above subject, published under the superintendence of the Incorporated Law Society, has just been issued, from which it would appear that the number of gentlemen applying to be admitted as attorneys in Michaelmas Term, 1850, is 243, showing an increase over the last Trinity Term of 16. The number of applications for the present term to be added to the list pursuant to judge's order amount to 6; the applications to the Court for taking out and renewal of certificates on the last day of term, to 9; and the notices of applications to a judge in chambers to take out and renew certificates on the 13th of June next, to 11; making the total number of names in the present list 269, there being in the former out 227.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF THE KING OF PRUSSIA.

Yesterday (Friday) a telegraphic despatch was received in town, from Berlin, stating that a man named Sefelege, formerly a sergeant in the Prussian artillery, attempted to assassinate the King on Wednesday last, at mid-day, by firing a pistol at his Majesty, as he was about leaving his Palace at Berlin for Potsdam. The fellow took a deliberate aim; but, happily, the meditated blow failed in its object, and the King sustained only a trifling flesh wound on his arm. The culprit was instantly secured, and placed in safe custody. The Royal Family, Ministers and other persons of distinction immediately waited on his Majesty to congratulate him upon his miraculous escape.

FRANCE.

Our accounts of yesterday (Friday) from Paris state that the discussion in the French Assembly on Wednesday, on the Electoral Bill, proceeded very quietly, and without much interest, until M. de Montalembert rose, who defended the Government measure at great length. In the course of his speech he made a bold and piquant attack upon Socialism, which, he said, was devouring the Republic. He would conclude an expedition against Socialism like that against Rome, to prove that it had nothing in common with the Republic. This declaration created a deep sensation, as it was taken to indicate a wish to have recourse to civil war. When the hon. member resumed his seat, the greatest agitation prevailed.

General Cavaignac and M. Arago replied, amidst much confusion, to M. Montalembert, and the House adjourned.

On Thursday, at the opening of the sitting, a violent altercation took place between M. Victor Hugo and M. Montalembert, arising from the latter accusing the former of having, on every cause he had espoused. Crimination and recrimination followed in rapid succession, after which the matter was at length put an end to by the Assembly passing to the discussion of the clauses, the first of which was opposed by M. de Lamartine, who defended Socialism as he understood it, as contradistinguished from what others understood by it.

The Government received information on Thursday that some Republican demonstrations had taken place at Rodez, Rennes, and Montpelier; but they were out of a serious character. At Montpelier, however, a fray took place with the police, produced by the adherents of Henry V., who were endeavouring to excite a popular commotion.

A proposition of Lord Palmerston to effect a compromise regarding the unfortunate differences between England and France, is said to have been totally rejected by the latter Government, who will accept of no other terms than the simple execution of the convention of Lambeth.

AUSTRIA.

According to the Wiener Zeitung, a mysterious tumult took place a few days ago in the garrison of the newly-erected Honveds, at Vienna, which parties interested are endeavouring to hush up. A young Hungarian nobleman (Honved), who had been refused permission by his captain to go to a coffee-house, unable to resist the solicitations of some corporal, who promised to be responsible for the petty insubordination, quitted the barracks. The captain, upon hearing this, gave orders that the young nobleman should be brought back and punished. All the corporals of the battalions refused to raise their hands to carry out the sentence, and a corporal of the Hayman Regiment of Infantry was summoned from another barrack, and commenced putting the sentence into execution; but his hand refused, only a few blows when the young nobleman sank down in a fit of apoplexy. In one moment all the Honveds rushed upon the captain and put him to death. On the same evening the entire troop was disbanded.

ABORIGINES PROTECTION SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the Aborigines Protection Society was held on Monday at Crosby Hall. The report stated that the condition of the Red-River Indians under the jurisdiction of the Hudson's Bay Company had called to engage the attention of the committee, who experienced much gratification in receiving proofs that their exertions in abatement of grievances are appreciated by the Red-River native settlers, whose local committee had addressed to the society a formal letter of thanks. Eske-Pake Koose, Chief of the Chippewa nation, of whose lands the Red-River colony, embracing 100,000 square miles, originally formed part, has likewise forwarded to the society, for presentation to the Queen, his petition, that which no remonstrance against injustice and oppression can be more dignified. A copy of that petition has been placed in the hands of Lord John Russell, and steps are being taken to solicit her Majesty's attention to its prayer. The Right Reverend Doctor Anderson, Bishop of Rupert's Land, had promised to second the exertions of the society, whose objects, he said, commended themselves warmly to him, and consented to correspond with the secretaries. With respect to the Exhibition of the Works of all Nations, the committee had communicated with the council of management, with a view to secure the exhibition of specimens of aboriginal manufactures, and were rejoiced to learn that the council entertained the intention of admitting them, and had already solicited contributions from trading companies and missionary societies. The report was adopted.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

NEGRO EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the Ladies' Society for Promoting the Early Education and Improvement of the Children of Negroes and of People of Colour was held on Monday, at Willis's Rooms, the Marquis of Coolmondesley in the chair. The report stated that the agricultural and commercial affairs of the West Indies seemed on the verge of ruin. Many opulent proprietors were utterly reduced to penury, their once flourishing estates abandoned and left uncultivated, and their labourers compelled to seek occupation elsewhere. The Colonial Legislature was forced to curtail or, in many instances, altogether withdraw, the supplies which were voted for the support of the schools in their respective islands. The immediate consequence which resulted was, that many large and long-established schools were broken up. The committee had no reason that the state of the West Indies was somewhat less gloomy and disheartening than at the last time. In some of the islands, as well as at home, there was a gratifying reaction in favour of negro education. The society's annual meetings and sermons had tended to create a feeling of interest, as well as cause an additional support to be given. The last annual meeting had led to the formation of a North-West London Branch Association. The committee had been enabled to afford efficient aid to one school in Bahama, to a second in Nevis, to a third in Antigua. The number of schools which had received aid from this society amounted to 110, and the subscriptions which had been received since August last were £1100.

ROYAL GENERAL ANNUITY SOCIETY.—FLORAL FETE AND FANCY BAZAAR.—On Wednesday this society, which was established in 1827, for the purpose of allowing annuities to decayed merchants, bankers, professional men, master manufacturers, tradesmen, their widows and clerks, and to single female daughters of persons belonging to such classes of society, held a grand floral fête and fancy bazaar at the Hanover-square Rooms, for the benefit of the funds of the institution, but more particularly to promote the building and endowment of an asylum for the aged. The suite of rooms appropriated for the occasion were most beautifully decorated with flags, banners, and tastefully ornamented drapery; around were arranged the stalls, twenty in number, upon which were displayed a most elegant and tasteful assortment of fancy articles, toys, trinkets, &c.; while in another apartment was a collection of nearly 1000 plants, for the most part bearing blossoms, which had been supplied for sale by Mr. J. H. Tuck, of Sloane-street (her Majesty's florist); amongst them were some splendid specimens of Azalia indica, Gardenia, Hydrangea, &c. Among the ladies who presided at the respective stalls were the Duchess of Argyll, Lady Charlotte Denison; the Countesses Grey, Talbot, Craven, Lichfield, Gainsborough, and Ashburn; Ladies Fanny Howard, R. Grosvenor, Abington, Buxton, Mountcashell, Drumlanrig, the Hon. Mrs. Ives, &c. From the opening the doors at one o'clock, until the close, at six, there was a continued flow of carriages, and the rooms were crowded with fashionable company. At the conclusion of the day Mr. Aldrich, the secretary, announced, that, notwithstanding the unfavourable weather, the receipts had been £151 1s. The fête was continued on Thursday and Friday.

LONDON PHILANTHROPIC SOCIETY.—The anniversary festival of this useful charity took place on Wednesday, at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street Lord Dudley Coutts Stuart, M.P., in the chair; supported on the left by the Hon. E. R. Stanley, M.P.; on the right by Prince Lucien Buonaparte, &c. About sixty gentlemen sat down to dinner. The amount of donations and subscriptions received during the evening was nearly £260. From the report it appeared that, from the 1st January, 1849, to the 31st December, 1849, upwards of 18,000 tickets for 4 lb. loaves of bread and 56 lb. of coals were issued; and since December last, upwards of 10,000 tickets, in like manner, have been distributed, free of any expense, to the deserving poor, appropriated for the occasion in all parts of the metropolis and its suburbs, to suit the convenience of the subscribers and the recipients of their bounty.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—On Wednesday the Royal Agricultural Society of England held a general meeting, at the society's house, Hanover-square, for the election of offices, and the transaction of other business. The Duke of Richmond was elected president for the ensuing year. The report stated:—

> The council have accepted the invitation of the Royal Commission for the Exhibition of the Works of Industry of All Nations in 1851, to hold a show of cattle in Hyde-park in that year but, finding that the Royal Commission have undertaken the arrangement of their own exhibition a department for agricultural implements, the council, with a view of not interfering with this department of the Royal Exhibition, have resolved to limit the implements portion of the society's show in 1851, and to confine their exertions entirely to their show of cattle, as limited by the Royal Commission, and to take every other step that may encourage as an auxiliary of breeding stock. In order to meet this new arrangement for the year 1851, the council have re-adjusted accordingly their districts for the country meetings of the ensuing four years, and have agreed to the following districts:—
>
> 1851.—Middlesex district, consisting of the county of Middlesex
> 1852. South-eastern district, comprising the counties of Kent, Surrey, and Sussex.
> 1853. South Wales district, comprising the whole of South Wales, with the addition of the counties of Gloucester, Hereford, Worcester, and Salop.
> 1854. East-Midland district, comprising the counties of Leicester, Lincoln, Nottingham, and Rutland.

The subjects of artificial manures and their adulteration, the absorption of the soil, &c., occupied the rest of this document. The statement of receipts and expenditure for the past half-year showed that at the end of December, 1849, there was a balance in the bankers' hands of £2,000, and that the receipts for the half-year amounted to £5517, minus the amount in the hands of the bankers. The quarterly statement of the funded property showed that 126 life governors had compounded for £50 each, and that £6744 4s. 4d. was invested in the funds from this source of £14,040, of which £2000 was invested in the books, furniture, &c., in the house, and £9295 in the purchase of stock, making altogether £11,295, and leaving in invested a balance of £2744 4s. 4d. which was borrowed from this fund, in consequence of the yearly subscriptions having fallen into arrear. The arrears of subscriptions amounted in the year 1843 to £346; in 1844, to £459; in 1845, to £1034; in 1846, to £1141; in 1847, to £1641; in 1848, to £1030; and in 1849, to £1471; making a total of £5960 up to the end of last year. Then there were the subscriptions due for the current year, which were not yet arrears, and which amounted to £3434.

FOREIGN AID SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of this society took place on Tuesday, at the Hanover-square Rooms; the Most Hon. the Marquis of Cholmondesley in the chair. His Lordship opened the proceedings by explaining that the special object of the society was the relief of the poor Jews on the Continent. The conductors of the society had never deemed it their duty to obtrude their opinions with regard to matters of mere minor religious importance upon their Continental brethren; for it pleased Providence to make use of many instruments in this world, even in the bosom of their Established Church, they were anxious to hold out the hand of fellowship to all, who made the Bible the basis of their teaching. The Rev. S. Burgess read the report, stating the difficulties this society had encountered since it had entered into relations with the Protestant brethren of the Continent. The benefits of the society were at present almost entirely limited to France and Belgium. In Spain and Portugal the Roman faith still prevail, but the society had been enabled to maintain their mission at Lisbon. In Belgium they had founded churches and schools which were going on most favourably; but the revolution in France in February, 1848, had shaken the society's finances. During the past year the receipts had amounted to £2509, including a legacy from the late Mr. E. Dutrat of £200. This was a diminution of the income on that of the preceding year of £360. The expenditure was then stated in detail in regard to France and in Belgium, showing the progress which they had made in those districts The report was adopted, and the meeting was addressed by Messrs. Audebez and Pilatte, from France, and Monsieur Anet, who attended as a deputation.

PEACE SOCIETY.—The anniversary of this society took place on Tuesday evening, at Finsbury Chapel, Moorfields, the Rev. T. Binney in the chair, gave details of the progress of the society, and stated that its friends had much to congratulate themselves on, especially when they took into consideration the proceedings of the Peace Congress, which was held at Paris. Petitions to the same effect had been presented to Parliament in favour of arbitration instead of war, and, upon the division on Mr. Cobden's motion, eighty-one members were found to vote in favour of it, representing a far more intelligent body of clergymen and non-electors, than of the majority who opposed the motion. The society had been in active communication with the friends of peace in Belgium, France, America, and Germany, with a view of turning to a practical account the results of the last congress in Paris. Resolutions, approving the measures taken by the society, were passed.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of this society took place on Thursday evening, in St. Martin's Hall, Mr. Joseph Sturge in the chair. The report stated that the year just closed had been one of great anxiety, from the loss by death of some of the most tried friends to the cause. The receipts for the past year amounted to £2,477 12s. 6d., and the sum granted to June next £750, leaving a balance of about £90. Mr. Silk Buckingham moved a resolution to the effect that while the society rejoiced in the progress temperance had made, still they had deeply to regret that so much soil remained to be done; and it was hoped that at the present meeting such a degree of demonstration would be made of the sobriety of England. The report was adopted, and a vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the evening.

THE ROYAL CALEDONIAN ASYLUM.—A special general court of this society took place on Thursday, at the hall of the Scottish Hospital, Crane-court, Fleet-street; his Grace the Duke of Buccleuch in the chair. The report stated that the number of boys in the establishment at the end of June next will be 140. The receipts for the past year were £1825 12s. 9d., while the expenditure for the same period had amounted to £3429, showing an excess of expenditure over the income of £1603. To meet this deficiency had been found necessary to sell permanent stock to the amount of £1750. The report was adopted; and, after some discussion, the meeting separated, with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

ROYAL WESTMINSTER OPHTHALMIC HOSPITAL.—On Wednesday afternoon the thirty-third annual meeting of this excellent institution was held in the board-room of the hospital. The Right Hon the Earl de Grey, in the absence of the Duke of Richmond, who was to have presided, took the chair. The secretary read the report, which was received and adopted; and at its conclusion, at the request of the secretary, the noble chairman opened a letter addressed to the Duke of Richmond. It was from Sir J Swinburne, who, after expressing his regret at being unable to attend, stated, that the whole of his property being in land, and wheat from the Baltic selling at 41s. per quarter, he (the Duke) would see the reasons of his inability to make any donation to the inestimable fund. The worthy Baronet, however, concluded by making the liberal donation of £20—(loud cheers)—towards the repairs of the hospital, which are about to be commenced.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE HOSPITAL.—The anniversary dinner of this institution was held on Thursday, at the London Tavern; his Grace the Duke of Cambridge in the chair, which he vacated at half-past nine, when it was filled by Benjamin Bond Cabbell, Esq., M.P. Upward of one hundred gentlemen sat down, including Lord Brougham, Baron de Goldsmid, &c. The noble chairman, in proposing "Prosperity to the Hospital," stated that its expenditure exceeded the income by £500, which was much to be regretted. After the usual toasts, however, the secretary announced subscriptions amounting to upwards of £2200, including £1000 from the Rev. Dearon Morrell.

ROYAL ORTHOPŒDIC HOSPITAL.—The eleventh anniversary of this praiseworthy institution was celebrated on Wednesday, at the Freemasons' Tavern; the Earl of Cardigan in the chair. The usual loyal toasts having been given and responded to, the chairman proposed "The Royal Orthopœdic Hospital," and dwelt on the benefits which it had conferred. Various other appropriate toasts were given, after which the secretary read the report, from which it appeared that the average daily attendance of out-patients during the year, the total number in regular attendance being more than 700; the new cases presented weekly from 20 to 40, and the number relieved since the opening being nearly 10,000. Subscriptions to the amount of £1230 were afterwards announced, including £262 10s. from her Majesty for the objects of the institution, and for the purchase of a presentation for his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

CITY OF LONDON UNION.—On Thursday a meeting of the guardians connected with the City of London Union was held at the board-room in Cannon-street; Alderman Gibbs in the chair. A short time ago the City of London guardians received a letter from the Poor-law Commissioners, to the effect that the usual dietary table was too high, and the rations too liberal; given, six ounces of cooked meat being allowed to the young and able-bodied paupers four times a week. This being above the Poor-law Commissioners' scale, the guardians were called upon to reduce the scale to five ounces each time, and to restrict the allowance to twice a week. To this the guards are demurred, but subsequently they agreed to allow five ounces to each person, but only twice a week, the paupers being now served on Sunday, Tuesday, and Thursday; fourteen ounces of suet pudding to each male, and twelve ounces to each female, to be supplied every Wednesday for dinner; the supply of cooked meat for the aged and infirm paupers to remain as it is at present. Some time since, it was announced that they were to be shorn of one dinner per week, became insubordinate, and threatened to destroy the union if the guardians did not return to the original scale of dietary; but the Poor-law Commissioners, having approved of the modified scale, the same was introduced on the 13th of May. Respecting this affair, the following minute was made, read, and agreed to on Tuesday, upon the bringing up of the report of the general committee:—"That the order of the Poor-law Commissioners be acted upon," and commenced on Monday, the 13th, and has caused considerable excitement amongst the paupers. We have directed the master to retain the services of four policemen (two on a night and two by day) for the present, and to provide further aid in case of need."

COMMEMORATION BANQUET OF THE COLDSTREAM GUARDS.—A magnificent entertainment was given on Wednesday evening, in the Royal barracks, Coldstream, St. James's Palace, by the officers of the Coldstream Guards, to celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of the enrolment of that distinguished corps by General Monck. The invitations were necessarily limited to officers actually belonging to the regiment, and those still attached to the corps—these forming an aggregate number of about one hundred and fifty gentlemen. The guests assembled in the long gallery, whence, on dinner being announced, they proceeded to the long dining-room, which, of great and regal magnificence, erected by George IV., and frequently used by the late King William IV., but only once since the death of that monarch, on the occasion of the marriage of her present most Gracious Majesty. Two long tables were arranged on either side of the room, with a cross table, together forming seats for one hundred and fifty guests, and exhibiting a magnificent display of the choicest plate. The apartment was superbly illuminated, and when the guests were seated, the effect was extremely grand. Colonel Chaplin, the commanding officer of the regiment, presided; and was supported right and left by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge and his Grace the Duke of Wellington. To the right of the Duke of Cambridge sat the Marquis of Hunday, the Earl of Strafbrooke, and the Right Hon. Fox Maule, M.P. To the left of the Duke of Wellington were remarked the Marquis of Westmeath, Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, and Sir James Macdonald, K.C.B.—an entertainment in celebration of the event was also given at the Portman-street Barracks, to the non-commissioned officers and privates of the regiment. [We shall Engrave both these entertainments next week.]

LAW REFORM.—A Royal Commission has just been issued, consisting of Sir John Jervis, Mr. S. Martin, Mr. W. H. Walton, Mr. G. W. Bramwell, and Mr. J. S. Wilde, for the purpose of inquiring into the process, practice, and system of pleading in the Superior Courts of Law at Westminster and on Circuit. The evil of useless and expensive process is to be abolished, and the folly which has made "special pleading" a phrase of reproach, is to be corrected.

MIDDELL LODGING-HOUSE FOR POOR FAMILIES.—The new model lodging-house, which has been just erected in Streatham-street, Bloomsbury, for the families of the industrious but poorer classes, was opened on Monday, for the inspection of the subscribers and visitors previously to its occupation. The Model Lodging-house for families" are designed for the purpose of carrying out more effectively the original idea of providing good accommodation for the working man, by a society associated under the title of the Labourers' Friend Society, of which Lord Ashley was the prime mover and originator. The original scheme applied only to unmarried men. The success of the experiment, however, in St. George-street, St. Giles's, for 104 unmarried working men, and one for a large number of families in Hatton-garden, encouraged the promoters to elaborate a scheme adapted to the married class of the population, and the result has been the present most useful building in Streatham-street, Bloomsbury.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S FETE.—The first of the series of horticultural fêtes given on Saturday last, in the Gardens at Chelsea. Notwithstanding the recent uncertainty of the weather, the grounds looked extremely fresh and beautiful, and the show of flowers was certainly much better than could have been anticipated. The attendance was very numerous: it was stated that there were between four and five thousand persons present, and these included some of the most distinguished members of the fashionable world. The display was wholly and exclusively brilliant for the season of the year, and the beds of the ladies were quite as gay as if the weather had not been for a long time past so lowering and treacherous. As usual, the instruments, music was one of the chief attractions. There were three full military bands—the Grenadier, first Life Guards, and the Horse Guards (Blue). The general character of the exhibition was excellent. The azalias and rhododendrons were remarkably fine; but the chief attractions were two specimens of the large Victoria Regia, one grown in the garden of the Duke of Northumberland, and the other by the Duke of Devonshire.

ALARM OF FIRE AT ST. GEORGE'S HOSPITAL.—On Thursday morning, an alarm of fire, some consternation was experienced at St. George's Hospital, Hyde Park Corner, in consequence of an alarm of fire, from some sheets in the laundry having become ignited. Two or three engines were quickly on the spot; but the flames were happily extinguished before their arrival.

ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS, REGENT'S PARK.—The visitors to the Gardens of the Zoological Society on Whit-Monday and Tuesday amounted to upwards of 17,300. The immense variety of the collection of living animals, which the council appear to lose no opportunity of increasing, combined with the beautiful verdure of the gardens themselves, which now are in full bloom, evidently afforded the liveliest gratification to the orderly and intelligent multitude who availed themselves of the low price of admission at which this institution is accessible during the holidays. It is our intention to illustrate some of the most striking novelties in the menageries in our impression of next week.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—The returns of births registered in the week ending Saturday, May 18:—Males, 780; females, 710: total, 1490. Deaths during the same period, 1,016; of these, 486 were males, 416 females, 890. The rate shown by mortality which is still less than the average corrected for increase of population, but, at the same time, exhibits a disposition to increase on the low rate of mortality that has prevailed during the last few weeks. Some of this rise is apparent in recent returns; for since the third week of April the numbers have been successively 803, 829, 857, 890. Taking the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1840-49, it appears that last week's mortality was greater than in any corresponding week of 1840 46, but less than in any of 1847-49; and that the actual average of the ten weeks was 988, or, raised in the ratio of population, 1,077, compared with which latter number the present return is decidedly low. Of epidemics, small-pox and scarlatina were fatal respectively in five and 16 cases, and exhibit a low mortality; measles and hooping-cough, which carried off 31 and 36 children respectively, show nearly the average amount. There is also less destructive than usual: it was fatal in 37 cases, but, in the corresponding weeks of ten years, it ranged from 18 to 79, the average being about 38. Five children died of infantile and remittent fever, seven persons of erysipelas, 11 of diarrhœa, and 5, Dinah Collings, Grey-lane, the wife of a baker, aged 40 years, died, on the 11th of May, of English cholera. The pace is described by Mr. Holmes, the registrar, as "large, open, thickly inhabited on both sides by trades requiring a large area for the business." Of 1,490 children at six persons died in the Shoreditch Workhouse, Kings-and-road, between the 10th and 15th of May; and that of these a man sank under "continued fever," and two children, a woman and two infants (eight days), and two women, one aged 27 years, the other 69, under "constipation and inflammation of the bowels." Last week the deaths of 92 persons were registered from bronchitis, of 68 from pneumonia, and of 14 from asthma. The total deaths in the class which includes these diseases were 145, the corrected average being 124. Besides these, 124 persons died of consumption, the corrected average being 134. At 20, Martha-street, St. George's-in-the-East, a beer-seller, aged 39 years, died of chronic disease and came to his end by drowning (three days). "Mr. H. Rees, the medical man who certified the cause of death, states that "this is the fourth case in his own practice, of sudden death from hæmhorrage, whilst the patients have been apparently improving from taking cod-liver oil." A commercial clerk, of 64 years, died of "mental disorder and exhaustion from refusing to take proper nourishment." No inquest was held in this case. A gunner, aged 50 years, died from "free drinking and hepatic disease (12 months)." Another man, who was of intemperate habits and suffered from delirium tremens, fell with an earthenware pan and cut his thumb, which mortified and caused his death in four days. Of deaths registered in public institutions, 73 occurred in workhouses, 48 in hospitals, 5 in lunatic asylums, and 12 in military and naval hospitals.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The mean height of the barometer in the week at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, was 29.817 in. The mean temperature 49.2 deg., less than the average of the same week in seven years by 3.2 deg. On three days of the week, namely, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, the mean temperatures were so much as from 6 to 9 degrees below the averages of the several days,

THE UNITED STATES MAIL STEAM-SHIP "ATLANTIC" ENTERING THE MERSEY.

OCEAN STEAM NAVIGATION.

Scarcely twelve years have elapsed since the great problem of Transatlantic Steam Navigation was solved by the voyages of the Syrius and Great Western, each of which crossed the Atlantic direct from New York without touching at the Azores, St. John's, or Halifax notwithstanding the great work was almost proved to be impossible down nearly to the time of its accomplishment. Although this was considered to fairly establish the use of steam-vessels for long voyages, the enterprise received much discouragement; but it has of late acquired such an impetus upon both sides of the Atlantic, that steam intercourse between Europe and the United States promises to be soon almost daily. "We shall, in a week or two," says the Liverpool Journal of Saturday last, "have not less than seven or eight distinct lines of steamers, drawing closer the connecting links between the Old World and the New. Cunard's celebrated vessels have won for themselves an enduring reputation; and it will, doubtless, be long ere their rapid voyages and regularity can be surpassed. The company is now possessed of eight of the finest steamers in the world; and in about three weeks a ninth, the Africa, now building at Glasgow, may be expected to enter our river." The Atlantic arrived at Liverpool on the 10th inst., the first of six similar vessels to be built for E. K. Collins, Esq., of New York, to carry the United States mails between New York and Liverpool, in conjunction with the Cunard steamers. The Pacific, the second of Mr. Collins's line, was announced to sail from New York on the 25th; and will be followed, in due succession, by the Arctic, the Adriatic, the Baltic, and the Antarctic. Their breadth of beam is such that they will be unable to enter any existing docks at Liverpool; and a dock at the north end, especially for their accommodation, is now in course of construction.

The arrival of the Atlantic has excited very great interest, which has been increased rather than abated by the presence, at Liverpool, of the Asia, just built at Glasgow for the Cunard line, and which left for New York on Saturday last. We, therefore, a short time since, dispatched one of our artists to Liverpool to sketch the last-named vessel, with instructions there to await the arrival of the Atlantic we now present to our readers the result of his illustrative visit.

THE UNITED STATES STEAMER "ATLANTIC" is stated to be the largest steam-ship in existence, not excepting the Great Britain. The following are her principal dimensions:—

Length between perpendiculars	276 feet
Breadth of beam	45 ,,
Breadth across paddle	75 ,,
Depth of hold	31 feet 7 inches
Diameter of wheel	30 ,,
Length of stroke	9 ,,
Diameter of cylinder	96 inches
Power	1000 horse
Burthen	2860 tons
Saloon	67 feet long, by 20 feet wide
Dining saloon	60 ,, 42 ,,

Her interior fittings are truly elegant, the wood-work being of white holly, satin-wood, rosewood, &c., so combined and diversified as to present an exceedingly rich and costly appearance. In the drawing-room the ornaments consist of costly mirrors, bronze-work, stained glass, paintings, &c. Between the panels connecting with the state rooms are the arms of the different states of the Confederacy painted in the highest style of the art, and framed with bronze-work. The pillars between are inlaid with mirrors, framed with rosewood, and at the top and bottom are bronzed sea shells of costly workmanship. In the centre of each are groups of allegorical figures, representing the ocean mythology of the ancients, in bronze and burnished gold. The ceiling is elaborately wrought, carved, and gilded. The cabin windows in the stern are of stained glass, having representations of New York, Boston, and Philadelphia painted on each. There is, in addition, another apartment, equally beautifully arranged and ornamented, for the exclusive use of ladies. Both apartments are heated by steam, an improvement now for the first time introduced in steam-ships. The apparatus occupies but a small portion of the space, and produces an agreeable heat throughout the whole of each department. In fact, the whole vessel is heated in this manner. The dining-room is furnished in an equally elegant style with the drawing-room. The state rooms, which are light and airy, are beautifully furnished and ornamented, and combine every convenience that practical science and experience could suggest. Light and ventilation are provided for amply, and in every part of the vessel: notwithstanding she has three decks, there will be an abundant supply of each.

GRAND SALOON OF THE "ATLANTIC."

THE BRITISH MAIL STEAM-SHIP "ASIA."

It would occupy more space than we can spare to detail the magnificence o the furniture of the Atlantic: the carpets are of the richest description; the table-slabs are of Brocatelli marble. The stained glass ventilators are let down into the saloon from the deck, in the form of chimneys, and protected by a lattice-work of brass. These ventilators are so constructed that they serve the double purpose of admitting the light and air. They are covered on the top with crowns of clear, transparent glass, to let down the light and keep out the rain; while immediately underneath there are all around apertures which can be opened or closed at pleasure, to admit the air. When they are illuminated at night, with lamps suspended inside, the effect is very brilliant indeed. The steam boilers are covered with marble slabs, presenting the appearance of handsome tables. The medical lamps, which were supplied by Dardenville, at Broadway, are very pretty. Each state-room has an elegant sofa, two handsome glasses—one of them so constructed on a pivot that it can be turned in any direction. The berths are of satin-wood, and the curtains of rich damask.

AFTER-DECK OF THE "ASIA."

Under this floor are ranges of bed-rooms, not quite equal in size or in the quantity of light to those above; but scarcely, if at all inferior to them in any other respect. There are fourteen of these rooms, elegant and comfy manner.

The machinery of the Atlantic was constructed by Stillman, Allen, and Co., of the Novelty Works, New York. She is amply supplied with Francis's metallic life-boats. She has no wooden boats. They are made of galvanised iron. Four hang on the quarters. One carries one of great capacity on the bows, as a "deck," or "spare boat." She has also on board one of the "life cars," so as to be able to communicate with the shore under any circumstances. The Atlantic, as well as the other vessels building for the same line, are constructed as to be converted into vessels of war in a few days, should necessity require. The Atlantic is fitted with a patented machine called an "annunciator," by means of which passengers can immediately communicate with the steward when his services are required. In every state-room is placed a bell-pull connecting with the register of the "annunciator," which is placed in full view of the cockpit, and when any one of the bells is pulled on any room a single blow of a hammer on a bell attracts their attention, while the register indicates the number of the room at which they are required.

The Atlantic left New York on the 27th ult., bringing nearly a hundred passengers and a valuable cargo, under the command of Captain West. Shortly after leaving Sandy Hook, she got entangled amongst some drift ice, which did considerable damage to her floats, or "buckets," as the Americans term them. This mishap was a serious drawback to her, inasmuch as the engines had to be worked at a reduced rate to prevent the floats from being torn from the wheels altogether, and the weather was too boisterous to admit of them being repaired. During the five succeeding days the noble vessel continued to prosecute her voyage to the satisfaction of her captain and all on board. On the 3rd instant, however, an accident of a more formidable nature occurred, one of her condensers giving way. After a fruitless attempt to get the machinery in order, the vessel having been hove to forty hours, Captain West decided to pursue his course, the steam being kept at a low point in consequence, which considerably retarded the vessel's progress during the remainder of her passage. Notwithstanding, she made good progress, and on the thirteenth day of her run, at 11½ A.M., arrived off Holyhead, whence tidings of her appearance were immediately despatched to Liverpool and London by telegraph.

The Atlantic is appointed to sail for New York on the 29th instant.

THE BRITISH MAIL-STEAMER "ASIA"

is the largest steam-ship which has ever been built on the Clyde, is the eleventh vessel constructed for the Cunard line, and is of considerably greater power than any of her predecessors. The following are her chief dimensions:—

Keel and fore rake	..	..	..	..	202 feet
Keel for tonnage	..	..	..	..	1.8.
Length over all ..	..	..	..	..	260 ..
Breadth of beam	..	..	..	..	45 ..
Breadth across paddles	..	..	..	..	70 ..
Depth	..	..	..	..	31 ..
Diameter of paddle	..	..	..	..	27 ..
Burthen per register	..	..	..	..	2226 tons

The Asia is propelled by two splendidly-finished oscillating engines of 1,800 horse power each, which are constructed in the most substantial manner possible. The steam is supplied by four boilers, any number of which can be worked separately, if necessary, and although any one should be disabled, or require cleaning, no inconvenience will be thereby occasioned. The engine-house is divided into two flats, formed of iron gratings, which are so arranged that access can be had at a moment's notice to any part of the machinery. This important department of the vessel is superintended by one principal engineer and five assistants, with thirty stokers and coal-trimmers. These have all comfortable sleeping-berths adjoining the engine-house, and are also provided with a large mess-room on the main deck.

The Saloon is a very spacious and handsome apartment, erected on the quarter-deck, and having a large vacant space on either side, suitable for promenading in fine weather. The saloon itself is about sixty feet in length by nearly twenty in breadth, and well lighted by two rows of large windows, one on each side, and is furnished with eight telescope mahogany tables. The sofas extend completely round the saloon along the walls, and are covered with crimson Utrecht velvet. Besides these, there are a number of chairs, corresponding with the same material, and arranged on the outside of the dining-tables. The paneling and ceiling are of wainscot with gilt mouldings; and on either side are ten beautiful paintings in papier maché, representing scenes in India, China, England, Russia, &c., among which are the following, viz. "The Great Wall of China," "Palace of Peterhoff, with numerous fountains," "Imperial Palace of Teaou," "Windsor Castle," "Buckingham Palace" (as it is at present), "Western Gate of Pekin" (from the bridge), "Kazan," or "Kasan," on the Volga, "Temple of the Bronzes," or the "Quang Yan Rock," "View in St. Petersburg," &c. In addition to the foregoing there are several paintings in the stern, including a beautifully executed device, emblematical of the union of the two hemispheres, and views of the Bridge of Nankin, Amoy from the anchorage, the Harbour of Hong Kong, and the Tai Wang Fort on the Canton River. There are also two elegantly-stained windows, by Mr. Carney, outwards the stern, and on either side the saloon can be aired, or communication held with the steersman. At the opposite end of the apartment are two large and handsome mirrors in richly-carved gilt frames, and each window has crimson curtains corresponding with the sofas.

The gentlemen's cabin and sleeping-berths are placed on the second deck, and enter from the lobby to the saloon. The former is a large and comfortable apartment, and is furnished with a long lounging or ottoman, similar description with those in the saloon. The paneling of this apartment is an imitation of Moorish work, being richly painted in gold and morone. The state rooms for gentlemen are on the same deck, under the main saloon, and are arranged on each side of two lobbies, which extend from the gentlemen's cabin to the stern of the vessel.

The ladies' cabin is the most elegant and tastefully decorated apartment in the vessel. The woodwork is all of satin-wood, bird's eye maple, and rosewood, and round the sides are arranged twenty-one exquisitely painted ornamented panels, in fruit and flowers, in imitation of enamel. These are on a French white ground, the wood is inlaid with brass, and the glasses, each with the same material, and arranged on the outside of the dining-tables. The paneling and ceiling are of wainscot with gilt mouldings; and on either side are ten beautiful paintings in papier maché, representing scenes in India, China, England, Russia, &c., among which are the following, viz. "The Great Wall of China," "Palace of Peterhoff, with numerous fountains," "Imperial Palace of Teaou," "Windsor Castle," "Buckingham Palace" (as it is at present), "Western Gate of Pekin" (from the bridge), "Kazan," or "Kasan," on the Volga, "Temple of the Bronzes," or the "Quang Yan Rock," "View in St. Petersburg," &c. In addition to the foregoing there are several paintings in the stern, including a beautifully executed device, emblematical of the union of the two hemispheres, and views of the Bridge of Nankin, Amoy from the anchorage, the Harbour of Hong Kong, and the Tai Wang Fort on the Canton River. There are also two elegantly-stained windows, by Mr. Carney, outwards the stern, and on either side the saloon can be aired, or communication held with the steersman. At the opposite end of the apartment are two large and handsome mirrors in richly-carved gilt frames, and each window has crimson curtains corresponding with the sofas.

The gentlemen's cabin and sleeping-berths are placed on the second deck, and enter from the lobby to the saloon. The former is a large and comfortable apartment, and is furnished with a long lounging or ottoman, similar description with those in the saloon. The paneling of this apartment is an imitation of Moorish work, being richly painted in gold and morone. The state rooms for gentlemen are on the same deck, under the main saloon, and are arranged on each side of two lobbies, which extend from the gentlemen's cabin to the stern of the vessel.

The ladies' cabin is the most elegant and tastefully decorated apartment in the vessel. The woodwork is all of satin-wood, bird's eye maple, and rosewood, and round the sides are arranged twenty-one exquisitely painted ornamented panels, in fruit and flowers, in imitation of enamel. These are on a French white ground, the wood is inlaid with brass, and the glasses, each with a mirror, are made to correspond with those in the saloon, while the floor is covered with a handsome light-coloured pile carpet. The ladies' state rooms are precisely similar to those already described, with the exception that the bed certains are of brass and white tabarette, which is those in the former are of printed Tournay.

The gentlemen's fore cabin is placed in front of the engine-house, and is of a large size, and furnished with as much regard to comfort and convenience as the after, although not in so costly a manner. Among the many other attractions, an additional supply of state-rooms, each containing two berths, similar to those in the other part of the ship, but a degree plainer in so far as regards decoration.

Immediately in front of the fore hatch, and entering from the main staircase, is the second cabin, which in the Asia is a much larger apartment than in any of the previously built vessels of the Cunard line. For this description of passengers there are six state rooms, four of which contain four berths each, and two hold that number. These are supplied with every necessary. Off the second cabin is a separate apartment, containing eighteen berths, which are set aside for second-class passengers. In all, there are berths for 130 first-class passengers, and 30 second cabin.

Besides the state rooms of the principal officers of the ship, chief engineer, boatswain, &c., there are the bakehouse, the butchery, the purser's store, a now-boat, two ice-houses, a paint-shop, scullery, and several other equally useful conveniences. In the centre of the vessel, also on deck, is a large mess-room for steerage passengers, a similar room for the mates of the ship, and a cooking saloon for passengers, which is fitted up with every requisite for such an apartment. There is also the cabin galley, fitted up in a very superior style, by Messrs. James Allan, sen., and Co., of the Eglinton Foundry. So complete are the arrangements in this department, that cooking can be provided, if required, for fully 300 passengers. Of rolls alone, the baker can turn out, smoking hot, above 200 every morning.

The stores are situated on the lower or third deck, and comprise, first, the steward's sleeping apartment, fitted up to contain fifteen berths, which can be shipped and unshipped at pleasure, as circumstances may require; then there is the grocery store adjoining, the arrangements in the form of pigeon-holes, tins, &c., for tea, coffee, sugar, spices, &c. Near the above is the wine-cellar. There is also a large potato store, in addition to the one on deck, and a boatswain's store for spare ropes, rigging, &c. The apartment for the mail bags is likewise on this deck, and, as well as the other apartments just named, is rendered air and water-proof by being lined all over with galvanised iron. Immediately beneath the wine-cellar is the powder-magazine.

The Asia was built by Messrs. Steele, of Greenock. The engines and boilers were furnished by Mr. Robert Napier, of the same town, who has supplied the machinery for all the Cunard line.

From the time of the first axle-plate of the engine being laid, till the whole machinery and boilers were completely fitted up, only eight weeks elapsed; which, considering their enormous size and weight, is a feat of unexampled occurrence.

The upholstery work &c. was executed by Messrs. Hall, of St. Enoch-square, and the general paint ng by Messrs. Archibald Liddel and Co.

A race had been anticipated between the Atlantic and the Asia, which excited great interest; hitherto, the Americans have never been able to compete with the sea-going steamers of this country, and those built and engined in the Clyde have never been surpassed either in speed, stability, or external appearance. The expectation of the race has, however, been disappointed. The Asia, Captain Judkins, started on her first voyage across the Atlantic, on Saturday last, carrying a large number of passengers, and the usual weekly mails—the latter in charge of Lieut. Hills, R.N., Admiralty agent.

About half-past two, everything being ready, the Asia's machinery was put into motion, and she slowly and majestically sailed round the Atlantic, the new American steamer; both ships fired salutes, and the respective crew and people on board gave several rounds of hearty cheers, after which the Asia steamed down the Mersey, and when opposite the land lig-stage, her tender, the Sanspite, put the mails on board. The ports were lined with respectable spectators, all of whom appeared delighted at the majestic appearance of the ship as she glided down the river.

There are confident hopes that she will land her mails in Boston under ten days, which, of course, would be the shortest passage on record.

Our acknowledgments are also due to Captain West, of the Atlantic, and to Captain C. H. E. Judkins, of the Asia, for their obliging attention to our Artist, in affording him facilities for taking his Sketches.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'

Since our last publication, the "Barbière" on one night, and "I Puritani" on the following, have drawn crowded houses to this theatre, combined as these operas, so strongly cast, were with the beautiful choregraphic novelty of which we last week gave an illustration. We must, however, bestow our chief attention on the revival of "Lucrezia Borgia," the fourteenth opera performed at Her Majesty's Theatre in the two months of the season just elapsed.

The cast of "Lucrezia Borgia," on Tuesday, was the same as last year, including Lablache, Coletti, Belletti, and F. Lablache; the new features being the appearance of Madame Frezzolini in the essential part of Madame Frezzolini, Mdlle. Ida Bertrand, and Bancardé, as Lucrezia, Orsino, and Gennaro. The announcement of Madame Frezzolini's re-appearance excited the greatest curiosity. Her sympathetic organ, which at Her Majesty's Theatre some years since, and, owing to her recent recovery from a severe illness, she was far from producing the effect expected from her renown. Since that time, her triumphs abroad, particularly at St. Petersburgh, where she had been engaged for three successive seasons, have once more attracted general attention towards her. When Mdme. Frezzolini first appeared on the stage on Tuesday night, her beauty, the elegance of her person, and her noble dramatic features and action, most favourably impressed the audience, and the applause was loud and unusually prolonged. Mdme. Frezzolini evidently laboured under deep emotion. She gave the recitative "Com'è tranquille e pura" with difficulty, and the cavatina that follows with spasmodic effort; although the accents, and the chromatic passages she executed, even then awakened deep attention. As the opera proceeded, at each new effort she evinced greater self-possession, and her singular gifts became more and more apparent. "Me vuoi gente" produced a cordial encore. The scene where Lucrezia is made to witness the first poisoning of her son, Gennaro, by her truculent husband, presented such traits of dramatic excellence as we have seldom witnessed: the illusion was constant, the effect startling, the portraiture free from all exaggeration of sentiment; exclamations of admiration accompanied it, and the encore of the trio was enthusiastic. As the performance drew towards its conclusion, the applause became more and more delighted: her pezzo at the moment of her exclamation. "Oh, thou art a Borgia!" was earnestly cheered; and she sang "Ah di più non dimando" with pathetic intensity of feeling: the encore was immediate. At the conclusion the applause was unanimous. Recalled several times before the curtain, she was overwhelmed with bouquets.

It will require another opportunity to decide as to the exact state of this prima donna's voice, which is powerful and penetrating, but in which there are occasional interruptions from nervousness. But that she is a wonderful artist, one to behold often and to observe in every detail, and will impart the greatest enjoyment to all those that can appreciate the most refined musical science, and consummate dramatic portraiture, is undoubted.

Mdlle. Ida Bertrand's success, notwithstanding the remembrance of Mdlle. Alboni in the part of Orsino, was a subject of general astonishment; her reception was triumphant. Bancardé sang "Un Piscatore" admirably; he bore his fall, share in the honours of the encore of the grand trio, and he acted with great vivacity and energy. The duet with Lucrezia, in the first scene, proving to the young artist but time and study, to become a singer of the highest order. Lablache's Alfonso was, as hitherto, a grand and marvellous portraiture: his reception was enthusiastic. The duet of Coletti, F. Lablache, and Belletti, who, to their great credit, sang the smallest parts of the cast of this opera.

On Thursday "Il Don Giovanni" was repeated; followed by selections from "La Esmeralda," the last act of "Lucrezia Borgia," and the Pas de Trois of "Les Graces," which increases in popularity with each performance.

THE NEW OPERA OF THE "TEMPEST," BY MM. HALEVY AND SCRIBE.—This opera, in addition to the greatest dramatist and the most popular composer of the day have contended for an addition to their fame, will be produced in a few days. Its cast will embrace Sontag and Lablache, Bancardé and Parodi, Coletti and Catherine Hayes, F. Lablache and Ida Bertrand, Lorenzo, Mdlle. Carlotta Grisi, Lucien Petipa, and dancers, for a ballet, which will form the "Ariel;" whilst the invisible Spirits that constantly follow in attendance upon their ruler will utter exposent—as was customary in the Greek drama—of the "action eloquent" of the heroine. That extraordinary genius, Scribe, who for the last twenty-five years has supplied dramatic amusement, not only to France in the material, but to all Europe through the copies and imitations, and which, besides, is the greatest of all librettists that ever lived, has, with most curious acumen, drawn from Shakspeare's text itself the changes required for the Italian libretto of an opera. In the scene where Prospero visited by the language and by the music, requires more defined and palpable contour, and more startling intest. As far as it has transpired, the music of the "Tempesta" is a noble continuation of Halevy's former efforts; especially in the duet for Sontag and Lablache's Caliban and the Prospero, and the grand finale of the first act. The concerted pieces of the establishment, which, in Madame Puzzi's annual morning concert, last Monday, in the room at Her Majesty's Theatre, was fully and fashionably attended. Signor Puzzi is now rarely heard in public, but the touch of his quality he gave in Masini's melodie, "La Calma," and in Donizetti's barcarolle from "Marino Faliero," proved that he still possesses that charm in the singing tone on the horn which characterised his playing of yore. Madame Sontag sang Lachner's "Lied," with Piatti's exquisite violoncello accompaniment, and Adolphe Adam's variations on "Ah! vous dirai-je," with Rémusat's flute obligato; she was rapturously encored in both compositions. Thalberg performed his "Don Giovanni" fantasia, and in the encore gave the "Don Pasquale." Mr. Gerbard Taylor played a harp fantasia cleverly. The vocalists, besides Sontag, were Miss E. Hayes, Signor Mariani, Madame F. Labache, Mdlle. Alice Bertrand, Mdlle. Parodi, Signori Calzolari, Baucardé, Coletti, Belletti, Lorenzo, and Labiache, sen. and jun.; the programme was, therefore, highly attractive.

Sounds and sweet airs that give delight.

At St. Martin's Hall, on Wednesday night, the Upper Singing Schools, under the direction of Mr. Hullah, with profess.onal and amateur performers, repeated the performance of Mr Henry Leslie's clever Festival Hymn, and Mendelssohn's "Lauda Sion," with Beethoven's Symphony in C, and a selection from "Weber's "Oberon;" the chief singers being Miss Deakin (a promising soprano), Mrs. Noble, Messrs. Lockey, Bodda, and W. H Seguin. The Hall was well attended.

It was imagined that the London Wednesday Concerts had expired somewhat prematurely at the seventh of the Spring series, on the 15th inst., when the band and Herr Formes struck on salaries; and the audience, after a somewhat tempestuous scene, were dismissed with the promise of their money being returned, in place of which they received tickets for the twelfth concert, on Wednesday night, at Exeter Hall, which duly came to pass, under entirely new management, as the bills announced. It is proposed to complete the second series of fifteen concerts, and thus end the season. If these entertainments have failed, it is because the directors have not been zealous enough in the cause of art; they issued programmes quite in accordance—as they pandered to the worst tastes of the almost exploded pot-house public, and hence the desertion of the true amateurs. An enterprise giving good music, well executed, at cheap prices, is certain of liberal patronage, which will ere long effectually annihilate entertainments of the regular stamp. It is not sufficient to engage certain vocal and instrumental stars, and to mix up such artists with a host of mediocrities and impostors in an ill-digested programme, startled with the baldness and vulgarity of bygone days: it is to be hoped that the past will not be lost on the new directors, who, for the future, will do well to cease their concerts prior to the opera season: from October to April there is ample time to reap a profitable harvest, if properly managed. Mr. Jarrett, the born-player, is now the director. Mdlle. Angri was encored every time in her solos, "Ah qual giorno," from "Semiramide," in the Pays's second song "Non! no!" from the "Huguenots," and in the "Brindisi" from the "Lucrezia," which she gave three times. She was in fine voice, and sang splendidly. The other vocalists were Mrs. A. Newton, Miss Rose Braham, Herr Stigelli, an excellent tenor, Signor Ballini, Mr. Frodsham, Mdlle. Angri, a pleasing singer; and her stamp, Mdlle. Sapherino, played a fantasia of Vieuxtemp's with much skill. Herr Hekking, the violoncellist from Holland, made also a highly favourable début. Herr Dreyschock, the pianist, was in full force.

M. Godefroid, the celebrated harpist, gave his first matinée musicale on the 8th in return from the Continent, at the New Beethoven Rooms, in Queen Anne-street, on Wednesday. The rooms were crowded to overflow by a fashionable auditory. M. Godefroid is not only one of the most accomplished harp performers, but he is a composer of considerable ability. He performed two studies, "La Melancholie" and "Le Rêve" and his famed "Danse des Sylphes"—a most charming creation, in which the fancy and genius of the composer are conspicuous: he also executed a fantasia on themes from Meyerbeer's "Robert le Diable," and variations on the air "Nel cor pih," concluding with a prodigious display of executive skill in the "Carnaval de Venise," in which he rivals Paganini and Ernst in marvellous tours de force. He was enthusiastically received in all his pieces. Mdlle. de Ruppiln, Signor Brignoli (a pleasing tenor), and M. Lefort (a clever basso), with M. Frelon as accompanyist, assisted in the programme.

Signor Briccialdi's second flute matinée took place on Wednesday, at his residence in Frith-street.

Mr. R. Blagrove commenced on Thursday his series of concerting concerts, with the assistance of Guido Regondi and Messrs. S. and J. Cass, all very distinguished concertinists. His brother, Mr. Henry Blagrove, the celebrated violinist, and Misses Ransford and Owen, were included in the scheme.

The third and last of Mr. Osborne's agreeable matinées took place on Thursday, in the Harley-street Rooms, the program he comprising his own clever trio in A, and Mendelssohn's in D minor, executed by himself, Ernst, and Piatti, and Beethoven's sonata in E flat, played by Ernst and Mr. Osborne. The vocalists were Misses Catherine Hayes and Miss Lucombe.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—The third concert for the exhibition of Students of the Royal Academy of Music will take place this morning (Saturday). In our next Number notices will be given of yesterday morning's second concert, at the Royal Italian Opera, and of last night's closing of the season, at Exeter Hall, of the Sacred Harmonic Society, with Handel's "Israel in Egypt."——Mr. Bohr's third and last soirée of his series of pianoforte and violin performers took place on Friday.——The seventh concert of the Amateur Musical Society will take place next Monday.——The second "Grand, Classical, Dramatic, Miscellaneous, Musical Entertainment," at Her Majesty's Theatre, will not be given next Monday morning, with the whole vocal and orchestral strength of the establishment, and the addition of Thalberg.——Messrs. Macfarren and Edward Loder, the composers, take a joint benefit next Monday at the Hanover Rooms, when their operas, "Charles II." and the "Night Dancers," will be performed. Miss C. Hayes, Miss L. Pole, Mdlle. Nau, Messrs. S. Reeves, Harrison, Allen, Weiss, &c.,—Herr Ernst, Messrs. Benedict and Osborne, &c., will appear.——Mr. Hullah's concert at Willis's Rooms on Monday gives a quasi novelty. Mdlle. Elise Kriniz, a German pianiste of the musical school, well known in Paris, will arrive in London at the end of this month.

MR. ALBERT SMITH will commence his Musical Entertainment, entitled the "Overland Mail," in Willis's Rooms, on Monday next. The route has been from Dover to Boulogne, viâ the Desert, Cairo, the Pyramids, the Nile, Malta, Marseilles, and Paris, with illustrations, painted from original sketches, by Mr. W. Beverley.

REGISTERED LETTERS.—On and from the 1st of June next, registered letters will be forwarded through London on Sundays. At present they cannot be forwarded from country post-offices on Saturday night, because the registration fee is prepaid in money, and not by stamps. After the 1st of June next the registration fee must still be prepaid in money by the public, but post-masters will be compelled to affix stamps of the value of the fee to each registered letter. In all other post-masters are strictly prohibited from affixing stamps to letters for the public.

On Monday evening, within a few yards of Kensington Old Church, a bricklayer's labourer, named Patrick Barry, while in a state of drunken excitement, quarrelled with his wife because she refused him money, and having given the unfortunate creature a kick on the temple, death almost immediately ensued. He has been arrested and remanded from Hammersmith Police-office, on the charge of murder.

ANOTHER SAVINGS-BANK DEFAULTER.—We regret to have to announce another of these cases, now, unfortunately, too common. The Market Weighton Bank for Savings was established in 1835, as a branch of the Hull Savings-Bank. The design, as set forth in the prospectus, was "to enable the industrious and prudent to deposit their earnings or savings in a place of safe custody, and to receive back their money, with interest, at a short notice." Jeremiah Rountree, draper, an influential member of the Wesleyan Society, being a local preacher, class-leader, and trustee, and a most liberal contributor to all objects connected with the society, was the agent and manager of the branch establishment for the last fourteen years, and his character was always considered to be beyond suspicion. The directors of the Hull bank, having determined to investigate the affairs of all their branches, sent a deputation down to Market Weighton, on Friday, the 10th instant, who stated the object of their visit, when Mr. Rountree requested them to defer the investigation until after the fair, the week following. This they declined to do. Mr. Rountree afterwards acknowledged that there was a serious defalcation. The accounts were examined, and up to the present time it has been ascertained that, out of £8900, which had passed through Mr. Rountree's hands, there is a deficiency of no less than £3000. It appears from the books, that a system of making fictitious names and abstracting sums of money has been carried on from the commencement of Rountree's connexion with the branch. Different sums, varying from £31 to £50, have been paid at one time by the defaulter, with the view of management, and generally set alone. He used occasionally to call in an old director, upwards of seventy years of age, and has admitted that he was afraid of calling in others, lest the errors should be detected. It is thought there is sufficient in the Hull bank to the credit of the Market Weighton branch to pay the depositors 15s. in the pound. Rountree has conveyed his real and personal property to the trustees, and a party is bound for the sum of £150. It is hoped, however, that the depositors will not be serious losers. On the very day the bank closed an application was made for upwards of £400, belonging to some orphans, which was due on that day, the regular notice having been given. It is said that, in addition to the defalcation at the bank, Rountree's liabilities are nearly £3000.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

F W R—It is not correct. Black, at his third move, may obviously take the Bishop and postpone checkmate.

H B, Leeds—Under the circumstances mentioned, Black was bound to abide by the moves he had arranged, and his refusal to continue the game, because he was not permitted to retract them, is a subterfuge of which we doubt not he is by this time ashamed.

ALEXANDRINA—The diagrams are quite sound as mood ones. Merely need the process. Both, in the present instance, are incorrect.

M S, Liverpool—We are pleased to hear so good an account of the club, in the welfare of which we have always felt a lively interest.

J G Unilet, Sheffield—A LADY, SCITLE Yorkshire—See our notices above to F W R

DORKINENSIS—If the conditions of a Problem be given in five moves, and you effect it in less, you beat the author and show his Problem is defective.

T K must be good enough to write out the problem

M P. Exeter places 7 to "far-famed Staunton Chess Pieces" are procurable in your own city (Sterling, I. e we are not black-and-white), and at Messrs. Jaques and Son's, Hatton-garden, Messrs. Ivory, Holborn, and Wheeler, are correct. All others are wrong

SOLUTION (of No 326, by Sir G S) R F, R to Q Ardent; B D M, Sr Edmund, R V, are correct. All others are wrong

C M L—It shall be attended to

 Several communications on Chess, which want of space prevents our answering this week, shall be replied to in our next Number

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 329.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to Q 4th (double ch)	P to Q B 4th	3. Kt or Q mates
2 B to K 6th	P takes R, best	4. Kt Mates.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 330.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to Q 2d	P to K 6th or (a)	3 Kt to K 3d	P Queens
2. B to Q Kt 5th	P takes R, or (b)	4. Kt to K 4th or 2d—Mate.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
(a) 1.	Kt to K 3d (ch)	3. R to Q 4th (ch)	Moves
	Moves	4. B to Q Kt 5th—Mate.
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
2.	P to K 7th	4. R to Q sq
3. Kt to Q Kt 3d	R to R 8th	Mate.

PROBLEM NO. 331.

By HERR KIES, of Stuttgardt.

WHITE.

White, playing first, to mate in five moves.

MATCH BETWEEN THE GLASGOW AND THE NORTHUMBERLAND CLUBS.

SUBJOINED we give (from the Gateshead Observer) one of the two games played by correspondence in the match between the clubs of Glasgow and Newcastle, and which, after a contest of six months, ending March 30th, was re-signed in favour of the latter. The other game continues to "drag its slow length along." Our intention was to wait till both were complete, and then to publish them together, or in immediate succession; but a variety and systematic delay, practised on the part of Glasgow, renders it much more difficult to predict when the unfinished game will end than what its result will be. An observation such as this may seem ungracious, and is made reluctantly; but the Glasgow players, in spite of express stipulation and remonstrance, and in no very courteous manner, avail themselves so largely of that peculiar description of odds which consists in retracting moves and taking double the time agreed upon for transmitting them, that it would be unjust to pass the circumstance without comment. It is irksome enough over the board, as every one knows, to encounter an opponent who ponders long his obvious and almost only move, or who plays for a hopeless sole-mate when the game is lost and won; but few have experienced to what an extent these annoyances may be magnified in correspondence. Hence, the complaisant spirit with which we were prepared to treat the Scottish players in their defeat, is absorbed in our sympathy with the Northumbrians in their victory.

(Scotch Gambit.)

WHITE (Glasgow).	BLACK (Newcastle).	WHITE (Glasgow).	BLACK (Newcastle).
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	18. Q to R sq	Kt takes Kt
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	19. Q takes Kt	Q to her 3d (h)
3. P to Q 4th	P takes P	20. Kt to Q 4th	P to K 3d (i)
4. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	21. Q R to K sq	B to B 5th
5. P to Q B 3d	K Kt to B 3d	22. It to K 7th	B to Q 2d
6. P to K 5th	P to Q 4th	23. Q to K R 5th (j)	K R to K sq (l)
7. K B to Q Kt 5th	K Kt to K 5th	24. Kt to K 6th	It takes Kt
8. K Kt takes P (a)	Castles	25. Q takes B	Q to her B 4th (ch)
9. B takes Kt	P takes B	26. Q to K 3d	Q takes Q (ch)
10. Castles (b)	B to Q R 3d (c)	27. It takes Q	K to B sq (m)
11. K to K sq	B to Q Kt 2d	28. K takes R (ch)	B takes a
12. B to K 3d (d)	Q to her 2d	29. R to Q 3d (n)	K to his 2d
13. K Kt to Q Kt 3d (e)	Q to K 2d	30. K to B 2d	K to Q 3d
14. Q Kt to Q 2d	Q R to Q sq	31. R to Q sq	P to Q B 4th
15. P to Q R 4th (f)	B takes B	32. P to Q B 4th	P to Q 5th
16. It takes B	Q takes P	33. R to Q 3d	R to Q Kt sq
17. P to K B 3d (g)	Q to K B 5th	34. R to Q 2d (o)	R to Q Kt 5th
		35. R to B 2d	It takes R P

Glasgow resigns.

(a) P takes P is the customary move. By a curious coincidence, the position a now the same as in the Scotch game at move, and which although Glasgow knew, they did not.

(b) The pilots now leave the vessel to brave the deep waters, or, in other words, here end the book moves

(c) From the point the games diverges In the other, Glasgow plays the B to Q 2d, and it seems hard to decide which is the better move

(d) Threatening to win a piece, by first exchanging Bishops, and afterwards taking Knight with Rook

(e) Many interesting variations spring from Kt to Q 5th

(f) The queen retires to make all snug at home, and brood over fresh tactics

(g) This appears to weaken the Royal camp, but entails no real danger, while it serves the double purpose of keeping the Knight at a distance and cutting White to open an attack which leads to a rapid exchange of pieces.

(h) Better to have turned at Knight's 5th, perhaps.

(i) At first sight it appears to be of small consequence which Rook is made to occupy King's square; but, we believe, the difference between a won and a drawn game depends upon it.

(j) Probably Glasgow overlooked this move in playing—23 Q to K 8 6th. The advantage alluded to in the preceding note is now apparent—they are driven to exchange Rooks under most unpleasant circumstances.

(k) Black has now command of the open file, with time to play the King round to support the Pawns.

(l) Has White advanced Q Kt P, the Rook would have resumed his station at King's square, preparatory to the King going round to cut up the Pawns.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 578.—By Mr. H. B. B., of Lynn.

White: K at Q Kt sq, Q at her B 5th, B at Q Kt 3d, Kt at Q 4th, Ps at K Kt 6th and K 2d.

Black: K at his 8th, Q at K B 3d, Kts at K 8th sq and Q Kt 5th; Ps at K Kt 2d, K 5th, 8th, and Q Kt 7th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No 579. This admirable little stratagem is the invention of M. PREUSS, from La Régence.

White: K at K B 7th, Q at Q B 4th, Rs at Q B 2d and Q Kt 8th, Bs at K sq and K 6th, P at K B 5th.

Black. K at Q R 4th, Q at K R 7th, R at K R 4th, Bs at K Kt 7th and Q Kt 5th, Ps at K R 2d, K B 6th, Q B 4th, Q Kt 3d, Q R 3d, and Q R 6th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

Lord Normanby met with an accident on Thursday week. He was thrown from his horse when riding in the Bois de Boulogne, and considerably bruised. The injury is about the head and in one of his hands, but is not at all of any serious consequence.

The Rev. Dr. Warneford has paid over to the Rev. Chancellor Law, the Vice-Principal of Queen's College, Birmingham; the Rev. Vaughan Thomas Oxford, and William Sands Cox, F.S.S., Dean of the Faculty, the munificent sum of £1000 towards the endowment of the wardenship, to which office the Rev. Horace Gray, Prebendary of Bath and Wells and Vicar of Pitton, was appointed at the last annual meeting of the governors.

The subjoined telegraph communication between Dover and Calais which was to have been opened this month, will not now be completed and opened until the end of June.

On Saturday afternoon, a marine, named Crawford, belonging to the Victoria and Albert Royal yacht, in Portsmouth harbour, while under the influence of drink, jumped overboard from the Royal George, hulk to the yacht, and had sunk twice, when Mr. Sesil, clerk, jumped overboard, and seized him in the act of sinking a third time, and succeeded in keeping hold of the man till assistance was rendered by a boat's crew from the Royal George, when both parties were rescued from their peril ous situation.

"If Louis Philippe's time," said M. Piscatory, the late French Ambassador in Greece, the other day at a dinner of the Elysée Bourbon, to Lord Brougham, "Guizot and I used to row in the same boat;" upon which the noble convert to dep.tism observed, "Ay, ay! but not with the same oculs!"

The subjoined of the parish accounts of poor-relief in Birmingham shows a diminution in the expenditure for the relief and management of the poor, as compared with the preceding year; of no less a sum than £14,943 4s. 10d.; and on the annual expenditure, as compared with the same period, the very large amount of £26,193 9s. 4d.

The beautiful spire which adorned the west end of the church at Norton-by Galtby, was on Monday night, the 13th inst., struck by lightning or fire-ball, and the whole of the spire (which was seriously damaged by lightning in 1843, and then repaired) knocked down as low as the battlements. Part of the spire fell through the roof of the church, knocking down a portion of the gallery.

At the Silver-Mine Lime-works, Linlithgowshire. 3700 tons of stone were recently raised at one blast. The quantity of powder used to detach the immense weight of stone was five cwt. This, we believe, is the most extraordinary blast of rock which has ever been effected in Scotland.

Intelligence was received at Lloyd's on Saturday, by the Mary, Captain Hagget, just arrived at Bristol, from Newfoundland, of an immense field of ice, upwards of 150 miles in length, floating in the Atlantic, about the parallel of latitude 46. The Mary was entangled for several days among the icebergs, some of which were more than 200 yards high out of the water, and escaped from amongst them with extreme difficulty. The navigation of ice from the Polar seas this season is considered extremely favourable to the expeditions in search of Sir John Franklin and his brave companions.

The East India Company have paid into the Bank of England the sum of £2,000, to the credit of the representative of the late Lord Keane, being the amount of the one-eighth of the Ghuznee prize-money, reserved for final appropriation by the Government.

Commander Carmichael, R.N., commanding her Majesty's steam-sloop Spiteful, in the Mediterranean, succeeds to the handsome fortune of about £6000 a year and a baronetcy, in consequence of the death of his brother, who has only enjoyed his honours and property for a very short period.

The affairs of the Kingsland Literary Institution are to be wound up, in compliance with a petition from the shareholders.

Recent news from Havannah announces the cholera as having raged there for some weeks. The number of deaths were sixty daily.

A collision of two Canadian steamers has occurred on Lake Erie, near Port Maitland, by which one, having on board a portion of the British 32rd Regiment, was sunk in a few minutes in eight fathoms of water. The sergeon, Dr. Grantham, and twenty-four soldiers, and thirteen women and children were drowned.

A shrewd farmer in the Vermont Legislature declined lately answering the speech of a member, who was remarkable for his verbosity and eloquence and self-conceit, thus: "Mr. Speaker, I can't reply to that 'ere speech, for it always wrenches me terribly to kick at nothing."

A confession of two Canadian farmers, stated that "Mr. William Crowder, who saddened us with his assurances of agricultural ruin, and alarmed us with the threat of a rural rebellion for the repeal of the Corn-laws, has just made application for another farm for a nephew, and offered to guarantee the rent!"

The Port Nicholson (New Zealand) papers, received viâ Sydney, mention the death of the notorious chief of the Ngatotox tribe, Te Rauperaha. He was of great age, approaching fourscore, and possessed considerable influence among the natives of the southern district.

The farm of Hallowood, in the parish of Lhanbryde (Scotland), the last occupant having died, was let the other day to a new tenant, at a little more than double the former rent.

Recent letters from Arabia state that a "monster" trial is about to take place in that city before a military tribunal. Seventy persons are already arrested, and it is expected that many more will be arrested still. It relates to a vast association of Hebrew merchants, in which the secret manifestations as far as known. Many precious articles have been discovered in the possession of the persons arrested.

Mr. Stoddart Douglas has been announced, at a large and influential public meeting, to stand at Maidenene, as the Protectionist colleague of Sir E. Filmer, as candidate for the representation of West Kent, whenever a dissolution takes place.

Last Saturday a meeting was held at Worcester, at which it was determined to use every available influence to prevent the return of J. H. H. Foley, Esq., at the next election, and to promote that of Mr. Clive, the son of the gallant colonel of the Worcestershire Yeomanry, on Prescott-hill.

An Indian boy, named Prince, a boy in the employ of Mr. Fobert, trainer to Lord Eglinton, was kicked in the chest by a favourite horse, named Probity, and expired the next day; he was brother to John Prince, the jockey

At the recent petty sessions of Bungay, in Norfolk, John Buxton, of St. James's, assistant overseer, was, on the information of W. C. Hotson, Esq., auditor of the West Norfolk audit district, committed for trial on the charge of having uttered two warrants, issued by the High Constable of the Bungay division, for the county rate; and also with having forged a receipt for the sum of £1 19s. 1½d., purporting to be a receipt from Robert Nunn, the overseer for the current year, of the balance due to the parish from him the said John Buxton.

One of the Whitbarn fishermen, while out fishing last week in deep water, caught a shark about three feet in breadth, to which was attached a hook, a line and a long rod, and a piece of wood about the same length. The fish seems to have had this appendage for a considerable length of time.

It is said that Mr. Wyon, R.A., has been commissioned by the East India Company to prepare a die for a gold medal to be presented to Major Edwardes, in acknowledgment of the services rendered by that officer during the recent war in the East; and that, as it is intended solely for the Major, the die will be destroyed as soon as the medal is struck, so that no duplicate shall exist.

From Rio Janeiro, dates to the 5th of April announce that the ravages of the yellow fever were awful, there having been 14,000 deaths in less than three months. Many English and American vessels, as many vessels had lost every soul on board, and there were no seamen to man half the vessels in the harbour.

A spacious new church has been erected at the sole expense of Lord Haddo (who has also given a liberal endowment), in the Christ Church district of the extensive parish of St. George's-in-the-East. The Rev. William M'Call, B.A., late curate of St. Mary's, Whitechapel, has been appointed by Lord Haddo to the incumbency of St. Mary's.

The Liverpool Journal states that serious ravages were made by the small-pox amongst a vast number of children in and about St. Helen's. It is attributed to some objections raised by nearly all the families against having them vaccinated. It has been asserted that there were, a few days ago, some twenty children dead in one street in St. Helen's.

In behalf of the Exhibition of 1851, among the subscriptions last reported to her Majesty's commissioners are upper numerous contributions from the working classes throughout the country. In the metropolis the workmen in the employ of Mr. T. Cubitt have subscribed upwards of £40; those of Messrs. Brandwood, £19 10s.; those in the establishment of Messrs. Waterlow, lithographers, £21 19s.; the locomotive establishment of the London and South-Western Railway, £29 13s.

Lieutenant-General Sir John Foster Fitzgerald, K.C.B., Colonel of the 18th Royal Irish, has been appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the Forces in the Windward and Leeward Islands, vice Lieutenant-General Sackville H. Berkeley, who has resigned.

Great alterations have been effected at St. James's Church, Taunton. The fine old font has undergone a complete restoration, and is now a prominent and ornamental feature of the sacred building. Some of the pews have also been cut down, and new ones of a more slightly and appropriate character substituted in their place.

Out of 70 companies of National Guards possessed by the town of Mar cilles (France), 30 have been disbanded and ordered to deliver up their arms within three days, under pe alty of six months' imprisonment. The reason assigned for this bold step is, that, in all the disgraced companies, some disaffected parties lurked, some who did not wish well to the Government, some base sheep, or rather red.

At the Duke of Portland's rent-day, recently held at the Queen's Head Inn, Morpeth, his Grace, with a due consideration of the seriously-depressed state of the agricultural interest, generously returned his tenants ever his extensive estates at Bothal demesne, the large amount of 25s per cent. May a merry peal of bells was rung on the occasion at Morpeth, and the venerable Duke's health drunk with nine times nine.

Colonel Mason has most liberally presented a handsome and capital organ to Necton Church (Norfolk), which was recently opened.

ACCIDENT TO HER MAJESTY'S STEAMER "CUCKOO," AT JERSEY.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO HER MAJESTY'S STEAMER "CUCKOO."

In the Jersey Times, of April 16, appeared a letter of grave remonstrance on the subject of the non-placing of the beacon on the Oyster Rocks (Les Huitrières) at the entrance to the small roads to St. Helier, which beacon had been swept away by violent storms some three months previously. On the 15th of May, one month from the publication of this remonstrance, her Majesty's steamer Cuckoo, Captain Dumaresq, justified its forebodings of danger. The Birkenhead, Queen's steamer, of 1200 tons, Captain Stevens, having anchored in the large roads on Tuesday evening, under the charge of Mr. Gallichan, Queen's pilot, with the dépôt 26th Regiment on board, from Queenstown, Ireland, for the Jersey garrison, the Cuckoo, on this station, proceeded to her early on Wednesday morning and took on board 300 of her troops, with whom she was steaming towards Victoria Harbour at about half-past five o'clock, being at the time in charge of Mr. Payn, Queen's pilot, when her starboard bow suddenly struck upon the dangerous and unbeaconed rocks in question. Just previously, Captain Dumaresq, hearing some doubt expressed to Mr. Payn by Mr. Gallichan (who had come on board from the Birkenhead as a mere passenger to shore) as to the safety of his course, gave the order "Ease her!" an order which fortunately mitigated, although it was too late to prevent, the violence of the strike. The consternation of all on board at the moment of the collision was great; but owing to the coolness of Captain Dumaresq and his officers, the exertions of Major Hogarth and the officers commanding, and to the disciplined obedience of the men, they remained in their places. Captain Dumaresq then got all the Cuckoo's steam up, ordered the troops en masse astern, to keep her bows as much as possible from the water, and happily succeeded in driving her, just beyond the harbour's entrance, into shallow water, the vessel slightly canting over towards her larboard side as she took the ground. All the troops on deck were then safely landed in boats.

Fortunately, the wives and children and baggage had not been taken on board from the Birkenhead.

On the fall of the tide, it was found that the Cuckoo had received extensive injury in her starboard bow, in which a hole of considerable size had been made, low down, and her copper was scraped some distance along her starboard side. No time was lost in rendering the aperture, by means of hides, &c., as water-tight as possible; and as soon as the rising tide permitted in the evening, she was floated into the inner harbour.

The crew of the Cuckoo, we are happy to learn, had time to secure most of their clothes, &c., before the tide washed over her decks in Victoria harbour.

Now that the late serious accident to a Queen's vessel—an accident which, but for the admirable presence of mind and promptitude of action of her commander, might have been attended by a dreadful loss of human life—must have convinced the authorities that the re-erection of the Oyster-rocks beacon is necessary for the safety of vessels entering or leaving the harbour, we trust that they will at once re-erect it, if they have not already replaced it; and that they will also forthwith cause beacons to be placed upon every other rock from which the least danger can be reasonably apprehended for such vessels.

We have to thank a Jersey correspondent for the accompanying Sketch.

THE CORK, BLACKROCK, AND PASSAGE RAILWAY.

(From our own Correspondent.)

In our Number 269, Vol. 10, for June 26, 1847, we gave a sketch of "Lady Deans commencing the Cork, Blackrock, and Passage Railway," by cutting a turf on the grounds of Sir Thomas Deane. We have now much pleasure in returning to the same spot, after an absence of nearly three years, to record the first engine and tender passing over the line. This event, looked forward to by the citizens for some time past, took place on Tuesday, the 14th, and was hailed with delight by the health-seeking as well as recreation-enjoying portion of the community, to whom, as well as to the business portion of the citizens, it will be a great boon.

For some time, in the early stages of the works on this line, doubts were entertained as to the chance of its ever being completed; but, fortunately, the whole management passed into the hands of a few practical business men, who brought the undertaking to its present state; and that, too, without the aid of loan, or having pressed with severity on the shareholders, and at a considerable amount under the first estimate for the line.

In a few days the passenger traffic will commence, and open, even to the Corkonians, for the first time, glimpses of scenery along the road for which they are little prepared, notwithstanding the many thousand voyages made by steamers up and down the river. After leaving the station at Passage, the line runs close by the side of the public road, and sweeps around Horsehead, showing the beauties of Merino, up to Belvelay Bridge. Smith Barrey's Bay, the little island, and beautifully undulating and planted background of hilly scenery on the right. After rounding Horsehead the line again runs in close by the high-road, and shows a broad lake surrounded on all sides by richly planted hills, studded with the mansions of wealthy citizens and country gentlemen; having in the distance Blackrock Castle and the Mathew Testimonial Tower, with a peep at the Glanmire side of the river. At Stop Island, the rail for the first time crosses the high road and mouth of the Douglas Channel, previous to entering the deep cutting at Blackrock, and shows the Douglas Channel. After passing through the cutting, the line again joins the water, and comes out at Dundanion, as shown in the accompanying Sketch, exhibiting at a glance one of the finest views on the river—the busy city, with its tall spires, its smoking chimneys, and hundreds of taper masts, with the broad sheet of water in the forepart of the picture, and the banks of Blackrock, the brickfields, and Glanmire on each side, with the busy splash of the steamer and sluggish move of the deeply-laden emigrant vessel.

From Cork to Passage the line is a dead level, and presented no "engineering difficulties;" save at Blackrock, where a long and deep cutting had to be made so as to reach the mouth of the Douglas Channel, where it again became a labour of filling, and continued on to Horsehead, from which place in to the station at Passage a sea-wall had to be built, thus to terminate the works for the present.

On Tuesday, the carriages having arrived by the Great Southern and Western Railway, were placed on the rails, and sent up and down the line until three o'clock, when a full freight of the directors and shareholders—as many as could be accommodated on both engine and tender, besides what the carriages could contain—were taken down in 17 minutes and brought back in 16½, performing the run up and down quite to the satisfaction of all, and without the least possible oscillation or disagreeable motion.

It is understood that the directors of the York, Newcastle, and Berwick Railway Company intend opening the new stone bridge over the Tweed at Berwick on Tuesday, the 18th of June, the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, and that the event will be celebrated by a dinner on a magnificent scale at Newcastle upon-Tyne. The only work now remaining to be accomplished at the bridge is the filling in of the ballast on the top of the arches, the laying of the rails, and the completion of the parapet.

THE CORK, BLACKROCK, AND PASSAGE RAILWAY—DUNDANION.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

TURPIN'S OAK.

Trees often become memorials of strange characters, scenes, and events. At Penshurst, we have, or rather had, the Oak planted by that "flower of chivalry" Sir Philip Sidney, "who was a gentleman finished and complete, who trod from his cradle to his grave amid incense and flowers, and died in a dream of glory."

The Oak we here illustrate is associated with a very different fame: it is a venerable relic, still standing, in the last sad stages of decay, upon a verdant plot of ground, opposite the "Green Man," on the road to Barnet. According to tradition, it has weathered some centuries. The notorious Dick Turpin was, in his time, accustomed to take up his station behind this tree when he was intent upon a freebooting errand in this part of the country; in other words, this tree was his ambush. Its closeness to the high-road rendered it a very desirable spot or Dick, as well as for highwaymen generally, who, about a century and a quarter ago, were continually robbing the mails, as well as commercial travellers (bag-men), proceeding to and fro between London and the north of England. From time to time have been abstracted from the bark of this oak pistol balls, which had been discharged at the trunk to deter highwaymen, should any have been at hand, from attacking the parties travelling.

"TURPIN'S OAK," AT FINCHLEY.

The late Mr. R. Nuthall, solicitor to the East India Company, was upon one occasion stopped in his carriage by two highwaymen, who came upon him from behind this oak, as he was proceeding to his country-house at Monken Hadley, when the above gentleman, being armed with pistols, wounded one of the thieves so severely that he afterwards died of the effects. This tree still goes, in the neighbourhood, under the name of "Turpin's Oak."

Would that this monarch of the wood were linked with a purer fame than that of rare Dick Turpin, who, by the way, has found an eloquent apologist in Mr. Ainsworth. "We shall, perhaps," says our novelist, in the winding up page of "Rookwood," "be accused of dilating too much upon the character of the highwayman, and we plead guilty to the charge. But we found it impossible to avoid running a little into extremes. * * * * * Perhaps we may have placed him in too favourable a point of view—and yet we know not. As upon those of more important personages, many doubts rest upon his history. Such as we conceive him to be we have drawn him—hoping that the benevolent reader, upon finishing our tale, will arrive at the same conclusion; and, in the words of the quaint old prologue to the 'Prince of Prigs' Revels,'

> Thank that man
> Can make such thief a complete Rosclan!'

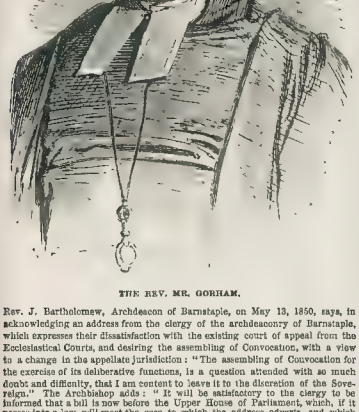
Turpin was hanged at York, in 1739. His remains lie in the desecrated churchyard of St. George, without the Fishergate postern, where a plain stone slab bears the simple initials "R. T." Beneath it rests Richard Turpin.

An Informer Outwitted.—The driver of a coach which journies between a distant city and Bath, last week, received a hint from the cutler of an inn in the suburbs of the latter city that a common informer was seated on the roof of his coach. Conscious that he had exceeded his licensed number, the knight of the whip resigned the ribbons to the cutler, and hastened to the magistrates, laid an information against himself, was fined £5, and received back one-half (£2 10s.) as the informer's fee. Great was the chagrin of the common informer, on presenting himself before the bench for a summons, to find that he had been forestalled.

Monster Hailstones.—The following extract from a letter is published by the Bombay Telegraph:—"I just write these few lines to inform you that on Sunday last, between the hours of four and five o'clock, a tremendous fall of hail occurred at a village called Condwul, about six miles from Sattara. The hailstones are described as being as large as cocoa-nuts. Several houses fell, cattle were slain, and several people were killed by the houses falling in. Many large fish were killed in the river also. The natives declare they have never seen such hail in their lives. I am within the mark when I say they were as large as cocoa-nuts: they have been described as much larger. In camp we had merely a tremendous dust-storm, but for several hours the sides of the hill were white with the hail, like snow in appearance."

THE GORHAM CASE.

Letters, of which the following are the substance, were published by the Morning Post on Wednesday. The Archbishop of Canterbury, writing to the



THE REV. MR. GORHAM.

Rev. J. Bartholomew, Archdeacon of Barnstaple, on May 13, 1850, says, in acknowledging an address from the clergy of the archdeaconry of Barnstaple, which expresses their dissatisfaction with the existing court of appeal from the Ecclesiastical Courts, and desiring the assembling of Convocation, with a view to a change in the appellate jurisdiction: "The assembling of Convocation for the exercise of its deliberative functions, is a question attended with so much doubt and difficulty, that I am content to leave it to the discretion of the Sovereign." The Archbishop adds: "It will be satisfactory to the clergy to be informed that a bill is now before the Upper House of Parliament, which, if it passes into a law, will meet the case to which the address adverts, and which proves that the subject in which so many of the clergy feel a deep interest has not escaped the attention of the Bishops of the Church." The Bishop of Exeter, also writing to the Rev. Mr. Bartholomew, on May 16, 1850, says: "I find it very difficult to acknowledge in a manner satisfactory to my own feelings the very gratifying address which you and the clergy of your archdeaconry have been pleased to make to me. The terms in which you speak of my endeavours to discharge, on the late trying occasion, the high duties annexed to my office, fill me with an overpowering sense of my own weakness. I have not only strong reason to hope that the judgment (given by the Judicial Committee) itself will ultimately be proved to be invalid; but, even if that hope be disappointed, I am confident that it can be shown, on close inspection, to be of no authority whatever as a precedent in any future case. Into the grounds of this expectation I will not now enter. Suffice it to say, that so confident am I in their soundness and force, that, if it should again be my misfortune to be required by the Crown, or any other patron, to institute to cure of souls within my diocese any clergyman who holds the opinions held by Mr. Gorham, or otherwise plainly contradicting the doctrine of our Church on the great article of baptism, I should not only feel it my duty to reject him, but should rely with full assurance in the justice even of the Judicial Committee, that they would sustain me in taking the course which I here announce."

We have received a letter, signed Fides, which enters more into the doctrinal part of the question than will suit all our readers. We shall only copy from it, therefore, two sentences:—"The cause of the great diversity of opinion as to the doctrine of our Church on the baptism of infants, is that the Church is not, in reality, uniform in her teaching. If a person interpret the Offices, &c., by the Articles, he will come to one conclusion; if vice versâ, to another. Now, the 'Institution of Christ' has nothing to do with infant baptism. The 'one baptism for the remission of sins' was applied, originally, to adults."

We are assured by the Vicar of St. Mary's, Nottingham, in reference to a supposition of ours last week, that only one single individual clergyman in that neighbourhood has addressed the Bishop of Exeter.

The Court of Common Pleas has announced that it will deliver its judgment on the motion to prohibit the Court of Arches from proceeding to carry into execution the decision of the Privy Council, on Monday next.

We give this week a portrait of the Rev. Mr. Gorham; but we have it not in our power to append to it a long account of the rev. gentleman. He has lived, apparently, too unobtrusive, and probably too useful a life, to supply many materials for a biography. We can say of him that he was educated at the University of Cambridge, where he was a Fellow of Queen's College for eighteen years, and where, at Trinity College, at present he has a son. For thirty-five years he laboured assiduously as an unbeneficed clergyman, and, at the end of that period was preferred by Lord Chancellor Lyndhurst, in January, 1846, to the perpetual vicarage of St. Just, Penwith, in Cornwall, the most western parish, except one, with a population, Mr. Gorham says, of between 7000 and 8000 miners. His differences with the Bishop began soon after his appointment. He says, in the Introduction to his "Examination," a book published by Hatchard and Son, Piccadilly, and by Seeleys, Fleet-street:—

"When the Bishop of Exeter instituted me, he not only expressed his great satisfaction that the Chancellor had listened to his request, that he would not present a young or an inexperienced man, but he suggested and assisted me in an application to the Crown, that her Majesty would condescend to nominate a district minister, of my own choice, in the north of my parish on the ground that similarity of views was of great importance for effectual ministerial co-operation. Sir Robert Peel at once acceded to my recommendation, so strengthened by the Bishop.

"In a few months, however, the Bishop suddenly altered his tone. In the summer he rebuked me for having used the words 'THE NATIONAL ESTABLISHMENT' (instead of 'THE Church') in a circular for building a district chapel. Soon after, he stated his 'high disapprobation' that I had advertised for a curate 'free from TRACTARIAN ERROR;' he hinted, in a manner not to be misunderstood, that I belonged to 'a most dangerous set of men;' and he plainly told me that he 'no longer trusted me,' and would narrowly watch any one who applied for my curacy. This determination occasioned me much embarrassment. At length, however, I nominated a curate, who had been long in orders: the Bishop summoned him for an examination, PERSONALLY ON BAPTISM, the foundation of all Christian doctrine, and intimated to him that his acceptance of a curacy from me was unfavourable to him: he was however ultimately licensed."

So began that dispute which is shaking the Church to its foundations. In August, 1847, the present Lord Chancellor having understood that Mr. Gorham wished to exchange his vicarage, which was at his time of life too heavy a charge for him, and inconveniently remote, nominated him to Brampford Speke, a place with a much smaller population and a much smaller income than St. Just; the former yielding £316 per annum, and the latter £449. On his presentation to Brampford Speke, the Bishop of Exeter, who had inscribed on his testimonials an injurious attack on his character, and had otherwise shewn much hostility to Mr. Gorham, describing him as "a man indulged in a peculiar license of language, thought it necessary to inquire into the soundness of Mr. Gorham's doctrines before inducting him. The examination by the Bishop was begun December, 1847, and concluded in February, 1848. It occupied fifty-two hours in eight days; and, at the end of it, the Bishop finding Mr. Gorham not sound in doctrine according to his views, refused to induct him into Brampford Speke. Mr. Gorham describes the refusal as involving the liberties of the whole body of the clergy and laity. The remaining steps of his career, involving the whole of the process before the Arches Court and the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, are too recent and have excited too much attention to make it desirable for us now to recount them. They have been already recorded in our Journal. Towards the close of a long life, spent in the humble but most useful offices of the Church, Mr. Gorham finds himself the object of public curiosity. Without any effort on his part, he has acquired great notoriety; and when inquiries are made into his previous career, much more is not discovered than is common to all good men. He lives in the performance of his duties, and will die such that, till the Bishop of Exeter fastened on him all the pomp and glare of a great theological contest, promised to be his "whole history." Independently of the vexation and trouble, the perturbation of spirit and bodily fatigue caused by such a contest, it must have been to Mr. Gorham very expensive. Some assistance has been given to the Bishop of Exeter to enable him to bear his expenses. We have not heard that the party in the Church which shares Mr. Gorham's opinions has assisted him with its purse.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

Appointments and Preferments.—The Rev. Alexander Rhind Webster, of Bradninch, Devon, to Plymtree Rural Deanery, in the diocese of Exeter. The Rev. Francis Lear, to the Rectory of Bishopston, alias Bibbesborne, with Frampston and the Vicarage of Bishopstone annexed. The Rev. Robert Hole, to the Rectory of Northtawton, Devon. The Rev. J. Haworth, to the Rectory of St. Michael's, Chester. The Rev. — Hames, to the Rectory of Galby, Leicestershire. The Rev. Charles John Bathurst, to the Rectory of Billingford, Norfolk. The Rev. Henry Ralph Smythe, to the Rectory of Beckbury, Salop. The Rev. Daniel Haigh, to the Vicarage of Buckden, Hunts. The Rev. Stratford Leigh, to the Vicarage of Hatfield Peverell, Essex. The following have been appointed Surrogates in the Deanery of Holsworthy:—The Rev. F. B. Briggs, Rev. F. Parker, Rev. T. H. Kingdon, Rev. W. Edgcombe, Rev. T. W. Melhuish, Rev. P. W. Hamilton, and The Rev. W. N. Jepson, Vicar of St. Martin, Lincoln, to be a Surrogate. The Rev. Samuel Sandercock, Vicar of Penzance and Rural Dean, to be a Surrogate for the diocese of Ripon. The Rev. W. H. Hill, M.A., late incumbent of Ironbridge, Salop, and formerly lecturer of St. Martin's, Birmingham, to the living of St. Andrew's, Birmingham, vice Rev. O. B. Moore, resigned; patron, the Bishop of Worcester; net val. £400.

Testimonials.—The following clergymen have lately received testimonials of affection and esteem:—The Rev. E. J. Treffry, from the boys of King Edward VI.'s Free Grammar-School Great Berkhampstead, on his resigning the head-mastership of the school. The Rev. James W. Sproule, from the congregation of Walcot Church, Bath. The Rev. J. Brame, from the congregation of St. Paul's Church, Westleigh, on the withdrawal of the assistance of the Curates' Aid Society. The Rev. Robert Aitkin, the Rector of Pendean, St. Just in Penwith, from the parishioners. The Very Rev. Archibald Campbell Tait, Dean of Carlisle, from the inhabitants of Rugby.

Letters have just been received from the Bishop of Victoria stating his safe arrival at Hong Kong, on March 29 He sailed from Torbay on Nov. 19.

Secessions to Rome.—We regret to learn that two estimable clergymen, highly beloved and respected for their amiable character and the exemplary discharge of their sacred duties, were received at Rome, in Easter week, into the Roman Catholic Church. Their names are the Rev. John Henry Wynne, B.C.L., Fellow of All Souls College, and the Rev. James Laird Patterson, M.A., of Trinity College.—The Times.

The Rev. W. Maskell has officially resigned the living of St. Mary Church, Devon.—Guardian.

The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol has just given £600 to the three small livings of Horsley, Oxenhall, and Deerhurst, in Gloucestershire, towards the erection of parsonage-houses.

PLATE PRESENTED TO THE REV. DR. TAIT, LATE OF RUGBY SCHOOL.

PLATE PRESENTED TO THE DEAN OF CARLISLE.

In our Journal of April 20 we described the very interesting proceedings on the presentation of the Scholars' Memorial to the Rev. Dr. Tait, Head Master of Rugby School, on his appointment to the Deanery of Carlisle.

We now engrave the Testimonial, a group of three figures—Faith, supported by Philosophy and History, designed and modelled by Mr. Alfred Brown, under the inspection of Mr. E. H. Bailey, R.A.; and executed in silver by Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, the successors to Storr and Mortimer. The composition is a very successful one: the panel of the plinth bears the following inscription:—"Viro admodum Reverendo A. C. Tait, LL.D., D.D., Scholæ Rugbeensis alumni, 1850."

DEATH OF M. GAY-LUSSAC.

Science has just lost one of its brightest ornaments in the death of M. Gay-Lussac, which took place on the 9th instant, at his residence, in the Jardin des Plantes, at Paris.

THE LATE M. GAY-LUSSAC.

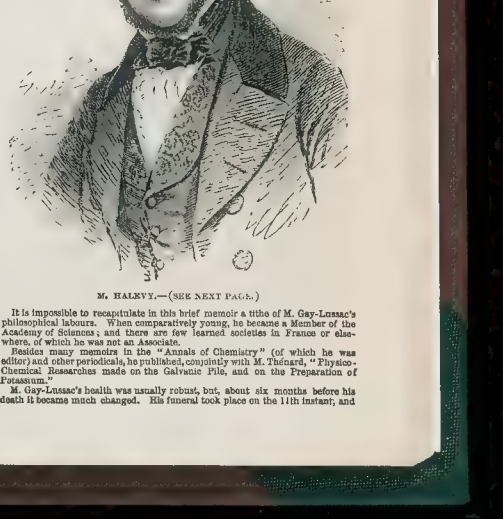
Nicolas-François Gay-Lussac was born at St. Leonard (Haut-Vienne), on the 6th of December, 1788. In 1816 he was chosen Professor of Chemistry at the Polytechnic School. He had previously distinguished himself by his aërial voyages, for the observation of atmospheric phenomena at great heights. Accompanied by M. Biot, he proposed these researches to the French Government; the offer was seconded by Berthollet and Laplace; and Chaptal, then Minister of the Interior, gave the proposition his warm support. The war-balloon which had been employed by the French army in Egypt was given to the custody of MM. Biot and Gay-Lussac, and refitted, at the public expense, under their direction.

Besides the usual provision of barometers, thermometers, hygrometers, and electrometers, they had two compasses and a dipping-needle, with another fine needle, carefully magnetized, and suspended by a very delicate silk thread, for ascertaining by its vibrations the force of magnetic attraction. To examine the electricity of the different strata of the atmosphere, they carried several metallic wires, from sixty to three hundred feet in length, and a small electrophorus feebly charged. For galvanic experiments they had procured a few discs of zinc and copper, with some frogs, to which they added some insects and birds. It was also intended to bring down a portion of air from the higher regions, to be subjected to a chemical analysis; and for this purpose a flask, carefully exhausted and fitted with a stopcock, had been prepared for them.

They ascended from Paris, August 23, 1804, and made a number of very interesting experiments at various heights, ranging from 6500 to 13,000 feet. On September 15, in the same year, M. Gay-Lussac made a second ascent, and reached the great height of four miles and a quarter; he brought down with him from this elevation a flask of air, which, on analysis, was found to be exactly the same as the air collected near the surface of the earth. These experiments are well described in "A System of Aëronautics," by John Wise, a copy of which work reached us from Philadelphia, a few days since. The author observes:

"The ascents performed by MM. Biot and Gay-Lussac are memorable, as being the first ever undertaken solely for objects or science. It is impossible not to admire the intrepid coolness with which they conducted those experiments, operating, while they floated in the highest regions of the atmosphere, with the same composure and precision as if they had been quietly seated in their cabinet at Paris. Their observations on the force of terrestrial magnetism show, most conclusively, its deep source and wide extension. The identity of the constitution of the atmosphere, to a vast altitude, was likewise ascertained. The facts noted by Gay-Lussac, relative to the state of the thermometer at different heights, appear generally to confirm the law which theory assigns for the gradation of temperature in the atmosphere; but many interesting points were left untouched by this philosopher."

Few men have led such a life of scientific industry as M. Gay-Lussac. There is scarcely a branch of physical or chemical science to which he has not contributed some important discovery. Sometimes he engaged alone in these researches; at others he chose eminent philosophers for his colaborateurs, among the most distinguished of whom were M. Thénard and M. Alexandre de Humboldt; and he was especially noticed by M. Berthollet. M. Gay-Lussac was an able and ingenious manipulator, and has made a vast number of analyses and experiments. His discovery of the general laws in the composition of bodies, particularly in the animal and vegetable kingdoms, was a very important labour. By his experiments on mercury and elastic fluids, he ascertained that whatever may be the nature of the fluid, it dilates equally from the temperature of ice to that of boiling water, and that it acquires an increase in volume of one-third. In conjunction with M Humboldt, he likewise made observations on the theory of M. Biot, who, from data supplied by M. de la Perouse, endeavoured to determine the position of the magnetical equator, and its intersection with the terrestrial equator. The result of their inquiry is, that the great chains of mountains, and even volcanoes, have no perceptible influence on the magnetic power, and that that power diminishes in proportion to the distance from the terrestrial equator.



M. HALEVY.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

It is impossible to recapitulate in this brief memoir a tithe of M. Gay-Lussac's philosophical labours. When comparatively young, he became a Member of the Academy of Sciences; and there are few learned societies in France or elsewhere, of which he was not an Associate.

Besides many memoirs in the "Annals of Chemistry" (of which he was editor) and other periodicals, he published, conjointly with M. Thénard, "Physico-Chemical Researches made on the Galvanic Pile, and on the Preparation of Potassium."

M. Gay-Lussac's health was usually robust, but, about six months before his death it became much changed. His funeral took place on the 11th instant; and was attended by a great concourse of savans and family friends. M. Pouillet, in the name of the Faculty of Sciences, pronounced the last tribute to M. Gay-Lussac's genius. M. Arago was too strongly affected to speak himself on the mournful occasion; but, through M. Flourens, he conveyed his regret for his illustrious friend. M. Thénard, by a few eloquent words, deeply moved the sympathy of his hearers; and, after being addressed by MM. Becquerel, Chevreul, and Despretz, the assembly separated.

M. HALÉVY.

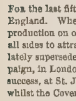
For the last fifteen years this great composer has enjoyed a high reputation in England. Whether from the success of his works in France, or from their re-production on our own stage, circumstances have, however, lately combined on all sides to attract general attention towards him. The French composers have lately superseded the Italian maestri; and at the opening of the theatrical campaign, in London, this year, two of his minor works were given, with signal success, at St. James's Theatre; another was also successful at the Princess', where the Covent Garden establishment announced the production of two of his serious operas. It was found, likewise, that he had been engaged, in conjunction with M. Scribe, in writing another of the most important and promising character on the subject of Shakespeare's "Tempest." On the eve of the production of this work, on account of its authors and of its scene, equally the object of general curiosity, some account of the life of M. Halévy cannot fail to prove interesting.

Fromental Halévy was born in Paris at the beginning of the present century. His father was a German, but a mother a French lady. As the boy showed a precocious understanding, and his father, like most of his countrymen, was devotedly fond of philosophy and belles-lettres, the young Halévy was, at an unusually early age, sent to an academy. However, a few lessons on the pianoforte having been given him, with a view to employ his leisure moments and to vary and relieve his attention, an invincible love of the musical art absorbed all his thoughts. His father, finding at last he could not surmount this propensity, wisely gave way, and placed his son, at ten years of age, at the Great Conservatoire. There so rapid was his progress, that when only twelve years of age he won the Grand Prize of Harmony against all his antlers. Soon afterwards he had the still greater good-fortune of attracting the attention of one whose name and works will endure as long as the art of music. At thirteen he studied composition under Cherubini. Only two years afterwards, when that great master was obliged to visit London (in 1815), so high an opinion did he entertain of the young Halévy, that he chose him as his temporary substitute to direct his class at the Conservatoire. From this moment the great object of ambition with the young artist was to follow the example of his master, and visit the schools of Italy. A new triumph afforded him this opportunity. In 1819, having won the grand prize of composition of the Institute, he was sent by the Academy of France to Rome. He spent three years at Italy, travelling from one musical city to the other examining the works of such old composers as Marcello and Palestrina, studying under such renowned masters as Saberi and Zingarelli. From Italy he went to Vienna, purposely to see Beethoven, the great object of his reverence—one who, like him, had been a favourite pupil of Cherubini Beethoven. This sublime composer received him kindly, but gave him a melancholy proof that he had lost one of his most splendid organs—music—that of hearing; for, to give him a sample of his inspiration, he played on a harpsichord with broken strings, and so totally out of tune, as to produce nothing but clashing discords, although the immortal Beethoven did not perceive it. The tune was now come when the young Halévy must return to Paris, and show "the mettle of his pasture." His first composition was "Pygmalion"—a work which he offered to the Grande Académie de Musique. It was immediately accepted; and its combination of Italian melody, blended with German harmony, created a great sensation amongst the critics whose privilege it is to witness the prolonged preparations for producing an opera which are observed at the first lyrical theatre of France. Political troubles, however, soon interfered to prevent the production of this opera. Halévy resumed his studies until 1827. At the beginning of this year he gave the Opéra Comique a work entitled "Pâdua," which was successful; but Zoloire was immediately demanded. This was the "Artisan," which fully sustained the opinion entertained of his abilities. Passing over minor works, we must particularly notice an opera which he subsequently gave at the Italiens in 1830. This was an Italian opera buffa, entitled "Il Dilettante;" it was performed for two consecutive seasons with immense success, by Malibran, Zuchelli, Donzelli, &c. In 1830 he produced at the Académie de Musique a ballet, "Manon l'Escuit;" and, in 1831, at the same theatre, a ballet opera, "La Tentation," which was performed not only in Paris, but in all parts of Europe—its catching, sprightly, popular, although highly original melodies, being reproduced on every hand-organ then manufactured for the unfortunate inhabitants of the earth.

In 1832, Hérold having suddenly died in all the flush of his triumph, leaving his score of "Ludovic" imperfect, Halévy undertook the pious duty of finishing and producing it on the stage; and this work has since become one of Mme. Damoreau la Fleur," for the reappearance of the celebrated Martin. In 1835, he produced, at the Académie de Musique, an opera of the highest pretensions, "La Juive," whose success was such that it immediately brought out Halévy in every capital in Europe. As if to show the versatility of his genius, he next produced, at the Opéra Comique, "L'Eclair," which has remained ever since one of the brightest gems of Mme. Damoreau's répertoire. In 1837 he was the turn of the Académie de Musique to enjoy one of his chef-d'œuvres. There he produced his grand opera "Guido and Ginevra," of which one song, "Après la fête," has become the chenal de bataille of every tenor who has since appeared in the musical world. He successively produced works whose titles alone suffice for an eulogy. In 1838, "Les Treize et le Sheriff," at the Opéra Comique, in 1842, "La Reine de Chypre," at the Académie; in 1843, "Charles VI.," at the same theatre. In 1844 he produced "Le Juif Errant," in 1845, "Les Mousquetaires de la Reine," at the Opéra Comique. In 1848, owing to those revolutions without precedent which then perilled the very existence of society, and seemed to render every subsequent work of genius impossible, M. Halévy, then appointed one of the director of the Opéra Comique, whose theatre had been nearly forsaken, he gave "Le Val d'Andorre," which was performed 165 evenings, and restored at once, and in spite of every unpropitious circumstance, the fortunes of that theatre. Last year he was equally successful at the Opéra Comique, with "La Fée aux Roses," of which a translation is at this moment performed in London. Halévy has long since received the highest rewards his country could confer on him. At the Court of Louis Philippe he enjoyed the highest favour; the unfortunate Duke of Orleans and his noble-minded widow, the Duchess of Orleans, placed him at the head of their chapelle. The Conservatoire conferred on him the title of Professeur de Haute Composition. He is an officer of the Legion of Honour, and of a number of foreign orders conferred on him by the different Sovereigns who have listened to his compositions, and he enjoys the highest title that can reward exalted merit in France—that of Member of the Institute.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

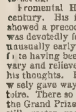
SIR WILLIAM FEILDEN, BART., OF FENISCOWLES.



THIS gentleman, who obtained the title of Baronet 26th July, 1846, and sat in Parliament for a long series of years for the borough of Blackburn, descended from a respectable family, settled there full three centuries, and at present possessed of considerable landed property in the County Palatine of Lancaster where the present head of the house, Sir William's nephew, Joseph Feilden, Esq., resides at Witton.

The deceased Baronet was born in Manchester, in March, 1773, and married, 30th March, 1797, Mary Haughton, daughter of the late Edmund Jackson, Esq., member for the House of Assembly at Jamaica, by whom he has left issue four sons and five daughters, the eldest son and heir being the present Sir William Henry Feilden, second Baronet, of Feniscowles. Sir William died on the 17th inst.

SIR GEORGE WILLIAM PRESCOTT, BART., LATE OF THEOBALDS PARK, HERTS.

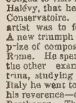


SIR GEORGE was senior representative of the great banking and mercantile family of Prescott, being elder son of the late Sir George Scudamore Prescott, Bart., and cousin to Mr. Prescott, Gove nor of the Bank of England. The title of Baronet was conferred on his grandfather, in 1794

Sir George married first, 10th July, 1827, Emily, daughter of Colonel Symes, and became her widower, without issue, 8th January, 1829. He married, secondly, 26th July, 1848, Mary Frances, youngest daughter of Henry Hillier, Esq., and has left by her a son, the present Sir George Rendlesham Prescott, Bart., an infant of four years old.

The death of Sir George Prescott occurred at Caen, in Normandy, on the 27th April. He had completed his forty-ninth year.

SIR JAMES FLOWER, BART., OF LOSB, COUNTY OF OXFORD.



THIS gentleman was the only son and heir of the late Aldeman Sir Charles Flower, one of the sheriffs of London, who conferred December 1, 1809. He succeeded his father in that honour, 15th September, 1819; but, as he leaves no issue, the title becomes extinct Sir James served as High Sheriff of Norfolk in 1838, was appointed Deputy-Lieutenant of Herefordshire in 1841, and sat in Parliament for Thetford from 1845 to 1847 He was born 14th December, 1794; and married, January 2nd, 1816, Mary-Jane, eldest daughter of Sir Walter Stirling, Bart., of Faskine. Sir Charles had six sisters, five of whom married.

SIR WILLIAM KAY, BART., OF EAST SHEEN, SURREY.

SIR WILLIAM was son of William Kay, Esq., of Montreal, and succeeded to the baronetcy, accordingto a limitation in the patent, at the decease of his maternal grand-uncle, Sir Brook Watson. That gentleman was a London merchant, and commissary-general to the army in North America in 1782. In 1784 he was chosen to represent the City of London, and in 1796 filled the civic chair. In 1798 he was appointed commissary-general of England, and in 1803 obtained the baronetcy, with the specific limitation in his grand-nephews, William and Brook Kay. The former was the gentleman whose death we record as having occurred at his residence in Pall Mall, on the 16th inst. Leaving no issue he is succeeded by his brother, now Sir Brook Kay.

MICHAEL JAMES ROBERT DILLON, EARL OF ROSCOMMON

THE Earldom of Roscommon, conferred in 1662 on James Lord Kilkenny West, son of the famous Sir Lucas Dillon, of Newtown, Speaker of the Irish House of Commons, and Chief Baron of the Exchequer, became dormant from the period of the death, in 1816, of Patrick, eleventh Earl, to the year 1846, when, after a protracted investigation by the Lords, the dignity was affirmed to Michael James Robert Dillon, as lineal descendant and heir male of the Hon. Patrick Dillon, of Rath, third son of the first Earl. The title was, indeed, an empty honour, and a single estate, Clonbrock, in the county of Galway, the Dillons possessed an immense territory, known as Dillon's Country, including the whole of Westmeath and Longford. The claimant thus successful was the nobleman whose decease we record. He was lieutenant-colonel of Captain Michael Dillon, of the Dublin militia, who was killed by the rebels at the battle of Ross, in 1798. He married, 19th August, 1830, Charlotte, second daughter of the late John Talbot, Esq., and sister of the Earl of Shrewsbury, which lady died without issue, 21st November, 1843

Wentworth, fourth Earl of Roscommon, was the celebrated poet thus characterised by Dryden:—

> Roscommon, whom both Court and camps commend,
> True to his Prince, and faithful to his friend;
> Roscommon, first in list'ning to advice,
> First in the peaceful triumphs of the grave.

IRELAND.

LORD GOUGH AT LIMERICK.—The reception of Lord Gough at Limerick, his native city, on Thursday week, was most complimentary. He was met at the railway terminus by the corporation and the citizens, who welcomed the gallant soldier with enthusiastic demonstrations of honour such as fall to the lot of a vast crowd. The Mayor having presented his Lordship with an address, received a reply, from which we take the following remarkable passage: "My military career in the East has brought me before the nation as a public man. In that capacity I have been amply recompensed by my Sovereign and my country The gracious Being who guides as well as guards us has crowned my earliest endeavours with success—ample success—to open new China to the commerce, not only of Great Britain, but of the civilised world, and in adding to our Indian territory one of its finest portions, thereby spreading civilisation, and rescuing a fine, but a warlike people, from anarchy and mis rule, and restoring peace to our Eastern possessions. As a proof that my heart has been ever with my country and the city, the band playing "Garryowen," the bells pealing, and the people at short intervals sending forth hearty cheers. On arriving at the house of Colonel Doyle, Lord Gough briefly addressed the crowd. He thanked them for the kind reception they had given him. "I feel (said he) not only as an Irishman, but also as a Limerick man and a Garryowen man. Here, in the ranks of your Limerick Militia, I first commenced my military career." (Cheers.) I now arm along with some of your fathers, but I am afraid few of my then comrades are now at this side the grave. Never, gentlemen, have I forgot the lessons which I then received; and my constant endeavour has been to profit by them in order to do good to my country and to my fellow-man." (Cheers.) In the evening a splendid dinner was given to Lord Gough, in the large room at the Philosophical buildings. About 300 gentlemen sat down. The Mayor presided.

Dr. Cullen, the new Roman Catholic Archbishop of Armagh, was inaugurated into his archiepiscopal jurisdiction, with the usual ceremonies, at the seat of his cathedral see, on Wednesday last.

TENANT-RIGHT.—The tenant right question is beginning to assume an extensive character, and may be an important one. The movement is spreading in all directions, and meetings are announced to be held in parts of the country where, a short time since, the subject was not dreamt of. In the county of Meath a meeting is announced for the 30th, and several others in the south and west.

THE CLEARANCE SYSTEM.—Evictions continue on a considerable scale in various parts of the south and west. The process consists in the old occupiers, and consolidating their farms, is carried on with steady perseverance. Those who can scrape up the means, emigrate; but the greater part endeavour to make out a temporary livelihood in some other way, or go into the workhouses.

CONSECRATION.—On Wednesday the new church of St. Mary, situated in John-street, St. George's-in-the-East, was consecrated by the Bishop of Winchester, in the absence of the Bishop of London, who was unable to perform the solemn ceremony in consequence of illness. There was a crowded and respectable congregation, and the service was performed by the Bishop himself, after performing the ceremony, preached an effective discourse from Psalm xcvii. 6 The church is an elegantly-built structure, with tower and spire at the east end. The whole of the pews are free and open, the building accommodation for about 1000 persons. There are galleries for about 300 children, connected with the schools of the parish. The sacred edifice has been built for the sum of £5000, the munificent contribution of Lord Haddo, who also gave £3000 for its endowment. The Rev. M. J. M'Neil is perpetual curate.

CHURCH UNION.—At the recent general meeting of the members of the London Church Union, held at St Martin's Hall, the following resolutions were carried to:—"1. Resolved—That the committee of the Metropolitan Church Union may be elected members of this union, by expressing their wish to become so at a single meeting of the committee 2. That the measure of the Bishop of London, providing that questions of doctrine, arising on appeals heard before the Committee of Privy Council, shall be heard by the Bishops, and that their judgment shall be final, is a most important step towards a better system, and ought, therefore, to receive the support of members of the Church; and that the committee be instructed to prepare a petition to the Queen and Lords on the subject."

On Sunday, owing to the extreme mildness of the weather, and the reduced charges for conveyance, 167,100 persons landed and embarked from the different steamboats plying between Chelsea and Woolwich, exclusive of numbers conveyed to Richmond, Putney, Gravesend, Margate, &c.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The favourable reaction that occurred in the English funds at the close of last week has been fully maintained. Notwithstanding the active circulation of reports that Lord Normanby was recalled from Florence, and was designated, that Russia had declared herself an ally of France, &c., the public preferred waiting to hear both sides of the question to selling their stock. Consols consequently, instead of declining, have advanced from Monday's quotation of 98¾ to 99, which, causing some realising, 98⅞ became a firm quotation. Exchequer Bills continue about 69 71, and India Bonds are 90. Business throughout the week has been nearly confined to agricultural transactions, and on Thursday quotations remained unchanged during the day. Prices at the close stood for—Bank Stock, 207½; Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities, 94¼; Three per Cent Consols Annuities, 98⅛; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, Annuities, 99⅛; Long Annuities, expire Jan., 1860, 8⅛; Bank Stock, 207½; India Bonds, under £1000, 87 pm.; Consols for Account, 98⅝; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 70 pm.; £500, June, 70 pm.; Small, June, 70 pm.

In the Foreign Market prices have been generally well maintained during the week, and without any fluctuations of importance. Mexican closes rather flat, no withstanding a communication from the committee, that the intelligence published in last week's HERALD from Lopez News is fully confirmed. Private letters, addressed to the chairman, strongly advocate the immediate adoption of the present offer, asserting that there is no question about its being sanctioned by the Mexican Government, and, "with such support, they can and will, be fulfilled in all its parts." Peruvian, as the account day approaches, continues to creep up, and Spanish Stock is firm. The closing prices are, for Brazils, Small, 81; Buenos Ayres Bonds, 6 per Cents, Account, 51½; Danish Bonds, 1825, 5 per Cent, 98½; Ditto, Scrip, 8 pm.; Equador Bonds, 2½; Grenada Bonds, 1½ per Cent., 16½; Mex can, 5 per Cent., 1845, Account, 31; Ditto, Small, 31½; Peruvian Bonds, Account, 77; Ditto, Deferred, 33½; Portuguese, 4 per Cent. Account, 33½; Russian Bonds, 4½ per Cent., 99; Ditto, Scrip, 2½ pm.; Spanish, 5 per Cent., 1840, 17½; Dutch 2½ per Cent., 65¾.

Railway Shares are a trifle firmer, but the market is still damped by sales on behalf of parties to whom the Stock has been mortgaged, and the limit exceeded. This occurs when any rise takes place; and as the public are not buyers, the market readily yields Prices at the close are, for Aberdeen, 2¾ dis.; Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Dudley, calls duly paid, or with guarantee, 9 pm.; Bristol and Exeter, 64; Buckinghamshire, 17; Caledonian, 8¾; Chester and Holyhead, Pref., 8¾; Eastern Counties, 7¼; Do, New Pref., Six per Cent., 12; Great Northern, 7; Ditto, Five per Cent., Preference, 104; Great Western, 96; Ditto, New, 6¼; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 80¼; Ditto, Guaranteed Five per Cent., 104; London and N.-Western, 104¾; Ditto, New Quarters, 11¾; Ditto, Fifths, 11¾; London and S.-Western, New £50, 6¼; Manch., Buxton, and Mat. Jck. 8; Midland, 33½; Ditto, £50 Shares, 22½; N. British, 7¾; Ditto, Pref., 45; North Staffordshire, 7⅝; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 7¾; Scottish Central, 13; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 1¾ pm.; Shrewsbury Union, 3¾ pm.; South-Eastern, 14; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 13½; Ditto, Newcastle Extension, 8½; Ditto, G.N.E Preference, 1½; York and North Midland, 16; Ditto Preference, —; Namur and Liege, 7½; Northern of France, 22; Orleans and Bordeaux, 24; Paris and Strasbourg, 9.

SATURDAY MORNING.—The English funds were firm yesterday at 98⅞ 96 for money, and 99⅛ 96 for account. Foreign stocks showed no variation of consequence. Shares were firm.

THE MARKETS.

CORN-EXCHANGE (Friday).—A decided increase has taken place in the arrivals of English wheat for our market coastwise, they having amounted to 7,[illegible] quarters, almost wholly from Essex and Kent. By land carriage and rail[illegible] supply has been moderate. Although the weather has been unfavourable for the time of year, the show of samples of wheat was extensive, and a number was sold at Monday's quotations. All descriptions of foreign wheat moved off slowly, at last week's currencies. The supply of foreign oats was large, that of barley very small, but not materially lower. The arrivals of beans, peas, and flour were very dull, but not materially lower.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 37s to 42s; ditto, white, 40s to 48s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 37s to 40s, ditto, white, 40s to 43s; rye, 20s to 22s; grinding barley, 18s to 21s; distilling ditto, 22s to 23s; malting ditto, 26s to 27s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 60s to 68s, brown ditto, 43s to 45s; Kingston and Ware, 48s to 52s; Chevalier, 53s to 55s, Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 18s to 19s; potato ditto, 17s to 20s; Youghal and Cork, black, 14s to 16s; ditto, white, 16s to 18s; tick beans, new, 24s to 26s; ditto, old, 31s to 33s. per qrs; pigeon, 30s to 35s; white, 32s to 37s; boilers, 32s to 37s per quarter flour, 30s to 32s per sack. Foreign: Dantzig red wheat, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s per quarter. American, 32s to 33s per barrel; Canada, 30s to 32s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Canary seed has again advanced fully 5s per quarter. Tares, clover seed, and linseed are quite as dear as last week.

LINSEED.—English sowing fair to fine, 54s to 56s; Baltic, crushing 49s to 49s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 50s to 52s; Calcutta, 53s to 55s per quarter. Linseed cake, in London, 6l 10s to 6l 15s per ton; Liverpool, 6l 5s to 6l 10s per ton. Rapeseed, 34s to 36s per last. Canary, 60s to 62s per quarter. Hempseed, 32s to 34s per quarter. Coriander seed, 18s to 20s per cwt. Carraway seed, 30s to 32s per cwt. Trefoil, 24s to 26s per cwt. English rapeseed cake, 6l 5s to 6l 10s per ton; foreign, 6l 0s to 6l 5s per ton. Canary, 60s to 62s per quarter. Flour, 30s to 32s per sack. Linseed cake, 6l 5s to 6l 10s per ton. Coriander, 18s to 20s per cwt. Carraway seed, 30s to 32s per cwt. Trefoil, 24s to 26s per cwt. English rapeseed cake, 6l 5s to 6l 10s per ton; foreign, 6l 0s to 6l 5s per ton.

Hops.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 6½d to 7d of household, 6½d to 6¾d of seconds, and 5½d to 6d per 4lb. loaf.

Imperial Average Average.—Wheat, 37s 9d; barley, 22s 6d; oats, 15s 6d; rye, 27s 7d; beans, 31s 6d; peas, 34s 11d.

The Last Quarter's Average.—Wheat, 35s 6d; barley, 22s 6d; oats, 15s 1d; rye, 26s 9½; beans, 31s 3d; peas, 34s 11d.

The Corresponding Quarter of Last Year.—Wheat, 44s 1d; barley, 24s 9d; oats, 15s 9d; rye, 27s 8d; beans, 32s 9d; peas, 34s 9d.

HOPS.—The sales of 8270 packages have been held this week. 3000 sold at a decline in the value of one Congou of from 2d to 3d per lb. Old Congou may be had at 9½d and new at 10d. Souchong, fine to fine flavoured, 1s 1d to 1s 3d. Twankay, 1s 4d.

Sugar.—Only a moderate business has been doing in raw sugars; in prices, however, no transfer change has taken place. Refined goods are in fair request. Brown lumps, 49s 6d; and good to fair grocery, 49s to 51s per cwt.

Coffee.—Good and native Ceylons are still selling heavily, at 40s to 40s 6d per cwt. In the value of all other kinds of coffee we have to report no change.

Provisions.—Irish butter is in good demand for the time of year, and fine qualities are scarce. Mild Cork and Limerick, 72s to 76s per cwt; Waterford, 74s to 78s; Carlow, 74s to 78s; Sligo, 74s to 78s; Belfast, 74s to 78s; Derry, 74s to 78s; Dublin, 74s to 78s; Kerry, 74s to 78s; Limerick, 74s to 78s; Cork, 74s to 78s; Waterford

NEW BOOKS, &c.

THE NEW NOVELS.
Now ready, at all the Libraries,
FRESTON TOWER; or, the Early Days of Cardinal Wolsey By the Rev. R. COBBOLD, M.A., author of "Margaret Catchpole," &c. 3 vols, with 6 Illustrations.

II.
ANNE DYSART: a Tale of Every-Day Life, 3 vols.

III.
THE STORY of a MAN of FASHION; or, Sin and Sorrow. 3 vols.
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13 Great Marlborough-street.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "HOME INFLUENCE."
In a few days, in 3 vols. post 8vo, with frontispiece,
THE VALE OF CEDARS; or, The Martyr. A Story of Spain in the Fifteenth Century. By GRACE AGUILAR.
"The wild dove hath her nest—the fox his cave:
Mankind their country—Christians have the grave." BYRON.
Just published,
1. HOME INFLUENCE. Second Edition. 6s. 6d.
2. WOMAN'S FRIENDSHIP. Second Edition. 5s. 6d.
GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, 5, Paternoster-row.

TAYLOR'S BEE KEEPER'S MANUAL.—FOURTH EDITION This day is published, Invited, Enlarged, and Illustrated with nearly 100 Engravings, price 3s.
THE BEE-KEEPING MANUAL; or, Practical Hints on the Management and complete Preservation of the HONEY BEE By HENRY TAYLOR
GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, 5, Paternoster-row.

Just ready.
THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY of LEIGH HUNT. With Reminiscences of Friends and Contemporaries In Three Volumes, post 8vo, with Three Portraits, price 31s 6d; or in embossed cloth — London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

Early published, 8vo, price 1s, or sent post free for 1s 6d.
PIDDLE'S PATENT TABLET PAPIER-MACHE FRAMES, containing 114 Engravings, imitating the Patent Machine-made Frame Mouldings, which may be had in 12-ft. lengths, without joins, or made up complete.
The Frames of Mr. Riddell possess the best characteristic of the carving.—Art Union Journal.
By her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.
The Works, 5, Wellington-street, North, Strand

TO THE INTELLIGENT OF ALL CLASSES!
Published May 1, 1850, price 3d, No. I, of a new Monthly Magazine,
THE BRITISH CONTROVERSIALIST and IMPARTIAL INQUIRER Established for the purpose of forming a suitable medium for the deliberate discussion of important questions in Science, Philosophy, Politics, Social Economy, and Art. The First Number contains debates on War, Capital Punishment, Hereditary Monarchy, &c., as well as articles on the Art of Reasoning and the Art of Pub lic Speaking, &c. &c. No. II. will be ready June 1st. "Such a publication must be highly valuable."—Liverpool Mercury. "A clever and well-conducted publication. It seems penned with a degree of literary skill and power to warrant the public support."—Taunton Courier.—Horncastle and Stamford Times. Paternoster-row, London. Order at once through any bookseller

Just published, 8vo, price 5s.
INSANITY TESTED by SCIENCE, and shown to be Disease rarely connected with permanent Organic Lesion of the Brain, and, on that account, far more susceptible of Cure than has hitherto been supposed. By C. M. BURNETT, M.D
London: SAMUEL HIGHLEY, 32, Fleet-street.

Price 6d, post free 8d,
EPILEPSY: AN INQUIRY into the question — What is the Nature of the Internal Commotion which takes place during an Epileptic Paroxysm? and What is the Nature of the Cause which produces that Commotion?
People's Edition. Price 2s 6d,
FALLACIES of the FACULTY, and CHRONOTHERALISM. "Most extraordinary exposures of English medical quackery."—Sunday Times. "Startling revelations."—Weekly Times. "An entertaining as a novel."—Westminster Review. The CHRONOTHERMAL DIET for Adult, Aged, Aperi, Mo
SIMPKIN and Co., Stationers'-court; J. OLLIVIER, 59, Pall-mall, and C. GILPIN, 5, Bishopsgate-street Without.

ENORMOUS SAVING! GOING WITH THE TIMES
HOW to KEEP a HORSE for less than ONE SHILLING per DAY The articles and numerous references may be seen in a list of prices had, at 1, Cornhill, and 377, STRAND; and Cook, 138, Benchurch-street A pamphlet on the above may be had, on a post-paid application.

HOW to Make, Cut, Cart, and Stack HAY, for less than Half the usual cost, in any county and in any weather, 5s. (Sold gratis to those who may be had, each post-free.)

BOOKS for the YOUNG. Elegantly printed and bound, suitable for Presents
1. SEDGWICK'S STORIES for YOUNG PERSONS (just out), 18mo, 1s 6d
2 SEDGWICK'S FACTS and FANCIES, and MORALS of MANNERS 1s 6d
3 SIGOURNEY'S SIMPLE TALES for MY OWN CHILDREN, in Poetry (just out) 18mo, 1s 6d
4 SIGOURNEY'S PLEASANT MEMORIES of PLEASANT LANDS, 18mo, 1s 6d
5 SIGOURNEY'S SCENES in my NATIVE LAND, uniform, 2s.
6 SIGOURNEY'S LAYS of the HEART, ORISKA, and other Poems 2s
London: TEGG and Co; AYLOT and JONES. PATRON OF and JAKET

NEW EDUCATIONAL WORKS.
The Forty-sixth Thousand.
Price One Shilling, or Post-free, 1s. 6d.,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING BOOK.—This work is rendered peculiarly attractive by the EASY ARRANGEMENT of its SPELLING, which smoothes all difficulties experienced by beginners, and by the PLEASING ORIGINAL HEADINGS prefixed to each lesson, which combine the interest of the newspaper with the utility of a book. It is ILLUSTRATED by UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED and SEVENTY WOODCUTS of objects familiar to the eye and sense described, forming by far the most alluring introduction to learning ever published. (144 Pages.)
A few Copies are Coloured, Price Two Shillings.

New Edition, 20,000.
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON READING BOOK. Companion to the ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING BOOK. Forming a series of Lessons on the most interesting and instructive subjects, selected with great care from the best English Authors, and illustrated by Historical Woodcuts of Remarkable Events, with above TWO HUNDRED and FIFTY ENGRAVINGS, price 2s.

Price 5s a New Edition of
THE ILLUSTRATED NEW TESTAMENT (Authorised Version), with upwards of 120 Engravings, beautifully bound in cloth, embossed and gilt sides, gilt edges. The Illustrations are from drawings executed by eminent artists, expressly for this Edition, with notes historical, explanatory, and descriptive; and unrivalled by a new, Panoramic Picture of the Holy Land and a View of Lower Egypt, during the route of the Israelites from Egypt to the Land of Canaan; presenting at one view the principal cities and places mentioned in the Old and New Testaments, referred to by reference.

In the press, and shortly will be published, price 2s.
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON INSTRUCTOR, being a Companion to the "Reading-Book" Designed for the use of schools and families, and consisting of extracts from English classical authors, from the earliest periods of English literature to the present day, with a copious Introductory Chapter upon the arts of Elocution and Composition. The latter will include examples of the best modes of reading and speaking, and the former will also point out by similar examples the faults to be avoided by all who desire to become, not simply good readers and speakers, but elegant writers of their language.
* * In preparation, a Series of Useful and Amusing Books, profusely illustrated with Engravings, of which due notice will be given
The Trade and Schools supplied on liberal terms, for cash only.
Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON News, 198, Strand, London, and sold by all Booksellers.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.—BRITISH and FOREIGN PUBLIC LIBRARY, CONDUIT STREET Hanover-square.—The Directors are among the NEW WORKS recently added to this extensive and valuable Library, from which the Nobility and Gentry in the country are regularly supplied:—A MONTH at CONSTANTINOPLE, by ALBERT SMITH: The FOURTH ESTATE, by F. KNIGHT HUNT; PICTURES of NUREMBERG, by T. WHITE, Jun.; NOTES FROM NINEVEH, by the Rev J. P. FLETCHER; The RIFLE RANGERS; by CAPTAIN REID; COOPER'S WAYS of the HOUR; BREMER'S HOME; OFFICER'S DAUGHTER; The INDIAN'S MOURNER; DALTON; SIR and SORROW; HYLTON POUSE; REGINALD DALTON; and WARBURTON. The NEW POST DAMOURE, with TERMS, delivered Gratis, or sent post free to orders enclosing 12 stamps, addressed Messrs. BAUD BENS and OTLEY

BOOK SOCIETIES are now established in every part of the Kingdom on BULL'S NEW PLAN, which for a Guinea a year, secures to Subscribers the choice of one of all the new and standard Works that may be published in that year. The Scheme, which was the first demand has subsided, at one half the published price BULL'S New Plan delivered gratis, or sent post-free to orders enclosing two stamps, addressed, MR. BULL, Library, 19, Holles-street, Cavendish-square.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

LES HUGUENOTS, Nabuchodonosor (Nino), Il Le Prophete, Sonnambula, Norma, Don Pasquale, Puritani, and every Opera, Overture, and Dance performed at the Italian Theatres and Opera Comique, are in THE PIANISTA, with Overtures complete, 2s each Post free, 19 stamps Or three Nos, 75 stamps "Pianista" Offices, 67, Paternoster-row, and 16A, Argyll-street, Oxford-street

NEW SONGS.—"THE RICH MAN'S BRIDE," "THE EXILE'S FAREWELL," "THE STRANGER'S GRAVE." Price 2s each (sent postage free)
"Have you seen the new Ballads? If not you have yet the one and the new." &c. They form a series of charming compositions, and are exceedingly graceful and effective. The song "The Sea Maid's Bride" will be an immense favourite; both words and music are of a very superior description, and calculated to render it a permanent favorite
London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street

CHEAP MUSIC, bound and classed in volumes. Eighty shillings' worth at full marked price for 8s., comprising Overtures, Airs with Variations, Quadrilles, Waltzes, Polkas, Galops, Marches, Quadrilles. Piano Duets, Songs, Glees, and Sacred Music (Vocal), by Beethoven, Bishop, Bochsa, Dalbac, Jullien, Labitzky, Strauss, Schubert, and all the first authors. The public will observe the Music is all new, and clean copies. A choice of two hundred volumes always on hand. Lists gratis. Country Shop Music Warehouse, 17, Soho-square.—Two new Catalogue grats, on receipt of two stamps.

PIANOFORTES.—TOLKIEN'S splendid sound Pianofortes, with 6\(octaves, C. G. Full, Metallic Plate, only 7G guineas A further reduction of first-rate instrument for cash or ready money will be said, to purchasers at TOLKIEN'S old established house, 27, 28, 29, and 30, Wells-street, Oxford-street, a few doors west of the Pantheon. Every instrument sent post free. Old instruments taken in exchange

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES, and £10 10s. GOLD LEVERS, at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reputation of prizes obtained by the Proprietor, member of the Swiss manufactures, or any other house, for those advertised at lower prices are foreign work. On receipt of a Post-office Order for £4 4s. or £10 10s. a Watch will be sent Free.—Read Jones's Sketch of Watches, 3d, Free for 32 stamps.—338, Strand.

GREAT REDUCTION IN WATCHES.—JAMES CLOTHIER hers to announce that he has made arrangements for a continuous Supply of WATCHES of the finest quality, at a considerable reduction from the present prices, to sell at the same great remunerating profit on the manufacturing prices
No. 1. Gold Watches, Lever Action, Jewelled in 4 holes, Engraved Cases, Engine-turned Backs, Dials with Lever Escapements, Engine-made Movements, in duplicate Cases, Hunting or Hall-marked, £3 3s each
A Warranty given with every Watch, and, if not approved within twelve months, exchanged or money returned.
Orders from the country sent free of postage, and the safe delivery guaranteed
121, PALL-MALL, opposite the Royal Opera House

WATCHES and their MANAGEMENT.—T. COX SAVORY and Co. have published a PAMPHLET describing the best practical Rules to use a Watch in the most efficient time, and explaining the advantages of each, with lists of prices. The Lecturer on Horology in the Polytechnic Institution will be glad to receive the opinions of the articles, the principal characteristic of which should be accuracy and durability It also contains remarks on the general management of watches, and how to avoid the most frequent causes of irregularity, personally or by post.
T. COX SAVORY and Co., 47, Cornhill, London, seven doors from the Gracechurch-street

SILVER PLATE, New and Second-hand.—T. COX SAVORY and Co.'s Pamphlet of Prices, with outlines, may be had gratis, or sent free, by post, on application to their establishment, The contents are the prices, weights, and patterns of new and second-hand Silver Goods, Spoons and Forks, new and second-hand Gold Watches, Watches, Silver-edged Plated Goods, the new plated on white Metal Spoons and Forks, Watches, Candle-sticks, Candle-wasters, Gold Neck Chains, and every
T. COX SAVORY and Co., 47, Cornhill, (seven doors from Gracechurch-street

SILVER-PLATED DISH COVERS and CORNER DISHES.—J. WILKINSON, 34, Cornhill, (adjoining the Bank), has recently finished several new and elegant patterns of DISH COVERS and CORNER DISHES, with Glass Stands, Wires, Waiters, Silver-edged Plated Goods, the new plated on white Metal Spoons and Forks, Watches, Candle-sticks, Candle-wasters, Gold Neck Chains, and every
J. WILKINSON, 34, Cornhill, (adjoining the Bank)

SILVER TEA SERVICES, of New Patterns.—The Firm of GOSLING and SONS, Working Silversmiths, 19, Cornhill (opposite the Bank), have recently finished several new and elegant patterns of TEA SERVICES, which they invite the attention of foreign, and of the highest finish. The following have been generally admired:—

The Portland Pattern, tastefully engraved	The Louis Quatorze Pattern, richly chased
Full Tea Service complete ... £12 10 0	Strong Silver Tea Service complete £15 10 0
Ditto Sugar Basin, gilt ... 7 4 0	Ditto Sugar Basin, gilt ... 8 5 0
Ditto Cream Ewer, gilt ... 5 5 0	Ditto Cream Ewer, gilt ... 6 6 0
Ditto Coffee-pot 16 10 0	Ditto Coffee-pot 17 17 0
£43 0 0	£47 0 0

A large stock is offered for selection in the Show-rooms, in which every variety of Plate, £34 per cent. below
GOSLING and SONS, 19, Cornhill (opposite the Bank).

W. THOMAS'S UNIVERSAL NEWSPAPER, ADVERTISING, AND PUBLISHING OFFICE, 19 to 21, CATHERINE-STREET, STRAND.—The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and all the London, Country, and Foreign Journals, are forwarded from these offices to all parts of the globe with the utmost despatch. Births, Deaths, and Marriages are inserted with the strictest punctuality

EDUCATION.—BLACKHEATH.—In an old-established first-class PREPARATORY SCHOOL conducted by Gentlemen, assisted by Professors of eminence, the SONS of GENTLEMEN are RECEIVED, and their Education advanced to fit them for entering any Public School. The Terms are moderate, and vacancies occur in twelve years. The mansion is spacious, and situated in extensive grounds, which are appropriated to the recreation of the pupils. For terms, &c., address M. P., care of Mr. BURNHILL, Bookseller, Tranquil Vale, Blackheath

BATHS of HOMBURG, near FRANKFORT-ON-THE-MAINE
The Mineral Waters of Homburg take their rise at the foot of the Taunus mountains, two hundred yards above the level of the sea. To the original springs, the Elisabeth and the Ludwig, which are principally used in Germany, there have lately been found fresh sources, which, from the analysis, have been pronounced superior to those. A new building on certain medical cases, have elevated them to the first rank among the mineral waters of Germany.
The springs of Homburg are five in number. They have been analysed by the celebrated Professor Liebig. Notwithstanding the difference in their chemical composition, they may be considered as the same mod carried diversely modified. Their mineral principles remain in solution in the water, and are differently combined in their proportions. This affords to the physician the highly valuable advantage of applying to each particular case the waters most best adapted to it, and of modifying the treatment according to the course and progress of the disease.
The internal use of these waters is of constant efficacy, when all other remedies have failed. Gout, rheumatism, scrofula, nervous affections, and all diseases of the stomach and other intestines, by giving a powerful impulse to the circulation of the blood, and promoting perspiration and assimilation. Their great success has been recognised in the cure of all kinds of affections of the chest, as hypochondriacs, jaundice, the hemorrhoids, an obstinate constipation, gout and St. Vitus's dance, by derangements of the digestive functions, most results are derived from
During the last years which have elapsed since these springs first obtained the merited celebrity, the city of Homburg has great improved. A new building has arisen, and the old houses have been raised, hotels and private houses afford to visitors all the comforts required by invalids, and luxuries to be found at the most favourite watering-places.
The forests, which surround Homburg like a rich zone, are pierced with roads and alleys, which are rendered pleasant by the shade, by ease and pleasure, visit the Faldberg, the Rock of Elisabeth, Luther's Oak, and all the picturesque sites of the Taunus.
The Directors of this grand Establishment have constructed a magnificent Casino, which, for the beauty of its architecture, the excellence of its distribution, and the richness of its decorations—surpasses any building hitherto erected at any point on the banks of the Rhine. Gambling is prohibited, and the Directors have made it a law in the names of Trente et Quarante, and for Roe, ette tables; a Cabinet is reserved for each new game of the Germans, French, Parisian, Belgian, and Dutch journals: a Cabinet for reading, a Cabinet for playing on the billiard table with carpet, and a grand Saloon room with a tribe d'hote, served a la Francaise, twice a-day, viz. at 1 and 6 o'clock.
An excellent Orchestra performs three times a day: in the morning at the Springs, in the afternoon in the beautiful Gardens of the Casino, and in the evening in the Saloon.
Balls and Fetes of every description succeed each other without intermission.
The Directors abstain from any sacrifice to render this watering-place attractive to the visitors. Besides the Casino, there are 600 acres of forests and plains, all abounding in game of every description, as well as a numerous stock of deer. The fairs are at the close of the winter season. The Casino of Homburg is the only establishment of the kind that has enjoyed hitherto the privilege of remaining open all the year; and the combination of the tables for play in the Saloon, for concerts, and its banking parties throughout the winter season, make it attract a numerous and select company from every quarter of Europe, and there is now a great number of strangers assembled there.
The Journey from London to Homburg, passing through Brussels, Cologne, Mayence, and Frankfort, is performed in 36 hours. The distance from Frankfort to Homburg is got over in one hour and a half. Mail Coaches and Omnibuses run between these places every hour.

ROOK-RIFLES, AIR-GUNS, AIR-CANES, &c., for shooting rabbits, rooks, sea-fowl, &c. with ball, small shot, &c. with Parsons and Hall, &c.—Prices from 6s each.—REILLY, Gun-maker, New Oxford-street

COCKERELL & CO.'S BEST COALS ONLY. Parliest Wharf, Sand-street, Blackfriars. Eaton Wharf, Lower Belgrave-place, Pimlico, and No. 1, Coal Exchange. Cash price, 23s per ton

TRELOAR'S COCOA-NUT-FIBRE MATTING WAREHOUSE, 42, Ludgate-hill.—There are many worthless imitations of this much-approved matting: but the best and only genuine fabric is that manufactured by T. TRELOAR, 42, Ludgate-hill, London.

"GRAHAM and HEDLEY'S ROLL COCOA is perfectly pure, and so well prepared as to afford, with hot water or milk, a bland, aromatic, salubrious, and highly nutritious article of diet.—Signed ANDREW URE, M.D., F.R.S., &c., Analytical Chemist and Professor of Chemistry."—Sold retail by all Grocers and Tea-dealers, wholesale at 30, Cow-lane, and 224, Goswell-street.

THE TORICELLIAN SHOWER-BATHS.—Purchasers should not decide until they have seen this, the last invented and most perfect Shower-Bath. By simply pulling a cord which hangs from the top, any quantity of water can be raised without exertion. May be seen in operation, or prospectuses had (free by post), at GEORGE and JOHN DEANES, shower, leg, hip, sponging, and general bath manufacturers and furnishing ironmongers, London-bridge.

GREAT LUXURY.—EPSOM RACES.—Packages of pure BLOCK ICE, at 2s 6d, 5s, 7s 6d, 10s, delivered to any parts of town WINE-COOLERS fitted with ICE ready for use, at 12s, 15s, and 20s each. Orders (one day previous) per railway, carriage stamps for the amount, will be punctually attended to The 2s 6d package, containing 25 lbs. of ice in which the bottle is packed, is sufficient of itself to keep the ice during two of the hottest days.
CARLTON ICE COMPANY, 194, PALL-MALL.

COOPER'S PATENT PRESERVED FRUITS in SYRUP, prepared for the dessert. A small hamper, containing various kinds of fruit, one of which contains Raspberries and Currants, the greatest luxury of the year, will keep good for three years in advance for family use. An order for Seven shillings, directed to Mr. JOHN COOPER, Chemist, Clerkenwell-green, London, and no hamper will be forwarded free of expense, to any part of London.

THE REGISTERED ALBUM of ORNAMENTAL HAIRWORK sent free for two stamps. Ladies and gentlemen may see their own hair worked into any pattern without extra charge. A splendid collection, mounted in best gold, kept ready for inspection.—C. OLIFIERS, Artist in Hair, 39, Old Compton-street, Soho.

DUDDNEY'S OLYMPIC GIRTH, 10s 6d.—Protection against Rupture: the support at the bottom edge of the Belt produced by Duddney's patent pressure, renders a spring unnecessary. Also, Duddney's Patent Elastic Trusses, Suspensory Bandages, Elastic Stockings, Knee-caps, Anklets, &c. Supports, &c. for Spinal support.—17, Old Bond street, 75, Burlington Arcade, and 49, London-street, Fenchurch-street.

SHIRTS.—E. FLINT continues to supply gentlemen with the Best Shirts, six for 33s: Cuffs and Collared Shirts; also Boys Shirts. N.B. Single Shirts at Wholesale Prices. FLINT'S Old-established Warerooms, 48, Ludgate-hill, London; and 90, King's-road, Brighton.

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT is a garment made without gathers. "It may confidently be eulogised for its nicety of fit, and its neatness and comfort."—Sporting Review. All qualities and prices, at WILLIAM RUDD'S, 51, Conduit-street, Regent-street. N.B. Printed Shirts for dressing-gowns, made to order.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS.—Gentlemen desirous of obtaining shirts in the very best manner in which they can be made, are so kindly to try FORD'S EUREKAS, the most unique, and the only perfect fitting Shirt made. Self-measurement rules, containing lists of prices, and directions for self-measurement, sent free by post. Address, FORD'S EUREKA SHIRT Manufactory, 38, New-road, Whitechapel. Two or six postage stamps.—Richard Ford, 38, Strand, London.

SIX Very Superior SHIRTS for 31s 6d, from Measure, or New-street, Covent-garden, London Patent Self-Measure Tape, and Book of Prices, sent free by post.

THRESHER'S PURE BLEACHED HOSIERY.—Messrs THRESHER and GLENNY respectfully announce their new and superior make of Cotton and Lisle Thread Stockings, bleached without brimstone or any thing else injurious to the whiteness, and warranted to wear one-third more than any white after washing.—Sold only by Thresher and Glenny, 152, Strand, and 7, The only House in London for Thresher's noble Garza Waistcoats

AUSTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND, CAPE of GOOD HOPE, NATAL, &c.
PASSENGERS to the COLONIES, generally, may obtain their OUTFITS from S. W. SILVER and Co., CLOTHIERS, &c., 66 and 67, CORNHILL, at wholesale prices. SILVER and Co. make nearly the whole of the articles required in such outfits at manufacturing prices, so that the Cabin Folding Furniture may become permanent Household Furniture on arrival in the Colony.
They also engage PASSAGES, and give ship-sailing INFORMATION, but they neither are nor pay a commission, their object being to give PASSENGERS who place themselves under their benefit; and they forward small packages for their customers (carriage free) to their AGENTS in the Colonies.
SILVER and Co. give DRAFTS on AUSTRALIA, at sixty days sight, of £10 for every £100 paid them.
THE EMIGRANT Fitting-out Branch at No 4, BISHOPSGATE-STREET, opposite the London Tavern, is open from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. for sale or forsale, including bedding, may be obtained for FOUR GUINEAS.
A Branch of each at ST. GEORGE'S CRESCENT, LIVERPOOL.

OLD FEATHER BEDS RE-DRESSED and PURIFIED by STEAM with Patent Machinery.—The new process of dressing not only renovates all impurities, but, by entirely destroying the quills, the bulk is greatly increased, and, consequently, the bed is rendered much lighter and softer. Charge for dressing, 3d per lb. Old and mothy mattresses effectually cured and re-made into soft and unrivalled carriage free, within five miles.—HEAL and SONS' List of Bedding, containing full particulars of weights, sizes, prices, &c., sent free by post on appl cation to their factory, 196 (opposite the Chapel), Tottenham-court-road.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH and SMYRNA SPONGES.—The Tooth-brush penetrates thoroughly into the divisions, and cleanses them in the most extraordinary manner, without injuring the gums. The Smyrna Sponges, penetrating Hair-brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia bristles, and Flesh-brushes, are sold at the manufactory, 10, Finsbury-pavement, Coldbath-square, that cleans harmless, by its one-third the time. An immense Stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponges, at METCALFE, BINGLEY, and Co.'s only Establishment, 1828, Oxford-street, one door from Holles-street. Nerous's Alkaline Tooth-powder, 2s 6d per box.

MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT.—A new and elegant preparation for the Hair, compounded on rational principles, and which once used will, at once supersede the filthy stuff called Rowland's Macassar Oil, recommended by the most fashionable names, which possess not the slightest power to promote the growth of the Hair, and which will, after its use for a few days, cause it to fall off in handfuls. MILTON'S LUBRICATOR is used in a few minutes on the Hair and with each pot, will soon render the Hair clean, luxuriant, and of a beautiful curl.
So.d by all perfumers and medicine venders in town and country. Who seals London Agents—Messrs Barclay and Sons, Farringdon-street; Edwards, St. Paul's Church-yard; Sanger, 151, Oxford-street; and Hannay and Co., Oxford-street.

THE TEETH.—A very curious invention connected with Dental Surgery has been introduced by Mr. HOWARD, of 17, George-street, Hanover-square; it is the introduction of an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth, as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer. They will never change colour or decay, and will be found very superior to any that have been introduced. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will last for many years, and will support the cheek as no other can do. Decayed teeth rendered perfectly useful and ornamental. The introduction is at a trifling expense to many persons, and those interested cannot do better than avail themselves of this method.

TWO LADIES.—ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, for Sold by them, and by all respectable Chemists and Perfumers.

THEY that FAMOUS REMEDY, PARR'S LIFE PILLS.—It is a fact beyond dispute that most of the diseases with which the human race are afflicted are the result of a disordered state of the stomach and liver. To remedy this, the occasion, use of PARR'S LIFE PILLS is found necessary to, and sometimes prevented. Also cured, in their operation they go direct to the seat of the disease, and by their searching qualities eradicate the causes of the symptoms. Sold by the Proprietors, BEECHAM and Co., Crane-court, Fleet-street, London; and by all respectable medicine venders throughout the world, with each box. Wholesale London Agents: Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Edwards, 67, St. Paul's Church-yard; and Barclay, 95, Farringdon-street.

GERMANY.—Notice is hereby given, that Messrs. JOHN FRANCIS and Co., Frankfort-on-the-Maine, are the only Agents for the Sale of the Mortara Vegetable Universal Medicine. British Colleges of Health, New-road, London, Feb. 1, 1850.

NO. 80.—SILVER EWERS, WITH SALVERS, REPRESENTING THE TRIUMPHS OF DORIA.—17TH CENTURY.

EXHIBITION OF ANCIENT AND MEDIÆVAL ART.

(Concluded from page 292.)

THE Illustrations this week consist of two Ewers, portion of the magnificent silver plate belonging to the Right Hon. Lord de Mauley; a remarkably fine Bronze Vase, of Greek workmanship, also belonging to his Lordship; and a fragment of a Greek Vase, of most beautiful design, the property of T. R. Auldjo, Esq.

The Ewers represented in our Illustration are two of three which, together with three Salvers also exhibited at the Exhibition of Mediæval Art, were purchased by Lord de Mauley, at Genoa, of the Lomellini family, a branch of the Dorias, the deeds of one of whose renowned ancestors, Andrew Doria, the bas-reliefs and emblems on the plate have usually been considered to portray. These Ewers as our Illustrations show, are of extremely fine form, the figures being modelled with the utmost precision and effect. On the larger of the two ewers, the subjects represent a camp, with figures apparently hastening to inform a General of the success of a naval expedition which is sculptured on the other side. The neck, stand, and handle are of striking and picturesque design. The bas-relief on the smaller ewer represents a group of tritons fighting, and sea-monsters carrying away nerinæ, modelled with infinite tact. The base, neck, and handle of this ewer are extremely elaborate, and full of beautiful detail, wrought in the most spirited manner. We should observe that, of the three ewers at the Exhibition, two are of this smaller size, exactly corresponding with each other in detail. The salvers are of exquisite workmanship; the large one, corresponding to the largest ewer, has a border composed of multitudes of figures most artistically embossed and chased. The subjects consist of ships lying in harbour, sailors and soldiers being summoned to man them; naval fights and victories, and victorious ships returning in triumph, towing conquered galleys; and the presentation of the admiral to the King. This last group is supposed to represent the great Genoese Admiral, Andrew Doria, before the Emperor Charles V., by whom he was made Prince of Malfi, and invested with the order of the Golden Fleece. The borders of the smaller salvers comprise figures of tritons fighting nerinæ—assimilating the smaller ewers—all exquisitely chased. These beautiful works have been usually attributed to Cellini, and are, as before stated, considered to represent the triumphs of Andrew Doria over the Turks; but we ourselves incline to the opinion that they illustrate the triumphs of the Doria family generally, as the vanquished galleys on the large salver bear the flag of St. Mark, pointing to the victories of the Dorias over the Venetians, at an earlier period of history than that at which Andrew Doria flourished.

The large Bronze Vase is of very fine Greek work. It was found in an excavation at Ruvo, near Bari, in Lower Italy; and, although in our representation it is given of small size, it is really of very large dimensions. The handles are grotesque terminal, and the ornamental work is most beautifully executed. Our representation, we should observe, is strictly geometrical.

The beautiful vase of which the fragment represented is a portion, was found at Pompeii, in 1839, in the House of the Faun. The shape of the vase is elegant; the handle and lip are of exquisite form; the taste and execution of the ornamental work, of the purest style and highest art. The substance or ground of the vase is a glass of deep transparent sapphire blue; on which, in opaque white glass, is cut, in the manner of a cameo, foliage of the vine and ivy, interspersed with birds. It is similar in execution to the famous Portland Vase. The handle, neck, and other parts of the blue glass which are exposed, bear marks of the tool, as well as the opaque portion. Pliny says, that the glass-work was partly blown, partly cast, and often turned. The most remarkable examples were cut by the engravers of cameos, sometimes in great relief, giving great brilliancy and sharpness to their work. In this vase the white and blue appear to have been cast together, and the white cut away by the artist.

It was found broken, and parts of it fell into different hands; but by arrangement between the possessors of the two largest portions they were united, for the purpose of obtaining the design, which, by permission of Mr. Auldjo, we have copied from a drawing in his possession, and represent by the side of the fragment.

The House of the Faun appears to have belonged to some wealthy lover of the fine arts, as his house was stored with objects of great value, particularly the splendid mosaic of the Battle between Alexander and Darius, and other costly mosaics, bronzes, sculptures, and paintings. This glass vase had, no doubt, been procured from Greece, and was an object of great value and interest in his collection.

NO. 623.—FRAGMENT OF GREEK VASE, AND RESTORATION.

NO. 125.—BRONZE VASE, FOUND NEAR BARI.

THE HIPPOPOTAMUS.—The Rapon steamer, we learn from anticipatory advices, which sailed for Southampton from Alexandria on the 9th inst., with the Indian Mail, has on board, for the London Zoological Society, a hippopotamus, which has been waiting in Cairo for the hot season; and a collection of animals and birds, amongst which are an ibex from Mount Sinai, a lion, a shepard, two lynxes, an ichneumon, some civet cats, and a variety of serpents, lizards, and desert rats. A young giraffe was also to have formed part of the collection, but it was unfortunately drowned in the canal after reaching Alexandria. The hippopotamus, being only 18 months old, is comparatively small, and lives exclusively on milk, its daily consumption being about 60 pints, for the furnishing of which several cows are kept on board. It is very tame, and allows itself to be freely handled by its Arab attendant, whom it follows and answers to the name of Ghebbayach, an island on the Blue Nile, near the seventh cataract, between Sennar and Fazoglu, where it was caught. It is a male specimen; and Abbas Pasha, the Viceroy of Egypt, has issued orders to procure a female, which is expected to arrive at Alexandria after the rise of the Nile, in about three months' time, and will also be sent to England. Preparations for the conveyance of the hippopotamus had been made at Southampton, on board the Rapon, with a convenient iron tank, holding about 400 gallons of fresh water, which it will require to be renewed every other day to bathe in. This is the first hippopotamus that has been taken to Europe alive, and it is to be hoped that it will reach England in safety.

TULIPS.

IN our Journal of last week we briefly noticed the splendid Show of Tulips at Mr. Groom's, on Thursday, at Clapham Rise. We now engrave three of the several varieties.

The three principal divisions into which the Tulip is divided, are the Rose, which contains flowers having white grounds, with rose or cherry marks; the Bybloemen, containing all the purple and brown shades on white grounds; and the Bizard, which includes all the yellow grounds with marks of any description of colour. The tulip should possess a good shape, which should be, when fully expanded, half of an oblate spheroid; the stalk being inserted in the pole, which should be a little depressed, so as to give the flower what is termed a good shoulder, and cause it to retain a regular figure during all its stages. The distribution of the colour should be either what is called the feather (a sharp edging, resembling the feather part of a quill) round the petal, commencing a short distance from the base, and continuing all round the same level on the other side; all the petals should be marked alike as nearly as possible, and level on the top. Next to the feather in estimation comes the flamed flower, which should have, besides the feather, a rich beam up the rib of each petal, branching off on either side, and meeting the feather. At the same time there should be sufficient ground colour preserved between the flame to display the latter to the greatest advantage. There is also a tulip much admired about London, which is the flame without the feather.

The specimens engraved are—The flame, only, "Holme's King;" the feather, "Victoria Regina;" the flame, "Triomphe Royal."

TULIPS.

HIPPOPOTAMUS FOR THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

24, Lincoln's Inn-fields, May 21, 1850.

THE Hippopotamus, which is now a passenger to this country from Egypt, was an object of great interest to travellers at Cairo a few months since. I saw it there in February, amongst numerous other living and dead curiosities, under the keeping of Dr. Abbott. The Times of to-day, in a description of the habits and the ancient notices of this animal, alludes to a drawing of the Hippopotamus in one of the tombs at Beni Hassan, a place some hundred miles up the Nile, famed for its curious fresco paintings. As this is, I believe, the only sketch of the animal handed down to us by the ancient Egyptians, I have made a copy for you of an exact drawing which I took on the spot. It is a remarkable fact, that there is found, I believe, no single drawing of the camel in any of the ancient painted tombs on the Nile; and this is the more inexplicable as the camel is alluded to in the Scriptures as an Egyptian animal; and almost every beast, bird, and fish, as well as insects and reptiles, may be found represented in one or another of the countless excavations in the country. In the sketch above alluded to I saw no traces of the large tusks mentioned in the Times.

HIPPOPOTAMUS—SECOND CAVE, BENI HASSAN.

Your obedient servant,
JOHN MACGREGOR.

P.S.—I observed that, as an invariable rule, animals drawn singly in the Egyptian tombs, temples, &c., have their faces turned to the right hand: the contrary direction to that in which an inferior artist in modern times is inclined to direct the head.

(In our next Number we hope to engrave the above Hippopotamus, expected to arrive at Southampton early in the week.)

ENGLISH "SPECIMENS" FOR THE PACHA OF EGYPT.—Among the "passengers" by the Indus, which left Southampton on Monday, for Alexandria, with the Indian mail, were twelve horses, eight ponies, five dogs, about twenty pheasants, four swans, half-a-dozen rabbits, and as many barn-door fowls, all of which were purchased in this country, at an enormous expense, for the Pacha of Egypt. The whole of the United Kingdom has been ransacked to get the choicest specimens of the various animals which the Pacha required. A number of persons went out to Egypt in the Indus to take charge of the animals and birds during the voyage. The horses were of the race-horse breed. One of them, a very fine animal, cost eight hundred guineas. The ponies were Shetland, and were beautiful little creatures. They were remarkable for their diminutive size, and their resemblance one to another in height, colour, &c. The swans were black, and noble-looking birds. The pheasants were great curiosities, on account of the variety and beauty of their plumage. The rabbits were high-bred, and had all the points most esteemed by fanciers. The male domestic fowls were as fine specimens of the British chanticleer as were ever seen. The greatest curiosities, however, in the whole collection were two bulldogs. They were thorough bred, and so fierce and ugly that scores of persons who went to look at them recoiled for a moment with surprise and fear. The bulldogs were fastened to the deck with massive chains; but one of them broke his chain easily, and killed some poultry in a hen-coop before he could be secured. Two tigers would scarcely be more dangerous to encounter.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, May 25, 1850.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 429.—VOL. XVI.] SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1850. [SIXPENCE. { WITH SUPPLEMENT GRATIS.

LAW REFORM.

THE question of Law Reform is not a new one, but has employed the best intellects of England for a century. Even lawyers are agreed that the laws of England urgently require simplification of procedure and administration. From time to time the general question is started, and argued with so much eagerness and volubility, that public men are fain to disembarrass themselves of the trouble of the discussion, by confessing once for all that the case is clear, that their minds are made up, and that the laws of England must be reformed forthwith. Yet nothing is done. The task of reform is too great for any human intellect to accomplish; and the most zealous and able friends of the cause, the most competent in every way to undertake it—men whose lives have been passed both in the study and administration of the law,—who know it in all its strength and all its weakness, give up the subject in despair. There is no intellectual Hercules amongst them who can clear out such an Augean stable as that.

Yet what cannot be accomplished in the gross, may be attempted in detail. Law Reformers, seeing the hopelessness of grasping the whole subject, even in the longest lifetime and with the most indefatigable energies, divide themselves, according to the bent of their minds or their previous studies, into classified opponents of the various branches of the Law. Thus we have one section of very earnest and able Law Reformers, who devote their talents and their pugnacity to laying bare and endeavouring to remedy the multifarious abuses and delays of the administration of justice in our Ecclesiatical Courts. Another section, with the vivacious Lord Brougham at their head, imagine that our Common Law stands most urgently in need of the besom of the legal purifier, and vehemently insist that no country can really be considered as free or civilized as it ought to be, if law is costly and tardy, or placed beyond the reach of the humblest suitor for justice. Another party, equally eloquent, insists that the laws for the transfer of real estates are so cumbrous, complicated, and expensive, as to be a disgrace to the age; and that, until they be made as simple as the laws relative to the sale or transfer of a bale of cotton, or any other article of merchandise, we shall, in one important particular, be guilty of an injustice, and perpetuate a barbarism. Another class, still more clamorous, insist that, of all the abuses that ever existed in the world, none is equal in magnitude to the Court of Chancery. To these four armies of Law Reformers a fifth has recently been added, in consequence of the unhappy scruples of the Rev. Mr. Gorham, and the legal and doctrinal disputes to which they have led. This last party object to even the remotest interference of the State tribunals with the doctrines of the Church, and desire to prevent, in all future time, the great courts of appeal, the House of Lords and the Privy Council, from even considering, much less reversing, any judgment that may be pronounced in ecclesiastical matters by the Ecclesiastical Courts.

The whole of these five questions of Law Reform are more or less before the public and the Legislature at the present time. Many able and accomplished men are at work upon them, and have made as much progress as can reasonably be expected, when the questions are so large and important, and when the danger of moving too fast is so apparent. Time hallows even abuses; and grievances cannot be rudely and suddenly remedied in a country like England, where the public mind is slow and cautious, and has rather a liking for the antique and the firmly established, because it is antique and firmly established,—independent altogether of its abstract beauty or its theoretical merits. We must, therefore, be contented to see "Law Reform" drag its slow length along—not like a wounded snake, but like the tortoise in the fable. If it be very slow, it is likely that it will be very sure. Some day or other we may expect it to arrive at its destination, though it must be confessed that a little more haste would not be at all inconvenient.

The Bishop of London is the most eminent of our Law Reformers at the present time, and has introduced a Bill into Parliament for "Amending the Administration of Justice in her Majesty's Privy Council in Appeals on questions of False Doctrine, Heresy, and Schism." The discussion upon the subject has been adjourned, and the details of the proposed measure are not yet fairly before the public. We shall, therefore, content ourselves for the present with merely recording the introduction of the Bill under these high auspices, and the fact that it is understood to have been submitted to the careful preliminary examination of the whole Bench of Bishops, and to have obtained the cordial approbation of all the members of that right reverend body, with the exception of three. There will be ample time to discuss it hereafter.

The approaching resignation of the Lord Chancellor, from ill-health and the infirmities of advancing years, has once more opened up the still greater and more urgent question of Chancery Reform. As soon as Lord Cottenham shall have delivered judgment in a few causes which have come to that point of maturity before him, it has been announced by the Prime Minister, that his Lordship will resign the high office, upon which his great talents and exemplary character have thrown such lustre. The opportunity has been taken to suggest the necessity of separating the judicial from the political functions of the Lord Chancellor. This is a suggestion of old standing, which has only been kept in abeyance, because it could not be gracefully or even usefully acted upon until a change of Ministry, when the Lord Chancellor would, with other political officers, be removed—or until that still more appropriate occasion which has now arrived.

THE HIPPOPOTAMUS, IN THE GARDENS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY REGENT'S-PARK.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

The objections to the union of judicial with political office are so strong, and have been so keenly felt, that no Judge in Great Britain, the Lord Chancellor excepted, has been permitted to hold his high place in obedience to party necessities. It has been considered dangerous and unconstitutional that it should be so. But the supreme Judge, by a strange anomaly, has been allowed to remain in a dangerous if not unconstitutional position. He has been suffered to be the creature of a vote of the House of Commons. The present Lord Chancellor, with all his genius, all his talent, all his experience, all his familiarity with the Court of Chancery—a Judge who gives, and has ever given, the highest satisfaction that could be given by any man having too much duty to perform—might have been removed at any day by a vote of want of confidence in Lord John Russell; while the Judges of the Common Law Courts—inferior in dignity to his Lordship, but transacting an amount of business not less important—were free from all such contingencies. All men agree that it is inconsistent with the due administration of justice, that such a Judge as the Lord Chancellor should hold his office on a tenure like this. No one disputes the necessity of reforming the evil. But the insecurity of his tenure of office is not the whole extent of the mischief. The Lord Chancellor is not solely a Judge in Equity. His avocations, powers, privileges, and duties are multifarious, complicated, and conflicting. He is not only President of the Court of Chancery, but he is Speaker of the House of Lords. He is not bound to sit in his own court, but is liable at any time to be summoned away from it to meet her Majesty in Privy Council. He is not simply a great magistrate, but he is the superintendent and overseer of all Justices of the Peace, whom he appoints or removes on his own responsibility. He not only decides disputes in equity, but he is, by virtue of his office, the guardian and protector of all persons who are unable to guard and protect themselves—infants, lunatics, and idiots. He has the patronage of numerous Church livings, and is a Judge of Appeal in three separate courts; namely, the Court of Chancery, the House of Lords, and the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. These, numerous as they are, form but a portion of his functions. Were his office made permanent, and were he, like other judges, to be wholly irremoveable by the chances and changes of party politics, it is evident that enough would not be done to satisfy the claims of suitors in his court, and the necessities of the public business. The two sets of functions must be separated, so that party politicians may still have, if they will, their political Chancellor to preside in the Lords, and that suitors in equity may have another and a more important Chancellor to preside in the Court of Chancery, undistracted by business which he is not competent to perform with satisfaction to himself and the public, and independent of the votes of a political and popular body. Lord John Russell announced on Tuesday night, in making known to the House the intention of the Lord Chancellor to resign his office, that the subject had engaged the serious attention of the Government. He confessed his own belief in the desirableness of the change proposed, and gave a faint prom se that the Government would introduce a measure to meet the end in view. The opportunity that has occurred is one that, if now suffered to escape, may not soon again present itself; and, although in a matter of such magnitude and importance the country will be as averse as Lord John Russell himself can be from undue precipitancy, his Lordship must remember that caution may be carried too far. The public will not tolerate those indefinite delays which he hinted at, and will expect him to take the matter in hand immediately. It is supposed that to give the Government time and opportunity to declare, the Great Seal will be put in commission.

THE HIPPOPOTAMUS, IN THE GARDENS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY, REGENT'S PARK.

THE safe arrival of a living Hippopotamus in the menagerie of the Zoological Society is already well known through the daily press. We hasten to lay before our readers the first sketch of him from life, which has been made in this country. The whole of the arrangements for his transport from Cairo have been most successful, and reflect the highest credit on the energy and ability of all who were concerned in them. It will be readily understood that no ordinary difficulties had to be surmounted in his maintenance at Cairo, in the first instance, during five months; and, afterwards, in getting him down to Alexandria, shipping him on board the Ripon, supplying him with the vast quantity of fresh water necessary for his bath, transferring him from the steamer to the railway, and thence to the Gardens. It appears, however, that throughout the whole of his eventful journey from the island of Obsyeh, where he was captured in July or August last, some 1800 miles above Cairo, everything has conspired to give a favourable sense to the Viceroy's liberal desire to assist the Society in the most interesting and important enterprise which they have ever undertaken. Several attempts have been made within the last twenty years to obtain living specimens of this great amphibious quadruped, but with uniform ill success; so that the offer of an American agent at Alexandria to give £5000 for an animal of this species delivered to him at that city has entirely failed to induce any speculator to encounter the risk and labour of an expedition to the Wa de Nile, with the object. Nothing perhaps more clearly demonstrates the value of the Pasha's gift, and of Mr. Murray's energetic advocacy of the interests of science, than the fact that even in Egypt, in the land of its nativity, the Hippopotamus is now so far removed from the ob-ervation of men, that the animal possessed by the society created intense wonder and interest in Cairo, and could only be withdrawn from the curious gaze of ten thousand spectators who witnessed its debarcation from the canal boat at Alexandria by the intervention of a strong body of the Pasha's troops, who accompanied it as a guard to the spot where the Ripon was moored.

The Hippopotamus was first seen in the Gardens by ourselves and by the members of the society on Sunday morning last, having arrived at a late hour on the previous evening. His extraordinary docility, healthy condition, his docility and attachment to his Arab attendant, and the evident enjoyment with which he plunged and gambol ed in the water, gave satisfactory evidence of the care which had been bestowed on him, and the foresight with which the Society's arrangements had been laid for its reception. Although yet under a two-month old, his massive proportions indicate the enormous power which will be developed in his mature growth; and the grotesque expression of his physiognomy far exceeds all that can be imagined from the stuffed specimens in museums, and the figures which have hitherto been published from the reminiscences of travellers

To see the Hippopotamus rightly, is to see him in the water: there his activity is only surpassed by the otter or the seal; and fortunate is the spectator who obtains his first impression of the creature as he emerges suddenly above the surface, after diving or lying tranquilly at the bottom of the tank, which contains a large portion of the house in which he is exhibited. The beautiful adaptation of structure to peculiar habits is in no animal more beautifully conspicuous than in the Hippopotamus; and it is difficult to suppose a more convenient and complete opportunity of observing both, than in the last and greatest acquisition of the Zoological Society. The subject is so interesting, and the desire of the Council to afford rational amusement as well as instruction to the public so praiseworthy, that we shall revert to it in our next Number.

The total number of constables of all classes receiving pay in England and Wales, in the year 1849, was 9724; namely, 2557 in England, and 167 in Wales. The amount paid to the county police rate, during that year, was £105,783 6s., and the expenditure £103,894 4s. 5d. Of this sum, £101,5 3 3s. was for pay allowances, and £2,376 for incidental expenses.

It is understood that the Treasury has awarded to each of the four barristers of the present Appellate Police Court the sum they paid for the purchase of their places. Mr. Best, M.P., paid £2000 for his appointment as one of the Commissioners, and was the last purchaser allowed. The attorneys and officers of the Police Court also expect compensation.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The general feeling amongst the public in France, on the subject of the withdrawal of the French Ambassador from London, has begun to assume the same tone as public opinion in England exhibited from the commencement on the matter, viz. that the step was rash, hasty, and ill-timed. It is supposed, indeed, that the French Ambassador would have returned to London before this, but that the Government is at a loss to lay before the National Assembly and the country any satisfactory reasons for the precipitate and imprudent withdrawal of their Minister from London. The Government journals now affect to make the most amicable advances to England, and protest that France has only a personal quarrel with Lord Palmerston, but that it still entertains the friendliest feelings towards England. It is said that General de la Hitte will be removed from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to a more suitable post, and that M. Drouyn de Lhuys will be the new Foreign Minister.

In the Legislative Assembly the new Electoral Bill is discussed with great earnestness, and, at times, with much violence of language, manner, and gesture.

On Monday evening several amendments were proposed, but were all rejected; and the second clause, fixing the three years' residence in any commune as the qualification to vote, was carried. The principle of the bill having been adopted, no doubt is entertained with regard to the passing of the remaining portion of the measure.

The debate on Tuesday evening was exceedingly tumultuous. M. Berryer, in supporting the measure, alluded to the Republicans of the Eve, and exclaimed, "We know nothing about them; but by the acts of Louvel and Alibaud"—the former being the assassin of the Duke de Berri, and the latter the intended one of Louis Philippe. The Mountain party hereupon broke out into a frenzy of violence and execration. The scene of uproar lasted some time, at the close of which the first paragraph of Article 3 was adopted.

The Red journals are furious in their remarks upon M. Berryer's reference to Louvel and Alibaud, as forming a portion of the Republican party.

On Wednesday the debate was resumed, and some further progress was made with the bill; but nothing occurred during the discussion that calls for remark. When the measure shall have been finally disposed of, we are told that other schemes of a retrograde character are to be brought forward, among which are to be the revival of the stamp duty upon newspapers, and the total prohibition of the sale of those publications in the streets.

A report was in circulation that the Russian Government had recalled its Ambassador from London. This statement is of dubious authority, and requires confirmation.

The Marquis de Talaru, who died last week in Paris, left no issue. He has bequeathed two millions of francs to the Count de Chambord. He has further bequeathed a considerable sum to Gaston de Montmorency, Prince of Robecq, to enable the Prince, as the Marquis declared in his will, to pay the debts contracted in performing acts of charity

The annual message of the President of the Republic to the Assembly is talked about as on the eve of being delivered. The President is expected to express emphatically his determination to maintain order, and his determination to strengthen order by the most energetic means within the law.

ITALIAN STATES.

From Piedmont, we learn that the trial of M. Franzoni, the Archbishop of Turin, for issuing to his clergy a circular conceived in a spirit of opposition to the recent reforms and ecclesiastical privileges by the Piedmontese Parliament, took place at Turin on the 23rd ult, when he was found guilty and condemned to a month's imprisonment and 500 francs fine. The Archbishop, who had been for some time previously confined in the citadel, refused to present himself at the trial. The affair has created a very painful sensation throughout Piedmont, the Archbishop being a pious man and a great friend of the poor.

From Florence we have the intelligence of a new convention of Austria and Tuscany for the provisional occupation of the Grand Duchy. The auxiliary corps will amount to 10,000 men—the initiative of the evacuation of the Grand Duchy to be left to the two contracting Powers. The convention is dated April 22, 1850; the ratification, May 20. A decree orders a levy of 14,000 men for 1850.

Our accounts from Rome are to the 21st ult. They mention that an allocution had been delivered by the Pope in the Consistory held the previous day. Rome was perfectly tranquil; but the people were angry and disappointed, on learning that no mention of administrative or monetary reforms had been made in the Consistory.

Lord Palmerston has addressed a second note to the Cabinet of Naples on the subject of the indemnities claimed by British subjects.

PRUSSIA.

From Berlin our accounts reach to the 25th ult. The official bulletins of the state of his Majesty's health continue to give favourable symptoms consequent on gun-shot wounds, and show that his Majesty is progressing favourably. The wound is more serious than was at first represented, but is by no means dangerous; it is about two inches long, across the fleshy part of the forearm, within a few inches of the elbow joint.

The ministerial organ, the Deutsche Reform, has abandoned its first statement, that the attempted crime was the result of a political conspiracy of the democratic party, and declares that no legal proof of such a connexion has as yet been discovered, but asserts that the democracy are indirectly the intellectual cause of the frightful crime. It appears, however, that advantage will be taken of this fact to introduce several measures against the press. Two journals are mentioned as about to be suppressed.

AUSTRIA.

An accident of a dangerous character occurred to the Imperial family at Vienna on the 24th ult. The mother of the Empress, the Archduchess Sophia, had gone to the railway to meet her son, and his Majesty took a seat in her carriage. The horses had only proceeded a few steps when they started off with great impetuosity. With the greatest difficulty the young animals were quieted for a few moments, during which his Majesty helped his mother and brother to make their escape from the carriage, and then jumped out himself. This had hardly been accomplished when the safetree broke.

UNITED STATES.

Accounts from New York to the 16th ult. have been received. On the report of the Slavery Compromise Committee, noticed last week, nothing definitive has yet been done.

The most stirring event is the contemplated buccaneering expedition against the island of Cuba. From the accounts (which are very varying) on the subject, we learn that several vessels had sailed from New Orleans, with the intention of invading that island, and aiding in an insurrection of the disaffected portion of the Cubans on the shore of the valley of Santa. The entire force is differently estimated at from 4000 to 13 000 men. It is added that several vessels, ostensibly sailing for Chagres, are really destined for Cuba; but where the rendezvous or place of debarkation is at present is probably a secret only to all but the leaders. The men have able leaders, arms and ammunition, and the leaders have plenty of money, with assurances of an almost general rising of the people when they land. This is doubtless the case in the western part—namely, that they will meet with a determined resistance from the Spanish forces, and that they must expect but little mercy if they fall. A New Orleans writer says, "The cry is patriotism, but the objects of more than half the invaders are confiscation and spoils. Several of the leading men of the Southern States favour the enterprise, and have subscribed money. General Quitman, formerly an officer in the Mexican war, and Governor of Mississippi, is the chief in command; Senor Lopez, the Cuba insurrectionist, being next. The expedition is too small for success, but Lopez says that two-thirds of the people and four fifths of the army in Cuba will join it, which feels in general do not believe." A strong Spanish naval force is consequently almost certain to appear.

The cholera continues to be very fatal on the western rivers, especially to emigrants, some boats having nearly forty deaths between New Orleans and St. Louis. The water of the Mississippi is almost sure to produce dysentery, when drunk by Europeans; and there is none other to drink on board its steamers.

CANADA.

The Canadian Parliament has been opened by Lord Elgin, at Toronto. He delivered his speech in English and French, and it was well received by a full House. The Governor states that Canadian securities are in better demand, and that they have risen in value in the market; that reciprocal trade with the United States is delayed, owing to the want of action on the part of Congress; that cheap and uniform rates of postage are required; that the Assembly should be more unanimously constituted than it now is; that public credit is becoming more opposed to capital punishment; that the Chancery practice of Canada requires improving; that improved assessment and jury laws, and cheaper courts of justice, are required. He states that annexation movement is becoming unpopular in Canada, and that neither the cause nor its advocates will be countenanced in any manner whatever by the Government.

"EVERY MAN HIS OWN FIREMAN" is the title given to a portable fire-engine, of great merit, recently registered by Mr. Baddeley. The present invention is adapted for domestic use, and being placed in a pail or other vessel of water, and the handle worked up and down, a powerful jet of water may be projected to a distance of thirty or forty feet, wherever a fire may be burning, without exposing the operator to any personal danger or inconvenience. The self-extinguisher is brought into action by merely pressing the thumb on a small lever, when the water is dispersed in the form of a shower, which drenches the whole of the burning surface. By this means, a single pail of water becomes more effectual for extinguishing fire than a much larger quantity thrown wastefully from the ordinary fire-engine. The price of the article is 30s.

EXTENSIVE SMUGGLING TRANSACTIONS.—On Sunday last, about one o'clock P.M., Lieutenant John Allen, commander of the Prince of Wales revenue cutter, fell in with a vessel called the Sea Flower, of Hull, engaged in the smuggling trade, which is believed to be extensively carried on on the Norfolk coast. The smuggler was boarded about 100 yards off Hasboro' light vessel, and upon searching her was found to be laden with 122 bales of contraband tobacco of 50 lb. each, being above 6000 lb. in all, the duty upon which would amount to upwards of £900. On Monday morning John Coxon and Samuel Jowett, who were found on board, were brought before the magistrates. The vessel and cargo will be confiscated, and will therefore prove a most valuable prize to the officers and men engaged in the capture.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

CAMBRIDGE.

At a Congregation holden on Tuesday, a Grace passed the Senate to authorise the Vice-Chancellor to expend a sum not exceeding £100 in the erection of an iron bridge over the water-course between the Botanic Garden and the Trumpington-road.

APPOINTMENTS AND PREFERMENTS.—The Hon. and Rev. Robert Plunkett, to the Deanery of Tuam. The Rev. Thomas Ilderton, to the Vicarage of Felton, Herefordshire. The Rev. H. Edwards, to the Vicarage of Wiggenhall, St. Germans, Norfolk. The Rev. Charles Ramsay Flint, to the Vicarage of Southern, Lincolnshire.

VACANCIES.—Elmsett Rectory; diocese, Ely; value, £580, with residence: pats., Clare Hall, Cambridge; Rev. J. Spears, deceased Willingdon Vicarage, Sussex; diocese, Chichester; value, £168; patrons, Dean and Chapter of Chichester; by death of the Rev. H. James.

TESTIMONIALS.—The following clergymen have lately received testimonials of affection and esteem:—The Rev. Frederick Fane, Curate, from the yeomanry, gentry, and others resident in the parish of Blackmore, Essex. The Rev. J. C. Morphew, from the children attending the daily and Sunday schools of Burton Latimer, Northamptonshire. The Rev. Blencowe Schuckburgh, from the parishioners of Marston St. Lawrence, and from the parishioners of Warkworth, both in Northamptonshire, of which he has been the Incumbent for many years. The Rev. J. Bayliss, Incumbent of Bucknell, Staffordshire, from the inhabitants. The Rev. R. N. Pen hereon, resigning the Incumbency of St. Mary's Chapel, Maryport. The Rev. Moorhouse Thompson, Curate of Kyloe, from the choir. The Rev. John Bentham, Master of Lancaster Grammar School, from his pupils and friends. The Rev. Daniel Dickson, from the congregation of St. Paul's, Newport. The Rev. Edward Meyrick Goulburn, from some of the parishioners, Holywell, Oxford.

THE GORHAM CASE.

On Monday, the Court of Common Pleas delivered an elaborate judgment on the motion for a rule to show cause why a writ of prohibition should not issue to stay the Judges of the Arches Court from instituting Mr. Gorham to the living of Brampford Speke; and that judgment was to refuse the rule. The resources of litigation seem unknown to the lawyers themselves, till they are lead for ingeniously devising or discovering them, and, therefore, we cannot say that no further legal proceedings will take place; though one reason which the Court gave for refusing the rule was, that "further discussion would not produce any additional information," and that "granting the rule would only PROLONG A USELESS LITIGATION." We dare not hope, however, that the decision of the highest tribunals, and this marked condemnation of useless litigation, will prevent further appeals if they be possible. The judgment of the Court turned entirely on the point, "whether the 9th section of the statute 24 Henry 8, which enacts, that in any case within either of the enumerated classes of cases which shall touch the King, the appeal shall be made to the Upper house of Convocation, is deemed to be incorporated in, or to control the statute 25 Henry 8," which generally gives appeals to the King in Chancery—subsequently enacted the King in Council. "It appears to us," say the judges, "that the true construction of the statute 25 Henry 8, c. 19, which applies to the appeal made in this case, is, that appeals in all cases under that statute may be made to the Queen in Council, except in the cases in which such appeal may arise shall or shall not touch the Crown; and that, therefore, under the authority of subsequent statutes, the appeal was properly referred to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council." A great number of cases were quoted to prove that such also had been the practice. Consistently with that, both parties to the appeal concurred in it, and took no objection to the jurisdiction of the Council till the decision was given, when the defeated party found out that the appeal had been made to a wrong tribunal. The Court also referred to the plea in judgment of the Queen's Proctor, but admitted that the applicant had only exercised the undoubted right of making an application to the Court of Common Pleas; while it confirmed the judgment, and said that nothing was presented to the Court during the argument to invalidate the statement on which it was founded. On all these grounds the Court refused the rule. There was a subordinate point referred to, which the Court did not decide, namely, whether the case in question did touch the Crown. We cannot think that it did, in any sense contemplated by the statutes. The question at issue is one of doctrine and discipline, not of property or the rights of the Crown; and it, therefore, it had been held, that cases touching the Queen could not be referred to the Privy Council, the world not have included—and such, we think, was the opinion of the Court Mr. Gorham—in such cases. It may be right, on many momentous question, to have recourse to all the arms supplied by the law for carrying on a through "all warfare; but we are pleased to find the Court discouraging further proceedings, and, consequently, many of the pin-pricking proceedings, as "useless litigation."

A great number of the members of the University of Oxford have signed a petition to the Queen, setting forth that the Council has in all ages claimed and generally exercised the right of freely judging and deciding ecclesiastical causes by spiritual judges, quoting a variety of cases at different periods of our history in which such a right has been conceded to the Church by her Majesty's predecessors, and praying her Majesty to give her Royal assent that all questions touching the doctrine of the Church of England arising in appeal or in temporal courts shall be referred to a synod; that her Majesty will give her sanction to a bill for making the judgment of such synod binding upon the temporal courts of the realm and that her Majesty will be pleased to refer the matter of doctrine recently questioned, to the Church itself, as may be advised by the episcopate, so that the members of the Church may know what is her doctrine upon the judgment of appeals, and the Church enjoy full freedom of declaring and judging in all matters purely spiritual.

A great number of the same persons have also subscribed a memorial or petition to the Archbishop of Canterbury, expressing the deep anxiety they feel in consequence of the late decision of the Privy Council, because, apart from the doctrinal interest involved in the decision, it appears that authority in controversies of faith is transferred in a court composed of civil judges, to an authority of the Church. But the supreme court appears to have ruled that the Church of England has no certain doctrine on the sacrament of baptism; that great uncertainty would be thrown on other declarations of faith, and that the continuance of such a state of things would tend to produce universal scepticism They therefore pray his Grace to take measures, with the advice of the Bishops, whereby all questions touching the doctrines of the Church shall be finally referred to a synod, and the doctrine of the Church called in question, in the late judgment, may be authoritatively re-affirmed. The memorial is numerously signed, and among others by attached to both petitions—all more than a column and a half, solid, of names of the most learned men, and amongst them are the names of heads of houses, Fellows, Professors, Doctors, and Students. These gentlemen claim for themselves, under the name of the Council, a power and authority of a higher and more binding nature than the temporal courts, and greater even than the Supreme Court of the Queen in Council, the decision of which they desire to have reversed.

A NOVEL ADDITION TO THE PIANOFORTE.—Mr. Church, of Bristol, has recently had the honour of submitting his ingenious and useful invention called the "wrist supporter" to the pianoforte of her Grace the Duchess of Wales. This invention has the recommendation of some of our most eminent pianists, and cannot fail to facilitate many of the difficulties which masters have to encounter with their pupils, namely, a good and equal touch, the hands and fingers in rapid passage, which is perfectly secured by this valuable contrivance.

MR. J. D. DAVLIN, AUTHOR OF THE "SHOEMAKER."—We regret to learn from a correspondent just issued, and which bears the names of several literary celebrities as vouches for its accuracy, that Mr. Davlin stands in need of assistance of the benevolent, to rescue him from a position of calamity, into which he has fallen from misfortune and other inevitable causes. Mr. Davlin is well known from his generally interesting, and in some cases highly valuable, treatise on his own trade, called "The Shoemaker," published as one of Mr. Knight's Industrial Guides, four or five other volumes. For some three or four years, Mr. Davlin has been a sufferer from illness; and in the summer of 1849 he was attacked with cholera, but in one of its mildest forms, though of lingering obstinacy, and leaving a very serious affection of the eyes. During his long illness all his available resources have been gradually exhausted in the extended way; and now the remains of a library, at one time numbering about three thousand volumes (the result of the soberest habits and the greatest economy), and still, probably, amounting to some fourteen or fifteen hundred, with some very curious and unique trade charters, as also a large collection of transcripts which he made during the research of a long series of years, from the printed and manuscript stores of the British Museum, &c., at every direction he possibly could, is held security for a considerable sum of money due for room-rent, &c. The grain object of Mr. Davlin in seeking for and purchasing these charters and making these transcripts, was that, after having together sufficient materials for the production of a history of the British Constitutional Corporations generally. The situation of the benevolently disposed is solicited towards Mr. Davlin, in the hope that the effort now made will enable him to find some escape from his present embarrassments, but especially to save what yet remains of his books, manuscripts, &c., those being the most precious of all other enrichments to a mind of his order, and thus—to make use of his own saying—"that the combined interests of health and literature may be for many years longer consumed both his pride and exertion. The committee is composed of Mr. Charles Knight, Mr. Douglas Jerrold, Mr. Charles Mackay, Mr. S. C. Hall, Mr. Henry Mayhew, and Mr. Thomas Wright. Subscriptions, we believe, will be received: or at the office of the Art Union Journal, Marlborough Chambers, 49, Pall-mall; Mr. Colnaghi, 13, Great Marlborough street, Messrs. Chapman and Hall's, 186, Strand, Messrs. Smith, Elder, and Co's, 65, Cornhill; Mr. Charles Gilpin's, 5, Bishopsgate-street Within; Mr. John Russell Smith's, 6, Old Compton-street, Soho; by any other friend, or by Mr. Davlin himself, addressed to the care of Mr. Russell Smith.

There was a beautiful coin found in Jarrow churchyard last week, in digging a grave. It appears to have been struck in the reign of the Scottish King Robert. It has the dragon with the Christian emblem on its back; and on the reverse the name "Alcuin," who was a "moneyer" of that King, and lived between 665 and 674. It is somewhat less than our penny.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

Their Lordships assembled for the first time after the Whitsun holidays.

Her Majesty's gracious reply to their Lordships' address of congratulation on the birth of a Prince was communicated by the Marquis of WESTMINSTER.

The Masters' Jurisdiction in Equity Bill, the Judgments (Ireland) Bill, and the Estates Leasing (Ireland) Bill went through committee.

The Defects in Leases Act Amendment Bill was read a third time and passed.

AGRICULTURAL PROTECTION.

The Marquis of SALISBURY presented a petition complaining of agricultural distress, and praying for a return to Protection. The noble Earl entered into a variety of details to prove the injurious effects of the Free-trade experiment on the agricultural interests particularly, and on the general interests of the country.

The Earl of MALMESBURY quoted returns showing the state of pauperism in 1846, and contrasted them with the returns for 1850, proving that in this year of free imports and low prices the pauperism of this country was greater than in the last year of import duties and a year of high prices.

The Earl GREY contended that the distress which the agricultural interests so much and so justly complained of was attributable more to the defalcation of rents of 1846 than to free trade. He taunted noble Lords opposite with getting up incessant Protection debates, without venturing on making any distinct proposition for the restoration of the old commercial system.

Lord STANLEY assured the noble Earl that he should feel it to be his duty to point out the practical results of the so-called Free Trade from week to week and from day to day. He and his friends would f el it their duty to show, from the papers furnished by the Government themselves, that all the promises and all the predictions of the advocates of the Free-Trade policy had been falsified. The noble Lord proceeded to examine the exports return, from which it had been inferred that our exports had greatly increased, and pointed out additional articles in this return, to the amount of two millions and a half, which articles were not included in the return before the Free-Trade experiment was commenced. But even supposing that we had increased a little our foreign export trade, he (Lord Stanley) maintained that it was an unimportant trade compared with the home. The noble Lord referred to the great diminution in the consumption of cocoa, coffee, dry fruits, figs, raisins, currants, sugar, and tallow, to exhibit the pinched condition of the people generally, who are compelled to curtail the comforts (not the luxuries) of life in order to make ends meet. Increased pauperism and diminished employment in agricultural and manufacturing districts were daily making the failure of the Free-Trade policy more manifest; and he (Lord Stanley) felt satisfied that the country was fast coming to the conviction that a return to a just, moderate, and equitable system of Protection to all kinds of British industry was indispensable, in order to restore the country to a state of prosperity.

The petition was laid on the table.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

Her Majesty's most gracious reply to the address of congratulation on the birth of a prince was presented by Mr. Labouchere.

After a considerable time spent in discussing private bills, the House went into a Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates.

SALARIES OF PUBLIC OFFICERS.

On the vote for Ministerial and other salaries,

Mr. Fagan proposed a general reduction of ten per cent., on account of the diminished price of articles of consumption.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER deprecated any interference with the inquiry of the select committee on salaries.

Mr. CORDEN declared that he would not join in any proposal the object of which was to pass a condemnation on Free-Trade. He insisted that he never knew the working people better off than now in the West Riding of York.

Mr. DENISON was glad to hear that the West Riding of York was so flourishing; but other places were not in so happy a condition, and he advised Mr. Fagan to inquire of his honourable friend the member for Manchester (Mr. Bright) and ask him why it was that his large establishments were closed. When he (Mr Disraeli) and his friends found that the great body of the middle classes in the country were daily making the most lamentable complaints of distress, they —agricultural, manufacturing, and shipping—were all suffering, and it behoved them to call for all legitimate retrenchment, although they did not designate themselves, par excellence, financial reformers.

Mr. FORBES did not press his proposition to a division.

On the vote for the Mint, Mr. CHRIS. STANLEY stated, that a new florin, with the usual words, omitted from the first coin, would shortly be issued; and that another issue of threepenny pieces was in progress.

Several votes were agreed to, after much discussion and several divisions.

The Court of Chancery (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed, with amendments, on the motion of the SOLICITOR GENERAL.

The Convicts' Prison Bill was re-committed and amended, on the motion of Sir G. GREY.

The Metropolitan Interments Bill was committed pro formâ, to admit of amendments, and to be reprinted.

The Poor Removal (Ireland) Bill was read a second time, and ordered to be referred to a select committee.

The Municipal Corporations (Ireland) Bill, and the Vestries and Vestry Clerks Bill, passing through committee.

The Court of Prerogative (Ireland) Bill was read a second time, and ordered to be referred to a select committee. —Adjourned at a quarter past one o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

NOTICES OF MOTION.

Lord STANLEY gave notice that he would, on Friday week, call attention to the Greek question.

The Marquis of LONDONDERRY gave notice of his intention to submit resolutions, on an early day, condemnatory of the abolition of the office of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

The Trustees Act, 1850, Bill passed through committee.

The report of the Masters' Jurisdiction in Equity Bill was received, on the motion of Lord BEAUMONT.

On the motion of Lord BEAUMONT, the Fees (Court of Common Pleas) Bill was read a second time.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

RESIGNATION OF THE LORD CHANCELLOR.

Lord J. RUSSELL stated, in reply to questions put by Mr. W. PATTEN and Mr. ROEBUCK, that, in consequence of the state of the Lord Chancellor's health, it is his intention to resign the Great Seal as soon as he shall be able to give judgment in those cases which he has heard. In the filling up the office, it was his (Lord John Russell's) intention to stipulate that any one accepting the Great Seal should take it subject to any regulation Parliament may make in respect to salary, in accordance with the recommendation of the committee on salaries now sitting; and likewise that the chief offices in the gift of the Great Seal should be subject to any regulation Parliament may make in accordance with the recommendation of the committee on fees; and also that the Great Seal should be taken subject to the decision of Parliament with respect to the retiring pension. The question of the separation of the judicial and political functions of the Lord Chancellor was under the consideration of the Government; but, though it were desirable to effect such an object, and though the Government hoped to be able to present a measure to Parliament with that view, the subject was so difficult, and was so connected with the political history and the administration of the country, that he was reluctant to propose any measure to Parliament without the most serious deliberation.

PAUPER EMIGRATION.

Mr. W. MILES submitted the following motion to the House:—"That it is expedient that the Government, with the concurrence of the boards of guardians throughout England and Wales, should take immediate steps to forward the emigration of orphan girls, inmates of the several workhouses, and capable of entering service, to Australia, as apprentices." The hon. member referred to the want of female domestic servants in Australia, and urged that a favourable opportunity thus presented itself for providing for female orphans, now a burden on their respective parishes. He contended that a judicious system of this species of emigration would be equally beneficial to the colonies, to the emigrants, and to the mother country.

Mr. A. STAFFORD moved, as an amendment, to substitute the words "United Kingdom" for the words "England and Wales."

Mr. MILES accepted this amendment, and the question was framed accordingly.

Mr. HAWES said that the Colonial Office and the Land and Emigration Commission had the sincerest desire to supply the colonies with that kind of emigration which was advantageous to the colonies and to the emigrants; and he described what had been done in sending out females to our Australian colonies, contending that the supply of female emigrants had been quite equal to the demand. There was no difference of opinion on the subject of this female emigration between the hon. member who made this motion and the Colonial Office, but, in dealing practically with the question, it was necessary to consider the limited funds in the hands of the Secretary of State, and to recollect that he was a trustee bound to administer them under the provision of an act of Parliament, and in accordance with the general regulations laid down by the colonies. The Under-Secretary asserted that, at the present moment, it would not be desirable to give an undue stimulus to this species of emigration, and that, at all events, the Colonial Office could not do much more than they had done and were doing. He must therefore move the previous question, expressing a hope that Mr. Miles would not press his resolution to a division.

Mr. MONSELL was proceeding to address the House, when it was counted out. Adjourned to Thursday.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

PRIVILEGE.

Lord BROUGHAM call'ed attention to the fact, that the Daily News had copied a slanderous article against himself in connexion with the Earl of Lincoln's Divorce Bill from the Globe, the proprietor and editor of which had apologised to him for its original insertion. He would take time to consider until the next day whether he would move that the printer of the Daily News should be called to the bar of their Lordships' House.

Some bills on the table were forwarded a stage, and their Lordships adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

The House met, for the first time, in the new House prepared for its accommodation. The sitting was an experimental one. The House met at twelve o'clock, and the only subject brought under discussion was the Irish Elections Bill, which was read a third time.

At five o'clock the House re-assembled in the old House.

QUESTIONS.

In reply to a question from Colonel Dunne, the SOLICITOR-GENERAL said, it was not intended to introduce any amendment into the Encumbered Estates (Ireland) Act which will give to the gentlemen of that country whose estates have been subjected to its enactments the same protection to their persons that is given to bankrupts in this country. Such a principle was entirely distinct from that of the bill itself.

In reply to a question from Lord R. Grosvenor, Sir G. GREY said he had received deputations and communications from the medical practitioners of the metropolis upon the subject of medical reform, but they differed so essentially in their views as to what the nature of that reform should be—even those who were in the same branches of the profession—that he could not undertake to say that he was at all prepared to ask the House to legislate on the subject.

SUNDAY LABOUR IN THE POST-OFFICE.

Lord ASHLEY moved an address to the Crown, representing to her Majesty the wishes of the great mass of her subjects that the Sabbath-day should be one of rest in the post-offices throughout the kingdom, and that the collection and delivery of letters should cease upon that day; and also that her Majesty would be graciously pleased to cause an inquiry as to how far the transmission of the mails on the Sabbath might be diminished, or altogether done away with. The noble Lord admitted that a great deal had been done by the Government to meet the expression of public opinion on this subject; but it was necessary to urge upon them the necessity of persevering in the good work until every post-office in the kingdom was placed upon the same footing as that of the metropolis, as far as related to the reception, transmission, and delivery of letters. This was loudly demanded by all classes of her Majesty's subjects, the petitions to that House having been numerous, even from mercantile, banking, and traders, in favour of the proposition.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER admitted the deep feelings which prevailed through the country upon this subject; but a great misconception was abroad as to the conduct of the Government, which he had had only recently twenty-five additional clerks on the Sabbath-day, in addition to twenty-seven previously employed, by which means no less than 8000 persons were relieved from all Sunday duties in the post-offices throughout the country, and were enabled to attend to their religious duties. A great deal had been done to meet public opinion, and he thought that that should have been received as a principle would be admitted still further. The question of shutting the post-offices on the Sabbath was one rather for the country than for the Government. There would not be any difficulty in the carrying out of the object, but he believed the public would soon discover its inconvenience. He felt strongly, that, in opposing the motion of the noble Lord, he was representing the feelings of the majority of the country.

After some discussion the House divided, and the motion was carried by a majority of 33 to 68.

JEWS' DISABILITIES.

Lord J. RUSSELL, in a committee of the whole House, obtained leave to bring in a bill to regulate the mode of administering the oath of abjuration to persons professing the Jewish religion.—Adjourned.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

SIR GEORGE CHETWYND, BART., OF BROCKTON, CO. STAFFORD.

THE Chetwynds of Brockton descend from a common ancestor with the Earls of the same name. The first Baronet, Sir George Chetwynd, the father of the gentleman whose decease we record, filled for many years the office of Clerk to the Privy Council. The late Sir George was born 23rd July, 1783, and was called to the Bar by the Hon. Society of Lincoln's-inn in 1813, and sat in Parliament for Stafford from 1820 to 1826. He married, 30th August, 1804, Hannah Maria, eldest daughter and co-heir of the late John Sparrow, Esq., of Ballston Hall, co. Stafford, by whom he had issue two sons and three daughters. The elder of the former, now Sir George Chetwynd, third Baronet, was born 6th Sept., 1809, and married, 2nd August, 1843, Lady Charlotte Augusta Hill, eldest daughter of the late Marquis of Downshire. Of the daughters, the eldest, Maria Elizabeth, is wife of Henry Grimes, Esq., the younger, of Coton House, co. Warwick; the second, Charlotte, of Richard Ellison, Esq., of Benthamshall, co. Lincoln; and the third, Georgiana, of Sir John Hanmer, Bart., M.P.

THE COUNT DE VITTRÉ.

CHARLES DE RAITZ DE VILLENEUVE, Count de Vittré, the descendant of an old and noble Poitou family, was the companion of the Emperor Napoleon when at the Military School, and he fought gallantly under his colours in after-life. The Count took a glorious part in the capitulation of Russia, where he was severely wounded. In 1823, he appeared as lieutenant of the Garde de Sossiliu, and he had then under his orders General Chamgartier, the Duke de Orléon, and M. A. Carrel. Carrel, on that occasion, struck with the daring valour of Vittré, called him the Bayard of the nineteenth century.

General Count de Vittré died at Paris on the 9th ult.

M. Hugues de Coval, a well-known political writer, is M. de Vittré's nephew.

LADY HENRIETTA FERGUSSON.

LADY HENRIETTA FERGUSSON, widow of Sir James Fergusson, Bart., of Kilkerran, was a daughter of Admiral Duncan, created Viscount Duncan for the victory of Camperdown. Her mother, Lady Duncan, was Henrietta, daughter of Sir Right Hon. Robert Dundas, of Arniston, President of the Court of Session, and niece of Henry Dundas, first Viscount Melville.

Lady Fergusson, who was the second wife of Sir James Fergusson, has left a numerous family. Her only surviving brother is the present Earl of Camperdown; her sisters are Lady Stair, Lady Mary Dundas, of Dundas, and Lady Laura Dalrymple. Lady Fergusson died recently, at Oxenford Castle, North Britain.

MISS JANE PORTER.

THIS justly celebrated authoress died on the 24th ult., at Bristol. She was in her 75th year, and retained her faculties unimpaired to the last. In our Journal of next week we shall engrave a portrait of Miss Porter, to be accompanied by an interesting memoir of her literary life.

ST. JOHN'S ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH, ISLINGTON.—The grand ceremony of pontifical vespers was celebrated in this church on last (Trinity) Sunday, by the Right Rev. Dr. Wiseman, in full canonicals, and consecrated the church at half-past seven, and was conducted in procession to the high altar, and immediately vespers began. His Lordship delivered an eloquent sermon, comprising an elaborate exposition of the Catholic doctrine of the Trinity.

TESTIMONIAL TO WILLIAM PAYNE, ESQ., CORONER FOR THE CITY OF LONDON.—On Monday, this superb tribute was presented to Mr. Payne, in acknowledgment of his important services as a meritorious civic officer, especially in reviving the ancient public investigation into the origin of fires. The testimonial consists of a large and superb oval badge, bearing Mr. Payne's arms, set with brilliants, in a cross jewel, suspended by a gold chain; it has been ably executed by Mr. Walton, Ludgate-hill, and is of about 200 guineas value.

GENERAL POST-OFFICE.—The office at Spital, in Lincolnshire, will be closed for money order business on and after the 1st inst. (this day). Any money order issued upon that office, but not paid previous to the 1st June, must be transmitted to this department, with a request for transfer of payment to some other office.

A vessel just arrived in the Thames from New York has brought several boxes of pine-apples, of American produce.

THE COLDSTREAM GUARDS.

GRAND BANQUET IN ST. JAMES'S PALACE.

A MAGNIFICENT entertainment was given on the evening of Wednesday, the 22nd ult., in the Royal Banqueting-Room of St. James's Palace, by the officers of the Coldstream Guards, to celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of the enrolment of that distinguished corps by the gallant and celebrated General Monck, afterwards Duke of Albemarle. Her Royal Highness the Prince Consort had interested himself to obtain the use of the Banqueting-Room in St James's Palace for the purpose; and her Majesty's gracious permission having been accorded, the necessary preparations had been in progress for some weeks past, under the direction of a committee, of whom Colonel Lord Frederick Paulet and Colonel Daniell were active members.

The invitations were necessarily limited to officers formerly belonging to the regiment and those still attached to the corps—these forming an aggregate number of nearly one hundred and fifty gentlemen. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, Colonel of the regiment, was, of course, present. His Grace the Commander-in-Chief, the Secretary-at-War, the Adjutant-General of the Forces, and a few other officers, were the only additional visitors. Of the officers of the regiment, it is scarcely necessary to add that every gentleman not incapacitated by illness attended.

It may be here mentioned that the Royal regiment of Coldstream Guards is the oldest corps in the service, with the exception of the 1st foot. The regiment owes its origin to the celebrated General Monck, whom it was raised in August 1650, five companies having been drafted, by the Protector's authority, from Hazlerigge's regiment, quartered at Newcastle, and five from Fenwick's, then garrisoned at Berwick. Thus formed, the regiment entered Scotland with the army under Cromwell, and did not return until General Monck, on the 1st of January, 1659-60, quitted his head-quarters at Coldstream to restore the Monarch under Charles II. From the place where these brave men setout, and where the plan had been matured, the regiment derives its distinctive appellation. Of the services of the Coldstream Guards, it is sufficient to say that few of her Majesty's regiments have more distinguished themselves in the art of war. The Coldstreamers served through the Peninsula, and at Waterloo their bravery was of the highest possible importance to the allied armies, the farm of Hougomont having been preserved chiefly by their gallantry, when under the command of Colonel (now Lieutenant-General) Sir James Macdonnell, an officer who had the gratification of participating in the festivities here described.

The guests assembled in the long gallery, from whence, on dinner being announced, they proceeded to the state banqueting-room, an apartment of great magnificence, and frequently used by the late King William IV., but only once since the death of that monarch, on the occasion of the marriage of her present royal Grandee Majesty. Two long tables were arranged on either side of the room with a cross table, together affording seats for 140 guests, and exhibiting a magnificent display of the choicest plate. The apartment was superbly illuminated, and when the guests were seated the effect was extremely grand. Behind the chair, supported on either side by the colours of the regiment, was a fine portrait of General Monck, purchased by the officers of the corps some years since, and bearing the following inscription:—"General George Monck, Duke of Albemarle, the first Colonel of the regiment of Coldstream Guards." Over the fireplace was a magnificent gold cup, presented to the officers of the regiment; and upon either side waved the tattered colours borne at Waterloo, which were presented to the corps only on Wednesday morning, by Lieutenant-General Sir Alexander Woodford, the colonel commanding at that period.

Colonel Chaplin, the commanding officer of the regiment, presided, and was supported on his right and left by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge and his Grace the Duke of Wellington. To the right of the Duke of Cambridge sat the Marquis of Huntley, the Earl of Strafforde, and the Right Hon. Fox Maule, M.P. To the left of the Duke of Wellington we remarked the Marquis of Westmeath, Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, and Sir James Macdonnell, K C B.

The banquet was furnished under the exclusive superintendence of Messrs. Grater, of Berkeley-square.

During dinner, the fine band of the regiment, under the direction of Mr. Godfrey, played several favourite pieces, including the Double March composed by her Royal Highness the Princess Mary of Cambridge. The programme also included that of "British Guards" (Gouy) and associate grand march "Reminiscences of Waterloo" (patronage publication), by J. Fraser Bartlett.

The gallant Chairman gave "The health of her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, by whose kindness they had been allowed to celebrate the present festival in a Royal palace. (Cheers.)

The toast was responded to with the utmost enthusiasm, the band playing a few bars of the National Anthem.

The gallant Chairman next gave "The health of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the other members of the Royal Family."

This toast was enthusiastically responded to, the band playing the Coburg March.

The gallant chairman, in proposing the next toast, gave a brief history of the Coldstream Guards, and observed that, since 1660, he believed the regiment had had no Colonel so long as their present illustrious colonel. (Cheers.) His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge had been connected with the regiment for nearly half a century, and, as one of the eldest officers in the corps, he could himself bear witness to the many advantages for which it was indebted to his Royal Highness. (Hear, hear.) His Royal Highness had always been anxious to promote the best interests of the regiment, and he begged to propose "The health of their illustrious Colonel with three times three, and the expression of a fervent hope that many years of health and happiness might be spared to him to command the Coldstream Guards. (Cheers.)

The toast was rapturously received, the band playing the "Coldstream March."

His Royal Highness, in responding, expressed the extreme gratitude he felt both for the kind manner in which the toast had been received, and for the distinction in which the gallant chairman had introduced his name. He confessed the pride he felt in commanding so distinguished a regiment as the Coldstream Guards, and that pride was increased by the fact that the regiment had been formerly commanded by his beloved and affectionate brother, the late Duke of York, to whom he believed the corps owed great obligations for the efficient system he had introduced into its management. (Hear, hear.) He trusted the principles which had hitherto marked the regiment would be continued, and that it would in future prove, if necessary had done, multi accendere. In conclusion, his Royal Highness begged to be allowed to propose "The health of their illustrious Commander-in-Chief, his Grace the Duke of Wellington."

The toast was drunk with all the honours, his Royal Highness giving the cue in the heartiest manner.

The Duke of Wellington, in reply, said: My Lords and Gentlemen, I am greatly obliged by his Royal Highness for the honour he has done me in proposing to you to drink my health, and to you for the manner in which you have accepted the proposition of his Royal Highness. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, I may indeed say that I am proud of the honour you have done me in inviting me to attend your festival on this occasion. Gentlemen, long before I had the honour of holding a commission in the corps of Guards, I had every reason to respect that corps, on account of their display of every military quality as soldiers in every situation in which they could be placed. I have had the good fortune to see them in the presence of the enemy in situations of difficulty under every possible circumstance, and on every such occasion they have conducted themselves with distinction, and displayed every quality which could be expected from the best class of soldiers. (Cheers.) Among these the least distinguished have not been the Coldstream Guards. (Loud cheers.) I see many around me whose conduct I have had occasion to applaud under every variety of circumstance—in the field, in cantonments, and in quarters. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, I know, also, it is impossible to see troops, in any country, equal to the efficiency of those corps. Look at your everyday occurrences in foreign countries. In fact, gentlemen, shall it be said that in England the people are less courageous than in other countries? Is not an English mob as brave as that of any other country, whether Frenchmen or Germen? (Hear, hear.) Well, just look at the bands of men who, in this metropolis, and those troops who, in the great towns of England, have maintained peace and order under very difficult circumstances, and compare them with the enormous armed quarties of foreign countries. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, you have all seen what has passed, both here and elsewhere, and I need not enter upon it in this place. You are aware of the difficult position and trying circumstances which have occurred; but you must also have observed that, with the exception of the useless anarchy that never had a chance of success, other countries, after months of ragine and misfortune, have only been extricated from their difficulties after severe and fatal contests. (Hear.) Gentlemen, I want to know what is the reason of this, and therefore it is attributable to a great measure to the principle of bravery and good discipline which animates the corps of Guards, and which has its example and effect among all classes of the people. (Cheers.) Among this corps, I say again, the Coldstream have never been the least distinguished; and, reiterating my thanks for the compliment you have paid me, I will now sit down, and propose with all possible happiness. The noble Duke resumed his seat amid loud cheers from all parts of the room.

The Chairman next gave "The Sister Service—the Navy," which was duly responded to.

The Chairman, on again rising, proposed "The health of the right hon. the Secretary at War," praising the compliment with a few eulogistic remarks on the official conduct of the right hon. gentleman.

The Right Hon. Fox Maule, M.P., responded in an eloquent address.

Among the other toasts given were "The Adjutant-general of the Forces;" "The Grenadier Guards and Colonel Lascelles;" "The Fusileer Guards and Colonel Drummond;" "The Marquis of Huntley, the oldest Coldstreamer present;" "The right honourable Sir Henry Hardinge, Bart., the Chairman," by the Duke of Cambridge; "Sir Alexander Woodford and General Trevor," "Sir James Macdonnell and Sir Henry Bouverie," "Sir William Gomm," "The Cavalry Brigade," responded to by Lord George Manners, M.P.; "General Millman," "General Walton," "General Shawe," "Lord Frederick Fitzclarence," "The Adjutants of the Army and our Brother Comrades of the Line," by Col. the Hon. G. Upton; "General Bentzerson," by Colonel Dawkins; "Cox and Co., the agents of the regiment;" "The Old Coldstreamers," and "The Non-commissioned Officers of the Brigade," the latter by Colonel Daniel.

The party broke up about midnight, highly delighted with the festival.

ENTERTAINMENT AT THE PORTMAN-STREET BARRACKS.

The above event was also celebrated by a grand entertainment, given on Wednesday, the 22d ult., at the Portman-street Barracks, to the non-commissioned officers and privates of the regiment. The men, numbering 1400, assembled in St. James's Park at one o'clock, under the command of Colonel Bendick, and, after a brief parade, marched from thence to the barracks at Portman-street, where a substantial repast had been prepared for them.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, colonel of the corps, and all the officers, were in attendance; the illustrious and gallant Duke being accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and the Princess Mary.

The large yard occupying the centre of the barracks was completely covered in with canvas, in the form of an oriental marquée. The colours used by the corps at Waterloo occupied a prominent position at the entrance, and were tastefully entwined with laurel and ribbons. Other portions of the tent were emblazoned with the national emblems of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and with a variety of flags and banners.

The men having sat down, grace was said by Sergeant-Major Hurle, who presided. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge occupied a seat amongst the privates. The fare consisted of about 1400 lb. of beef, with a liberal supply of pudding and beer.

At the termination of the entertainment, Sergeant-Major Hurle, in a brief address, proposed the "Health of her Majesty the Queen," a toast which was drunk with enthusiasm.

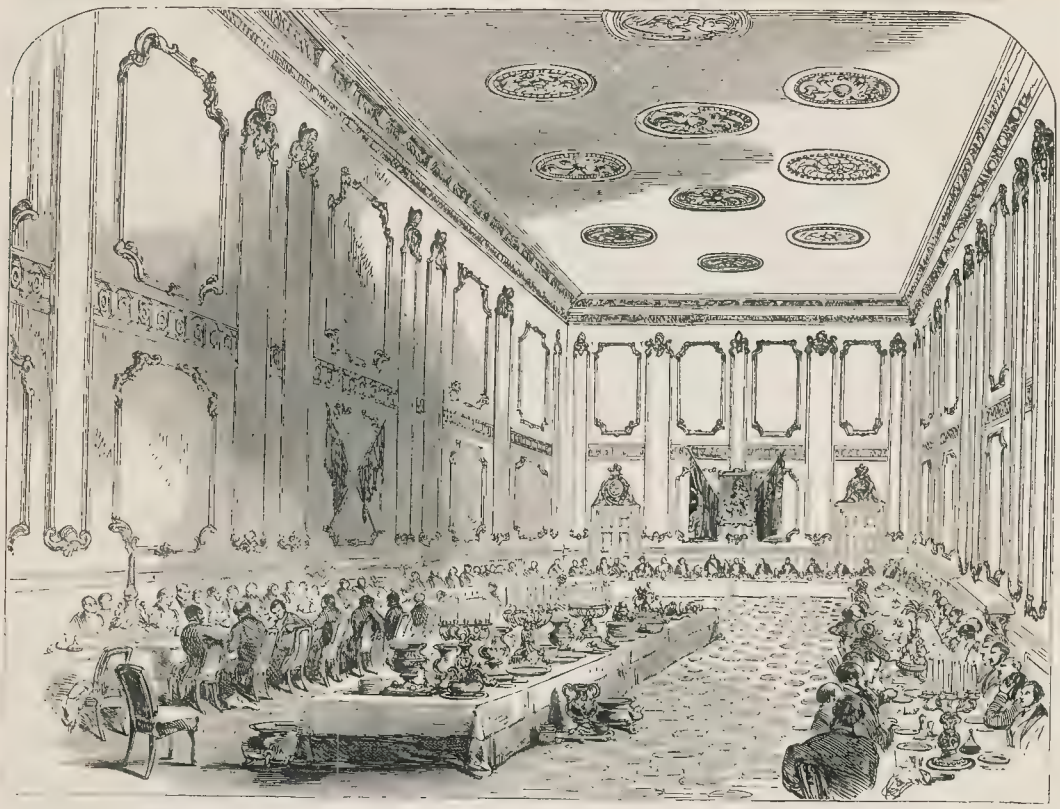
The Sergeant-Major then rose, and proposed "The health of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge and the officers of the Coldstream Guards." The Sergeant, in eloquent terms, enlarged upon the services of the Coldstreamers, and referred to the brief detail of their services from the time of General Monck downwards. He observed that, although there were no Waterloo veterans at present in the corps, he was sure the Coldstreamers of the present day were not inferior in point of martial spirit to their predecessors. He dwelt upon the many good qualities of the officers who at present formed the staff of the regiment, and instanced several cases in which the general welfare of the men had been promoted through their instrumentality. In regard to the mutual relations between officers, non-commissioned officers, and men more cordially exist than in the Coldstream Guards.

The toast was most heartily responded to.

His Royal Highness returned thanks in a very pleasing address, and concluded by observing, that, having been connected with the corps for upwards of forty-five years, he felt no small pride in denominating himself the father of the Coldstreamers.

The royal party retired shortly before four o'clock.

Later in the evening, the men were permitted to receive their friends, and dancing and other amusements were kept up for some hours.



GRAND BANQUET OF THE OFFICERS OF THE COLDSTREAM GUARDS, IN ST. JAMES'S PALACE.

ENTERTAINMENT TO THE NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS AND PRIVATES OF THE COLDSTREAM GUARDS AT THE PORTMAN-STREET BARRACKS.

STATE VISIT OF THE LORD MAYOR OF LONDON TO RYE.

ON Thursday week (the 23rd ult.), the Lord Mayor honoured the Mayor and Corporation of Rye with his company at a grand dinner at the George Hotel. The preparations for the civic visit were very gay. Flags were flying from the church, the magnificent ruins of Camber Castle, the tops of many of the houses, and from the whole of the shipping in the harbour and on the sand; this, together with the varied and delightful aspect of Romney Marsh teeming with flocks and herds, and an extended view of the line of railway from Ashford to Rye, now just completed, presented to the eye a very animated scene. All was holiday in the town of Rye; most of the shops were closed. Flags were flying from almost every house, while the sides of the doorways and windows were gaily decorated with green boughs, flowers, &c. Several triumphal arches were erected across the streets, bearing various devices. At Appledore was an arch, at which an address of congratulation was presented to his Lordship. The bells of the ancient church rang merry peals at intervals, and the population of Rye poured into the streets.

BELL OF THE CORPORATION OF RYE.

The Lord Mayor and suite, accompanied by Mr. M'Gregor, director of the South-Eastern Railway Company, arrived by special train from London at ten minutes before twelve o'clock, amidst the loud hurrahs of hundreds of well-dressed people. The day will be memorable in the borough annals, being marked not only by the state visit of the Lord Mayor, but by the opening of the line of railway from Ashford to Rye, which was, for this especial occasion, rendered available to the Lord Mayor and his friends We understand, however, the trains will not run for the conveyance of passengers for some time to come.

On alighting at the railway station, his Lordship, attended by several of the Dinner Committee, and a large number of the neighbouring gentry, farmers, principal tradesmen, &c., proceeded to Springfield Court, the seat of J. Smith, Esq., the Mayor of Rye, to luncheon.

About half-past two o'clock, the procession, in the following order, left the house of the Mayor:—

Two Councillors on Horseback Two Red Ensigns. The Band. A Silk Banner. Three Aldermen in a Carriage. Councillors in Carriages. Officers of the Borough. Borough Flag. Mace-Bearers. The Mayor and Town-Clerk in a Carriage. City Flag. The LORD MAYOR (in his State Carriage) and Household. Carriages with the Lord Mayor's Suite and Friends. Member for the Borough in a Carriage. Recorder, Clerk of the Peace, and Chaplain, in Carriages. Member for the County in a Carriage. Two Councillors on Horseback. Two Union Jacks. A large number of Carriages and Horses of Gentry. Four Fancy Flags. A Painted Boat on wheels, with Sailors.

On arriving in the town the procession passed up Landgate, which was magnificently decorated with flowers and evergreens, and in the evening illuminated with gas. On this ancient edifice was the motto, "Welcome to Rye." Thence it proceeded through the Tower, down the Long-street, by the Mint, to the Strand; then by Jarrett's-yard, up the Middle-street, and by the Custom-house; round the Churchyard, down East-street, and by the Long-street again, to the George Hotel. In the whole of this progress the streets were lined with spectators, as were the windows of every house past which the procession moved, and the cheers of the multitude everywhere greeted the progress of the honoured bearer of the ancient mace of "Faruombe."

About six o'clock the company sat down to a splendid banquet in the assembly-room of the George Hotel. The apartment was tastefully decorated, under the superintendence of Mr. F. Smith, of 23, Hanover-square; the gas fittings by Messrs. Verity, of King-street, Covent-garden. The dinner was provided by Messrs. Ring and Brymer, of Cornhill; the wines by Messrs. Sherer, Waugh, and Maryon, of London.

The Mayor of Rye, J. Smith, Esq., occupied the chair, supported on the right by the Lord Mayor of London, the Recorder of London, Mr. H. M. Curteis, M.P., and on the left by Mr. C. H. Frewen, M.P., the Mayor of Hastings (G. Scrivens, Esq., Mr. M'Gregor (Chairman of the South-Eastern Railway Company). Mr. E. A. Dawes (Town-clerk of Rye) occupied the Vice-chair.

His worship the Mayor, and Corporation of Rye, having drunk to their civic guest in the loving-cup, bidding him a hearty welcome, and the cloth being removed the customary loyal toasts were duly honoured. The Chairman, in an energetic speech, then proposed "The health of, and a hearty welcome to, the Lord Mayor of London." (Great cheering.)

The Lord Mayor, in returning thanks, stated that he came from the port of Hastings, in the county of Sussex. It was now more than 200 years since a Sussex man had filled the civic chair till the present year; he therefore felt great responsibility thrown upon his shoulders. He felt that the honour of the county of Sussex was, in a measure, dependent on the manner in which he acquitted his office of mayoralty. (Hear, hear.) The Lord Mayor then proposed "The Health of the Mayor of Rye," which was most cordially drunk. The Mayor returned thanks.

The Rev. Mr. Marshall (the Lord Mayor's Chaplain), in the absence of Mr. Alderman Humphery, then proposed "The Health of the Mayor of Hastings," which was drunk with cheers. The Mayor returned thanks

"The Corporation and Freemen of the City of London," "The health of Mr. Curteis, M.P. for Rye," were the next toasts, followed by "The health of the Recorder of the borough of Rye," proposed by Mr. Butler. The Recorder, Mr. W. Wakeford Attree, in returning thanks, after eulogising the conduct of the Lord Mayor, facetiously quoted the following lines, by Fletcher (Beaumont's colleague), who was a native of Rye:—

Labour, and diligently,
To keep your heart from Ease, and her base issues,
Pride and ambitious wantonness.
Rather lose all your limbs than the least honesty:
You are never maim'd, indeed, till loss of credit
Recumb you through.

Before the party broke up, several other toasts were drunk, including "the health of Mr. M'Gregor, the Chairman of the South-Eastern Railway Company, and the Directors," with special reference to the opening of the railway that day. Mr. M'Gregor, having thanked the company, added that he trusted that the whole of the works on that line would be completed before the autumn, when he should have the greatest pleasure in again meeting them to celebrate the auspicious event. (Cheers.)

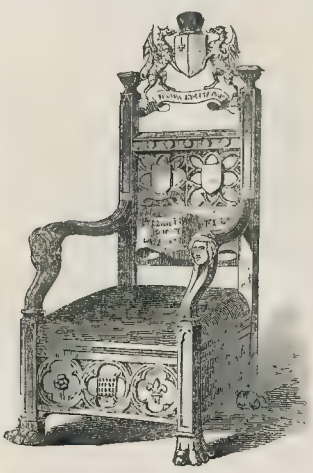
Messrs. Lockey, Young, Lawler, Westropp, and Bruton were the vocalists of the evening; and Mr. Harker officiated as toastmaster.

In the course of the day, a handsomely-carved chair, the work of an inhabitant of Rye, was presented to the Lord Mayor by the Corporation of Rye. The chair is carved from solid oak, and bears the arms of the City of London and Borough of Rye; underneath which is carved, in old English letters:—

Presented by the Corporation of Rye to Thomas Farncomb, Esq., Lord Mayor of London May 23, 1850.

THE PROCESSION AT THE OLD GATE, RYE.

We have engraved this interesting present; as also a curious old Bell, in the possession of the Corporation of Rye. It is 5½ inches high, and bears some grotesque figures and scroll-work. Upper inscription, "O Mater Dei, memento mei;" lower, "Petrus Ghelnevs me fecit, 1366."



CHAIR PRESENTED TO THE LORD MAYOR.

THE PROCESSION NEAR THE CHURCH, AT RYE.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT IN THE MANUFACTURE OF SUGAR.—Several samples of sugar having found their way into the Bristol markets which, from the superiority of their granular texture and colour, have caused considerable interest throughout the West India trade, the most authentic information has been sought on the subject, and the result shows that, by means of a now well known patent for drying by centrifugal force, and the aid of a few simple adjuncts, sugar, which took from three to five weeks to refine is now done in as many minutes. The whole process and the results are to be witnessed at the sugar-houses of Messrs. Finzel and Son, at Bristol. Moreover, sugars altogether unsaleable in our markets are converted in a few minutes into an article worth some 36 shillings per cwt. To the colonies this discovery must prove of the last importance, as the raw produce can by a machine not more than 4 feet by 6 inches be there cleared and sent home free from the present waste by leakage, &c. There are various patents involved in this one, and the several holders—Messrs. Soyrig, Hardman, Finzel, and Rotch—have, in thus uniting what have hitherto been conflicting claims, produced a result which may be classed in practical usefulness to our colonial and home interests next to that of the discovery of the vacuum pan.

"ONCE CAUGHT, TWICE SHY."—"Many years ago (says Mr. A. Smee) I caught a common mouse in a trap, and, instead of consigning it to the usual watery grave or to the unmerciful claws of the cat, I determined to keep it a prisoner. After a short time, the little mouse made its escape in a room attached to my father's residence in the Bank of England. I did not desire the presence of a wild mouse in this room, and therefore adopted means to secure him. The room was paved with stone, and enclosed with solid walls. There was no hope for him that he would ultimately escape, although there were abundant opportunities for hiding. I set the trap, and baited it with a savoury morsel, but day after day no mouse entered. The poor little thing gave unequivocal signs of extreme hunger, by gnawing the bladder from some of my chemical bottles. I gradually removed everything from the room that he could possibly eat, but still the old proverb of 'Once caught, twice shy,' so far applied, that he would not enter my trap. After many days, visiting the apartment one morning, the trap was down, the mouse was caught; the pangs of hunger were more intolerable than the terrors of imprisonment. He did not, however, will the unpleasant alternative of entering the trap until he was so nearly starved that his bones almost protruded through his skin; and he freely took bits of food from my fingers, through the wires of the cage."—Instinct and Reason, just published.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, June 2.—First Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 3.—Length of day 16h. 16m.
TUESDAY, 4.—King George III. born.
WEDNESDAY, 5.—King of Hanover born 1771. Slave Trade abolished, 1806.
THURSDAY, 6.—Carl Maria Von Weber died, 1826.
FRIDAY, 7.—Clock after Sun 1m. 34s.
SATURDAY, 8.—Astley's Theatre burnt, 1841.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 8, 1850.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.
6 35 / 6 55	7 20 / 7 40	8 10 / 8 35	9 5 / 9 30	10 5 / 10 30	Mid- / 11 5	No / 11 30
Sights						Tides / 0 20

LONDON and SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.—Suburban Residences.—Season Tickets, at Reduced Rates, for the Year or for shorter periods to One Month for the accommodation of suburban residents, the Directors have lately reduced the rate of SEASON TICKETS, especially for the longer distances, so that persons having daily occasions in London may now live at any of the beautiful spots on this railway within 40 miles of London, and be conveyed in a first-class carriage both ways, daily, at a weekly charge, varying with the distance, from 8s. to 18s. per week.

To give facilities to those whom circumstances compel to have their residences in London to move into the country during the summer months, Season Tickets are now issued at reduced rates for one month.

Waterloo	SCALE OF SEASON TICKETS. Yearly.	6 Months.	3 Months.	2 Months.	1 Month.
To or from	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Wandsworth	12 0 0	6 12 0	3 12 0	2 10 0
Clapham Common
Putney
Barnes	15 0 0	8 5 0	4 10 0	3 3 0
Chiswick
Mortlake
Kew	16 0 0	8 16 0	4 16 0	3 7 0
Wimbledon
Richmond
Brentford	18 0 0	9 18 0	5 8 0	3 15 0	2 3 0
Isleworth
Twickenham
Feltham
Ashford
Hounslow	20 0 0	11 0 0	6 0 0	4 4 0	2 8 0
Maiden
Surbiton
Hampton Court
Esher	22 0 0	12 2 0	6 12 0	4 13 0	2 12 0
Staines
Weybridge	24 0 0	13 4 0	7 4 0	5 0 0	2 16 0
Datchet
Windsor
Walton
Weybridge
Addlestone	25 0 0	13 13 0	7 10 0	5 5 0	3 0 0
Chertsey
Woking
Guildford
Godalming
Farnham	26 0 0	14 6 0	7 16 0	5 10 0	3 0 0
Ash

Second class tickets about 15 per cent. less than the above.

When two or more members of the same family subscribe at the same time, for the same period and to the same station, a deduction from the above rates will be made on the following scale:—

When two subscribe .. . 10 per cent. reduction.
" three .. .. 15 " "

Children under 14 years of age to be charged half-price.

Application for Season Tickets to be made in writing to the Treasurer, A. Morgan, Esq., York-road offices.

The places enumerated, it will be observed, include the most beautiful suburban neighbourhoods of London

York-road, May 1, 1850. By order, WYNDHAM HARDING, Secretary

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The money for the distressed Nankeens (acknowledged in our Journal of last week) will be remitted on Monday next, for distribution

R G, Lynn.—Nos. 1 and 2 of the impressions sent are from third brass coins of Constantine the Great, 306 to 337. No. 3, Nuremberg jetton. No. 4, Tarsus, Jun. third brass, A.D. 267 to 275. No. 5 Cons. authus II., third brass. A.D. 323 to 361. All the coins are very common

J. DAN, Foulcoan.—26s. and 6d each extra for Double Numbers

B. A. READE.—The arms of Fogerty or O'Fogerty, ancient, are "As. in chief two lions ramp regardant, each other, supporting a garb all or: in the dexter base a crescent, and in the sinister an Irish harp, both gold, strings arg." Of Fogerty, modern.—" Vert a fesse arg between three garbs or."

W W. The arms of Weatherston are "Or, a chev. or between three lion's paws erased, sable, and of the second. Crest: a lion's head erased ppr."

FRANCIS. We think the device might be construed into an heraldic bearing.

M B has a Portrait of Broughton, the pugilist, said to be painted by Hogarth, and will feel obliged if any of the numerous Corresp.ondents to the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS can give him any information on the subject

ZORA.—In either case can the seat be retained

C H BROWN, Bradford.—Mr. Wise's new work on Astrostion (noticed in our Journal of last week, may be had, by order, of Mr Chapman, 142, Strand

A P, Dublin, and A Q Q SUBSCRIBER, are thanked for the illustration shall appear

CHRISTOPHER.—Address Messrs Blackwoods', Edinburgh

ELIOT.—Sackvil-s-street, Piccadilly. No 180 fen is between the Unterdenlinden, Berlin, 174 feet

J D.—See the "Handbook of Swimming, (flou; ego and Co)

ENNIS, Oulton.—Inquire of Cottam and Hallen, 75, Oxford-street

D J The address of Mr Wiseman is 26, Gutheus-square

A D A The Royal or Victoria Tower of the New Houses of Parliament will rise to the immense height of 340 feet, or 64 feet taller than the tower of St Paul's Cathedral, the "London." second edit on.) See the tract just issued by the Great Exhibition Committee, for the req.ired conditions

DUN Ed nburgh has better buy Bohn's "Handbook of Games"

W. LEE OXENDEN.—No more than a fortnight

RESTICKS.—Apply to Reeve and Co., publishers, King William-street, Strand

RAKEFIRE.—The selling of a wife is a prodigate custom, which popular error has magnified into a law but is directly punishable by statute

J D, Dover.—Your question is a question of law, and must be referred to a solicitor

M W.—The Bankruptcy Court is abolished, and the duty now discharged by Mr Henry Russell Montague, Basinghall-street. Under the Act for the Advancement of Science, &c., published by MURRAY, Albemarle-street (see, also, "Year-Book of Facts," 1844 and 1847)

LAND SURVAYOR.—There must be some mistake in your question If we wish to obtain the distance of an accessible object, what do we want? Merely a base and cross staff, and, having measured off, we consequently know the distance—that is the number of chains' lengths and links that it is distant from us. There is no necessity to plot the distance—that is to lay the distance down on paper, or scale it, in order to know its extent. Time is quite for another purpose: either to find the position of a point, or the contents or area included between t o lines measured and others

VERAX.—We have not room for the correspondence, and will return the same if the requisite address be sent

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.—See Mr Christopher's recently published Account of Natal

J L [illegible] gland is separated from Scotland by the Tweed, upon the northern bank of which lies Berwick, belonging to England

M Z.—There are six French Protestant Churches and Chapels in London

LIQUITE is thanked, but we have not room for the lines

INQUIRER South.—Lord Brougham is a native of Edinburgh

A [illegible] ary Cavendish, and Duke of Newcastle (of the Cavendish family), died in 1691, when that title became extinct. His Grace married Frances Pierrepont, grandaughter of the Earl of Kingston, and had one son, Henry, Earl of Ogle, husband of Lady [illegible] Percy the great heiress of the Earls of Northumberland, [illegible] and had issue Algernon, Duke of Somerset, [illegible] Margaret married to [illegible] Bentinck, Duke of Portland, [illegible] Elizabeth, wife of Sandwich.

CLERICUS.—Any one may add a motto to his arms, if he has a right to arms, without any [illegible]

DON QUIXOTE.—[illegible] Lords Whitworth eminent as diplomatists The first was [illegible] Whitworth, Secretary, ambassador on the mission and importance of his embassy in the beginning of last century (and the second, that gentleman's grandson Charles Earl Whitworth, the well-known Ambassador to Napoleon Bonaparte. Is not enough, the first Peer died in 1725, and the last, exactly one hundred years after.

J G LOCKHART.—Blackwood's "Ayrshire Families" was published in London, by Highley, of Fleet-street, but we believe it is out of print. A copy may probably be obtained from a bookseller in Edinburgh

E F G—The arms of Haverville are "Sa. a low rampant between eight crosses crosslet arg. (Crest. An eagle's head erased between two wings or. Motto. Virtus vera nobilitas."

A WESLEY READER.—Mr Cummings, of Wardle-bridge, near Manchester, has a cross patonée or." Crest. A wolf's head erased or

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.—A Deputy-Lieutenant of the Tower Hamlets has a right to a cockade in his servants' hats

BOURDON.—A more extensive perusal of the Memoir would inform the inquirer that the PANTHEON is now a Church, and in good repair

A CONSTANT READER.—The dimensions are 900 square feet

A LOVER OF LITERATURE.—We regret that we have not space for our correspondent s article. It is possible last, at some future time, we may return to the subject

 Answers to Correspondents continued at page 395 of the Supplement, published gratis with the present Number.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

General Pepe's Narrative of Events in Italy.——Voices from the Woodlands. ——Popular history of Mammalia.
Music.—The Neapolitan Polka.——Spring! beautiful Spring!

With EACH NUMBER of
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS,
For this day, JUNE 1, 1850, is delivered
A SUPPLEMENT GRATIS!

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1850.

It is startling to find that the spirit of agrarian outrage and murder, which seems to have been allayed in the south of Ireland by famine, fever, and pestilence, as well as by discouragement, bankruptcy, and misery, should have revived in the more prosperous and more peaceful north. The murder of Mr. Mauleverer at Crossmaglen, county of Armagh, rivals in atrocity any murder ever committed in Tipperary. It seems to have originated in the same cause, namely, in consequence of evictions upon the estate of which the unfortunate gentleman was the agent. The country people, as in the south, sympathized with the assassins, and not with the victim, and instead of making any attempt to seize the murderers, struck the dead body with their spades, in token of their satisfaction that he was powerless to oppress them. The driver of the car from which he was dragged and assassinated positively denies all knowledge of the event! Two men have been arrested under circumstances not only of great suspicion, but of strong circumstantial evidence. The old leaven thus remains in Ireland. The cholera has not rooted it out; the immense emigration that has been carried on for the last four years, and which, together with famine and pestilence, have almost depopulated some districts, have not been able to reduce the competition for land to such a point as to make it safe for an agent or a landlord to evict his tenantry for non-payment of rent or for the improvement of his estate. The most unhappy feature in this case is the popular sympathy with the crime. Such sympathy is not natural. Men usually detest a murderer, and, under ordinary circumstances, the most depraved would lend his assistance to the arrest of a man with the blood of a fellow-creature reeking upon his hand. The social circumstances of a country must indeed be peculiar, and there must be some deeply-seated and hitherto unremedied wrong in existence, when the best instincts of our nature are either rendered powerless, or are perverted into evil. After all the blue-books and reports which have been published upon Ireland, after all the speeches, and pamphlets, and letters, with which the land has teemed for the last five-and-twenty years—all in reference to the same topics—we seem to know as little of the real social life of the great bulk of the Irish rural population as we do of the interior of China.

But a letter from the Coroner who investigated the circumstances attendant upon this murder throws a flood of light upon this particular case. The land from which the evictions were made by Mr. Mauleverer had no less than three landlords. Each of these three gentlemen—Messrs. Hamilton, Tipping, and Jones—collected his rent separately; "and, in doing so," says the Coroner, Resorted to the proceedings usual in such cases; and at the quarter sessions it has been customary for the agent and attorney of the Rev. Mr. Hamilton to obtain 60 or 80 decrees for his third of the rent, for the attorney of Mr. Jones a like number, and for the attorney of Mr. Tipping the same, for the one and the same year's rent. Thus the costs were multiplied three-fold. The holdings are generally small, and average from 6s. up. The cost of each decree was 6s. 11d.

How can an ignorant or a starving population understand or respect the laws under which they suffer such oppression? "Decrees having been obtained," adds the Coroner—

The struggle commenced between the three landlords on the one hand, the poor-rate collector and the collector of the county cess on the other. The result was, tenantry were dreadfully impoverished, the lands being all rack-rented, and being of a barren rocky character, as the name of the parish suffic ently indicates. Heretofore this property had, by reason of the divisions of the landlords, been very badly managed, inasmuch as that about two seasons back I remember a process being brought by Mr. Jones for thirteen half-years' rent!"

The unfortunate victim of this state of the law and of the desperation of the people, though kind and agreeable in his intercourse with his equals, "unhappily thought it necessary," says the Coroner, "to assume a different bearing with the tenants over whom he was appointed receiver. One incident will serve to illustrate this. At this season it was his custom to distribute tickets for leave to cut turf on the bogs on the estate, for which he charged 6d. each. About five minutes before he left Crossmaglen, and within twenty minutes before his death, he was asked by a poor widow woman, a tenant, for a bog ticket; she presented him a fourpenny bit, assuring him that was all the money she possessed. The owner of the hotel (Mr. M'Donnell) urged him to accept the fourpence, assuring him he knew she was poor—that if she had more, she would pay pay it. He imperiously refused, and dismissed the woman with a malediction." A few minutes after this incident the unhappy man was brutally murdered, and the labouring and rural population rejoiced in his death! This is a sad picture. The Coroner adds:—

It should be remembered, that, until a few years back, there has been no school or place of instruction in the parish—no local gentry no resident landlord—no sympathy between agent and tenant. It may be said, the case is exiencuate, if not to justify, assassination. I state the fact because it was mentioned to me by more than one trustworthy person; and I believe it is necessary that the social state of this country be known before an adequate remedy can be applied.

We quite agree with the Coroner. No remedy can be applied until the full extent of the social misery and degradation be made known. Murders such as these cannot be wholly the fault of the peasantry.

THE last arrivals from the United States affirm positively that the long-talked-of expedition against Cuba has sailed for that island, with the intention of provoking and aiding an insurrection of the inhabitants against the power of Spain. No precise statements of the force of the expedition have yet reached this country. The lowest estimates give the number of men—or robbers—engaged in it at 4000, and the highest at 13,000. Spain, it appears, being forewarned, is forearmed, and a large naval force has arrived at Havannah. The success or failure of this daring attempt will, of course, depend upon the amount of assistance which the buccaneers may derive from the Cubans themselves. But, supposing it to be successful, we cannot see in what manner it will serve the interest of the Government of the United States to shut its eyes against so unjustifiable an aggression upon a power with whom it is at peace. General Taylor has expressed his disapprobation, but only by words. If the facts be as stated, it will be his duty, as guardian of the honour of the country over which he is the temporary ruler, to express that dissatisfaction by his deeds, and to bring to punishment the ringleaders and chiefs of the expedition. But if the morality of the present Government of the United States be so loose as to encourage it to take advantage of a wrong committed by its subjects—if it really desire the possession of Cuba, as a slave state, which it may throw into the scale against the admission of free California, in order to preserve the balance of the Union, it will only entangle itself in new difficulties. Among nations, as well as among men, "honesty is the best policy." Cuba is the brightest jewel in the crown of Spain, and Spain will not and cannot give it up without a struggle. Spain, it is true, is weak and distracted; she has mismanaged her resources; she has sunk her credit to the lowest obb; and has just committed an act of unblushing dishonesty towards her unlucky creditors in England; she has long been declining, and is so crippled in every way—bankrupt in honour as in means—that she could not wage a successful warfare against such a power as the United States in defence of her rights. Yet the Government of the United States will have to remember, if it make itself a party to the unparalleled invasion which has been commenced by this gang of adventurers, that Cuba cannot be wrested from Spain without the consent of Great Britain. That large and beautiful island is in pawn, and is the only tangible security on which the creditors of Spain in this country have any lien. The United States have long had a hankering to possess Cuba; and, indeed, their go-ahead politicians make no secret of their desire to possess the whole of the West India islands, as make-weights in the slavery interest, against the extension of free states in the regions bordering on the Pacific. Overtures have been made to Spain, with this view, for the purchase of Cuba; and, supp.sing that out of the purchase-money Spain paid her debts to this country, there would be no valid objection to the arrangement on the part of Great Britain.

But the fact is, that the United States, rich as they are, cannot pay any such sum for Cuba as it is worth. In Mr. Robert Baird's valuable "Impressions and Experiences of the West Indies and North America in 1849," just published, we find some statistics of the present state of Cuba, which show how difficult it would be for the United States to become its purchaser on equitable terms. Cuba contains a superficies of 37,000 square miles: its population is 1,400,000, consisting of 610,000 whites, 190,000 free people of colour, and 600,000 slaves. Each of these slaves is worth from 300 to 350 dollars; making the value of the whole slave population nearly £40,000,000 sterling. The exports from Cuba in the year 1848 amounted to 28,000,000 dollars, and its imports to upwards of 32,000,000 dollars. The number of ships that arrived at the Havannah and other Cuban ports in the same year was 3740; and of departures, 3310. There are nearly 200 miles of railway finished in the island, and fifty more are in course of construction. The island is very fertile, and yields largely at present, under a defective system of culture. Three-fifths of the surface are uncultivated, and many of those parts which are incapable of growing the sugar-cane or the cotton-plant are covered with forests of mahogany, cedar, and other valuable woods. Cuba also contains copper-mines, many of which are at present in profitable working. The United States would find it easier to take than to purchase Cuba—at least for the present. It remains to be seen whether it will sanction the wrong attempted by its subjects, and whether cupidity is stronger than the sense of justice and international right on the other side of the Atlantic. It also remains for the British Government to declare its opinions upon the subject.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT OSBORNE.

Her Majesty the Queen, and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, with the youthful members of the Royal Family, continue at Osborne, in the enjoyment of excellent health.

The past week has been one of complete retirement with the Court, the Royal movements having been exclusively confined to the beautiful park and grounds on which her Majesty's marine residence is situated.

The Duchess of Kent and the Prince of Leiningen left Osborne on Saturday last, and returned to town.

The following notices have appeared in the London Gazette:—

Lord Chamberlain's Office, May 27.

Notice is hereby given, that her Majesty will hold drawingrooms at St. James's Palace, on the following days, at two o'clock:—

Thursday, 20th June next. Tuesday, 9th July next.

N.B. The knights of the several orders are to appear in their collars at the drawingroom on the 20th of June next, it being a collar day.

Lord Chamberlain's Office, May 27.

Notice is hereby given that her Majesty will hold a levee at St. James's Palace, on Wednesday, the 3rd of July next, at two o'clock.

FASHIONABLE ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Earl and Countess of Jersey entertained the Marquis of Granby, the Marquis and Marchioness of Ely, the Earl and Countess of Strathmore, the Earl of Belfast, the Countess of Tankerville, the Countess Poulett, Lord Brougham, Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, Lady Malet, the Hon. F. Craven, and a distinguished party, at dinner, on Saturday evening, at the family mansion in Berkeley-square. The Countess subsequently received a select circle of fashionable company.

Lady Cecilia des Vœux gave a concert on Monday evening, in Belgrave-square, at which Madame Grisi, Signor Mario, and Signor Labiache exhibited.

Mrs. Malcolm (of Poltalloch) gave a very brilliant ball on Tuesday evening, at the family mansion, in Great Stanhope-street. The réunion (given in compliment to society the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm) was honoured with the presence of upwards of 600 leading members of the aristocracy.

MARRIAGE OF GENERAL CABRERA.—This distinguished military commander was married on Wednesday to Miss Marianne Catherine Richards, only child and heiress of the late Robert Vaughan Richards, Esq. The ceremony was first performed at the Roman Catholic Chapel in Spanish-place, Manchester-square, at ten o'clock in the morning, by the Rev Pierre Mailey; and subsequently at St. George's, Hanover-square, by the Rev. Temple Frere, Canon of Westminster. The fair bride was attended to the altar by a bevy of young ladies, and given away by her uncle, Mr. William P. Richards. At the Catholic chapel, after the ceremony, the bride received the gift of an elegant déjeuner at the residence of the Misses Richards, in Eaton-square, after which the newly-wedded pair left town for Tonbridge Wells. The bride, it is said, has a fortune of £25,000 a year.

THE CALEDONIAN BALL.—The ladies patronesses of this grand annual festival met on Monday, at Willis's Rooms, for the purpose of completing the arrangements for this year's ball, which is definitively fixed to take place on Friday, the 21st of June. The Duchess of Roxburgh, the Marchioness of Aisleburry, the Countess of Kinnoull, the Countess of Morton, the Countess of Rosebery, Lady Willoughby de Eresby, Lady Anne Mackenzie, Lady Lovat, Lady Augustus Gordon (Lady Hamilton), and the Hon. Mrs. Maclaine were among the ladies patronesses present. After the transaction of the usual routine business, it was announced that her Majesty the Queen had in the kindest manner graciously consented to patronise the ball, and that the applications already made for vouchers were unusually numerous, leading to a presumption that the forthcoming festival would prove one of the most attractive fêtes of the season. The Marchioness of Aisleburry, the Duchess of Roxburgh, and other ladies are arranging sets of "fancy quadrilles," and Lady Anne Mackenzie is forming a set of "reels."

His Royal Highness Prince George has arrived in town from Ireland.

The Earl Grey gave a dinner to the Cabinet Ministers on Wednesday evening, at his residence in Carlton-terrace.

The Earl of Minto has arrived in town from Scotland.

The Viscount and Viscountess Combermere will give a grand entertainment to their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, on Wednesday, the 19th instant.

Lady Howard de Walden and the Hon. Miss Ellis have arrived in London, from the British Legation at Brussels.

The Lord Mayor visited the Eastern Docks and India House on Thursday, and partook of a handsome dejeuner with the Court of Directors

The Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress gave a grand entertainment on Thursday evening to Lord Gough. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, and a very numerous circle of the nobility were present.

ELECTRO-MAGNETISM, AS A MOTIVE POWER.—At the weekly meeting of the Society of Arts, on the 22d ult., an important and interesting paper was read by Mr. Robert Hunt, on the employment of electro-magnetism as a motive power. The author has for a long time been engaged in experimental researches upon this subject, and has found that the first step which is to be regulated, for the purpose of setting the entire question on a satisfactory basis, and its conclusion is that magnetic force or power is always in exact ratio to the amount of matter (zinc, iron, or otherwise) consumed in the battery, no matter what its form may be, and that the greatest amount of power is produced when the chemical action is the most rapid. One horse power is generated, under the most favourable circumstances, at the cost of 45 pounds of zinc in a Grove's battery. The following were regarded as the most satisfactory results yet obtained:—1. The force of voltaic current being equal to 678, the number of grains of zinc destroyed per hour was 151, which raised 9000 pounds one foot high in that time. 2. The force of current being, relatively, 1300, the zinc destroyed in an hour was 291 grains, which raised 10,040 pounds through the space of one foot. 3. The force being 1000, the zinc consumed was 223 grains; the weight lifted one foot 12,672 pounds. The estimates made by Messrs. Scoresby and Joule, and the results obtained by Œrsted, and more recently by Mr. Hunt, very nearly agree; and it was stated that one grain of coal consumed in the furnace of a Cornish engine lifted 144 pounds one foot high, whereas one grain of zinc consumed in the battery lifted only 80 pounds. The cost of one hundred weight of coal is under 9d., the cost of one hundred weight of zinc is above 21ed. Therefore, under the most perfect conditions, magnetic power must be nearly twenty-five times more expensive than steam power. From an examination of all the results, Mr. Hunt is disposed to regard electro-magnetic power as impracticable, on account of its cost, which must necessarily be, he conceives, under the best conditions, fifty times more expensive than steam power.

AN EXTRAORDINARY EEL.—The largest fish of the eel species ever known to have been exhibited in the London markets was shown on the premises of Mr. Grove, of Charing-cross, last week; it was a fresh-water silver eel, and was caught in the Otter's Pool, a portion of the river Colne that runs close to Munden, near Watford, in Hertfordshire. The length of this surprising fish was three feet six inches, and it was thick in proportion. Its weight reached nearly nine pounds.

RAILWAY EXCURSIONS.—During the last week the London and North-Western took 13,000 holiday excursionists between Liverpool and Manchester at reduced fares, and 1300 from Manchester to London. The pleasure traffic on the lines in and out of Birmingham was unprecedented, being nearly 100,000 persons. On Whit Monday and Tuesday the Midland Railway took 50,000 persons over their lines.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

ROYAL ASSENT.

The House sat shortly before four o'clock, for the purpose of giving the Royal Assent to the following bills:—Alterations in Pleadings, West India Appeals, Defects in Leases Act Amendment, Process and Practice (Ireland), Kew and Petersham Vicarage, Londonderry and Coleraine Railway, Londonderry and Enniskillen Railway, Walsall Improvement and Market Act (1848) Amendments

The Lords Commissioners were Lord Langdale, the Earl of Carlisle, and Earl Minto.

The House then adjourned during pleasure.

Their Lordships re-assembled at five o'clock.

DISTRESS FOR RENT (IRELAND) BILL.

The Earl of LEITRIM moved the second reading of this bill. The object of the bill was to re-enact a clause which had been repealed by the bill of 1846, a bill which had passed in the month of August, when the greater number of the noble Lords connected with Ireland were absent from the House. The law which was repealed authorised the landlord to distrain growing crops, and he was convinced that power had never been abused. The fact of the existence of that law was sufficient to secure the payment of the rent of the landlord, and its repeal was uncalled for.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE had no objection to agree to the second reading of the Bill, for the purpose of considering in committee whether it would not be possible to devise a remedy for that which he admitted was an evil.

The bill was read a second time.

SUNDAY TRADING PREVENTION BILL.

The House, after some discussion, having gone into Committee on this bill, the several clauses were agreed to, and the bill was ordered to be reported.

AUSTRALIAN COLONIES BILL.

This bill was read a second time, and ordered to be committed.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

CHURCH BUILDING ACT.

Mr. ADDERLEY inquired whether it was the intention of the Government to introduce any Bill for the amendment of the Church Building Act?

Sir G. GREY replied that a draft of a bill on the subject was in preparation, founded on the report of the Commission, and he hoped shortly to lay it before the House.

THE CENSUS

In reply to Mr. Newdegate, Sir G. GREY said it was the intention of Government to introduce a bill this session for the purpose of taking a census of the population, but he was unable to state at what period.

SLAVE-GROWN SUGAR.

Sir E. BEXTON, after presenting numerous petitions from Glasgow, the Island of Grenada, St. Vincent, Belfast, Southampton, and other places, proceeded to move—"That it is unjust and impolitic to expose the free-grown sugar of the British colonies and possessions abroad to unrestricted competition with the sugar of foreign slave-trading countries." The hon. gentleman at considerable length advocated the motion on the high ground of moral principle rather than as a question of trade, dwelling upon the horrors and miseries of slavery, and the wickedness and guilt of those who abetted, aided, or encouraged its nefarious existence

A lengthened discussion ensued, in which the motion was opposed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Lord Palmerston, Mr Wilson, Mr. Hutt, &c.; and supported by Mr. Stanley, Mr Packington, Mr. Gladstone, &c.; and on a division it was negatived by a majority of 275 to 234.

The House adjourned a few minutes before two o'clock.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CONVERTS.—We find in the Catholic Magazine, published yesterday (Friday), the following paragraph:—"We understand that the Rev. W. Dodsworth, Perpetual Curate of Christchurch, St. Pancras, has resigned his incumbency, with the intention of joining the Catholic Church." The Standard of this evening says—"It is very positively stated by the friends of the parties, that Mr. H. W. Wilberforce, the brother of the Bishop of Oxford, and Mr. Allies, late Chaplain to the Bishop of London, have come to a similar determination."

THUNDER-STORM.—A very heavy thunder-storm, attended with continuous and appalling flashes of lightning, passed over the city of Bristol on Thursday afternoon, from a little before two p.m. to four p.m. It was accompanied by heavy showers of rain and a large fall of hail

FIRE AT THE GREAT WESTERN COTTON WORKS, BRISTOL.—On Thursday morning, at about two o'clock, a serious conflagration broke out at these works, and, notwithstanding that the alarm was promptly given, and the utmost exertions used, it could not be got under till the extensive reeling and warping sheds, with all their costly machinery, had been burnt to cinders. The fire will have the effect of temporarily throwing out of employment the whole of the hands, 2000 in number, out of employ. The origin of the fire is involved in the deepest mystery. The damage cannot be less than £5000.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE

Our accounts of yesterday (Friday) from Paris state that the Electoral Bill in the Assembly is moving forward steadily to its final stage. The ensemble of Art. 3 was carried on Wednesday evening by a majority of 232. Articles 4, 5, 6 and 7, were adopted on Thursday without amendment. The debate on Wednesday was stormy; but on the 3rd Count Molé and M. Dupont (de l'Eure) voted in the same evening. The combatants fought with pistol-, and having exchanged shots, without personal injury to either, their wounded honour was declared satisfied, and the affair terminated. It may be noticed as a singular fact, that M. Bouvet is a member of the Peace Society, and one of its most zealous and enthusiastic supporters.

The report which prevailed in Paris in the early part of the week, of the recal of the Russian Ambassador from London, was believed to be destitute of foundation.

Lord Normanby was expected to be at the President of the Republic's reception last evening, from which it was inferred that the differences between France and England had been satisfactorily arranged.

M. Isturiz, the Ambassador from Spain to England, had arrived in Paris, en route to his official destination.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

CHURCH EXTENSION.—The annual meeting of the Incorporated Society for Promoting the Enlargement, Building, and Repairing of Churches and Chapels was held at their rooms, 79, Pall mall, on Tuesday; his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury in the chair. The report stated that the number of grants of money made by the society during the past year was 111, being 17 more than those voted in the year preceding, and 7 more than were made in 1848. The objects in aid of which these grants were voted were the erection of 30 new churches and chapels; the rebuilding of 12, and the enlargement or re-arrangement of the interior of 66 existing churches and chapels. The total amount of money granted was £19 023, being £2115 more than in the former year. The number of additional seats to be obtained was 29 962, being 1964 more than in the last year, 27,309 of which were to be free for the use of the poor, showing also an increase upon the last year of 1653. More than 20 free seats, and exceeding also the year 1848 by 1248 free seats. The committee had to report the completion of works at one hundred places, certificates of which had been received during the year, and payment made of the grants voted in each case, amounting in the whole to £5,119. The works included forty new churches, [illegible] and [illegible] for [illegible] and [illegible] made [illegible] of the [illegible] grants remaining unpaid is £42 750, leaving a disposable balance of £18,228 18s. 10d, exclusive of some unpaid donations. This amount, with the society's ordinary receipts, consisting of donations, subscriptions, remittances from local societies, and legacies which were calculated by the honorary committee last November at £7000 per annum, constitutes the society's resources, to answer the demands made upon it for a period of nearly two years

NATIONAL SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE EDUCATION OF THE POOR.—On Wednesday the annual meeting of this society was held at the Central School-Rooms, Sanctuary, Westminster, and was attended by a large number of the nobility, members of the House of Commons, and other influential personages. His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury presided. The report stated that during the past year they had been enabled to grant out of the Queen's Letter Fund towards the building and enlarging of schools, and the erection of teachers' residences the sum voted towards these objects amounted to £3881. Out of the same fund the following had been voted during the past year:—To the building of training institutions at Oxford, £500; at Chelsea, £240; at Norwich, £250; at Gloucester and Bristol, 375; and Rochester, £300; and towards enlarging Salisbury Female Training Institution, £300. From this fund also the treasurer had been authorised to pay £4874 towards schools of which the usual certificate had been received. Accommodation had thereby been provided for 15,853 scholars, and residences for 80 teachers had been erected Since the last annual report, her Majesty had loaned the usual Royal letter authorising collections in every parish throughout England and Wales, in behalf of the society. The special fund for the manufacturing and mining districts, commenced in 1843, being now wholly appropriated, the committee had no other resource than the proceeds of the Queen's letter, towards meeting many applications for aid to schoo.-building from several poor parishes and districts which were at the present time destitute of any accommodation for ed ucational purposes [illegible] had been made towards the building or maintenance of element the special fun ; but there had been voted towards the pro ose tutions, as fol.ws: At Oxford, £500; Gloucester and Bristol [illegible] wich, £300; Rochester, £300; and £200 towards the enlargement of the Warrington training institution. Outstanding grants from this source to the amount of £3940 had been paid, by which 82 schools, which afforded accommodation to 11,053 scholars, had been built or enlarged, and 33 teachers' residences had been completed. Schools in 223 places were received into union with the society. From the general fund there had been granted £2100 to St. Mark's College, and £1500 to Whitelands. The residue of this fund, which there was increase, had been appropriated to the support of the two Westminster training institutions. The state of the society's depository was very flourishing, the receipts for the past year being £7358 17s 4d , being an increase, accompared with those of the preceding year, of £1000. The report, in conclusion, called for the earnest attention of the friends of education to contrive, according to uniform practice, to apply a portion of the funds towards building schools, whether assisted by the Committee of Council or not. Resolutions in support of the objects of the society were passed at a long and animated discussion.

METROPOLITAN ASSOCIATION FOR IMPROVING THE DWELLINGS OF THE INDUSTRIOUS CLASSES.—The annual meeting of this association was held at Willis's Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on Monday; Sir Ralph Howard, Bart., M.P., in the chair, supported by Lord Ernest Bruce, M.P., Lord Radstock, Viscount Ebrington, M.P., Lord Robert Grosvenor, M.P., Mr. R. A. Slaney, M.P. —The Secretary (Mr. Gaskiffe) read the report of the directors, which states that "The directors have pleasure in being able to state that a great increase has taken place in the number of the proprietors, and, consequently, in the amount of the capital of the association. The directors believe that this increase is mainly to be attributed to a conviction in the public mind, which all the best statistical reports have served to strengthen, that the amount of comfort and convenience provided in the dwellings of the working-classes has a direct and powerful effect upon their health; and, as in the train of good health follow the desire and capacity of attaining a higher social position, that every individual who finds himself surrounded by improved external circumstances will not only use his best endeavours to maintain this position, but will also attain a higher tone of moral feeling, and, in consequence, become a better member of society, and more attached to the system on which the freedom of this nation is constituted and secured. The capital of the association on the 25th March, 1849, was £38,176; and on the 25th March, 1850, £39,295. An increase of £112 3s. has taken place in the amount of receipts from the Pancras-road investment. These receipts will be further increased to the extent of £93 15s., as the directors assembled to carry out the plan they have found it necessary to adopt of equalising the rents of the different sets of rooms in this building. The experience which has been obtained during the occupancy of this building has proved to your directors that, so far from the dwellings on the third and fourth floors being, as they originally thought, the most difficult to let, a number of steps by which they had to be approached, they are in fact equally, if not more, valuable. The directors, however, feel that they cannot at present carry out this equalisation of rents to its entire extent, as there are many cases where the tenancy commenced prior to the date on which it was resolved to adopt this measure. Fifty-four changes only have taken place within the twelve months; and there are but three sets of rooms vacant. The total sum of £2936 16s. 1d. accrued due on account of rents since the opening of these buildings, £2912 4s. 4d. has been collected, leaving £14 11s. 9d. at the present in arrear and unpaid, only 9s. 4d. of which is to be considered as irrecoverable. The population as present amounts to 555, of which 335 are children, and 329 adults. This may be taken as the average population during the year. The number of deaths which have taken place out of this population is but one, a proportion of this limited number of deaths which, while fever and cholera have been devastating whole districts of the metropolis, not one of either of those diseases has occurred in these buildings, and that only two deaths have taken place from diarrhœa, whereas in Church-lane, Saint Giles's, among a population of about 1100 (that number being nearly double the population of these buildings), twenty-nine deaths from cholera took place within the space of five weeks, viz. in the months of August and September last." The report was adopted

MASONS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.—On Tuesday evening a public meeting of masons and others connected with the trade was held at Exeter-hall for the purpose of taking into consideration the present position of this institution, and for disseminating the principles on which it is conducted among the parties chiefly interested in its success. Mr. W. Tite, F.R.S., occupied the chair. A report from the committee of management since the last annual meeting was read, which, after briefly alluding to the difficulties encountered in the formation of the society, stated, that, as their funded property now amounted to the sum of £300, sufficient to realise an annuity of £15 per annum, and accordingly it was proposed to have an election of pensioners in July next. The number of subscribers was 140, which was insignificant in proportion to the number of working masons in the metropolis, though the amount of this investment amounts to 555, of which 335 are children, and 329 adults. This may be taken as the average population during the year. The number of deaths which have taken place out of this population is but one, a proportion of this limited number of deaths which, while fever and cholera have been devastating whole districts of the metropolis, not one of either of those diseases has occurred in these buildings, and that only two deaths have taken place from diarrhœa, whereas in Church-lane, Saint Giles's, among a population of about 1100 (that number being nearly double the population of these buildings), twenty-nine deaths from cholera took place within the space of five weeks, viz. in the months of August and September last." The report was adopted

MASONS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.—On Tuesday evening a public meeting of masons and others connected with the trade was held at Exeter-hall for the purpose of taking into consideration the present position of this institution, and for disseminating the principles on which it is conducted among the parties chiefly interested in its success. Mr. W. Tite, F.R.S., occupied the chair. A report from the committee of management since the last annual meeting was read, which, after briefly alluding to the difficulties encountered in the formation of the society, stated, that, as their funded property now amounted to the sum of £300, sufficient to realise an annuity of £15 per annum, and accordingly it was proposed to have an election of pensioners in July next. The number of subscribers was 140, which was insignificant in proportion to the number of working masons in the metropolis, though the amount of this investment amounted to £555, of which £335 are children, and 329 adults. This may be taken as the average population during the year. The number of deaths which have taken place out of this population is but one, a proportion of this limited number of deaths which, while fever and cholera have been devastating whole districts of the metropolis, not one of either of those diseases has occurred in these buildings, and that only two deaths have taken place from diarrhœa, whereas in Church-lane, Saint Giles's, among a population of about 1100 (that number being nearly double the population of these buildings), twenty-nine deaths from cholera took place within the space of five weeks, viz. in the months of August and September last." The report was adopted

MASONS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.—On Tuesday evening a public meeting of masons and others connected with the trade was held at Exeter-hall for the purpose of taking into consideration the present position of this institution, and for disseminating the principles on which it is conducted among the parties chiefly interested in its success. Mr. W. Tite, F.R.S., occupied the chair. A report from the committee of management since the last annual meeting was read, which, after briefly alluding to the difficulties encountered in the formation of the society, stated, that, as their funded property now amounted to the sum of £300, sufficient to realise an annuity of £15 per annum, and accordingly it was proposed to have an election of pensioners in July next. The number of subscribers was 140, which was insignificant in proportion to the number of working masons in the metropolis, though the amount of this investment amounted to £555, of which £335 are children, and 329 adults. This may be taken as the average population during the year. The number of deaths which have taken place out of this population is but one, a proportion of this limited number of deaths which, while fever and cholera have been devastating whole districts of the metropolis, not one of either of those diseases has occurred in these buildings, and that only two deaths have taken place from diarrhœa, whereas in Church-lane, Saint Giles's, among a population of about 1100 (that number being nearly double the population of these buildings), twenty-nine deaths from cholera took place within the space of five weeks, viz. in the months of August and September last." The report was adopted

MASONS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.—On Tuesday evening a public meeting of masons and others connected with the trade was held at Exeter-hall for the purpose of taking into consideration the present position of this institution, and for disseminating the principles on which it is conducted among the parties chiefly interested in its success. Mr. W. Tite, F.R.S., occupied the chair. A report from the committee of management since the last annual meeting was read, which, after briefly alluding to the difficulties encountered in the formation of the society, stated, that, as their funded property now amounted to the sum of £300, sufficient to realise an annuity of £15 per annum, and accordingly it was proposed to have an election of pensioners in July next. The number of subscribers was 140, which was insignificant in proportion to the number of working masons in the metropolis, though the amount of this investment amounted to £555, of which £335 are children, and 329 adults. This may be taken as the average population during the year. The number of deaths which have taken place out of this population is but one, a proportion of this limited number of deaths which, while fever and cholera have been devastating whole districts of the metropolis, not one of either of those diseases has occurred in these buildings, and that only two deaths have taken place from diarrhœa, whereas in Church-lane, Saint Giles's, among a population of about 1100 (that number being nearly double the population of these buildings), twenty-nine deaths from cholera took place within the space of five weeks, viz. in the months of August and September last." The report was adopted

METROPOLITAN INTERMENTS BILL.—A special general meeting of the Protestant Dissenting deputies was held at the King's Head Tavern, in the Poultry, on Monday, for the consideration of the Government Interments Bill. Mr. John Remington Mills occupied the chair; and, in his opening address, after commenting on those features of the proposed measure which more especially affected the interests of Nonconformists and the principles of Nonconformity, gave an account of the steps taken by the committee to oppose the bill, and of the result of an interview which a deputation from their body had had with Sir George Grey. Messrs. John Wilks, Carlisle, Offor, and other gentlemen next addressed the meeting in condemnation of the bill, declaring themselves to be in no way hostile to the principle of sanitary reform, and yet considering themselves bound as Dissenters to oppose a measure framabt, as they believed, with danger to their liberties. The arguments adduced differed little from those put forward at previous meetings. Various resolutions were adopted, recommending an application to the members of the metropolitan boroughs, and other steps in furtherance of the views of the Dissenters. The principal resolution was as follows

"That the meeting approves of the resolutions of the committee on the Metropolis Interments Bill, passed on the 30th of May, and adopted by the House on the 3rd of June; and that such resolution be embodied in a petition to the House of Commons, that the bill may not pass into a law, and that such petition be now read and adopted."

PROVIDENT CLERKS' MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY AND BENEVOLENT FUND.—The managers and trustees of this excellent institution met on Wednesday, at the London Tavern, to elect three annuitants in addition to the 14 already dependent on this charitable establishment, viz. one clerk at £20 per annum, and two widows at £15 per annum each, or three widows, should no clerk present himself as a candidate. After some preliminary observations from the chairman, Mr. J. A. Smith, M.P., the managers proceeded to take the votes. The result was For W. B., 1007 votes, and elected on an annuity of £20 per annum; for A. W. R., 996 votes, and chosen as an annuitant of £15 per annum; for G. T., 513 votes; for A. B., 1421 votes, and elected at £15 per annum; for H. B., 993 votes; for G. W., 327 votes. After the declaration of the poll, Mr. James Clarke and Mr. Lisson subscribed £10 each annually.

DECEPTIVE ADVERTISEMENTS.—Yesterday week, Sir Peter Laurie called the attention of the sitting Alderman to a letter which he had received from Mr. Hartley, of Richmond, Yorkshire, complaining of a certain advertiser, against which we deem it our duty to put our readers on their guard. It appears that Mr Pattison saw an advertisement in the Durham Chronicle, offering to supply the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS for 1s. per annum. He therupon enclosed 8s. in postage-stamps to the address indicated "Mr. [illegible], London-street, London," but has not received a single paper. Sir Peter sent Mr. Roe, the sun moving officer, to the house in Farringdon-street, which he found to be a private residence. The advertiser had only a letter-box to receive all letters addressed to him, his place of residence being unknown! Our readers will easily see the necessity of ordering the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS through known news-agents.

ENTERTAINMENT TO THE JUDGES BY THE LORD MAYOR.—On Tuesday the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress gave a grand banquet to the Judges in the state apartments of the Mansion House, in order to entertain the Judges annually in the long parlour; but, upon the present occasion it was a special banquet, on account of the numerous invitations to distinguished persons to meet their Lordships, to make preparations upon the most splendid scale in the Egyptian hall for the banquet, which was supplied in a style that fully supported the high character of the hospitalities of the mayoralty. Amongst the company were—the Bishop of Worcester and Mrs. Pepys, Lord Broughum, Lord Campbell and Lady Stuart de Rothesay, Chief Baron and Lady Pollock, Baron and Lady Alderson, Baron and Lady Platt, Sir John and Lady Patteson, Sir J. T. and Lady Coleridge, Sir Wm and Lady Wigutman, Sir John and Lady Talford, Sir Edward and Lady Denman, the Attorney-General and Lady Pollock, Queen's Ancient Sergeant and Mrs Manning, Sir John and Lady Hanslet, Sir F. Kelly and Lady Melet, Mr. Swanston, Q.C., Mr Rogers, Q.C., and Mrs Spalding, Mr. Serjeant Wilkins, Mr. Serjeant Merewether, Mr. Serjeant Bompas, Q.C., Mr. Serjeant D'Oyley and Mrs. D'Oyley, Serjeant and Mrs. Shee, Serjeant and Mrs. Gazelee, Serjeant and Mrs. Jones, Serjeant and Mrs. Cole, Serjeant and Mrs. Channell, Serjeant and Mrs Bain, Serjeant and Mrs. Wilkins, Serjeant and Mrs Channell, Serjeant and Mrs. Du Bois, Serjeant and Mrs. Goulburn, Serjeant and Mrs. Thompson, Serjeant and Mrs Byles Serjeant and Mrs. Wallnuer, Mr. Alderman Thompson, M.P., and Mrs. Thompson, &c. The next 20 days' cause list is published.

THE TRINITY-HOUSE BRETHREN.—On Monday last (Trinity Monday), at eleven o'clock, his Grace the Duke of Wellington and the elder brethren assembled at the Trinity House, Tower-hill, and proceeded in the following procession to the Tower Wharf, where they embarked on board the Trinity-House barge. The procession, as it moved down the river, was saluted at numerous points by discharges of cannon from the shipping, &c., hoisting their ensigns. Off Deptford was moored the Trinity yacht, sadly decorated with the flags of all nations. The procession debarked at St. George's-stairs, Deptford, and, proceedin, to the Hospital, the election of officers took place, his Grace the Duke of Wellington being unanimously elected as the commander of the corporation. At the conclusion of the loving cup was passed. The public were admitted to the hall, and biscuits distributed. The brethren, after attending Divine service at St. Nicholas' church, Deptford, returned to the Trinity-House hall, where a grand banquet was given. One of the customs observed on this annual meeting is that of the master of the corporation presenting the handsomest young lady in Trinity-Hall with a splendid bouquet of flowers. On the present occasion his Grace the Duke of Wellington bestowed the bouquet on the daughter of Mr Wilcox, the master shipwright of Deptford Dockyard, Miss Annette Wilcox, when the noble and gallant duke master most courteously shook hands with the fair object of his devotion.

On Monday night last, several workmen were employed in the Copenhagen Tunnel, Copenhagen-fields, belonging to the Great-Northern Railway, in the neighbourhood of Islington, when some weight of earth fell in, and killed a man named William French. French was dug out in the course of a short time, quite dead, being pressed flat, and presenting a shocking spectacle

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—Births registered in the week ending Saturday, May 25: males, 676; females, 656—total, 1342 Deaths during the same [illegible]: males, 459; females, 447—total, 906. The return shows that the number of deaths is still below the average of the increase of population, but it is almost exactly coincides with the average if taken without such correction. During the corresponding weeks of ten previous years, 1840–9, the deaths rose to nearly their greatest proportion from 786 in the first week to 979 in 1843, the average, with an addition for present population, is 944, compared with which, the number returned last week shows a decrease of 78. The deaths included in the present week of epidemic class amount, in the present return, to 156; the corrected average is 196. Of special epidemics, small-pox has risen to six children and two adults; scarlatina to thirteen; both diseases, but particularly the latter, showing a less mortality than usual. Measles destroyed twenty-three children, and a man of 30 years, who is described in medical certificate, died of "measles (7 days), typhus (5 days);" hooping-cough 35 children: these diseases at present do not vary much from the average. Of persons died of diarrhœa and the notes appended it appears that in August in Chandos-street, visited by Mr. Leonard, the refuse of fish is kept till the smell is intolerable, and the air is so vitiated that some of the inmates have diarrhœa, and one child died after seven months' illness. Of the epidemic class, typhus two persons died of typhus, which is still less than the average, but exhibits a slight tendency to increase. A young boy died of intermittent fever from marshes of Canonbury-lane, a man of 30 years of age is ascribed to puerperal fever. Diseases of the respiratory organs, exclusive of consumption, numbered in the last week 138, being more than have occurred usually in the season—the average is 112. Consumption carried off 125 persons; it fluctuated in the corresponding weeks of 1840–49 between 93 and 103 deaths and 163. In the case of a lime-porter, who died at the age of 30, this disease was ascribed to the irritation of lime-dust to which he was exposed in his occupation. The deaths of two women are recorded as the direct results of intemperance; and, besides these, a blacksmith hanged himself in a state of unsound mind, caused by intemperance, and a clerk, aged 24 years, drew a thumpistol in temporary insanity brought on by excessive drinking." The classification of deaths in public institutions shows that 65 deaths were registered as having occurred in workhouses, 50 in hospitals, six in lunatic asylums, and four in the Royal Hospital, Greenwich

The mean [illegible] of the barometer in the week was 29.486 inches. The mean [illegible] was [illegible] degrees, and was rather [illegible] the average of the same week [illegible] Tuesday the mean temperature was [illegible] above the mean of the same day; on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday it was more than 1 degree below it.

"VOLTIGEUR," THE WINNER OF THE DERBY STAKES, 1850

EPSOM RACES.

ONCE in every twelvemonths, London, that sedatest of cities, that most circumspect, diligent, and decorous of capitals, by especial convention of Parliament, and general social compact declared at the beginning of each year in almanacks diaries, and such-like manuals of reference, gives sobriety to the winds, and rushes into a passion of revelry with the sbandes of an Italian carnival, or an ancient Roman saturnali-. Regularly as the return of a Derby Day, the marble men of her penetralia— or lanes, and courts, and alleys, her East-end Antonios and Shylocks, are possessed as with some new Promethean fire. For once in the twelve moons their internal spirit cuts a caper, and their outward mortalities are bedight in most admired disorder. Behold them, even from sunrise till murky night, provoking by every succulent means and appliance a desperate glee, more akin to madness than mirth; and sung, and said, and stereotyped the pageant has been, till all its incidents are as familiar as household words. They have even been anticipated by the Right Hon. John Hookham Frere, in metre something of this sort:—

Beggars and vagabonds, blind, lame, and sturdy;
Minstrels and singers, with their various airs—
The lute, the tabor, and the hurdy-gurdy
Jugglers and mountebanks with apes and bears.
Continued from the first day to the third day
An uproar never-ten thousand beyond all fairs.
There were wild beasts, and foreign birds and creatures,
And Jews and foreigners, with foreign features.

Therefore shall the annual narrative for the nonce be "more honoured in the breach than the observance;" and, as a substitute, some random recollections may be acceptable—rambling reminiscences of notabilities whose fortunes were interwoven with bygone Derbys, but who now are seen no more—together with some passing glimpses at those who still "strut their hour."

REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF THE RING.

Olympiads—prænia palmæ

"Legging" is, probably, coeval with the practice of racing, dating from the Olympiads. The Greek play wrights give it a turn, and the Roman satirists denounce it as one of the social epidemics of their time. Professional betting is one of the elements of that British pastime known as the Turf. At what period it was first organised is in some obscurity; the means whereby it lives are simple enough—the follies of mankind. . . . . .

Horse-racing, if ever it existed as a sport, if ever it was pursued in the spirit which leads men to the cover side and to the autumn stubble, is no longer Holiday parties, indeed, frequent race meetings, but wholly unconnected with the matter at issue—

Spectatur veniunt—veniunt spectentur.

Out at the course and the ring there has been an institution formed, upon which is bestowed the name of the Turf—sympathising with the national taste, and symbolical of the national character. Its properties are popular, and, so to speak, chivalrous; its pecu liarities, combinations of boon pleasure and subtle profit. These are materials not likely to be overlooked by those for whom life is "the royal game of goose." The economy of civilization affords no such proofs of the axiom "Truth is stranger than fiction" as are to be found in the career of persons that within the present century have adopted "legging" as a profession. There are startling passages in the "Mysteries of Paris" and "Monte Christo," but there are members of the ring, to be seen twice a week at Tattersall's during the season, whose adventures would put the heroes of Dumas and Sue out of interest and account—even as champagne exceedeth in quality the flavour of ginger-beer. Without assigning to the muse of France exaggeration as a prevailing figure of speech, it may be assumed for John Bull, that his style is the reverse of florid. He depreciates in description as a rule.

Supply is the consequence, not the cause of demand. It was not till money might be had for the making—scientifically—on the race-course, that the society of Legs was instituted. They are ephemera that were first observed early in the nineteenth century. "As it is probable that we are in reality much more indebted for our partial reformation in expression and sentiment to the portraiture of our forefathers in their hours of excess as depicted in the high-fed rollicking days of Tom Jones and Count Fathom, rather than to any more serious appeal in print; so it is possible for the reflective youth of the next, if not the present, age, to cull a moral from an untrammelled sketch of living characters in this not over-fastidious era of Turf and Race." Thus our work is well calculated to give an opinion on such a point, and when experience proffers its lore for our learning "fas est docere." . . . . The writer's personal acquaintance with the ring ranges over some five-and-twenty years; and it is a place where a good deal may be picked up in a quarter of a century. Though Crockford was the first Napoleon of the realms of racing, his advent was anticipated by men of an exquisite wit. Crutch Robinson and Jim Bland were not to be sneezed at. Both have for some years been gathered to their fathers, and de mortuis nil nisi bonum is a right Christian axiom. Nevertheless, it may be lawful to transfer what has already been written. Crutch, then, lived, when his fortunes were in their mellow autumn, on the confines of Cheshire. "A more domineering, uncouth being than this sporting cripple," says his biographer, "could not be encountered, even in a county rather famed for such characters; and to see an old man, disabled from the use of his limbs, and bisected by time, shouting out his odds, and dealing in the lowest bitter sarcasm and racing slang, either mounted on a four-legged brute as tough as himself, or leaning on his trusty crutch in the midst of the crushing throng, was an irreverent and revolting sight, even in the motley scene wherein he figured. In a dialect of true Tim Bobbinish accent, the halting old "Leg" added a sneer and surly importance of manner peculiarly his own." A sample of his style would not be out of the way. The conversation turned upon certain members of the profession who did not rule high in Crutch's good graces. "They are a queer lot," remarked I, in half soliloquy. "Queer," replied my amiable eclogniat of the crutch; "I see a rum set in my day of one sort or another, for I can just remember Dan Dawson and Co., but these beat all calculation. Do you know the French for a barrel-organ?" "I confess I do not," replied I. "Nor I neither," said he; "nor is there one man in ten score as knows it; but them chaps does, and the Greek too, for the matter of that."

Jim Bland—as his patronymic went in the profession—had a noble house in Piccadilly, and drove his phaeton. He was one of the old school of "Legs"—wore top-boots, green coats, party-coloured chokers, and his arms up to the elbows in his pockets. His face was an index to a dark volume, and his smile a thing to make the heart quake. He, too, "could just remember Dan Dawson," no doubt, and the recollection could have brought him little ease. His system was to go for every point of the odds, arithmetical, physical moral, and immoral. He received his bets wheresoever he won them, and paid on town; taking the offchances of the journey and the interval as so many "pulls" against his creditor. He especially esteemed laying a "pony" on each of the animals in a match. He took care that his men were of the right sort, so that he was sure to receive; and there was always the possibility of a wrangle, or, at the worst, there was "settling a part "on account." Old Jimmy's "cut" was that common to the portraits of Aberdeen and Turpin, and the like worthies of the road, in the palmy days of the highway.

These men were, however, "small deer" compared with the representatives of the ring in more modern times. Mr. Gully, who began his career in a ring of another sort, thence won his way to the arena of Stephen's. Messrs. Harry Hill, Padley, O'Brien, Hargraves, Clark, Justice, Clowes, Ephraim and Jos. Bond, Scott, Higgins, cum multis, were and are heavy betters round—book makers for tens of thousands. Robinson and Bland are sketched in outline merely to show the stuff whereof the common "Leg" is compounded; but the ring has its commissioners, as among the names quoted above currente calamo, who, if the ultra-particular will not permit us to style "good men," are, at all events, in their calling "true." But, beyond this allusion, the present notice of the circle must be confined to its two bright particular stars—Crockford, whose ray has set, and Davis, whose beams now blaze with an almost intolerable splendour.

First of the train, we sing of "Crocky." Haply, the reader asks, "did'st know him?" We reply, "Excellent well: he was a fishmonger." He began his career with a stall which once stood hard by the spot whereon is now situated the office of the journal in which this record is written. Thence, by steps slow but sure, he won his way westward even unto that palace which still arrests the eye (albeit, shorn of its prestige) as you look from Piccadilly adown St. James's-street. This gorgeous temple—this imperial "decemvia Æterni"—was scarce completed ere it became a focus for the most tremendous play ever known in this "tight little island." A few brief years sped on and the enchanter who raised it was the Midas of modern days. Anon, ever looking to extend his operations—he turned his steps towards Newmarket, where, at a wave of his wand—

Yes, ready money is Aladdin's lamp—

there sprang up a second edition, upon a smaller scale, of the great metropolitan "club," as men—hell, as gods—called it. Thus, you will perceive, for the gudgeon which escaped his Scylla in town, he had a snug little Charybdis in the country. And all this was done by one whose outward man was the ideal of mental and physical feebleness. His best pace was something between a shuffle and a slide, and his best gob-up expression a half sick-y, half sceptic stare. "His cheeks," according to a notice of him which appeared in Bentley's Miscellany, "appeared whitened and flabby, through constant night-work. His hands were entirely without knuckles, soft as raw veal, and as white as paper, while his large, flexible mouth was stuffed with 'dead men's bones'—his teeth being all false, and visibly socketed with his darling metal." Like the majority of those who have taken a lead in his way of life, Crockford was possessed of a marvellous memory. I will not say he could not put the bets he laid to paper, but I can safely assert I never saw him do so. He would sit upon a table at midnight in the rooms at Doncaster, and cry "Done" to offers to back horses from ten points of the compass at the same moment, and straightway commit them to memory. And what a sight it was to see him seated for a "settling" his fists—for his hands were fists, not ordinary sets of fingers—stuffed with thousand pound notes, and his coffin coldness of eye as he surveyed the harvest before him. Like most players, too, he had his system: which was to lay long odds against doubles, or triple, or quadruple—or quintuple events. Perhaps this is the philosopher's stone of chance after all; it did marvels—it might be said millions, for him, and has been adopted by his great successor. He died and left a colossal fortune as his epitaph; his death was sudden: had a longer sojourn been permitted him, paradventure the case might have been reversed. In latter years he took to keeping race-horses, a course which, as regards ultimate ruin, is only a question of time. Twenty thousand a year supports a sma l establishment without being very sensibly affected by it; a regular scud, so and so many years, and multionaires go to the Bench. It is singular, with this fact ever before their senses—the fact, indeed, whereon "they live and move, and have their being"—that a stud is the rock on which your "Leg" is passionately prone to split. What wrecked Nimrod's "Yorkshire footman," who once sat before the north country a type of the ménage of Sardanapalus? What jeopardised the chance of the whilom member for Pontefract?

SKETCH IN THE RING—"I'LL BET AGAINST CLINCHER."

Where's —? dished: where — and —? diddled.

Ratan brought Crockford to a premature grave; a team would have broken his fortune first, and his heart after.

Mr. Davies now calls for our attention: -

Is it a Stentor that I see before me?

A few years ago—some five or six at most—a young man of quiet demeanour, without any characteristic beyond his class, that of a working-carpenter, was employed upon some repairs in progress at the Jockey Club Rooms, at Newmarket. "Example," says the proverb, "is far beyond precept." Everybody, everything he saw about him was betting; so he betook him to the Heath, and tried his hand at the common craft. The essay prospered, and, as a most natural consequence, the essayist relished the labour of the hand for the planning of the head. The age of miracles is past, or it would have been conclusive how thus "fortunate youth" came by his luck. As it is, men look on and wonder—not without awe; as for me, tremble as I scribble 'pon my soul!

Hardly had Mr. Davies taken his degree as a Master of Arts—in the Ring—than Fortune gave him one of those crocnetty turns for which she is proverbial. He betted half a score or more of thousands against an animal for a handicap at Newmarket, which came in first; and the general opinion was that he would go off next. But no such thing: up goes Davies to town by the electric telegraph, and down he comes again with a sheaf of sparkling, crisp thousand-pound notes, fresh from the Bank, and as big as your portmanteau. This did his business—not according to the vulgar meaning of the phrase, but "it made a man of him:" such a man as the world had never seen before, and, very probably, as it never had expected to lay eyes on. It takes a good deal of "brass" to make a "leg" of the ordinary ring standard; but Davies has a soul above such "buttons." His predecessors, his contemporaries, were content to exchange parole understakings with their customers. Davies said, "My word is worth your gold; give me your cash, and I'll give you my credit." Now, what do you think is the upshot of it? People pay this phenomenon of figures—this wizard of ways and means—the bets that they may possibly lose, for the privilege of his pruales to receive, should they certainly win, what he may probably pay. You don't comprehend me? Well, I don't wonder at it. We'll try again. Mr. Davies will lay the odds against any horse in any race to any amount; that is to say, he gives his promise to pay some thirty or forty thousand pounds should two horses win two particular races, receiving money down, £50 from the taker. Looking at the amounts, we should be more prepared to expect the deposit to be required on the part of the speculator in the thousands, while the tick might be accorded to the tens. It is understood, that is to say, it is in everybody's mouth, that he betted Mr. George Payne, a member of the Jockey Club, £30,000 to £30 that Mounseer did not win the Chester Cup and Bolingbroke the Derby. When the first event of the two came off I wonder did he sleep without rocking? These double events have resulted rather awkwardly since Crocky's time. Had the fishmonger seen the same horse win the Derby and St. Leger in one year, and the performance repeated the following season, it would have posed his speculations. But he died before the ominous crisa of Surplice and the Flying Dutchman.

This better to imagine the presence of the "Leviathan of the ring," as the sporting journals delight to term our hero—suppose it to be some ten minutes past two o'clock P.M. of Wednesday last; scene Epsom Downs. It is the Derby Day! The million are in Surrey; they strew the greensward of Banstead as the leaves clothe Vallambrosa. Behold, the din of myriads rising fast and furious around—while above all, like Kreutz's horn in Jullien's concerts, there is heard one pair of human lungs repeating the cabalistic call "I'll lay four to one against Bowlinbrook; I'll bet 5 to 1 against Mulleys; I'll lay 5 to 1 against Pattenden; I'll bet 7 to 1 against Biggar—I'll lay &c., &c., &c., &c., against Vatican, Natahell Ghillie Callum, Caribou, oo, OO, &c., &c., &c., &c." That's Mr. Davis, with a dapper little satin tie around his vocal culverin, and a hat with the tiniest of brims covering his Californian coquet. He never tires, calling unceasingly the prices he is prepared to pay—that is to say, offer—passing perpetually beside the rails of the ring, as doth the lion at the Zoological Gardens behind the bars of his cage. In his grips a bookling and morsel of pencil "seem as in mockery set." He needs no adventitious aids of memory. He wagers away tens—hundreds—thousands—tens of thousands—till you get to logarithms, and books them all in the ledger (the Legur?) of his brain. The human flood is tossed as the ocean by the hurricane. A cry splits the saeer rear....."They're off! they're off! Here they come! Now for the Corner. Where's Bolingbroke? Where's Mildew? Where's Clincher? What's they? A race for a Derby? It's a preparatory canter for a Leather Plate?".....A great day is it for the fielders: Voltigeur, nominally at 25 to 1, wins by a length, with Fitzlord next him! Mr. Davies, lay this Olympic unction to your heart. The turf is for you to make hay on. The first Newmarket ticket can't distinguish between the pretensions of first-class racehorses and fifth-class Platers. Bolingbroke came with the prestige of being the pet of one of the leading stables at the Elis of the modern world; Mildew is introduced to public patronage on the assurance of a trial that would have won half the Derbys of the century. Neither could "live" with animals that we shall see handicapp'd, before the year's out at weight for weeds.

EPSOM.—THE RACE FOR "THE DERBY STAKES."

MR. DAVIES, THE LEVIATHAN BETTING-MAN.

(From another Correspondent.)

In our Sketch on the Course, the reader will recognise a well-known member of the ring. The sketch, intended for Mr. William Davies, is in accordance with the comic pencil of the artist, Mr. Leech; and, though a little outré, is a good resemblance.

In fact, the subject of this notice—Mr. William Davies—is now mostly and justly so denominated "the leader of the betting-ring!" and the sensation created amongst the sporting fraternity on his appearance in that mystic circle, is such as that of the celebrated Rothschild was wont to cause on the Stock Exchange in days of yore, "when George the Third was King." Mr. Davies has been the sole unaided and unassisted architect of his own fortune: gifted with a clear head and quick perception, calculating mind, and most retentive memory, he has undoubtedly turned those natural endowments to the very best advantage, and he now shines forth in the sporting firmament as a "star" of no common magnitude; his unassuming deportment and unwavering probity of conduct during his career on the turf (as yet little more than eight years), have earned for him "golden opinions" in every sense of the word. Mr. Davies is of Welsh extraction, though he himself is a native of London, and was born, as we have been informed, in the parish of St. Andrew's, Holborn. It is not many years since Mr. Davies was an employé in Mr. Cubitt's extensive establishment in the Gray's Inn-road, such and so rapid has been the rise of this favoured child of Fortune. Mr. Davies is about 36 years of age, of the middle size, and of slender make. There is nothing striking in his appearance; but the eye, that index of the mind, would give assurance to the observer that the head was "screwed on the right way." It must be in the recollection of the majority of our readers, that, some years since, the celebrated Crockford was the Leviathan of the ring—the "triton of the minnows" at Tattersall's and at every race-house of celebrity in the kingdom. That veteran and sagacious "turfite," now some years consigned to his kindred earth, and Mr. Davies, have pursued the same system of betting namely, laying the odds against the horses all round, and thereby standing to win upon the outsiders, and lose should the cracks be victorious. But Mr Davies has far exceeded in the operation of the system the late Mr. Crockford, indeed, was Crockford known to stand more than £7000 or £8000 on any particular horse; but no later than Friday week Mr. Davies laid £50,000 to £1000 against Lord Exeter's Nutshell (winning the Derby, and the same to a fee offered to lay £40 000 to £1000 again-t Lord Eglinton's Mavors. Mr. Davies, besides being a "standing dish" at Tattersall's, has what are termed "lists" posted at two sporting houses, where he lays the market odds from half-a-sovereign to "half a-pium." At these lists, he issues tickets, or receiving ready cash de-posits, whereby he undertakes to pay the day after the race, should the card turn up a trump, and such is the confidence placed in him by the public in general (we mean those sharps, who speculate for a livelihood, and not the 10s. to £5), that in this latter department of his sporting avocation alone it is calculated upwards of £300,000 per annum is staked in his hands As a good work and a safe one is the cause higher in the turf. Whether he loses £10 000 or £10, to him 'tis all the same: there is no postponement—"no longwinded bills, but the R. M. D on the spot." As an example, we may mention one instance out of many that came under our own observation. At Newmarket, in 1848, he laid Lord Enfield, M.P., formerly the Hon Colonel Byng, £12,000 to £1000 that Mr. Crawford's the Cur did not win the "Cesarewitch" stakes. The Cur won, and the next morning Mr. Davies walked into the ring, and before he e-ased one farthing of what he himself had won, he handed the noble Lord twelve notes of £1000 each, fresh and crisp from the Bank of England. It must be sup osed that Mr. Davies bets on what is termed "commission" for others: that is altogether a mistake in fact it would be impossible for him to do so as commissioners back horses to win, which Mr. Davies never does, save on rare occasions. Again Mr. Davies never hedges, i. e. g tting out of a horse against whom he may have laid long odds, by betting to him at a later period By the Epsom "Derby" of last year Mr. Davies lost £9000, when the Flying Dutchman won after a severe struggle with Holsgur, a little half-bred 'un, whose dropping of winning was greatly mourned by the heavy stake of the ero-nud. Had the latter been the victor, Mr Davies would have pocketed £33 000. Mr. Davies has laid some very extraordinary wagers on what are termed "double events." For instance, some time ago he laid 6 to 4 agr for the last Chester Cup, he laid Mr. George Payne £20,000 to £50 against Mountseer winning that race and Bolingbroke the Derby. In the 1849 Derby he laid Mr G Watts £15 000 to £10 against his horse Mogador winning the Metropolitan Handicap at Epsom and Chatterer the Derby. Recently he laid £30 000 to £1000 against Cheerful winning the Metropolitan, and Bolingbroke the Derby; and, moreover, posted the money (or, as he facetiously termed it, the Colonna) Many ill-natured people indulge in the speculation that Mr. Davies will be the sporting "Monarch of the Ring," but that we consider altogether beyond the range of probability, whilst he has such an extensive command of ready-money as it is well known he has. The supposition is not one- so thatrous, that Mr. Davies knows nothing whatever of a horse—of his good or bad points, and cares nothing about stable secrets, but bets his money against horses entirely on the strength of his own judgment.

Mr. Davies has one great point in his favour—his temper is imperturbable; losses do not depress him, neither do winnings elevate him: the frowns of Fate or the smiles of Fortune are alike to him. Non tumet aut rultat nikil.

In opposition to rumours which have frequently reached our ears, we may observe that Mr. Davies is not of the Hebrew persuasion, but is a member of the Established Church.

EPSOM RACES.—TUESDAY.

The racing commenced shortly after two o'clock, and finished about five. The following is a return

The CRAVEN STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 40 added.—Mr. Rolt's Collingwood (Flatman), 1. Mr. Powzey's Rubbish (Bloss), 2.

The WOODCOTE STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 100 added —Mr. J. Clarke's Marlborough Buck (Whitehouse), 1. Duke of Richmond's Buckhound, (Kitchener), 2.

The MAIDEN STAKES of 5 sovs each, with 35 added,—Sir G. Heathcote's c. by Gladiator (R. Sherwood), 1. Hon. S. Herbert's Radulphus (Sly), 2.

The HORTON STAKES of 5 sovs each, with 30 added.—Mr. Howard's Aristocrat (Holloway), 1. Mr. T. King's Hasta (H. Goater), 2.

WEDNESDAY.

The TOWN PLATE of 50 sovs.—Mr. Osbaldeston's Joc o'Sot (F. Butler), 1. Hon. S. Herbert's Radulphus, (Sly), 2.

The DERBY STAKES of 50 sovs each.

Lord Zetland's Voltigeur	.. ..	(J. Marson), 1
Mr. H. R'e Pisford	.. ..	(A. Day), 2
Lord Airde's Chanter	.. ..	(F Butler), 3
Mr. Gratwicke's Nigger	.. ..	(Flatman), 4

The following also started, but were not placed:—Mr. Ford's Penang (H. Sly); Mr. W. Edward's Bolingbroke (J. Robinson); Captain Bastard's Mildew (Batholomew); Mr Hassey's Royal Hart (Simpson); Mr. Gannon's Deicoon (J. Sharp); Mr. Gurney's St. Fabian (R. Pettit); Mr. Greville's Caribou (S Rogers); Mr. Davidson's Chanting (Mr. Mackinzie); Mr. Mackinzie's Italian (Templeman); Lord Exeter's Nutshell (Norman); Mr. Lister's The Knight of Gwynne (Dockeray); Count Batthyany's Valentine (Crouch); Duke of Richmond's Ghillie Callum (S. Mann); Mr. Merry's Brennus (F. Pavis); Lord Eglinton's Mavors (Marlow); Major Martin's The Swede (W Abdale); Mr. Disney's Captain Grant (D. Wynne); Mr. Mossley's Alonzo (Whitestone); Sir G Heathcote's Dark Smart c. (Ralph Sherwood); Mr. R. Herbert's Augur (H. Edwards).

Betting at starting: 7 to 2 agst Chanter; 9 to 2 agst Mildew; 5 to 1 agst Bolingbroke; 6 to 1 agst The Nigger; 12 to 1 agst Pisford; 16 to 1 agst Voltigeur; 20 to 1 agrs Deicoon; 25 to 1 agst Nutshell; 40 to 1 agst Italian; 40 to 1 agst Ghillie Calum; 50 to 1 agst The Swede; and 1000 to 15 agst any other.

Penang and Deicoon got away together, and, with the Nigger, Mildew, the Swede, and Ghillie Callum had up, Voltigeur next, in company with Cinchet, cut out the work to the mile-post, where Penang died away. Deicoon went on with the running at good pace, followed in rotat on by Mildew, the Swede, and the Nigger, Ghillie Callum, Cinchet, and Voltigeur running last, and in their original positions They went on thus to the road, where Deicoon was beaten, and Mildew took the lad, Cinchet and the Nigger waiting on him. Ghillie Calum and Cardinal next, and Voltigeur laid off for the first time-fell up. Mildew was beaten at the distance, and Voltigeur and Cinchet both singled themselves out, the former taking the lead opposite the stand, and running home a very easy winner by a length; Pisford was second, a bad third, beating Chanter for the second money by half a length. The Nigger fourth, Mildew fifth, and Ghillie Callum sixth. Mavors laid forward in the early part of the race, but broke down at the turn, and was not persevered with. The race was run in 2 min. 50 sec.

The CAREW STAKES of 5 sovs each, with 30 added.—Mr. Hornsby's The Old Fox (Hornsby, jun.), 1. Mr. H. Hall's Equiria (Mason), 2.

The BUZOR STAKES of 5 sovs each, with 30 added.—Mr. Hobson's Laundrymaid (Hornsby), 1. Mr. Hayter's The Handsome Doe (H. Goater), 2.

THURSDAY

Was as complete an "off" day as could well be conceived, the sport being indifferent, the betting flat, and the attendance thin; the few who were tempted by the fineness of the weather to repeat their visit, finding little to stimulate them in the racing, turned their attention to the Oaks, for whom about sixteen are expected to run. Things is scratched. The following is a return of the races.

The EPSOM FOUR YEAR OLD STAKES of £50 sovs each.—Duke of Bedford's Questionable (Butler), 1 Mr. Carew's Nicmetzon (J. Marson), 2.

The DURDANS STAKES of 10 sovs each, 50 added —Mr. Bingley's Christiana (Hibbs), 1 Mr. Rolt's Heroine (E Sharp), 2.

The GRAND STAND PLATE of 200 sovs, added to a Handicap Sweepstakes of 20 sovs each Mr. Houghton's Lesage (Chapman), 1. Duke of Richmond's Sly Fox (Kitchener) 2

The NONSUCH STAKES of 15 sovs each Lord Chesham's Beaufort (G Brown), 1 Mr. Gratwicke's Boomerang (F. Butler), 2.

The CORINTHIAN STAKES of 5 sovs each Mr. Howard's Aristocrat (Holloway), 1. Mr. Farmby's Sly Mary (F. Bell), 2

FRIDAY.

The INNKEEPERS' PLATE. Bebee Bunnoo, 1. Rodney, 2.

The OAKS STAKES of 50 sovs each.

Mr. H. T. Forth's Rhadyelna	.. .. ..	(F. Butler) 1
Mr. J. Dixon's Kathleen	.. .. ..	(A. Day) 2

16 ran. Won cleverly.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The ensuing week will be a lively one with all the sporting classes, although it may lack the excitement produced by the defeat of all the favourites on Epsom Downs. Business will commence on Monday with a little race meeting at Wye On the following day the "Setting" will take place at the Corner's by Mr. Will to enormously heavy, and lucky will be the winner who gets paid in full On Wednesday a promising-looking meeting on paper will commence at Newton; on which day also will come off the first R. T. Y. C sailing match, and the great fight for the championship between Bendigo and Paddock. That valiant corps the North Herts Yeomanry will have some flat-racing on Thursday; and on Friday the Mersey Yacht Club regatta will take place. The cricketers' register includes a match at Lord's on Monday, between nine of the ground, with Box and Wisden given, and fifteen amateurs of Middlesex; and the return match on Thursday at the Oval, between Surrey and Middlesex; matches will also be played at the Surrey ground on Wednesday and Thursday.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The five leading Derby favourites were backed in excellent quarters, Bolingbroke looking most like a winner, but all "firm," as they say in the City. Nutshell, Deicoon, Ghillie Callum, and Captain Grant were also in favour, but Italian, Mavors, and Blarney received the coup de grace. Nothing done on the Oaks.

DERBY.

4 to 1 agst Bolingbroke	25 to 1 agst Nutshell	1000 to 15 agst St. Fabian (t)
6 to 1 — Mildew	25 to 1 — Ghillie Callum	1000 to 15 — The Swede (t)
13 to 2 — Chanter	30 to 1 — Deicoon	1000 to 15 — Alonzo (t)
15 to 2 — The Nigger (t)	40 to 1 — Capt. Grant (t)	1000 to 10 — The Italian
8 to 1 — Pisford (t)	50 to 1 — Caribou	1000 to 10 — Mavors
10 to 1 — Voltigeur	50 to 1 — Penang (t)	1000 to 10 — Blarney

1000 to 1 agst Castanero and Valentine

SUMMER CIRCUITS OF THE JUDGES, 1850.

On Thursday morning the Judges of the several Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer met at the Exchequer Chamber, Westminster Hall, for the purpose of arranging and determining the several Circuits upon which they will respectively proceed to hold the ensuing Summer Assize of Over and Terminer and Gaol Delivery, and Nisi Prius, for the several counties throughout England and Wales, when the following arrangements were finally determined on —

NORFOLK.—The Right Hon. Lord Campbell, Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Ben. ; and the Hon Mr Justice Williams.

MIDLAND. The Right Hon. Sir Thomas Wilde, Knt., Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas; and the Hon. Mr. Baron Platt

HOME —The Right Hon. Sir James Parke, Knt., Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer; and the Hon. Chief Justice Erle.

NORTHERN. The Hon. Mr. Justice Wightman and the Hon. Mr. Justice Cresswell.

OXFORD.—The Right Hon. Mr. Baron Alderson and the Hon. Mr. Justice Patterson.

WESTERN —The Hon. Mr. Justice Coleridge and the Hon. Mr. Justice Talfourd.

SOUTH WALES. The Right Hon. Mr. Baron Parke.

NORTH WALES The Hon Mr. Baron Rolfe.

CHESTER —Mr. Baron Parke and Mr. Baron Rolfe, after proceeding through their respective Circuits in Wales, will meet at Chester, and hold the Assizes for the city and county.

VACATION CIRCUIT.—The Hon. Mr. Justice Maule will remain in town, and sit at Chambers, in Serjeant's Inn, as Vacation Judge, during the absence of the other Judges on Circuit.

IRELAND.

The Cork Examiner contains an authorised statement to the effect that her M jesty and the Prince Consort have been pleased to extend their patronage to the next meeting of the Royal Irish Yacht Club for 1850 That Journal adds:—"We understand some hope is felt that it is not unlikely her Majesty may honour with her presence, in the early part of August, the Duke of Devonshire's beautiful seat at Lismore."

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC SYNOD.—The four Irish Roman Catholic Archbishops met on Friday week, when it was arranged that the Synod of the Bishops and superior Clergy, to which the new primate is understood to bear special message from the Holy See, should be held at Thurles, in the county of Tipperary, on the 15th of August next.

THE LORD MAYOR OF DUBLIN.—The Judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench was delivered on Monday in this case, and the Lord Justices agreeing, they delivered their judgments seriatim. The opinion of Judge Perrin was that the question should come before the Court on a quo warranto, and against making the conditional order for a mandamus absolute. This he considered to be the constitutional mode of trying a right of appeal to the Queen's party. The other three judges (the Chief Justice, Judges Moore and Crampton) held a contrary opinion, and were in favour of making the conditional order absolute, and the judgment, the mandamus absolute should have to be town council to elect a Lord Mayor, Mr. John Reynolds being disqualified.

One of those instances of what Shiel called "the wild justice of revenge" has just occurred in the north province of Ulster, which hitherto has been pretty free from agrarian outrage. The victim was Mr. Robert Lindsay Maclaverer, a magistrate of the county of Londonderry, and an agent over extensive estates in the north of Ireland. The ill-fated gentleman had been engaged of late in serving ejectment notices on a very extensive scale, to the number, it is said, of some hundreds, on the properties of which he was agent, as also in seizing for rents in arrear. At the Crossmaglen petty sessions on the Saturday previous to his death, several men and women were prosecuted against at his instance for resisting cattle seized by a number of his bailiffs. Informations were ordered against the parties; but, it afterwards appearing that the notices for distraint were illegally served, the process failed. At the time the dreadful deed was perpetrated, the unfortunate gentleman was on his way, between the villages of Crossmaglen and Cullovil, county of Armagh, to meet the down train on the Dundalk and Enniskillen Railway, on Tuesday week, about one o'clock in the day. He was travelling on an outa de car, when he was attacked by some men two of whom are in custody and beaten with such violence as to cause instantaneous death. Various causes are assigned, none of them materially differing from those out of which spring outrages have usually arisen, for the perpetration of this terrible tragedy. It is certain robbery was not the object of the assailants, as Mr. Maclaverer had on his person a gold watch and a purse also of gold, all of which were left untouched.

In a letter which the coroner of the district, Mr. Joshua Michael Magee, has addressed on the subject to the Times, the following passage, which may throw light on the causes of the outrage, occurs:—"Mr. Maclaverer, though kind and agreeable in his intercourse with others, unhappily thought it necessary to assume a different bearing with the tenants over whom he was appointed receiver. One incident will illustrate this fact.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The resignation by the Lord Chancellor of his high office has been announced on authority. His Lordship has been urged to this step both by the recommendation of his physicians and the infirmities of his family, and by a regard for the public inconvenience occasioned by his continued absence from the Court of Chancery.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Rev. Thomas Garnier, chaplain of the House of Commons, to the living of Trinity, Marylebone, vacant by the promotion of the Rev. Gilbert Elliott to the Deanery of Bristol.

Prince Albert has recently sent an exceedingly able and valuable paper to the Royal Agricultural Society of England, on "The Sewerage of Towns," in which his Royal Highness develops a plan for filtering the sewers at convenient intervals, thus accumulating in suitable tanks a rich and valuable manure, and generating the water from all mechanical admixture and impurity.

A Royal sign manual warrant has just been issued, granting a pension of £235 a year to Mrs Harriet Waghorn, widow of the late Lieutenant Thomas Waghorn, who established the overland route to India), "in consideration of the eminent services of her late husband."

The Communal council of Nuremburg, in Germany, has just admitted the Jewish merchants to the privilege of citizenship by 20 votes against 10. This decision seems the more surprise, as the admission of Jews into Nuremburg itself was very much disputed.

The operation of turning the third tube of the Britannia bridge round by a semicircular sweep over the water on its four pontoons, assisted by large cable chains and a huge upright beam attached to the shore, which formed the fulcrum or centre of motion on which it was swayed round, took place with success on Thursday evening week, under the superintendence of Mr. Stephenson, M.P., and Captain Claxton. Its journey to the bearing post, whence it will have to be floated to the foot of the piers on the 10th inst, occupied about 40 minutes, the distance traversed being about equal to two length.

The Government of Austria has resolved to treat in the footsteps of Austria in regard to the unfettered control of the clergy in ecclesiastical affairs, and to send a plenipotentiary to Rome in the person of Count Arko Valles, in order to make the necessary arrangement with the Papal Government.

Mr. Serjeant Shepherd of the Bankruptcy Court, who has been ill for some months and unable to attend to the duties of the court, has resigned. By the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, it is provided that, on the death or resignation of the commissioner, no fresh appointment is to be made until the number is reduced to four, which is to be the permanent number. The remaining commissioners are— Mr. Commissioner Evans (senior commissioner), Mr. Commissioner Bonhaman, Mr. Commissioner Holroyd, Mr. Commissioner Goulburn, and Mr. Commissioner Fane.

During the visit of Prince George of Cambridge, in Moat Park, in the county of Roscommon, last week, an address was presented to his Royal Highness from the surrounding neighbourhood, expressive of the strong and warm attachment of the people of that part of Ireland to the Royal Family, and of the general satisfaction his Royal Highness had given in that country since his appointment to the command of the army under his charge. His Royal Highness, in reply, assured the deputation, that he felt most gratified by the warm and kind reception he had met with in every part of Ireland from the people wherever he went amongst them, and that on any occasion that it should ever fall to his power to render them any service he would not fail to do so.

The Master of the Rolls has appointed Wednesday, June 12, at the Rolls Court, Westminster, at a quarter after nine in the morning, for swearing solicitors. Every gentleman desirous of being sworn on the above day must leave his common-law admission for his certificate of practice for the current year at the secretary's office, Rolf's-yard, Chancery-lane, on or before Tuesday June 11.

The Presse (Paris paper) published a letter from M. Jacquemart, professor of political economy, who states that he has been condemned by the Tribunal of Correctional Police of Soissons to a month's imprisonment, and a fine of 25f., for having, without submitting it previously to the prefect of the department (Aisne), sent by post from Paris, where it was printed, an essay written by himself, and addressed to the agricultural committees of the arrondissement of Soissons, the object of which essay was to compete for a prize given by the committee in question, on the causes of the sufferings of French agriculture, and the means of improving agricultural credit.

Thirteen officers of the 4th and 5th legions of the National Guard of Paris have been suspended for two months by the Prefect of the Seine, for having signed petitions against the Electoral Reform Bill. Vivent la Liberté Expulsé et la Fraternité!

The editor of the Voix du Peuple (Paris socialist paper) has issued a circular to his subscribers, to state that he has not yet been able to find a printer who will venture to print his paper, in the face of the proceedings on the part of the Government, which have closed the printing-house of M. Boulé, and ruined that gentleman.

The Genoa Gazette states that Mgr. Varesini, the Archbishop of Sassari, has been arrested for opposing the law for abolishing ecclesiastical privileges.

The Ayr Advertiser says:—"The estate of Bartonhulm, in Irvine parish, which belonged to the late Colonel S. M. Fullarton, was, on Monday last, sold by public roup at Ayr, and knocked down at 210,500 to D. Gardiner, Esq., as commissioner for the Earl of Eglington." To this the Scotsman appends the following note:—The Earl of Eglington, who has paid a very handsome price for this estate, was one of the creators of the "great Tournament meeting" in London a few days ago, at which the burden of all the speeches and resolutions was that agriculture is ruined and land worthless!

A balloon of a new form was inflated at the gas-works, Kennington-oval, on Friday week, and afterwards ascended with its inventor, a Mr. Bell, from that place on the evening of the same day. It reached the earth again safely at High Laver, Essex, but in its descent a man named Frederick Clark, who was attempting to render assistance, was killed by the grapnel.

On Monday morning about seven o'clock a party of soldiers belonging to the 98th Regiment, at Portsmouth, having been on fatigue on South Sea Common, were returning to quarters, having after them a very large iron roller charged with iron shot, when in descending the road to the centre of the glacis at a rapid pace to escape the rain at the time fallinz, one of the men fell, and in an instant the ponderous machine passed over the unfortunate fellow, whose head and body were so fearfully crushed that instantaneous death resulted.

It is understood that arrangements have been made between the parties interested, by which the obligation on the part of the Airdrie and Monklands Junction Railway to acquire Glasgow Cattle buildings, in High-street, and erect new buildings on the grounds of Woodlands, has been cancelled. Glasgow College, therefore, is destined to remain as the honour and ornament of the eastern part of that city.

The French funds rose again in Paris on Saturday afternoon in consequence of the new light which was thrown upon the Greek question by the satisfactory explanations of Lord Palmerston and Lord John Russell in the House of Commons.

A facetious young lady who does the amiable to the frequenters of the bar of an hotel in Liverpool astonished her admirers, the other day, by the following repartee:—"Well, Miss——, if you had to decide between an Exeter and a Gorham, which would you prefer?" "Why, of course," she replied, "a go o' rum!"

Accounts from Austrian Sclavonia continue unsatisfactory, several risings having taken place among the peasantry, and the ringleaders arrested. At Debergen the notorious robber chief Benadter was arrested, and, with two of his accomplices, immediately executed; and at Ledens, about four leagues from Debrecin, a band of insurgents, called the Onbarsch band, consisting of 18 individuals, were arrested, and the leader, with one of his followers, hanged.

The screw-steamer Propontis, one of the new Constantinople line, belonging to the General Screw Steam Shipping Company, arrived at Gibraltar on the 18th inst, after a passage of only five days and fourteen hours, making an average of about ten miles an hour, taking the distance at 1350 miles.

Civilization advances even in the East. In Saiouchi, Riza Pasha has sent a circular to the various consuls, desiring them to call the attention of parties over whom they are placed to the importance of sending their letters and effects through the Turkish Post-office, instead of entrusting them to private hands.

On the Greek festival of Easter-Eve, at Smyrna, Halil Pasha demanded a list of all the Greeks who were imprisoned for debt, paid all their debts, and liberated them from prison, and gave each of them a sum of money, to be expended by them during the Easter holidays! On the following day the Greek Bishop was fêted upon him and returned thanks. What a change!

The German corresponding committee, having been informed by the London committee for the Exhibition of 1851, that the space of 100,000 square feet was assigned to German products, have determined, after correspondence had with Prussia, &c., that 60,000 square feet shall be assigned to the States of the Zollverein, 30,000 to Austria, and 10,000 to the maritime states.

The Rev. Dr. Tatham, Master of St. John's College, Cambridge, and his family, have ever since the time of the Reformation resided in the Hendon district on their ground at Bishopswearmouth, near the head of Lawrence-street. A more desirable situation could not be found, especially when the new railway is open through the Tatham estate.

From the returns of the production and consumption of domestic sugar in France since the commencement of the season, it appears that there were 238 manufactories in operation on the 1st ult. The quantity of sugar manufactured amounted to 98,811 269 kilogrammes, or 21,702 926 more than during the corresponding period of 1849, and that sold for consumption or deposited in the government bonding stores to 50,020,551 kilogrammes, or 9,616,549 more than last year.

The cultivation of the flax plant has been very extensive this year in the counties of Cavan, Limerick, and Tipperary, and promises an abundant return, according to all present appearances.

An American paper says:—"The friends of Father Mathew in Mobile have presented the rev. gentleman with a purse containing 470 dollars in his reply to their address he says that 'the gift was most timely, his pecuniary resources being exhausted, and the fear of weakening his influence in the cause of temperance deterring him from making an appeal to defray the expenditure of his mission.' Father Mathew was hospitably entertained at New Orleans on 24th March."

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W G should receive his Problems, until by repeated examination he is assured of their integrity

NORTH BRITON—The caustic remarks in the Gateshead Observer on the subject of the Chess match between Glasgow and Newcastle will call forth, we have no doubt, some satisfactory explanation from the former club as to the cause of the delay in transmitting their moves, of which the Newcastle players complain

A. C. York—1. If in Problem No 327 White play P to K 8 4th, Black takes that Pawn en passing, and discovers check with his Rook; how, then, will you mate? 2. The lowest price of the "Staunton Chess-men" is 25s; but that includes the beautiful carton pierre box, worth a guinea itself, and the new treatise on the game by Mr. Staunton

J P—Your solution of No 330 was wrong, or it would have been given

W H, Brighton; R B W, Oxford—Both are thanked, and duly reported each week

J G S, Clitheroe—Your solution of Problem No. 329 is unimpeachable

BELLAH—The key move to Enigma No 327 are—1 to K 4th 2 R to K B 4th

Q—1. The original Problems No 1 and 2 of the American Amateur, a perfectly correct, and answers have been published in our previous issues. Try at once more. 2 Enigma No. 324 is indeed beautiful as a mere stalemate, or two moves, for if White claim a Kt for his first move, Black may answer with 1 P to K 3d. Ac.

D L N—The solution of the great 1 st in Chess Problem 3—1. B to Q B sq. 2. K moves; 3. R to B 5th. 4. R to Q 4th—double check and mate

T B—It is not at all customary in this country to warn an adversary of danger to his Queen

J M G—The game by correspondence between Crewe and Greenwich shall be reported on next week

W C T, Athlone—You have failed in Problem No 329. Make another effort

JOHN—Your opponents know very little of Chess, or they never would have thought of such a problem. The Pawns have the same privilege of taking a piece at their first move as at the last

THOMAS R—Too obvious, unfortunately

B P, Grosvenor-place—You will get the new Chess-men at Westerton's Library, St. George's-place, Hyde park

ASH forgot to observe that Black may interpose his Kt, and frustrate her mate

T D, Manchester—See our reply above to ASHBURY

F. Rodon—Always acceptable

Sir G S—With such a preponderance in force and position, White can readily force mate in seven less moves, we believe, than you propose

CHESSEY The 33rd move of Black in game No 17 of the great French match is a misprint. It stood 0—33. K to B 2nd

* * The games played between the head master and head boy of a public school is extremely creditable both to their tuition and pupil. Send the games of the competitors

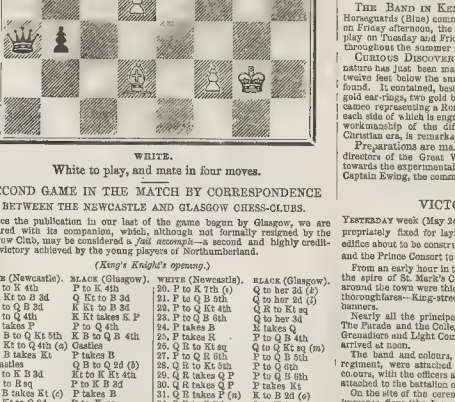
SOLUTIONS of No. 33 by J L R, CHARLES, HUTTER, DERBYON, ST EDMUND; J P, Hythe; S L K, J O R, S G, C P H, G S, A V, JUVENTUS, C J T, H D M, S Q S, J G D, Chichester; S S, C A M K, J G, Dumfries; J A, WORKING MAN'S CHESS CLUB, London; H M, Margate; BELLAH, THOS C O, Q, Glasgow, J A W, A SHEFFIELD GRINDER'S APPRENTICE, A MEMBER OF A CHESS CLUB, W S T, Valley field, HEBTON, B A, Q, A R B, S S, J B, Worcester; C C, Cheltenham College; TREWERE, M E R, MOONSHINE, RENAUT, A B G, J M W, AN AMATEUR, C W K are correct

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 331.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. B to B sq	P to Q 5th	4. Kt to Q B 6th	P queens
2. R to Q B 3d (ch)	P takes R	5. Kt mates
3. Kt to Q 8th	P to Q B 7th

This is very clever, but the author appears to have overlooked a more obvious and speedy mate by—1. B to K sq, 2. P takes P, 3. K takes B P, 4. R mates.

PROBLEM No. 332.
By Mr. EDNEY.
BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

SECOND GAME IN THE MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE
BETWEEN THE NEWCASTLE AND GLASGOW CHESS-CLUBS.

Since the publication in our last of the game begun by Glasgow, we are favoured with its companion, which, although not formally resigned by the Glasgow Club, may be considered a fait accompli—a second and highly creditable victory achieved by the young players of Northumberland.

(King's Knight's opening.)

WHITE (Newcastle).	BLACK (Glasgow).	WHITE (Newcastle).	BLACK (Glasgow).
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	20. P to K 7th (c)	Q to her 2d (d)
2. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	21. P to Q B 5th	Q to her 2d (d)
3. B to Q B 3d	K Kt to B 3d	22. P to Q K 4th	Q R to Kt sq
4. P to Q 4th	K Kt takes K P	23. P to Q B 6th	Q to her 3d
5. P takes P	P to Q 4th	24. P takes B	K takes Q
6. K B to Q Kt 5th	K B to Q B 4th	25. P takes R	P to Q B 4th
7. K Kt to Q 4th (a)	Castles	26. Q R to K sq	Q to Q Kt sq (m)
8. K B takes Kt	P takes B	27. P to Q R 6th	P to Q B 5th
9. Castles	Q B to Q 2d (b)	28. Q R to Kt 5th	P to Q 6th
10. P to B 3d	Kt to K Kt 4th	29. Q R takes Q P	P to Q 5th
11. K to R sq	P to K B 3d	30. Q R takes Q P	P takes Kt
12. Q B takes Kt (c)	P takes B	31. Q R takes P (n)	K to B 2d (o)
13. K to Q 2d	R to K sq	32. Q R to Q 7th	Q to K B 4th (p)
14. R to K sq	B to Q Kt 3d (d)	33. P to Q R 3d (q)	P to K R 4th (r)
15. P to K 6th (e)	B to Q B sq	34. Q R to Q 8th	P to K Kt 5th
16. Q to Q R 4th	P to Q B 4th (f)	35. P takes Kt P	Q to K B 7th
17. Q to Q B 6th (g)	B to Q Kt 2d (h)	36. K R to Q Kt sq	R takes K P
18. Q takes B	P takes Kt	37. Q R to Q sq	Q to K 7th
19. P to Q B 4th	B to Q R 4th	38. P Queens and the Glasgow Chess-Club have to play.

(Notes by the Committee of the Newcastle Chess Club.)

(a) Here the position is the same as that of the Glasgow game at the 8th move.

(b) In the other game Newcastle now played B to Q R 3d

(c) This gives White a "passed" Pawn, which proves in the sequel of considerable advantage to them

(d) With the view of advancing the doubled Pawn on the Kt, which would materially improve Black's game

(e) This and the subsequent move of Q to her R 4th were not ventured upon until they had undergone a very careful and elaborate investigation. They lead to many difficult and intricate variations, and tend, we believe, to give to White the superiority of position

(f) Their best move apparently. If they had taken the Kt, White would have taken the double Pawn with their Queen

(g) Q Kt to Q B 6th offers more inducement, but would not be sound play.

(h) If in place of this move they had played B to Q Kt 3d, or Q R 3d, White must have gained a dangerous attack.

(c) This is a wonderfully critical and interesting at this moment, and the advance of the Pawn was the result of mature deliberation.

(d) From this point the Newcastle Committee reckoned on a win for the game without much difficulty by presently sacrificing their Queen. It would certainly have been better play for Glasgow to have moved the Q to her 3d. In that case the game would probably have proceeded thus

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
20.	Q to her 2d	22. Q takes R P	B takes Kt P
21. P to Q Kt 6th	Q R to Kt sq	23. Q takes Q P,

And White has the advantage.

(e) It is pretty obvious that taking the Pawn would be disastrous, on account of White's replying with Kt to Q Kt 3d sq.

(f) All these moves of Black's from the 20th may be considered "forced," as they cannot be varied without immediate loss

(g) White obtain an ample equivalent for their Kt.

(h) This is their best move s

(i) We should have preferred trying the immediate advance of the Pawns on the King's side, although nothing could save the game if White played properly.

(j) Very spirited as a preliminary to the advance of Rook to Q 6th. (r) Some interesting variations arise now, if Black, instead of this move, play 33. Q to K B 4th; ex. gr.—

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
33.	Q to K B 4th	37. Q to Q B 4th (ch)	K to B 3d
34. P queens	Q takes Q R (best)	38. P to Q 8 (ch)	R takes P
35. Q to Q Kt 3d (ch)	K to B 3d	39. P takes P (ch)
36. Q to Q B 3d (ch)	K to B 2d	And wins without much trouble.

(k) At this stage of the conflict the following episode occurred Glasgow's Stet move was rose was, and immediately answered by R to Q 7th. After the lapse of seven days a week, a communication arrived from Glasgow to the effect that the move intended to have been made was "31. Q to B 3d, 'not' 31 R to B 2d." the latter being only a slip of the pen, and requesting to be allowed to recall it; but," it was added, "if you insist upon the moves already on de. we play 32 P to K 5 3d.' Newcastle, in reply, objected to the principle of retracting any move more 32 R to Q Kt sq (which certainly played Black in a still worse position than before). To this Glasgow then rejoined, that their former letter was all a blunder! and that they finally fixed upon by the Club being 3.. K to B 2d, which ought never to have been sent. A. and again hinted a wish to replace the former moves. The Newcastle players were now answered, in substance. "Play what you please, gen s, but proceed with the game" and the result was the re-adoption by Glasgow of 31. R to B 2d, but the abandonment of the after-move of 32. P to K R 3d.

THE NEPAULESE EMBASSY.

The Oriental Company's steamer, Ripon, Captain Moresby, arrived from Alexandria, Malta, and Gibraltar at Southampton, at seven o'clock on Saturday morning last, with the heavy portion of the Indian mail.

Among the passengers were his Excellency General Jung Bahadoor Koorman Ranagee, Prime Minister and Commander-in-Chief of the kingdom of Nepaul, situated on the borders of Thibet His suite consisted of twenty-four persons, amongst whom are his brothers, Colonel Jugget Shumsheree Koorman Ranagee, and Colonel Dheer Shumsheree Koorman Ranagee. The General's visit to this country is as Ambassador Extraordinary from the King of Nepaul to the Queen of England, and he is charged with a complimentary letter and costly presents, consisting of the most valuable Nepaulese productions and manufactures, worth, it is said, nearly a quarter of a million of pounds sterling, from the King to her Majesty. The embassy is accompanied also by Mr. M'Leod, private secretary to his Excellency, and Captain Cavanagh, political agent at Nepaul. The travelling expenses of the embassy, since it left Nepaul, have amounted to nearly £10,000. His Excellency and suite are Buddhists, and, on account of their strict not one respecting their religion, diet, and ablutions, and their dread of being defiled by contact with Europeans, the vessels which contain it, touched by Christians, they were compelled to engage the whole of the fore-cabin and saloons of the Ripon, in which they fitted up a cooking apparatus, which was constructed out of a large square box made of planks and paddle-floats, filled with mud and sand. The fuel they used was charcoal. Their principal food on board was poultry, kids, eggs, rice, and vegetables. They took in themselves, at each port they touched at, what water they used. The features of the Nepaulese partake of the Mongolian and Hindoo caste. Many of the embassy are most pleasing and handsome-looking men, and their dresses are gorgeous beyond description.

The General is a handsome and most intelligent man, about thirty-two years of age, tall, having long jet black hair, like the Red Indians of North America, that has visited this country. He is considered one of the foremost men in India, possesses great power and influence in Northern Hindostan, and has rendered important service to the East India Company. He was treated with great distinction by the Governor-General of India, having been received in full darbar at Calcutta, and saluted with nineteen guns on his arrival and departure from that station. He has been a great and most successful warrior, and is one of the most perfect marksmen ever seen. He used (it is said) repeatedly to fire at and strike a bottle from the mast-head of the Ripon during the voyage from Alexandria. He was sea-sick after he left Egypt, and so till that it was determined to land him at Marseilles, in order that he might reach England through France. He, however, through the kindness and attention of al. on board, got better, and was enabled to enjoy the voyage. He was very fond of all the amusements and games entered into by the passengers during the voyage, and cordially joined in them. He was particularly fond of the music of the Ripon's band, and rewarded the musicians most munificently. His manner was affable and graceful, and appeared more like that of a polished European than an Oriental.

The Ambassador declined to go to any Southampton hotel, unless he could have a cook sent to himself. This arose from religious scruples, lest any food prepared for Christians should be mixed with his own. In consequence of this determination, immediate arrangements were made to enable the Ambassador and suite to sleep and cook their food at the Peninsular offices during their stay in Southampton. During the whole of Saturday afternoon the Hindoo servants were busy conveying their cooking utensils, water-pitchers, bedding, rice, and other kinds of food from the ship to their temporary abode. A tent was formed in a temporary shed, where a Nepaulese cooking apparatus was fitted up. Messengers were employed running all over the town purchasing eggs and vegetables. The Hindoos refused hen-eggs, and preferred the larger eggs of ducks and geese. They took a great fancy for cauliflower, which is very plentiful at Southampton, and purchased an immense quantity of that vegetable. They observed the utmost secrecy in dressing and eating their food. But though so secret about their cooking and eating, they appeared to be quite indifferent as to who saw them at their extraordinary ablutions. They wash after they have finished eating, the washing being a religious ceremony, and not for the purpose of cleanliness. Not one of the Hindoo servants, but some of the chiefs were in the back yard washing themselves almost perpetually. They stripped, with the exception of a slight cloth around their loins, and they would wash themselves all over with about a pint pot of water. The servants are of the lowest cast—some were meanly and miserably clad, many of them without shoes, and their clothing formed a striking contrast to the magnificent costume of the chiefs. His Excellency dined with a few members of his suite on Saturday. After dinner they all commenced smoking. They also rode out in a carriage in the evening.

THE BAND IN KENSINGTON GARDENS.—The band of the Royal Horseguards (Blue) commenced playing in Kensington Gardens for the season on Friday afternoon, the 24 h ult., and will continue (weather permitting) to play on Tuesday and Friday afternoons, from half-past four until half-past six, throughout the summer months.

CURIOUS DISCOVERY.—An antiquarian discovery of an interesting nature has just been made in Kremusch, near the Teplitz, in Bohemia. Some twelve feet from the surface of the earth, a tomb, with its body in it, was found. It contained, besides, a gold chain about a yard and a half long, three gold ear-rings, two gold balls of the size of a walnut, a gold medallion with a cameo representing a Roman Emperor, and an iron pike thickly silvered, on each side of which is engraved a swindser with a hawk on its hand-quarters. The workmanship of the different objects, which evidently belong to the ante-Christian era, is remarkable for its neatness.

Preparations are making in Galway to give a splendid banquet to the directors of the Great Western Railway, who have contributed so liberally towards the experimental trip of the Viceroy steamer across the Atlantic, and Captain Ewing, the commander, before the vessel sails.

VICTORIA COLLEGE, JERSEY.

YESTERDAY week (May 24), the anniversary of her Majesty's natal day, was appropriately fixed for laying the foundation-stone of "Victoria College," an edifice about to be constructed in Jersey, to commemorate the visit of the Queen and the Prince Consort to the island in 1846.

From an early hour in the morning, a white ensign floated from the summit of the spire of St. Mark's Church, and the numerous flag-staffs in the gardens around the town were thickly adorned with flags. In the town itself, the chief thoroughfares—King-street, Queen-street, &c.—were also numerously hung with banners.

Nearly all the principal shops in St. Heller's were closed during the day. The Parade and the College grounds were the centre of attraction, where the Grenadiers and Light Companies of the six regiments of Royal Jersey Militia arrived at noon.

The band and colours, with officers and colour sergeants, of the 4th or town regiment, were attached to the battalion of Grenadiers; and the band and colours, with the officers and colour sergeants of the St. Laurens Regiment, were attached to the battalion of Light Infantry.

On the site of the ceremony were placed seven d lofty poles surmounted with immense flags (the Jersey, the States', the union-jack, the Royal standard, &c., and others with the names of her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the Royal children), and on which, and with globular wreaths of evergreen above them, which were visible miles distant from many parts of the island.

Between twelve and one o'clock, the St. Heller's Field-battery of six guns, followed by one gun of the St. Lawrence Battery, entered the grounds by the Lodge-gate in the Bagatelle-road, and took up a position at the northern extremity.

At about half-past one o'clock the battery commenced firing a salute of 21 guns, in intimation that the States, who had assembled in their Chamber at one o'clock, were about on their way to the foundation-stone. Soon afterwards, a Guard of Honour, of the 26th Regiment, or Cameronians, took up their station on the ground.

At about a quarter before two o'clock, a carriage drove in at the Lodge-gate (over which floated a white ensign), conveying Lady Le Marchant and family. Her Ladyship immediately alighted, and was, with her party, conducted by Lieut.-Colonel Le Marchant over the grounds to the States' Platform, erected close to the site, and on the north of the foundation-stone.

Soon after two o'clock, the band striking up a few bars of the National Anthem announced the approach of his Excellency, who entered the grounds by the Lodge-gate, attended by his staff.

The site of the ceremony was an interesting scene. The Ladies' Platform was filled with fair spectators; the Children's Platform was one immense group of happy little faces, peering from among the many flags in its front; the Militia Grenadier battalion was formed in line on the south of the foundation-trenches, the Light Companies on the west; and the guard of honour of the Cameronians, after his Excellency and his Staff had passed them, had changed their position to the rear, by retiring in double files from the centre, and now formed a new alignment in rear of the States' Platform, on the north, facing the Militia Grenadiers, and filling the way from the Temple to the place of the foundation-stone; the many huge flags overhead flurried around with the wind, and as far as and everywhere the eye could reach were masses of people, moving and thronging to and towards the chief seat of the day's ceremonial.

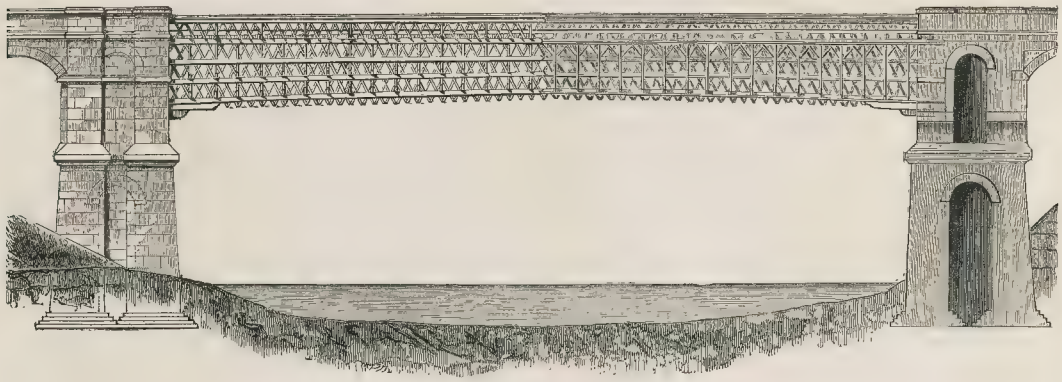
The States' procession having arrived at the site, the Rev. Sir Thomas Le Breton, deposited in the cavity of the under foundation-stone a lead box, containing copies of the States' Acts, the various coins of the present reign, Jersey pieces, shillings, and farthings, and two medals representing the arrival in Jersey of her Majesty and Prince Albert in 1846; also, a copper-plate, with an inscription recording the day's ceremony.

The Very Rev. the Dean then offered up an eloquent and impressive prayer (in the French language). The Lieutenant-Governor and Commander of the Forces of the island, Sir James Henry Reynett, K.C.H., then laid the stone with due formality, and addressed a few words to the Bailiff and Gentlemen of the States, congratulatory of the event.

The children of the schools sang the first and last verses of the National Anthem, and the Dean solemnly blessed the work.

The Militia Artillery then fired three successive salves of seven guns each, which were alternated with three feux de joie from the Militia Infantry. A general salute was then given; and three hearty cheers from all the troops on the ground, led by his Excellency, and to which a great number of the spectators joined, closed the day's well-conducted and immortable ceremonial. Dinners, to from fifteen to twenty thousand persons. Several banquets took place in honour of the day.

The architect of the College is Mr. John Hayward.



NORE VIADUCT, WATERFORD AND KILKENNY RAILWAY.

PARLIAMENTARY PORTRAITS.

GEORGE CORNEWALL LEWIS, ESQ., M.P. FOR HEREFORDSHIRE, UNDER-SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE HOME DEPARTMENT.

THE hon. member for Herefordshire, eldest son of the Right Hon. Sir Thomas Frankland Lewis, Bart., M.P. for Radnor district, and his first wife Harriet, fourth daughter of Sir George Cornewall, Bart., of Moccas Park, Herefordshire, was born in London, in 1806, and received his school education at Eton, which he entered in 1819, and where he was a pupil of Doctor Hawtrey, the present head master.

At Christmas, 1824, he left Eton, and in the following year entered Christ Church, Oxford, where as a student he was one of the few who gave attention to modern languages, and especially German, from which, jointly with Mr. Tufnell, he translated Müller's "Dorians."

In 1828 he took his University degree as a first-class man in classics, and a second-class in mathematics. In the same year he entered the Middle Temple, and in 1831 was called to the Bar, and joined the Oxford circuit. He had studied for the Bar with no less diligence than at the University; but, in consequence of weakness of the chest, was obliged, after his first circuit, to abandon the profession in which, had health allowed him, his success was certain. In 1835, he was placed upon the commission of enquiry into the relief of the poor (on the report of which was founded the Irish Poor-law), and the state of the Church in Ireland; and afterwards drew up an able report on the condition of the Irish in Great Britain. In 1836, he was appointed, jointly with Mr John Austin, a Commissioner to enquire into the Government of the Island of Malta, especially as to its tariff and expenditure. The Commission laid an elaborate report before Parliament; in accordance with the recommendations of which, such reductions were made as rendered the tariff of Malta one of the lightest and least restrictive in the world, and very materially extended its trade; and at the same time the Commissioners succeeded in abolishing the censorship, and establishing a free press in the island.

In January, 1839, Mr Lewis was appointed a Poor-Law Commissioner, and held the office until July, 1847; when, determining to enter Parliament, he resigned his office, and, at the general election, was returned, along with Mr. Joseph Bailey, jun., and Mr. Francis Wegg Prosser, both Conservatives and Protectionists, without opposition, for Herefordshire.

In November, 1847, he was appointed joint secretary of the Board of Control, with Mr. James Wilson, M.P. for Westbury, and early in the following year made his first speech in the House in opposition to a motion for the production of papers in the case of the late deposed Rajah of Satara. In April, 1848, Mr. Lewis was appointed Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, and was succeeded in the secretaryship of the Board of Control by the Hon. John E. Elliot, M.P. for Roxburghshire. In his present office Mr. Lewis has served on the Smithfield Market Commission, appointed in November, 1849, which has just brought up its report; and upon that subject, the Irish Poor-law, and Mr. Disraeli's motion as to local burdens, has spoken in the House. Last year he brought forward a road bill to consolidate the management of highways, and dispose of the question of turnpike trusts and their advances. The bill was not proceeded with last session, and has again been brought forward this year, with reference, however, only to highways. But Mr Lewis is known not only as having served upon commissions and in office: he has also earned some reputation as the translator of "Boeckh's Public Economy of Athens," which, as well as the "Dorians," has become a text-book, and passed through a second edition; and is known as author of an able essay on the "Use and Abuse of Political Terms," published in 1832; on the "Origin and Formation of the Romance Languages," published in 1835; on "Local Disturbances in Ireland, and the Irish Church Question," in 1836; on the "Government of Dependencies," in 1841; and "On the Influences of Authority in Matters of Opinion," in 1849

G. CORNEWALL LEWIS, ESQ., M.P FOR HEREFORDSHIRE.

Mr Lewis married, in 1844, Lady Maria Theresa, relict of F. H. Lister, Esq., daughter of the late Hon. George Villiers, and sister to the present (fourth) Earl of Clarendon.

Our Portrait is from a Photograph by Kilburn.

NORE VIADUCT, WATERFORD AND KILKENNY RAILWAY.

THIS stupendous work, which crosses the river Nore, near Thomastown, on the Waterford and Kilkenny Railway, has just been opened for traffic.

The viaduct is 94 feet in height above the bed of the river, and the span of the arch, which is on the "lattice" principle, but ingeniously strengthened by iron ties and braces, is 200 feet; the width is 26 feet, calculated for a double line of railway. The total length of the work is 420 feet. The stone of which the abutments are built was quarried in the immediate neighbourhood, and is a hard limestone of the same formation as that which produces the celebrated Kilkenny marble.

The principal novelty of the structure is the flat arch of lattice or trellis-work, framed in deals 2½ inches thick by 7 inches wide, any portion of which can be renewed without interfering with the ordinary use of the bridge for traffic.

Prior to the opening of the line, the arch was subjected to various tests, until a train as large as could stand upon it from end to end, and amounting to 146 tons, was passed over at various speeds; when the deflection was found not to exceed 1¼ inch, a result highly satisfactory to the scientific men who were present.

The whole of this work was designed by Captain W. Moorsom, C.E., and has been carried out from his drawings and specifications; Mr. Tarrant, of Kilkenny, being the resident engineer. The arch was erected by Messrs Mallett, of Dublin, under contract for £3300; and the masonry was contracted for by Messrs. Hammond and Murray, of Dublin, for about £5600.

This is the largest work of the kind in the three kingdoms, and its execution, entirely by Irish labour, is creditable to all parties.

DISCOVERY OF A COPPER MINE.—It is stated that a very valuable copper ore mine has just been discovered on the property of Mr. Harrold, close to the city of Limerick.

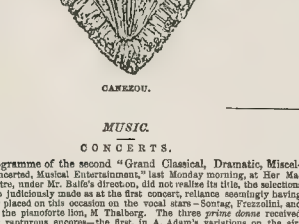
THE LAYING OF THE FOUNDATION-STONE OF VICTORIA COLLEGE, JERSEY.—(SEE PRECEDING PAGE.)

PARIS FASHIONS FOR JUNE.

Ball Dresses are daily more and more overloaded with ruches, bouillons, flowers, and ribbons. They look marvellous y fresh and elegant, but retain this appearance only during the early part of the evening: before the end of a ball, they are crumpled and ha'ddled, so that we miss the elegant simplicity of the dresses of last year. The wreaths have attained enormous proportions: they are formed of large full-blown flowers, and long branches of leaves and of smaller flowers fall on the shoulders. Fruits, such as purple and white grapes, cherries, currants, small apples, and nuts, which used to be mixed up in them at the commencement of the season, have now disappeared, and we congratulate our élégantes for this proof of their good taste.

HOME TOILETTE.

THE unsettled weather has caused ladies to be very undecided with respect to their toilettes; indeed, light and transparent dresses are only just now beginning to be generally worn. For the morning, loose open dresses in pale-coloured cambrics—pink, blue, primrose, or lilac, with mantelets of the same material, are extremely comme il faut. The collars and cuffs worn with these morning toilettes are of fine white cambric, either plain or plaited. For walking in public gardens, barège dresses, plain or figured, are generally adopted; but glacé or damask barèges are the most recherchés. Dresses of shot silk form also charming toilettes. The skirts are less full than those of last year—but, to compensate for it, they are trimmed with graduated flounces up to the waist: as many as five are worn, and they are pinked and stamped at the edges. The bodies are tight, and open in front; a cord connects the two sides of the corsage, and buttons, either of silk, coloured stones or steel, are placed on the centre of this cord. The sleeves are wider at the bottom than at the top, and are trimmed with two small flounces; from beneath them a large lace sleeve falls over the hand, leaving the lower part of the arm uncovered. This form of sleeve is very becoming to the hand. Some unsuccessful attempts have been made to bring square bodies (a la cuirasse) into favour; but this form narrows the chest so much, that few young ladies can make up their minds to adopt this ungraceful fashion.



CANEZOU.

PROMENADE DRESS.

Among the different head-dresses, we have remarked one which is worn by young girls who wear their hair in short full bandeaux. It consists of a wreath of buds of the rose pompon and of lilies of the valley, which forms a point on the forehead, and large bunches over the bandeaux. The wreath Pears rosette is most becoming. For small soirées young people wear on each side of the head bows of ribbon, with long ends which fall on the shoulders.

Mantelets are very slightly altered; they are, however, rather more closely fitted to the figure than last year; they are all made of taffetas glacé, and trimmed with pinked ruches of the same material for young persons, and with wide black lace for married ladies.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

In the Engraving on the right is represented a Ball Costume, with a graceful head-dress, composed of a vine garland with grapes: on each side hangs a bunch of grapes (several little bunches are preferred). The novelty of this year is to be observed in the length of the branches, which come down on the shoulders, mixing with long curls. This head-dress is worn also with bandeaux, but then the garland must be thicker in the lower part. The leaves are of different colours, from the various shades of green to the autumnal red tint. This kind of garland is made also of ivy, with small red balls. The gowns are of taffetas d'Italie—white, rose, or blue (the latter shades are to be glacés de blanc): the body is trimmed with a berthe, made of two rows of blonde; the front ornamented with a puffing of white net laced with satin ribbons the colour of the gown (the ribbons are No 3 or No. 4).

BALL DRESS.

Home Dress.—Morning cap trimmed with Valenciennes and gauze ribbons, cut out in the shape of leaves, muslin guimpe bouillonné, with embroidered entre-deux; the gown en gros d'Ecosse, with facing and trimmings cut out; pagoda sleeves with a white muslin puffing ornamented with a very large bouillonné.

Visiting Dress.—A bonnet made of rose smooth crape, with ornaments of white blonde between each bouillon; Lavaliere mantelet of vert-de-mer taffetas embroidered with silk of the same colour, trimmed with a high effet de soie gaufré the dress made of taffetas Pompadour.

We add to these costumes two patterns, quite new. 1. A Pelerine of embroidered net, trimmed with three rows of point d'Alençon, and ornamented with a large knot of ribbons Hayadère. 2. An Indian muslin Canezou, embroidered and trimmed with malines, open and buttoned up in the back.

The back part of bonnets is round; the shape is not open as last winter, but they continue to be worn with two small volants of ribbons (No. 4) on the brim.

PELERINE.

MUSIC.

CONCERTS.

The programme of the second "Grand Classical, Dramatic, Miscellaneous, Concerted, Musical Entertainment," last Monday morning, at Her Majesty's Theatre, under Mr. Balfe's direction, did not realise its title, the selections were not so judiciously made as at the first concert, reliance seemingly having been chiefly placed on this occasion on the vocal stars—Sontag, Frezzolini, and Hayes, and the pianoforte lion, M Thalberg. The three prime donne received respectively rapturous encores—the first, in A. Adam's variations on the air, "Ah! vous dirai-je," with Rémusat's flute obligato; the second, in a Russian melody "Zolovi," or the Nightingale; and the last, in a new ballad by Balfe, "The Joy of Tears." The Teutonic and the Italian vocalists distinguished themselves in the florid school, and the Hibernian songstress in touching melody. The famed pianist was encored in his variations on the Barcarolle from the "Elisir d'Amore," when he gave a portion of the "Masaniello" fantasia; and the last parts in "Lucrezia Borgia" was performed by him with magnificent effect. The concerted pieces were Mozart's "Te Deum," gleanings from Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," "Le Dieu de Paphos" of Gluck, and the "Sérbate," from Mozart's "Clemenza di Tito." The overtures were Spohr's "Faust," Mendelssohn's "Isles of Fingal," and Beethoven's "Prometheus." The trio for three tenors, from Rossini's "Armida," by Reeves, Calzolari, and Bancardé, and the solo, by Reeves, with chorus, from Purcell's "Come if you dare," were again sung. The remaining items were principally hackneyed morceaux from Italian operas, sung by Mdlle. Parodi, Mdme. Gulliani, Mdlle. Ida Bertrand, Signori Coletti, Belletti, Lorenzo, and the two Lablaches, in addition to the before-named artistes. Except in the instances recorded, the concert went heavily, and the want of proper rehearsal was too frequently manifested. The house was fully and fashionably attended.

Although there were six encores out of twenty pieces in the programme of the Second Morning Concert at the Royal Italian Opera, on the 24th ult., we must again renew our protest against the hackneyed character of the selection. With such orchestral and vocal resources as Covent Garden possesses, a very superior entertainment ought to be provided, rather than the presentation of pieces that have been heard for years in our public concerts. The overtures were Weber's "Oberon," Rossini's "Guillaume Tell," encored with enthusiasm, and Mozart's "Nozze di Figaro." The only relief to the vocal items was the fine playing of Sainton in De Beriot's arrangement of the Tremolo from Beethoven's "Kreutzer Sonata." The two madrigals—Morley's "Now is the month of Maying" and "Down in a flowery vale"—were both encored, being beautifully sung by the chorus. Grisi and Mario were encored in the due from Donizetti's "Roberto Devereux," Tamberlik in the Barcarolle from "Masaniello," and Grisi and Castellan in Mozart's "Il mio tesoro," but declined both the encores of the audience. Mdlle Vera and Massol gave the duo from Spontini's "Vestale," "Les Deux prendront part;" Maralti, Massol, and Zelger the trio from "Guillaume Tell" very effectively; Formes, the air of Mephistopheles from Spohr's "Faust;" Mdlle. Vera and Mdlle de Meric, a duo from Rossini's "Zelmira;" and Castellan, de Meric Zelger, and Tamberlik, a quatuor from "La Donna del Lago."

The Third Concert for the exhibition of the students of the Royal Academy of Music took place on Saturday. The second instrumental was Mr. R. Thomas in the andante and rondo from Mendelssohn's pianoforte concerto, No 1; Mr. Simmons in De Beriot's concerto in D minor, No. 4; Miss Woolf in her own pianoforte concerto, and Miss Yates (piano), Mr. E. Card (flute), Mr. Horton (oboe), Mr. Standen (horn), Mr. Colchester (violin), Mr Aylward (violoncello), and Mr. Mount (contra-basso), in Hummel's septet in D minor. There was more than average ability in many of these displays, particularly in those of Miss Woolf and Mr. Simmons: a MS. overture, "Die Erbin," by Mr. Steggal; a choral song, "Jugan," by Miss Macarone; and a MS. duo by Pollard, sung by Miss Helen Taylor and Miss Owen (this contralto is the star of the Academy), were creditable to the composers. Among the vocalists were Mrs. E. Hancock, Miss J. Bassano, Miss Russell, Miss Browne, Miss C. Fraser, Miss Young, Miss M. Rose, Messrs. Swift, Cockle, Pollard, W. Lyon, &c. Mr. Lucas was the conductor, and Sainton first violin.

The Sacred Harmonic Society terminated its season on the 24th ult., with Handel's "Israel in Egypt," the principal singers being Miss Birch, Miss Eliza Birch, Miss Dolby, Messrs. Sims Reeves, Machin, and Phillips, and conducted by Costa. Halévy, the composer, was present, and expressed his admiration of the execution of the oratorio. The campaign began in November last, with the revival of Handel's "Solomon," succeeded by the customary performances of the "Messiah." Mendelssohn's "Paul" opened the new year, introducing at the concert Miss Catherine Hayes and Herr Formes. Prince Albert honoured the third performance with his presence, and expressed himself much pleased with the ensemble. Handel's "Saul" was the next revival, which was interesting from the experiment made by Costa of having the work performed from Handel's score, without extra accompaniments. Haydn's "Creation" was next in rotation, and then followed a miscellaneous concert, which combined three works: namely, Haydn's third service, Mendelssohn's "Lauda Sion," and Spohr's "Last Judgment." After the usual Passion-week performance of the "Messiah," Mendelssohn's "Elijah" was given three times, and finally "Handel's "Israel in Egypt." The committee of management are entitled to the greatest credit, for having honourably fulfilled every pledge in their prospectus. The striking advantage of having engaged Costa as conductor has been more and more proved this year in the increased improvement in the general execution. We are gratified to learn that the season has been so prosperous, and that the subscription list for the future season is already so promising. The architectural improvements in the Hall, by throwing back the organ, raising the roof, and removing the pillars in front of the great gallery, it is anticipated, will be completed before next season, so that an amelioration in sound and ventilation may be attained. If the means of ingress and egress could also be improved, it would be very desirable.

The Seventh Concert of the Amateur Musical Society took place on Monday night, at the Hanover-square Rooms.——In the morning, Miss and Mr. Horatio Chipp gave a concert in Queen Anne-street.——Mr. Miles and the Misses Smith, the same evening, gave their Scottish entertainment at the Marylebone Institution.

Mr. G. Buckland, on Tuesday, gave his entertainment, "The Market Town," at the Horns, Kennington.

At the fourth meeting of the Beethoven Quartet Society, on Wednesday, the scheme comprised Haydn's No. 79 in D, Mendelssohn's No. 4 in E minor, and Beethoven's No 2 in F, with Beethoven's Sonata in C sharp minor. The executants were Ernst, Cooper, Hill, Rousse.ot, and Lindsay Sloper.

The London Sacred Harmonic Society performed, at Exeter-Hall, on Friday, Haydn's "Creation;" conducted by Mr. Surman, with Miss C. Hayes, Mrs. Temple, Miss Kent, Messrs. Lockey and Lawler, chief vocalists; Mr. H. Blagrove, leader; and Mr. T. Jolley, organist.

The principal items of attraction in the programme of the annual concert of Mr. Brinley Richards, the clever composer and accomplished pianist, at the Hanover Rooms, comprised a prelude and fugue of Bach, and a piece by Handel, executed by Mr. Richards; Mr. C. Macfarren's quintet, played by Messrs. Richards, Cooper, Hill, Mount, and Pratt; Mr. Richards' own compositions, a nocturne and scherzo; a duo by Osborne and De Beriot for piano and violin, played with Mr. Cooper; Beethoven's Concertante for two pianofortes on Schubert's themes, executed by Messrs. Benedict and Richards; and a violoncello solo by Piatti. The vocalists were Mdme Macfarren, Miss Messent, Miss Owen, Miss Sassano, Miss Birch, Miss Catherine Hayes, Messrs. Sims Reeves, Harrison, Drayton, W. H. Seguin, and Signor Marchesi. Messrs. Benedict and Lindsay Sloper were the conductors of this concert, which was under the patronage of the Duke of Cambridge and the Duke of Newcastle. Mr. Richards is one of the young rising composers of the day of whom much may be anticipated.

A grand-daughter of the well-known Dr. Busby, Miss Busby, a pianiste, made her first appearance last Wednesday, at the Beethoven Rooms, and was cordially received. Notwithstanding her timidity, she displayed considerable powers of execution, indicative of her future successful career. She was assisted by Herr Deichmann, the violinist, and Signor Piatti, the violoncellist; and Madame Nottes, the German vocalist; and Herr Stigelli. Herr Deichmann has not been heard so often as could be desired since his début two years since. Amidst the great influx of gifted artists, his talents deserve an honourable position. Herr Stigelli was somewhat too boisterous for a small room; he should have recollected that he was not in Exeter Hall. As a general rule, foreign singers had better avoid English songs, or compositions with English words.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—The seventh Philharmonic Concert will take place on Monday, at which M. Allard, the celebrated violinist will make his début.——Mr. Laurent's first concert will be given on Monday morning, at the Knightsbridge Barracks.——A concert will take place at the Highbury Assembly Room.——Mdlle. Conion's morning concert will be given also on Monday, and Mr. Barker's concert.——On Tuesday will be the sixth meeting of the Musical Union and Mr. Kühe's concert.——On Wednesday the annual concert of the Royal Society of Female Musicians will take place, with a powerful array of talent, vocal and instrumental.——The thirteenth of the London Wednesday Concerts will take place on the 5th, with Angri and Dreyschock.——On Thursday Mr. R. Blagrove's second concertina concert and Mr W. S. Bennett's pianoforte matinée.——On Friday morning will be the matinées of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Seguin, Giulio Regondi, and Herr Gerard Brese.——In the evening Mendelssohn's "Paul" will be performed by the Sacred Harmonic Society, conducted by Costa, in aid of the funds of the King's College Hospital endowment fund.——In addition to Mendelssohn's "Elolips Colemene," Beethoven's pianoforte concerto fantasia, will be presented at Mrs. Anderson's morning concert at the Royal Italian Opera, a work that has not been heard for some time.——This morning (Saturday) Mdme. Gury will have a concert.——The young composer from whom so much is anticipated in Paris is M. Gounaud: he has received a commission from the Grand Opera to write an opera for Mdme. Viardot, the libretto of which will be by M. Emile Augier, author of the comedy of "Gabrielle." We have reason to confirm the anticipations of the Athenæum, that the advent of M. Gounaud is that of a musical genius of the highest promise.——Lebrun's with signal success.——A niece (Spohr (Mdlle. Rosalie Spohr) is much praised by the German press as a harp player. Spohr, who is quite recovered from his accident, has just composed his ninth symphony, called "The Seasons."——There are 191 singing societies in the canton of Berne, composed of 3328 singers. The festivals of the Confederation will take place at Lucerne on the 28th and 29th of July.——Stockholm letters of the 14th ult. state that Jenny Lind was expected in that capital, having accepted the principal part in a new opera, which has just been written by M. Isidore Juin, the music by M Pierre Hartmann, and which will be mounted at the Grand Theatre, on the occasion of the approaching celebration of the marriage of the Prince Royal with the Princess Louisa of the Netherlands. If this correspondence is to be credited—we find it in the Revue et Gazette Musicale of Paris—the return of the Swedish Nightingale to the stage is then resolved upon: she leaves for the United States, with Benedict and Belletti, in formances of amateurs, that at the house of Sir George Clerk, when selections from Rossini's "Zora" ("Moïse") were performed; and a very creditable execution of Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," at the residence of Mr. Charles Salaman.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

On Saturday, Madame Frezzolini still further established herself in the favour of the public by her performance of Amina, in "L'Elisir d'Amore." Madame Frezzolini, whose fine figure and majestic bearing were so much admired in Lucrezia, appeared, if possible, to more advantage in the garb of the sprightly village girl. There is a coquettish espiéglerie about her acting, and a natural simplicity, which at once interest an audience. In the first scene of the "Elisir," the shy manner in which she sits down, and pretends to read her book, whilst she keeps her eye on her forsaken lover, like a cat on the movements of a mouse, is a masterpiece of dramatic art; and no one would imagine the pretty fersse to be the same who enacted the haughty consort of the Duke of Ferrara. Her singing was worthy of her acting: she possesses that eminent quality, so rare even with Italian singers, of singing the words as well as the notes, which she utters fully and clearly in her beautiful Roman accent, conveying their expression to the ear of her spectators by the inflections of her voice

Madame Frezzolini was warmly applauded after each morceau, and rewarded with an encore after the barcarolle, and likewise after her last duo with Nemorino, which she concluded with a shake that rang with ball-like tone. However, her chief triumph was "Prendi sai libero," in which she concentrates all her powers of dramat c expression, and exhibits all the resources of her musical science. The reception of this feat was in the highest degree triumphant. Madame Frezzolini was most ably seconded by her fellow-artists

Signor Calzolari appeared, for the first time in this country, as Nemorino. His singing was beautiful, and h s acting full of truth and pathos. He won a well-deserved encore after the "Una furtiva lagrima," which has seldom been sung with greater intensity of feeling.

Labiache is well known to be the only Dulcamara in existence; of him, therefore, we need say nothing but that he was himself—the highest praise.

Beletti was a most excellent Belcore, and was much applauded. We would recommend to him, however, to learn how to command his troops in English, or to teach them French; for her Majesty's Grenadier Guards, who for the night had enlisted into the lyrical service, upon being ordered in French to shoulder arms, presented them, amidst the roars of laughter of the crowded house

On Tuesday the "Elisir" was repeated, with the same success. Frezzolini, at the conclusion of the opera, experiencing a still warmer reception than on the first night.

Thursday was the longest night of the season—the whole of "Sonnambula," an act of the "Puritani," another of "Guglielmo Tell;" with "Thea," the "Pas Styrien," and "Les Graces." The house was crowded.

However, the most important circumstance as regards Her Majesty's Theatre is, that "La ten pesta" will be given next week—if not on Tuesday, certainly on Thursday. M Halévy and M. Scribe have spent eight or ten hours at the theatre every day since last Monday. Sontag, Labiache, Coletti, and Parodi, Barocchi, and Gutbert à Hayes, Lorenzo, Ida Bertrand, F. Labiache, and Carlotta Grisi, form the unprecedented cast, and have all rehearsed their parts. The scenery and the mise en scène have since been perfected, under the eye of M. Scribe. The music apart, the prologue, which is descriptive of a tempest, is full of the sweetest melodies. The choruses have the massiveness of the German school; the cantilenas, the broad, elegant phrasing of the Italian; whist a ballad or romanza is brought in occasionally, in compliment to the public; and from the delicate touches of the sweetest airs associated with the English poem is interwoven in the score for the part of Ariel The finishing to the cast of the opera:—Alfonso (King of Naples), Lorenzo; Prospero (Duke of Milan), Coletti; Antonio (his brother), F. Labiache; (Pro ce of Naples), Bamoréd, Sebastiano, Molle. Parodi; Trinculo, Ida Bertrand; Spirit of the Air, Catherine Hayes; Ariele, Carlotta Grisi; Caliban, Labiache; Miranda, Madame Sontag.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Meyerbeer's "Roberto il Diavolo," repeated on Saturday and Tuesday, has attracted crowded and fashionable houses Since the first performance, the opera plays more closely, and the five acts being now arranged into three, without the exclusion of a single piece of music of importance, the beauties of it is mu h ty lyric production seem to be thoroughly appreciated.

On Thursday, for the extra-night, a combined entertainment was presented, of unprecedented attraction. Verdi's "Nabucco," under the title of "Anato," was performed for the first time at this establishment; the second act of Donizetti's "Lucrezia Borgia," with Grisi, Mdlle. de Meric, Tamburini, Mei, and Mario, followed; and this "lowed" finished by Fanny Cerrito and the third act of Rossini's "Z ra," which included the divertissement, with Louise Taglioni, supported by Madame Castellan, Mdlle Vera, Lavia Zelzer, Tamburini, Tagliafico, and Tamberlik. "Anato" is familiar to the operatic world here under the title of "Nino," produced in 1846, at Her Majesty's Theatre, the libretto being charged from "Nabucco," the biblical subject of "Nebuchadnezzar" being objectionable. "Anato," like the "Moïse in Egitto" (Zora) of Rossini, is an operatic oratorio It introduced Moreni for the first time this season, and has been mounted expressly for him; Nabucco, or Anato, being considered in Italy, Spain, and France, where he has played it, as his histrionic masterpiece. Tamberlik was Ismaël (Darley); Tagliafico, the High Priest Grodenzio (Judonia); Fmena (daughter of Anato), Mdlle Vera; and Abigaile, Madame Castellan: Mdlle. Corti, and Signori Soldi and Gregorio, playing the secondary parts. The opera was performed according to the original score (four acts), and the prayer being heard here for the first time It was magnificently mounted. The entrance of Anato, in grand procession, on horseback, with full military band, the troops and the populace, is a gorgeous spectacle. Moreni as Anato confirmed his reputation as one of the gr atest lyric tragedians now known. His scene of madness, with the bursts of frantic rage subsiding into faintness, was terribly real, and brought down thunders of applause. He was recalled, indeed, at the end of every act, and encored in the duo with Abigaile, "Oh! di qual orta," in which he was well seconded by Mdlle. Castellan, who sang and acted her part remarkably well. Mademoiselle Vera rendered Fmena interesting. Tagliafico was highly impressive; and Tamberlik, although there is so little to do, electrified the hou e by his C from the chest, in the finale. The choral singing was exquisitely beautiful: the "Va pensiero" rivalled in effect the "Masaniello" prayer. The house was quite crowed.

ADELPHI.

A new piece, entitled "Jack in the Green," has been produced here with much success. It is a drama of the extravagant cast, pointed by several hits of vulgar characters thrown into the technical situations, and affording to Wright and Bedford opportunity for their "peculiarities." The former is, in the present vehicle for fun, a hero in the "coal and tater business," envious of high life and ambitious of a social position for himself and the dearest of his heart. His name is Bob Bryantone!—a rather aristocratic name—and he is a foundling. Persuaded by one Mr. Durham (Mr. Boyce), not only of the possibility but of the actuality of his having descended from the aristocracy, Bob falls in love also the ten d r daughter of a sweep (Miss Ellen Chapin), who loves him, and on the 1st of May would have him play the part of Damon to her Phyllis in the rural street exhibition. Durham resolves to make sport of the nonsense; and, accordingly, gets him invited to a genteel party, where full soon the latter finds himself out of his element, and commits all manner of absurdities, excellently exaggerated by Mr. Wright. To escape from the ridicule of some practical jokes incurred, Bob is right willing to return to his quondam acquaintance, and partake in their humbler cares and sports, undertaking, at a moment's notice, the responsible and arduous rôle of Jack-in-the-Green. This little drama depends, of course, for its drollery, which be a characteristic, entitles it to critical indulgence, and ensures it popular approbation.

ST. JAMES'S

M de Musset is the star in the ascendant at this theatre. After his vaudeville of "Louison," on Monday, a proverbe proceedings from the same pen, entitled "Il Faut qu'une Porte soit Ouverte ou Fermée," was acted. This is a piece more likely to be popular than his "Louison." It is, however, of that exceeding delicacy that any attempt to give its plot would be absurd. Such a drama is to be enjoyed only in representation. The "Louison," indeed, labours under the same difficulty of excessive refinement Pieces of this kind depend entirely upon the sentiment, the fl ureet shades of which are lost in description, but delight in action. Praise must be rendered to the exquisite acting of M. Lafont in Le Comte, and to Mdlle. Nathalie in La Marquise Their performance commanded the most profound attention from an audience more than usually numerous.

SADLER'S WELLS closed on Friday week.——The engagement of Mrs. Glover at the NEW STRAND draws to a c se, and is announced to terminate in a few days. On Monday, the fair veteran performed in the "Clandestine Marriage." The best wishes of the public will follow her into private life.——On Tuesday, at the MARYLEBONE, Mr Brooke performed the part of Wulsem Tell in Mr Sheridan Knowles's play, and acted with more vigour, and was in better voice, than in his preceding efforts.

MR. ALBERT SMITH'S "OVERLAND MAIL."

On Tuesday evening Mr. Albert Smith presented us here with the first rehearsal of a new "amusement," which, both entertaining and instructive, is of a composite character. It was a narrative lecture of his late experiences during his flying journey to the East, illustrated with panoramic scenery, painted beautifully by Mr William Beverley, and interspersed with comic songs and humorous representations of his fellow-travellers. Before attempting these, Mr. Smith apologised for the badness of his voice and the rigid limitation of his powers. The excuse, however, proved needless, both the singing and the acting being extraordinary for an amateur, and even for the practised artiste remarkable, in tone, force, and breadth of execution. It can not be expected that we should follow Mr. Smith from Boulogne to Suez, and thence through the desert to Cairo and Malta. Neither may we rob him of his dialogues, his descriptions, or his songs, which would be to anticipate next Monday's delivery of the same lecture, and thereby deprive its matter of novelty. We regret, better the rights of literary property, and are content with stating that many of his anecdotes are humorous, some of his jests piquant, a few of his remarks salient if not novel, and most of his songs amusing, sometimes with a dash of the pathetic, and always sufficiently characteristic. The new nautical polnts were his "Fast man" and his "Tin-kettle player"—the last so whimsical that it was encored.

The second part of the lecture, describing occurrences from Atfeh to Boulogne, was very miscellaneous; but the rea lsation of the diligence miseries at the Avignon Railway, and of the humours of the traveller and the postillon, while the diligences were being changed, was perfect.

Verily, a pleasanter evening may be spent in the company of Mr. Albert Smith, who, if not very instructive, is very entertaining in his "Entertainment," in which he shows a great variety of accomplishments seldom united in one individual. The audience was numerous and fashionable, and rewarded the lecturer with frequent applause.

MEDAL TO MR. BARRY, R.A.—On Monday evening the meeting of the Royal Institute of British Architects was pr sided over by the Earl de Grey, who had fixed on that evening for the purpose of presenting to Mr Barry, R A., the Gold Medal g ven by her Majesty, which was illustrated about a year and a half ago; and in the address which preceded the donation, his Lordship took occ sion to draw a parallel between the talents of Sir C. Wren, which once pied the highest posts in building St. Paul's, and those of Mr. Barry, whose pile of the houses of Parliament has been only half that time in progre

The Harrovians have appointed their f stival for the present year to take place at the Thatched House, on Saturday, the 15th of June. Lord Jocelyn will take his chair.

COUNTRY NEWS.

DESTRUCTIVE THUNDER-STORM AND LOSS OF LIFE.—A violent storm of thunder and lightning visited the country on Thursday week. The metropolis escaped (though, singularly enough, it approached within a mile of the out-skirts), but scarcely any portion of the provinces escaped its fury, from Edinburgh, Chelmsford, Norwich, Leicester, Bangor, and Hastings, we learn th t, for several days previous, the weather was oppressively hot, scarcely any wind being perceptible. Between 11 and 12 o'clock on Thursday heavy black clouds spread over the whole of the horizon, which sent forth torrents of rain, and a storm of lightning and thunder followed, which lasted many hours. At Buntingford, in Hertfordshire, the electric fluid struck the farming premises of Mr. Rolls, destroying the whole of them. A similar calamity happened at Bockley, near Oxford; at Sheard, in Westmoreland; at Bilston, in South Wales; at Rochford, in East Essex; and also at Penrith and Dacre, near Carlisle. The havoc in the whole amounted to the destruction of 10 barns, 38 stacks of various descriptions of grain, 40 outbuildings, and numerous cottages. At Dacre, near Carlisle, the parish church was struck, and sustained much damage. A funeral was going on at the time, and the mourners had a narrow escape Several horned cattle near the village were struck dead. At Tunstall, in the county Staffordshire, a house was demolished, and one of the inmates was killed: a vivid stream of lightning struck the chimney, and passed into the house, and killed the wife of the occupier. At Mr. Hartnoll's, of Westfield House, near Bowness, Mrs Harrison and the servant man were milking the cows, when the electric fluid struck the man dead on the spot, killing four cows at the same same time. The wind from which Mr Harrison was sitting was literally rent in two, and she was thrown to a great distance. Strange to say, not the slightest mark of violence was to be found upon either the man or the cattle. The church at St Chad, Chesthunt-road, sustained much injury. A meteoric ball of fire struck the east end of the large angular turret which crowns the belfry staircase on the south west corner of the tower. The weathercock was struck, and partly melted from the iron spike which transfixes it; and the turret itself was laid open to the roof. The electric fluid, which struck the cot a quantity of stones in passing between the iron clamps which held them together. About eleven o'ck a terrific peal was heard at Merthyr. At the time a man was coming from a field with a horse and cart, when a flash of light ning suddenly dashed his hat from his head, and scorched the whole surface of his body At Dowlais, five persons—four women and one man—were pr ceeding home together, when a flash of lightning struck the group down in one blackened mass. It was found that one woman was dead, and the others so badly burned that it is feared they cannot recover On the North Staffordshire Railway, at Stoke, all the bells in the belfry were set ringing, and shortly afterwards loud peals of thunder followed. At Burton, Uttoxeter, Crewe, Macclesfield, and Churnet Valley, much damage was done.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT AND LOSS OF LIFE.—Several families resident in Manchester have been thrown into great distress by a most painful and fatal occurrence at Morecambe Bay. A large party of ladies and gentlemen had left Manchester to spend t e Whitsuntide holidays at a watering place in the neighbourhood of Morecambe Bay. On Friday morning a bathing party was formed to cross the water from Silverdale to Grange, consisting of five gentlemen, five ladies, and two men servants. The gentlemen were Mr. John Morris, senior, Manchester; Mr. Morris, his son and bullding partner; and Mr. Norris, jun., his son; Mr. Alfred Coates (son of Mr. Coates, late cotton merchant, and now resident in Fy mouth-grove), and Mr. Porter, also of Manchester. In the afternoon, Mr. M rris and Mr. Norris, sen., returned with the ladies to Silverdale, crossing the sands at low water in a cart, but the gentlemen determined to wait till the tide served in the evening, and recross the bay in the boat. It would be high-water at eleven o'clock, and it is supposed that the gentlemen attempted to cross the water at that time. Their friends, leaving them at Silverdale, remained in painful suspense till the following morning, when the dreadful reality became known by the di covery of the dead bodies of Mr. Coates, Mr. North, jun., and Mr. Porter, by a person who was fishing on the spot; and the position in which they lay on the sands disclosed how desperate had been the struggle for life which they had made. In their death agony, each had grasped the other, and they were all cast upon the sands in a mass. An inquest was held on Monday evening, at Hest Bank Hotel, before Mr. Gardner, coroner, when two men named Ashburn and Fisher confessed that they heard on Friday evening a cry for help proceeding some parties seemingly in distress, and could even distinguish the words "Lost, lost!" and yet they neither stirred hand nor foot to obtain assistance, but excused themselves on the ground that it was too late at the time to do so! The verdict was simply "Accidental death."

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE ARCTIC EXPEDITION.—An account of the charge for the purchase, repair, and outfit of the vessels lately fitted out for the Arctic Expedition has just been printed by order of the House of Commons. It appears that the charge incurred on account of Captain Austin's expedition, which includes the Resolute and Assistance with the Pioneer and Intrepid tenders, was £114,515 11s. 6d. The charge for the Arctic expedition under Sir John Franklin amount to £15,170, which includes the purchase-money (£4400) of the Lady Franklin and Sophia. The wages of the seamen are calculated up to the 31st of March, 1851.

LAUNCH OF THE "WASP" SLOOP AT DEPTFORD.—This fine vessel was commenced on the 28th of October, 1847, at Deptford Dockyard, and is a sister vessel to the Archer. Tuesday being appointed for launching her, a number of spectators assembled to witness the interesting ceremony. Shortly after three o'clock P.M., amidst the cheers of th se present. Her burthen in tons, old measurement, is 973 70-94; new measurement, 752 116. Light draught of water forward, 12 feet 6 inches; aft, 14 feet 6 inches. With which she has been constructed for a screw propeller, and will be fitted, at Woolwich, with engines of 100 horse power.

MILITARY SAVINGS-BANKS.—The total balance due by the public on the 31st of March, 1848, to the military savings-banks was £135,292 8s. 10d., viz. £112,257 to the cavalry and infantry, and £22 764 to the Ordnance corps. The amount of sums withdrawn by depositors during the year was £48,661 6s 8d. The number of depositors on the 15th March, 1849 was 6747; viz. 5756 cavalry and infantry, and 991 Ordnance corps. The dividends received on the savings-banks fund account up to the 8th of January, 1850, were £8038 4s. 1d. The total amount of the fund in the hands of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt on the 14th of March, 1850, was £99,666.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—On Tuesday evening, the president of the institution, Mr. W. Cubitt, gave his annual conversazione at the society's house, in Great George-street. The suite of rooms, and the theatre, presented a very interesting assemblage of models of new inventions, in addition to a variety of works of art upon the walls and tables; altogether an unusually attractive display. The apartments were crowded throughout the evening by company, including the most eminent professors of science, and many distinguished patrons of art, literature, and scientific inquiry. The arrangements, under the able superintendance of Mr. C. Manby, the secretary to the institution, gave universal satisfaction.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Notwithstanding the industrious attempts to alarm the public upon the French question, Consols have not varied more than one per cent, the daily marked a rise in price. Opening on Monday at 96 to ⅞, an improvement of ¼ per cent. was well maintained on Tuesday; and, although the attractions of the Derby caused a thin attendance of the public, the tone of the market at the time was again improved on Thursday to 96¾, when a report that the Russian Minister had been recalled caused a decline to 96⅜; ultimately, however, improving to 96⅞. Exchequer Bills are in demand, the June bills, being advertised for the 8th of that month, are now at par to 1s. premium, buyers having been disappointed in the new bills issued in exchange on the 14th. Consols will close for the dividends on the 13th of June. At the termination of business, prices were—for Bank Stock, 207; Reduced, 96⅞; Three per Cent Consols, 96⅞; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, Annuities, 97; Long Annuities, to expire Jan., 1860, 8 3 16; Ditto, 30 years Oct. 10, 1859, 8 ; Ditto, 30 years, Jan. 5, 1860, 8; India Bonds, £1000, 50 p; Ditto, under £1000, 49 p; Bank Stock for Account, 207; Consols for Account, 96⅞; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 68 p; £800, June, 68 p; Small, June, 68 p.

The only alteration worthy of record in the Foreign Market is in Mexican and Peruvian. The payment in the hands of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt on the 14th of March, 1850, was £99,666.

Mexican, which opened on Monday at 26 to ½, an improvement of ¼ per cent. was well maintained on Tuesday; and, although the attractions of the Derby caused a thin attendance of the public, the tone of the market at the time was again improved on Thursday to 26¾, when a report that the Russian Minister had been recalled caused a decline to 26⅜; ultimately, however, improving to 26¾. Exchequer Bills are in demand, the June bills, being advertised for the 8th of that month, are now at par to 1s. premium, buyers having been disappointed in the new bills issued in exchange on the 14th. Consols will close for the dividends on the 13th of June. At the termination of business, prices were—for Bank Stock, 207; Reduced, 96⅞; Three per Cent Consols, 96⅞; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, Annuities, 97; Long Annuities, to expire Jan., 1860, 8 3 16; Ditto, 30 years Oct. 10, 1859, 8 ; Ditto, 30 years, Jan. 5, 1860, 8; India Bonds, £1000, 50 p; Ditto, under £1000, 49 p; Bank Stock for Account, 207; Consols for Account, 96⅞; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 68 p; £800, June, 68 p; Small, June, 68 p.

The only alteration worthy of record in the Foreign Market is in Mexican and Peruvian. The payment in the hands of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt on the 14th of March, 1850, was £99,666.

Shares have displayed a decided improvement this week, if the list of prices be a criterion. It is, however, not so The public are not dealers, and the rises and declines are mere effects of speculation. A bond fide sale cannot be made at the prices marked, except in a few lines. The market on Thursday experienced a reaction, as the settling progressed, and will probably advance again when completed. This is a decisive proof of the speculative character of quotations, which, at closing, are—Aberdeen, 74; Bristol and Exeter, Thirds, 12 dis; Buckinghamshire, 17¼; Caledonian, 8¾; Eastern Counties, 7⅝; Ditto, Northern and Eastern, Five per Cent, 58; Great Northern, 73; Ditto, Five per Cent, Preference, 106; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), 34; Great Western, 86; Hull and Selby, 98; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 38¾; Lancashire and Yorkshire, Fifths, 2; Lancashire and Yorkshire, Thirds, 7⅛; London and Blackwall, 4; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 81; London and Greenwich, 2; London and North-Western, 105; Ditto, New Quarters, 11⅝; Ditto, Fifths, 12; Ditto, £10 (M. and B.) C., 1; London and South-Western, 61; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, New £10 Pref., 7; Midland, 39¼; Do. £50 Sh., 3; Do. Consolid Bristol and Birm., Six per Cent., 119; N. Brit. Pref., 5; N Staffsh. 7; Oxfor , Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 9; Readi g, Guildford, and Rel ate, 15; Kyrsten and Hitchin 5; Ditto, Shepreth Extens on, 4; Shropshire Union, 2; Sout-Eastern, 14; Ditto, Rastcrred, No 4, 4; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 13; Ditto, New Castle Extension, 8; Ditto, G.N.E., Preference, 1; York and N rth Midland, 16; Dutch Rhenish, 2; Ditto Hague Perpendular, 1; Northern o France, 13; Orleans and Bordeaux, 2; Paris and Rouen, 21; Rouen and Havre, 8.

Rather a large business was doing in Consols on Friday, and prices further improved ¼ per cent. The Three per Cents, Money and the Account, were done at 96⅞; and the Three per Cents Reduced 96⅞. India Bonds, 50s. and Exchequer Bills, 66s to 68s pm. There was more doing in Foreign Bonds and Railway Shares, the quotations of which had an upward tendency.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—Since Monday the arrivals of English wheat up to our market, coastwise, have not exceeded 1040 quarters, almost wholly from Essex and Kent. By land carriage they have been trifling. The show of samples to-day was small; nevertheless, owing to the continued imports from abroad, the absence of the principal dealers, and the favourable accounts respecting the growing crops, the demand for all kinds of wheat of home produce was dull, and to effect sales rather lower rates must have been accepted. For m abroad 4,96 quarters of wheat have come to hand. Selected parcels were mostly be d at full rates of currency in the middling and inferior kinds as little was doing that prices were almost nominal. No English barley was in market, and the supply of foreign was trifling. All kind- moved off slowly, at barely late rates The sale for malt was very inactive, but we have no change to notice in value. In oats comparatively little business was transacted. Beans per bushel were unaltered. Peas, Indian corn, and flour were very dull ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 1040 quarters; barley, 220; malt, 3050; oats, 410; flour, 1920. Foreign: Wheat, 4930 barley, 2881; malt, 1110; flour, 850.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 32s to 42s; ditto, white, 40s to 46s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 32s to 40s; ditto, white, 40s to 46s; grinding barley, 19s to 21s; distilling ditto, 23s to 25s; malting ditto 26s to 27s. Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 46s to 48s; Ware ditto, 48s to 52s; Kingston and Ware, 48s to 52s; Chevalier, 53s to 54s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 15s to 18s; potato ditto, 17s to 20s: Tougtal and Cork, black, 14s to 16s, ditto, white, 16s to 18s; fresh beans, new, 30s to 36s, ditto, old, 34s to 36s, grey peas, 28s to 30s. ——Foreign: Wheat, 34s to 36s; white, 38s to 44s, bullers, 35s to 37s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 37s to 37s; Suffolk, 27s to 32s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 27s to 32s, per 280 lbs.—Foreign. Danzig, red wheat, 4 to —s; white, 4 to —s; barley, 2 to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 20s to 25s per barrel Canada, 20s to 23s per barrel

Seeds. Generally speaking, our market is heavy, and, in some instances, the quotations are a shade lower.

Liverpool Corn and Provisions. Wheat, 40s 7d; barley, 22s 10d; oats, 16s 3d, rye, 32s 4d; beans, 36s 4d; peas, 35s 8d

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 38s 4d; barley, 27s 4d; oats, 15s 8d; rye, 31s 0d; beans, 34s 0d; peas, 35s 0d

Duties on Foreign Corn. Wheat, 1s 0d; barley, 1s 0d; oats, 1s 0d; rye, 1s 0d; beans, 1s 0d; peas, 1s 0d

Tea The market being well supplied, the demand for all kinds of tea is heavy, at barely stationary prices. Common sound Congou, 10½d to 11d; fine, 11½d to 12½d per lb. A few parcels have been disposed of at public sale. The stock is now 6,000 000 lb

Sugar The demand for raw sugar is tolerably active, and rather large parcels have changed hands at full prices. Low grades of grocery goods are scarce.—brown lumps at 49s 6d: and good to fine grocery, 50s to 54s per cwt. No change in refined

Coffee At the public sale on Friday morning a healthy party was formed to cross the water from Silverdale to Grange, consisting of five gentlemen, five ladies, and two men servants. The gentlemen were Mr. John Morris, senior, Manchester; Mr. North, sen., and bullding partner; and Mr. Norris, jun., his son; Mr. Alfred Coates (son of Mr. Coates, late cotton merchant, and now resident in Fy mouth-grove), and Mr. Porter, also of Manchester. In the afternoon, Mr. M rris and Mr. Norris, sen., returned with the ladies to Silverdale, crossing the sands at low water in a cart, but the gentlemen determined to wait till the tide served in the evening, and recross the bay in the boat. It would be high-water at eleven o'clock, and it is supposed that the gentlemen attempted to cross the water at that time. Their friends, leaving them at Silverdale, remained in painful suspense till the following morning, when the dreadful reality became known by the di covery of the dead bodies of Mr. Coates, Mr. North, jun., and Mr. Porter, by a person who was fishing on the spot; and the position in which they lay on the sands disclosed how desperate had been the struggle for life which they had made. In their death agony, each had grasped the other, and they were all cast upon the sands in a mass. An inquest was held on Monday evening, at Hest Bank Hotel, before Mr. Gardner, coroner, when two men named Ashburn and Fisher confessed that they heard on Friday evening a cry for help proceeding some parties seemingly in distress, and could even distinguish the words "Lost, lost!" and yet they neither stirred hand nor foot to obtain assistance, but excused themselves on the ground that it was too late at the time to do so! The verdict was simply "Accidental death."

Cocoa The market generally is very inactive, at drooping prices.

Rice Notwithstanding the check of former days, the demand rather refuses to sell except at full prices, hence, very little business is doing. Fine Jamaica rum commands extreme rates; but other qualities, including the low sorts, are extremely neglected.

Hay and Straw Monday hay, £2 2s to £3 10s; clover ditto, £3 0s to £4 7s; and straw, £1 2s to £1 6s per load.

Wool — By private contract, a full average amount of business is doing, and the quotations are well supported.

Potatoes.—Fine qualities are steady, at from 100s to 160s per ton. Inferior parcels of foreign the supply of which is good—are rather lower

Coals (Friday).—Tanfield Moor, 18s 9d; Biddell, 14s; Kelloe, 15s 3d, Whitworth, 12s 9d; Hartley, 12s 9d; Sidney's Hartley, 12s 6d per ton

Meat (Friday).—Although we have received 1,200 head from the plantations are to the effect that the bites is looking very hea thy. Our market is, therefore, exceedingly inactive, and last week's prices are with difficulty supported

ADVERTISEMENTS.

FRENCH PLAYS, ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—ON MONDAY EVENING will be revived LES DEMOISELLES DE ST CYR, in which M Regnier, Mdlle. Nathalie, and M Lef will appear. ON TUESDAY NEXT JUNE 4 M. REGNIER'S BENEFIT, and the Last Night but Three of his Performances, on which occasion (pending the arrangements of the eminent actor in London) will be represented for that night only, M Scribe's celebrated comedy of LA CAMARADERIE, with other Entertainments, in which Mdlle. Lafont and Mons. Lafont will appear.  The favourite comedie of LE MARI A LA CAMPAGNE will be repeated previous to M. Regnier's departure.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. BATTY.—ON TUESDAY, JUNE 4th, 1850, the performances will commence at Seven o'clock, with the admired Equestrian Drama, entitled the ARMY AND NAVY, or, the Battle of Cabul, and British Supremacy in India. Introducing the beautiful steed of Horses, Camel, Zebra, Indian cattle, host of sacred kine, and a Military Brass Band.—To be succeeded by a most remarkable series of Equestrian and Gymnastic Wonders in the Arena supported by the first artistes in Europe. To conclude with a Lancashire Fores. Box office open from Eleven till Four. Private Boxes to let.

SCOTTISH FETE.—In consequence of her Majesty's Drawing-room having been fixed for the 26th of June, the GRAND COMPETITION in Highland Park is POSTPONED until MONDAY, the 1st and TUESDAY, the 2nd of July, when it will take place under the chief direction of the High-land Society of which his Royal Highness Prince Albert is the head, and the Scottish Society, to which the most noble the Marquis of Breadalbane is President. A Grand Banquet will take place on Wednesday, the 3rd, when the Prizes will be awarded, putting the Games to a close by the hammer, causing the cabers, racing, Highland dancing, performances on the great bagpipe, Highland bagpipe, and all presented to the successful competitors.

JOHN GOUCHER, Hon. Sec.

Hanover-park, Peckham.

MR. ALBERT SMITH has the honour to announce that he will give his Literary, Pictorial, and Musical ENTERTAINMENT, for the second time, at Willis's Rooms, on MONDAY JUNE 3 entitled THE OVERLAND MAIL, being a description of the Journey to India, in which he will introduce the Desert Cafes, the Pyramids, the Nile, Malta, Marseilles, and Paris, with Illustrations painted, from original sketches, by Mr W. Beverley. No money will be taken at the doors.—Tickets, 3s 6d each. Stalls, 5s; to be had only at Samuel Royal Library, St James's-street. The doors will be opened at Eight o'clock, and the Entertainment will commence with a full-past Eight precisely. It will be repeated every Monday evening.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The Subscribers and the Public are respectfully informed the SEVENTH CONCERT will take place at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on MONDAY NEXT, June 3rd. The Programme:—Sinfonia in A minor, No 4 Mendelssohn Bartholdy; Cone rto V olin, M. Alard; Overture, Macbeth, Mr Sterndale Bennett; Sinfonia in C minor, Beethoven; Overture, Anacreon; Vocal Performers Mdme. Orisonli Mdlle. Marchesi, and Sims Reeves. Conductor, Mr. Costa. Stag e Lessee (with reserved seat), £1 1s; dush e tickets (ditto), £ 1s; triple ticket (ditto), £3 3s; to be obtained of Messrs. Addison, 210, Regent street.

G W. BUDD, Sec.

MUSICAL UNION.—SIXTH MATINEE, JUNE 4th, at WILLIS'S ROOMS.—Quartet in D, No 10, Mozart; Trio in C minor, No 2, Mendelssohn; Quintet in C, Beethoven. Executants:—Quartet, from Parke; Deloffre, Mollon, Hill, Piatti, &c; Pianoforte, G. Halle. Strangers' Tickets to be had at CRAMER and Co.'s, Regent-street. Members can personally introduce visitors on payment at the rooms. Owing to the crowded attendance of visitors the usual honorary members will be admitted from the commencement of season. J. ELLA, Director.

MESDAMES SONTAG, Frezzolini, Parodi, Gallait, Ida Bertrand, Miss Catherine Hayes M d le Charton, Sig. Gardoni, Charles Braham, Gassier, Pa ry, Belletti, Salvatore and F. Lab ache, under the direction of Mr. Bad ley Piano—Mesdame. Hale, Thomas, Lindsay Sloper, and Benedict, Violin Messrs. Blagrove and Molique. Violoncello, Mr. Lucas. Flute, Mr. Nicholson. Harp, Mdme. Parish Alvars. M. Viotar, will all perform at M. BENEDICT'S GRAND MORNING CONCERT, to take place on the Last Night but Three of the Season at the THEATRE, on FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 21.

Tickets admitted at Eight—Pit Tier £1 4s First Tier £4 4s, Second Tier £3 3s, Third Tier £2 2s; a few Boxes on the Grand Tier, £40s; and a limited number unbacked. (To Stalls £1 4s) Pit Stalls, Gallery Stalls 5s, Gallery 2s 6d.—App lications for Boxes, &c., to be made at the principal music warehouses, at the Box-office of Her Majesty's Theatre, and to M. Benedict, 7, Manchester-square.

MR. and MRS. W. H. SEGUIN'S CONCERT is fixed to take place on FRIDAY MORNING NEXT, the 7th of June, at the CONCERT ROOMS, Hanover-square. At which will appear Monsieur Thalberg, Sims Reeves, Mdlle Sabloni, Misses Lucombe, Dolby, and Messrs. Lablache, Mr. W. H Seguin and Molique. Conductor, Signor Machelles, Mess s Benson and W H Seguin, Mr Balair Chrisie's Band, and Mr. Willy's Quintett, Mr B lmby Richardson's Quartett, Mr Hemy Hasking, and Monsieur Benedict. Conductor, Mr. H Seguin. Tickets and Programmes to be had of Mr and Mrs W H Seguin, at their residence, No. 43, Curzon-street, Mayfair.

MR. HENRY WYLDE.—The THIRD and last of the BLACKHEATH CLASSICAL SUBSCRIPTION CONCERTS will take place on SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 8, at Eleven o'clock, when Mr. Wylde will perform Mozart's Trio in B flat, Beethoven's Op 18, and Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 12, for Pianoforte and Violin, with Mr. Blagrove. Mr. Wylde will also perform his Duet in the Harp, Violoncello, M. chaussat. Viola, Mr. Hill. The whole will be sung by Miss Bateman, Mr. Joseph Barn s, and Mr. Lazard

THE HIPPOPOTAMUS presented by H.H. the Viceroy of Egypt to the Zoological Society of London is established daily from One to Six o'clock, at their Garden in the Regent's Park. Admission by Fellow's Order, or by Payment of One Shilling.

By order of the Council, D. W. MITCHELL, B.A., Secretary.

ROYAL SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS. THIRD WEEK of MONS. JULLIEN and his NEW HUNGARIAN QUADRILLE.—MONDAY, JUNE 3rd, and Three Following Days, Dawson's Gigantic Mechanical Panorama of the PASSAGE of the ALPS by NAPOLEON and his ARMY, the Largest Picture in the World. By special Monsieur, Professeur and Concert-Master Jullien's Band in the Bath promenade, and Mons. Jullien in person. A Magnificent Display of Fireworks, by Southby Constable, with a Colossal Jullien of Napoleon on Horseback, from the Statue in the Place Vendôme, Paris. Also a Grand Ascent of a Balloon to be a re from nine a.m. Herding of the Animals at Five, Concert, Gun, and Rocket Salute at Nine. Admission, One Shilling.

THE GROTTO at OATLANDS, Weybridge, will be OPEN on and after JUNE 1st as before, on Saturday Mondays, and Tuesdays, by the kind permission of the Weybridge Parochial School Trustees from Whitsun to Michaelmas.

SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS. The FORTY-SIXTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, at their GALLERY, 53, Pall-mall, East.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS.—The FIFTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of this SOCIETY is NOW OPEN at their GALLERY, 26, Pall-Mall, nearly opposite to James's Palace, daily from Nine till Six.—Admission, 1s; Season Tickets may be had of the Gallery. JAMES FAHEY, Sec.

NILE.—GRAND MOVING PANORAMA of the NILE, comprising all the Monuments of Antiquity, the banks in full view, as edited the interior of the GREAT ROCK TEMPLE of ABOU SIMBEL, painted by Messrs. Warren, Smith, and Fahey, on view daily from Ten in the Morning till Five, at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, daily, at 3 and 8. Stalls 3s; Pit, 2s; Gallery, 1s. Children and Schools half-price.

PANORAMA of the LAKES of KILLARNEY.—NOW JUST OPENED at BURFORD'S PANORAMA ROYAL, Leicester-square, a VIEW of those celebrated and interesting LAKES, taken from Ross Castle, and comprising the numerous adjacent islands and surrounding beautiful scenery. The Views of the Interior and of Pengell, are also now open. Admission 1s to each View, or 2s for the three Schools, half-price.

HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY'S

INDIA OVERLAND MAIL DIORAMA.—GALLERY OF ILLUSTRATION, 14, REGENT-STREET, WATERLOO-PLACE.—EVERY EVENING (Saturday excepted) at Eight, INDIA DIORAMA, illustrating the route of the OVERLAND MAIL to INDIA, depicting every object worthy of notice on this highly interesting journey. In one hour on Ocean, accompanied by descriptive and impartial, and appropriate Music, is now open daily. Morning Exhibitions at Three, and in the Evening at Eight. Admission, 1s; Stalls, 2s 6d. Doors open for each Representation half an hour previous to the above hours. Descriptive Catalogues may be obtained at the Gallery.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—During this week the ALPINE SINGERS will perform daily at 3, in the Evenings at Half-past Eight. Professor LEON is on the PHILOSOPHY of SCIENTIFIC RECREATIONS, at 3 and 8 o'clock. In the EXHIBITION of HYDROSTATICS, with a new reference to Hydraulics, or conveying by Sea, some Water from Saint Pancras, made at a moment's notice. Three and every evening at 8 o'clock. DISSOLVING VIEWS. Diver and DIVING-BELL, for Sea-Admission, by Schools, Half-price.

DRAWINGROOM, LIBRARY, and DINING-ROOM ORNAMENTS, consisting of Vases, Groups, Candlesticks, Tables, Watchstands, Inkstands, Paper-weights, &c., Imported and manufactured by J TESSART (late Mawe), 149, Strand, London.

COCKERELL & CO.'S BEST COALS ONLY.—Purchasers Wharf, Earl-street, Blackfriars; Eaton Wharf, Lower Belgrave-place, Pimlico; and No. 1, Coal Exchange. Cash price, 19s per ton.

BOOK RIFLES, AIR-GUNS, AIR-CANES, and PISTOLS.—Manufactured by JOSEPH LANG, 10, Conduit-street, Regent-street, London.

CHILDREN'S CARRIAGES, INVALID WHEEL CHAIRS, SPINAL BED, and a variety of light HAND CARRIAGES, from 6s. to 20 guineas, on Sale or Hire, at the Repository, 34, Bishopsgate-street Without.—Mr. BARTLEY, Upholsterer, &c. N.B. Illustrated Catalogues

THE PATENT AIR-SPYHON VENTILATOR, and APPARATUS for economically applying Gas and Heat to Kitchen, Culinary, Manufacturing, and various domestic purposes, and in any room without a chimney, may be seen in operation at 27, Strand, and 454, West Strand, facing Charing-Cross Hospital.

EDMUND SPILLER'S NEW PATENT SELF-ACTING BACHELORS' KNIFE, for Boiling Water Almost a Coal Fire!

Two Pint Size (with stand complete) 3s 6d
Three ditto ditto .. .. .. 4s 6d.
Six ditto ditto .. .. .. 6s 9d.

EDMUND SPILLER (inventor and sole proprietor), 95, Holborn-hill, London.—Certificates from Cooks.

SCHWEPPE'S SODA, POTASS, MAGNESIA WATERS, and AERATED LEMONADE, continues to be manufactured as usual in the largest scale at their several establishments, Bottled with the name of their Firm in full on each cork, without a label with the name of their Firm in full on each cork, without a label with the name of their Firm German and Brighton SELTZER WATER. Bristol SPA WATER. LONDON, 51, Berners-street.

ROYAL PAPIER MACHE WORKS and SHOW-ROOMS.—JENNENS and BETTRIDGE, Manufactured by distinct appointment to the Queen his Royal Highness Prince Albert and the Royal Family, 23, Great Marlborough-street, Regent-street, London; and 99, London-street, Birmingham.

LANE'S ROYAL PAPIER MACHE and

PAPER-HANGINGS.—Cheapest in London! Also papers, 4d per yard; Satins, 8d; Flocks, 10d per yard. 30,000 Pieces in Stock. Panel Decorations, flowers or oak, as cheap as common paper. Lane's Cash Established 18 years.

Manufacturer, 22, Lowther Arcade. N.B. Three doors from the Strand entrance

DECORATIVE PAPER-HANGING MANUFACTORY and General FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT, CARPET and FURNITURE WAREHOUSE, 31, Oxford-street.—E. T. ARCHER solicits an inspection of his superior Paper-Hangings, of the newest and most tasteful designs, fitted up in the walls of the very extensive range of show-rooms in Panels, &c. &c., in every style of decoration, from the cheapest to the most costly. The Carpet and other rooms are furnished with superior Furniture (marked in plain figures for sale), giving at one view a drawingroom in its reception, Bed-room and other Paper-Hangings, at per yard. French and Patent Gilt Cornices of the first fabric Brussels and Tapestry Carpets, at 3s 6d per yard. Rich Velvet Pile Patent Floor-Cloth (3 yards wide) cut to any dimensions, 2s 3d, 2s 6d, and 2s 9d per yard.

PAPER-HANGINGS.—COTTERELL BROTHERS, 500, Oxford-street (a few doors from Holborn), invite attention to their extensive assortment of their PAPER-HANGINGS, now selected with the utmost care from all the principal French and English manufactories, consisting of from 30,000 to 40,000 pieces, which are always on hand, so that they can supply any quantity, of every grade, and the largest stock in London to select from, for the country should wait for the fable to measure rooms, which, with a specimen of the newly introduced Fancy Paper for bedrooms, will be sent post-paid on receipt of a letter stating the number of rooms. The country should write for the table

NEW BOOKS, &c.

On SATURDAY next, the 8th inst. will appear

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY of LEIGH HUNT, with Reminiscences of Friends and Contemporaries.
In three volumes post 8vo, with Three Portraits, price 31s 6d, in cloth.
London: SMITH ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

THE DUCHESS OF KENT
Has graciously accepted a Gift Book for Young Ladies
SACRIFICE AND OTLEY, Publishers Conduit-street, Hanover-square.

To be ready on the 1st June, price 7s 6d.

PENELOPE WEDGEBONE, the Supposed Heiress. By Lieut.-Colonel HORT, Author of "The Horse Guards," "The Days when we had Tails on us," "The White Charger," &c., handsomely bound in cloth, illustrated with Eight Coloured Etchings on Steel by A fred Ashley
London: J. and D. A. DARLING, 126, Bishopsgate-street.

"New Work by the Author of "Tales that might be True," "Life's Lessons,' &c.

This day is published, foolscap 8vo, with Frontispiece, price 3s.

THE AMYOTT'S HOME; or, Life in Childhood.—"In this story the author endeavours to inspire in children a respect for their own age, and would help to inculcate into the very youngest a sense of the holy bond between life and duty, showing that the small efforts and victories of the child on the side of virtue are precisely of the nature of those which make the heroes and philanthropists of grown-up life."
GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, 5, Paternoster-row.

Just published, 18mo, price 3s, cloth,

HOW TO EMIGRATE; or, The British Colonists A Tale for All Classes. With an Appendix Forming a complete Manual for intending Colonists, and for those who may wish to assist them. By W. H. G. KINGSTON, Author of "The Colonist," "Lusitanian Sketches, &c.
"The object of the work is to afford full information as to the best method of emigrating, the preparations to be made, and the advantages held forth by a Colonial life
GRANT and GRITTITH, corner of St. Paul's Churchyard.

THE POETICAL WORKS of MARTIN F. TUPPER, D.C.L., F.R.S.
1. In the press: The poems of KING ALFRED THE GREAT, now first translated from the original Anglo-Saxon into English Metres.
2. Recently published: GERALDINE HACTENUS, A THOUSAND LINES, with PSALMS and other Poems. Second Edition, fcap 8vo, 7s 6d, pp. 430, with vignettes.
3. A PROVERBIAL PHILOSOPHY: 9 h edition, with portrait: pp 314.
MESSRS. HATCHARD, and all booksellers.

LATEST AND BEST BOOK ON THE GOLD REGIONS.
In 2 large 8vos 21s boards, with Maps and Plates,

ELDORADO; or, Adventures in the Path of Empire, comprising a Voyage to Calif rnia, Life in San Francisco, Pictures of the Gold Region, &c. By SAYAD TAYLOR, forming the New Volumes of the POPULAR LIBRARY.
Also in the Series price 6s each,
LIFE, VOYAGES of COLUMBUS and his COMPANION, CONQUEST of GRANADA, TOUR on the PRAIRIES, &c. By WASHINGTON IRVING
London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and Co., Soho square; and all Booksellers, Newsvendors and Railway Stations.

GIBSON'S ROME (ILLUSTRATED), with NOTES by GUIZOT.
In two super-royal octavo volumes, price £1 16s, cloth gilt.

GIBBON'S DECLINE and FALL of the ROMAN EMPIRE, carefully reprinted without abridgement, from the original edition, embellished with Fifty steel Engravings, a Portrait of the Author, and Maps and Plans of Rome, Constantinople, and Alexandria. Also, an Original Translation of the valuable Notes and Biographical Sketch written for the Work by M. GUIZOT.
London: A. HALL, VIRTUE, and Co., 25, Paternoster-row.

THE ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY VOLUME, PART II., Price 1s, Contains:—The Steps of Babylon—The Writing on the Wall—The Last Night—The Destruction of Belshazzar Ruins of Babylon—The River Hiddekel—Nineveh—The Mission of Jonah—Nineveh's Prosperity—The Fall of Nineveh—Ancient Discoveries by Layard—Truth of Prophecy—Daniel's Vision, &c. Illustrated with Ten beautiful Engravings — C. CN., 12, King William-street, Strand.

CLARKE'S HANDBOOK GUIDES.

LONDON SIGHTS, Public Buildings, and Amusements, 6d.
The National Gallery, 6d. | The British Museum, 6d.
Westminster Abbey, 6d. | House of Lords, 6d.
Kew Gardens, 6d. | Hampton Court, 6d.
The best and most complete Guides published.
London: H. G. CLARKE and Co., 4, Exeter Change.

CANTERBURY SETTLEMENT.—On Monday next, price 8d., the SPEECH of the Rt. Hon. THOMAS J. BACKA, at the IPSWICH MEETING of the CANTERBURY ASSOCIATION.—J. W. PARKER, West Strand, and all booksellers

BRITANNIA TUBULAR BRIDGE, and NORTH WALES.—Now ready, price 6d each, coloured in relief, "RAILWAY RIDE" from LONDON to HOLYHEAD and DUBLIN, PLAN, and with descriptive Letterpress. Uniform with the above (the sixth thousand), "Reid's Railway Ride from London to Edinburgh and Glasgow, by Derby, Leeds, and Newcastle" Also (third thousand) uniform, "Via West-Coast and Caledonian Railways" Stamps to receive a copy of the Correct Railway Ride from Newcastle-on-Tyne; W. H. SMITH and SON, London, and at the Stations

DOMESTIC ECONOMY, SANITARY REFORM,
FIRESIDE STORIES, VALUABLE RECIPES, FAMILY SECRETS, COTTAGE GARDENING, &c.
THE FAMILY ECONOMIST contains valuable articles on the above subjects—written in a plain, vigorous style It is one of the most entertaining and useful periodicals published.
"There are few cheap periodicals which better deserve encouragement than the Family Economist."—Morning Herald
"It is admirably adapted for distribution among the poor, and even the rich might learn a great deal from it."—Belle Assemblee.
Price a Penny a Month, a Shilling a Year.
VOLUMES I and II. ALL SOLD.

THE FAMILY ECONOMIST, Vols. 1 and 2, 1848, 1849 As a present to a servant or poor neighbour, more useful or acceptable volumes cannot be selected. Each Volume, neatly boards One Shilling, paper wrapper.
GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, Paternoster-row, and all Booksellers.

BOOKS FOR LADIES' SCHOOLS.
I.
DR. LATHAM'S ENGLISH GRAMMAR for LADIES' SCHOOLS 1s 6d.
II.
PROFESSOR SCOTT'S SUGGESTIONS ON FEMALE EDUCATION. 1s 6d
III
ABBOTT'S NEW ENGLISH SPELLING. 1s 6d.
IV.
ABBOTT'S FIRST ENGLISH READER. 1s 6d.
V.
ABBOTT'S SECOND ENGLISH READER. 2s 6d.
VI.
DR. SCHMITZ'S HISTORY OF ROME. 7s 6d
VII.
PROFESSOR MERLET'S FRENCH GRAMMAR. 3s 6d.
VIII.
PROFESSOR MERLET'S TRANSLATEUR. 3s 6d.
IX.
THE SINGING MASTER. Six Books. 3s.
 Descriptive Catalogues of T. W. and M.'s Publications by post (free) to any one writing for them.
London: TAYLOR, WALTON, and MABERLY, 28, Gower-street, and Ivy-lane, Paternoster-row

NEW EDUCATIONAL WORKS.
The Forty-sixth Thousand.
Price One Shilling, or Post Free, 1s 6d.
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING-BOOK. With ENGRAVINGS of the EASY ARRANGEMENT of the SPELLING which embodies all the difficulties experienced by beginners, and by the PLEASING ORIGINAL READING LESSONS which excite the learner to advance of his own accord; while the whole is ILLUSTRATED by UPWARDS OF ONE HUNDRED and SEVENTY BEAUTIFUL WOOD-CUTS of objects and scenes described, forming by far the most alluring introduction to learning ever published. (144 Pages
A few Copies are Coloured. Price Two Shillings.

Now Edition, 20,000.
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON READING BOOK. Companion to the ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING BOOK. Consisting of Lessons on the Arts and Sciences, and on attractive subjects, selected with great care from the best English Authors. In Prose and Verse. The Publication is splendidly Illustrated with above TWO HUNDRED and FIFTY ENGRAVINGS, price 2s.

TO BOOKBUYERS.—R. SAYWELL, previous to Removal, off rs his valuable Stock of Books in Divinity, Classics, and General Literature, at an average reduction of 25 per cent. Catalogues of a portion sent, postage free, or of his whole Stock, on receipt of six stamps.—193, High Holborn.

Public Library, Conduit-street.
THE NEW BOOKS are FURNISHED to SUBSCRIBERS for perusal on Publication, and in any quantity, of all the extensive and valuable Library, from which the Nobility and Gentry in town and country are supplied. A large number of copies of each of the Popular Works is provided, and a class for the especial accommodation of those who desire the New Works only on The NEW POST CATALOGUE, with terms, sent free to orders enclosing two stamps, addressed Messrs. SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Conduit-street.

NEW BOOKS, &c.

Just published, Part II., price 2s 6d, large paper 3s,
HISTORIC RELIQUES.—Drawn from the Originals, and Etched by JOSEPH L. WILLIAMS
The Contents of this Part are the Douglas Jewels in her Majesty's possession; Sketches from the Cartoons of Queen Elizabeth, Col. Gwynkin; Chain of Alexander Pope, Lord Braybrooke; Pope's House at Binfield, &c.
Office 196 Strand

THE GREAT EXHIBITION OF 1851.
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS
IN THREE LANGUAGES
The Proprietors of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS have the honour to announce to their readers and the public generally, that they have made arrangements for the publication of a complete, carefully written, and profusely Illustrated History and Description of the GREAT EXHIBITION of the INDUSTRY of ALL NATIONS, to be held in London in the year 1851. During the whole period of the Exhibition they will issue a Series of SUPPLEMENTS of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, containing the fullest and most authentic Reports of the Proceedings and Descriptions of the various Objects of Art and Manufacture, with Illustrations designed by the most competent Artists, and executed in the highest style of Wood Engraving.
No expense will be spared to make the Publication, in all respects, worthy of the great undertaking, of which it will be a faithful and complete Record; and its price, as well as excellence, will be such as will not only defy all possible competition, but place it within the reach of all classes of the community
In 8 vo. size, also, Gratis to Artists and Manufacturers of Foreign Nations, who shall send their productions to the Exhibition of the W rld's Industry and Skill; and to Foreign Artists and Manufacturers, desirous to make a record of so interesting an event, the SUPPLEMENTS of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will be issued in the FRENCH and GERMAN LANGUAGES, as well as in ENGLISH.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS
IN DREI SPRACHEN.
DIE GROSSE WELT-AUSSTELLUNG und GEWERBAUSSTELLUNG ALLER NATIONEN, in 1851.
Die Eigenthümer der ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS beehren sich hiermit dem deutschen Publikum die Anzeige zu machen, dass sie eine sorgsam abgefasste und vollständig illustrirte Beschreibung der GROSSEN WELT- und GEWERB-AUSTELLUNG ALLER NATIONEN, welche shall von ihrer Zahl 1851 in London statt finden wird, herausgeben werden. Während der ganzen Dauer dieser Ausstellung wird die ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS mit einer Reihe von GROSSEN BEILAGEN erscheinen, welche genaue und authentische Berichte von allem was in London vorgehen wird, enthalten. Diese Beilagen will ebenfalls die Beschreibung der verschiedenen Kunst- und Gewerb-Erzeugnisse und merkwürdige Illustrationen, gezeichnet von den ersten Künstlern und ausgeführt in Holzschnitt der ersten Classe, enthalten werden.
Die Eigenthümer der ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS schätzen heute Kossen das beabsichtigte Werk dem grossen Unternehmen, welches jeder Deutsche mit Stolz nennen kann, der Welt-Ausstellung eine treue und vollständige Illustrirte Beschreibung jener grossen Ausstellung zu überliefern. Sie werden alle Einrichtungen, sämmtliche Ausstellungsgegenstände, wie auch alles sonstige Interessante, welche in der grossen Ausstellung von 1851, Platz finden, zu verschaffen, werden die grossen Beilagen der ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS in DEUTSCHER und FRANZÖSISCHER, sowohl als in ENGLISCHER Sprache, erscheinen.

EXPOSITION DE LONDRES en 1851.
L'ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS EN TROIS LANGUES
Les Propriétaires de l'ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS ont l'honneur d'annoncer au public français qu'ils ont pris des mesures pour la publication "d'Histoires et de Description de la GRANDE EXPOSITION UNIVERSELLE, qui doit se tenir à Londres en 1851. Pendant toute la durée de cette Exposition, ils publieront une série de SUPPLEMENS de l'ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS contenant un compte rendu complet, authentique et redigé avec soin des faits relatifs à l'Exposition, une description des différens objets d'art et d'industrie, avec de nombreuses Illustrations, dont l'exécution, en Gravure sur Bois, sera confiée aux artistes les plus comptétens.
Aucune dépense ne sera épargnée pour rendre cette Publication digne à tous égards de la grande entreprise dont elle sera le "Moniteur" permanent et qui excitera l'admiration universelle. Son prix modéré, et mettant cet ouvrage si intéressant à la portée de tous le monde.
Afin que les Artistes et Manufacturiers Etrangers, qui enverront le résultat de leur travail à la Exposit on en puissent avoir connaissance et du Génie du Monde Entier, puissent jouir de l'avantage d'un compte rendu exact et permanent et facile à comprendre et d'un document et monument de l'Exposition, les SUPPLEMENS de l'ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS seront publiés en FRANCAIS et en ALLEMAND aussi bien qu'en ANGLAIS

BEST WORKS for the YOUNG.—HOLMES' POPULAR LIBRARY.—A New Volume now ready. Scenes and Sketches from the Bible, Histories, Narratives, and Biographies, Anecdotes, and Legends Illustrative of Scripture 1s each.—THOMAS HOLMES' Great Book Establishment, 76, St. Paul's Churchyard.

BOOK SOCIETIES are now ESTABLISHED in every part of the kingdom on BULL'S NEW PLAN, which, for a Guinea a year, secures to subscribers the choice of all the New and Standard Works, with REVOLVING SUPPLIES, and is as soon as the first demand has subsided, at one-half the published price.
Bull's new plan delivered gratis or sent post-free to orders enclosing two stamps, addressed MR. BULL, Library, 19, Holles-street, Cavendish square.

W. S. LINCOLN has just issued his Fifty-seventh CATALOGUE (for June) of CHEAP SECOND-HAND BOOKS, English, Foreign, and Classical, which is, therefore, send the same Gratis and Post Free to any Gentleman in town or country who applies for it.—Address, Cheltenham House, Westminster-road, London.

STUDIOS for DRAWING, 114, New Bond-street.—Messrs. DICKINSON'S STUDIOS are NOW OPEN, with Classes, conducted by able Artists, for the study of the figure and landscape. The stock of Drawings for Sale (the first ensemble) being changing to the Circulating Portfolio has been greatly increased

CIRCULATING PORTFOLIO of WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS by the BEST MASTERS Messrs. DICKINSON and CO. beg to inform those who are studying the Fine Arts that they have on hire Drawings by all the First Masters of the day, viz Harding, Prout, Cox, Holding, Topham, Duncan, Callow, Oakley, Fripp, &c. Can be sent to any part of the United Kingdom. DICKINSON and Co., 114, New Bond-street

HANDSOME GOLD WATCHES, jewelled in four holes, measuring power, with all the improvements, elegantly engraved cases and dials, for £5 15s. Silver Watches, with movements equal to Gold Watches, for £3 3s, strongly protected with each watch.—HAWLEYS', 384, High Holborn, formerly of 75, Strand. The only genuine Watchmakers of the name in London —Gold, Silver, and Watches purchased or taken in exchange.

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES, and £10 10s GOLD LEVERS, at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House, are allowed not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction of price sets aside all rivalry, either of the Swiss manufacturers or any other house, for those who require a lever watch of the first design work On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s. one will be sent Price—Read Jones's Sketch of Watchwork, Free for 3d or a Twopenny Stamp.

SARL'S ARGENTINE SILVER PLATE.—This beautiful metal continues to stand unrivalled amongst all the substitutes for silver In intrinsic value, combined with its brilliant appearance, defies all competition It is upwards of 10 years since this manufacture was introduced by Sarl and Son to the public and, to withstanding the many spurious and unprincipled imitations that have since appeared, all former precedents, thus giving a convincing proof of its having answered the end proposed, which was to produce an article possessing the appearance of, and quality of, solid silver at one-sixth its cost. The magnificent stock has recently been enriched with many splendid novelties in dinner, tea, and breakfast services, and never possessed so many attractions as at the present time The spoon and fork department includes all the various patterns that are manufactured in solid silver, and orders to any amount can be immediately executed. A new and enlarged pamphlet of sketches and prices is just published, and now ready for distribution, and the illustrated gratis copy may be had at the manufactories.—SARL and SONS, 19, Cornhill

DEANE'S TABLE CUTLERY has, during one hundred and fifty years, maintained its reputation for cheapness and first-rate quality. It is furnished in Horn, Bone, Stag, and Ivory Handles, of every variety of pattern, and in Fine Ivory Mounted Razors, in Black and Ivory Handles, remain unrivalled, and are exchanged until the purchaser's beard is suited. Desert Arranged Fish-knives, sixpence each and upwards. Carvers, per pair, 2s 6d to 50s. Deane's Table Cutlery may be had of all Furnishing Ironmongers throughout the kingdom, and of DEANE, DRAY, and Co., London-bridge.

AUSTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND, CAPE of GOOD HOPE. NATAL, &c.
PASSENGERS to the COLONIES, generally, may obtain their OUTFITS from S. W. SILVER and Co., CLOTHIERS, &c., 66 and 67, Cornhill, at wholesale prices. SILVER and Co. make themselves the whole of the articles comprised in an outfit to secure durability, so that the Cabin Sailing Passenger may become equipped with every requisite Furniture on arrival in the colony.
They also engage PASSENGERS, and give ship-sailing INFORMATION, but they neither receive nor pay a commission, their object being to give PASSENGERS who place themselves in their hands every benefit, and they forward small packages for their customers (gratis) through their AGENTS in the COLONIES.
SILVER and Co. give EMIGRANTS on AUSTRALIA, at sixty days sight, of £163 for every £100 paid here.
The EMIGRANT Visiting-at Branch is at No. 4, BISHOPSGATE-STREET, opposite the London Tavern, where a comfortable Sit-out, for male or female, including bedding, may be obtained for FOUR POUNDS.
A Branch of each at St. GEORGE'S CRESCENT, LIVERPOOL.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

NEW SONGS.—"THE RICH MAN'S BRIDE." "THE EXILE'S FAREWELL." "THE STRANGER'S GRAVE." Price 2s each (post postage free).
These songs are by the author of "Will you love me then as now," &c. They form a work of charming compositions, and are exceedingly graceful and effective. The "Rich Man's Bride" will be an immense favourite, both words and music are of a very superior description, and calculated to render it permanently popular.
London. DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street

NEW PIANO MUSIC.—"GRAND MARCH of the PROTECTIONISTS." Dedicated to Lord John Manners, M.P., and the Farmers of England, by JAMES DACE. Price 3s.
London: WESSEL and Co., 229, Regent-street; and may be had of all Music and Booksellers.

Just published, price 2s 6d,
THE ADA MAZURKA, for the Pianoforte, by REGINALD HADDON, composer of the "Coldstream Polka," "Ada Waltz," &c. &c.
"The 'Ada Mazurka' is a truly graceful and effective composition To the lovers of dance-music it will, undoubtedly, become a great favourite."—Court and Fashionable Gazette.
London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW PIANOFORTE MUSIC, by W. H. HOLMES' BIJOU, BOYER, and COQUETTE "Absent Friends," Romance Sans Paroles by W. H. Holmes; "Les Regrets," Nocturne by A. Bijou; "Soupir de Joie," Nocturne by A. Boyer; "Le Retour," Rondo by A. L. Coqu, ys, "Stranezza," "La Smarla," and "Pensive Laborie "—London: R. MILLS (late BINCHALL), 140 New Bond-street.

THE TWELVE SYREN POLKAS in No. 118, PIANOLA, have received the patronage of her Majesty's, at Osborne House, and at the Horticultural Fete at Chiswick. Price 2s for the whole Twelve post free, thirty stamps—Also, the New POLKA and MAZURKA, by the Author, eighteen stamps.
GEO. RANSON, 57, Paternoster-row, and 16a, Argyll-street, Oxford-street.

CHEAP MUSIC, bound and classed in volumes. Eighty shillings' worth at full marked price for 8s., comprising Overtures, Airs from operas: Piano Music, easy and difficult; Waltzes, Polkas, Marches, Quadrilles, Songs (Sacred and Secular), (Vocal), by Rossini, Bellini, Diabelli, Jullien, Labitzsky, Strauss, Beethoven, and all the most popular composers. This will obtain the Music in all new, and clean copies. A choice of two hundred volumes always on sale at WESSEL and Co.'s, 229, Regent-street, and Cheap Music Warehouse, 17, Soho-square.—The new Catalogue gratis, on receipt of two stamps.

MISS BIRCH and MISS ELIZA BIRCH beg to announce to their friends and Pupils that they have removed to No. 36 Sackford-street, Park-lane, where they continue to give lessons in Singing and Piano.

MISS MARIA HALL, PUPIL of M. THALBERG, M. SEXTO PERCY, and MR GEORGE CASE, begs respectfully to announce to her Pupils, Friends, and the Public, that she is now forming a CLASS for the INSTRUCTION of the PIANOFORTE, CONCERTINA, and HARMONY, and that she continues to give Private Lessons, either at pupils residence or that of her Pupils. 3, Upper George-street, Montague-square.

MOTT'S New Patent Ever-standing COTTAGE and other PIANOS, of various sizes and patterns, of which (although the address is changed) the superiority of these Pianos has proved for the maker the highest possible patronage) the prices, on comparison with those of other eminent houses, will be found decidedly lower.—No 76, STRAND, where excellent instruments may be had at from 25 guineas and upwards.

PIANOFORTES.—CHAS. HOLDERNESSE and Co., Manufacturers, 44, New Oxford-street, London, have always on Sale, at the very lowest prices for which a really good and warranted instrument can be had, a large and choice stock of new Pianoforte, which, for elegance of design, beauty of tone, and durability of manufacture, cannot be surpassed; and at the present time, a variety of Pianofortes, by the most eminent makers, and other esteemed makers, from £16.—Every description of musical instrument taned, repaired, and taken in exchange.
Separate Department, Second-hand Pianofortes.

PIANOFORTES of exquisite quality, combining the latest approved invention, possessing the most pure and rich expression of tone, are to be had of JOHN and HENRY JEWS & Co., 4, Princes-street, Hanover-square, and 27, Argyll-street, in Zebra Wood, French Walnut, Rosewood, &c., in the richest style of modern and Gothic Cases, from 25 guineas. Compass Modern-cabinet Piano, twenty-five guineas. Warranted per test.

KING and CO., SILK-MERCERS, 243, REGENT-STREET, respectfully beg to announce that they will forward PATTERNS (POSTAGE FREE) of their new Silks, Satins, Velveta, French Merinos, Lace, Mourning and Half-Mourning Goods, and every article connected with the General Drapery Trade, to any part of the United Kingdom, India, America, and the Colonies.
Address to KING and Co., 243, Regent-street, London.

THE NEW SILKS.—KING and CO. beg to announce that they are selling very rich Glace, Striped, and Brocaded Silks, at 18s 6d and 21s 6d the full dress;
Glace de Soies, wide widths, at 25s 6d the full dress.
Watered and Brocaded Poult de Soies, at 30s and 37s 6d. the full dress.
Patterns sent post free. Address KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

BAREGES and MUSLINS.—KING and Co. are selling fine French Barege, Muslins, and Percales, at 6s 6d, 9s 6d, and 12s 6d the full dress
The finest qualities at 11s 6d and 15s 6d the full dress
Patterns sent post free.—KING and Co., 243, Regent-street.

LACE FLOUNCINGS.—KING and CO. beg to announce that they are selling White and Black Lace Flouncings, 9 inch, at 7s 9d per yard.
Valenciennes Edgings, from 5½d per yard
Valenciennes Insertions Lace, from 6½d per yard.
Patterns sent post free. KING and Co. 243, Regent-street.

CAMBRIC HANDKERCHIEFS.—KING and CO. are now selling very fine Hem-stitched French Cambric Handkerchiefs at 15s 6d the dozen.
The New Vandyke Handkerchiefs, at 4s 9d each.
The New and Elegant Handkerchiefs, at 6s 9d each, trimmed with lace ½ wide.
Ramsgate Handkerchiefs sent to all parts of the kingdom, on receipt of postage stamps for the quality required.
243, Regent-street, and 243, Regent-street.

BRIGHT and CO.'S PATENT POWER-LOOM BRUSSELS CARPETS.—These Goods are strongly recommended to the Trade and the Public on the following grounds:—They are the cheapest, most Novel, and most Durable Carpets ever made than can be the case with hand-woven goods They have the same quality of back, fabric, strength, and make as the most costly Brussels the dark colours are generally made of an inferior Worsted. They are printed by a patent process, and by peculiar machinery, and the colours are so fixed that they will stand some severe tests than those of any other description of carpet. The patent printing admits of an almost unlimited variety of shading in the coloring patterns that therefore, more elaborate, as there is greater scope for design. They can be offered at a price about 20 per cent below the value of equal quality made in the ordinary mode. In quality, in pattern, in variety of colours, and in price, the Patent Power-loom Brussels Carpets offer great advantages to the Public.—Wholesale, 30, Skinner-street, Snow-hill. London, 32, New Brown-street, Manchester.

ELEGANT MUSLINS.—Thousands of elegant MUSLIN DRESSES are now offering at 2s 11½d the dress, or any length cut at 4½d the yard. They are the newest patterns, fast colours, and quality that he had elsewhere. By sending three shillings' worth of postage-stamps, a dress in any of the fashionable colours, namely, chocolate, blue, lilac, green, fawn, and white, or plain black, with an assortment of patterns, will be forwarded. Beautiful long cloth or shirting calico, twelve yards for 3s 11½d; prime family lawn linen, at 4½d. yard. Also, cambric silk dresses for 3s 6d. Merchants and wholesale buyers will find this a desirable opportunity. Address, ROWLAND HOOPER, muslin printer, 53, Oxford-street.

TO PERSONS ABOUT TO MARRY.—Those about to Marry should obtain my Guide, with linenge, sent post-free for 6 stamps. It will see that a four-roomed House is comfortably furnished for 25 guineas; a six-roomed house completely and neatly for £50; a eight-roomed house completely and substantially, for £140; a mansion of fourteen rooms furnished with the same good taste, beauty, and durability, for which the house has Merchants and wholesale buyers will find this a desirable opportunity. Address, ROWLAND HOOPER, muslin printer, 53, Oxford-street.

TO PERSONS ABOUT TO MARRY.—Those about to Marry should obtain my Guide, with linenge, sent post-free for 6 stamps. It will see that a four-roomed House is comfortably furnished for 25 guineas; a six-roomed house completely and neatly for £50; a eight-roomed house completely and substantially, for £140; a mansion of fourteen rooms furnished with the same good taste, beauty, and durability, for which the house has SMITH'S Cabinet, Bedding, and Upholstery Ware-rooms, 29, Tottenham-court-road, and 4, Leather-lane, Holborn.

BEECH and BERRALL are now offering some decided bargains in Silks, Printed Muslins, Balzarines, Bareges, &c, &c, all of this season's production (and cut in any quantity)
New Striped, Checked, and Plain Silks, 9½d, 1s 1½d, 1s 6½d, and 2s 9½d per yd.
Bargant ditto, 1 wide, 2s 9½d to 3s 6½d per yd.
Beautiful Glace Silks, in all the new colourings, 2 wide, 2s 9½d to 4s 6d, 5s 6d, and 6s 6d per yd.
Plain Black Silks, Satinettes, Black Watered and Damask Silks, Otomans, Armures, and Black Gros de Swiss, at one-third less than the usual prices. Thousands of yards of new printed Jaconets and Organdie Muslins (fast colours), 5½d and 6½d per yd.
Superb Designs in Swiss, German, and French ditto, 10½d, 1s 0½d, and 1s 3½d per yard.
A very large assortment of Balzarines and Bareges, at 6½d, 10½d, and 1s 2½d per yard.
Black and all Colours in Plain French Bareges, at 1s 1½d worth 1s 9d.
Patterns of the above sent to any part, postage free
Address, BEECH and BERRALL, 52, and 54, Edgeware-road.
N.B.—All parcels in the amount of £5 forwarded to any part of the country, carriage paid.

ACTON VALE, MIDDLESEX, FOUR MILES from Oxford-street.—To be LET, a GOOD FAMILY HOUSE, complete with every convenience, in good ornamental repair, with large Garden, Paddock, Stables, &c. &c., situated in fine, healthy, open country —Apply to Mr BROWN, Builder, &c., Hammersmith

EDUCATION.—BLACKHEATH.—In an old-established first-class PREPARATORY SCHOOL, conducted by Gentlemen, assisted by Professors of eminence, the SONS of GENTLEMEN are RECEIVED, and their Education advanced to a point for public or private schools The limit of age extends from five to twelve years. The mansion is spacious and situated in extensive pleasure grounds, which are appropriated to the recreation of the pupils —For terms, &c., address M.P., care of Mr. BURNSIDE, Bookseller, Tranquil Vale, Blackheath.

STATUES, Vases, Fountains, Garden Ornaments, Busts of Arms, &c., and Architectural Embell shments in Imperishable Stone, by VAUGHAN and COMPANY, 60, Stone's End, Borough. J. J. Cooper, late of Coade's, Superintendent.—A Pamphlet, containing Drawings of a portion of the Stock, forwarded on application.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS.—Gentlemen desirous of obtaining Shirts in the very best manner in which they can be made, are solicited to try FORD'S EUREKAS, the most perfect fit ever produced, and the only perfect fitting Shirt made. Detailed Statement, containing lists of prices, and directions for self-measurement, sent post-free. Patterns of all the new coloured shirtings sent on receipt of six postage stamps.—Richard Ford, 185, Strand, London.

SHIRTS.—E. FLINT continues to supply gentlemen with the Best Shirts, six for 33s: Gents' and Colonels' Regimentals, 30s: Fine Linen Ditto, 42s: Super Ditto, 45s: Flannel Ditto, 18s: Slight Shirts at Wholesale Prices.—FLINT'S old-established Warerooms, 48, Lodgate-hill, London, and 38, King's-road, Brighton.

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT is a garment made without gathers. "It may confidently be eulogised for its nicety of fit, and great ease and comfort."—Morning Herald. In all qualities and prices, 41s, 45s, 50s, 55s, 60s, and 70s. Patterns and Prints-street. N.B. Printed flannels for dressing-gowns, cravats, and boolery.

SUPERIOR HOSIERY for Family Use, in every description and variety, for the current season, possessing elasticity and durability with comfort and economy, manufactured by POPE and PLANTE, 4, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall.

SHAWLS and MANTLES.—Ladies requiring the above articles are invited to inspect the extensive and elegant Stock in the Kingdom—3000 Mantles, Visites, &c., of the most elegant and becoming shapes. Long and square Shawls in Cloth and foreign manufacture; Barege, Mohair, and every fashionable texture.
STAGG and MANTLE, 1, 2, and 3, Leicester-square.

PARASOLS.—W. and J. SANGSTER respectfully call such an inspection of their extensive stock of Parasols, manufactured expressly for this season, consisting of the most elegant and fashionable colours in Glace and Gros de Naples, and Moire Antique and Unlined Patentees of the ALPACA PARASOLS, which gave such universal satisfaction last year, 30 000 having been sold during the season.—140, Regent-street; 94, Fleet-street, 10, Royal Exchange and 7a, Cheapside.

RIGG and SON, OLD BOND-STREET, are SELLING OFF, in consequence of Mr. Rigg retiring from business, the whole of the Rich and Valuable Stock of Velvets, Chinc, Roche, Glace, and Fancy Silks, Laces, Shawls Mantles, &c., is now on Sale, at very reduced prices. 22, Old Bond-street, late Tilney, Sagg, and Co.

HORTICULTURAL and other FETES.—CHARLES VYSE begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and Public, that (his Son having returned from Paris) he has now ready for their inspection an elegant assortment of PARISIAN and ENGLISH MILLINERY, selected from the first artists in Paris.—Dress and Mantle Maker, 30 Ludgate-street, St. Paul's, manufacturer to the Queen and Royal Family.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN.
Established in 1778.
LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN, and WEDDING and GENERAL OUTFITS for HOME, INDIA, and the COLONIES.
JOHN CAPPER and SON, 69, Gracechurch-street, LONDON, (Under competent Female superintendence The prices are economic the terms cash and needlework excellent
BABY LINEN, of superior work, decidedly CHEAP.
Parcels of £2 sent throughout the Kingdom free of all railway carriage
LISTS, with PRICES, sent POST-PAID, for inspection on receipt of a London reference, or money-order.
LISTS, with PRICES, sent POST-PAID.

W. SHEATH, SILK-MERCER, No. 264, Regent street, begs to draw the attention of the Nobility and Gentry to inspect his new and well-assorted STOCK of Silks, Satins, Mantles, Glace Shawls, and Barege Shawls; French Lawns, Bareges, Lace, Curtains, &c. &c. For the convenience of Ladies residing in the country, patterns forwarded, postage free to any part of the kingdom, by addressing to
W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

WEDDING, DINNER, and WALKING DRESSES.
The richest Glace Poult de Soies, 30s and 35s the dress
The new Glace Poult de Soies, Victoria Silk, 42s the dress
Very rich Damasks and Brocades, 45s the dress
The richest Glace Silks, Gauzines (in every colour), 52 guineas the dress
Figured and Striped Glace Silk, 21s, 25s, and 30s the dress Patterns sent for inspection. Address W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

SUMMER DRESSES.
Superior Organdie Muslins, 6½d per yard
French ditto, 9½d, 1s 0½d, 1s 3½d
Plain French Barages, 9½d and 1s 3½d
Beautiful Printed ditto, 9½d and 11½d
Striped and Checked Barage, Sublime, 1s 3½d per yard
The New Barege de Chusé, the most fashionable Dinner or Evening Dress this Season
Patterns sent to any part post-free.
Address, W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

BEAUTIFUL FRENCH PRINTED BAREGE SHAWLS, two yards square (in every colour), 10s 11d each; usual price 18s
Four yards long ditto, 15s 9d and 21s 6d.
Address W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

BLACK LACE FLOUNCES.—Real Lace Patterns (18 inches wide), 8s 6d per yard.
Ditto ditto (5 inches wide), 1s 9d
Patterns sent to any part, post free.
Address, W. SHEATH, 264, Regent street.

SPECIALITE de DENTELLES et de BRODERIES.—AT HAYWARD'S, 81, Oxford-street (opposite the Pantheon).
This House having been established upwards of seventy years, for the extensive sale of LACE and EMBROIDERY, they are enabled to offer unusual advantages to those in executing Wedding Orders, instances manufacturing their own goods, and employing their own patterns, thereby avoiding the usual sameness often to their patrons and the public articles of superior taste and fabric, at a considerable saving in price
Their extensive and very choice Stock of the following articles is particularly worthy of attention:—
Brussels and Honiton Scarfs, Squares, Flouncings, Dresses, Berthes, Handkerchiefs, Veils, Shawls, Pelerines, &c.
A beautiful Imitation of Honiton and Brussels Lace, in Squares, Scarfs, Dresses, &c., at very moderate prices
Embroidered Handkerchiefs, in great variety, from 5s 6d to 3 guineas.
Plain Cambric and Cambric Handkerchiefs of the best fabrics.
The latest Novelties in Laces and Embroideries always ready for inspection.
HAYWARDS (BIDDLE and CO.), Lacemen to the Royal Family, 81, Oxford-street, London, and at 37, King's-road, Brighton.

MANY have assumed the use of the word PALETOT; but the ONLY PATENTEES of the design and material used in this inexpensive and gentlemanly article of dress are H. and J. NICOLL, Merchant Clothiers, Tailors, Hosiers, and Manufacturers of cloth, who have agents in every principal Town in the United Kingdom and Six Counties Their London Address being 114, 116, 118, 120, 122, CORNHILL, 22 to
No 114, REGENT-STREET, forms a department for PALETOTS, &c.
No 116 (the next house) is devoted for MILITARY and DIPLOMATIC UNIFORMS
No. 118, for ROBES and every novel or established article of costume.
120 is exclusively for BOYS' and YOUTHS' CLOTHING, of unusual excellence, and at 22, CORNHILL. Specimens of all may be seen.
In each department the Public Intelligence Assistants attend, and the admitted fact, "That an article to be really cheap should be really good," is practically exhibited.
WHOLESALE WOOLLEN CLOTH and SHIPPING ENTRANCE in the rear in WARWICK-COURT-STREET, and CHANGE-ALLEY, in the CITY
H. J. and D. NICOLL,
114,

THE INFANT ACADEMY. SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS.

In order to keep pace with the Exhibitions of the London Season, and not to lose any of the rich store of novel Illustrations which each week contrives to supply, we give another Supplement gratis to our subscribers, for the purpose of introducing some of the principal pictures of the Academy Exhibition to our country, colonial, and continental readers. Residents in London, and people brought either on business or pleasure to our great metropolis, have ample opportunities of forming their own notions of the merits of the several exhibitions, and the still greater advantage of beholding the designs of our artists with all the recommendations which colour can lend (and the English school of art is distinguished for colour) to the drawing and general grouping of the several compositions. It is different with a large body of our subscribers, who are almost entirely dependent on the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS for bringing before them the novelties and attractions of our yearly Exhibitions. It is not always that we are enabled to engrave the pictures we should like best to engrave. We have to contend with the selfishness of proprietors, the caprices of painters, and the interests of the purchasers of copyrights. With all these drawbacks, we have still reason (our readers will, we trust, agree with us in thinking) to congratulate ourselves on the general excellence of the works selected, and that the several Illustrations which we have been enabled to give from year to year have been fair representative pictures of the worth and character of the Exhibitions from which they have been taken.

As an appropriate heading to our Supplement, we have engraved "The Infant Academy" of Sir Joshua Reynolds, the first President of the Royal Academy, and (with perhaps the single exceptions of Hogarth and Wilkie) still the most eminent painter that England has as yet produced. The picture from which our Engraving was taken was bequeathed by Sir Joshua to his friend Lord Palmerston, and is well known by an excellent engraving made from it in Reynolds's lifetime by Haward, the engraver of the fine print of Mrs. Siddons as the Tragic Muse, after the nobler picture by Sir Joshua, now in the collection of the Marquis of Westminster. The picture is an admirable example of Sir Joshua's pencil. The grouping is good, the colour warm and harmonious, and the infantine character throughout such as Sir Joshua alone has succeeded in catching. It would sell, we believe, were it brought this week under the hammer of Messrs. Christie and Manson, for something like two thousand guineas. The picture of a little girl, by Sir Joshua, in the Vernon Gallery, called "The Age of Innocence," cost Mr. Vernon, a few years back, 1450 guineas; and, as recently as last Saturday, "The little Girl with a Spaniel," by the same painter, was sold at Christie's for 1020 guineas. Art is not only better understood amongst us, but there are more competitors for purchasing fine pictures. The sale of a first-rate Sir Joshua is not a common event in the annals of auctioneering. Fine pictures are known and treasured up with a mixture of pride and pleasure; and a willingness to part with them, even when tempted by very liberal offers, is becoming even rarer than usual. For this picture, which brought 1020 guineas, Sir Joshua received but 75 guineas; and yet his prices were high and his practice large. We need hardly add that he died rich.

NO. 221.—"HOSPITALITY—THE MOTE, IGHTHAM, KENT."—PAINTED BY J. C. HORSLEY

Our other Illustrations are—

1. "Samson Betrayed." By F R. Pickersgill, A.R.A.
2. "The Burial of the two Sons of Edward IV. in the Tower, 1483." By T. Cross.
3. "Hospitality; the Mote, Ightham, Kent." By J. C. Horsley.
4. "Contentment." By A. Rankley.
5. "The Sun dispelling a Mist, with Smugglers landing their Cargo." By H. P. Parker.
6. "Scene from Moore's 'Epicurean.'" By O. R. Campbell.

The first four are from the Royal Academy; the remaining two from the National Exhibition in Regent-street.

Our selection has been made in order to give a taste of the variety of the several schools of art. Mr. Pickersgill, to whom we referred in our former notice, has found his subject in Scripture, and has sought to embody the "Betrayal of Samson by Delilah:"—

> And she made him sleep upon her knees; and she called for a man, and she caused him to shave off the seven locks of his head.—Judges, xvi. 19.

Mr. Cross has found his subject in English history; Mr. Horsley, before the old portal of the Mote House of Ightham, in Kent; Mr. Rankley, in a cottager's parlour; Mr. Parker, on the English coast; and Mr. Campbell, in the pages of one of our popular poets:—

> As o'er the lake in evening's glow
> That temple threw its lengthening shade,
> Upon the marble steps below
> There sat a fair Corinthian maid,
> Gracefully o'er some volume bending,
> While by her side the youthful sage
> Held back her ringlets, lest, descending,
> They should o'ershadow all the page.
>
> T. MOORE.

Mr. Pickersgill exhibits a great knowledge of anatomy, and considerable power in the general arrangement of his figures, while he has shown judicious skill in the contrast presented between the giant strength of Samson and the womanly character of Delilah.

The "Burial of the Princes in the Tower" is the only picture we have had from the pencil of Mr. Cross since the Westminster Hall Exhibition in 1847, when his "Cœur de Lion forgiving De Gourdon" brought him at once into a well-merited reputation. The subject on this occasion is not so favourable to his powers, nor is his knowledge of the resources of his art of ample range enough to allow him to avail himself of those rich Rembrandt-like effects so essentially necessary for the subject he has chosen. Though unequal to the expectations that had been raised from

(Continued on page 226.)

LITERATURE.

Life of Mahomet.* By Washington Irving. H. G. Bohn, York-street, Covent-garden.

We cannot admit that any apology is necessary from Mr. Irving for writing a readable, plain, succinct, connected narrative of the life and labours of Mahomet; "though no new fact can be added to those already known concerning him." There is no book more wanted to disarm the prejudices that prevail, not only in England but in Europe and in all Christendom, concerning Islamism and its founder. A very brief abstract of Mahomet's life, and a brief notice of Arabia, will keep forward that result.

From the beginning of history till the close of the sixth century of our era, the great Arabian peninsula, though peopled in the very earliest ages, and very soon the seat of some civilisation as well as the high road of the greatest traffic of the world, remained for that long period contrary, apparently, to the general laws of human nature, in a stationary condition. We may perhaps find the explanation of this circumstance in the peculiarities of the country, consisting mainly of sandy, hilly, stony, dreary deserts, interrupted with narrow valleys and spots and strips of land of surpassing beauty and fertility. Difficult of access, yet lying between India and Egypt, it shared in the progress of those early civilised parts of the world. But the nomadic tribes, neglecting agriculture, wandering with their flocks from place to place, shifting their abodes as they exhausted the supply of food provided for them by nature, scarcely shared in the progress, and could not increase beyond the attained measure of spontaneous subsistence. The settled tribes, inhabiting chiefly the ports and cities along the Red Sea, though engaged in commerce, and early acquainted with agriculture and navigation, having learned by the attained nomadic habits, pains in rendering his volumes not only delightful reading, but the means conveying much information. He gives a very clear insight into the relative conditions of the maritime nations at the period of his story, and into the union, founded not on any common regard, but on a common hatred, which combined forces of such opposite characters against a single foe for decade for.

We cordially congratulate Mr. Roach upon the production of two delightful volumes, which will increase not only his popularity but his reputation.

A GENEALOGICAL AND HERALDIC DICTIONARY of the PEERAGE and BARONETAGE of the BRITISH EMPIRE By JOHN B. BURKE, Esq. Twelfth Edition. Colburn.

The growth of this work, from a small 8vo. to a bulky volume of some 1200 pages, and twice as many columns, is a remarkable and successful instance of the result of undivided attention to ensure completeness. We have peerages in pocket volumes, very well in their way, for convenient reference, to a certain extent; but, for all the heads and data of Genealogical and Heraldic History of our Aristocracy, recourse must be had to Mr. Burke's volume. We, who remember the first edition, and its two supplements, and have watched the progressive value of the work, attach full credence to the following statement, prefixed to this Twelfth Edition, of the means taken to ensure accuracy:—

"To each successive reprint the most assiduous attention is devoted; each article is separately and distinctly revised, amended where inaccuracy is discovered, and enriched by such new information as may be obtained from public records or private papers regarded as trustworthy. The voluminous collections made by the author for his 'History of the Landed Gentry' and other genealogical works, have, in this respect, been found of the utmost value; those papers having, in frequent instances, thrown new light upon the Peerage and Baronetage, by showing that many branches still in the station of country gentlemen only, are, nevertheless, the chiefs of several extinct and dignified families; and, further, have enabled the author to enter more at large into the collateral lines, and thus to enrich his pages by an accession of names to the respective pedigrees, which had previously been entirely excluded or forgotten."

In addition to these private resources are the valuable labours of Dugdale and of Collins, and the Parliamentary Reports of Sir Egerton Brydges, to which common access is to be had. Still, the labour requisite to secure exactness, in all the details of a peerage-book, must be intense: the stream of human existence must be constantly watched, the accessions and losses duly noted, as well as the minor details. The Obituary in our Journal is almost weekly evidence of this ceaseless accumulation of materials for new editions; as the sand of life runs out, the data increase with a force of numbers not to be neglected. The archæological interest of the labour, too, admits of minute detail and verification, which must never be cast aside of. We are persuaded, that in the work before us the most attention has been paid to all these matters. They are the res gestæ of the author's life; and his huge volume shows how great an amount of assiduity he has expended upon a subject of great interest and value, even beyond its prominence in every day life.

ENGLAND.

BY THOMAS MILLER

While Thrones and old Dominions reel and jar,
Securely stands our sea-girt Island Home;
And from her rocky front throws off the war
Of rebel waves in spray and harmless foam.
So Sinai, unconsumed, stood 'mid the awe
When through the lightning's gr are thunder'd God's Holy Law.

Heaven watcheth o'er our Church, and Laws, and Crown,
He guardeth us whose arm is never bound;
And none dare hurt our Holy Altar down,
Or tramp our hallow'd Freedom to the ground:
For we are England! and that mighty name
Fills every wind that blows with its undying fame.

Our neck is clothed with thunder, not with fear.
A lamb in peace, in war a lion strong,
That quails not at the glittering sword or spear,
But, with a roar, springs 'mid the armed throng,
And glares through the red cannon's fiery breath—
Rushing to victory grim, or falling in the death.

What made her mistress of the shoreless main?
Go, ask the waves of the resounding sea.
She fyed the billows with her mighty skill—
Gave her sons to make the oak a thing of life.
In letter'd light are read a thousand names.
Stamp'd on her rock-bound coast, like warning beacon-flames.

She's but to send her watch-dogs on the deep
Untamed when danger is near, and bid them bark,
To startle all the island from its sleep;
And as a headland-light shoots through the dark
So would it rise—a vast volcanic blaze,
And fill the wondering world with fear and dread amaze.

She needs no conquest—arms but to retain Lands consecrated by true British blood,
Where bleach our fathers' bones, in battle slain—
Men who march'd through the perilous fire and flood,
Strong in that Faith, and Hope, and Love, which made
Them bow the knee in prayer before they bared the blade.

Her trust's in Heaven, not the destroying spear;
And English hearts that bem around her throne;
For to her faithful children she is dear.
Her glories for all her faults atone—
A pillar of cloud, marching before by day,
That in the troublous night throws out a golden ray.

When she hath oppressed into her rock-bound shore,
She's none who ever roth deny;
But shares her loaf when she herself is poor,
As Saxon Alfred did in years gone by;
Sends out her armed ships upon the waves
To sweep the burning coasts, and free the world of slaves.

So far and wide her sceptred sway extends,
She rules o'er lands beyond the re ch of night;
O'er outstretched realms, where sunshine never ends,
But somewhere bathes her shores in golden light.
And when she falls, and her last duty's done,
Her name will still be read, wherever shines the sun.

Then shout for England! cry God save the Queen!
Shake out our lion-banner in the sun.
God and St. George upon our side are seen.
That cry are now hath many a battle won.
Sidney and Hampden, though of widely various greys,
Know we shall never come to sleep the sleep of slaves.

PROMENADE AT PEHKIPO.—The whole population had turned out, to walk about in their finest clothes, up and down the promenade in front of the wooden coffee houses. The brilliancy of the fine ladies and gentlemen who walked up and down to be looked at, was b yond all conception; but the most curious feature of this was, that in their overweening admiration of everything European, a particular fashion prevalent. Everything had evidently been made from a book, or imported from some dashing European milliners, but at all sorts of periods; so that there were long and short petticoats, and wide and narrow bonnets, and polkas and mantillas, and summer fly away scarfs over winter dresses, all jumbled up together to create a sensation and outshine the neighbours. There were few females of the middle class who had not exchanged them for glossy silk hats; and they all wore gloves of dazzling hues. But the children were the most marvellous of all; and the family looked as if they were preparing for an exhibition of fashion and slop tumbling, so brilliantly outré were their costumes. Two of the little boys were attired in the simple sisters, spangled, and the third had a perfect Highland dress, which was the great hit of all. With a bit of carpet for the latter to dance, and the others to posture upon, the business would have been complete. Too men were all gents—as the proverb says—and might have been selected from the combined forces of Rosherville, Epsom, and the public ball-rooms of London. Some, for display, paid for the time candles to be fired by daylight: others marched up and down, several abreast; and all evidently had the notion that, got up so remarkably well, they were "doing it." Amidst this throng, cafétiers (waiters) darted about with little morsels of incandescent wood to light the narghiles with, boys sold walnuts, ready peeled and kept in glass jars of water; and sweetmeat men plied their trade. Those ladies who had servants, made them walk behind them; and those who had not, sneered at the others. All this went on for two or three hours. There was not a trace of Oriental life in the entire scene. The gravity of the Levantine had entirely disappeared; and a restless, fevered wish to cut out the others was the leading attribute of every character there assembled.—From A Month at Constantinople. By Albert Smith. Just published.

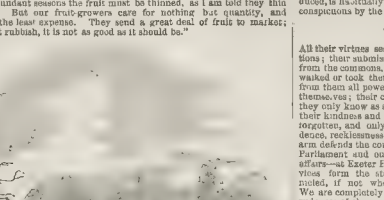
WOE AND KINDNESS.

A COTTAGER'S TALE.

On Sunday, April 21st, I was wandering about in the neighbourhood of Southfleet, a part of Kent abounding in orchards, corn-fields, and hop gardens. The fruit-trees standing on many acres were covered with bloom, as if a sheet (the people's phrase) were spread over the land, and the air was filled with fragrance. Some spots shone bright beneath a glorious sun, and others lay deep in the shade of a gathering storm. As I passed some cottages seared on a bank by the side of a shady lane, I greeted the occupant of one; the occupant of another came to the door, and entered into a pleasant gossip about the prospects of the fruit season. the number of women employed in the gardens and orchards, and the great difference a good or a bad crop makes in their incomes and comforts. In a good season, every person of the neighbourhood who wishes it, finds plenty of healthy employment at good wages; and many strangers flock into the vicinity to share their advantages. Then all is merriment, and the rejoicing heart gives utterance to many a joke When the crop is scanty, work short, and the weather very bad, the poor bedraggled and bespashed creatures have enough to do to keep their spirits up, and in the rainy days obtain a mere pittance.

"The labourers," one of the cottagers remarked, "their wives and children, are the greatest sufferers from a short crop of fruit." To them it is a loss of bread and clothing. The consumer is only denied a pleasant luxury; the master gardener has some compensation in a higher price for a short crop, the rent of the landlord is secured, the commutation of tithes is settled by law, but, as the crop of fruit fails short, the rewards of the labourer are reduced in rate as well as in amount There is less employment and smaller pay. They suffer more immediately, if not more severely, than the other classes, for they have always the parish to fall back on, which supplies them with fare as good as their own wages can buy them when most abundant; and it is not surprising that the labouring classes are sensitively alive to the state of the markets, and complain of low prices and the importation of fruit from foreign countries. That they should suffer at all, as they have no means of making their condition known, and are without the ability to help themselves, is to be deplored, their ignorance as to the cause of their sufferings it is hoped will be remedy.

The chief importations of fruit which interfere with their produce come from Holland, Belgium, the north of France, and Germany, which are not more favoured by nature than the slopes and valleys of Kent. Why should they be better or more plentiful there, than here?" a cottager remarked, and gave, I thought, an explanation of the circumstance:—"Our fruit, sir, is not so good as it used to be: there are no more the little gardens of the little farmers have. The great farmers, accustomed to do things on a grand scale dig up a large number of acres, and plant them with currant or gooseberry bushes, or with cherry, or plum, or apple trees. The ground between the bushes dug once a year, which keep it tolerably clean, and take no more pains about it They often make their orchards into meadows, and turn their cows into them. What they look for is a great quantity of fruit each year, without further cost. They don't examine every tree and bush, and prune it; they cannot look after every one, as the gardener looks after it. To have good fruit, every tree and bush must be carefully treated. In abundant seasons the fruit must be thinned, as I am told they think it in Holland. But our fruit-growers care for nothing but quantity, and obtaining it at the least expense. They send a great deal of fruit to market; and, if it be not rubbish, it is not as good as it should be."



COTTAGES AT SOUTHFLEET, KENT.

In this part of Kent, plums, cherries, gooseberries, and currants are cultivated in large fields. The plantations of one man often cover several acres. Following the general rule which agglomerates business in the hands of large capitalists, because they can conduct it at a cheaper rate, the little gardeners are almost extinguished. Small holdings have been united with large ones, and only here and there do we still find men living by cultivating one or two acres with their own hands. But it may be doubted whether fine fruits and fine vegetables, particularly fine fruits, can be so successfully cultivated in a wholesale way as the cereales. The nature of the cultivation is different—one requires chiefly that the ground should be looked after, the other the things that are upon it. An inspection of his fields and of his ploughman may suffice for the farmer; the gardener must look after every plant and every tree. The two species of cultivation cannot, therefore, be successfully carried on by the same rules and by the same class of men. Hence the mode in which the land is divided into large farms, over which the farmer can scarcely ride before dinner, or into small plots, every foot of which is daily visited by the cultivator, has almost as much influence over the quality of fruit, and in the end over its quantity, as the nature of the soil and climate. Our own plan of appropriating the land on large farms has many advantages; but amongst them we cannot reckon the patient care which small proprietors and small farmers bestow on the cultivation of fruit in Holland, Belgium, the north of France, and Germany.

As we gossiped about matters of this kind, the gathering storm approached, and I was courteously invited to take shelter in one of the cottages. Not being over weather-wise, I concluded that the storm would be a trifle; and being naturally desirous to take as much advantage as possible of my escape from the murky atmosphere, I declined, and pursued my walk. Very soon, however, the rain came down heavily. I saw no shelter before me, and I was glad to turn back to accept the hospitable offer. The cottager, who I soon learned prided himself—and not without reason—on some talent, or some speculation, is to be poor indeed—in handling and cultivating the land departed with a stout young man, whom I conjectured to be his nephew and heir to his shearing business, to perform some operation on the flock of a neighbouring farmer. Only his wife, therefore, was at home on my return, and she had departed with a—meek, humble, and, I may say, humiliated such as abound in the cottages of Kent. She quietly welcomed me—asked me to sit down put some additional wood on the fire to make a large pot boil, in which, as I was soon informed, some pickled pork and cauliflowers (both of their own production—for they had fattened the pig and planted the cauliflowers) were to be boiled for dinner. She then sat down, and we began to talk about railroads, which to one who had only once travelled on them, were yet great wonders—the great city of London—the weather—and such objects as strangers might naturally talk about. On a side table several books were lying; and on a little old-fashioned bureau, not unbecoming before the fire, was some one of the many periodicals that are weekly issued from this manufactory of journals; and, noticing the matter, I inquired if she read much. The answer led to the following tale, told in the most artless manner, without any air of boasting, but with a consciousness that she had done a good deed, and more than was strictly required of her:—

"Well, sir, I like to read a little myself; indeed, I don't know what I should at times do, if I did not read in books and journals. But our young girl is very fond of books. She likes to read; she is able to write; and if she were to go away from us, she will be able to tell us what becomes of her without our being dependent for that on others. She goes to school, and learns very quick. She is good at her spelling, and can write well. She can sing too, and knows music. We have done or her all we could, poor forsaken thing. You see, sir, she is not our daughter, for we have no child. She is a poor orphan, born here, sir, but, poor thing, she could not help that. Her mother has been dead more than six year, and she is now eleven years old. She has been with us ever since she was little more than two years and six months old. She is no relation of ours, none in the world, but her mother brought her to me and asked me to take care of her, and I undertook the charge. The mother died, and we could not send the poor thing to the Union; that would have been cruel; so we have done the best we could for her ourselves."

"That," said I, interposing a word of commendation, "was very kind and very good of you."

"Well, you see, sir, she could do nothing for herself. She had no friends, and as we had no children, we thought we might take care of her as our own. She looks on us now as her parents. She had hardly ever known any others, and she will always regard us as her parents. She is a good girl, and my husband and I like her. She has plenty of uncles and aunts, for her mother had two brothers and sisters, but not one of them ever takes the least notice of the child, or inquires after her, any more than if she were not."

"Do they live in this neighbourhood?"

"No, sir; they live somewhere far down in the county. I forget the name of the place; but it is not far from Ashford. The grandmother took the child for a little while; she was the only one of the family who showed any compassion; but when she died, Sarah brought her to me, and asked me to take care of her, and none of her brothers and sisters have ever troubled themselves about the girl. The mother was formerly in service here in the neighbourhood—she was a housemaid, and a very excellent servant she was. After the birth of her child, she worried very much; she was never well again; she took ill, and fell into a consumption: she went into an hospital; she went to London; she had doctors there; but her time was come and she died. She did worry so, poor thing. She could not get better; though she strove hard, for her child's sake."

About this period of the story the good man of the house returned. Like me, he had been unable to prosecute his intention; he had stopped up under a tree for a time, but, finding the rain continue, he returned.

"And what," I asked, "became of the child's father? Did he do nothing for his offspring? Who was he?"

"I was telling the gentleman of our little girl," said the woman; and immediately the cottager replied to my question.

"The man, sir, was a gardener, and he lives somewhere about Lee Green. I had something to say to him on the subject long ago, but I thought he did not believe what I said. So I felt indignant at him, and I never would have anything more to say to him. He has other children, and he is well to do in the world. I would not, however, be his; and from that hour that had darkened the old cottager's countenance while talking of the man passed away in a very pleasant smile, such as we may suppose must always hover about his heart whenever he thinks of the poor orphan. "I would not have the death of that young woman on my conscience, for all his property. I like the child, and I'll do what I can to take care of her"

"Well," struck in the wife, "she is a good girl, and we have a great deal of pleasure with her."

"Where is she now?" I asked.

"She is gone to church with the other children," was the answer.

The man had in the meantime charged part of his dress; and the woman, after a word or two with him on the subject, had put the pork and the cauliflowers into the pot; and then the man lit his pipe, and sat himself down quietly to smoke it. He was, I suppose, about sixty years of age; his countenance indicated great shrewdness, overcast and sometimes mingled with considerable decision and a fair share of talents. I have no doubt, as he stated, that he had been in his time very skilful in his calling—having been once at Blackheath almost next door to the celebrated shearing, lately sent from Spring Gardens Western—although he did not seem to have thriven particularly in the world. His extreme kindness of heart, probably with which ambition is rarely united, stood in the way of worldly success. He was not hard and grasping, and did not clutch fast what he got. His grandfather and his father before him, he told me, had lived in that cottage, and held it on lease for more than sixty years. There was no sign or law of ejectment over it, but the land had been divided between and her husband having a quarter of an acre, and he retaining the remainder. On the portion he cultivated fruit and vegetables, and his sister and her husband grain and straw. They occupied the neighbouring cottage, and make a very happy family—such as, I am afraid, is not so often as we might wish, and as seems natural, now to be found in the cottages of England. They had evidently a sufficiency of food and some luxuries, and they were comfortably clothed, and their furniture, including the books and an eight-day clock, was old, but, compared with what cottages now generally contain, abundant. There were no marks of superfluity or of wealth; and I could not but reflect with admiration on the unostentatious benevolence that had in one of this elderly couple to provide so respectably for the poor child thrown on their bounty.

The weather clearing up after a time, I bade them a cordial good-bye.

This was a mere hap-hazard encounter that has led me to see how naturally amidst our peasantry will, probably, be acquainted with many similar acts of kindness. They ought to be published. At present, their character, if not actually trampled, is habitually painted in dark colours, to make the merits of other classes conspicuous by the contrast—

All their faults observed,
Set in a note-book, learned and conned by rote,
To cast into their teeth.

All their virtues seem entirely overlooked: their patient endurance of privations; their submission to multiplied and vexatious restrictions; their exclusion from the commons, and the woods, and the many by-paths where their fathers walked or took their pleasure; their condemnation to political servitude, taking from them all power to make their feelings known, and get a fair hearing for themselves; their continued obedience to a form of society and to laws which they only know as an injury and vexation; the help they give to each other, their kindness and charity; their respect for those who treat them well, are all forgotten, and only their faults, their vices, and their crimes, their improvidence, recklessness, and depredations, are remembered. Though their strong arm defends the country, their patriotism is neither noticed nor rewarded. In Parliament, and out of Parliament—in discussing affairs of State and parish affairs—at Exeter Hall, and wherever the voice of philanthropy is heard, their vices form the staple of many long harangues: their virtues are circumscribed, if not wholly buried in oblivion, in very few and short words. We are completely governed by the mere impressions of our senses; and the rudeness of their speech, the hardness of their manners, and their unsightly and dirty appearance, beget a belief that they have uncultivated minds, and depraved hearts They speak violently, they jostle against each other, and encounter unfavourable opinions by never shewing to one another that respect they show to the upper classes. They are wanting in courtesy, and their outward demeanour appears to warrant the most unfavourable conclusions of their feelings: when they treat each other with respect and assume a more engaging appearance, they will have a powerful influence on all superficial observers. Such cases as the one here brought under notice may be rare; but the poor, unabashed by any false opinion, and having nothing to suffer from the world's censure, are not deterred by the faults and crimes of their fellows from sharing their company in misfortune, and imparting to suffering all the solace of which it is susceptible. Their charity and toleration redeem many of their failings, unite them together, and help to reconcile them to their lot. If to their material privations they added the superciliousness of the other classes, their lives would be unbearable. Their strict sorrows are compensated by strong affections. To promote general improvement, it is wisely ordered that we should see the severe censors of each other's vices; but, if the lower classes could give a voice in their opinions, and could influence the press, they would find as much to condemn in the lives of the upper classes, as the upper classes find to condemn and punish in the conduct of the poor. It is not only the Hon. but classes of men, who appear differently as painted by themselves and others.

T. H.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A CORRESPONDENT—Jack Sheppard, executed in 1724, is buried in the churchyard of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields

C. Jun., Dublin—Milk is best prepared for long voyages by evaporation to powder

AN ADMIRER is thanked; though we could not avail ourselves of his suggestion as to the Church of Stoughton Malherbe, Kent

ΣΥΜΜΑ—Apply respecting the foreign grammars to Dulau and Co., Soho-square, or to Maddon, Leadenhall-street

A NEW-YEAR SUB-CURIOUS FROM THE FRENCH REVOLUTION—The family of Beatthy is duly registered in the College of Arms

A CORRESPONDENT—The arms of the family of Higgins, of Westport, are "Arg quatre as on a fess of the second three towers, double turreted of the field." Crest: "Out of a tower double turreted, ea. a demi griffin arg. holding in the dexter paw a dagger of the last, hilt and pommel or." Motto, Pro patria.

GILLOTINE—The daughter of a nobleman does not forfeit the courtesy title of "honourable" on a second marriage with a commoner

G B—If the grant of arms is made to the grantee, and the sons of his father, which is the usual wording of the document, all the sons will bear the same coat of arms.

ROYALIST—The Queen's younger children have, as yet, no titles. Their royal birth gives them the rank and precedence of Princes

H A B—Apply for a copy of the Irish light infantry in 1784 a day

MANTELPIECE—Arms explained. "Or three pots sa. a chief vare. Motto, Fulgot virtus intemerata."

MARY must refer to "Glover's Glossary of Arms"

J. X. J.—Hugh O is clearly and indisputably [illegible] representative of the R family. So long as these remain a descendant of Gavin R, no descendant of his sister can be entitled to the representation of the R family

ROLLS—The coat of the Marlins of Highgate is "A lion holding in the dexter paw a sword all ppr." Crest: The Marlins of Gillingham, Kent. "An adder, with young ones bursting through her sides ppr." Another branch has for crest "A beaver in a castle ppr." It is probable that these northern Marlins sprung from a common ancestor with the Long Melford family

T. H. Chelmsford—At the date of the United States mail last received, Dr. Parkman had not been executed

X Y Z York, may purchase Hume's works of a dealer in second-hand books. The last quarto edition of "Collier" are published, but we have not time to inquire the price of books. (Ante, to G P L)

H H, Arundel-ho, and W R, Birkenhead, are thanked

J W S, Surrey—The letter should be unsealed, and sent enclosed to the Lord Chamberlain.

TEXAS—The keeping of a Majesty's birthday is arranged for the convenience of the Court

A SUBSCRIBER, Derby, and I W, Hadleigh-rd, are thanked

I. H W—Is lating cat flags operations at Chatham took place July 31, 1849

A CONSTANT READER should apply to Messrs. Ackermann's, 96 and 97, Strand

MARIA—Your [illegible] not at all of the first family of the present century

H. M. NEWMAN—We shall be glad of early intelligence

VERNON BRIDGE, should consult an agent for Patents, as Messrs Robertson, Fleet-street

CLARK—Rev. Lees Ainley resides at 61, Upper Brook street

KAOU—Address "Royal Italian Opera, Covent garden"

CARROLL, Lille, should apply at the Government Annuity Office, Old Jewry

CLERICO—The first Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS was published May 14, 1842

A. LADY—We do not remember to have before heard of the emblem in question

A NEW SUBSCRIBER—Answer A is right; we should retain the h, both in writing and speaking; thus, a history, but an historical work

L. S—Mr. Harrison Ainsworth has published a copious work on the British colonies

V V, Upper sydenham, is thanked; but we have not room for the anecdote

E A W—The Stock rose is said to have received its present name from the Turks, on account of its copious and showy variegation. The Red Sea is so called either from the abundance of coral found in it, or from some, unknown, cause on its eastern shore. Edom meaning red

W F R, Lichfield—The Rev. Jhnnal, on the Great Western Railway, is 9100, acts, or nearly one in land three quarters in length

Inquirer—Two years are required to be purchased with the Numbers

MYRTLE—Report a Dra a gre sma l solid pieces of common green glass, which have been dropped while red-hot into cold water. Their bursting property is referred to their retaining an internal tension. Annealing destroyed it by heating them to redness and allowing them to cool gradually, as in the annealing oven.

W R. HAWKINS—The town is the same as "Or, a boar's head between three water bougets, all within a bordure indented arg. Crest: A hand and arm couped below the elbow ppr. holding a cross-branch, all ppr Motto: Above the cross, Quo splendor fit gratior"

SAD MISDEE.—You are not entitled to use the arms or crest of your mother's uncle

A REGULAR SUBSCRIBER—Apply at the Horse Guards

X Y Z—A Hogue bonnie to change a name is obtained through the Home Secretary's office

The fesh. for saling the Herald's charges, amount to fifty guineas Arms are granted a the Heralds'-ffice. Doctors' Commons. The cost of a grant of arms is about £77 A crest cannot be granted to a person who is not entitled to a coat of arms

J.—The arms of Peak are, "Or, on a chev gu. three crosses formee of the field." Your guess or, in saltire, has no arg Persons hanging to them of the first earldom, with a cross formee gu., the spears enfiled with a shaphit vert." The arms are of the time of Edward the Confessor, and Mellowun, Norfolk

AN ADMIRER, Stockwell—Pursuant to the 7th and 8th Vict. cap 66, s. 16, the lady, having married an Englishman, is to all intents and purposes a British subject

CHARLEY ON THE BEARDIE—The interest of a Member of Parliament.

* * * The remainder of the Answers to Correspondents will be found in the Number with which this Supplement is published.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

NO. 16.—"SAMSON BETRAYED."—PAINTED BY F. R. PICKERSGILL, A.R.A.

(Continued from page 393.)

the "Richard," it is by no means a common effort, but evinces unmistakeable qualifications for making good those proofs of after-excellence with which his "Richard" was unusually rife. There are other points connected with the "Princes in the Tower," some of which are, as yet, unworked up by our painters; and others, though frequently painted, are still "to let." Northcote's "Murder of the Princes," and Mr. Leslie's "Princes Praying at their Bedside," on the night on which they were murdered—have not fulfilled all that could be expected from subjects so adapted to the requirements of art. Mr. Cross might find materials for a picture in the following exquisite description of the Princes in the Tower; and our readers will thank us.

NO. 597.—"CONTENTMENT."—PAINTED BY A. RANKLEY.

we are sure, for introducing them to one of the most beautiful and least known passages in English poetry. The writer is Thomas Heywood the prose Shakspeare of human nature, as he is called by Charles Lamb; and the play from which the scene is taken is "Edward IV."

Prince Edward. Uncle, what gentleman is that?
Gloster. It is, sweet Prince, Lieutenant of the Tower.
Prince Edward. Sir, we are come to be your guests to-night.
I pray you, tell me, did you ever know
Our father Edward lodge within this place?
Brackenbury. Never to lodge, my liege; but oftentimes
On other occasions I have seen him here.
Prince Richard. Brother, last night, when you did send for me,
My mother told me, hearing we should lodge
Within the Tower, that it was a prison;
And therefore marvell'd that my uncle Gloster,
Of all the houses for a King's receipt,
Within this city, had appointed none
Where you might keep your Court but only here.
Gloster. Vile brats! how they do descant on the Tower
My gentle nephew, they were ill-advised
To tutor you with such unfitting terms
(Wiee'er they were) against this Royal mansion.
What, if some part of it hath been reserved
To be a prison for nobility?
Follows it, therefore, that it cannot serve
To any other use? Cæsar himself,
That built the same, within it kept his court,
And many Kings since him; the rooms are large,
The building stately, and for strength besides
It is the safest and the surest hold you have.
Prince Edward. Uncle of Gloster, if you think it so,
'Tis not for me to contradict your will;
We must allow it, and are well content.
Gloster. On then, a' God's name.
Prince Edward. Yet before we go,
One question more with you, Master Lieutenant:
We like you well; and, but we do perceive
More comfort in your looks than in these walls,
For all our uncle Gloster's friendly speech,
Our hearts would be as heavy still as lead.
I pray you tell me, at which door or gate
Was it my Uncle Clarence did go in,
When he was sent a prisoner to this place.
Brackenbury. At this, my liege. Why sighs your Majesty?
Prince Edward. He went in here that ne'er came back again!
But as God hath decreed, so let it be!
Come, brother, shall we go?
Prince Richard. Yes, brother; anywhere with you.
* * * * * *
Scene, a Bedroom in the Tower—Enter the two young Princes in their bedgowns and caps.
Richard. How does your Lordship?
Edward. Well, good brother Richard,
How does yourself? you told me your head ached.
Richard. Indeed it does; my Lord, feel with your hands
How hot it is!
Edward. Indeed you have caught cold,
With sitting yesternight to hear me read;
I pray thee go to bed, sweet Dick, poor little heart!
Richard. You'll give me leave to wait upon your Lordship?
Edward. I had more need, brother, to wait on you;
For you are sick, and so am not I.
Richard. O Lord! methinks this going to our bed,
Now like it is to going to our grave.
Edward. I pray thee do not speak of graves, sweet heart,
Indeed this frightest me.
Richard. Why, my Lord brother, did not our tutor teach us,
That when at night we went unto our bed,
We still should think we went unto our grave.
Edward. Yes, that's true,
If we should do as every Christian ought,
To be prepared to die at every hour—
But I am heavy.
Richard. Indeed so am I.
Edward. Then let us say our prayers and go to bed.
[They kneel, and solemn music within. it ceases and they rise.]
Richard. What! bleeds your Grace?
Edward. Ay, two drops and no more.
Richard. God bless us both; and I desire no more.
Edward. Brother, see here what David says, and so say I:
"Lord, in thee will I trust, although I die."

This is true poetry. Let us add, while on the subject, that the supposed remains of the Princes (re-buried by Mr. Cross) were found in the reign of Charles II., while digging the foundation for the present stone stairs to the chapel of the White Tower, and placed in a cenotaph in Westminster Abbey, for which Sir Christopher Wren supplied the design and Charles II. the money. "It was curious piety in Charles II.," writes Walpole, "to erect a monument for the imaginary bones of Edward V. and his brother, and to sink £70,000, actually given by Parliament, for a monument to his father."

The Mote at Ightham, in Kent, in front of which Mr. Horsley has laid the scene of his pleasing picture called "Hospitality," is too often neglected, both by the tourist and the antiquary. It lies the distance of a short and pleasant walk from Sevenoaks, and the Hall is very perfect, and of fourteenth-century work. Mr. Horsley's explanatory motto—

NO. 491.—"THE BURIAL OF THE TWO SONS OF EDWARD IV., IN THE TOWER; 1483."—PAINTED BY T. CROSS.

Use hospitality one to another, without grudging, is excellently suited to the subject of his picture.

Mr Rankley, to whom we are indebted for the picture of "Contentment," is a young painter, fast rising into eminence. But he must not be led away by the praises of his friends. He has yet much to learn before he arrives at the excellences of a Mulready or a Frith. His leading merits are his quiet manner of telling his story, and the truthful character of his heads.

Of the other artists to whom we are indebted for our Supplemental Illustrations, Mr. Parker has acquired a name for his "Smuggler on the Look-out," and other pictures of merit; and Mr. O. R. Campbell seems to divide his time pleasantly and profitably between poetic compositions (such as the one now before us) and the solid padding of portraiture, for which he seems to have many qualities likely to lead to excellence in the most lucrative branch of his art.

In our former notice of the pictures in the Royal Academy, we stopped short at the landscape and portrait portion of the Exhibition, while we purposely deferred such remarks as we had to offer on the architectural designs and sculpture to a future and more fitting occasion. It is our intention to continue our criticisms in the present Supplement, and to group together the contributions of the several artists whose works are most deserving of notice. The reader will in this way be enabled to see at a glance what each artist of excellence has sent for Exhibition. Our English school of landscape painting has arrived at great excellence, and yet, as a school, it has existed for a much shorter space of time than any other branch of the art. Walpole, in noticing the works of Lambert, the scene-painter, who died in 1765, and whose name is now best remembered by the part he took in the foundation of "The Steaks," or Beef-steak Club, has these sensible remarks:—"In a country so profusely beautified with the amenities of nature, it is extraordinary that we have produced so few good painters of landscape. As our poets warm their imagination with sunny hills, or sigh after grottoes and cooling breeze, our painters draw rocks and precipices and castellated mountains, because Virgil gasped for breath at Naples, and Salvator wandered amid Alps and Apennines. Our ever-verdant lawns, rich vales, fields of haycocks, and hop-grounds are neglected as homely and familiar objects. The latter, which I never saw painted, are very picturesque, particularly in the season of gathering, when some tendrils are ambitiously climbing, and others dangling in natural festoons; while poles, despoiled of their garlands, are erected into easy pyramids, that contrast with the taper and upright columns In Kent such scenes are often backed by sand hills that enliven the green; and the gatherers dispersed among the narrow alleys, enliven the picture, and give it various distances." All that Walpole wanted and has pointed out has since been made good by a variety of English artists. Not by Richard Wilson so much (who worked more in the school of Claude), but by Gainsborough, Constable, Collins, &c., among the dead—and by Turner, Lee, Creswick, &c., among the living, though still more numerously, and in some instances as effectively, by the water-colour artists (from which the school has principally sprung), such as Girtin, Robson, and De Wint, among the dead—and Copley Fielding and David Cox among the living contributors to our Water-Colour Exhibitions. We have still, however, artists who entertain an early predilection for Italian rocks, precipices, and castellated mountains—not so much because Virgil gasped for breath at Naples, and Salvator wandered amidst Alps and Apennines, but for the exquisite beauty of the scenes themselves. There is a suffocating character in Claude's landscapes, which some young painters—Mr. Danby more especially—catch with a master's pencil. We are, however, truer, as a school, to Cuyp, Vandervelde, and Hobbema, than we are to Claude, Gaspar Poussin, and Salvator Rosa. We have painters, however, who belong to no school, and who are consummate masters in their art. [illegible] What Cowley said to Ned Howard the poet, "Pray, Mr. Howard, would there be any harm in now and then attending to grammar and ordinary rules," might be applied with equal justice to Mr. Turner—"Pray, Mr. Turner, would there be any harm in now and then looking on nature with an eye alive to its beauties, and not to certain preconceived eccentricities of your own." If Mr. Turner's early and mid-life works were true to nature (and this, we believe, is acknowledged on all sides), surely his present system, though founded on nature primarily, has grown to an excess of deviation from all everyday and anyday examination of nature, or of the nature described by our best poets or painted by our best painters. It is bad taste, we are told, not to admire the combinations of yellow and blue which Mr Turner laid on with a knife, or even a larger instrument; and only an imperfect acquaintance with art (so must are admirers) would fail, it is said, in finding a thousand beauties in the supplemental flesh-tints with which the late Mr. Etty, at times, plastered the faces and feet of a Venus or a Psyche.

Mr. Turner's contributions to the Exhibition are four in number, and all are illustrated (can we add, explained?) by some further extract from his MS. poem on "The Fallacies of Hope:"—

174. "Mercury sent to admonish Æneas."

> Beneath the morning mist
> Mercury waited to tell him of his neglected fleet.
> MS Fallacies of Hope.

192. "Æneas relating his story to Dido."

> Fallacious Hope beneath the moon's pale crescent shone,
> Dido listened to Troy's being lost and won.
> MS. Fallacies of Hope.

373. "The Visit to the Tomb."

> The sun went down in wrath at such deceit
> MS. Fallacies of Hope.

482. "The Departure of the Fleet."

> The orient moon shone on the departing fleet:
> Nemesis invoked, the priest held the parting cup
> MS. Fallacies of Hope.

The first-named picture, a great critic assures us, is exquisite for "delicacy and refinement;" the second, for "wealth and power." To appreciate either, "they must be approached no nearer than the spot at which the general effect can be judged of; nor must the spectator expect to find then the revelation of particular truth in their details." It is in "The Pleasures of Hope," not in "The Fallacies of Hope," that the line occurs—

> 'Tis distance lends enchantment to the view.

How far is this distance to be carried? till they are almost out of sight? We do not want Denner like nature: nor do we care to hear pictures praised to the skies (for Academic purposes) because they exhibit certain kaleidoscope qualities, and very little more.

Mr. F. Danby's single contribution is—

573. "Spring," and, though full of beauties, is far from equal to some of his previous contributions.

Mr. Stanfield has five works in all, and is in great strength:—

67. "Macbeth," act 1, scene 3.

> Macbeth. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.
> Banquo. What are these,
> So withered and so wild in their attire?"

131. "Scene on the Maas, near Dort—market-people waiting for the evening tide."

288. "Near Foria, Island of Ischia."

346. "The Bay of Baiæ, from the Capuchin Convent above Pozzuoli."

351. "Ponte Atrani, Gulf of Salerno"

Of these the principal picture is No. 131, painted for Sir Robert Peel, at the price of 500 guineas. It is untrue to Dort (the birthplace of Cuyp), but has many beauties. The Bay of Baiæ (326) is exquisitely Italian in character and composition.

Mr. David Roberts has in all seven works:—

53. "The Sanctuary of the Koran Mosque at Cordova."

107. "Interior of the Church of St. Jaque, at Antwerp."

202. "Interior of the Church St. Gomar, at Sierre, Belgium."

277. "Remains of the eastern portico of the Temple of the Sun, at Baalbec. Mount Lebanon in the distance."

378. "View—looking from under the portico of the great temple of Edfou, Upper Egypt."

441. "Entrance to the great temple of Aboosimble, in Nubia."

445. "The Shrine of St. Gomar, at Sierre, in Belgium."

Of these the two interiors (162 and 202) are by far the best. The interior of St. Jaque surpasses anything we have ever seen of either Steenwyk or Neef.

Mr. E. W. Cooke, than whom no English artist is truer to Vandervelde or Backhuysen, has in all four works. Of these, our favourite is (315) "Dutch Fishing Craft off Amsterdam."

58. "Evening." A scene on the Rivers of Poesnti, Gulf of Genoa.

154. "Schevening Sands—the tide making in."

315 "Dutch Fishing Craft, off the Booms, Amsterdam."

1202 "The Port of Marseilles."

Mr. Lee, it will be seen has been again working in conjunction with Mr. Sidney Cooper:—

29. "Cattle crossing a Ford—Summer Morning." (With Mr. Cooper.)

80 "A Mountain Stream."

298. "The Watering-Place." (With Mr. Cooper.)

4[illegible] "A Calm Morning."

4[illegible] "A Stormy Day."

One and all of these are true to English scenery in certain counties—such scenery, indeed, as Mr. Lee has given us over and over again, till we are somewhat tired of seeing it upon canvas.

There is no painter who is making more rapid strides in his art than Mr. Creswick. He is engraffing his own beautiful style on certain excellences which Mr. Linnell renders with a grace and feeling till now peculiarly his own. Mr. Creswick's contributions are five in number:—

8. "The Wind on Shore."

258. "The First Glimpse of the Sea."

288. "In the Forest."

497. "Old Trees."

542. "The Forest Farm."

"The First Glimpse of the Sea" is our own, and, as we observe, the public favourite of the five.

If Mr. Redgrave had a richer eye for colour, he would excel as a landscape painter. He loves to retreat to cool shades, and to paint them with a chill that catches the spectator. His works in the landscape branch of his art, are—

534. "The Woods planted by Evelyn, and still the property of his descendants."

> As the days of a tree are the days of my people, and mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands.—Isaiah lxv. 22.

1010. "Devon Cottage."

Mr. Linnell is seen to great advantage in (335) "Crossing the Brook." and should be contrasted with Mr. Creswick. His "Christ and the Woman of Samaria at Jacob's Well" is rather a landscape with figures than a Scriptural composition. The distance is particularly fine.

The works of Mr. Sidney Cooper, in which he has not wrought conjointly with Mr. Lee, are four in number:—

235. "Summer Showers."

278. "A Mountain Group: Evening."

416. "Fordwick Meadows: Sunset."

454. "A Group on the Welsh Mountains."

Mr. Cooper has carried his own branch of the art to great excellence. Surely he might try another style, in which cattle were less prominent, and succeed in the same way; they are cattle we confess we should be sorry to see him desert entirely his own peculiar province of art.

Young Mr. Danby, who sends

559. "Lone Scene—North Wales;" and

598. "Scene from Badger Hill," is another rising artist, with an eye attentive to the poetry of his art, and a hand faithful in rendering the necessary details. He is seldom happier than in Welsh scenery.

Mr. Boddington has not fallen back, though we observe no particular advance on some efforts in his three pictures:—

40. "Autumn Scene in Wales."

84. "A Bright Summer's Day."

1251. "A Welsh Mill."

Mr. Bright, too, is somewhat stationary, in—

12. "A Mountain Stream, Borrowdale, Cumberland;" and

480. "On the River Deva, Norfolk."

There is a fine eye for nature apparent in Mr. E. M. Ward's first-attempt at landscape—

437. "Izaak Walton Angling: a Summer's Day on the Banks of the Colne."

but Mr. Ward errs as Mr. Redgrave errs—he is too cold. His green tints are greener than nature: he has been looking at the leaf of the lime-tree, and has given his tone according to pattern.

Mr. Cromek contributes some clever trifles, and Mr. Linton a fine "View of Venice" (484). The fault of Canaletti (the fine and rule too apparent) is not observable in Mr. Linton's well-considered and effective picture.

There is merit in Mr. W. Fenn's (942) "Overshot Mill, near Matlock, Derby;" and much to admire in Mr J. Price's "Autumnal Landscape" (628), though seen to great disadvantage, from its position in the Octagon Cellar.

We now pass on to consider the portraits in the present Exhibition.

From the death of Sir Joshua Reynolds, in 1792, to the death of Sir Thomas Lawrence, in 1830, England possessed a succession of portrait painters of great eminence in a much-patronised branch of the Fine Arts; viz. Lawrence, Hoppner, Owen, Phillips, Beechey, Harlowe, and others. Lawrence excelled in the fascination of female loveliness; Hoppner and Owen in manly portraiture; Phillips in matronly beauty; Beechey in a gentleman-like bearing; and Harlowe in a truth of character, both male and female, which had led, but for an early death, to a sustained excellence, of which, in this country, we have had only stray or accidental examples. Since Lawrence's death, the branch of the art to which he lent so much lustre has not been sustained in anything like the same eminent degree. Of our present portrait painters, Mr. Pickersgill is the last survivor of the race of Lawrence. Mr. Knight, Mr F. Grant, Mr Watson Gordon, Sir William Ross, and Mr Thorburn have all sprung up in the twenty years' interval. Mr. Gordon leads the way in manly portraiture; Mr. Grant in the fascination of female beauty; while, in the more mature branch of the art, Sir William Ross and Mr. Thorburn have never been surpassed.

Mr. Watson Gordon's contributions are three in number:—

127. "Portrait of a Lady and Child."

175. "Portrait of Daniel Vere, Esq., of Stonebyres, and Sheriff of Lanarkshire"

193 "Portrait of the Right Hon. the Lord Justice-General and President of the Court of Session, Scotland."

The Lord Justice-General is a very noble portrait, founded on the school of Sir Henry Raeburn.

Mr. F. Grant has sent seven works:—

52 "The Countess Bruce."

73. "His Grace the Duke of Devonshire."

126. "Miss Grant."

188 "The Viscount Hardinge, G.C.B."

203. "The Warden of Winchester College."

335. "General Earl of Stafford."

364. "The Lady Elizabeth Wells."

The Duke of Devonshire is a full-length; and, at the private view of the Exhibition, his Grace was seen in fights, so that he looked like a peg-top or a black ball on with a flesh-coloured head. The peculiar effect of this arrangement afforded so much fun to the visitors, that his Grace was dressed the next day in trowsers and boots, as he now appears. Of the female portraits, the three-quarter portrait of the Countess of Bruce is one of Mr. Grant's best pictures.

Mr. Pickersgill must be looked upon as a veteran in art, and judged as her by what he has done than what he is now doing. There is merit, however, in several of the portraits enumerated below:—

66. "Samuel Amory, Esq."

251. "Nourmahal, the Light of the Harem."

330. "Sir Harry D. Jo Goring, Bart., in his uniform as Captain of his Grace the Duke of Norfolk's Yeomanry."

142 "Quaries Harris, Esq., Founder of the Royal Orthopædic Hospital."

181. "Sir Robert Harry Inglis, Bart., M.P."

317. "W. B. Wilcox, Esq., M.A."

370. "Monsieur Colomb."

483 "Portrait of a Traveller." [Mr. W. S. Woodburn, and very like.]

Mr. Knight, the secretary to the Academy, has found his style on Mr. Pickersgill. Though clever, he is frequently coarse and heavy. Several instances of these defects might be pointed out in the following list of his contributions:—

59. "John Baldwin Buckstone, Esq., Theatre Royal, Haymarket."

73. "Portrait of Robert Keate, Esq., F.R.S., Serjeant-Surgeon to the Queen, and Senior Surgeon to St. George's Hospital."

119. "Portrait of Lestock Peach Wilson, Esq., late Governor of the London Assurance Corporation."

182. "Portrait of Sir James Duke, Bart., M.P., late Lord Mayor of the City of London."

232 "Sir J. J. Hassler, F.R.S., Deputy-Lieutenant of the County of Essex."

325. "Portrait of Thomas Corney, Esq., Deputy of Bread-street Ward, and Treasurer of the Ward School."

374. "T. S. Cooper, Esq., A.R.A."

506 "Portrait of Mrs Fitzwilliam, of the Theatre Royal, Haymarket."

Mr H. W. Phillips, also one of the Royal Academicians, has made, in a year, more than a year's advance in excellence. His portrait of Major Rawlinson is characteristic and clever, and the full-length of his mother dignified and matronly.

807. "Portrait of Major Rawlinson."

851. "Portrait of Mrs. Phillips."

519. "Portrait of Mons. A. Sheffer, the celebrated painter."

570 "Portrait of Madame Viardot, in the character of Fidès, in Meyerbeer's opera of the 'Prophète.'"

Sir William Ross has eight works in all:—

719. "George IV."

743. "Miss Caroline Wyndham."

763. "The Marchioness of Breadalbane"

781 "Mrs. William Gibbs and Children."

809 "Mrs. Owen Cresswell and Children."

825. "William Gibbs, Esq., and Children."

862. "The Lady Naas."

880. "The Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P."

In all of these the influence of Mr Thorburn's example is very perceptible. But the breadth and boldness which Mr. Thorburn was the first to introduce may be carried too far, and the well-known charms of miniature painting lost sight of in too close an endeavour after qualities scarcely suitable to the fascinating art of Petitot and Zincke.

Mr. Thorburn has eight miniatures, the greatest number allowed by the rules of the Academy:—

720. "William Augustus, infant son of William Angerstein, Esq."

731. "The Lady Louisa Hill."

744. "Masters S and E. Squire."

767. "J. D. Gardner, Esq., and Mrs. Gardner."

800. "The Lady Lindsay and Miss Lindsay."

866. "Mrs. D. Coutts Mahon[illegible]."

882. "Miss Acland Hood."

907. "Portrait of a Lady."

Mr Thorburn's great object is to adapt some acknowledged form or beautiful arrangement in art to the requirements of common portraiture. As we have already observed, he is apt to carry this too far. The portrait of Miss Caroline Wyndham Almeria Sheerga is more to wear (if at all like) features and arrangement not at all suitable to Raffaelesque art.

Among the remaining portraits we may particularly mention No.

69. "Portrait of Joseph Brotherton, Esq., M.P." By Mr. Westcott. A capital full-length much in Watson Gordon's manner.

86. "Portrait of Sir Charles Trevelyan." Presented to Lady Trevelyan by the Officers of the Commissariat. By E. U. Eddis.

97. "Portrait of William Cubitt, Esq., M.P." By W. Boxall.

200. "Arnolfo di Lapo." By S. Hart, R.A.

> Thus in the brain the lofty structures rise.—MS.

And No. 257, "Miss Virginia Pattle;" by G. F. Watts. The head by Hart is in the deep Venetian manner, and is very dignified and fine.

In the likelihood that we shall continue our Illustrations in another Number, we shall conclude our criticisms for the present.

A WALK IN A WORKHOUSE.—Groves of babies in arms; groves of mothers and other sick women in bed; groves of lunatics; jungles of men in stone-paved dower-rairs day-rooms, waiting for their dinners; longer and longer groves of old people in upstairs infirmary wards, wearing out life, God knows how—this was the scenery through which the walk lay, for two hours. In some of these utter chambers there were pictures stuck against the wall, and a neat pile of crockery and sewing on a kind of sideboard; now and then it was a treat to see a plant or two; in almost every ward there was a cat. In all of these Long Walks of aged and infirm, some old people were bed ridden and had been for a long time; others were sitting on their beds half-naked; some dying in their beds; some out of bed, and sitting at a table near the fire. A sullen or lethargic indifference to what was asked, a blunted sensibility to everything but warmth and food, a moody absence of complaint as to age or pain, a dogged silence and resentful desire to be left alone again, I thought were generally apparent.—Dickens's Household Words

BABYLON.—An English merchant named Heldred, who travelled in 1583, states that he passed "the mighty old city of Babylon." He mentions particularly what he calls the Tower of Babel describing it as a quarter of a mile in circuit, and about the height of St Paul's, the old cathedral, which was burnt in the time of Elizabeth, but it showeth much bigger.—Nouvelle and Perspective, by W. S. W. Vaux, M.A.

A CASE OF IMPOSTURE.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

Watford, May, 1850.

SIR,—Allow me to call your attention to a remarkable case of interest that has recently happened in this neighbourhood. Its moral may be of service to many of our good-natured countrymen, who always feel glad in relieving a distressed fellow-creature; and for them it is intended.

Four years ago, a gentleman, well known for his benevolence and earnestness in assisting the poor (by birth a Frenchman), was journeying through St. Albans to Watford. He was induced to stop at an inn at St. Albans, from being told a Pole, who could not speak English, was inside and in distress. He met him—a man of commanding manner, tall, well-made, dark hair, quick black eye, and all that could induce sympathy towards a fine and intelligent-looking man reduced to misery and unhappiness. He was about thirty years of age, but looked older from what he had suffered. He was going to Algiers—he had received many wounds in battle, and intended reaching his regiment as soon as he was able. He was the son of Baron Rennd, of Rik Castle, near Riga, in Courland, formerly part of Poland, but for the last hundred years in the possession of Russia His mother was by birth a Countess Lewen, and for years lady of honour to the Empress of Russia; his father was a general in the Russian service but, with his other sons, fell in the Polish Revolution. He had been at the Imperial military college of St Petersburgh ten years, leaving which, he went with the Russian Guards, and fought a long time in Circassia, he there received several wounds, and at-length distinguished himself so well that he obtained the order of St. George and St Ann for personal bravery

He feared the climate of Algiers would soon kill him, and, on parting, said, "If you do not hear from me in six weeks conclude I am dead, and be so kind as to post this letter, which will inform my mother of the same." Such was his tale, and the good-natured gentleman assisted him to Calais. One thing, however, he insisted upon—that his benefactor should accept a pair of rein-deer gloves as a token of friendship.

Six months rolled on, and he was not heard of. Four years after, or the 19th of last November, appeared the same man at the same inn at St. Albans. He was in search of his friend. They told him they did not know where he was then living, but directed him to where he once lived. He trumped to the place, and to another before he found him; and when he did, he had walked about all his friends, he said. He had fought for the Hungarians: he was one of those Poles to whom Kossuth had given up to Russia to be hanged. A price was set on his head. He was only free in England! He was tramped through France under the charge of gendarmes; his passage-money had been paid from Calais to England; he was cast out by the Polish Refugees Asylum with three sixpence, and no answer that they were full.

His strange look foretold he had determined on suicide; but he was persuaded otherwise We assured him it was probable we might get him a situation as a professor of languages: he could speak German, French, Italian, Russ, Polish, Latin, and Greek. He was, also, a good musician, and we thought might do something in that way, but he said he could do but as an amateur. We procured him the means, and he determined to walk hard. Sure enough he lived hard for it cost him but two shillings per week for the first fortnight—he would not accept more. "Potatoes, cold water, and a little steak," he said, "he could live on very well."

He used to talk of his mother with great affection. He said he had written many times to her, but concluded she was dead, as he never received an answer. One day, as he was thinking of the subject, a sudden change of joy overspread his countenance, and he exclaimed, "I'll try again! The Russians might have stopped my letters I'll write by way of Switzerland through a friend there, but he said he could do but as an amateur. He did so the same day: it succeeded. He had an answer almost by return of post.

To describe the reading of the letter, and the change of the man's mind from that time, I shall not attempt: suffice it to say, he immediately wrote of his distress and circumstances, and for money. With impatient anxiety he anticipated a remittance.

He heard from a person at Rome, informing him his mother had left there, three days previous to the arrival of his request, for Switzerland, on a journey of going to the waters; that she never had ceased hearing from her son, and that she would spend the remainder of her life with her only son.

A long time he waited impatiently for letters. The artist's life was all thrown aside—he was too excited—he could never rest; he was constantly walking about his room; he seldom went out but to the post. But he heard from his mother at last. The following is an extract from her letter; it was translated from German into French, and written at Basle:—

"My dearly beloved son,—Is it possible the Almighty God will allow us to meet again after so much sorrow?

"You have suffered much, my dear child, for the welfare of an ungrateful nation. Do not murder; God is just; he will reunite us. The reason you have not sooner received letters from me is that Mr. Arkwright was absent, and that my letters have remained at his house.

"The day before yesterday I arrived here from Berlin, where a fever had detained me nineteen days. My first business on my arrival was to write to you so as not to lose you any longer in doubt, and to tell you I wish to pass the remainder of my days in England, where people can act and think freely. Now I will tell you all my present condition. All the estates I possessed in Lorland I have mortgaged through the medium of our agent. They have realised about £20,000. I have ordered Mr. R. to forward you, my son, £150. Mr. Arkwright told me you could not go to France. I prefer going to Ostend, which city will not shut its gates against you. * * * * * * *

"Bertha has been, and is still, faithful to you. The most favourable offers she has rejected; and, with £20,000, she asked me only the favour of following me. She is a flower too precious for this world. Your heart cannot, I believe, understand her. The more you wrong her, the more she will love you. * * * * * * *

I shall remain here about ten days."

He then began to be more impatient still. He smoked and sipped gin all day, but without ever appearing intoxicated. His anxiety for letters was interesting and increasing. He received the second letter from his mother. She was at Lyons.

"Lyons, 23rd Feb., 1850.

"My dear Son,—You have a very bad habit, my child: you always allow yourself to be carried away by an ill-placed pride, even as far as to prefer being under obligations to strangers than to address yourself to your own mother. Why did you not mention in your first letter you were in want of money? I must uphold you, because I could then have sent you money. The bills not being yet transmitted to London, now you must wait. * * * * * * *

The sister-in-law of the Countess Swarmback, who is in company with us, introduced us to the Prefect of Lyons, where we took tea. *

Bertha has been very ill; she suffers much, poor child; but I expect much from our coming meeting I am so weak, you cannot imagine; and when I think of having to cross the sea, which I dread more than any other part of my journey, it sets me ill afresh. * * * * * * *

Bertha has been very ill; she suffers much, poor child; but I expect much from our coming meeting I am so weak, you cannot imagine; and when I think of having to cross the sea, which I dread more than any other part of my journey, it sets me ill afresh. * * * * * * *

I shall not be able to write you more at present; but, if it pleases Providence, that will be soon through also. Make your arrangements that a trustworthy man meets us at Dover. I expect you the 27th, at Ostend.

"I should have wished to have addressed a few lines to your benefactor personally, to thank him for his kindness, but I am very tired. Tell him from me, that he can depend on my gratitude, and that I shall never forget what he has done for you: these are not mere words of courtesy.

"The packet has been kind enough to undertake us of our heavy luggage, and place it in the charge of an agent he knows well: this is very kind of him. I now fancy myself a little bird, that can fly about freely. * * * Well, my dear child, in six days we shall meet, if the Almighty allow it; for He is the ruler of all things.—Adieu, my dear son, till then. "THE MOTHER."

Soon after this he was taken ill, and dangerously so. His medical attendant declared he should never thoroughly survive it. His mind was ever excited; and he had slipped gin to such an extent, he could expect nothing else. He insisted on being bled: the doctor refused. "Make me but well enough to see my mother," he would say, "and then I can die—but not till then!" He was bled, and got well.

During this time, his arrangements were, that his friend should go to Ostend to meet his mother, if he did not feel well enough when the time came. However, he was well enough, and he went—and we have never seen him since. His introduction of Bertha was an excuse for not having come to a reconcilement with his mother—he used to say he would never marry that girl; and he feared for not coming so, his mother would cut him off. And with this excuse, and the same ale again, he got money from the brother of his benefactor at Brussels. His friend went to Ostend and to Brussels—found he had managed to get £25 under false pretences, to be a villain and connected with a gang of others. We have (he says he has) sought for his mother in vain (I almost doubt if he ever had one). The Prefect of Lyons has been written to, and this is his official answer: "I have no knowledge whatever of such persons visiting me, &c. &c., as you state, nor have they ever passed through here; so I fear you have been deceived by a swindler." Other things have been proved of him to be a swindler, and that all the pretended correspondence is false, although the letters, we know, were posted at those places. The publicity of this affair may serve as a warning to others in being too lenient. I remain, Sir, yours respectfully, but, I am sorry to say,

One of his DUPES.

"ESQUIRE" AND "GENTLEMAN."—The resolution passed by the corporation of Stratford-on-Avon when they presented the freedom of that town to Garrick, runs something like this:—"Through love and regard to the memory of the late Mr. William Shakspeare, and being fully sensible of the extraordinary merits of his most just close representative, David Garrick, Esquire." Had David a better right to the title than this great poet? Shakspeare, in the letter part of his life, was, no doubt, Master Shakspeare, a title so common as even to be bestowed upon the geometer of Alexandria In Bayford's collection is preserved a catalogue advertising "Master Euclid's Elements of Plain Geometry."—Notes and Queries.

PICTURESQUE SKETCHES OF LONDON, PAST AND PRESENT.

BY THOMAS MILLER.

CHAPTER XXII.

PREROGATIVE COURT, DOCTORS' COMMONS.

In this Chapter we conduct our readers to a new scene; to the chambers where the wills of the dead are depos ted; through those doors by which many a beating and anxious heart enters, to return disappointed, or half delirious with delight through dreaming of the many pleasures which riches will procure. What thousands of human beings, fluttering bet ween hope and fear, have passed through the shadow of that arched gateway which stands near the corner of St. Paul's Churchyard—many to repass the possessors of riches, but never again to find that sweet sleep which hard-handed Industry brought, and which moderate competency had never before heaved a sigh for! Legacies left, which proved a curse instead of a comfort, by arousing ambitious thoughts to soar amid airy speculations, where hundreds of captivating bubbles floated, tinged with the richest hues, until all in a moment burst, and left but a naked desolation behind —a hideous barrenness, never seen while those painted vapours danced before the eye. Wealth, over which Care ever after kept watch with sleepless eyes and furrowed brow, uncertain into which s tream of enjoyment he should launch with his freight, and so pondered until ld age and then Death came, and instead of the castle he had so long contemplated purchasing, he was installed without a tear into the narrow coffin, and borne without a sigh to the grave. Others, again, raised from enduring and patient poverty to undreamed-of comfort, because he who would not have advanced them a shil ling, would it have saved them from starvation and death, was now powerless; his greatest agony, when he passed away, being the thought that he could not carry his unforg ving vengeance beyond the grave—that he had not power to disinherit the child whom he spurned and hated. We have gazed on those dark-bound volumes in the Prerogative Will Office, and thought that if the dead were permitted to return again, what ghastly forms would enter that room, shrieking aloud names once beloved, and blotting out for ever such as they had in their blind passion inserted One stroke of the pen, and she who sits weeping and plying her needle in one of the neighbouring attics (her children crying around her for bread), might have been trailing the roses around the trellised porch of some beautiful cottage, while they were playing on the green lawn, stranger to sorrow and hunger.

Let us pause for a few moments and examine the attitudes and countenances of those who are perusing the wills. See how the woman's hand shakes as she turns over the leaves: look at the working of the muscles of that young man's face: behold the p ay of light over the wrinkled features o that old lady: see how she clasps her hands tog ther and is looking upward, and you may tell what each has discovered as closer y as it you knew them, had stood beside them, and had read every line which they have been reading. That low sound falling on the ear like the faint dropping of the summer rain on the leaves, is caused by the tears shed by that pale young lady in deep mourning; they fall quicker and quicker on the pages, and she rests her head on her hand, for she can no longer see to read through those blinding tears. The old objects of a once happy home are floating before the eye of her imagination; it may 'e that they are all there enumerated :t at she has in fancy been passing from room to room, looking into the mirror that threw back her image in happy childhood, leaning from the window where stood the box of mignionette which she watered in the dewy morning, while her shadow fell upon the sunshine which slept on the chamber floor. Old faces and old voices have again been before and around her, and she weeps not at finding that she is forgotten, but because these she so fondly loved are either no more, or far away, and re.use to countenance her for marrying the object of her love, a man rejected by all her family only because he was poor. In that great mustering-gro und beyond the grave, who would not rather occupy the place of that patient sufferer, than stand among the ranks of those who have thus neglected her? Contrast her deportment with that of the young man at the end of the desk: his flats are clenched, the nails of his fingers imbedd ed in the palms of his hands, his teeth set, his eyebrows knit: he strikes his foot as he places it on his head, closes the door with a loud slam, and curses the memory of a dead man, because he has left a reckless spendthrift just enough to live on all his li e without working, yet so bequeathed it that he can but draw a given sum monthly. He is savage because he cannot have the whole legacy at once in his pos session. If he could, he would be likely enough to squander it all away in a single night at some notorious gambling-house.

On another counte nance you would utter amazement slowly changing into the expression of contempt, disgust, and at last l settles down into black and sullen hatred. She, whose features have in a few moments undergone so many sudden alterations, finds that all her deeply-laid schemes and subtle plans have been of no avail, but that the poor relative, whose char cter she was ever disparaging in the eyes of the old man, and whom she kept from his bedside by the falsehoods she uttered to him, is now the possessor of all his riches. She is gnawing the end of her glove through sheer vexation; all he has left her is a book, an old volume, entitled "The Value of True Si cerity." The hypocrite is justly rebuked in his last will and testament. She departs burning with shame and anger, and would give the world could she but leave her conscience behind her.

Wealth is at old man tottering on the very verge of the grave, and with hardly strength enough to lift the volume which he so eagerly scans: although he could already bury himself in gold, and leave the yellow locre piled high above his narrow bed, he still covets more. He, who has not her appetite nor taste for any rational enj yment, who is compelled to sit up half the night because he cannot rest, is still ea er to increase his riches. For what? the love of money alone. If he lends it, he never considers for what object: it may be good or evil, that concerns him not—all he looks to is the security, and the interest he is to receive on his capital: it may be to bring waste lands into cultivation, to aid a poor and industrious people, but one-per-cent more, and he would supply any armed tyrant with funds to do try the whole peaceful peoples, to leave their homes a mass of burning ruins, and the furrows of their fields running red with blood.

Here is the last Will and Testament of the immortal Shakspeare—the very handwriting of the mighty Bard "who was not for an age, but for all time." On that document his far-seeing eyes looked, on that page his hand rested; the same hand which obeyed the influence of his high genius while he drew forth Hamlet and Lear and Macbeth, Desdemona, Ophelia, Perdita and Imogen, held the pen which traced the very lines we now look upon. But for such old homely touches as these, we should almost doubt whether that god-like spirit ever descended to the common duties of this hard work-a-day world. But here we find him—

> Not too bright or good
> For human nature's daily food.

But for proofs like these, we might fancy that such a soul had but mistaken its way while wandering from the abodes of the gods, and brought with it to the earth all the wisdom and poetry which it had taken immortality to gather. That when he returned to his native home, the gates of heaven closed not suddenly enough upon him to shut out the undying echoes of his golden utterance; but that for ever the winds of heaven were c ndemned to re-peat them—to blow them abroad into every corner of the earth—nor cease their mission until the language he spoke shall be uttered by "every nation, kindred, and tongue." Such a deed as this alone proves his mortality; for the creations of h s genius carry him as far away from the common standard of men, as heaven is from earth

THE PREROGATIVE COURT, DOCTORS' COMMONS.

What records have we here of old families long since passed away—their very names forgotten in the places where they once enjoyed

> A little rule—a little sway,
> A sunbeam on a winter's day,
> Between the cradle and the grave.—DYER.

Perhaps the last of the race perished a pauper in some obscure poorhouse; it may be, the one whom his ancestors founded a century or two ago.

Another visits the Will Office, who gained information of the death of some near and wealthy relative by cha ce—perhaps thr ugh the scrap of an old newspaper which formed the wrapper of the pennyworth of butter or cheese purchased at the little huckster's shop at the corner of the filthy court in which for years the poor family have resided—spirits in wh ch misery clings to misery for companionship. Letter after letter have they written, but received no answer; no one would take the trouble to reply. Then they sank lower and lower, and removed from place to place, until at last one single room in an undrained and breathless alley held all their cares and al their heart-aches; and there they tried to forget their wealthy relatives—to bury the remembrance of what they once were.

Meantime, he who had l ng been dead had remembered them on his deathbed; letters had been written, and advertisements had appeared, announcing "something to their advantage," but they had fallen amongst the very poor, who, though living in the heart of London, concerned not themselves with matters foreign to their own wretched neighbourhood, unless it were some execution or law-proceeding to their depressed bodies. Poverty had long ago prostrated all their finer feelings. Even such as these have we seen enter the floors of the Prerogative Court, after they had with difficu ty raised the shilling which they were compelled to pay before searching for the will, and come out exultingly the possessors of thou sands.

Knowing fellows are the p rsons who hang about this neighbourhood; you can tell that they have not p yed there for years without picking up "a thing or two;" they appear elated as "hunt" as the learned who address themselves; and, should you find yourself the possessor of a fat legacy, and be so ignorant as to apply to these white-aproned messengers as to the best way of getting it at once, they will undertake to introduce you to a gentleman, who, from what you hear, you almost believe to be so clever that he could whip your name into a will, if he chose, and obtain for you a fortune, if even you had no l gal claim to a single shilling. "God bless you, sir, we know plenty of people that've got thousands, as never expected to have a blessed mag whatsaundever." And green countrymen follow these plump images of Hope, and treat them to whatever they please to take

In the note below I have appended my first impression on visiting the Prerogative Will Office several years ago. The extract was written on the evening of the day when I retired after search ng a will for a friend in the country.*

* A strange place is that Prerogative Court, a fine picture of the great out-of-door world, for there Hope and Despair stand sentinels at the doors, and the living mingle with the dead in the ir eager curry to shut after what those in the grave have left them. There is a smell as of death about the place, as if grey old departed spirits lurked in the musty folios, and had scattered their ashes amid the yellow and unearthly-looking parchments, which rise up again in clouds of dust while you turn over the mouldy and crackling leaves, making you sneeze again; while an hundred old echoes take up the sound, until every volume seems to shake and laugh, and mock you as if the grim old dead found it a rare spot to make merry in—to "sup and sow," and play off a thousand devilish antics upon the living. That court is the great mart of merriment and misery, and its open doors too often lead to madness; groaning, and moaning, when they are opened or shut, as if the spirits within wailed over those who came in search of wealth, to return disappointed. Beauty, Virtue, and Innocence also enter there, preceded by Pity; while Hope, with downcast eyes, leads them gently by the hand—her smile subdued, and her sweet countenance sorrowful. But these are angel visitants, who are compelled to appear in that court—who come in tears, and, when their duty is done, pass away for ever. There is a sound of sighs within those walls—a smell of green, stagnant tears: if you listen, you seem to hear the dead rustling among the old parchments: they move like black-beetles, and murmur to or s another in an old Saxon language. Wickedness and Wrong have also their lurking-places there—where they lie concealed, and laugh at Right and Justice amid a pile of black-lettered laws, beneath which you find injured Poverty mourning unpitied. The grim Judge, who has sat here for hundreds of years, is deaf and blind: he acts but for the dead—the living he can neither hear nor see—but ever sits with his elbow resting on a pile of musty volumes, mute as a marble image. It is a place filled with solemn associations—the ante-room of Life in Death.—Godfrey Malvern.

DEATH OF LORD JEFFREY'S WIDOW.—Shortly after Lord Jeffrey's decease, his widow, affected in a more than ordinary degree by the sad event, broke up her establishment in Moray-place, at Edinburgh, and took up her abode with Mr. and Mrs. Empson, her son-in-law and daughter, at Hailsbury, Hertford. Though naturally cheerful, her spirits never recovered the shock she sustained by the death of her distinguished partner, whom she had not survived four months. Mr. Jeffrey was born in America, and was the grand-niece of the celebrated John Wilkes, and second wife of the late Lord Jeffrey, to whom she was married in 1813.—Scotsman Press.

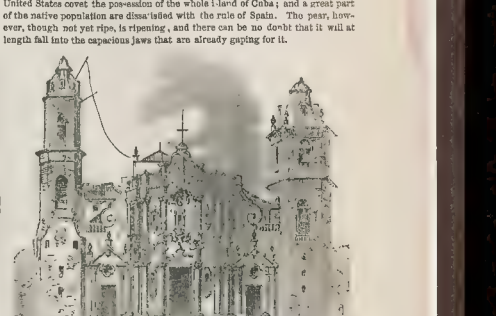
SENSITIVENESS OF ASTRONOMICAL INSTRUMENTS.—The adjustment of the instruments is a task of great nicety. If they are out of trim only a shadow of a shade of a hair's breadth, the desired accuracy is interfered with, and they have to be re-adjusted. Temperature is, of course, an important element in their condition, and a slight sensibility may do mischief. The warmth of the human body, when approaching the instruments has been known to affect their accuracy; and to avoid such sources of error, instruments are at times been cased in flannel, that the non-conducting powers of that homely fabric might screen the too sensitive metal.—Dickens's Household Words.

TIMUR, OR TAMERLANE.—Till the age of thirty four his life was one continued scene of en-erprise, danger, distress, or triumph; but, in his worst difficulties his spirit never sank, and, though living the vagrant life of an outlaw on the borders of Mauer-al-Nahar, his fame shone brighter in adversity. "I once," says he in his Institutes, "was forced to take shelter from my enemies in a ruined building, where I sat alone for me y hours. To divert my mind from my hopeless condition, I fixed my observation on a ant that was carrying a grain of corn larger than itself up a high wall. I numbered the efforts it made to accomplish this object: the grain fell sixty nine times to the ground, but the insect persevered, and the seventieth time it reached the top of the wall. The sight gave me courage at the moment, and I have never forgot the lesson it conveyed." The resemblance of this anecdote with that of Bruce and the spider will strike every one.—From VAUX'S Nineveh and Persepolis just published.

LIFE IN A MERCHISTONIAN HALL FARM.—The servants live in the farm-house, the men usually sleeping in a small building attached. The master's family and the servants dine in the kitchen together, but at separate tables. In the winter evenings all assemble in the deeply-recessed single-pane window, which is lighted by a home made rush candle, placed in a curious candlestick of ancient pattern, suspended in the centre of the mantelpiece. One of the rushes, which is dipped in tallow, and pared round, with the exception of a narrow strip, burns rather better than half an hour, but requires frequent moving. Whilst thus assembled, the people prepare these candles, spin, knit, sew, or cut wooden spoons, &c. At eight o'clock, after the men have looked to the horses, supper is laid; the bible is afterwards read for some time, and a little after nine all retire to rest. They rise in winter between five and six. A sort of porridge serves for breakfast; and flummery (llymru) serves for supper.—Cuffe's Book of North Wales.

THE CATHEDRAL OF HAVANNAH.

THOUGH Havannah is now by far the most populous of all the towns or cities of the West India Islands, it is yet of much later foundation than several others both in Cuba and in St. Domingo, or, as it is now called, Hayti. Until upwards of a century and a half after the discovery of the West Indies by Columbus, Havannah was a place of little note; but, since the period referred to, when the advantages of its excellent harbour began to be appreciated, it has been gradually increasing, both in population and importance, but more especially since 1795 when Spain ceded her possessions in St. Domingo to the French. It is now the only stronghold of Spain in a part of the world where her authority was once paramount How long she will be able to retain it, is extremely uncertain: the United States covet the pos-ession of the whole i-land of Cuba; and a great part of the native population are dissatisfied with the rule of Spain. The pear, however, though not yet ripe, is ripening, and there can be no doubt that it will at length fall into the capacious jaws that are already gaping for it.



THE CATHEDRAL OF HAVANNAH.

The Cathedral of Havannah, of which our Engraving shows the west front, occupies nearly the side of a small square. The exterior has no pretension to architectural beauty. The structure, of stone, is simple and massive. The interior, however, is grand and imposing, from its magnitude and the elevation of its arched roof The great object of interest in the Cathedral is the tomb of Columbus, which is on the right of the high al ar, within the chancel, and on the left of the spectator, proceeding in the direct on of our View. The remains of Columbus have more than once b en removed, and it is questionable if they have even now found a final resting-place. In the course of another generation, it is not improbab e that they may be resting in the Capitol at Washington—should they not, indeed, in anticipation of such an event, be previously re-conveyed to Europe.

Columbus, who was born in the neighbourhood of Genoa, in 1441, died at Valladolid, on the 20th of May, 1506; and his body was deposited in the convent of St Francisco, while his funeral obsequies were performed at the parochial church of Santa Maria de la Antigua, in Valladolid. In 1513 his remains were removed to the Carthusian Convent of Las Cuevas, at Seville; and in 1536, in compliance with his dying request, they were conveyed to Hispaniola, and interred near the great altar, in the Cathedral of St. Domingo. On the cession of Hispaniola, or St. Domingo, to the French, the Spaniards removed his remains to Havannah. On opening the vault, on the 20th of December, 1795, there were found the fragments of a leaden coffin, with some bones and a little mould, evidently the remains of a human body: these were put into a case of gut lead, which was again enclosed in a coffin covered with black velvet. The c ffin was then placed in a temporary mausoleum; and on the f llowing day masses and requiems were chanted for the repose of the 'Great Admiral's' soul, and the Archbishop preached a sermon on the occasion. The coffin was borne to the ship appointed to convey it to Havannah by the principal members of the several religious orders in grand procession, amidst discharges of artillery, while all the numerous banners displayed were covered with crape Such were the hon urs paid to the memory of the man who, about three centuries previously, had been sent from the same pl ce a degraded prisoner to Spain!

At havannah the remains were received with similar honours as on their importation from St. Domingo. The coffin was deposited in an opening made in the wall on the right of the high altar of the Church, which is now the Cathedral, and above the spot there was subsequently placed a monumental tablet of marble It displays a portrait of Columbus in low relief within an oval; before him is a globe, and he points to the portion of it seen led by America. Beneath are various naval emblems, such as a rudder, anchor, compass, and hour gl ss, together with the Cross, the sign of the steadfast faith which upheld him in his trials, and under which i e gained for Spain a New World. In the lower part of the panel is the following brief inscription:—

> "RESTOS E IMAGEN DEL GRANDE COLON',
> MIL SIGLOS IRAD GUARDADOS EN LA DRNA,
> Y EN LA REMEMBRANZA DE NEUESTRA NACION."
>
> (Remains and Image of the great Columbus,
> Continue p eserved a thousand ages in the urn,
> And in the memory of our Nation!)

ANTIQUARIAN DISCOVERIES AT SILBURY-HILL.

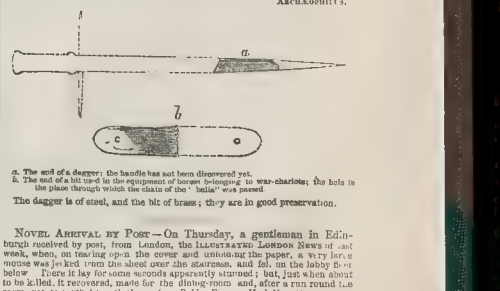
(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

I TAKE this opportunity of communicating to you a discovery of British antiquities lately dug up in Si bury-hill, near Marlborough, Wiltshire. This ce e brated mound was excavated a short time ago by order of the Archæological Society of London, but at that time no remains of anything whatsoever were discovered. I have since had reason to suppose that the above learned society were wrong in merely excavating the lower part of the hill, and that if a shaft were to be sunk from the top of the mound right down to the bottom there would be a chance of some important discoveries be ng made.

I recently made an excursion to Silbury, provided with the necessary implements, intending to prove my theory of the top being more likely to produce something than the base. We had dug for, I should th ink, eight feet down, when the spade of one of my assistants struck against something, which returned a ringing sound, and, on digging it out, discovered it to be the best interesting specimen of a dagger (an illustration of which is appended). Taking courage at our success, we renewed our exertions, and were rewarded in a few minutes by the sight of the bit, which is made of brass, and in which the hole through which the chain of the "bulla" is passed is ex-mplified. The dagger is 2½ inches long, and the bit 3 inches and about ⅓ of another inch.

I was prevented from communicating this most important discovery to you by particular circums tances which called me away from my friend's house that same evening and I left my antiquities behind me; but on my return to that part of the country about a week ago, I formed the resolution of acquainting you with the particulars, which I am now putting in practice.

ARCHÆOPHILUS.



a. The end of a dagger: the handle has not been discovered yet.
b. The end of a bulla found in the equipment of horses belonging to war-chariots; the hole in the place through which the chain of the "bulla" was passed

The dagger is of steel, and the bit of brass; they are in good preservation.

NOVEL ARRIVAL BY POST.—On Thursday, a gentleman in Edinburgh received by post, from London, the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of last week, when, on tearing open the cover and unbinding the paper, a very large mouse was jerked from the sheet over the staircase, and fell on the lobby below There it lay for some seconds apparently stunned; but, just when about to be killed, it recovered, made for the dining-room and, after a ran round the room, got to earth beneath the grate.—Dublin Evening Mail, May 21.

GALLERY OF THE NATIONAL INSTITUTION.

NO. 122.—"SCENE FROM MOORE'S 'EPICUREAN.'"—PAINTED BY O. R. CAMPBELL.

To the two characteristic Illustrations on this page, for which we are indebted to Mr. Parker and Mr. O. R. Campbell, we have referred in another part of our Supplement. (See page 397.) We shall not, therefore, repeat what we have said, or endeavour to enlarge on the peculiar excellences of these painters, but confine our remarks to the Exhibition at the National Institution, of which they form a part.

We wish well to this Institution, and to every endeavour to give independence to art. If the Institution is to thrive, its promoters must remain true to themselves and to the interests of the Institution. The Society of British Artists in Suffolk-street, which promised to be a vigorous and healthy rival to the Royal Academy, was ruined before it reached manhood, by the withdrawal to the Academy of many of its principal members, and by the subsequent secession of younger exhibitors, led away by the superior advantages or temptations held out by the Academy. Had the Suffolk-street members remained true to the interests of the Suffolk-street Society, many pictures which now grace the walls of the Royal Academy Exhibition would have adorned the walls of the Suffolk-street Exhibition.

It is, perhaps, not for the interest of art that too many societies should exist, any more than it is that the sole right of exhibiting works of art should belong exclusively to any one society or private institution. The National Institution has erected a spacious and well-lighted gallery for the public purposes of art; but we should not be sorry to see that such a separate gallery was rendered altogether unnecessary by the Royal Academy coming forward with some well-considered and comprehensive scheme that Government might take up, and that both the Suffolk-street Society and the National Institution might at once adopt, and be included in, with honour to themselves and advantage to the interests of art. It is the wish of the Academy to be permitted to purchase the whole of the National Gallery, and to introduce such a range of exhibition-rooms as would permit each picture of any kind of merit to be seen on the line of sight. It is for the interest of the public that the National Collection of Pictures should be removed further from the smoke and dirt of London; and as the present National Gallery is not a very commodious or handsome-looking building, the surrender to the Academy (when differently constituted) might be at once a prudent and a gracious step on the part of the public. Of course the Academy should be made to give up some of its funded wealth, in return for such a surrender to its best interests and wants. The Academy has lately received some young blood into its veins, and thus strengthened, it is willing to throw off, as we ourselves well know some of those cobwebbed rules and useless trammels made when George the Third was young, and therefore very ill adapted to the requirements of a class that has increased more than fifty-fold since the foundation of the Academy and the formation of its existing laws.

This is a subject which deserves to be better understood, and to which we may perhaps return on some early occasion.

NO. 77.—"THE SUN DISPELLING A MIST, WITH SMUGGLERS LANDING THEIR CARGO."—PAINTED BY H. R. PARKER.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1850.—SUPPLEMENT.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 430.—Vol. xvi.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1850. [Sixpence.

THE CUBAN EXPEDITION.

The European public have at length been favoured with authentic information on the departure of the great piratical expedition against Cuba. The unjust war against Mexico, which led to those brilliant results the annexation of California and the discovery of its incalculable treasures, has proved a bad example. To the restless, unscrupulous, and rapacious adventurers who abound in the United States, even California and its glittering prizes have ceased to be attractive. To dig for gold and to grow suddenly rich, is not exciting enough for their hot blood. Nothing less will satisfy them than a private war against Spain, and the forcible seizure of one of the largest, most lovely, and most productive islands in the world. It appears that the Expedition was planned three years ago; and that, although the rumours in relation to it which have reached this country have been vague, uncertain, and contradictory, its design was well known and openly canvassed in America. The command of the Expedition was offered to some of the most able generals in the United States; the newspapers discussed its merits and its demerits, and either advocated or condemned it; money was largely subscribed; orders for fire-arms, bowie-knives, and all the ammunition of warfare on a large scale, were dispatched to England and other places; vessels were chartered; buccaneers were enrolled; everything was done in the face of day. The facts were notorious, both in the States and in the West Indies. The Cubans were not only fully aware of all that was intended, but prepared to defend themselves. In short, everybody knew all about it except the President and Government of the United States.

The Expedition, amounting in all to about 13,000 men, sailed in detachments at various times during the month of May. The ships that conveyed the buccaneers did not clear for any port in Cuba or in the West Indies; California, by way of Chagres, was their ostensible destination: New York, Baltimore, Mobile, and New Orleans were the principal ports of departure; and so openly was everything conducted, that the only secret which was kept, or intended to be kept by the parties involved, was the place of rendezvous. The leader of the expedition is one Don Narcisso Lopez, a Venezuelan by birth, a Spaniard by service in the armies of Queen Isabella, and a citizen of the United States by predilection. This person, having resided for some years in Cuba, in a situation of trust under the Spanish Government, seems to have conceived the idea that Spain was not more able to retain Cuba than any other of the magnificent colonies which she has lost; and that it would be a good speculation to incite the cupidity of the slave-owning states of the American Union, and to strike a blow for the independence of Cuba, and its annexation to the United States. The Californian acquisition, and the difficulties in which it threatened to lead the Union, predisposed the pro-slavery party to countenance the project; and General Lopez found hosts of friends, admirers, and supporters. He alleged that the Cuban people were ripe for the attempt to throw off the Spanish yoke; that the appearance of the Expedition upon the shores of the island would be the signal of a general insurrection, and that the Spanish troops in the island would join the movement, and aid the invading force in establishing a Republic. He also alleged the fears of the white population (amounting to 610,000 souls) that the slave and free coloured population (amounting, the former to 190,000, and the latter to 600,000) meditated a repetition of the sanguinary scenes of St. Domingo, and asserted that the only means to prevent the establishment of a Black Republic in Cuba, and a general massacre of the whites, was the invasion which he proposed. All these arguments and assertions combined to increase the confidence of the volunteers whom cupidity, recklessness, and the love of wild adventure drew to his standard. Recruits were raised in St. Louis, Louisville, Cincinnatti, Kentucky, Baltimore, New York, Philadelphia—everywhere except at Washington. Funds were not wanting, but flowed in in abundance; the project ripened—no impediment was thrown in its way, and the Expedition finally set sail, full of courage and audacity, every man in the host expecting a slice of the island of Cuba from the grateful hands of Lopez the Conqueror, just as the adventurers who came over with William the Conqueror to our island expected and received allotments in a less fertile and less beautiful territory. Whatever may be thought of the justice and morality of this project, there can be no doubt that it has one merit, such as it is, and that is its enormity. It is a splendid robbery, to say the least of it. The age is no longer prosaic. The gold of California and the buccaneers of Lopez are facts as romantic as anything recorded in the annals of our ancestors, and rival the deeds of the ancient Scandinavians, Saxons, and Normans in the early history of Europe.

As soon as the Expedition was on its way, and fairly out of sight of the shores of the American continent, the eyes of President Taylor and the Government of the United States were opened, and hurried orders were sent from Washington to New York to intercept it. A Cabinet Council was held on a Sunday at a minute's notice—Mr. Meredith, the Secretary of the Treasury, having been summoned out of the church to attend it. At that meeting it was resolved, say the New York papers, "to adopt every possible measure to sustain the honour of the Republic, and its good faith in treaties with Spain and all other nations." Several vessels of war were immediately despatched in chase of the Expedition; and it is possible, if the Government of the United States is sincere in its design, that it has been successful in preventing the invasion. But the circumstances of its inaction before, and its sudden zeal after, the event, are too suspicious to impress the world with its good faith. Its proceedings can square with success or failure, as the case may be. If the Cubans do not desire to throw off the yoke of Spain, and General Lopez and his men should be defeated and massacred, the American Government will be able to clear itself before the diplomacy, if not before the morality of the world, and say to all impugners of its honesty, that it endeavoured to prevent the mischief. If, however, General Lopez have had better knowledge of the Cubans and their grievances than other men; if he have not miscalculated their temper and their ability to serve him; and if the Expedition should succeed in kindling an insurrection, in which the Cubans shall declare and maintain their independence—the Government of the United States will not be precluded by its tardy and ineffective opposition from turning the by no means unwelcome catastrophe to the best account. In either case it can wear a smiling face before the nations, and can defy the world to offer any legal proof of its complicity in the wrong attempted or the wrong committed.

HIS EXCELLENCY JUNG BAHADOOR, AMBASSADOR FROM THE COURT OF NEPAUL.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.

Cuba, however, is not likely to fall an easy prey. Whatever may be the disposition of the white population, the coloured population has no particular, if any, inducement for exchanging the dominion of Spain for that of the United States. The American invaders have no idea of giving them their freedom. The loyalty of the troops may be greater than General Lopez anticipates, and their numbers are far superior to those of the buccaneers. When Mr. Baird was in Cuba in the spring of 1849, the number of troops in the Havannah alone was 12,000. "Soldiers were," he says, "to be seen in every direction. In the Paseo, at the promenade, at the theatre, at the cemetery, even in front of the hospitals, nothing but soldiers." The American journals report the military force in Cuba as exceeding 20,000 men; and it is known that the naval force at the command of the Governor-General of Cuba is considerable. All this force may, it is true, be rendered useless by the sympathy of the whites in the cause of the invaders; and there can be no doubt that Spain has milked her "milch cow of Cuba" to an extent which has somewhat disturbed the equanimity and patience of the milk-producer. The Spaniards often apply this epithet to Cuba; and the productiveness of the island, in enabling Spain to bear up against her own foolish fiscal system at home, is a justification of its aptness. General Lopez, in his proclamations to the Cubans, insists that Cuba is the most tax-ridden country on the face of the earth, and draws a picture of tyranny and general misgovernment which the corroborative remarks of all recent travellers show to be not altogether imaginary. But, whatever may be the grievances or oppressions of the Cubans, and whatever may be the result to Cuba or to Spain of the present invasion, the American Government seems fairly open to the charge of either gross neglect, or of still grosser connivance at an international wrong. We trust, for the sake of public morality, that the first charge will be all that can be established against it, and that its tardy interference will not be unsuccessful. If the only remaining Spanish colony be as determined as Lopez asserts, to declare its independence, it should be left to the exertions of its own children to accomplish the object. The system pursued in Cuba by the Spanish Government may be execrable; but the interference of the United States, on her connivance with the projects of the buccaneering army, can but enlist the sympathies of the world on the other, and, possibly, the wrong side. The demoralisation caused by the war against Mexico was bad enough. That which would be caused by the success of such an invasion as the present would be still more fearful, and would bear its punishment along with it, in complicating and increasing the internal dissensions of the great American Union.

THE NEPAULESE EMBASSY.

In our Journal of last week, page 387, we gave some interesting particulars of the arrival of the Nepaulese Embassy at Southampton, headed by his Excellency General Jung Bahadoor Koorman Ranagee, Prime Minister and Commander-in-Chief of the kingdom of Nepaul, and accompanied by his brother, Dhuj Singh. The General's visit to this country is as Ambassador Extraordinary from the King of Nepaul to the Queen of England, and he is charged with a complimentary letter and costly presents.

The General is a handsome and most intelligent man, about thirty-two years of age, very dark, with long jet-black hair. He is the first Hindoo of high cast that has visited this country. He is considered one of the foremost men in India, possesses great power and influence in Northern Hindostan, and has rendered great services to the East India Company. He was treated with great distinct on by the Governor-General of India, having been received in full durbhar at Calcutta, and saluted with nineteen guns on his arrival and departure. Although so young, he has been a great and most successful warrior and is one of the most perfect marksmen ever seen. He used (it is said) repeatedly to fire at and strike a bottle from the mast-head of the Ripon during his voyage from Alexandria. He was particularly fond of the music of the Ripon's band, and rewarded the musicians most munificently.

His Excellency wears a rich Oriental costume, profusely wrought in gold, and glittering with diamonds, pearls, and precious stones, stated to be worth £100,000 sterling. He has, in company with the Princes, visited several public institutions; and has taken a box at Her Majesty's Theatre. On Wednesday, his Excellency and party visited the Messrs. Morel's, Jewellery Depôt, in New Burlington-street; and in the evening they were present at the grand entertainment given by the Marquis of Londonderry, at Holderness House.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The new Electoral Law, which is to disfranchise all the mauvais sujets, and free the Legislature from all turbulent and ill-disposed characters, has been at length passed, and all its supporters are in high spirits at the issue. It is less to conjecture what its real effects will be, whether numerically or otherwise—some thinking that it will strike off the electoral list from four to five millions of voters; others, that it will disfranchise a far greater number of the "friends of order" than of the Socialists. Again, it is said to be drawn up in so loose and unbusiness-like a manner, that it will be exceedingly difficult to put it in execution; and it is added, that, as soon as the result of the definitive vote was announced, M. Dupin, the President of the Assembly, went up to M. Baroche, but, instead of congratulating him as the Minister, expressed himself as follows:—"Et maintenant faites une loi pour appliquer celle-ci."

The Minister of Finance proposed in the Assembly on Tuesday an addition to the civil list of the President of the Republic of 250,000 francs per month. M. Pascal Duprat and M. Benoit d'Azy opposed it. The question was eventually referred to the ordinary committee of the House. The proposition has created a great deal of dissatisfaction in Paris, where Louis Napoleon's pecuniary embarrassments form at present the prominent topic in every salon. The ultra-Republicans regard the proposed increase of salary as the wages of the President's support of the new Electoral Law. There is no doubt, however, that the proposition will receive the sanction of the Assembly.

The President of the Republic at ended the Versailles races on Sunday. There were immense crowds of people on the ground, and a great number of handsome equipages. The British Ambassador was in the stand occupied by the President, with whom he conversed in the most friendly manner

The coolness between the two Governments, arising out of the Greek affair, is said to be on the point of satisfactory adjustment. There is nothing certain as to what the terms of arrangement are at present; all being mere conjecture until an official announcement is made on the matter.

M. Thiers is reported to be about paying a visit to the exiled Royal Family at Claremont. Count de Montalivet, and Nat. Pierre Bonaparte, have already set out for the same destination, the object being to hold a conference with the Orleans family touching political matters.

A sword duel took place on Tuesday in the Bois de Boulogne The combatants were M. Amédée Achard and M. Florentino, writers in the public press. The former received a breast wound, which was pronounced dangerous. The ground of offence was a scandal published by the former against his antagonist.

M Emile de Girardin was tried on Wednesday for having circulated a petition against the Electoral Bill, without the printer's name being attached to it. He was acquitted; but M. Pinet, the printer, was condemned to pay 3000f. and costs.

Some of the departments are said to have exhibited, within the last few days, undisguised symptoms of discontent, which, if not checked, may probably break out into open riot.

In Paris, some seizures of arms, powder, and bullets have been made, and parties have been arrested in connexion with the affair, but all apprehensions of a rising are at an end.

ITALIAN STATES.

From the Austrian provinces of Italy, we learn that the undying spirit of hostility and hatred to the Austrian rule still smoulders as strong and vigorous in the Italian mind as of old before the revolutionary movements of 1848–1849; and is exhibited in the same furtive and foolish way that has already been destructive of only increased oppression and suffering to the mass of the people, and of all the nameless social evils consequent on mutual exasperation and disgust being excited between the governors and the governed.

The authorities at Venice have just issued a decree that all persons are to be arrested if discovered out of doors after eleven o'clock at night. Priests, surgeons, physicians, and midwives are alone excepted from this decree. This severe measure is attributed to the Imperial arms having been taken down from the public offices at Udine during the night.

From the other quarters of the Peninsula there is no news of interest.

PRUSSIA.

The Prussian Government finds the complication of the general affairs of Germany, and the opposition of the Austrian Government, backed by some of the southern states, to its schemes of German unity so embarrassing, that it has begun to place a large portion of its army upon a war footing, so that it may not be unprepared in case of any sudden emergency occurring to call for a display of military strength on its part.

The King is slowly recovering from the effects of his wound.

GERMAN STATES.

The King of Saxony, by an ordinance of the 1st instant, dissolved the two Houses of Parliament. The reason assigned for this act is the opposition of the Chambers to his Majesty's policy in favour of the Austrian scheme of re-establishing the old German Diet, and their refusal to consent to a proposed loan unless that policy were changed.

By accounts from Stuttgard of the 31st ult., we learn that the Wurtemberg Cabinet and the representatives of the people in the Chamber are not upon the best of terms, the latter having voted the public taxes for two years only, instead of three, which the former insist should have been done, in accordance with the Constitution of 1819. This disagreement is expected to end in a dissolution of the Parliament.

RUSSIA

A Royal Congress is about to be held by the Emperor of Russia at Warsaw The Emperor of Austria has left his capital to take part in the conference, and the Prince of Prussia has likewise gone thither.

From the German Journals we learn that M. Von Manteuffel, aide-de-camp of his Prussian Majesty, and the minister who accompanied the Prince of Prussia, has delivered to the Czar, at Warsaw, an autograph letter of the King of Prussia, declaring that Prussia would never consent to the re-establishment of the Old Germanic Diet, and that the policy of the Prince of Schwarzenburg, of Austria, was the cause of the obstacles to an agreement between the Governments. The Czar is invited by this letter to use his influence to effect a change in the policy of Austria.

The Hibernia Zeitung, in writing on the same subject, says, "M. Von Manteuffel has been very well received by the Czar. The only request made by the Cabinet of Berlin is, that, in the event of a conflict between Austria and Prussia, the Czar will abstain from the one or the other of these Governments, in order that a European war may not supervene."

UNITED STATES.

Accounts to the 24th ult have been received from New York. The California, or slavery question, was still unsettled

The Senate had confirmed the treaty with England on the Nicaraguan matter, by a vote of 42 to 10.

The ships Advance and Rescue sailed on the 23d upon the Arctic expedition.

The engrossing topic was General Lopez's expedition to Cuba. The General got his troops off without difficulty from New Orleans, on the 8th of May, and followed himself shortly afterwards with his staff. In a fast sailing steamer. His force amounted to about 4000 men, most of whom had fought in the Mexican war. Previous to his departure he addressed his followers in a long speech, which was received with hearty cheers. He also caused some thousands of copies of an address to the Spanish troops to be printed, exhorting them to turn over to his cause. This address was intended to be distributed by spies as soon as the expedition had effected a landing. It was anticipated they would meet with a warm reception. A large Spanish man-of-war steamer had arrived at Havannah for its protection, and others were to follow.

At Washington, immediately the Government had learned the departure of the expedition, the navy department issued orders to the Gulf fleet to intercept the adventurers at all hazards, or to assist the Spanish authorities in suppressing the invasion

From Havannah itself there are advices to the 17th May. They report that much uneasiness had been exhibited by the Spanish authorities respecting the expected invasion of Cuba. The expedition had not yet landed, neither had anything been seen of the vessels composing it From this latter account, it would appear that the defensive preparations by the Spanish were miserably deficient.

Cholera is continuing its ravages on the western rivers of the States.

A destructive fire had occurred in Corning, state of New York, by which property worth 250,000 dollars was destroyed. Also one in Charleston had destroyed some of the most perfect machinery ever seen. He used (it is said) repeatedly to fire at and strike a bottle from the mast-head of the Ripon during his voyage from Alexandria. He was particularly fond of the music of the Ripon's band, and rewarded the musicians most munificently.

His Excellency wears a rich Oriental costume, profusely wrought in gold, and glittering with diamonds, pearls, and precious stones, stated to be worth £100,000 sterling. He has, in company with the Princes, visited several public institutions; and has taken a box at Her Majesty's Theatre. On Wednesday, his Excellency and party visited the Messrs. Morel's, Jewellery Depôt, in New Burlington-street; and in the evening they were present at the grand entertainment given by the Marquis of Londonderry, at Holderness House.

WEST INDIES

The accounts this week from the various West India Islands by the Great Western steamer are very unfavourable as regards agricultural affairs. A severe drought generally prevailed, which had done much damage to the crops, particularly in Jamaica, St. Lucia, and Antigua. There was no political news of interest.

CANADA.

Advices from Toronto report that the answer to the speech recommending that the Court of Chancery be abolished, and an equitable jurisdiction entrusted to common law, was rejected. The question still stood next for discussion. Ministers were likely to have a strong majority.

INDIA.

In anticipation of the Overland Mail, advices were received in town by extraordinary express in the early part of the week. They are dated, Bombay, May 1, and Calcutta, April 20, and are almost wholly devoid of news.

In Bombay the cholera is still very prevalent amongst the natives It had made its appearance in a wing of a regiment of artillery stationed in Fort George barracks; but by the timely removal of the men to tents, pitched on the Esplanade, the spread of the disease has been completely arrested, not a single case having occurred since the removal of the troops to their new locality

In our last notice of Indian news it was stated that Dr. Healey had been murdered at a place near Kohat, and that it was confidently believed that the crime was perpetrated by the Afreedees. Subsequent accounts, however, make it appear somewhat doubtful whether the crime was committed by these people. The parties who were apprehended by Captain Daley, on suspicion, in the neighbourhood of the place, have been released, there being no evidence of guilt against them. The chiefs of the Afreedee have waited on Colonel Lawrence, and begged to be allowed to make peace with the British Government. It was at first strongly suspected that their object in doing this was to while away the season for reaping their crops whilst the Kohat Pass, and that thus effected, and their harvest secure, they would renew with still greater vigour their hostile operations against the British authorities, and continue to defy them. It has since appeared that they are sincere in their solicitations; and it is stated that the military authorities are desirous to agree to any terms, but that Colonel Lawrence, "who appears to understand the natives of these parts well, advises punishment first—forgiveness afterwards." The Afreedee chiefs deny all knowledge of the murder of Dr. Healey.

The Governor-General had left Calcutta on his return to Simlah. The Commander-in-Chief was proceeding to the same destination, visiting the various military stations of Dinapore, Allahabad Doab on the way.

The Indian Government had authorised the formation of an experimental line of electric telegraph from Calcutta to Hooghly, a distance of about twenty-five miles.

Moolraj, "the victim of circumstances," together with the rebel Shaee Maharaj Singh, had arrived at Calcutta, and were lodged in Fort William The ex-chief of Moultan will, it is believed, be allowed to remain there confined to the fort, where comfortable quarters have been assigned to him, but the Shaee and his faithful disciple Kurrauk Singh, are to be transported to the Straits of Malacca.

AGRICULTURAL WAGES.—A poor man, with the appropriate name of Bones, was summoned this week for allowing the guardians of the Wearngford union, Essex, to maintain three children of his wife by a former husband. In defence, the man said that his earnings were only 7s a week, and he found it impossible to maintain eight persons on that sum. He had been nearly two year in the attempt, and at last took three of the children to the union, and left them there. The workhouse had been offered to himself and family, but he declined to go into it. The Rev. J. K. Reynolds said that the parishioners of Wormingford ought to pay better wages than those of any other parish, because the land in it was so superior. The fact of the man having a dislike to go into the union was a proof to him (Mr. S.) that he was an honest and industrious man; as to his supporting eight people on 7s. a week, it could not be done; and he would never sign the man's conviction, except upon mandamus. The case was then dismissed.

CHANCERY REFORM.—On Tuesday evening a public meeting was held at the Crown and Anchor, Strand, with the view of promoting the efforts at present being made to obtain a reform in the Court of Chancery, as regarded the two points comprised in the resolutions of the Lords' Committee. Mr. G. Walter in the chair. Mr. Acland moved the first resolution, which was as follows:—"That the Court of Chancery, which in theory is a court of equity, is practically an engine of unprincipled extortion and heartless oppression; that many millions of property are cruelly withheld from the rightful owners by complicated and dilatory proceedings, while injured suitors, reduced to pauperism by unrecruitable exile from the shop of cents, linger out a hopeless existence in our poor-houses and jails, or seek relief from their grievous wrongs by suicide. That this meeting considers that the continuance of such a Court is a libel upon Christianity, an outrage upon society, and a disgrace upon the legislature and government of the British empire." Dr Ogilvie seconded the resolution, which was supported by Mr. Rock, of Walbrook and carried nem. dis. Other resolutions, pledging the meeting to support the association in agitating for a reform in the Court of Chancery, were then agreed to, and the meeting separated, after thanking the chairman.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

ECCLESIASTICAL COURT OF APPEAL IN MATTERS OF CHURCH-OF-ENGLAND DOCTRINE.

The Bishop of LONDON moved the second reading of the bill for providing a new Court of Appeal in cases involving questions of heresy. The court was to be composed of every member of the bench of Bishops; and when the Judicial Committee of Privy Council should be called upon for a decision upon a doctrinal point, the court was to be summoned, and the committee to be bound by the judgment of a majority of the court upon the point. His Lordship largely cited historical precedent in support of his plan, and also sought an analogy in the practice of the courts of law which transferred subjects not in their immediate knowledge to arbitrators whose technical information was better than their own. He proposed to leave all questions of fact to the Judicial Committee, but to reserve the Episcopal Court the decision as to matters of faith. His Lordship evinced tearful emotion in describing the unhappy schisms in the Church, and in impressing upon the House the solemnity of the question, on which he concluded by imploring their calm and earnest decision.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE, admitting the importance of the question, argued from that very circumstance that the present was an ill-chosen time for such a measure, when the agitation connected with recent clerical differences was fresh upon the mind of the country. To that agitation, and to a desire to supersede the authority of the Privy Council, in consequence of its late judgment, the public would be disposed to refer this attempt, and dissensions would consequently be increased. That judgment, he felt it his duty to say, he thought had given as much satisfaction as it was reasonable to expect. But, as regarded the present bill, he not only thought it brought in at an objectionable time, but that its principle was a dangerous one, for that it tended to violate the prerogative of the Crown, which from time immemorial had been the court of final appeal in spiritual cases, and, since the Reformation, had been the supreme head of the Church. The object, also, of the Privy Council had been to decide questions, not upon the opinions of others, but according to their own consciences. He disputed the accuracy of the analogy sought to be established between the practice of a law court and that proposed to be established, and said that all that the Judicial Committee had to decide upon was perfectly within their power, namely, the question whether certain doctrines were the doctrines of the Church. The proposed measure would tend to bring into question all the most important points of Church doctrine; the Bishops would be canvassed, and if at one period they decided one way, after certain changes the question would be again raised in the hope of a different decision, and of heresy being pronounced orthodoxy He was, however, ready to take certain steps to effect the objects of this bill, namely, to make all the Bishops de jure members of the Privy Council, and to provide that no dissenter should sit in the committee when Church affairs were before it. He then moved that the bill be read a second time that day six months.

Lord BROUGHAM could not adopt the bill in its entirety, nor could he vote with the Lord President in rejecting it. He was prepared to support the second reading, trusting that it would receive such amendments in committee as would reconcile him to it.

The Bishop of ST. DAVID'S opposed the bill. If it had been amended, he would have supported it; but, as it then stood, he could not vote for the second reading.

Lord REDESDALE and Lord LYTTELTON spoke in favour of the bill.

Lord CAMPBELL and the Earl of CHICHESTER opposed it, on the grounds that it was unconstitutional, and that it would interfere with the supremacy of the Crown.

Lord STANLEY had no fear of the unconstitutional nature of the measure, nor did he apprehend that it would touch the supremacy of the Crown. Even if it were intended, as it was not, to substitute the ecclesiast cal tribunal for the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, the change would not affect her Majesty's supremacy. It had been said that the bill proposed to give a power to the new tribunal to establish new articles of religion; if so, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council had the power now of establishing new articles of religion. But he denied both propositions. He did not sympathise with those who would separate from the Church on account of the differences that had arisen; but he feared that, should their Lordships reject the bill, they would risk the separation from the Church of some of its ablest and most zealous members. He thought the Church should have power by its authorities to declare what have been and are its doctrines, and what have not been and are not its tenets. He would vote for the second reading, although he wished to see some alterations to be made in the bill in committee. He would not wish to constitute the bishops a court for the passing of sentence, but he thought that if they could be placed on the same footing with regard to the Court of Appeal as the judges are with respect to matters of law—that their opinions should be asked, and, as a general rule, followed—it would be advisable to do so.

The Earl of HARROWBY opposed the bill.

The Bishop of OXFORD implored their Lordships not to follow the advice of the Lord President and rudely reject the measure, thereby risking the separation of some of the most devoted sons of the Church from her, and alienating from their Lordships, as a party, the whole body of the English Church. Impatience of all fixed truth was, unfortunately, one of the characteristics of this age, and he feared that a rejection of the measure by Parliament in this matter would encourage a disbelief in all truth whatever.

The Earl of CARLISLE opposed the bill.

The Duke of CAMBRIDGE regretted that he could not vote with the Government, but he could not conscientiously oppose the bill.

Their Lordships divided.

For the second reading of the bill:—

Contents—Present	..	..	..	..	51
Non contents Present	..	..	..	..	84
Majority against the bill	..	..	..	..	—33

Adjourned at half-past one o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

STATE OF THE SERPENTINE.

Mr. B. OSBORNE asked whether the Woods and Forests were about to take any steps to improve the condition of the Serpentine river, or rather pool—(a laugh)—which seemed in a very foul state. (Hear, hear)

Lord SEYMOUR said he had received a deputation of the bathers—(laughter); and had directed inquiries into the matter.

IRISH EVICTIONS.

Mr. NAPIER inquired of the Secretary for Ireland whether the Executive Government had directed any proceedings to be taken in reference to the coroner of the county of Armagh, in consequence of the publication of the letter in the Times of the 30th of May, to which the name was attached as the writer thereof.

Sir G. GREY said the Government had not taken any steps, in consequence of the letter, against the coroner. The effect of the hon. member making such a statement as he had sought to do would, of course, be to provoke counter-statements.

Mr. NAPIER subsequently said he should take an early opportunity of bringing the matter forward. (Hear.)

Sir G GREY then observed that what he had meant to convey was, that, the coroner not being a Government officer, the Government had not altogether exempt him from proceedings against him, yet he could not be proceeded against in that character.

Mr NAPIER.—But he can be proceeded against for public misconduct. (Hear, hear)

Mr. P. SCROPE rose to ask the First Lord of the TREASURY whether he has yet taken the opinion of the law officers of the Crown as to the alleged illegality and criminality, at common law, of wholesale clearances or depopulation, as now largely carried on in Ireland; and, if not, whether the Government intend to recommend to Parliament any measure for the purpose of checking such proceedings, or of punishing such inflictions on numbers of her Majesty's subjects, and appear to provoke the retaliatory perpetration of agrarian crime. The hon. member especially inquired whether the noble Lord had seen the book of Mr. Mackay on depopulation, demonstrating the illegality of these evictions.

Lord J. RUSSELL said, as to the last question, he was not aware of the work. He had been advised before on which they could act—the opinion of the law officers of the Crown; and without such a case it would be impossible to obtain their opinion. With respect to the other inquiry, it was for he hon. gentleman to point out what course to answer it. Of course, any measures tending to improve the condition of the people must tend to prevent their clearances and evictions; but what those measures should be, could not be discussed in answer to a question. (Hear, hear.) The noble Lord expressed his regret that the hon. member, in a recent letter on the papers of the House, should have inserted expressions—"sufferings which appear to provoke the retaliatory perpetration of agrarian crime"—which were calculated to produce an impression that it was intended to palliate the horrible crime of assassination. (Loud cries of "Hear.")

Mr. SCROPE.—I disclaim the imputation, but am ready to prove the facts.

METROPOLITAN INTERMENTS BILL.

On the order of the day for the HOUSE resolving itself into committee on this bill,

Mr. LACY moved, as an amendment, that the bill be referred to a select committee.

Lord D. STUART seconded the amendment; his chief objection to the bill being, that it was to be worked through the means of a board, which would throw a very large amount of patronage into the hands of the Government

Sir G. GREY opposed the amendment, contending that the House was fully in possession of all the information requisite to enable them to legislate upon the subject. To adopt the amendment would be nothing less than to defeat the bill in effect for the present session.

Mr. C. LUSHINGTON supported the reference of the bill to a select committee, as also did Mr. B Osborne, Sir De Lacy Evans, Mr Masterman, Mr. T. Duncombe, and other members connected with the metropolis.

On a division, the amendment was negatived by a majority of 189 to 57.

The House then went into committee, and

On the second clause being proposed,

Mr. T Duncombe moved the rejection of the clause, the object of which was to deprive the parishes of the metropolis of the power of self-government in the matter of burials, and to transfer that power to the Board of Health.

In the course of the discussion which ensued,

Lord ASHLEY expressed his opinion that the parishes were quite unfit to be trusted with burials; for when sanitary measures were being under consideration, they had displayed negligence, obstinacy, and unreasonable opposition to the most obvious improvements.

On a division, Mr. Duncombe's amendment was negatived by a majority of 135 to 57.

The discussion of the other clauses occupied the remainder of the evening, clauses up to No. 18 having been agreed to.

PREROGATIVE COURT (IRELAND).

An animated conversation arose on the nomination of the select committee on the Prerogative Court (Ireland) Bill, in the course of which

Major BERESFORD angrily charged an hon. member (Mr. Keogh) with sitting on the Conservative side of the House, listening to their conversation, and yet voting with the Government.

Mr. KEOGH said that he came into the House as a Catholic and a Conservative, and he did not know that he was obliged to ask the hon. member for Essex as to what part of the House he should take his seat in.

Major BERESFORD said, the hon. gentleman sat on the Opposition benches as a Conservative, and yet he had for some time past been remarkable for voting with the Government.

The Committee nominated with the appointment of the committee.

Adjourned at half-past one o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

GREECE.

Lord STANLEY laid on the table the terms of the resolution he would propose on Friday, on the subject of the Greek affair, to the following effect:—"That while this House fully recognises the right and duty of the Government to secure to her Majesty's subjects residing in foreign states the full protection of the laws of those states, it regrets to find, from the correspondence recently laid before Parliament, that various claims against the Greek Government, doubtful in point of justice and in amount, had been enforced, by coercive measures, against the Government of Greece, calculated to endanger the continuance of friendly relations with other powers."

The Naval Prize Balance Bill and the Exchequer Bills Bill severally passed through Committee.

The reports of the Fees (Court of Common Pleas) Bill, and of the Sunday Trading Prevention Bill, were received.

The Greenwich Hospital Improvement Bill was read a third time and passed.

Lord MONTEAGLE gave notice, on the part of Lord Brougham, that he would on Monday next present a petition from the Australian colonists, praying to be heard by counsel at the bar against the Australian Colonies Government Bill.

Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

GREECE.

Mr. BAILLIE, referring to the papers presented relative to the Greek question, remarked that it appeared that the Government assumed the right of demanding compensation for damages sustained by British subjects resident in other countries from riots or rebellion, without reference to the laws of such countries; and, likewise, that it appeared the Government did not admit any such pretension; and, likewise, that it appeared the Government had protested against this interdiction of the British subjects resident in the United States of America on the same principle. The hon. member then asked why a different principle was adopted towards the states of Europe and the United States of America; and whether it was true that the representatives of America and Russia had protested against this interdiction of the law of nations, and whether they had refused to allow British subjects to reside in their territories unless they renounced to a certain extent the protection of their own country.

Lord PALMERSTON replied that her Majesty's Government had laid down no such broad assertion as the honourable member supposed. The demands made on Greece were founded each on a particular case, and did not involve any one general principle. It would be impossible to maintain that in all cases foreigners are entitled to compensation for all damages sustained by them. On the other hand, there are particular cases for which, by the law of nations, compensation is unquestionably due. Vattel drew these distinctions, and on the distinctions drawn by him the claims made on the Greek Government had been founded. No distinction was held by her Majesty's Government between what happened in America and Europe in such matters. But there was one difference in these cases; viz. that in America the tribunals were more open to obtain justice and cases; viz. that in America the tribunals were more open to obtain justice and easier right, than the tribunals in some states of Europe. It was true that the Government of Austria and Russia, in argument—not on the Greek case, but in reference of Austria and Russia, in argument—not on the Greek case, but in reference of Austria and Russia, in argument—not on the Greek case, but in reference period, Thierry of Alsace, Count of Flanders, brought from Jerusalem some of the blood of the Saviour, which, according to tradition, had been obtained by Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea. The relic was given to the Count by Baldwin III., King of Jerusalem, in recompense for his services in the Holy Land during the two crusades. Thierry deposited the precious gift in the city of Bruges, where it has performed a host of miracles, the most wonderful of which is that enacted in a bull of Clement V. We leave to the Sovereign Pontiff the responsability of his assertion:—"This blood," he says, "becomes liquid every Friday, ordinarily towards six o'clock, whilst, on the other days of the week, the same blood is thick, coagulated, and, as it were, petrified."

JUBILEE OF ST. SANG AT BRUGES.—THE PROCESSION TO THE CATHEDRAL.

Unfortunately for the story, this miracle has not been performed in our time; it has ceased since April 13, 1310, when a wicked wight mixed in the Friday crowd of the faithful, and, stooping to kiss the relic, uttered some blasphemy, when Saint Sang became obdurate, and refused to liquify.

The grand historical procession of Saint Sang was announced and placarded throughout the kingdom of Belgium (in Flemish and French), for more than a month. It was fixed for May 6, 1850; but the unfavourable weather led to its postponement to the 6th. The hotels and lodging-houses were full of visitors; and the windows from which the procession might be seen were let at what are termed, in Bruges, fabulous prices. An Englishman is stated to have paid one guinea a head for a large window-full of spectators. On the 6th the city presented a very curious and animated appearance. All the streets in the route of the procession were hung with tapestry representing trees, and dressed with Belgian, French, Dutch, and English flags, or standards disposed in emblematic groups. The bells and chimes rang out unceasingly. The people, dressed in their holiday clothes, promenaded the streets, impatient for the fête of the morrow.

On Monday, the 7th, the weather still remained unfavourable; but the procession left the Church of Notre Dame in the following order:—Band of the Cuirassiers, and company of the same corps, detachment of Chasseur Volunteers of the Civic Guard; corps of joiners; historic cortège of the ancient Guild of Notre Dame des Avengles; and a crowd of the moyen-age in the vow-suit to Notre Dame de la Potterie. Next were the Members of the Guild, preceded by heralds-at-arms, carrying rich flags, with the insignia of the cities of Bruges, Ghent, Courtrai, Lille, Douai, and Ypres; costumes of the citizens. This Count Robert de Bethune, and his Court; to commemorate the battle of Mons-en-Puelle, in 1304, wherein Notre Dame de la Potterie secured the victory to the people of Bruges over the French. Allegorical car, bearing the instruments of torture of St. Catherine, drawn by young girls, representing angels or martyrs, bearing lilies, pennants, and palm branches. The cortège thus formed passed between rows of children wearing blue and white dresses, and crowned with flowers.

Next were the band of the 7th Regiment of the Line, and the standards and flags of the Church of St. Anne.

Then came groups of personages dressed as the high-priest Zacharias, St. John Baptist, St. Joseph, St. Joachim, King David, and King Solomon; and young girls dressed in blue and white, bearing the statue of St Anne.

Cortège commemorative of the Crusade, in which the Counts of Flanders played distinguished parts. St. Louis, King of France, and the Barons, equipped for the Holy Land, in grand costume, preceded by heralds, and followed by pages and squeries

Young girls representing the Mournful Mysteries; in purple silk robes and velvet mantles, and crowns and ornaments of gold. Young girls representing the Joyous Mysteries, in blue silk and velvet, and gold ornaments; and the Glorious Mysteries, in white silk and velvet, and gold.

Interspersed with these groupes were the Magi Kings, the Twelve Apostles, the Virgin, surrounded by female saints, followed by young girls in blue and white, bearing the statue of the Virgin.

Cortège representing the foundation of the Order of Trinitaires, by Jean de Matha, Doctor of Theology in Paris, who had for their object the deliverance of Christian prisoners. The persons represented were Christian slaves in chains, groupes of slave merchants, in eastern costume; Jean de Matha, and the hermit, Felix de Valois, founders of the Order; a citizen of Bruges and his family, delivered by the Trinitaires; townspeople in the costume of the time.

Cortège of St. James of Compostella. Pilgrims of the moyen-age. Relics of St. James.

Cortège of Charles the Bold, and his daughter, Marie of Bourgogne, whose tombs are at Bruges: Charles, attended by his counts and knights in armour; and Marie by her maids of honour, in the costume of the period.

St. Eloy, preceded by Queen Bathilde, wife of Clovis II., King of France, and her maids of honour. Clothaire II., Protector of the Saint; his intendant, Bobon, carrying the coffer executed by the Saint: French nobles; young men, in albs and dalmatics, carrying emblems; groupes of young girls bearing gifts, and surrounding a young female in rich Flemish moyen-age costume, who bears an offering to the chapel of Saint Sang.

Cortège representing the entry of Thierry of Alsace into Bruges, after the Crusade; heralds, pages, cross-knights in armour, &c. The cortège closed by wardens in black cloth mantles, furred; by pupils of the schools; and by Bishops of Ghent, Namur, Liege, Bruges, &c., in full pontificals.

The Burgomaster and Sheriffs of the city, the Governor of the Province, and other functionaries; followed by a peloton (half-company) of the second regiment of cuirassiers.

The passing of the procession occupied several hours; and, notwithstanding the rain which fell towards noon, the coup-d'œil was very splendid. The pageant consisted of upwards of 1500 individuals, all dressed with great taste, and often, according to the historical character, with much sumptuousness. For example, the Queen Marie of Bourgogne wore a costume enriched with diamonds and precious stones to the value of 60,000 francs. There was, too, a laudable rivalry among the people of Bruges to reproduce with historic fidelity the several costumes, and extraordinary exertions were made with this object in view.

The Jubilee lasted from the 5th to the 16th of May; the procession was confined to the 7th. It was, altogether, a most magnificent and impressive spectacle. The ecclesiastical cortège extended from 300 to 600 mitres. M. de Ravignan was to have preached a sermon upon the occasion, but was prevented; and his place was supplied by M. Capelle, Canon of Cambray.

The Jubilee closed on the 16th ult., by the grand historical procession once more passing the streets of Bruges.

JUBILEE OF ST. SANG, AT BRUGES.—THE BENEDICTION AT THE CATHEDRAL.

THE "VICEROY," AT ANCHOR IN THE ROADS IN GALWAY BAY.

STEAM COMMUNICATION BETWEEN GALWAY AND NEW YORK.

(From our own Correspondent.)

GALWAY, Saturday, June 1, 1850.

"A GREAT day for Ireland" is an old saying; doubtless, henceforward, the Galway folk will say "A great day for Galway was the 1st of June, 1850;" and should it so happen that the "venture now at sea" can only realise the fond hopes of the people, so will it prove indeed, and do still more for this portion of Ireland, where nature has done so much to stimulate, and man little, to prove his inertness. Nor is it at all probable that the Galway men will do much more, unless, as in the present case, some far-seeing strangers should come amongst them, and lend valuable aid of both head and purse to show them how to avail themselves of the natural wealth of the place.

The long-mooted question of a packet-station in this country being now at issue, with all the disadvantages of an inferior boat to the one starting this day from Liverpool, with an over-stock by 60 tons of coals, it will be but justice to the ship, as well as to her brave commander, to leave her fairly launched on her experimental voyage, and turn to that which at present most interests all those who have been unable to witness her, and yet who expect to see the event recorded in the pages of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

Not having reached Galway until early on Thursday morning, our first act, after securing quarters at Kilroes, was to look at one of the local prints of the day previous, when the following caught our eye:—"The ponderous funnel of the Viceroy has just appeared within Arran Sound, and has been telegraphed by the coast-guards of the several stations." So, off we started in search of a more colossal Viceroy than the one we so often buffeted the breeze and billow in, from Cork to Dublin and Glasgow; and were delighted to find our old friend, though not grown in dimensions, lying quietly and beautifully in the roads of Galway Bay, surrounded by hundreds of all sorts and sizes of craft, now made available to give the denizens of the West an opportunity of seeing the "big steamer," as she lay encircled by broken lands and superb mountain scenery, particularly on the Clare side of the bay, only surpassed by the wondering thousands who thronged both quay, pier, and eminences, to look on this noble sheet of water with an interest unknown to them before. A stroll through the wonderfully quaint old town, and an introduction to the Club, obtained through and by the courtesy of Mr. J. Pearse, the High Sheriff, where we learned all the anticipations and forebodings of the voyage, brought us to that hour most heeded by a hungry and weary traveller.

On Friday we were again afoot, as were all the town; some to see the ship, others to attend a déjeûner given on board by the directors of the ship's company, and to which all that was fair and lovely of Galway and its vicinity were invited. Upon making our way to the Dock-quay, the scene was strikingly gay and picturesque.

It must not, however, be supposed that whilst all was gay in the Bay, the general rejoicing of the town was forgotten; quite the reverse, as public notice was given that the people were to have an illumination, with a grand display of fireworks, to prove their delight at even this distant prospect of a packet station.

PUTTING THE MAIL ON BOARD THE "VICEROY."

Accordingly, about ten o'clock, candles began to burn, gas to blaze, blue lights, red lights, and all the other concomitants of a general blaze up in both windows and sky commenced and continued until a late hour of the night, or rather an early hour of the morning.

Saturday morning, up with the lark, ay up with the sun, and yet not up earlier than the Claddagh boys and girls, who seemed to have remained up all night to get another peep at the big steamer before her departure, as we found the streets and quays literally swarming with sight-seers at a little after four o'clock: some of them had arrived during the night from distant parts of the country. At twenty minutes past six the express arrived from Dublin, with a considerable mail, and was handed over to the coast-guard boat, which took it instantly out to the ship, where it was given in charge to the captain, and placed in a compartment provided specially for its reception.

The early and unexpected arrival of this mail debarred most from witnessing its transit, as it was previously stated that it would not reach here before eight o'clock; but such was the enthusiasm of even the post-boys along the road, that the distance from Athenry to the quay—some eleven miles—was accomplished in one hour and five minutes, a speed heretofore unknown in this end of the world for a public conveyance. As the morning advanced, there assembled an immense number of gentlemen in connexion with the town and this movement, as also the several representatives of Dublin, Cork, Waterford, Limerick, and Belfast (who had arrived here in large numbers during the three previous days), together with the directors and shareholders in the rail now being brought into Galway, as well as the directors, managers, and agents of the Steam-ship Company. When the ordinary mail (which was one of considerable bulk) arrived at the post-office, the excitement amongst this large crowd became most interesting; nor did the gaily-decked horses, the well-dressed women and stalwart men who jumped by dozens off both cars and coaches to clasp the out-stretched hand of welcoming friends, lessen the interest. For the next hour and a half it would be impossible to chronicle the looks and actions of the crowd, or to repeat the many questions and answers of "Will she do it within the ten days?" or "Will she beat the Canada?" (now starting from Liverpool) to each of which questions it would be difficult to get a reply.

At about a quarter after nine o'clock, the mail-bags were delivered into the hands of the Sheriff, who took them into his gig, and drove at once to the quay, where the coast-guard's boat awaited their reception, and was at once towed off towards the ship amidst the acclamations of thousands, and was then handed over to the captain, who instantly put his men to the capstan, and at a quarter to ten o'clock the Viceroy was fairly under weigh, amidst the prolonged cheering of the multitudes assembled upon every available point from which a glimpse of her could be caught; while it is a question whether the salvos of artillery or the people of Galway made most noise upon the occasion. Along the coast, as far as the eye or glass could reach, every hill's peak or eminence was alive with human life; and many were the fervent prayers offered up for the safety of the hardy few who thus braved the ocean to test the time of a voyage from this point of the Old World to a given point in the New.

Owing to the foulness of the weather when coming in, the Viceroy sailed as far up the bay as Ballyvaughan before she found a pilot, though one had gone out early in the morning to meet her; to-day she took one down with her, as far as the Arran Islands, where he was to be put on board his own boat. Some of the directors tell me that this is more to compliment the pilot than for any need that exists of taking one; as they say that it is a clear run up to Mutton Island and in to the roads, and that no need exists for a pilot either up or down. Of course, I am bound to believe what any of the ship's directors tell me; as to these, to the railway directors and shareholders, who contributed six-tenths of the expenses of this experiment, in the event of its proving what has been so long asserted, will all praise be due. No doubt their future success, in a great measure, must depend upon their turning the traffic of the Atlantic by some means into this port; as it is evident that the present traffic likely to be upon the line would never pay a single dividend to the shareholders. This seems plain and intelligible to some of the very heads here, who are putting their shoulders to the wheel so as to keep the thing in motion; and for whose success it is to be regretted that a more powerful boat could not have been obtained, as it is evident that a boat of 350 horse-power, with a lever-cargo of 60 tons, taking her down to the axles, can have but a poor chance against a powerful boat such as the Canada.

DEPARTURE OF THE "VICEROY" STEAMER FROM THE DOCK QUAY, GALWAY.

One thing is certain, and that is—Captain Ewing and his crew will leave nothing undone that rests within their power to render the voyage successful, and earn another need of praise from his employers, who seem to entertain the highest respect for his character, both as a man and a commander.

Before closing this, it may not be out of place to return our best thanks to Mr. E. O'Flaherty for his great attentions, as well as his having placed the appliances of the chief the "Town of the Tribes" at our service, though circumstances quite put it out of our power to avail ourselves of them.

Our illustrations show the Viceroy at anchor in the roads in Galway Bay, with the steamer O'Connell putting visitors on board; and Salt Hill, with the town and St. Vincent's church in the distance.

In the second Engraving we have the putting of the mail on board the coast-guard boat, to be taken to the steamer.

The third scene shows the departure of the Viceroy, as seen from the Dock-quay; with the mountains of Clear in the distance.

We subjoin a few additional particulars, from the Times report:—

The sailing of the Viceroy from the port of Galway is an experiment. Whether it will be a successful one or not, is another matter. She has powerful rivals to contend with; but, although she has long odds against her, she has had a fair start, at all events. Her owners are confident of her making the trip to Halifax within nine days; and there can be little doubt that, if she can do so, a steamer better adapted to the line could accomplish it in a much shorter time. The Viceroy was built for a Channel steamer, and as such has shown her sailing qualities to be excellent; but it is a far different matter to cross the Atlantic. A statement of her principal dimensions will show her inferiority in size and power to the great vessels of the Cunard and Collins lines, with which she will have to contend; they are as follows

	Ft. In.
Extreme length	205 0
Breadth of beam	33 0
Within over paddle-boxes	43 0
Diameter of paddles	29 6
Diameter of cylinder	68
Burden, inclusive of engine-room, &c., 800 tons
Power, 350-horse.

The dimensions of the Atlantic steamer, which sailed on the 29th of May, are:—

	Ft. In.
Extreme length	276 0
Breadth of beam	45 0
Width over paddle-boxes	73 0
Diameter of paddles	26 0
Diameter of cylinder	96
Burden, 3866 tons
Power, 1600 horse.

The quantity of coals on board the Viceroy, amounting to 400 tons (her entire available tonnage, exclusive of engine-room and cabins, being only 432 tons measurement), sunk her very deep in the water. She draws no less than 13 feet 6 inches. This will, of course, materially interfere with her speed; and it is stated that she cannot arrive at her proper sailing trim before three days, at least.

The Viceroy has the advantage of the experienced chief officer in Captain Ewing, who formerly commanded on the West India packet station. Her crew consists, besides the captain, of two mates, boatswain, carpenter, seven seamen, two boys, three engineers, nine firemen, and six coal-trimmers.

The expenses of the trip out and home have been calculated at £1300. Towards this have been contributed, between the Midland Great Western Railway Company and the inhabitants of the town and county of Galway, about £1000.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, June 9.—Second Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 10.—The 161st day of the year.
TUESDAY, 11.—St. Barnabas.
WEDNESDAY, 12.—Trinity Term ends.
THURSDAY, 13.—Sun rises 3h. 45m., sets 8h. 15m.
FRIDAY, 14.—Length of day 16h. 31m.
SATURDAY, 15.—First Stone of New London-bridge laid, 1825.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 15, 1850.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M h	A m	M h	A m	M h	A m	M h	A m	M h	A m	M h	A m	M h	A m
0 50	1 10	1 40	2 0	2 25	2 46	3 10	3 33	3 55	4 20	4 43	5 5	5 35	6 5

FRENCH PLAYS, ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—The Last Week of Monsieur Revoire's Engagement.—On MONDAY NEXT, JUNE 10, M. Scribe's popular comedy of LA CAMARADERIE; and on the same evening will be produced a new comedie-Vaudeville, entitled PAS DE FEMME, OU LES TROIS Tribus," at our service, though circumstances quite put it out of our power to avail ourselves of them. Comedie-Vaudeville, Paris); will make her First Appearance in London. The favourite comedy of LA MILA et la CAMPAGNE will be performed on Tuesday next. June 14. The First Performance of Molle. RACHEL is definitively arranged for Monday, July 1st.—Boxes and Stalls may be obtained at the Box-office of the Theatre, St. Old Bond-street, and at the Box office of the Theatre, which is open daily from Eleven till Five o'Clock.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. BATTY.—Brilliant Success of the Grand National Spectacle.—Innumerable Feats in the Arena.—On MONDAY, June 10, 1850, the Entertainments will commence at Seven o'clock, with the magnificent spectacle of the AFGHANISTAN WAR; or, the Revolt of Cabul, and British Triumphs in India. To be followed by an unusually attractive routine of Feats of the Circus Olympique To conclude with a favourite Farce.—Box Office open from Eleven ol. Four

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT-GARDEN.—MRS. ANDERSON has the honour to announce to her patrons and friends, that her annual GRAND MORNING CONCERT will take place at the ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, on MONDAY NEXT, JUNE 10th 1850. The concert will be in two parts. Part I. The Overture of the Ballo comparsa Vivi la Ma ie ta Regina Il ritorno di sua Maesta Britannica Vittoria COLONNUS Part 2 . . . . e poet of a Miss Jaimes Sheridan supported by all the principal Artistes, and also the Magnificent Band and Chorus of that Establishment, Mr. Costa.—Tickets and Boxes to be had at the Box office of the Theatre at the principal Musicsellers and Librarians, and of Mrs Anderson, 2, Mauch ster-street, Manchester-square

MDLLE. CHARTON.—In addition to the phalanx of eminent artistes engaged, M. BENEDICT is anxious to state that he has secured the services of that distinguished vocalist for his GRAND ANNUAL CONCERT, which will be given on the stage of her Majesty's Theatre, on FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 21.—Boxes, Stalls, and Tickets may be had at the Box-office of the Theatre; and of M Benedict, 9, Manchester-square

HERR STIGELLI'S GRAND EVENING CONCERT, in which Mdlle. Angri, Mame. Nottes, the Hungarian Vocalists, Herr Hoffgen, Herr Breyniess, &c., will appear, will take place on FRIJAY, the 14th of JUNE, at WILLIS'S ROOMS To-day, 2s. Reserved seats, 10s. 6d. ..mit to be had of all musicsellers, and of Herr Stigelli, 19, Golden-square.

MR. FREDERICK CHATTERTON'S MORNING CONCERT FRIDAY, JUNE 14th.—Vocal Assistance Bonglowanl, Westwellewicz, T. Magner, M. Griesbach, Rose, and S. Lowe; Messrs Mongin, Furioso, and F. Chatterton; and Mdlle Goulon, Bristehall Beacon, and Mr. Frederick Chatterton, who will play on "Hungarian Melancholy," as performed by him before her Majesty the Queen and H. R. H. the Prince Albert Conductors, Mr Kollmark and Mr. M Levy. Tickets, 7s, to be had of Mr. F. Chatterton, 9, Duchess-street, Portland place, and of all Musicsellers.

DISTINS' CONCERTS.—Mr. DISTIN and SONS will perform on the SAX HORNS, at the following Towns—Monday, June 10th, Dss; 11th Tuesday, Wednesday, 13th, Framlington Vocalist, Miss M. O'Connor; Pianist, Mr J Wells Wednesday 12th and London on Friday the 14th Address to be addressed to Distin's Patent Saxhorn Depot, 3, Cumberland-street, Leicester-square

MR. HENRY WYLDE.—The THIRD and LAST of the BLACKHEATH CLASSICAL CONCERTS will take place THIS (SATURDAY MORNING), JUNE 8, when Mr. HENRY WYLDE will perform Mozart's Quartet in E flat, Beethoven's Op. 59, and Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 12, for Pianoforte and Violin, with Mr. Wylde. Mr J Blewitt Chatterton will play a Fantasia on the Harp Violoncello, M. Paumann. Viola, Mr. Hill. The Vocal Music will be sung by Miss Bassano, Mr. Joseph Barnett, and Mr. Wood

JULLIEN'S LAST INSPIRATION.—ROYAL SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—FOURTH WEEK of MONS. JULLIEN and SECOND of his NAVY DERBY-DAY GALOP.—MONDAY, JUNE 10, and three following days, Danson's valled Band of the Establishment, Conducted by M. Jullien in person. A magnificent display of Fireworks on Sunday Evening, with the Illumination of Nelson's Monument by Gas Rockets. The view of the Alps and Mont Blanc to be seen from Nine A.M. to Feeding of the Animals at Five. Concert, Half past Six; Passage of the Alps, Half-past Seven; Fireworks at dusk.—Admission, One Shilling.

SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER-COLOURS.—THE FORTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, at their Gallery, 5, Pall-mall East, from Nine till Dusk.—Admittance, One Shilling. Catalogues, Sixpence.
GEORGE FRIPP, Secretary

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS.—The FIRST ANNUAL EXHIBITION of this SOCIETY is NOW OPEN at their GALLERY, 53, PALL MALL, nearly to posite St. James's Palace. Daily from Nine t.. Dusk. Admission, 1s. Catalogue. Tickets may be had of the Keeper at the Gallery.
JAMES FAHEY, Secretary

HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY'S VISIT to IRELAND.—Illustrated by a GRAND MOVING DIORAMA, with scenes of the most charming scenery in that country, including the lovely Lakes of Killarney, by Mr F. FOLLETT, now open at the CHINESE GALLERY, Hyde Park Corner. Daily at 3, Evening at 8. Admission 1s.; Reserved Seats 2s.—An interesting Historical Record of the Event may be had at the Gallery.

COL. FREMONT'S OVERLAND ROUTE to OREGON, TEXAS, and CALIFORNIA, across the Rocky Mountains. Illustrated by a GRAND MOVING PAINTING from Washington City, introducing at the principal Objects that occur, and authentic views of the great Gold Mines. Exhibiting at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, every Morning, at a quarter to Three; Evenings, a quarter to Eight. Admission, 1s. Reserved Seats, 2s. Stalls can be secured.

THE HIPPOPOTAMUS, presented by H.H. the Viceroy of Egypt to the Zoological Society of London, is exhibited daily from One to Six o'clock, at their GARDEN in the REGENT'S PARK. The Band of the 1st Life Guards will perform, by permission of Colonel Hall, every Saturday, at four o'clock. Admission, ONE SHILLING; on Mondays, SIXPENCE.
D. W. MITCHELL, B.A

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY, REGENT'S PARK.—The SECOND EXHIBITION this Season of PLANTS, FLOWERS, and FRUIT will take place on WEDNESDAY next, the 12th instant.—Tickets to be obtained at the Gardens, only by orders from Fellows of the Society, price 5s each; or, on the day of Exhibition, 7s 6d. The gates open at 12 o'clock.

GRAND MONSTER HORTICULTURAL and FLORAL EXHIBITION, to be held at the ROYAL WELLS, in CHELTENHAM, on THURSDAY, JUNE 20th, 1850 £300 in Prizes, and open to all England. The Band of the First Life Guards and two other Military Bands, are engaged The Concerts, Fetes, &c. will succeed. Tickets, 6s. each, on or before the 14th June, to be had at Messrs. Addison and Co's, Regent street; and Messrs Cutbush and Cunard's, Chapside, London.

PANORAMA of the NILE.—Additions have been made to this Exhibition.—The Nubian Desert, from the Second Cataract to Dongola. War-Dance by Five Light March of a Caravan by Moonlight. Morning Prayer. The Mummy of a High-Priest is added to the Catacombs Both Banks of the River are exhibited in the Painting.—EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, Daily, at Three and Eight. Stalls, 3s; Pit, 2s; Gallery, 1s. Children and Schools, Half-price.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—During this week the ALPINE SINGERS will perform daily at Four, and in the Evenings at Half-past Eight. Dr Bachhoffner's LECTURE on the PHILOSOPHY of SCIENTIFIC RECREATION LECTURE by J H Pepper, Esq, on the CHEMISTRY of HYDROGEN, with special reference to its application for conveying by Balloons Signals to Sir John Franklin, daily at a quarter-past Three, and Evening at Eight DISSOLVING VIEWS, DIVER and DIVING-BELL, &c. &c.—Admission, 1s; Schools, Half-price.

FOR CANTERBURY, the first-class passenger ships SIR GEORGE SEYMOUR, 800 tons, and the CHARLOTTE JANE, 750 tons, chartered by the CANTERBURY ASSOCIATION, are appointed to sail from the PORT of LONDON on THURSDAY, the 29th of AUGUST, calling at Plymouth for passengers. For terms of passage, and other particulars apply to WILLIAM BOWKER, Superintendent of shipping, 8, Long Office of the Canterbury Association, 16, Billiter-street.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

N M K. LORD MAYOR.—The prefix of Lord was granted by Edward III, with the style of Right Honourable, in 1354 There is a portrait of Fitzalwyn prefixed to Wecdcock's "Lives of Illustrious Lord Mayors," but we do not know its authority. Enquire, respecting the will, at the Prerogative Court

T S, Lambeth.—There is a question for counsel

CAMPANELLO.—There is a good popular "History of Arabia," 3 vols, in the "Edinburgh Cabinet Library"

AN EVER-CONSTANT SUBSCRIBER.—We cannot reply to the question as to tithe law, or would willingly do so

J T P.—There is an "Alleged Lunatics' Friend Society" office

POLITICO Members of Parliament serving on committees are not paid for so doing

T U.—An explanation of the Methodist Way of Worship will be found in our Journal for Feb. p. 99

A COUNTRY GENTLEMAN, Surrey.—See the "Farmers' Library" (C. Knight, Fleet-street

A SUBSCRIBER.—The copy of the Will from Doctors' Commons is to be obtained by personal application

A CONSTANT READER A suggests the following simple rules for the correct use of "a" and "an" "a" is used before a consonant and an must be used before a vowel and before a when followed by a vowel, as, "A universal idea." "A century," "A year," &c But An and not a is used before h aspirated when the accent is on the second syllable as, "An historical account," &c.

B S.—The silk cultivated by Mr Whitby, of Newland, near Lymington, Hants, is stated to be worth as much in the market as the best foreign silk

A SUBSCRIBER A practical treatise on "Dog-breaking" is published

ΔΕΛΤΑ Apply to the Commissioners of Woods and Forests

A A J.—The proper livery of the arms in question is black and white

D D, the engraving suggested will appear next week.

G P can go from St. Katherine's wharf, by a Dub in and Belfast steamer to Southampton, and thence by another steamer to the Isle of Wight.

BIRTH.—Of a son, at Airlie Cottage, near Portsmouth, on the 4th ult., the wife of E. B. J. Balfour, Esq., 1st Lieutenant H. M. S. Indefatigable. This announcement should have appeared in our Journal of last week, instead of a similar one now inserted.

G H S Wy cannot interfere
MERVYN.—The ages are 21 and 49
M P.—A rule is not, of necessity, cylindrical
W S F P, will be liable for the costs.
F M, Dublin.—Thanks
CLERK, M A, Warrington.—Thanks
E L, Bath.—We shall be glad to see Sketches
ADGUSTA.—The will is legal
J W, Sunderland, is thanked.

 The money (£20) received at our office from Mrs. R. Collis, of Wooten Hill, Norwood, for the relief of the Distressed Nail-makers in the Midland Counties, has been forwarded for distribution as follows:—Messrs. Hingley and Sons, Cradley Chain Works, near Stourbridge, £5.0; to the Rev James Bromley, incumbent of Lye, near Stourbridge, £5; and to Mr Barr, Hadon Hill, Dudley, £5: and the receipt of these sums has been severally acknowledged.

BOOKS, &c. RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Lodge's Portraits, Vol. 8.——Coffee as it Is, and as it ought to Be.——The Amyott's Home.——The Life of a Fairy.

MUSIC: "Busy, Curious, Thirsty Fly."——"As the Stream that Shineth."——"Lucrezia Borgia."——"La Favorita."——"Great Masters," Part 1 and 2.——"Rose Leaves."——"When Friends look coldly on thee."——"Come let us a Maying go."——"Is she not Beautiful."——"Oppressed with Grief."——"Let not dull, Sluggish Sleep."——"Song to Spring."——"Haste ye soft Gales."——"As a Garland once I made."

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1850.

THE Parliamentary proceedings of the past week have been of more than average interest. The Bill of the Bishop of London for establishing a new Court of Appeal in cases involving questions of heresy has been discussed and rejected on the second reading. It was opposed by the Marquis of Lansdowne, on the part of the Government, chiefly on the ground that its introduction was inopportune, and that its principle was dangerous, and tended to violate the prerogative of the Crown. The numbers for the second reading were 51, and against it 84. At this advanced period of the session it is not probable that any new attempt will be made in either House to interfere with the subject.

On Monday the metropolitan members mustered in great force to oppose—not the principle of extramural interments—but the bill which has been brought in by the Government for the abolition of the practice of intramural interment in the metropolis. Some indistinct, undefined, but hideous monster, to which the awful name of "Centralization" has been given, seemed to oppress the brain and the spirits of the metropolitan representatives, and to scare them from the calmness and propriety with which they usually conduct themselves; but, as the dread of this fearful monster wore off by degrees, the attempt was made to discuss the bill with something like coolness and equanimity; and, ultimately, the measure was allowed to make some progress in committee. We trust that the members for the metropolitan boroughs will look at this dreadful ghost, giant, or fiend of "centralization" a little more carefully than they do, that they will take his measure and his height, that they will come, in fact, to close quarters with him, and convince themselves once for all, whether he is likely to prove so powerful and so great a tyrant as they imagine. If by any other means than "centralization," and the authority of some board having jurisdiction over them, all the parishes of London can be compelled to bury their dead beyond those limits where decay, rotting and decomposing remnants of humanity are fatally poisonous to the living, it would be desirable that the wisdom of the metropolitan members should make it known. As for this much-abused "centralization," it would be well if its enemies would inform the public how the country could manage its affairs at all without the assistance of the monster. The monarchy itself is a "centralization;" the House of Commons is a "centralization," and a very necessary one, as all will allow; the Court of Queen's Bench is a "centralization;" the army is a centralization; even the Lord Mayor of London, though he may not know it, is a "centralization." The parishes themselves are "centralizations." In fact, without "centralization," every man would do as he pleased, without reference to the wants, wishes, and rights of his neighbour, and we should then have the miseries of a daily anarchy. No doubt, this necessary principle may be carried too far; but it is significant, that the cry against "centralization" is never raised except when an abuse or a nuisance is to be done away with or removed. It is also worthy of remark, that the parties who raise the outcry can devise no other means than "centralization" of some kind or other, to effect any large measure in the general interest of the public; and that, at present, the greatest foes of "centralization" are the under takers. It begins, however, to be seen, that in this huge metropolis, "centralization" is the one thing most imperatively needful in all questions relative to the public health. Local agencies have poisoned the Thames, poisoned the graveyards, poisoned our pumps and wells, and contaminated our atmosphere. They have not wilfully inflicted these injuries upon two millions of people; but the unhappy results have been brought about by the inherent want of power and cohesion, which is the fatal vice of conflicting and scattered jurisdictions. The machinery proposed to be created by the Government Bill for the regulation of Interments may not be the best that can be devised; but, whatever may be the form which the bill may ultimately assume, it must—if it be intended to become operative—establish a power superior to, and able to control and over-rule, all local and self-interested attempts to nullify and defeat its principle.

The bill of Mr. Fox for establishing a system of secular education in England met, on Wednesday night, the fate anticipated for it by its friends as well as by its foes: it was rejected on the second reading, by the large majority of 287 against 58. The great question of education, both secular and religious, still remains, however, for the decision of the country, and becomes more clamorous for a solution the longer it is neglected. There was a time, and not much longer ago than 1845, when Lord John Russell himself declared the urgency as well as importance of the question, and more than half promised that he would be prepared to introduce a measure to remove the reproach from the people of England, that, amid all their wealth, civilisation, humanity, intelligence, and Christianity, they suffered to grow up amidst them a larger amount of utterly uneducated and uninstructed children than any other Christian country in the world. The evil and scandal have certainly not diminished since 1845, although Ragged Schools have been established in various places at long intervals, to aid in the holy cause of the education of the poor. It was not to be expected that a private member of the House, deriving no support from the great parties in the State, should be enabled to carry a measure on so important a subject, especially when it ignored the religious part of the question. It was, however, to have been expected, after the known and often-avowed opinions of the principal members of her Majesty's Government, that they would not suffer this question to sleep, and force it into the hands of powerless and uninfluential members, whose advocacy, however well meant, was more likely to retard than to advance the cause. In the country the question continues to excite a growing interest, and must ultimately be the paramount question of the day—a question upon which Ministers will stand or fall, and to which it behoves statesmen to turn their most serious attention. The 287 members who opposed the scheme of Mr. Fox include, in all probability, a majority of men who would support a Minister in a well-considered plan for providing education for the unhappy children whom no existing agencies can reach. Such a question is not one for private members—it is a question for the Government.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

CUBA.

Lord BROUGHAM understood that an expedition had sailed from the United States, to take possession of Cuba. He had no doubt whatever but that this was without the consent of the Government of the United States. (Hear, hear.) He was sorry to learn that these execrable piracies had escaped from the Spanish fleet at sea, and he hoped they would be arrested in Cuba, and undergo condign punishment. He hoped that the respectable Government of the United States had power to put down such piratical expeditions, and he hoped his noble friend would assure the House that the Government had adopted means to put a stop to such an expedition.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE was afraid it was true that a piratical expedition had set out from the United States for Cuba; but it was not only without the cognisance, but subject to the disapprobation of the United States Government, who entirely disapproved of these atrocious proceedings.

The Administration of Criminal Justice Improvement Bill was read a third time and passed.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

The House had an early sitting at twelve o'clock.

DRAINAGE AND IMPROVEMENT OF LAND ADVANCES BILL.

On the motion for going into committee on this bill,

Mr. TRELAWNY opposed the bill. They could not afford to impose an additional tax on the people for the purpose of carrying the object of the bill into effect, and he thought it bad taste that so many landlords should be in attendance to give their support to it, when they were so ready to vote against all other proposals for the relief of the people.

After a short discussion, the amendment was negatived by a majority of 73 to 4, and the House went into committee; and the several clauses having been agreed to, the bill was ordered to be reported.

The House then adjourned, and resumed its sitting at five o'clock.

GENERAL POST-OFFICE.

Mr. ANSTEY presented a petition from a number of persons holding clerkships in the Money Order-Office of the General Post-Office, complaining of the recent appointment of a gentleman to the office of chief clerk of that department. The petitioners stated that their claims to the appointment had been passed over, because they had refused to sign a written contradiction of the statements they had promulgated in a memorial which was last year presented to the Treasury on the subject of their duties and salaries, and they therefore prayed the House to institute an inquiry into the matter. The hon and learned member moved that the petition be printed with the votes, for the purpose of founding a motion upon it. Agreed to.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY.

Colonel RAWDON rose to ask the noble Lord at the head of the Government whether the inquiry which was instituted respecting the state of the pictures in the National Gallery, with a view to their better preservation has terminated, and, if so, will the information be given to the House. Whether any proposal has been made by the Government to the Royal Academy, with a view of obtaining for the public collection of pictures the entire of the National Gallery building; and, if so, what answer has been given. Whether any supplemental vote in the present estimates will be called for to carry out the proposition. Whether it is the intention of Government, before taking final steps for permanently locating the pictures on the present site, to institute inquiry, by a committee of this House or otherwise, in order to ascertain whether or not it is expedient to relocate the pictures in Trafalgar-square.

Lord J. RUSSELL said, with respect to the first question, he had received a report from the gentlemen composing that committee, and they had made some suggestions as to their better preservation; but they requested to be allowed to make further inquiry, particularly with respect to the mode of preserving the pictures on the Continent. He should be ready, ere long, to lay that report upon the table of the House, although it was not a final report. With respect to the second question, in conformity with the opinion of the Committee of this House, which sat on the question of the building in Trafalgar-square, he made a proposal to the Royal Academy, with the view of having the entire building of the National Gallery devoted to the exhibition of the pictures. He had received an answer expressing their desire to comply with the wishes of the Government on that subject. With respect to the third and fourth questions, he should say, with that additional information which he now had before him in regard to the present state of the pictures, he thought it was desirable that some further inquiry should be made before any vote was proposed to be sanctioned by the House; and therefore, he proposed early next week to move for a Select Committee, consisting, as far as possible, of the members of the present Commission, to consider that further information, and to state their opinion of the most desirable manner of preserving the pictures in the National Gallery and whether the present site was the most desirable for the institution. (Hear, hear.)

THE LORD CHANCELLOR.

In reply to Mr. STUART, as to the resolution of the Government to put the Great Seal in Commission,

Lord J. RUSSELL said he was very sensitive of the inconvenience which resulted from placing the Great Seal in Commission, and particularly at the present time. At the same time Government had had to weigh the inconvenience that would have been caused by the Great Seal being entrusted to any individual before they had decided what course they would pursue with reference to separating the judicial from the political duties of the office, and until this matter had been determined upon, he felt it to be his duty to advise her Majesty to put the Seal in Commission. He could assure the hon. and learned gentleman that it was his earnest wish that the Seal should continue in Commission as short a time as possible, and he hoped that on Monday fortnight he should be in a position to announce the plan which Government had determined upon, and to move for leave to bring in a bill to carry it out.

CUBA.

Mr. DISRAELI wished to ask the noble Lord at the head of the Foreign Department, if he had received any official information that Cuba had been invaded by a buccaneering expedition from the United States.

Lord PALMERSTON stated the facts which have been already published on the subject, but, as her Majesty's Government had only received the intelligence a few days ago, they, of course, had not yet been enabled to have any communication with the Government at Madrid, but the Spanish Minister, who reached this country from Spain yesterday, had been informed of what had come to the knowledge of her Majesty's Government.

METROPOLITAN INTERMENTS BILL.

The House then resumed the discussion in committee of the clauses of this bill, which occupied the rest of the evening.—Adjourned.

ROYAL SOCIETY.—The annual general meeting for the election of fellows was held on Thursday; the Earl of Rosse, president, in the chair. His Lordship informed the meeting that the council had carefully considered the disposal of the Government grant of £1000 annually for the promotion of scientific research, and would recommend its award accordingly; also, that, in conformity with the representation of council, a grant would be made by Government to enable the Board of Ordnance to publish the scientific portion of the Ordnance survey; and, lastly, that they concur in the recommendation of the British Association made last year, for the establishment of a large reflecting telescope at the Observatory at the Cape of Good Hope. The statutes relative to the election of fellows having been read, the votes of those present were collected, and the scrutineers announced, that, out of 97 candidates, the election had fallen on the following gentlemen:—William Henry Barlow, Esq., George Busk, Esq., Thomas Bazard Curling, Esq., George Edward Day, M.D., Warren De la Rue, Esq., William Fairbairn, Esq., Robert James Graves, M.D., Lewis Llewelyn Bogeawen Ibbetson, Esq., Charles Turnbull Jones, M.B., James P. Joule, Esq., John Fletcher Miles, Esq., Major Henry Creswicke Rawlinson, Edward Schunck, Esq., Daniel Sharpe, Esq., John Tomes, Esq.

COLLIERY EXPLOSION.—A fatal explosion has taken place at Usherwoth Colliery, near Gateshead, Durham, by which 16 persons have lost their lives, and five others have been dreadfully injured. The cause of the accident is at present involved in mystery

PROTECTIONIST DEMONSTRATION AT LIVERPOOL.—A large meeting in support of a return to the principle of protection in our commercial legislation, was held in the Royal Amphitheatre, Liverpool, on Thursday. The meeting was attended by delegates from all the great agricultural districts and societies throughout the country; and the chair was taken by the Earl of Wilton. Among the noblemen and gentlemen on the platform we observed the Marquis of Granby, M.P., Lord John Manners, M.P., Mr. Christopher, M.P., Mr. Forbes Mackenzie, M.P., Mr. Newdegate, M.P., Professor Butt, Q.C., the Rev. Dr. M'Neile, Mr. George Frederick Young. Speeches of the usual character at these demonstrations have been delivered by several speakers, resolutions in support of the principle of Protection were agreed to unanimously.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

Our accounts of yesterday (Friday) from Paris are of little interest. The Assembly has voted the renewal of the law prohibiting the meeting of clubs.

M. Mole's bill, which has caused great uneasiness to his family and to his political friends.

M. Thiers, it is said, has given up the intention of paying a visit to Claremont. The Moniteur contains an order from the War Minister, allowing soldiers under certain categories to return home.

GERMAN STATES.

According to accounts received via Paris, the Emperor of Russia will sustain Austria against Prussia. The Emperor has told the King of Wurtemberg that he informed the King of Wurtemberg that assassins were watching not only his Majesty, but the Emperor of Austria and the Emperor of Russia.

The King of Wurtemberg has peremptorily prorogued the Diet from the 4th to the 26th instant.

CUBA.

Later intelligence than that already published from this quarter has been brought by the American steamer Pacific Captain Nye. The chartering of General Lopez at Cardenas, and the surrender of the garrison, are announced. A number of men quartered upon the Woman's Island, near Catache, Yucatan, and who were waiting to take part in the expedition, had been arrested by the Cuban authorities. Cuba had been declared in a state of siege and blockade; and a proclamation had been issued, announcing that any person taking part, or aiding in any way, the invading expedition, would be shot.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

SOCIETY FOR IMPROVING THE CONDITION OF THE LABOURING CLASSES.—On Thursday the annual meeting of this society was held at St. Martin's Hall; the Right Hon. Lord John Russell, M.P., in the chair. This charity supported by the Marquis of Westminster, Earl Harrowby, Viscount Ebrington, Lord Ashley, Lord Robert Grosvenor, M.P., &c. His Lordship having briefly opened the business, a report was read, which stated that the society had recently completed the erection of a lodging-house for families in Streatham street, Bloomsbury, at an expense of £3000, which would afford accommodation to forty-eight families, at rents varying from four shillings to seven shillings per week; and it was expected that it would give a return of eight or ten per cent. on the outlay. The "Thanksgiving Fund," established under the letter of the Bishop of London, as a means of acknowledgement of the providential mercy shown on the cessation of the cholera, now amounted to £8300; and the committee proposed to erect a lodging-house to accommodate twenty families, and also to erect a house with sixty-four single rooms, each for two persons, in which they would be partly furnished, and let to respectable single women, needlewomen and others, at a charge of 1s each, or 2s. the room, which would be provided with everything tending to the decencies and comforts of life. The returns from the houses the society already possessed was about 5 per cent per annum on the land, and 6½ per cent. on the houses and fittings; from which, however, a slight deduction must be made for the necessary repairs. The report concluded by pointing out the advantages the society was likely to bestow on the working classes, by inducing other parties to follow their example in the improvement of the dwellings of the working classes, and called upon the company to aid the fund for building the thanksgiving, which it was estimated would cost £10,000. The report also bore testimony to the success of the small cottage and garden allotment system in various parts of the country. The report was adopted, and a series of resolutions in support of the objects and efficiency of the society. At the conclusion of the proceedings, the secretary announced that Lord John Russell had subscribed £25 to the society; Mr. Samuel Gurney, £50; Mr Pusey, M.P., £20; Viscount Ebrington, £25, &c.

WATERLOO-BRIDGE.—A general meeting of this company took place on Thursday, at the Freemasons' Tavern; Mr. Anderson in the chair. The report stated that the tolls received for the half-year ending the 23rd of February last amounted to £7367 11s.; of which sum £4360 was derived from foot passengers, and £3007 10s. from carriages and horses. After paying the current charges and expenses, and providing for the interest upon the company's bonds, and giving a dividend of 2s. 10d. in the pound to the annuitants, there remained a surplus of £195 14s. The receipts for the past half-year had exceeded those of the corresponding period of last year by a sum of nearly £100. The report was adopted. After a vote of thanks to the chairman the meeting separated.

ROYAL ASYLUM OF ST. ANN'S SOCIETY.—The anniversary of this excellent institution, established in 1709, for the purpose of maintaining clothing, and educating the children of those once in prosperity, orphans or not, of every religion, was celebrated by a dinner at the London Tavern, on Wednesday evening; the Right Hon. Viscount Fielding in the chair, supported by the Hon. and Rev. F. Fowle, Mr. Sheriff Nicoll, Mr. J. W. Freshfield (High Sheriff of Surrey), the Rev. Dr. Cayley, Dr. Mayo, the Rev. D. Laing, F.R.S., and Mr. Newman, in proposing "Prosperity to the Royal Asylum of St. Ann's Society," observed, that the society, the anniversary of which they had met to celebrate, had been established for many years; but who could have thought that in his little day-school, established by a few benevolent individuals in the year 1709, in St. Ann's-lane, in the immediate vicinity of the spot where he was then speaking, in which thirty boys and thirty girls were received, would ever have risen to that importance that, by the year 1850, it would have educated and established in the world upwards of 2000 children? (Cheers.) The following benefactions by will during the past year to the charity were announced, viz. from the Countess of Bridgewater, £500; Mrs. Hemsridge Cobbold, late of Ipswich, £100; E. B. Vigurs, Esq., late of Mornington-place, £50; and J. Hatchard, Esq., late of Piccadilly, £10. The balance-sheet showed the revenue for the year to have been £6937 14s. 9d., of which £1350 had been invested in the purchase of Consolidated and Reduced Annuities, £1407 had been expended on the board of the children, and £547 on their clothing. The balance in the treasurer's hands, after paying the various incidental expenses of the society, was £1. 6 11s. 6d.

BUILDERS' BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.—The anniversary dinner of this charity was held on Tuesday evening, at the London Tavern, where a party of about 200 guests sat down to an excellent entertainment, over which Mr. Cubitt, M.P., presided. The secretary announced subscriptions to the amount of £400. The object of the institution is to give relief and grant permanent pensions to decayed master bricklayers, plasterers, slaters, masons, carpenters, joiners, plumbers, painters, glaziers, smiths, zinc-workers, paper-hangers, and their widows; also to give temporary relief to deserving workmen of masters, members of the charity, in cases of accident. It is the intention to erect an asylum to carry out the benevolent purposes of the charity, and for this and a building fund has been established.

THE PRINTERS' PENSION SOCIETY.—On Tuesday evening a general meeting of the committee of management and other members took active interest in the prosperity of this institution, founded in 1827, for the relief of aged and infirm printers—pressmen and compositors—and their widows, by permanent yearly pensions, was held at the London Tavern, several business The report for the past year detailed the general state and prospects of the society. There are now 58 male and female pensioners on the funds, and 163 persons have, since the formation of the society, participated in its benefits. The principal capital invested at the present time amounts to £5513 17s. 3d. The anniversary dinner, in May last, presided over by Frederick Peel, Esq., M.P., produced a sum exceeding £300. The financial statement for the past year showed the receipts, including a balance of the previous year of £68 10s. 4d., to be, from all sources, £910 18s. 2d., leaving an available balance for the current year of £40 12s 2d.

CHARING-CROSS HOSPITAL.—The annual meeting of the friends and patrons of this society took place at the Hospital, Charing-cross, on Saturday the Rev. Dr. Worthington in the chair. The report stated the severe losses which this charity had sustained by the death of a very large number of its best friends and supporters, whose kindness and liberality while living contributed most essentially to its prosperity and welfare. During the last year, 18 500 indigent sick persons have been admitted on the books for relief, at a cost of £2458 3s. 6d. Of these, 1116 were in-patients, and 17,384 were out-patients (many of whom were visited at their own homes, and the greater part restored to the blessings of health and to their occupations). These made a total of 167,758 patients who had partaken of the advantages of this institution from its commencement, in 1818, to Dec. 31, 1849. During the past year, exclusive of 1495 patients received by recommendatory letters from governors and subscribers, as many as 17,504 have been admitted without any recommendation whatever. The committee regretted that, notwithstanding the utmost care in the expenditure, the resources of the institution stood greatly in need of augmentation, to enable them to meet the continued demands of the sick and needy for relief, and to increase its efficiency and confirm its permanent prosperity. The receipts for the past year had amounted to £2385, which, with a balance of £597, made a total of £2982. The expenditure was £2635, leaving a balance of £347.

EARLY-LOAVE THEATRICAL FUND.—On Monday, the thirty-third anniversary festival of this institution took place at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street; Sir Wyndham Anstruther, Bart., in the chair. About 150 gentlemen sat down to dinner, and the galleries were graced by a large company of ladies. The musical part of the entertainment was more than usually attractive, the following ladies and gentlemen having volunteered their gratuitous services on the occasion:—Mr. Lindsay Sloper (conductor), Misses Birch, Lee, Fyne, Rainford, K. Fitzwilliam, E. Nelson, P. Horton, Fanny Huddart, and M. Williams, Messrs. Ernst, A. Sedgwick, Henry Phillips, D. King, Leffler, Genge, Gray, Young, Binge, Stonbridge, S. Jones, Beale, and Lee. Mr. Harley, the treasurer of the society, read the company a letter which he had received from the Duke of Cambridge, regretting that his duties in the House of Lords prevented him from presiding at the festival, and offering a donation of £20 towards the funds of the institution. The usual loyal and complimentary toasts having been drunk, Mr. Harley delivered a short address, in which he urged the claims of the recipients, and concluded by stating that he had the pleasure to announce that the Queen had transmitted the sum of £50, and that other liberal sums had been presented in aid of the funds. The amount of subscriptions announced was £573 10s., including the donations from her Majesty and the Duke of Cambridge.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF CHEMISTRY.—The annual meeting of this society was held on Monday, at the College, Oxford-street; Mr. Tite, F.R.S., in the chair. The report stated that the financial details were made up as usual, and would be found to be most satisfactory. It was the great object of the council to control the expenditure consistently with the proper working of the school, so as to bring it within the ordinary income, and in this they were happy to state that they had been nearly successful. Owing to the kind indulgence of the landlord, a temporary loan, kindly granted by Lord Ashburton, chairman of the council, which the product of the college had enabled them to liquidate. The educational department had been carefully attended to, was demonstrated by the increasing income derived from the fees of the students, and the council had the gratification of reporting that the number of pupils, the working hours of the students, and the income furnished by the fees of admission, had never been exceeded, and, in the latter respect, were equalled since the establishment of the college, and its success continues to increase. From the ability exhibited by Dr. Hoffman, the professor, in the domain of organised chemistry, a pecuniary grant of £100 from the Royal Society has been applied to the purchase of a series of experiments which, it was expected, would throw a new light on the operations of Nature's laboratory to the production of those singular combinations denominated alkalis. The importance of the science of chemistry to the classes in the country, and particularly to the agriculturist, was generally acknowledged Never was it so necessary to cheapen the production of all articles of commerce, or to augment the yield of our common fields and pastures, by the scientific application of the resources of chemistry; and that this was admitted, was obvious by the increasing sale of new fertilising agents, &c. The council begged to acquaint their friends that, at the request of the Government, some most important investigations respecting the manufacture of sugar had been undertaken by the professor, in conjunction with Professor Graham, of University College, London, and Professor Thompson, of Glasgow, and on which a report had been made, and laid before the chancellor of the exchequer. It was the great object of the council to afford with the council to erect a suitable theatre for the delivery of lectures, which should be open to the public, for which provision has been made with the space behind the college, whenever the speculative builder had to submit plans for a temporary loan, kindly granted by Lord Ashburton, chairman of the council, finished with the necessary resources. After the election of the officers, a vote of thanks to Prince Albert, as president, and to the chairman, concluded the business of the meeting.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—The anniversary meeting of this society took place on Monday; Captain Smyth, R.N., F.R.S., the president, in the chair. The council's report congratulated the Fellows upon the improved state of the society since the last anniversary, and more particularly mentioning the grounds upon which the council has founded their application to Government for a set of apartments, in which the extensive geographical collection belonging to the society might be properly arranged and rendered available for reference; it has, in less than 20 years, expended £7000 upon a journal disseminating geographical information in every part of the world; and upwards of £4000 in furtherance of discovery in the remotest regions, the results of which, in addition to that information, have been of great national utility. The Patron's, or Victoria, Gold Medal was then presented to the Hon. Abbott Lawrence, the American Ambassador, for transmission to Lieutenant Maury, the talented compiler of the charts; a letter was read to Alderman Challis and the Rev. Dr. Tidman, as representatives of the London Missionary Society, informing them that the council of the Royal Geographical Society had, in consideration of the services of the Rev. David Livingstone, of South Africa, in succession to expeditions of Messrs. Oswell and Murray to the great Lake of Ngami, directed that twenty-five guineas, the remaining portion of the annual Royal premium "for the Encouragement of Geographical Science and Discovery," should be awarded to that gentleman. The Presidential address on the progress of geography during the past year having been next read, the Fellows adjourned to the anniversary dinner at the Thatched House Tavern, where, with Sir Roderick Murchison in the chair, and supported by the American Ambassador, the Secretary of Legation, and other distinguished individuals, the entertainment was kept up until a late hour.

CALEDONIAN ASYLUM.—On Thursday a special meeting of the subscribers to this society was held in the Scottish Hall, Crane court, Fleet-street; Sir George Clerk in the chair; when twelve boys and four girls were elected into the asylum. After some discussion, the minutes of the last meeting, which approved various officers of the institution, were read.

SCOTTISH HOSPITAL.—On Thursday evening, the spring festival of this charity was celebrated by a dinner at the Thatched House Tavern; Sir Henry Pandas in the chair. Among the company present were his Excellency General Jung Bahadoor, Prime Minister and Commander-in-Chief of Nepaul, and his two brothers; Captain Kavanagh, the political agent; and Mr. Maitland, the secretary to the General; Mr. de Gessler, Conseiller d'Etat et Consul-General to Spain, from Russia; Mr. Constantine Nicolla, of the Italian service; Admiral Sir Charles Malcolm, &c. The Nepaul location appeared pleased with the Scotch reel, which was danced by boys of the Caledonian Asylum, and by the pipers of M'Kay, piper to her Majesty, and of the boys of the asylum, with which the evening's business was diversified. In the course of the evening a collection was made on behalf of the society, amounting to about £300, including £100 from her Majesty, £50 from the Marchioness of Ely, £21 from the Duke of Montrose, £10 10s from the Count de Flahaut, £10 10s. from Dr. John Forbes, &c.

DISTRESSED NEEDLEWOMEN'S SOCIETY.—The ladies' committee and subscribers met on Saturday last, at the office of the institution, Rathbone-place, when upwards of 40 letters of thanks were read from persons who had been rescued from misery and wretchedness to comparative comfort. The only drawback upon the society in its limited means; for the applications for aid far exceed the hopes that, by their personal exertions, others of more fortunate circumstances might be stimulated to join with them in fully carrying out the objects of the society. We have pleasure in announcing that the Duke of Cambridge, and the following ladies have joined, in addition to our last announcement: Countess of Abingdon, Viscountess Curzon, Lady Marcus Hill, Lady Lurgan, Lady Adair, Dowager Lady Dacre, Lady Caroline Duncombe, Lady Gainsborough, Dowager Lady Nicholson, Lady Taylor, Lady Kerrison, Lady Sydney, Lady Morgan, &c. Amongst the contributors are Viscountess Castlereagh, £5; Lady Adair, £5; Sir W. Heathcote, £25 (per Coutts and Co.), &c.

THE WESTMINSTER SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.—On Wednesday the old scholars of Westminster School celebrated their anniversary festival at the Thatched House Tavern, St. James's-street. The most noble the Marquis of Westminster, K.G., presided; and we suppose on his right hand sat the Bishops of Ripon and St. Asaph, and on his left by the Rev. Dr. Liddell, the head master. The banquet was served in the most sumptuous style, and the table presented a magnificent display of plate. Amongst the old scholars present were—Lord Glenelg, M.P., Col. Mure, M.P., Mr. Austin Vaughan Williams, Dr. Phillimore, the Rev. Dr. Williamson (head master of Westminster School), Mr. Plowden, M.P., Mr. Richard Bickerdyke, M.P., and Mr. R. S. Glynne. The chairman, in proposing the toast of the evening, "Prosperity to Westminster School," introduced, in a succinct but interesting narrative of the rise and progress of Westminster School from the days of Queen Elizabeth downwards, and instanced a number of great and distinguished men who had been educated within its walls; not the least, added the noble Marquis, was the present Prime Minister of England.

MANSION HOUSE.—The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress have issued cards of invitation to the Archbishops and Bishops and a large number of clergymen, to dine at the Mansion House, after the sermon in aid of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, on Wednesday, the 19th inst.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—Births registered in the week ending Saturday, June 1: Males, 677; females, 697: total, 1374. Deaths during the same period.—Males, 343; females, 353: total, 696. In this return, the public health, in London, may be unusual calmness of the bills of mortality bears at the present time a favourable appearance. The mortality is low—not as compared with that which prevails in places of better sanitary condition, but with what has been commonly observed in London at the same period of former years The deaths registered in the week ending last Saturday were 696; in the 22nd week of the ten years 1840-49, they rose from 760, which was the lowest number, and occurred in 1842, to 950, in 1847; the average was 850, or, if corrected for increase of population, 936, to the present decrease on which, therefore amounts to The classification of deaths in public institutions shows that the deaths of persons were registered in workhouses, 46 in hospitals, 11 in lunatic asylums, and 8 in the Royal Hospital, Greenwich.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The mean daily reading of the at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, was above 30 in. on Wednesday, Saturday, on which last day it was 30.179 in.; the mean of the week The mean temperature in the week was 58.2 deg., rather higher than in the same week during several of seven years. On Friday it was 66 deg., the average, and on the two following days it was respectively 5 deg. at 2 deg. above.

ANNIVERSARY MEETING OF THE CHARITY CHILDREN, AT ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.

BY THOMAS MILLER.

The Cathedral of St. Paul's is the great landmark of London. Long before the eye of the approaching stranger obtains a glimpse of the graceful spires, grey massy towers, and tall columns which ascend from every corner of the outstretched city, it rests upon that mighty dome, which looms through the misty sky like some dim world hanging amid the immensity of space—for so does it seem suspended—when the smoke from ten thousand homes throws a vaporous veil over the lower portion of the invisible building. From the long range of hills that overlook Surrey and Kent—from the opposite heights of Highgate and Hampstead, and for miles away in the level valley through which the Thames ebbs and flows, that rounded dome is seen standing sentinel day and night over the two-million peopled city. Above the busy hum of the multitude it keeps watch by day, and through the hushed night it looks up amid the overhanging stars, and throws back from its golden cross (emblem of our salvation) the silvery rays of the bright moon, when all the sights of earth below are wrapt in drowsy silence. High up it towers, a tribute of man to his Maker, carrying our thoughts almost unconsciously to God while we gaze upon it, and pointing out to the unbelieving heathens who have crossed the great deep, a Christian land—an image of religion reflected in the deep tide of our commerce, shadowing forth a haven beyond the grave, when the fever and the fret of this life will have died away like a forgotten dream. It stands like a calm bay amid the ever-heaving sea of restless London, into which the tempest-tost mariner may at any time enter and anchor his barque nearer the shores of Eternity; for while all around him the wild elements of worldly gain are raging, scarcely a sound from without falls upon his ear to break the solemn silence which ever reigns in that "dim religious light."

But never did those "long-drawn aisles" appear to us more holy than on Thursday; never did the sunbeams which occasionally streamed through the vaulted dome seem so much like the golden ladder on which the "angels of God ascended and descended" in the dream of the patriarch of old, as when they whose ascended and descended" in the dream of the patriarch of old, as when they whose for a few moments upon the heads of those thousands of children who were congregated beneath. We seemed to picture Charity herself newly alighted from heaven, and standing, in the midst overshadowing them with her white wings, while her angelic smile lighted up the holy fabric as she stood with her finger pointing to the sky. It was a sight that went home to every heart, and made an Englishman proud of the land of his birth, to know that hundreds of those children, who were fatherless and motherless, were watched over and tended by the Angel of Charity, and that thousands who waited to do her bidding, with willing hearts and open hands, were assembled in the temple which her overpowering presence then hallowed. Then, to know that so vast a multitude formed but a portion of the numbers which English charity clothed, fed, and educated; and that, if all could have been assembled, tier above tier, as they then sat, they would have reached to the very summits of the dome itself, extending, as it were, to heaven, and with folded hands, and souls seek, supplicating faces, seeming to plead in our behalf before the footstool of God.

It was a sight never to be forgotten, to see those thousands of clean and neatly-clad children ranged one above another, to the height of twenty feet, beneath the huge overshadowing dome: to see the girls at the beginning or ending of a prayer, as if touched by the wand of some magician, raise or drop their thousands of snow-white aprons at the self-same instant of time, was like the sudden opening and folding of innumerable wings, which almost made the beholder start, as if he had stopped suddenly upon the world of sun-lit cities. The gaudiest garden that figure in oriental romance, with all their imaginary colouring, never approached in beauty the rich and variegated hues which that great group of children presented. Here the eye rested upon thousands of little faces that peeped out from the pink trimmings of their neat caps; there the pretty head-gear was ornamented with blue ribbons, looking like blue-bells and white lilies blended together, further on the hair of other girls of hands stood like shaded May-blossom, while the crimson badge which covered the seats looked in the distance as if the roses of June were peeping in between the openings of the branches. The pale pensive lilies adorned into a primrose-coloured border, which was relieved by the darker drapery of the boys, upon whom the shadows of the arches settled. Ever and anon there was a sparkling as of gold and silver, as the light fell upon the glittering badges which numbers of the children wore, or revealed the hues of rose-guys which they held in their little hands, or were proudly in their bosoms. High above this vast amphitheatre of youthful heads, the outspread banners of blue and crimson and purple, emblazoned with gold, hung waved, all filled with

Stains and splendid dyes,
As are the tiger-moth's deep-damasked wings.

And when the sunlight, at intervals, fell upon the hair, or the innocent faces of some snow-white group of girls, they seemed surrounded with

A glory like a saint's.
They look'd like splendid angels newly drest,
Save wings, for heaven.

KEATS.

Eastward the organ rose with its sloping gallery of choristers, selected from Westminster, St. Paul's, and the Chapels Royal, and from these the full choir burst; and the sounds were caught up and joined by thousands of voices, until the huge building seemed to throb again beneath that mighty utterance. The first anthem pealed upon the ear, we seemed borne away to another state to that heaven of which we catch glimpses in our sweetest dreams, when all those childish voices joined in the thrilling chorus: when we beheld thousands of childish faces in the ever-shifting light, we could almost imagine that those sounds came not from us, but from "the four winds of heaven" before the blinding glory of Heaven. Over all pealed the full-voiced organ, sounding like music that belongs not to earth; now high, now low, near or remote, as the reverberated sound rose to the dome or traversed the aisles, coming in and out like wavering light between the pillars and shadowy recesses—spots in which old echoes seemed to sleep, old voices to linger—which only broke forth at intervals to join in the solemn anthem that rose up and floated away, and would only become indistinct when it reached the star-paved courts above.

There was something pleasing in the countenances of many of the girls—something meek and patient in the expression of many, especially in the older ones. You could almost fancy you could distinguish those who were orphans, by their looking timidly round, as if seeking among the spectators for some one to love them.

From such a scene our mind naturally turned to the huge amphitheatres of old, when the populace of ancient cities congregated to see some gladiator die, or to witness the struggle between man and some savage beast, while the air was rent with applauding shouts, as the combatants bared their breasts to the sharp swords or were torn by the tusks of infuriated animals. How great the contrast! Instead of the shouts of the heathen multitude, here the solemn anthem was chanted by thousands of childish voices, while every heart should be uplifted in silent prayer to God. Here we saw the youthful aspirants of heaven tuning their notes like young birds—dim half-heard melodies, which can only burst forth in perfect music when they reach that immortal land where "One eternal summer ever reigns" And we sighed as we thought how many thousands, still uncared for, were scattered through the streets and alleys of London, and left to live as they best could, amid ignorance, rags, and hunger, with no one to teach them that, outcasts as they are on earth, they have still a father in heaven who careth for them. Charitably disposed as England is to her poor children, she has yet much to do before her great work is perfected; she has to let her "weary and heavy laden" bear bones in hands who have neither food nor raiment, nor any place at night where they can rest their weary and aching heads. The time will come when she will be convinced that she must do more than save a remnant, when there will be none left in hunger and ignorance to bear about her great cathedral, as we saw them on Thursday, envying the thousands of clean and healthy-looking children, who, more fortunate than they, were under the care of charitable guardians. All these her protecting arms will in time include in one warm motherly embrace, without distinction. God send that that time may be near at hand!

Many a "wept soul" looked out with moistened eyes from that assemblage which, when this earthly pilgrimage is ended, shall hear the voice of the Great Master whom they have served exclaim, "For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in." Such we could distinguish, who felt no greater pleasure than in sharing their wealth amongst the poor and needy, on whose brow Benevolence had set her seal, who do good by stealth, and "blush to find it fame." Such as these feel an intimate sympathy with the misery and wretchedness of wide gloaming over the hundred and when the Angel of Death comes, he will bear them away gently, and soft beating of his dark wings they will hear again the sweet voices of those dear children singing a little way before, as if they had but to know their faces, when the gates of Paradise would while outstretched arms would be seen through the surrounding halo holding forth the crowns of glory which had been prepared for them "from the foundation of the world."

Wide on their golden hinges swing.

Before prayers, the Hundredth Psalm was sung. The Reading Psalms were chanted by the gentlemen of the choir, the children joining in the "Gloria Patri" to each psalm. After the First Lesson, Boyce's "Te Deum," and after the Second, "Jubilate Deo." The Prayer for the Queen was preceded by the "Coronation Anthem," in which the children joined. Before and after the sermon, presented by the Lord Bishop of St. Asaph, the usual psalms were sung; commencing with Barnby's "Hallelujah Chorus." of Cambridge, the Lord Mayor, and several distinguished persons We are sorry to say the Dean was the Only one absent on only similar occasion; hundreds of the boys, unable to obtain admission,

ANNIVERSARY MEETING OF THE CHARITY CHILDREN IN ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL, JUNE 6, 1850.—(SEE PRECEDING PAGE.)

THE SCULPTURE GALLERY AT HOLDERNESSE HOUSE, PARK-LANE.

FESTIVITIES AT HOLDERNESSE HOUSE.

THE Marquis of Londonderry gave a magnificent entertainment, on Wednesday evening, at Holdernesse House, to the officers of the 2nd Life Guards (of which regiment the noble Marquis is the Colonel) and a distinguished circle of the nobility. The regiment had been reviewed in Hyde Park during the morning, in the presence of his Royal Highness Prince George and his Excellency the Nepaulese Ambassador, attended by a brilliant suite of officers. In addition to the banquet, the Marchioness of Londonderry had issued invitations for a grand ball, to which nearly 1500 guests were bidden.

At seven o'clock, the fine band of the 2d Life Guards arrived at the mansion, and took their station in the vestibule, where they continued to play a selection of martial airs during the arrival of the company. The guests assembled in the drawing-room, from whence, at eight o'clock, they descended to the banqueting-room.

Among the company who sat down to dinner were the Duke and Duchess of Norfolk, the Duke and Duchess of Cleveland, the Duchess of Sutherland, his Excellency the Russian Minister and the Baroness Brunnow, the Marquis and Marchioness Camden, the Earl and Countess of Kinnoul, the Marquis and Marchioness of Blandford, the Earl of Strafford, the Viscountess Combermere, Viscount and Viscountess Hardinge, Viscount Gough, Viscount Anson, M.P., Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, Sir Robert and Lady Peel, Sir Edward Kerison, Sir William Gomm, &c. His Excellency the Nepaulese Ambassador, with his two brothers, were also present at the banquet. Colonel MacDonall, Colonel Williams, and fifteen other officers of the regiment were honoured with invitations to the fête; and these, with the Marquis and Marchioness of Londonderry and Lady Adelaide Vane, completed the party.

The banquet was served in a style of princely hospitality. The noble Marquis was supported, right and left, by the Duchess of Norfolk and the Duchess of Sutherland. It was observed as a singular fact, that the Nepaulese gentlemen did not partake of food during dinner, but remained passive spectators of the brilliant scene which the banqueting-room afforded.

During dinner the band of the noble Marquis's regiment, stationed in an anteroom, played a selection of favourite operatic music.

The banquet having been concluded, and the dessert placed upon the table,

The noble Marquis proposed the health of "Her most gracious Majesty the Queen," which was duly honoured.

The next toast was that of "The Prince, the Prince of Wales, and the other members of the Royal family," which having been drunk, the ladies retired.

Among the remaining toasts was the "Nepaulese Ambassador," which was acknowledged by his Excellency in Hindostanee, his speech being afterwards interpreted by Major Kavanagh. The "Ladies" having been toasted, the guests rose, and joined the company in the drawing-rooms.

The Sculpture Gallery (a view of which, by the kind permission of Lord Londonderry, we are enabled to present to our readers), as well as the whole suits of saloons on the principal floor of the mansion, were thrown open on this occasion. The former magnificent apartment was used as the grand ball-room, for which its large dimensions admirably adapted it. The magnificent works of art this gallery contains are world-famous the statuary including several chefs-d'œuvre by Canova and other eminent sculptors. Among these we may especially particularize "Thesens and the Minotaur," from the Prior Gallery at Florence, and the "Kneeling Cupid," of both of which we annex outline representations. We have also engraved a superb vase, of colossal dimensions, which stands in this gallery on a pedestal, bearing the following inscription :—

"The gift of his most Christian Majesty Louis XVIII., King of France and Navarre, on the signature of the Peace of Paris, 30th of May, 1814."

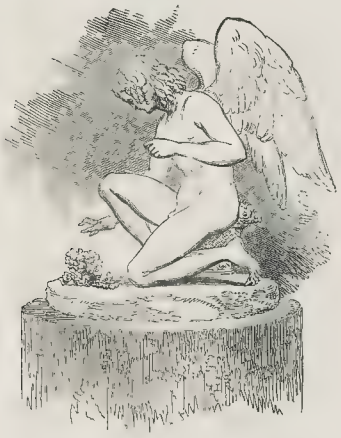
This gallery contains several full-lengths, by Sir Thomas Lawrence, of British and foreign Monarchs of the present century, and a life-size model of the statue lately erected to the memory of the late Lord Castlereagh in Westminster Abbey.

Among the valuable family relics displayed here, we remarked the magnificent diamond-hilted sword presented to this celebrated statesman, and a variety of military trophies gained by the prowess and daring bravery of the present noble Marquis during the Peninsular war. One of these trophies bears the following inscription :—

These cuirasses and helmets were captured by General Charles Stewart, Marquis of Londonderry, G.C.B., &c., when he, with a very inferior force of the Hussars and picquets of the English cavalry, charged and overthrew the Imperial Guard, one of the best corps of cavalry in the French army, at Benavente, in Spain, and took the French General Le Fevre prisoner.

We regret that want of space redneces us to the necessity of thus hastily dismissing our notice of this beautiful gallery.

His Royal Highness Prince George, his Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and the Duke of Wellington were present at the ball; and the festivities were kept up with unflagging spirit until after three o'clock.



THE KNEELING CUPID

VASE PRESENTED BY LOUIS XVIII TO THE LATE MARQUIS OF LONDONDERRY.

THESEUS AND THE MINOTAUR.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT OSBORNE.

Her Majesty and the Prince Consort, with the youthful members of the Royal family, continue, we rejoice to learn, in excellent health, at Osborne. Nothing whatever has occurred to vary the usual even tenor of Court life during the past week, except the arrival of the Duchess of Kent and the Prince of Leiningen, on a visit to the Queen and the Prince on Tuesday last.

Her Majesty and the Prince, with their illustrious guests, have taken daily drives in the vicinity of Osborne, and the continuance of favourable weather has enabled the Queen and the Prince to enjoy their accustomed early promenades in the park and grounds of Osborne.

The Hon. Elizabeth Leonox has relieved the Hon. Miss Cavendish as Maid of Honour in Waiting.

The Hon. Colonel Grey has relieved Major-General Wemyss as Equerry in Waiting.

FASHIONABLE ENTERTAINMENTS.

On Wednesday last (the birthday of his Majesty the King of Hanover) their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge had a dinner party at Cambridge House, and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge had afterwards an evening party. The dinner party comprised her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Count Charles Kielmansegge, Baron Keller (Austrian Chargé d'Affaires), Baron and Baroness Bunsen, the Duke of Wellington, the Countess of Jersey and Lady Clementina Villiers, the Earl of Roden, Lord Frederick and Lady Augusta Hallyburton and the Misses Erskine, Lady Georgiana Bathurst, Sir Charles Thurston and Mr. Augustus Stafford.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester entertained his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, the Duke of Wellington, the Duke and Duchess of Bedford, the Duke and Duchess of Leinster, the Duchess of Grafton, Lord de Manley, Lord and Lady Barrington, Lord Edward Pitzalan Howard, Lord Harry Vane, Mr. E. St. John Mildmay (in waiting on the Duke of Cambridge), Lady Georgiana Bathurst and the Hon. Colonel Liddell, at dinner, on Tuesday, at Gloucester House, Park-lane. Her Royal Highness, at a more advanced period of the evening, had a soirée.

The Duke of Devonshire entertained a party of his friends at Devonshire House on Monday evening, to which about 150 received invitations. The evening's amusements concluded with dancing to the music of his Grace's private band, conducted by Mr. Charles Coote. The grand saloon was not opened on this occasion.

Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston entertained a large party at dinner, on Saturday evening, at the family mansion in Carlton-gardens. After the banquet, the noble Viscountess received a brilliant circle of the nobility and corps diplomatique, &c. Amongst the visitors were the Neapolitan party, consisting of twelve gentlemen, all of whom were attired in the Oriental costume of a most richerché description. They arrived from the Opera shortly after eleven o'clock, accompanied by Major Macleod, Consul to the Kejah of Nepaul, and by Major Kavanagh, of the Hon. East India Company's Service. Amongst the earliest diplomatic visitors were his Excellency the Russian Minister and the Chargé d'Affaures of the French Republic

The Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch left town on Tuesday, for their seat in Hampsh re

The Duke of Sutherland has left Stafford House for Dunrobin Castle, North Britain.

The Duke and Duchess of Montrose embarked at the St. Katherine's Wharf on Wednesday morning, on board the General Steam Navigation Company's steam-ship Triton, for Ostend.

The Marquis of Normanby has recovered from the effects of his late accident. His Lordship is expected to arrive in town at the close of the ensuing week, en cowpé from the British Embassy at Paris

The Earl and Countess of Strathmore have left town on a brief Continental tour.

His Excellency Senor Isturitz, Ambassador from the Court of Spain, arrived on Wednesday at Mivart's Hotel, attended by a numerous suite.

IRELAND.

THE OFFICE OF THE LORD MAYOR OF DUBLIN.—A special meeting of the corporation of Dublin was held on Saturday the Lord Mayor in the chair—for the purpose of considering and doing all things necessary under the mandamus of the Court of Queen's Bench, whereby the town was directed to proceed on the 7th inst. to the election of a Lord Mayor. The Lord Mayor, as chairman, having addressed the meeting in a long speech, taking a review of the whole case, the opinion of counsel was stated to be read, to the effect that the present writ of mandamus being a primary, and not a peremptory writ, the council were not bound to proceed to an election under it; but might show cause against so doing; and thereby put the matter in the way for deciding it by the arrival of ulterior resort. It was then proposed that the law agent to the corporation should be instructed to take the proper course for shewing cause against the mandamus, which was carried by a majority in the form of the following resolution:

That, as the office of Lord Mayor is at present filled by John Reynolds, Esq., M.P., the council is of opinion that it cannot proceed to elect a Lord Mayor, and we therefore direct our law agent to instruct counsel to draw up a return, to be made according to the facts, and that the city seal be affixed to said return by the town-clerk, and that he sign the same in the usual form

REPRESENTATION OF CORK.—Mr. Fagan has announced his intention of retiring from the representation of Cork city, as soon as the Irish Franchise Bill shall become the law of the land.

CHURCH EXTENSION IN ST. PANCRAS.—On Tuesday, the annual meeting of the friends and subscribers to the St. Pancras Church Extension Fund was held at the National School-Rooms, Southampton-street, Euston-square. Lord Ashley presided, and was supported by a large and influential number of clergymen. The Rev Thomas Dale, Vicar of St. Pancras, detailed the operations of the committee. The parish, which was twenty miles in circumference, and contained a population of 160,000 souls, was now divided into seven districts, under the pastoral superintendence of thirty-two clergymen, whilst four years ago there were only twenty. It had also at present seven or eight Scripture readers; f ur years back there were none at all. During the year, £700 had been allotted towards the new church of the Holy Trinity, at Haverstock Hi , and the committee hoped soon to be enabled to make an additional grant of £500, and its consecration was expected to take place within the year. The rev. speaker earnestly urged the necessity of a multiplication of clergymen, as well as its concomitant increased church accommodation. The summary of grants shows that, on the whole, the sum of £53.3 has been accorded towards various churches, sites, &c., and £590 as annual stipends for ministers; besides which, there had been £1180 when funds accrue. Several resolutions in support of the laudable objects in view having been adopted, the meeting broke up.

ST. PAUL'S AND THE CITY COMMISION OF SEWERS.—In answer to an applic tion from this court, the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's Cathedral stated in their communication, which was read to the court on Tuesday, that the first steps to any real improvement in this quarter rest entirely with the authorities of the City of London. Unless the outlet by Ludgate-hill is enlarged, it will be of no use whatever—probably only increase the inconvenience—to widen the approaches. So soon, therefore, as any practicable plan embracing such improvement shall have been agreed upon, and the obstacles removed, which the Dean and Chapter will be ready to confer with the authorities of the City of London, and will be prepared to entertain such scheme (so far as they are able, as regardians of the metropolis at large) in the most liberal spirit and manner.

ENTOMOLOGICAL SOCIETY.—At the usual monthly meeting of this society, which was held on Monday, Mr. Bedell exhibited specimens of Cerambyx Lamarckii, Leptura rubra, and Saperda carcharias, all bred from the wood of willows. A shoot of Ribes sanguineum, completely destroyed by Cecidomyia serpulorum, was shown by Mr. Stephens. Mr. Westwood exhibited a pair of Lyda fascicata, one of our rarest Hymenoptera, which fed on the shoot of an espalier pear-tree: he also showed the cases of a species of Coleophora feeding on the pear, which was exceedingly abundant at Hammersmith.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.—The next meeting of this Club will be held on Monday, the 17th inst., at Richardson's Hotel; and members intending to enter their yachts for the match for the Challenge Cup on the 19th, must do so before ten o'clock on that morning.

THE "ASIA" STEAMER.—We are requested to state that the twenty-five papier-mâché panels in the Asia (see page 370) were manufactured by Messrs. Jennens and Bettridge, who are now preparing as many panels for the Africa.

LOSS OF AN EMIGRANT SHIP.—The recent mail from New York brought tidings of the wreck of the Seraphine, from Newry to that port, with 200 passengers, migrants to the interior of that country. The Seraphine was fitted out under private speculation. For nine days prior to the 31st of April last she encountered very stormy weather, and suddenly on that day, when in lat. 45 32, long. 48, she was struck by a tremendous sea, which threw her completely on her beam-ends. The crew, by considerable effort, succeeded in righting the ship by cutting away the masts; but it was, however, discovered that she had sprung a leak; and though all the pumps were instantly put into operation, it was found, after many hours' working, that the water in the hold increased. The following day there was a heavy gale, and a signal of distress soon attracted their attention. They proved to be the El Dorado, from London, the Woodman, of Liverpool, and the brig Garland, also of that port. The weather had luckily moderated sufficiently to enable their ordering out their boats, and crews, three in short time every one of the emig rants, together with the crew, were taken off the sinking wreck without a single accident

DAVIS, "the Leviathan" Betting-man, on Thursday, between the hours of eight and twelve, paid the enormous sum of £45,000.

BRITANNIA BRIDGE.—All the preparations are completed for floatin ; the next tube on Monday. Sailors from Liverpool are engaged, and arrang ments have been made for the directors of the Chester and Holyhead Railway, the engineers, and several thousand spectators. A great number of persons are expected to avail themselves of the occasion to visit the headlands of Penmaen Mawr, Conway Castle, and Snowdon, taking the season-ticke ts of the railway, to all the great works on which the public are to be freely admitted

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.—The circular has, we forth to summon the British Association to meet at Edinburgh, on Wednesday, the 31st of July, under the presidency of its founder, Sir David Brewster.

MUSIC.

CONCERTS.

The musical entertainments this week have been unusually numerous. On Monday morning Mdlle. Coulon, a clever dilettante, gave her annual concert at the Hanover-square Rooms, assisted by Miss Birch, Miss Eliza Birch, Mdlle. Nau, Mdlle. Grauman, Herr Sigelli, M. de Reemer, Signori Berdini and Marcosé; the instrumentalists were, in addition to the bénéficiaire, Mr. R. Costerton (harp), M. Sainton (violin), M. Rousselot (violoncello), Signor Briccialdi (flute), M. Barret (oboe), Mr. Lazarus (clarionet), Mr. Baumann (bassoon), Mr. Jarrett (horn); Benedict and Lindsay Sloper conducted.

Mr. Laurent, jun., gave a concert on Monday morning, at the Ridingschool, Knightsbridge Barracks, under Royal and fashionable patronage.

At the seventh Philharmonic Concert on Monday, the symphonies were Mendelssohn's No. 3, in A minor, and Beethoven's C minor; and the overtures, Weber's "Preciosa" and Onslow's "Guise." It is scarcely necessary to record how magnificent was the execution of these works under Costa's bâton—the Mendelssohn work was never before heard to such perfection, and the scherzo was encored. M. Alard, the celebrated violinist of Paris, and Signor Piatti, violoncellist, made his début in his own concerto in E, Op. 15, playing the opening movement in the first part, and the adagio and finale in the second part. Like the case of Vieuxtemps, M. Alard impressed himself by executing his own composition, which is so destitute of interest that the most perfect mechanism of the player failed to rescue it from imparting the most unequivocal ennui to the auditory. Save the delicious instrumental "Ave Maria" of Cherubini, with Mr. Williams' clarionet obligato, artistically sung by Mr. Sims Reeves, the vocal selection was a complete failure, owing to the ludicrous exhibition made by a French declamatory chanteuse—another instance of the facilities afforded to any foreign impostor, with letters of recommendation, finding a hearing at one of our first musical institutions. At the eighth, and final, concert, on the 17th inst., Spohr is engaged, we are glad to state; and Benedict will perform an MS. pianoforte concerto.

There were two concerts more on Monday night—that of Miss Chandler, at the Music Hall, at which Madame Vierdavanne, Misses S. and C. Cole, Pitt, Leslie, Kennedy, Messrs. Hodda, Reed, Swift, Sedgwick, Cumus, and Anschuez appeared; and at the Highbury Assembly Rooms, where Miss Poole, Messrs. Harrison, Richardson, F. Chatterton, H. and F. Smith, Lake, &c., were the leading artists.

The sixth meeting of the Musical Union, on Tuesday, introduced Alard in his proper element, as an exponent of classic music. He took the first violin part in Mozart's quartet in D, No. 10, with Deloffre, Hill, and Piatti; in Mendelssohn's trio in D minor, No. 2, Op. 66, with Charles Hallé (piano), and Piatti (violoncello); and in Beethoven's quintet in C, Op. 29, with Messrs. Deloffre, Hill, and Mellon (violas), and Piatti.

Mr. W. Kuhe's first morning concert on Tuesday at the Hanover Rooms, aided by Molique (the violinist and composer), Piatti, Lavenu, B. Richards, Guilo Regondi, Ap Thomas (harpist), Miss C. Hayes, Mdlle. Schloss, Mdlle. Grauman, Mdlle. Mallet, Mdlle. Rappilli, Signori Bassano, Herr Mayerhofer, Herr Stigelli, Signor Ciabatta, Mr. Sims Reeves, &c.

The annual concert of the admirable institution, the Royal Society of Female Musicians, took place at the Hanover Rooms, on Wednesday; at which Miss C. Hayes, Madame M. Lablache, Miss M. Williams, Miss Louisa Pyne, Mrs. Noble, Miss Horton, Miss Birch, Mdlle. F. Rummel, Madame Nottes; Herr Hallé, Signor Piatti, Messrs. Benedict, H. S. Bennett, H. Blagrove, Reeves, Barnby, W. H. Seguin, Machin, Drayton, and the Hungarian Vocalists assisted.

Signor Briccialdi's third flute matinée was given at his house, in Frith-street, on Wednesday, assisted by Signor Piatti, Herr Muhlenfeldt, Mdme. Angiolo, Mdlle. Correlati, Miss Bassano, Herr Mengis, Signor Ciabatta, Messrs. Harrison and Burdini.

On Friday, Giulio Regondi, the most accomplished and delightful of concertinists, had a matinée musicale at Willis's Rooms, aided by Mesdames C. Hayes, Newton, Andrews, Signor Marras, Mr. Frodsham, and Signori Ferrari, Piatti, &c.

Mr. W. Sterndale Bennett, the composer, on Thursday, gave a pianoforte matinée at the Hanover Rooms, assisted by Stephen Heller, the composer and pianist; Signor Piatti, M. Sainton, Mr. Williams, Mr. Gratian Cooke, Mr. Jarrett, and Mr. Bannann.

Mr. R. Blagrove's second Concertina Concert was on Thursday, assisted by Messrs. C. and J. Case, Chipp, Norton, Regondi, T. Williams, Misses E. Lyon and M. Williams.

Herr Gerard Bres, a flautist and composer, assisted by Mesdames L. Rongiovanni, F. Stegeman, Westwalewicz, Zimmerman, Misses C. and S. Cole, Miss Chandler, Messrs. Hodges, Lapelsom, Herr Molnar, Herr W. Muller, Sail, Billet, Piatti, Doloffre, the Ciebras, Lazarus, Baumann, Harper, Jarrett, Auschuez, gave a concert at the Queen Anne-street Rooms, on Friday night

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Seguin, the vocalists, gave their annual concert on Friday morning, at the Hanover Rooms, assisted by Miss Dolby, a new pianoforte performer, comprising the names of Thuiberg, Benedict, J. B. Chatterton, Brinley Richards, Kiesling, Sims Reeves, Signor Marchesi, Messrs. Benson, W. H. Seguin, Mdlle. Schloss, Miss Williams, Mrs. Seguin, Mr. Williams, Mrs. W. H. Seguin, Mdlle. F. Lablache, &c. Sir H. R. Bishop, conductor.

Madame Oury, the pianiste, gave a matinée musicale on Saturday, at her residence, in Great Marlborough-street, assisted by M. Godefroid (harp), Mr. Oury (violin), Signor Piatti (violoncello), Signor Briccialdi, Signor Brignoli, Herr Stigelli, M. Lefort, Signor Ciabatta, &c. Madame Oury is one of the most accomplished pianistes of the age, and is equally distinguished as a classic performer and a player of music of the modern romantic school.

An extra performance was given by the Sacred Harmonic Society, at Exeter Hall, on Friday, of Mendelssohn's "Paul," conducted by Costa, with Miss C. Hayes, Miss M. Williams, Messrs. Reeves, A. Novello, and Phillips, as vocalists, for the benefit of the King's College Endowment Fund.

"ŒDIPUS COLONEUS."—The production of the whole of the music composed by Mendelssohn to the above Sophoclean tragedy is creating much interest. We subjoin a list of the pieces:—

Œdipus, aged, blind, in penury, and exiled from his Theban realms, guided by his daughter Antigone, reaches a grove sacred to the Eumenides, near Athens; where, as predicted by an oracle, he is destined to die. Creon, the brother-in-law and usurper, forces him from thence to Thebes, but the attempt is frustrated by Theseus and his Athenians Polynices (the eldest son) also vainly seeks to obtain his father's presence; but his efforts to regain the Theban sceptre from his brother Eteocles may prove success ! The sad man's death, preceded by a terrific tempest, then takes place, witnessed only by Th seus. The lamentations of Antigone and Ismene (his youngest daughter) conclude the tragedy.

The chorus consists of aged Colonæans; and Mr. Costa, in order to give due effect, has increased the number of the Royal Italian Opera choristers. Mr. Bartholomew has prepared the English version of the lyrics, with an eludatory monologue, which will be recited with portions of the tragedy by Mr. Bartley, on Saturday next at Buckingham Palace, the only time the work has been heard in this country. Her Majesty has given her gracious permission to Mrs. Anderson, for the performance next Monday morning, at her annual concert. It will occupy the whole of the first part of the programme. A full rehearsal took place on Friday, to which many distinguished amateurs were invited.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—The eighth and last concert of the Amateur Musical Society will take place next Monday.——Mrs. Anderson's morning concert, under the immediate patronage of her Majesty, will be given on Monday, at the Royal Italian Opera. Mrs. Anderson is pianiste to the Queen, and musical instructress to the Princess Royal, a and is much esteemed in private life. In addition to Mendelssohn's new cantata, the following artists will appear:—Mdme. Grisi, who will produce Beethoven's Pianoforte Choral Fantasia; and, with Sainton, will play Dobler's Tarantella for Piano and Violin. In the miscellaneous selection of the second part, in which all the singers of the troupe will appear, the Sepnor of the Duel, from the "Huguenots," is an interesting feature, to be sung by Mario, Mei, Lavia, Tagliafico, Polonini, Rommi, and Formes. The "Leonore" and "Jubilee" overtures of Beethoven and Weber, a madrigal by Purcell, a chorus from Beethoven's Mount of Olives, and five female voices, &c., are included in this attract ve scheme.——The fifth meeting of the Beethoven Quartet Society will be on Wednesday.——On Friday, will be the concert of Miss Birch.——Mr. Joseph Hargh.——On Saturday (the 15th) Mr. Godefroid will give his second matinée musicale.——"The songs of Scotland" find a delightful exponent in Mrs. William Sinclair, so long resident in Edinburgh, and who has now taken up her permanent residence in London, to teach the expression due to the national melodies. Mrs. Sinclair, under the patronage of the Duchess of Argyll, the Countesses of Morton and Rosebery, the Viscountess Dungarvon, &c., has been lately heard to receive general gratification by the amateurs of Scottish song.——Mdme. Viardot, after playing the part of Fidès, in Meyerbeer's "Prophète," at Berlin, sixteen times, took her farewell in Valentine, in the "Huguenots," and returned to France to her château, near Paris, where she will recruit her strength prior to her campaign at the Royal Italian Opera, in which she will appear a few days, with Mario, in the "Prophète."——Mdme. Wagner has succeeded Mdme. Viardot at Berlin as Fidès.——Lastbut not the least Mendelssohn's "Elijah," at Walmer, under the auspices of Mr. and Mrs. Darby, has been a new entertainment in preparation, called "Notes Vocal and Instrumental and otherwise."——Under the title of "The Church Musicians and Library of Church Music," a new and useful periodical, published by Messrs. Novello, Ewer, and Co., and D'Almaine and Co., has appeared. Dr. Gauntlett is the editor, and the work could not be in more efficient hands; he is thoroughly conversant with all matters connected with the church service. In the editor's preface he says:—"Our principle is, that everybody should learn to sing, in order that he may sing the praises of God: 'This people I have formed for myself; they shall show forth my praise.' But to do this, there must be system and method, order and class, theory and practice." To carry out this object, there is the beginning of a short treatise on the elements of music, and the notation of the music will be new, so that a congregation may plainly comprehend the chants, the ritual music, the verses and anthems; in the first number, the Musical Prayer-Book is for the first time rhythmically accentuated.

ROYAL CYCLORAMA.—The selection of music illustrating the views of this splendid panorama and performed by [illegible]n, on the new apolomicon, forms a great feature of attraction.

TRADE RETURNS.—The returns of the Board of Trade for the month ending the 8th of May continue to indicate in a most remarkable degree the general prosperity of the country. The increase in the declared value of exportations, as compared with the corresponding month of last year, is £1,338,982, of which £581,766 is irrespective of cotton manufactures and cotton yarn, and the increase price of the staple in those markets.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"Il Barbiére" was repeated, by desire, for the last time, on Saturday night, when its success was even greater than usual. In the music lesson, when Rode's variations were encored, instead of repeating it, Mdme. Sontag gave the "Ah! vous dirai-je!" from Adam's "Tresador," with extraordinary brilliancy. The concluding variation, the accompaniment to which is formed by another variation on the motif of the air for the flute, was loudly re-demanded, but Mdme. Sontag very justly resisted this new requirement Almaviva, Figaro, Bartolo, Rosina, and all our Seville friends, were called at the end of the opera before the curtain, to receive the adieux of the audience until next season.

On Tuesday the "Lucia" had been announced, but at the eleventh hour a notice was handed in that Mdlle. C. Hayes would, through indisposition, be unable to sing, and Madame Frezzolini, at a moment's warning, most obligingly undertook a part in which she had never appeared before an English public, without any previous preparation, and without one instant's rehearsal. But no preparation, however long and careful, could have made Madame Frezzolini sing the part better, and a more beautiful representative of Scott's heroine can scarcely be imagined. She sang her part of the duo, "Sulla tomba," and the air, "Perchè non ho," with enchanting sweetness; and in the mad-scene, as it is called, and in the finale of the second act, her acting was touching in the extreme, and was rewarded with unanimous plaudits from all parts of the house, astonished at so novel a portraiture as that unexpectedly presented to them, and in no perfect accordance with the ideal of the musical composer. That the combination of every species of artistic talent engaged in its production, be considered, "La Tempesta" is a work of unprecedented magnitude, and naturally of the most general interest on the part of all persons who are lovers of art and literature.

It is almost superfluous to observe, that Shakspeare himself did not intend the poem of "The Tempest" as a drama, in which the plot is continuously elaborated and worked out, from its beginning to its conclusion. It was designed as a poem, in which all means of scenic illusion and effect could be combined. In the original, the play is interrupted by a masque, which, unlike the representation of the players in "Hamlet," forms no essential part of the plot; supernatural agency and music are employed—even Caliban sings; whilst the Ariel, the delicate creation of a musical part, heads a band of sprites and elves, "who trip on their toes to music and to measure." M Scribe has therefore made legitimate use of Shakspeare's "Tempest," in its transmutation into a libretto. It was absolutely necessary for lyrical purposes—since in Italian or French the plot is hurled by music and the language—that a greater intensity of human interest should be added. M. Scribe has found means of drawing these new points of interest from Shakspeare's own text. He says, in a letter to the issues of Her Majesty's Theatre, "I have done its utmost to respect the inspirations of your immortal author. All the musical situations I have created are but suggestions taken from Shakspeare's ideas; and as all the honour must accrue to him, I must also add to state that there are but few subjects so well adapted for musical interpretation."

The following is "the argument" of the new opera:—

Prospero, Duke of Milan, while absorbed in his favourite studies, treacherously dethroned by his brother Antonio, with the connivance of Alfonso, King Naples, with his infant daughter, hurried aboard a frail boat many miles at sea, and left to perish, has been safely carried by propitious winds to an island There he has found not two inhabitants—as evil-minded which, Sycorax and her son, Caliban. Prospero, versed in magic lore of enchantment, delivers from the bondage of Sycorax a beautiful spirit, Ariel, imprisons the with [illegible] in a rock, and reduces to slavery her monster son Caliban, whose cursing but fear can compel. At the moment the opera begins, many years have elapsed, and the hour of triumph for Prospero, and of retribution for his enemies, is arrived. A ship, upon which Alfonso King of Naples, and his son Ferdinand, Prospero's usurping brother Antonio, and their suite, have embarked, is driven towards the island. Ariel, and the spirits whom she leads, sent by Prospero, wreck the vessel, and all aboard are cast ashore, when Prospero discovers Ferdinand, nothing shocked, meets and falls in love with Miranda, and is harboured in her abode; whilst Alfonso and Antonio, with the remainder of the party, escape to report of their past wickedness, are led into the presence of Prospero The scrupulous course of events is, however, interrupted by Caliban, to whom Sycorax appears from her prison in the rock, and tells him where to find the magic book. She surrenders the power of love wishes to the possessor. Caliban, soon in possession of the flowers, is deaf to the entreaties of his mother to deliver her. His first wish is that Miranda may violate his vigilance and power be hers. Aroused by this, his next is, that sleep may fall for a quarter of an hour on Miranda, with whom he is left alone. When this is done, he carries her off, meets the crew of the ship, and becomes intoxicated with the liquor they give him—to him a new luxury of most delicious taste. In the meantime, Ariel has come from the wreck of a desperate enemy, and the cause of her recent peril, to kill Ferdinand. Miranda, in a struggle of final affection, attempts to stab Prospero, but he wakes, and his wakers, and his endearments disarm her. Prospero and Ariel, Alfonso Antonio, and their fo lowers now arrive at the spot, and begin [illegible]. Ariel and her related spirits are set free from control; Caliban is left sole possessor of the island; whilst Prospero, Alfonso, and their children, Antonio, and their suite, embark for Italy

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

The sixth representation of the "Huguenots" attracted a crowded house on Saturday night. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, Prince George, and Princess Mary of Cambridge, occupied her Majesty's box.

On Tuesday night, the second act of "Nabucco-Asato" was given, in which the splendid acting of Ronconi secured for him a special ovation at its termination. After "Asato," Rossini's "Barbiere" was given for the first time this season, with Mdme. Castellan's first appearance as Rosina, which she sang and acted with brilliancy and buoyancy. To state that Mario was the Count, and Signora Frezzolini, Tagliafico, and Ronconi will suffice to afford a notion of the infinite spi.it with which this work was rendered—Costa's orchestral colouring coming in for a large share of public approva.

On Thursday night, Mozart's "Don Giovanni" was represented for the second time, Herr Formes making his first appearance as Leporello, a character in which, by his original reading and powerful acting, he has gained great fame in the German text. Grisi, Mdlle. Vera, Madame Castellan, Mario, Polonini, and Tagliafico were included in the cast.

ST. JAMES'S.

The vaudeville of "La Prima Donna" was acted on Monday, the part of La Signora Rosalini being well sustained by Mdlle. Rensud. On Wednesday the performance was for the benefit of M. Regnier. It consisted of "Les Extrêmes se Touchent" and "La Commandeur." In the latter the bénéficiaire performed Bernardet with his usual humour.

ADELPHI.

Mr. Albert Smith has provided for the peculiar audience attached to this popular theatre a kind of bur.esque of the ballet of "Esmeralda," which, under the same title, met with success on Monday. For Carlotta Grisi we have Madame Vincenti, herself solicitous of the elegance of the dansuse, rather than the humour of the scene. Her "pas de bandanny" was perfect. Mr. O'Smith was Claude Frollo; Mr. Paul Bedford, Clopen Trouvilleton; and Mr. Wright, Pierre Grengoire; while Miss Woolgar performed Captain Phœbus, and, as a military exquisite, was very effective. To render the subject more tractable for the purposes of burlesque, an addition was made to the action, introducing Esmeralda as the superintendent of a Wheel of Fortune, distributing prizes among the audience, and finally raising a living female statue (Mr. Wright), awarded to a gentleman in the stalls (Mr Worrell.). The squabble customary on such occasions ensues, and the audience is bewildered and amused. At the conclusion, the principal performers were called before the curtain.

SURREY.

"My Foll and my Partner Joe" was produced on Monday, Harry Halyard being interpreted by that excellent old actor Mr. T. P. Cooke, who is announced to take his farewell performances here, and whose nautical heroes are appreciated among the theatrical memories of the passing generation. Still vigorous, though aged, Mr. Cooke has not lost the power of interesting and exciting the generous sentiments of the public, and carried through the character with remarkable spirit and effect. He was greatly applauded throughout, and, at the end, received a well-deserved ovation.

WESTMINSTER INSTITUTION.—An entertainment, written by Mr. John W. R s, and entitled the "The Market Town," was delivered at this Institution on Monday last by Mr. George Cooke, in a series of descriptive and historic lectures, relieved by songs. It is not without merit, but lacks refinement.

LETTERS AND NEWSPAPERS FOR CUBA, VIA THE UNITED STATES.—The following notice was issued at the General Post-office on Tuesday:—"Information having been received from the Postmaster-General of the United States of the establishment of a regular communication by packets between Charlestown and Havannah, letters and newspapers for Cuba may be forwarded from this country to the United States, and thence to Havanna., by the United States packets. Letters must be addressed. The postage upon letters sent and the United States to Cuba will be is. 4d., when not exceeding half an ounce in weight; 2s. 8d., when above half an ounce and not exceeding an ounce; and so on, according to the rate for charging inland letters; and newspapers will be liable to a charge of 2d each. The postage upon both letters and newspapers must be paid in advance. All correspondence for Cuba not specially addressed to be sent via the United States will continue to be despatched by the West India packet of the 2nd of each month.

Some time since, M. Napoleon Jerome's pay, as legislative representative, was sequestrated, on the application to the civil tribunal of a Paris coachmaker named Vaquerens, who had a claim of fifteen hundred francs against him for a carriage. Pierre Bonaparte offered the coachmaker a fifth part in order to remove the embargo on his colleague's stipend, but in vain. An application was made by the Bonapartes on Saturday last to the President of the Civil Tribunal, who has decreed that when M. Pierre's thousand francs have been deposited, Napoleon Jerome's legislative wages are to be restored to him.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

A Paris tailor, named Fabien, has just sent out to Hayti the mantle which the Emperor Soloque proposes wearing on the day of his coronation. It is of crimson velvet, shot with gold, and is richly ornamented with precious stones. The price of it is £2000.

M. de Lamartine has just obtained leave of absence from the French Chamber for two months. He is about to proceed immediately to Smyrna, to take possession of the tract of land which he has obtained on favourable conditions from the Sublime Porte. He expects being back in the beginning of August.

Mr. Cunningham, a midshipman of her Majesty's ship Arethusa, was killed last week by falling from the mainmast, whilst lying in the port of Lisbon.

At daybreak on Monday morning, the engineering department of the East London Waterworks Company, at Bow, were placed in great jeopardy from the outbreak of fire in the upper part of the building of that department. It originated in the roof, but from some unknown cause. In a short time three engines were in attendance; water was abundantly procured, and in two hours the fire was extinguished, after considerable damage. The firemen prevented any serious injury to the machinery.

The Lords of the Treasury having had under consideration the report of the Commissioners of Customs on a memorial of a foreign gentleman, praying that some wagkages of books shipped at Ostend for the port of London may be delivered duty free, the same being for his professional use as a teacher of languages, the Secretary to the Treasury has received directions from their Lordships to convey their authority to the Commissioners of Customs for the delivery of the books in question duty free, as requested, which order has been duly carried into effect.

The Prussian Moniteur announces that sales of ecclesiastical property having been taken place in the principality of Neufchatel, the Cabinet of Berlin has caused it to be declared by the Prussian Minister at the Swiss Confederation that the sales of this kind which have taken place by the revolutionary authorities, or which might be made for the future, would not obtain the consent of the legitimate Government.

The German Reform of Berlin states that the Russian Government has relaxed the regulations respecting the admittance into Russia of Prussian subjects. Persons travelling through the Prussian states upon business are allowed to do so on producing a certificate of a Russian Consul.

The Belgian Government has resolved on establishing an electric telegraph, joining the French line on the one side, and the Prussian on the other. When this is done, news can be transmitted instantaneously from Warsaw, Hamburgh, and Berlin to Paris.

A letter from Vienna, of the 27th ult., says, "We learn that the Emperor of Austria had a narrow escape from death during his late stay at Trieste. In the evolutions of the fleet, a shotted gun went off by accident. The ball passed close to the Emperor."

Her Majesty, by letters patent under the Great Seal of the High Court of Admiralty, has been pleased to appoint Mr. Evan Jones, the chief clerk in the Admiralty registry, to be marshal of the said court, vice John Deacon, Esq., deceased.

Mr. Garfit, landlord of the Sack Tavern, Waterside, Lincoln, died last week of the glanders. He lingered in great pain for a period of eight weeks, having taken the disease from a horse which was lodged in his stables by some boatmen.

On Sunday evening, between five and six o'clock, a boat, containing five persons, through some unexplained cause, was capsized off Millbank, and the entire party immersed. Fortunately, several boats were near the spot, and three of the party were rescued in a very exhausted state. Unhappily, Mr. Wetherell, residing at No. 125, Princes-road, Lambeth, and his grandson, aged five years, sunk and were drowned, and, though drags were used for some time, the bodies were not recovered.

A vacancy having lately occurred in the office of Sub-Inspector of Factories in the Midland District, Sir George Grey has not filled up the place, and has ordered the duties to be performed by the other Sub-Inspectors of the district. This is in addition to the saving made on the death of Mr. James Stuart, one of the chief inspectors, whose duties were transferred to the Inspector of Prisons for Scotland.

The Hon. W. G. C. Elliot, now an unpaid attaché to the British Ministry at Hanover, is appointed to the same position at Madrid.

The subscriptions for erecting a memorial window to the late Dean of Hereford, in Hereford Cathedral, amounts to about £200.

In no former year were the religious pilgrimages of the south of Germany performed by such crowds of people or with so much external display as at present.

The Prussian General Jochmus, late Minister of War under the German Central Government, has entered the Turkish service, and is to proceed to Constantinople immediately, to undertake the organization of the Turkish cavalry.

The Paris Moniteur publishes a notice from the Minister of Commerce, offering a reward of 10,000 fr. for the discovery of a cure for a contagious disease prevailing amongst horned cattle.

On the afternoon of Tuesday a fire broke out upon the premises of Mr. G. Little, Forest Fan (where a steam-threshing machine had been used), five miles from Newtownards, and five large stacks of corn, three of wheat, and two of beans, were consumed. The property was insured in the Sun Fire-office.

The aviary of the Liverpool Zoological Gardens was burnt to the ground on Monday night, through some fireworks which were placed on that evening dropping on the thatched roof. Several of the birds were scorched to death.

Mr. Hodges, M.P., has relinquished further proceeding with his bill for substituting an acreage for the excise duty on hops, in consequence of an intimation from the Chancellor of the Exchequer that the session was too far advanced to give him any chance of accomplishing his object.

In Sussex great uneasiness is beginning to be felt respecting the payment of the second instalment of the 1848 hop-duty, which is due in November next, and an agitation is about to be set on foot for obtaining its remission

The South-Western Railway Company will run special trains from Waterloo to Weybridge during the forenoon of Tuesday and Thursday, commencing at eight o'clock, A.M.; and from Windsor during the afternoons of the above dates.

On Monday was printed a Parliamentary paper, containing an account of the public income and expenditure from 1822 to 1849. The largest income in the twenty-eight years was in 1824, when it amounted to £59,829,591 The expenditure for the army, navy, and ordnance is given in another account, and returns. In 1849 the expenditure of the effective service was £12,007,878, and for the non-effective £3,818,569, making for the year £15,823,337.

A return just published states the amount of stamp duties collected in the year ending January, 1850, on bonds, mortgages, conveyances, and other written instruments, to have been £1,381,250.

The King of Sardinia has sanctioned the law allowing a credit of 120,000f. for the erection of the machine for the perforation of the great tunnel of the Savoy railroad, between Modane and Modane. A hydraulic machine is to be erected to put the former in motion.

The Lord Chancellor (Lord Cottenham) has been raised to the rank of Earl of Cottenham, of Cottenham, in the county of Cambridge, and Viscount Crowmarsh, of Crowmarsh, in the county of Surrey.

On Wednesday, a brutal fellow, who was returning from Bingar Fair with some cattle, accompanied by a boy, when past Portway, near Wells, commenced beating the poor boy's head against the wall. His cries of "Murder" brought to the spot a man named Ward, who interfered to save the boy, when he was instantly knocked down, but, on regaining his legs, he struck the fellow such a blow that he fell, and, knocking his head against the kerbstone, caused a concussion of the brain.

By a decree of the French Commander-in-Chief of the 5th and 6th military divisions, the publication and sale of the Mystères du Peuple, by Eugene Sue, is forbidden in the departments of the Rhone, Ain, Isère, Loire, and Drôme.

It is announced that Abd-el-Kader is dangerously ill at the Château d'Amboise, where he is detained a prisoner.

On Wednesday a Court of Directors was held at the East India House, when Lieutenant-General Sir William Maynard Gomm, K.C.B., was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Company's Forces on the Bombay Establishment.

At the recommendation of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the King of the Netherlands has determined that a Netherlands Ambassador shall in future reside in Norway and Sweden, as well as in Denmark. In consequence of this resolution, Mr. Martini, who has hitherto represented the Netherlands at Stockholm as well as at Copenhagen, is accredited resident minister at Copenhagen alone, with a salary of 8000 florins, instead of 10,000, as hitherto, Mr. Hagen alone, with a salary of 8000 florins, instead of 10,000, as hitherto, Mr. Gevers, hitherto resident minister at Stuttgard and Munster, is appointed resident at Stockholm, likewise with a salary of 8000 florins.

M. Lucien Bonaparte, Prince de Canino, ex-President of the Constituent Assembly at Rome, arrived in Berlin on the 30th ult.

The superintendence of the Coast Guard service in Ireland having been removed to England, the consequence has been that smuggling is almost practised generally along the Irish coast, even in the neighbourhood of Dublin. For the first time within twenty years, a cargo of smuggled tobacco was landed last week at Clontarf, a bathing-place within one mile and a half of the city.

The paupers in the workhouse of Limerick are in a perfect state of insurrection, and all the military and police of the city are on duty to suppress their riotous conduct, at the head of which are the females of the establishment. 74 of them have been already committed to prison, and as the last accounts the revolt was still in progress. The Mayor and magistrates are constantly on the alert, and the troops under arms. The paupers have destroyed all the locks, bolts, and bars of the workhouse, and go in and out just as they please.

The oldest oak-tree in Belgium, which was planted in the reign of Charles V, about 1540 or 1550, was cut down last week, at Rooberst. It measures 36 ft 6t in length and 18 feet in circumference. Planks 2 feet wide may be cut from some of its branches. This tree was purchased for 500f. by M. Vander Bench, a cabinet-maker at Oudenaarde. It is said that he intends to send a plank, cut from this tree, from 4 to 5 feet wide, to the European Exhibition in London, in 1851.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

G W B.—The Solution to Mr. Pruss's laimitable Chess Enigma. No 379, is—1. Q to her K5 5th (ch); 2 B to Q 7th (ch); 3 R to Q B 5d, and mate next move

GOLA.—1 When the stipulation of a Problem is that White shall mate in three moves, it means at White's third move. 2. Your end game is deficient in point and artifice

P. Bolden.—Even your amended diagram is defective. Where is the King's Bishop?

T A B, Barry.—1. If you have a Queen on the board and advance a Pawn to his 8th square, you can claim another Queen. 2. You cannot Castle when in check

HARLEQUIN.—The "Chess-Player's Text-book" can be procured of Longman, 39, Piccadilly, and only there

G M J.—You must have made a mistake in the position

B F.—In the positions you send, the Mate is not forced, and they are, therefore, worthless. White must always checkmate against the best possible defence in the given number of moves

VERAX.—The Chess-men sent us by VERAX are very badly executed imitations of the real article. As we have before said, the only security the public have against being defrauded is men. As we have before said, the only security the public have against being defrauded is man. As we have before said, the only security the public have against being defrauded is man. As we have before said, the only security the public have against being defrauded is man at Esher; and on her tomb the passer-by may read this inscription, "Here lies Jane Porter, a Christian widow." As a novelist Miss Jane Porter obtained the highest celebrity. Her three most renowned productions were her "Thaddeus of Warsaw," written when she was about twenty years of age, her "Scottish Chiefs," and her "Pastor's Fireside." "Thaddeus of Warsaw" had immense popularity: it was translated into most of the Continental languages, and Poland was loud in its praise. Kosciusko sent the author a ring, containing his portrait. General Gardiner, the British Minister at Warsaw, could not believe that any other than an eye-witness had written the story, so accurate were the descriptions, although Miss Porter had not then been in Poland. The "Scottish Chiefs" was equally successful. With regard to this romance, it is known that Sir Walter Scott admitted to George IV., one day, in the library at Carlton Palace, that the "Scottish Chiefs" was the parent in his mind of the Waverley Novels. In a letter written to her friend Mr. Litchfield, about three months ago, Miss Porter, speaking of these novels, said:—"I own I feel myself a kind of sybil in these things; it being full fifty years ago since my 'Scottish Chiefs' and 'Thaddeus of Warsaw' came into the then untrodden field. And what a splendid race of the like chroniclers of generous deeds have followed, brightening the track as they have advanced! The author of 'Waverley,' and all his soul-stirring 'Tales of my Landlord,' &c. Then comes Mr. James, with his historical romances on British and French subjects, so admirably uniting the exquisite fiction with the fact, that the whole seems equally verity. But my feeble hand" (Miss Porter was ailing when she wrote the letter) "will not obey my wish to add more to this host of worthies. I can only find power to say with my trembling pen that I cannot but esteem them as a respected link with my past days of lively interest in all that might promote the virtue and true honour of my countrymen from youth to age." These eloquent words become the more touching, when we consider that within three months after they were written, this admirable lady quitted this life in the honoured maturity of her fame.

EXHIBITION OF AMERICAN PLANTS AT THE ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY'S GARDENS, REGENT'S-PARK.—(SEE PRECEDING PAGE.)

THE LATE MISS JANE PORTER.

Miss Porter wrote, in conjunction with her sister, "Tales round a Winter's Hearth." She was also an indefatigable contributor to the periodicals of the day. Her biographical sketch of Colonel Denham, the African traveller, in the Naval and Military Journal, was much admired as one of the most affecting tributes ever paid to departed merit. Miss Porter was a Chanoiness of the Polish order of St. Joachim, which honour was conferred upon her after the publication of "Thaddeus of Warsaw." She is, in her portraits, generally represented in the habit of this order. Miss Porter died on the 24th ult., at the residence of her brother, Dr. Porter, in Portland-square, Bristol. That brother, so tenderly beloved by her, and so justly respected by all who know him, is now the last survivor of this brilliant company of brothers and sisters; and he, too, we are sorry to say, is in an enfeebled state from paralysis, aggravated by the recent shock of his gifted relative's demise. Except himself and his married niece in Russia, there remains no representative of a family which England has good cause to hold in honoured and grateful remembrance.

THE GORHAM CASE.

SINCE our publication on the 25th ult. we have been favoured with some information concerning the early life of Mr. Gorham, which an unavoidable accident prevented us using last week. Similar information has been obtained by a monthly contemporary, Bentley's Miscellany; and the few additional particulars we shall now state agree with what is mentioned in that work. They fill up some gaps in the brief memoir of Mr. Gorham, which we published a fortnight ago.

Mr. Gorham is descended from an Anglo-Breton family, which can be traced to the beginning of the 12th century. He was born at St. Neots, Huntingdonshire, and entered Queen's College, Cambridge, of which Dr. Milner, Dean of Carlisle, was then President, in 1805. He seems to have been a diligent student, and won from his college mathematical, classical, and theological prizes. He obtained also two University prizes. In 1808, while yet an under-graduate, the Norrisian gold medal was awarded him for an Essay on Public Worship. He took his degree of B.A. on January, 1809, and was the third wrangler, Baron Alderson being the senior wrangler. Immediately afterwards, he divided with Mr. Standley, the second wrangler, subsequently Vicar of Southoe, the second of Dr. Smith's two mathematical prizes.

It will shew Mr. Gorham's early connexions, and tend to convince the reader of his early predilections, if we mention that Dean Milner and the late Mr. Wilberforce recommended him to be the companion of a young nobleman of his own standing at the University; and with him he removed to Edinburgh, where he resided a year and a half. In 1810, while still in the north, he was elected a Fellow of Queen's, and in 1811 gained the annual Divinity Prize, given to a Bachelor of Arts of that college. He was ordained a Deacon in 1811, by Dr. Dampier, Bishop of Ely, who instituted a private examination, and threatened to withhold ordination from him, on account of a difference of opinion on baptismal regeneration—the very subject on which, thirty-seven years afterwards, the Bishop of Exeter refused to institute him into Brampford Speke. Mr. Gorham was firm in his convictions, and the Bishop gave way, and ordained him. In 1812 the same prelate ordained Mr. Gorham a Priest.

In allusion to his difference of opinion with Dr. Dampier, Mr. Gorham says, in his work which we quoted this day fortnight:—"On my ordination, in 1811, an attempt was made by the then Bishop of Ely (Dr. Dampier), to stretch Episcopal authority beyond Canonical bounds, by placing his private expositions of the declarations of the Church, with regard to the effects of Baptism, on a level with the Thirty-nine Articles; and he demanded from me an acceptance of his opinions as essential to admission to Holy Orders. Though I was then a very young man—the only candidate, among many, subjected, without notice, to that trying ordeal—and though non-ordination would have involved the loss of the college preferment I then held, as well as have debarred me from the ministry into which I was earnestly desirous of entering, I had the courage to reject his authoritative proposition of a private test of orthodoxy. Shame would it be, if in more mature, or even in declining years, I had less firmness in protesting against a similar innovation on the principles of the Church of England. A weak or an ill-informed conscience may be terrified into compliance by a peremptory allegation of a broken vow, and a call with the Highest Appeal for implicit submission. It requires nerve, my Lord, as well as integrity, to meet such an onset as this."

Mr. Gorham resided in Queen's for three years, taking pupils, and in 1814 left the college for the curacy of Beckenham, Kent. In 1818 he became curate of Clapham, under Dr. Dealtry, and remained there till 1827. In that year he married Jane, the second daughter of the Rev. John Martyn, and grand-daughter of the Rev. Thomas Martyn, late Regius Professor of Botany in the University of Cambridge, of whom and of whose father, also an eminent botanist, Mr Gorham published, in 1830, very interesting memoirs. He also published, in 1820, a "History of St. Neots," 2 vols. 8vo.

Mr. Gorham served several curacies in different dioceses till 1846, when he was presented by Lord Lyndhurst to the vicarage of St. Just, Penwith. The remainder of his history has been of late continually before the public; and all the information we have since received justifies the remark we made a fortnight ago. From 1827 to 1847, or for nearly twenty years, he has lived in the quiet performance of his parochial duties, and supplied no important materials for a biography. We subjoin a Sketch of the Church and National School at St. Just, the latter of which Mr. Gorham has tried in vain to make useful.

The Church is supposed to have been rebuilt about the time of Henry VII. The Rectory was appropriated to Glasney College, near Falmouth, in 1352. A monumental stone, probably of the 11th century, was found on repairing the chancel in 1827, with an inscription "SELYS IACET HIC." We gather these particulars from a history of the parish, published by the late Vicar, the Rev. J. Buller.

The National School-room was built by parochial subscriptions, and a National Society grant, under the exertions of the Rev. John Buller. The School, however, was not supported, and for eighteen years was without a master. The building having become very greatly dilapidated, the present Vicar, the Rev. G. C. Gorham, exerted himself strenuously to procure its repair and enlargement; in fact, under great discouragement, it was all but rebuilt, and a very commodious master's house was erected, at the expense of about £400, in 1847, by grants from the Privy Council and from the National Society, and by private subscriptions obtained by the Vicar, without one shilling expense to any one parishioner. This is recorded on a tablet in the School-room. An excellent master was obtained; but we regret to hear, that neither by public subscription nor by parochial attendance, has sufficient encouragement been given towards the support of the Vicar's plans for the benefit of his populous parish, to render it expedient for him to continue the School at present. The burden was greater than the incumbent could be expected to sustain, personally. His report to the Privy Council states that it would cost him, individually, £60 or £70 a year, for the education of about thirty children, out of a population of 8000. Let us hope that his benevolent plan for the education of the poor of St. Just will soon be duly appreciated, and rendered available.

The Vicarage House was built of granite, about fifty years ago, by the then Vicar, the Rev. Mr. Nankivell, by a loan from Queen Anne's Bounty. It was added to by the late Vicar, the Rev. John Buller, in 1827; and at the same time the beautiful garden was made, which is situated like an oasis in a desert; this being the only spot in that extensive parish which has any plantations, the rest of the parish being peculiarly unsightly, and destitute of trees. The house has been greatly improved by the present vicar.

CHURCH, SCHOOLS, AND VICARAGE OF ST. JUST, PENWITH.

MADAME FREZZOLINI.

ERMINIA FREZZOLINI is the daughter of one of those artists of Italy who have become even more rare than tenors; Italy, so long and so deeply ravaged by invasions of armies, of revolutions, and of moral epidemics, no longer produces comic artists. Signor Frezzolini, her father, having lost his fortune and position at the fall of Napoleon, having great natural vis comica and a powerful voice, took to the stage, and became a celebrated buffo. Having succeeded in his new career, he married, and the first daughter born to him (at Rome, in 1823) was the present great prima donna. For some years her frame was so delicate, that he destined her, as the only resource, to the cloister. She was first placed at a nunnery at Orvieto; from thence she was removed to another convent at Florence, in order to be nearer her father. From her earliest years she showed great musical taste and an excellent ear for music, and, at the convent, was wont to delight the good sisters by the dulcet subdued notes of her voice. At fifteen, the delicate girl, who had overgrown herself, began to acquire energy, and her mind was fired by the reading of the poets; and her delineations of the characters of Alfieri betrayed her dramatic genius, whilst her notes began to soar boldly up to the highest regions of the voice. From that moment she was removed from the convent; and she had hardly completed her sixteenth year before she appeared as a prima donna at the Theatre of the Cocomero, at Florence, in Beatrice di Tenda, which has ever since remained one of her most triumphant characters.

MADAME FREZZOLINI.

From her first appearance, such was the sensation she produced, that engagements were offered by every operatic theatre in Italy. First she visited her native city, Rome. Thence she went back to Florence; then to the Fenice, at Venice; to the Scala, at Milan, to Naples, Turin, &c. In vain did she receive offers from France - she would never visit it; nor would she leave her native country, until, having married Pozzi, the tenor, he persuaded her to come to England, in April, 1849. She arrived in England much shaken by the journey, and then fell ill, and never recovered, during the season, wholly her vocal powers; although, even then, the ruling prima donna of Her Majesty's Theatre found in her a dangerous rival. To recover her health, she returned, at the conclusion of the London season, to Italy, and once more, for several years, she could not be induced to revisit the ingenial and changeful climates of Paris and London. However, in 1847, she was tempted by an enormous salary to St. Petersburgh, whose cold, unchanging, but bracing climate she found of the greatest benefit. At St. Petersburgh her success was greater than that of any singer who had previously visited that capital. She has been re-engaged there for three successive seasons; and the Emperor and Empress, who have loaded her with kindness and magnificent presents, have expressed to her their wish that she should return against next season. Many tempting offers have been made for the last four years to Madame Frezzolini to revisit London, by both the London operatic establishments. This year she was at last induced, by a liberal offer, to afford the éclat of her talents to Her Majesty's Theatre. Madame Frezzolini has a voice of the highest soprano quality. She possesses great musical science as well as great enthusiasm, and, for the expression of passion, she is without a superior on the stage. Her magnificent Roman countenance and distinctive, her splendid stage figure, and the elegance and dignity of her dramatic bearing, complete her qualifications for the highest position on the stage.

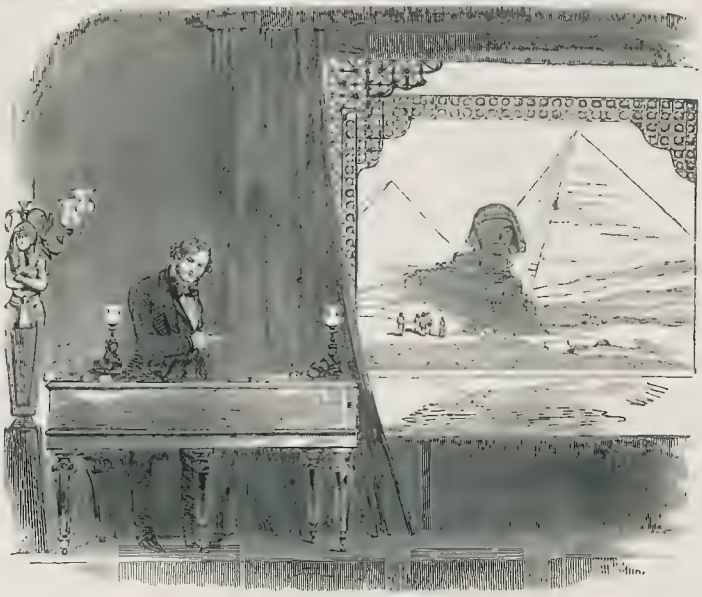
ARMS OF THE FREE STATE OF CUBA.

THERE is nothing like anticipation in this go-ahead world. The leaders of the movement for the conquest of Cuba have resolved that no time shall be lost in blazoning to the world the successful result of their adventure. At the head of each of General Lopez's addresses appears the accompanying device, stated to have been selected by the Cubans as the arms of their native country, when it shall have become "free and independent" among the nations of the earth.

ARMS OF THE FREE STATE OF CUBA.

Some of the principal features of this device are borrowed from the arms of the United States. The form of the shield, the liberty cap which surmounts it, and the American flag in the left foreground, are each and all evidences of the respect which Cubans have for the nation whose form of government they desire to imitate; while the thirteen stars over the palm tree bear witness to a deep-felt wish ultimately to join their lone star to the States' bright galaxy.

The three dark-coloured bands in the lower left-hand quarter of the shield correspond with the three blue stripes upon the flag, and represent the three divisions of the island of Cuba. The palm tree is the emblem adopted for the island itself.



MR. ALBERT SMITH'S ENTERTAINMENT—"THE OVERLAND MAIL," AT WILLIS'S ROOMS.

The upper half of the shield represents the southerly point of Florida, sustained by the United States flag; and the northerly point of Cuba sustained by the flag of Free Cuba; the narrow passage between being considered and represented as the key to the Gulf of Mexico, and such it is, geographically and practically. The filling in of the different insignia of war and nationality is after the plan adopted in the United States; and, we dare say, regarded with pride by the people of that "land of liberty."

MR. ALBERT SMITH'S ENTERTAINMENT.

ON Monday evening Mr. Albert Smith repeated his Entertainment of the "Overland Mail," at Willis's Rooms, with increased success. The room was crowded with company, and the applause was cordial and hearty throughout the performance. The views by Mr. W. Beverley are extremely beautiful.

We give the humorous scene between the Arabs and the Traveller on the summit of the Great Pyramid, with the accompanying dialogue:—

"The view from the summit of the Pyramids has been often described the scene which takes place on the summit has found fewer recorders. No sooner does the traveller arrive there, than he is immediately hustled by a crowd of noisy attendants. One fellow, more pertinacious than the rest, gets near him, and this dialogue begins

'Here! I say, Master; look here—antique—very good. Shilling for him, Ole gentleman come here to-morrow, give dollar. You have him for a shilling.' (The "antique" is a little green crockery mummy, thousands of which are sold to travellers. They are popularly supposed to be found in the tombs; unbelieving spirits affirm they are made in Staffordshire.) You reply you don't want it.

'I say, Master; yes,' goes on the Arab. "Give me two shilling; run up Belzoni's pyramid in five minute. Ole gentleman come here yesterday, give me two dollar. Bueno, give bakshesh."

"You begin to be somewhat dazzled at this reckless old gentleman's liberality, whoever he is. Perhaps you say, "Get along with you."

'Yes, I say: Colonel Vyse say me good Arab. Him other bad. No like Francese no like Muskoff—no like Greek. Arab like Inglese—gotlots shillings. Ole gentleman give nine, five, seven, two shilling, one. Buy him? Sixpence!"

"This goes on until late in the afternoon; as the chance of a market diminishes, it is a very humiliating fact, that the most important gods of ancient Egypt may be bought at a shilling a dozen. English money is most current; and, as a proof of civilization, I took a bad sixpence in change when buying a handful of representatives of Osiris."

THE HIPPOPOTAMUS

IN THE GARDENS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY, REGENT'S PARK.

(Concluded from page 378.)

THE long lines of carriages which are daily to be seen at the entrance of the Society's Garden, are conclusive evidence that the Hippopotamus has now, as we prognosticated, completely established himself as the great lion of the day. We understand that the number of visitors since his arrival have averaged nearly

THE HIPPOPOTAMUS IN THE GARDENS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY REGENT'S-PARK.

2000 per diem; and there seems every probability, from the interest with which he is regarded, that still larger crowds will follow. The illustration with which we present our readers is from the accurate pencil of Mr. Weld, and gives the animal in one of his most characteristic actions, that of emerging from the water. On making the first plunge into his bath, he generally goes to the bottom, and remains there entirely submerged for some seconds—the longest period which has been mentioned to us is three minutes and a half and then quietly rises, until the large protruding eyes and valvular nostrils are above the surface. He frequently remains in this attitude for a considerable period, and then, as if suddenly possessed by some joyous sensation, plunges and rolls with gambolling glee, until the water dashes in large waves against the walls which confine it.

We may here mention, that the house and bath have been warmed by Mr. W. Hill's improved Flue Boiler and Brasses.

Professor Owen has published his "first impressions" of the animal in a letter to the Editor of the Annals of Natural History. We cannot give a better account of certain details of structure than by quoting his words:—

"The ears are very short, conical, fringed with short scattered hairs along the lower half of their thick borders, and beset with a few clumps of short hairs upon the middle of their inner surface. It moves them about with much activity. The dark colour of the body extends forwards along the middle of the upper part of the head, and more faintly along the cheeks. The skin around the ears is light-coloured almost from the commencement of the protruded round the eyelids, which defend the peculiarly situated and prominent eyes. There is a single groove or fold above the upper eyelid, and two curved grooves below the lower one. At first sight the eyes would be devoid of eyelashes, but on a close inspect on a few very short hairs may be seen on the thick rounded margin of the upper lid. There is a carbuncle or protuberance on the middle of the outer surface of the nictitating lid. The colour of the iris is a dark brown: the pupil is a small transversely oblong aperture. The eyeball is relatively small, and is remarkable for the extent of the movements of protraction and retraction. The nostrils, situated on prominences, which the animal has the power of raising on the upper part of the broad and massive muzzle, are short obliquo slits, guarded by two valves, which can be opened and closed spontaneously, like the eyelids. The movements of these apertures are most conspicuous when the beast is in his favourite element. The mouth is remarkable, even in its present extreme youth, for the peculiar upward direction of the corners towards the eyes, which, combined with the breadth and massiveness of the muzzle, give the mouth a most grotesque and smiling character in whatever position it is presented to the spectator. At certain moments, the whole aspect of the head suggests to one the idea of what may have been the semblance of some of the gigantic extinct Batrachians, the relics of which, whose frail bones excite our wonder so powerfully whenever we wander into the galleries of Palæontology in the British Museum.

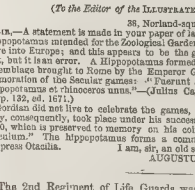
"The Romans were acquainted with the Hippotamus through the accounts of Herodotus and Aristotle; and it may be interesting to some of our readers to compare the notice which occurs in the famous Sketch of Egypt and its Animals, by the Father of History, with the living animal itself. In the 71st chapter of his second book he says, after speaking of certain other animals, "the River-Horses are held sacred in the country of Paraphrumis, but not by the rest of the Egyptians. The nature and character of the animal is as follows:—It is four-footed, with cloven feet; has the mane of a horse, tusks of a horse, protruding teeth, and the tail and neigh of a horse. It is as large as the biggest ox, and its hide is so thick that polished spears are made from it when dried."

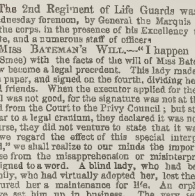
As we can barely suppose that Rome until the present opportunity of seeing the animal he describes during his travels, respect for his memory suggests the hope that this account must have been written long after his return from Egypt, or from very hasty and imperfect notes.

Although in the exhibition of a living Hippopotamus the Society stands unrivalled in modern times, the Romans, who spared no cost in getting up the triumphal processions which ministered so largely to their pride, had several opportunities of beholding this animal in Rome; and we consequently find traces of it in their sculpture and their coins. On the plinth of the Statue of Nilus—which was in the Belvidere at Rome until removed to the Musée Napoleon—a Roman artist has executed several figures of the Hippopotamus, engaged in contest with the crocodile and with the pigmies, which, although not marked with the precision and truth which a physiologist would demand, leave no kind of doubt as to the animal which he intended to depict among the attributes of the river.

In a large brass coin of Hadrian, struck between A.D. 117 and 138, the reverse represents such a statue of the Nile, with the hippopotamus in the background.

In a large brass of Philip II., struck about A.D. 247, we have a tolerably characteristic figure of the animal, as well as in the large brass of Otacilia, which was struck between A.D. 234 and 249.





(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

38, Norland-square, Bayswater, May 28, 1850.

SIR,—A statement is made in your paper of last Saturday to the effect that the Hippopotamus intended for the Zoological Gardens is the first that has been brought alive into England, and this appears to be the general impression upon the subject, but it is an error. A Hippopotamus formed one of the animals in the large assemblage brought to Rome by the Emperor Gordian the Third, for the commemoration of the Secular games: "Pasrant sub Gordiano Rome . . . hippopotamus et rhinoceros unus."—(Julius Capitolinus, Hist. Aug. Script., vol. ii., p. 132, ed. 1671.)

Gordian did not live to celebrate the games, being murdered A.D. 244: and they, consequently, took place under his successor, Philip, in the year of Rome 1000, which is preserved to memory on his coins by the reverse, "Milliarium Seculum." The hippopotamus forms a common reverse of the coins of his Empress Otacilia. I am, sir, &c.

AUGUSTUS LANGDON, B.C.L., F.S.S.

The 2nd Regiment of Life Guards was reviewed in Hyde Park, on Wednesday forenoon, by General the Marquis of Londonderry, G.C.B., Colonel of the corps, in the presence of his Excellency the Nepaulese Ambassador and suite, and a numerous staff of officers.

MISS BATEMAN'S WILL.—"I happen to be acquainted (says Mr. A. Smee) with the facts of the will of Miss Bateman, of Newington, which has now become a legal question. The lady made a will, filled up three sides of the paper, and signed on the fourth, dividing her property amongst her relatives and friends. When the executor applied for the probate, he was told that the will was not good, for the signature was not at the end. Reappealed to the Court, and from the Court to the Privy Council, but still by some such reasoning only clear to a legal cranium, they declared it was not at the foot or end, though, of course, they did not venture to state that it was in any other position. Now, if we regard the effect of the special interpretation of the words "foot or end," we shall realise to our minds the importance of the errors which may arise from the misapprehension or misinterpretation of the exact idea to be assigned to a word. A kind lady, who had long assisted Miss Bateman's family, who had virtually adopted her, lost thereby £1000, which would have secured her a maintenance for life. An orphan lost his mite, which might have set him up in business. The very servants who came and legacies left to them, have been deprived of their justly merited reward. The distant relatives lost their portion, which they were reasonably entitled to expect; a former companion did not obtain her promised bequest; the friends have been deprived of the legacies assigned to them; the acquaintances, of the mementos or little articles of jewellery, which were actually sealed up and addressed to each respectively. Everything went to the next of kin, who, under the will, had a handsome portion left to him. —Justice and Reason, just published.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

A heavy, and not altogether good settling, has so thoroughly engrossed the time and attention of almost every man connected with the Turf, that the Newton Meeting, with a very fair list, attracted few but the "locals;" the county, however, is so densely populated, that as far as numbers can ensure success, racing in Leicestershire must always prosper.

The week ensuing will be devoted to Ascot, once the favoured of royalty, but which, under the present Sovereign, has not obtained that steady patronage which was accorded to it under William IV., and the "Georges." The betting, therefore, will stand on its own merits, and on this score it has nothing to fear. The list is a bumper, each day promising plenty of sport, and good fields for most of the principal events; the Queen's Vase and the Tremendis being the features for Tuesday (always an interesting day at Ascot); the Royal Hunt Cup, Windsor and Coronation Stakes for Wednesday; the Emperor's Plate (with the Flying Dutchman and Theseus as conspicuous) and New Stakes for Thursday; and the Great Western Railway Handicap for the wind-up.

The principal Cricket matches will come off thus:—Monday: The return match between the M. C. C. and ground and the University of Cambridge; and an All England match at Sheffield's, between eleven of England and fourteen of Yorkshire. Tuesday: A match at the Surrey ground, between the Surrey and Streatham Clubs; and on Monday and Tuesday, matches at the Copenhagen ground.

The Aquatic gatherings comprehend the Waterloo-bridge regatta on Monday, one on Wednesday at Maidenhead, and the Henley regatta on the two following days.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The great anxiety felt with regard to the settling prevented any regular betting on future events; our quotations, therefore, will necessarily be short.

ASCOT STAKES.

5 to 1 agst Vampyre	5 to 1 agst any other

THE EMPEROR'S PLATE.—Even money laid between Canezou and the Flying Dutchman.

DERBY, 1851.

25 to 1 agst Storm	40 to 1 agst England's Glory	1000 to 22 agst Brother to Elizabeth
33 to 1 —— Cruiser	1000 to 30 —— Transition (t)	Ierlate (t)

750 to 50 agst The Flying Dutchman winning the Emperor's Plate and Voltigeur the St. Leger (t)

THURSDAY.—A very moderate amount of business was transacted, at the undermentioned prices:—

ASCOT STAKES.

9 to 2 agst Vampyre (t)	8 to 1 agst Collingwood	8 to 1 agst Retail
7 to 1 —— Damask (t)	8 to 1 —— Mundig	10 to 1 —— Durdans

10 to 1 agst Cocktail.

TRIENNIAL STAKES.

2 to 1 agst Mousseur	7 to 2 agst Bunsworth	5 to 1 agst Ethiron

THE QUEEN'S VASE.—5 to 1 agst Miss Ann (t)

THE EMPEROR'S PLATE.

5 to 2 agst Flying Dutchman	6 to 4 agst Canezou	10 to 1 agst Chanticleer

DERBY.

25 to 1 agst Storm (t)	40 to 1 agst Juggernaut (t)

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The first match of the season occurred on Wednesday, in the presence of a vast concourse, attracted by the fine weather as much as by the sport.

The yachts, which took up their post at Erith for the contest, were divided into three classes—the first comprising yachts above 30 tons; the second, exceeding 15 and under 30: and the third consisting of the smaller fry, under 15 tons. They were as follows, viz.:—

First Class.—Yachts exceeding 30 tons.

Yacht.				Port.	Owner's Name
Mosquito	..	..	50	.. London	.. Charles Mare, Esq
Cygnet	..	..	33	.. Southampton	H. Lambton, Esq
Diana	..	..	33	.. Portsmouth..	J. L. Cudgie, Esq
Cynthia	..	..	50	.. London	.. John Wilde, Esq

Second Class.—Yachts exceeding 15 and not exceeding 30 tons

Foam ..	..	..	20	.. Ipswich	.. Thomas Harvey, Esq
Whisper	..	..	19	.. London	.. Thomas Evelegh, Esq

Third Class.—Yachts not exceeding 15 tons.

Pearl ..	..	..	12	.. Poole	.. T. and J. M. Wanhill, Esqrs
Mazeppa	..	..	13	.. Southampton	Charles Brumby, Esq
Surprise	..	..	15	.. Cowes	W. H. Cochrane, Esq
Frolic	..	..	13	.. London	.. Alfred Cox, Esq
Sea Nymph ..	..	..	10	.. Southampton	.. Mr. Lush, Esq

The appearance of the little fleet was extremely beautiful, and considerable speculation arose upon the probable result of the day's races.

The prize for the first class was 20 guineas, for the second 50 guineas, and for the third 30 guineas. Half a minute time per ton was allowed throughout.

The start took place at seventeen minutes and a half past eleven. The Commodore, Lord Alfred Paget; Mr. Richard Green, the vice-commodore; and Captain Rowland, the principal officers, having inspected the fleet at their berths, they all canted round in an instant, and every sail was set with an alacrity highly creditable to the parties engaged. They formed, about two minutes after the start, a very pretty picture, and were then in the following order, the third class having been started in one line a few yards below the others:—Surprise, Frolic, Mazeppa, Cynthia, Sea-Nymph, Cygnet, Pearl, Foam, Mosquito, and Diana. There could be almost no second quarter given, as the little boats were occasionally almost becalmed, some having advantages by catspaws, which ever and anon varied their positions tritingly.

They rounded in the following order:—Mazeppa, 3 hrs. 7 min. 30 sec.; Cynthia, (3 min. 18 sec.; Cygnet, 17 min. 8 sec.; Diana, 25 min 35 sec.; Foam, 31 min. 37 sec.; Whisper, 34 min. 3 sec. The work up was barely more than reaching, but there was some pretty manœuvring between the little craft for the pride of places, the Mazeppa, Surprise, Nymph, and Frolic exhibiting some very nautical manœuvres. No change took place in the leading yachts of the first class, and the fleet came in at Erith in the following order:—Mosquito, 6 hrs. 6 min 20 sec.; Mazeppa, 6 hrs. 7 min. 58 sec.; Frolic, 6 hrs. 10 min. 7 sec.; Surprise, 6 hrs. 10 min. 35 sec.; Sea Nymph, 6 hrs. 11 min. 52 sec.; Pearl, 6 hrs. 17 min. 32 sec.; Cynthia, 6 hrs. 20 min. 22 sec.; Cygnet, 6 hrs. 29 min. 40 sec.; Diana, 6 hrs. 46 min. 16 sec.; The Whisper, 7 hrs. 1 min. 58 sec.; Foam, 7 hrs. 7 min. 35 sec

The prizes were subsequently presented to the owners of the successful yachts, the Mosquito, Whisper, and Mazeppa, by Lord Alfred Paget, the commodore.

NEWTON RACES.—WEDNESDAY.

The HAYDOCK STAKES of 10 sovs each, and 25 added.—Mr. Collingwood's Administrator, 1

The GOLDBORNE STAKES of 25 sovs each, and 50 added.—Lord Caledon's Sister to Wanoza, 1; Mr. J. Osborne's The Black Doctor, 2.

The GOLD CUP of 100 sovs, added to a handicap of 20 sovs each.—Mr. J. Clarke nd Duxbury, 1. Colonel Anson's Champion, 2.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Consols have again displayed an upward tendency, the slight checks arising from sales for realisations of profits or for settling accounts. On Monday, the opening price was the highest quotation of the previous Saturday, viz. 96¼ ⅝, afterwards receding to 96¼, and again rallying to 96⅝ to ¾. An improvement of a quarter per cent was maintained on Tuesday, the last price being 96⅞; and on Wednesday, although the opening quotation was 96⅞ to ⅞, the absence of any unfavourable advices from the Continent caused a rapid advance to 96⅝ ⅞, yielding only to 96⅝ ¾, at which the closing quotation again 96⅝ ⅞. Thursday's market was buoyant, the opening price being 96⅝ ⅞ for Money; but some extensive realising induced flatness, although without any fall in quotation. East India Bonds were marked for renewal on Thursday, and notice of a further reduction to three per cent. in June, 1851, has been given by the Company. The price is about 84 to 86 Exchequer Bills continue in request. The closing quotations of the week were—for Bank Stock, 209; Reduced, 96⅝; Consols, 96⅝; New 3½ per Cents, 97⅛; India Bonds, £1000, 85 pm.; Ditto, under £1000, 85 pm.; Consols for Account, 96⅝; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 71 pm.; Small, June, 66 pm.

The Foreign Stock Market has exhibited much firmness, during improvements registered continue well maintained. Mexican marks an improvement from Monday's price, of 31¼ to ⅜ for Money to 31½ for Account. Danish Scrip is from 5⅛ to 9 premium; Peruvian, 76¼; Spanish Passive, 5⅞; and Three per Cents are rather flatter than at the beginning of the week; Portuguese, on the contrary, marking a fractional improvement. Russian Stock is firm at 107 to 109; the Scrip at 3 to 4 premium. At the close of the week the official list gave prices as follows—Chilian Bonds, 6 per Cent, Equitable Bonds, 97; Grenada Bonds, 1¼ per Cent., 18; Mexican Five per Cents, 1846, Account, 31¼; Peruvian Bonds, 4½ per Cent., Deferred, 83½; Port quese Five per Cents, Converted, 1841, 34; Ditto, 4 per Cent., 34½; Russian Scrip, 3 pm; Spanish Five per Cents, 1840, Account, 17½; Ditto, Three per Cent, 37½; Belgian, 4½ per Cent., 87½; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 57½; Ditto, 4 per Cent Certificates, 86. Prices of Shares have registered higher this week, although the advance has not been fully maintained. The last rates are:—Aberdeen, 8½; Caledonian 9⅛; Ditto, New £10, Preference, 6⅞; Eastern Counties, 7⅛; Ditto, New, Preference, 5 per Cent., 11⅞ ¾ d.; Great Northern, 5 per Cent., 1 pm; Ditto, Ditto, No. 2, ¾ pm; Ditto, Northern and Eastern, 5 per Cent, New, 50; East Lincolnshire, Guaranteed 6 per Cent., 28½; Great Northern, 10½; Ditto, ¼ A, Deferred, 2⅝; Ditto, Five per Cent. Preference, 10⅝; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), Eighths, 1⅜; Great Western, 83¾ ¼ m; Ditto, New, £17, 7⅝; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 40½; Ditto, Fifths, ⅓; Ditto, New, Guaranteed 5 per Cent., 19½; London and Blackwall, 4⅜; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 82; Ditto, New, Guaranteed 5 per Cent, 138; Ditto, Preference, 5 per Cent., 57⅛; London and North-Western, 108½, Ditto, New, Quarters, 11⅛; Ditto, Fifths, 10⅜; Ditto, £10 (M and B), Q 1⅛; Manchester, Buxton, and Matlock, 1; Midland, 37; Do., £50 Shares, 12½; Ditto, New, 5 per Cent., 6 pm; Scotch, 5 per Cent., 5; North British, Preferences, 5; North Staffordshire, 7⅛; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 9⅛; Reading, Guilford, and Reigate, 15½; Shropshire Union, 5; South-Eastern, 19; Ditto, Registered Scrip, 1 pm; Ditto, New, £17, 7½; Yorkshire, 142; Do., Newcastle Extension, 9⅛; Ditto, G.N.E., Pref., 1⅛; York and North Midland, 17½; Ditto, Pref., 7⅛; Boulogne and Amiens, 6⅛; Lyat Indian, 7⅛; Northern of France, 19⅛; Orleans and Bordeaux, 2⅛; Paris and Rouen, 22; Sambre and Meuse, 2⅛.

On Friday, the Market for Consols was inactive In prices, however, no material change took place. The Three per Cents—Money were done at 96⅝ ⅞; and the Three per Cents Reduced, 96⅞. The Unfunded Debt was flat. India Bonds, 85s; and Exchequer Bills, 71s pm. Foreign Bonds and Railway Shares were in very moderate request, yet the quotations were firm.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—A very moderate supply of English wheat has come to hand for this market since Monday, ensatwise or by land carriage. To-day, the attendance of both town and country millers was small: yet the few parcels of home-grown wheat on offer were disposed of at Monday's prices. Upwards of 10,000 quarters of foreign wheat have arrived this week. The show of samples of both red and white was by no means large. Selected qualities were held firmly, at full rates of currency; but the middling and inferior kinds were neglected. Barley—the supply of which was very moderate—moved off slowly, at barely late rates. Very little malt was brought forward, yet the supply was quite equal to the wants of the buyers. Selected parcels of oats were steadily at late rates. Damp qualities met a very inactive demand. Beans, peas, Indian corn and meal were almost nominal. No change took place in the value of flour. Town-made flour, Foreign qualities were dull.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 3810; barley, 179; malt, 2250; oats, 560; flour, 4270 sacks. Foreign: wheat, 10,230 quarters; barley, 4270; oats, 14,515; flour, 1230 quarters.

Essex and Kent, red, 37s to 42s; ditto, white, 40s to 45s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 32s to 40s; ditto, white, 40s to 42s; rye, 32s to 33s; grinding barley, 19s to 21s; distilling ditto, 22s to 25s; malting ditto, 26s to 27s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 65s to 68s; Ware, 66s to 70s; Kingston and Wera, 65s to 72s; Chevalier, 68s to 74s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 15s to 18s; potato ditto, 17s to 20s; Yarmouth and Cork, black, 14s to 15s; ditto, white, 16s to 18s; tick beans, new, 34s to 36s; ditto, old, 34s to 37s; grey peas, 32s to 35s; maple, 34s to 36s; white, 32s to 34s; boilers, 36s to 37s per quarter. Town-made flour, 32s to 37s; Suffolk, 27s to 30s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 27s to 32s per 280 lb. Foreign: Dantzig red wheat, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 24s to 25s per barrel; Canada, 20s to 23s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—The clover seed is dull in sale, at last week's decline in the quotations. In all other seeds scarcely any business is doing, and the value of cakes is almost nominal.

Linseed, English, sowing, 54s to 56s; Baltic, crushing, 40s to 42s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 38s to 40s; hempseed, 34s to 36s per quarter; coriander, 16s to 20s per cwt; brown mustard seed, 8s to 11s; white ditto, 6s to 9s; tares, 2s 6d to 4s 6d per bushel. English rapecake, now, £5 5s per last of ten quarters; foreign, £5 to £5 5s; linseed, £5 to £10 0s; ditto, Baltic, £5 to £7 10s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, £4 0s to £4 5s per ton: canary, 30s to 40s per quarter; English clover seed, red, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, up to —s; Foreign, red, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 6½d to 7½d; of household ditto, 4½d to 5d per 4lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 40s 9d; barley, 22s 0d; oats, 15s 11d; rye, 32s 0d; beans, 36s 11d; peas, 36s 7d.

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 38s 9d, barley, 22s 6d; oats, 15s 5d; rye, 32s 1d; beans, 36s 1d; peas, 35s 9d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 1s 0d; barley, 1s 0d; oats, 1s 0d; rye, 1s 0d; beans, 1s 0d; peas, 1s 0d.

Tea.—Our market is well supplied with most kinds. Common sound Congou is selling at 9d to 9½d, and fine ditto—made pungwonder, 1s to a 0½d pr lb. Public sales of 3800 packages have been held: 4700 chests sold at a decline to the value of medium Congou of ½d, and Hyson, 2d to 4d per lb. In other kinds no change took place.

Sugar.—The refined sugar trade continues firm, with an advance of 6d per cwt; all other kinds of raw have produced very full prices. Refined goods are in moderate request. Brown lumps, 49s 6d; ditto, good to fair grocery, 50s to 52s per cwt.

Coffee.—A large speculative business has been done in good and native Ceylon, at 44s to 46s per cwt. Plantation kinds have risen 2s to 3s per cwt. Foreign coffees are held for rather more money.

Cocoa.—Our market is steady, and prices are well supported. Fine red Trinidad is worth 46s per cwt.

Rice.—Bengal is steady, and 3d per cwt dearer than last week. Middling and good white is worth 14s to 15s 6d; good bold ditto, 16s to 17s per cwt.

Provisions.—The market continues to be well supplied with Dutch butter, the demand for which is heavy, at drooping prices. Fine Irish is now selling at 76s to 78s per cwt. Fine Kiel, 68s to 64s; and other kinds, 46s per cwt and upwards. The supply of new Irish butter is considerable, and very little business is doing. Limerick, drooping, Kilkenny, firsts, landed, 72s to 74s: Waterford, 66s to 70s, Limerick, 66s to 68s, and Cork, 66s to 68s per cwt. Fine English butter is held at full prices, but other kinds are is to 2s lower. Fine weekly Dorset, 70s to 74s; and fine Devon, 72s to 76s per cwt. Fine Friesland butter may be had at 4s to 4s 2d per dozen lb. The supply is unusually large. Bacon has further advanced 4s to 5s per cwt. Prime small, mild, Wiltshire, fetches 58s per cwt. Irish pork middling, is to 2s, and Irish bacon, 2s to 4s dearer

Potatoes.—The arrivals coastwise, at last week's prices. P.Y.C. on the spot is quoted at 80s 9d to 87s; and for forward delivery, 38s 9d per cwt. Town tallow, 35s 6d per cwt., net cash.

Oils.—Very few transactions have taken place in our market this week, and prices are rather lower.

Spirits.—The demand for brandy still continues heavy, yet the importers refuse to accept lower prices. Fine Jamaica rum is quite as dear. Inferior qualities, as well as common spirits, continue very little inquired for.

Hay and Straw.—Meadow hay, £2 8s to £3 10s; clover do, £3 to £4 7s; and straw, £1 1s to £1 8s per load

Wool. Several large imports of colonial wool have taken place this week. By private treaty, a steady business is doing, at full prices.

Potatoes.—The season for old potatoes is now rapidly drawing to a close. Picked samples are selling at 80s to 170s per ton; inferior parcels are neglected. Importations are still large from the Continent.

Coals. (Friday.) Hartley, 12s 6d; Biddell, 13s 9d; West Kelloe, 14s; Whitworth, 12s 6d; Tees Side, 12s 6d; Hetton, 14s 6d; Wylam, 13s 6d; Walbottle, 13s per ton.

Hops (Friday).—Very favourable accounts have reached us respecting the general appearance of the hop plant; nevertheless, our market is tolerably steady, and last week's prices are fully supported. The duty has been laid at £150,000.—

New Mids and East Kents realise, £6 2s to £10 6s; new Weald of Kent ditto, £6 0s to £8 0s; new Sussex ditto, £5 5s to £6 12s, new Farnhams, £12 0s to £13 0s; Yearling Kents, £3 0s to £4 0s; Yearling Sussex, £2 15s to £3 5s: Old Hops, £1 1s to £3 0s.

Smithfield (Friday).—The supply of beasts here to-day is rather small, and the attendance of buyers being numerous, the best trade ruled somewhat active, at an advance in the prices of Mr. Sc—t's prize ox of 1s per stone. The top figure was 3s 10d. In the sheep line, supplies of sheep were reasonably extensive, the demand for that description of stock was steady, at the same quotations as last Monday, leaving the trade but an upward tendency. There was a slight improvement in the sale for lambs, at full prices of currency. From the fair of Wright and Bowbeer's beasts were in rather middling condition. Calves were in great supply and heavy request, at quite late sale. Pigs were to nothing doing. Rabbits were in good supply, at 1s 4d each.

Per 8lb to sink the offal—Coarse and inferior beasts, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; second quality ditto, 2s 10d to 3s 0d; prime large oxen, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; prime Scots, &c., 3s 4d to 3s 6d; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; second quality ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime coarse-woolled ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime South Downs, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; large coarse calves, 3s 10d to 3s 8d; prime small ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; large hogs, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; neat small porkers, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; lambs, 4s 0d to 5s 0d; sucking calves, 16s to 23s, and quarter old store pigs, 16s to 21s each. Total supplies: beasts, 3600; sheep, 11,700; calves, 300; pigs, 270; rabbits, 3140; pigs, 300. Foreign: beasts, 130; sheep, 490; calves, 200. Scotch: beasts, 200; sheep, 84

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday).—There was a slight improvement in the general demand for meat, and prices, owing to the short supply of sheep and lambs, were well supported

Per 8lb by the carcase:—Inferior beef, 1s 10d to 2s 6d; middling ditto, 2s 0d to 2s 8d; prime large ditto, 2s 8d to 2s 8d; prime small ditto, 2s 10d to 3s 0d; large pork, 2s 10d to 3s 4d; inferior mutton, 2s 8d to 2s 8d; middling ditto, 2s 10d to 3s 4d; prime ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 10d; veal, 3s 8d to 4s 4d; small pork, 3s 6d to 4s 0d; lamb, 4s 0d to 5s 0d.

ROBT. HERBERT

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, JUNE 4.

BANKRUPTS

S and H J HOGG, Landport, auctioneers. W F NEWTON, Dover-street, Piccadilly, milliner. T J EDWARDS, King-street, Bloomsbury, watch-case maker. T E PYKE, High-street, Notting-hill, cockmaker. W CHANCELLOR, Bath innkeeper. H THURSTAN, Chatham, innkeeper. W HOGGS, Wolverhampton, iron-dealer. C W WILLIAMSON, Birmingham, baker T GOODE, Hereford, chemist and druggist. C FRANCIS, Liverpool, grocer. J M M SCOTT, Liverpool, clerk. G WOODWARD, Doncaster, gunmaker. G HORNSBY and R F MOULD, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, builders.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS

A PEARSON West Seiennes, near Edinburgh, distiller. W REID, Lochee, Forfarshire, builder. J MITCHELL, Glasgow, engraver J MOFFATT, Rosshire, Ballwinhill of Ord. W DONALD, Aberdeen, shipowner. R CORNEY, jun, Rothesay, draper. T BRIND, Glasgow, metal broker. J OGILVY, Aberdeen, baker

FRIDAY, JUNE 7.

WAR-OFFICE, JUNE 7.

3d Regiment of Dragoon Guards: Lieut H Marsh to be Captain, vice Bacon; Cornet J Hylton de Cardonnel Lawson to be Lieutenant, vice Marsh.

11th Foot: Ensign R C Hague to be Lieutenant, vice Parker, 14th: Lieut J G Strode to be Lieutenant, vice Pooley, 20th: Lieut W O'Grady to be Major, vice D G Freer. 23d: Staff Assistant-Surgeon W C Seaman, M.D, to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Grantham 29th: Ensign E Bell to be Lieutenant, vice Simpson. 31st: Lieut R E Petty to be Captain, vice Hamilton. Ensign J Hobson to be Lieutenant, vice Petty. 41st: Lieutenant H O P Seward to be Captain, vice Hartley Ensign G W Alexander to be Lieutenant, vice Seward. 46th: Ensign J H Ward to be Lieut, vice M'Leod, 49th: Ensign E E Hamilton to be Ensign, vice Ward 58th: Ensign W H Thompson to be Ensign, vice Bell 61st: Lieut G S Tyler to be Lieut, vice Steele. Ensign S M'Donough to be Lieut, vice Fenwick. Ensign K S Stuart to be Ensign, vice M'Donough. 82d: Ensign G J Jewan to be Lieut, vice Cuthbert 91st: Ensign W Ward to be Lieut, vice Winton 93d: Lieut C Davis to be Lieut, vice Walpolsley 94st Captain J M Pennington to be Captain, vice Ward 97th. Major G Hutchison to be Lieut-Colonel, vice Bruce. Captain A F Welford to be Major, vice Hutchison; Lieut E C Legh to be Captain vice Welford Ensign W F Normann to be Lieut, vice Legh.

Royal Staff.—Assisting Assistant Surg J Gibbons to be Assistant-Surg to the Forces, vice Scanes.

UNATTACHED.—Lieut J M Pennington to be Capt.

WAR-OFFICE, JUNE 8.

Royal Regiment of Artillery: Brevet-Major D T Pratt to be Lieut-Col, vice Sharp Second Capt. Lieut-Col Lefroy to be Lieut-Col-Commandant, vice Pratt Brevet-Major G Frazer to be Capt, vice Lefroy. Second Lieut W J St. John to be First Lieut, vice Fraser, Brevet Major H Jones to be Lieut-Col, vice James. 8th Capt G J B Bulkeley to be Capt, vice Stowe: First Lieut J D Telfer to be 2 Second Capt, vice Bulkeley. Lieut G Andrews to be First Lieut, vice Telfer

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORD LIEUTENANT

West Somerset Regiment of Yeomanry Cavalry: H B Batten to be Cornet, vice Troyte.

DISSOLUTIONS

D PRETYMAN and G H HOBSON, Cornhill, Cit., commissioners W T HEARN, Portsmouth, licensed victualler. H BOULTON Luton, Bedfordshire, straw hat manufacturer. R HOLDEN, Bolton-le-Moors, Lancashire, Preston, licensed victualler J AWFORD, Strood, Gloucestershire, mealman. P A BLACK and J WHITTINGHAM, Liverpool, general brokers. J SMITH and J ROBERTSON, South-wark, carmen.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS

J LINDSAY, Rothsay, near Strathaven, farmer J LIDDELL or LIDDELL, Dundee, manufacturer C RIDDELL, Strathaven, insurance-agent R HANNIA, Edinburgh, commission-agent.

BIRTHS.

25th May, at Up Cerne House, near Dorchester, Dorset, the lady of William White, Esq, of Bedford-row, Holborn, barrister-at-law, of a daughter. On the 28th ultimo, at Northampton, the wife of the Rev George Marsh, of a daughter. At Hesketh-new-hall, Tarleton, the wife of the Rev. John Richard Fleetwood Hesketh, of a daughter. At Wigginton, Staffordshire, the wife of the Rev John Williams, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

At St Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta, Elphinstone Jackson, Esq, Bengal Civil Service, eldest son of Wolley Jackson, Esq, to Charlotte, third daughter of the late Major Ralph Henry Roe At Ware, Herts, Charles Longsworth, the Rev Thomas Thompson, M.A, rector of Ivy Church, Essex, to Sarah, daughter of John Barrow, Esq, of Chorleywood House, Herts. At St Mary Church, Reigate, Lieut Halliday, R.N, nephew of the late admiral Tollemache, to Frances Louisa, only unmarried daughter of the Hon Charles Tollemache. At St Margaret's, Westminster, Lieut Hay, only son of the Bishop of Madras, to Lucy Hedley, youngest daughter of John Bagshaw, Esq. At Cheltenham, the Rev Thomas Henry Knight, M.A, incumbent of Stoke Canon, in the county of Devon, to Mary Anne, youngest daughter of the late Sir William Harwood Pollin Bart, of Hunstanton-hall, Norfolk. At Worcester, Hugh C E Childers, Esq, to Emily, third daughter of G J A Walker, Esq, of Worcester.

DEATHS.

At Hoth-Neville, James Mayes, aged 89 years, eldest son of John Hales, Esq, surgeon — Lieut-General Sir John Bushan, K.C.B, at his house, Upper Harley-street — At Wrotham, the Rev Frederick Lane Birch, rector of the parish, in his 38th year — At Ely place, eg. Captain Richard Walker Nourse, A.M, of Caius College, Cambridge, youngest son of the late William Mourse, rector of Clapham, near Worthing, Sussex — Henry Yorke, infant son of Captain Murray, R.N, Reading — Captain William St Leger Anguish, of the 3rd Veteran Regiment, aged 58 — At Bourges-sur-Mer, Captain John Forbes, late of the 92nd Highlanders, aged 48 — At the Vicarage, Donington, the Rev John Batchelor M.A, rector of St Anne, Limehouse, Middlesex, and vicar of Donington and Toynham, Kent, in the 86th year of his age — On the 28th ult, at Mr. Jay's in the county of Carmarthen, Mrs. Esq, daughter of the late Sir William Harwood Pollin Bart, of Hunstanton-hall, Norfolk. At Worcester, Mrs. Hughes, aged 84, relict of Stephen Hughes, Esq, of Stapely Hall, Montgomeryshire, and mother of Thomas Hughes, Esq, of Worcester. At Ipswich, Mrs. Ann Cobbold, aged 84, widow of the late John Cobbold, Esq, of Ipswich, and mother of the Rev. Richard Cobbold, author of "Margaret Catchpole," &c. At Bath, Mrs. Mary Ann Hall, aged 84, widow of the late Rev. Robert Hall, of Arnesby, Leicestershire, and mother of the late Rev. John Hall, D.D, of Liverpool.

NEW BOOKS, &c.

"13, Great Marlborough-street
MR. COLBURN'S NEW NOVELS.
To be had at all the Libraries

LA VENDEE; an Historical Romance. By A. TROLLOPE, Esq. 3 vols.

II.

ANNE DYSART; a Tale of Every-day Life. 3 vols.

"Very superior to the generality of novels."—Spectator.
"Remarkable for its talent and acuteness."—Literary Gazette.

III.

FRESTON TOWER; or, the EARLY DAYS OF CARDINAL WOLSEY. By the Rev. R. COBOLD, M.A. 3 vols. with six Illustrations

IV.

STORY of a MAN of FASHION; or, Sin and Sorrow. 3 vols.

V.

MORNINGS at MATLOCK. By Dr. SHELTON MACKENZIE, Author of "Tidian." 3 vols (Just ready)

Just published, Part II. price 2s. 6d. large paper 5s.

HISTORIC RELIQUES.—Drawn from the Originals, and Etched by JOSEPH J. WILLIAMS.
The Contents of a Part are as follows:—Douglas Jewels in her Majesty's possession, Amethyst Cup of Queen Elizabeth, Coll. Gwatkin, Chain of Alexander Pope, Lord Braybrooke's Cup, Lloyd's House at Hadzor, &c.
Office, 198 Strand

GIBBON'S ROME (ILLUSTRATED), with NOTES by GUIZOT
In two large royal octavo volumes, price 4 18s. cloth gilt.
GIBBON'S DECLINE and FALL of the ROMAN EMPIRE [illegible] without abridgement, [illegible] Notes by GUIZOT, WENCK, and other Historians, [illegible] Maps, Portraits, and Illustrations on Steel and Wood, [illegible] Chronological Table, Copious Index, and Analytical Table of Contents, [illegible] written for the Work by M. GUIZOT
London: HALL, VIRTUE, and CO., 25, Paternoster-row.

Now ready,
THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY of LEIGH HUNT, with Reminiscences of Friends and Contemporaries.
In three volumes post 8vo, with Three Portraits, price 31s 6d, in an [illegible] cloth
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co. 65, Cornhill

Now ready, price 10s 6d.
THE CITY of the JUGGLERS; or, Free-[illegible]. A Romance of the "Golden" Age. By W. [illegible], Anti-Corn-Law League.
[illegible]
This day is published, in 1 vol. 8vo, with Portrait, price 12s.

THE VALE of CEDARS; or, The Martyr. A Story of Spain in the Fifteenth Century.
By the late MISS AGUILAR.
Author of "Home Influence," "Women's Friendship," &c.
"The world does hail her as the [illegible] Mankind the country—Israel bottom [illegible]
[illegible]
London: GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, Paternoster-row.

THE ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY VOLUME, PART III., price 1s. contains:—The River Chebar—The Nestorians—The Yezidis—Sargon in the Assyrian Sculptures—The Vision of the Valley of Dry Bones—The Kingly Glory—The River Hiel—Daniel and Pythagoras—The Ruins of Susa. The Tomb of Daniel—The Two horned Ram. Symbolic Animals. The River Jordan—Sources of the Jordan &c., illustrative with beautiful Engravings
G. CRIK, 2 Ring William-street, Strand

PARLOUR LIBRARY, Vol 41.—Now ready,
CASTELNEAU; or, the Ancient Regime.
By G. P. R. JAMES, Esq. Also, the following by the same Author, price 1s. each boards, or 1s 6d cloth.
The Gipsy | The Revenge
One in a Thousand | Mary Stuart
Morley Ernstein; or, the Tenants of the Heart.
SIMMS and MINTZER, London and Belfast. Sold by all Booksellers and at all the Railway Stations.

NEW AND CHEAP EDITION
GARDENING.—THE FRUIT, FLOWER, and KITCHEN GARDEN. By PATRICK NEILL, LL.D. F.R.S.E., Secretary to the Caledonian Horticultural Society. Fourth Edition, revised and improved, illustrated with upwards of 60 woodcuts. Price 5s 6d.
"One of the best modern books on gardening extant. London's Gardener's Magazine.
"Practical gardeners and amateurs owe a debt of gratitude to him for the valuable works on horticulture, which is now one of the standard works on that branch of science of which it treats.—Professor Dunbar's Speech in the Caledonian Horticultural Society.
ADAM and CHARLES BLACK, Edinburgh

NEW EDUCATIONAL WORKS
The Forty-sixth Thousand
Price One Shilling, cloth extra, 1s. 6d.,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING BOOK. Containing nearly 1000 Engravings, beautifully printed in cloth, embossed and gilt sides, gilt edges.
The Illustrations are from drawings executed by eminent artists, expressly for the Edition, which are historical, descriptive, and descriptive and moral, and the latest Panoramic Picture of the Holy Land, and a View of Lower Egypt, showing the route of the Israelites from Egypt to the Land of Canaan; presenting at one view the principal cities and places mentioned in the Old and New Testament, assisted by 168 references
The Nonpareil Edition, in paper covers, price 2s 6d.

In the press, and shortly will be published, price 9s.,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON INSTRUCTOR, a Companion to the "Illustrated London Reading Book." Designed for a more advanced class of students in connexion with the Schools, the classical authors from the earliest records of British History to the Present Time, with an Introductory Chapter upon the Arts of Elocution and Composition. The latter will include a treatise on Reading, the leading of the Scriptures, and also on Public Speaking, and will also point out by new but examples the rules to be avoided by all who desire to become correct and easy good readers and speakers, by an eminent writer of their many acquaintance.
In preparation, a Series of Useful and Amusing Books, profusely illustrated with Engravings, of which due notice will be given.
The Trade and Schools supplied on liberal terms, for cash only.
Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, London, and sold by all Booksellers.

CHESS.—THE STAUNTON CHESS-MEN have now become the only recognised pattern among Chess-players.
The Staunton Chess-men combine elegance and solidity to a degree hitherto unknown.—The Times
"Their profession is great and elegance cannot be disputed."—Morning Post.
The STAUNTON CHESS-MEN, in the unique Box of Carton-pierre, resembling Carved Ebony, may now be had of all dealers in Chessmen, and wholesale, of the Manufacturer, JAQUAS, 3, Hatton-Garden.

LANE'S ROYAL PAPIER MACHE and PATENT PAPIER MACHE GLASS Warehouse and Show rooms, 72, New Oxford-street, and 3, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, under the patronage, and by special appointment of, her most gracious Majesty and the Royal Highness Prince Albert.—These rooms contain the trays, tables, chairs, cabinets, jobs screens, and every article in papier mache for which this manufactory has received its high character. The papier mache tea or glass is exquisitely beautiful, representing well known subjects, value views &c. Wedding and other presents to the country and abroad in great variety.—Works, Great Hampton-street, Birmingham.
[illegible] Gardens

PAPER-HANGINGS.—COTTERELL BROTHERS, 500, Oxford-street (a few doors from Hanover), invite attention to the very superior Papers of their PATENT FLOCK-HANGINGS, selected with the utmost care from a the principal French and English manufactories. A stock of from 30,000 to 40,000 pieces is always on hand, so that they can supply any quantity, of every pattern, size, and colour, for immediate use. Parties in the country should write for the Table to measure rooms, which, with a specimen of the Flock, will be forwarded by return of post. Cotterell's celebrated Tapestry Paper for bedrooms will be sent post-paid on receipt of six penny stamps. COTTERELL BROTHERS' complete designs for walls and ceilings are well worth the inspection of persons of taste. The Oxford-street Paper-hanging Warehouses, No 500, a few doors from Hanover; also at Brighton and Bath.

MILLION'S HAIR LUBRICANT.—A new and elegant preparation for the Hair, compounded on rational principles, and which none need will at once supersede the filthy stuff sold as Bear's Grease, Circassian Cream, or various oils with nonsensical names, which possess not the slightest power to render a beautiful [illegible] HAIR LUBRICANT, used as directed in a Treatise on the [illegible] sold with each pot, will soon render the Hair Glossy, Luxuriant, and curly. Price 3s each
Sold by all perfumers and medicine vendors in town and country. Wholesale London Agents:—Messrs. Sarsaby and Sons, Farringdon-street; Rowcroft, St. Paul's Church-yard; Sutton and Co., New Change-road; Sanger, 151, Oxford-street; and Sandday and Co., Oxford-street

NEW MUSIC, &c.

LE DOMINO NOIR.—The PIANISTA for June, No 131, contains the Overture and Airs in this favourite Opera, price 1s. Post free, thirty stamps. Meyerbeer's "Prophète" and "Huguenots," in Nos 117, 118, 96, and 97, 3s each. All the other operas, 2s each. Pianists Offices, 16a, Argyll-street, Oxford-street, and 67, Paternoster-row.

NEW SONGS.—"THE RICH MAN'S BRIDE." "THE EXILE'S FAREWELL," "THE STRANGER'S GRAVE." Price 2s each, or the three for 5s.
These songs are by the author of "Will you love me then as now," &c. They form a series of charming compositions, and are exceedingly graceful and pathetic. "The Rich Man's Bride" will be an immense favourite; both words and music are of a very superior description, and calculated to render it a permanent favourite
London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street

CHEAP MUSIC, bound and classed in volumes. Eighty shillings' worth at full marked price for 8s., comprising Overtures, Airs from operas; Piano Music, easy and difficult; Waltzes, Quadrilles, Piano Duets, Songs, Glees, and Sacred Music (Vocal), by Bennett, Balfe, Diabelli, Pulliss, Lebritzky, Strauss, Schubert, and all the first authors. The public will observe the Music is all new, and of the highest class. A few copies of the Instruments and post free. Old instruments taken in exchange.

A LADY, Widow of a Clergyman, residing in a very healthy part of the country, near London, has VACANCIES now for two or three young Ladies, or a Family where Parents are [illegible], or Orphans, where they would have every advantage of the best teachers and the comforts of a home. Unexceptionable references and testimonials. A. M. FRANCIS SMEDLEY'S, Esq., 40, Jermyn-street

STUDIES for DRAWING, 114, New Bond-street, and 168, Regent-street. DICKINSON'S STUDIES are NOW OPEN, with Classes, conducted by able Artists, for the study of the figure and landscape. The scene of Drawings (or life and in miniature) belonging to the Circulating Portfolio has been greatly increased.

CIRCULATING PORTFOLIO of WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS by the BEST MASTERS. Messrs. DICKINSON beg to call the attention of Amateurs and Artists that they have on hire Drawings by all the First Masters of the day, viz. Harding, Prout, Cox, Fielding, Copestake, Bentley, Callcott, Hunt, &c. Can be sent to any part of the United Kingdom
DICKINSON and Co., 114, New Bond street

DRAWINGROOM, LIBRARY, and DINING-ROOM CARPETS, Rugs, Hearth Rugs, Stair Rugs, Carpet-stocks, Tables, Watercastors, Inkstands, Paper-weights, &c., imported and manufactured by JONES and CO., 204, Tottenham-court-road, 18, Strand, and 3, Percy-street, Bedford-square

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES, and £10 10s. GOLD LEVERS, at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House, are warranted not to vary more than five minutes per week. The great reduction of price now sales and rivalry, either of the Swiss manufacturers or any other house, for those advertised at lower prices are foreign work. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s., one will be sent free.—Jones's Sketch of Watchwork, Free for 24 Stamps.

HARLEY'S WATCH MAKERS, Gentlemen's Gold Watches £5 10 0
Ditto Silver Ditto 3 3 0
Strong Gold Levers 10 10 0
Ditto Silver 6 6 0
Ladies' Gold Watches 5 5 0
Ditto Silver Ditto 3 3 0
Youths Silver Ditto 2 2 0
Gold Jewelled Compensation Balance 7 0 0
Good Dapker Ditto Ditto 3 0 0
Ditto Silver Ditto Ditto 2 2 0
All the above Watches have every modern improvement, are properly jewelled, and carefully regulated, warranted to keep accurate time.—HARLEY and CO., 281, High Holborn. Some time ago new of this late Theatre, the Manufactory of, 281, High Holborn, Oxford-street. Observe, the only genuine Watchmakers of the name in London

A GOLD WATCH and fine GOLD CHAIN, complete, to match, for £8 10s, at SARL and SONS, 16, Gracechurch-street. The horizontal construction, invented by four hands, of the fast-famous style, with exquisitely engraved fine gold cases, and chains, which is now one of the standard works on the branch of science of which it treats.—Professor Dunbar's Speech in the Caledonian Horticultural Society.
ADAM and CHARLES BLACK, Edinburgh

NEW EDUCATIONAL WORKS
The Forty-sixth Thousand
Price One Shilling, cloth extra, 1s. 6d.,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING BOOK.—This work is rendered peculiarly attractive by the EASY MECHANISM OF READING AND SPELLING, which ensures rapid and permanent improvement by beginners, and by the PLEASING ORIGINAL READING LESSONS which are calculated to interest the learner to advance of his own accord; while the whole is ILLUSTRATED BY UPWARDS OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY ENGRAVINGS, from WOOD-CUTS of superior [illegible] across description, formed up by far the most alluring introduction to learning ever published. (144 Pages.)
A few Copies are Coloured, price Two Shillings

New Edition, 20,000.
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON READING BOOK. Containing to the ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING BOOK Complete a series of Lessons on the most interesting and instructive subjects, selected with great care from the best English authors, in prose and verse. The whole handsomely illustrated with above TWO HUNDRED and FIFTY ENGRAVINGS, price 2s.

Price 3s. a New Edition of
THE ILLUSTRATED NEW TESTAMENT
Authorised Version, with upwards of 180 Engravings, beautifully bound in cloth, embossed and gilt sides, gilt edges. The Illustrations are from drawings executed by eminent artists, expressly for the Edition, which are historical, descriptive, and descriptive and moral, and the latest Panoramic Picture of the Holy Land, and a View of Lower Egypt, showing the route of the Israelites from Egypt to the Land of Canaan; presenting at one view the principal cities and places mentioned in the Old and New Testament, assisted by 168 references
The Nonpareil Edition, in paper covers, price 2s 6d.

In the press, and shortly will be published, price 9s.,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON INSTRUCTOR, a Companion to the "Illustrated London Reading Book." Designed for a more advanced class of students in connexion with the Schools, the classical authors from the earliest records of British History to the Present Time, with an Introductory Chapter upon the Arts of Elocution and Composition. The latter will include a treatise on Reading, the leading of the Scriptures, and also on Public Speaking, and will also point out by new but examples the rules to be avoided by all who desire to become correct and easy good readers and speakers, by an eminent writer of their many acquaintance.
In preparation, a Series of Useful and Amusing Books, profusely illustrated with Engravings, of which due notice will be given.
The Trade and Schools supplied on liberal terms, for cash only.
Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, London, and sold by all Booksellers.

RIGG and SON, OLD BOND-STREET, SELLING OFF.—In consequence of Mr Rigg retiring from business, the whole of the Rich and Valuable Stock of Velvets, Chine, Brocha, Glace, and Fancy Silks, Laces, Shawls, Mantles, &c., is now on Sale, at very reduced prices. 22, Old Bond-street, late Tinkler, Rigg, and Co.

TO LADIES VISITING or LEAVING TOWN.—STAGG and MANTLE respectfully solicit an inspection of their STOCK of British and Foreign Manufactures in SILKS, MUSLINS, BAREGES, &c. In Single Skirts at 9s 6d; Double Skirts, 1s 6d, 1s 11d, 2s 3d. Rich brocades (3 wide), 3s 11½d. Fast black Glaçés, 1s 6½d. Ditto, satinettes, 2s 9½d.
Patterns forwarded to any part of the country free of charge.—1, 2, and 3, Leicester-square.

NEW SILK, MUSLIN, and LACE MANTLES, Capes, Jackets, &c., of the latest and most approved Parisian fashion.—HAYWARDS (Biddle and Co.) respectfully invite the attention of Ladies to their Mantle Department, which is now supplied with a pleasing and elegant variety, from the simple Mantle, suitable for young Ladies, at a very moderate price, to the splendid Mantle, beautifully trimmed with black lace, and now the prevailing fashion.—Haywards (Biddle and Co.), Lacemen, 81, Oxford-street, opposite the Pantheon, London; and 37, King's-road, Brighton

BLACK FLOUNCINGS, SHAWLS, and SCARFS.—BLACK LACE.—Also an extraordinary IMITATION of the same, of Nottingham manufacture, at a very moderate price, at HAYWARDS (Biddle and Co.) Lacemen to the Royal Family, Established 1770. Their present Stock in the Manufacture of Lace to an extensive variety of articles of the newest and most style of fashion in make—BLACK GOODS, comprising Mantillas, Jackets, Coatees, Sleeves, Cannons, Berthes, Chemisettes, Cuffs, Collars, Veils, Scarfs, Barbes, and most expensive kind. HONITON and BRUSSELS LACES of all descriptions. Patterns of Laces sent by post, on application. Observe, the Lace Department is under the same reference in London Address, HAYWARDS (Biddle and Co.), Lacemen, 81, Oxford-street, opposite the Pantheon, London; and 37, King's-road, Brighton

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN.
Established in 1778.
INFANTS' BASSINETTES and BASKETS, and LADIES' WEDDING and GENERAL OUTFITS for HOME, INDIA, and the COLONIES, are supplied by JOHN CAPPER and SON, 93, Gracechurch-street, London, and 5, Sparrow-street, Cheapside, under competent Female superintendence. The prices are economical, the materials and needlework excellent.
BABY LINENS, or apparel work, decidedly CHEAP.
Parcels of £3 sent throughout the Kingdom, by the railway carriage.
Lists of prices, which may be returned, SENT for inspection on receipt of a London reference, or money-order.
LISTS, with PATTERNS, sent POST FREE.

BONNETS.—PARISIAN MILLINERY.—To Cash Purchasers wishing to avoid the charges of private Milliners. Compare the following prices:—French Satin or Glacés Silk Bonnets, all colours, Cap, Ro., complete, 12s 9d to 16s 9d; Mourning Satin, or Crepes, rich trimmed, patent Crape, 10s 6d to 14s 6d; Windows' Bonnets, Cap, Ro., Crape Bands, 14s 9d to 18s 6d, White or Black Lace, elegantly finished, 15s to 18s 6d; Aeroplane Crape, all colours, Crape Ro., as Paris and Lyons, 18s to 21s 6d; Paris Crape for Brides, One Guinea each; Fine Sewn Chips, 2s 6d to 10s, White Sarcenet Chips, 5s 11d to 9s 11d; Drawstable Whole Straws, the new shape, 3s 11d to 5s 11d; Fine Rice Straws, 3s 11d to 5s 11d, Leghorn Hats, Prince of Wales shape, 5s 11d; very fine, at 8s 11d. More fashionable or more moderate Bonnets cannot be produced at the price, and the largest stock in London to select from, for Cash only, at Cranbourn House, No. 39, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square.—Proprietors, E. WOOKEY and Co
* * Country Milliners supplied with Patten Bonnets monthly.

PATTERNS
Of the following NEW SILKS, BAREGES, MUSLINS, &c., sent POST FREE.
To any part of the United Kingdom Canada, India, America, and the Colonies.
Address
KING and CO., SILK-MERCERS, 243, REGENT-STREET.
RICH STRIPED and CHECKED SILKS, at 18s 6., and 21s 6d the full dress.
Black, White, and Coloured
RICH GLACÉ SILKS, at FOUR AND SIX 6d. wide, at 12s 6d and 30s the full dress
RICH BROCADED FIGURED SILKS and SATINS, at 30s and 37s 6d the full dress
RICH STRIPED and CHECKED SATINS, and MOURNING SILKS, at 30s the full dress
FRENCH BAREGES, MUSLINS, and PERCALES, at 6s 6d, 8s 6d, and 10s 6d the full dress
BLACK and WHITE LACE FLOUNCINGS, 6 wide, 2s 9d per yard
V. ALENCIENNES FLOUNCINGS, 6cm 9d per yard
Shawls, Mantles, Lace Veils, Lace Dresses, Stockings, &c, [illegible] cheap
KING and CO. 243, REGENT-STREET, LONDON.
* * Parcels above the value of £5 sent carriage free.

THE CITY OF LONDON MOURNING WAREHOUSE, 16 and 17, Cheapside.—Having completed a union of two houses in his warehouse, the proprietor, ROBERT TURNER, respectfully tenders his best thanks for past favours, and begs to announce to the nobility, gentry, and the public generally, that conducting business within his character to his house for so many years past will be strictly adhered to. Every article in all arrises required in mourning to the same commercial standard which enabled him to receive the support of the nobility, gentry, and the rapid increase of his business. Replete with all the meritorious properties of the house combined, viz., SILKS, SATINS, CRAPES, SHAWLS, BONNETS, and MILLINERY, the City of London Mourning Warehouse will be found to contain a well chosen variety in each particular department, and the prices arranged on a scale of profit and moderation of which can only be maintained by a strict adherence to ready money business, and the long experience of thirty-five years' experience. The work-room establishment is arranged to execute the largest order in a very few hours.—16 and 17, Lingate hill. R. TURNER, Proprietor.

BEECH and BERRALL are now offering some of decided bargains in silks, Printed Muslins, Baltarines, Bareges, &c., &c., all of the season's production (and cut in any quantity).
Address BEECH and BERRALL, 63 and 64, Edgeware-road.
N.B.—All parcels to the amount of £5 forwarded to any part of the country carriage paid.

EASTERN COUNTIES RAILWAY.—On and after the 10th instant the following REDUCED RATES for [illegible] TI KETS will be in operation.

Between LONDON and	FIRST CLASS.				SECOND CLASS
	Single	Single Day	Return within 7 days	Return Tuesday Thursday	Single	Single Day	Return within 7 days	Return Tuesday Thursday
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Mile-end	0	9	0	7	0	4	0	3
Bow	1	0	1	0	0	6	0	4
Stratford	1	3	1	2	0	7	0	5
Forest-gate	1	6	1	4	0	8	0	6
Ilford	1	9	1	8	0	10	0	7
Romford	2	0	1	10	0	11	0	8
Brentwood	2	3	2	0	1	0	0	9
Shenfield	2	6	2	2	1	1	0	10
Ingatestone	2	9	2	4	1	2	0	11
Chelmsford	3	0	2	6	1	3	1	0
Witham	3	3	2	8	1	4	1	1
Kelvedon	3	6	2	10	1	5	1	2
Colchester	3	9	3	0	1	6	1	3
Tottenham	1	0	0	10	0	6	0	4
Hackney	1	3	1	0	0	7	0	5
Clapton	1	6	1	2	0	8	0	6
Stamford-hill	1	9	1	4	0	9	0	7
Stoke Newington	2	0	1	6	0	10	0	8
Edmonton	2	3	1	8	0	11	0	9
Enfield	2	6	2	0	1	0	0	10
Walthamstow	2	9	2	2	1	1	0	11
Walham	3	0	2	4	1	2	1	0
Chesbunt	3	3	2	6	1	3	1	1
Broxbourne	3	6	2	8	1	4	1	2
Hoddesdon	3	9	2	10	1	5	1	3
St. Margaret's	4	0	3	0	1	6	1	4
Ware	4	3	3	2	1	7	1	5
Hertford	4	6	3	4	1	8	1	6
Bishop's Stortford	5	0	3	10	1	10	1	8
Sawbridgeworth	5	6	4	2	1	11	1	9
Harlow	5	9	4	4	2	0	1	10
Bishop's Stortford	6	0	4	6	2	1	1	11
Cambridge	6	6	4	10	2	3	2	0
Newport	6	9	5	0	2	4	2	1
Audley-end	7	0	5	2	2	5	2	2
Witham	7	6	5	4	2	6	2	3
Saffron	8	0	5	6	2	7	2	4
Maldon	8	6	5	8	2	8	2	5
Braintree	9	0	5	10	2	9	2	6
Chesterford	9	6	6	0	2	10	2	7
Whittlesford	10	0	6	2	2	11	2	8
Marks Tey	10	6	6	4	3	0	2	9
Southcot	11	0	6	6	3	1	2	10
Sawbridgeworth	11	6	6	8	3	2	2	11
Harlow	12	0	6	10	3	3	3	0
Bishop's Stortford	12	6	7	0	3	4	3	1
Cambridge	13	0	7	2	3	5	3	2
Newport	13	6	7	4	3	6	3	3
Audley-end	14	0	7	6	3	7	3	4
Witham	14	6	7	8	3	8	3	5
Saffron	15	0	7	10	3	9	3	6
Maldon	15	6	8	0	3	10	3	7
Braintree	16	0	8	2	3	11	3	8
Chesterford	16	6	8	4	4	0	3	9
Whittlesford	17	0	8	6	4	1	3	10
Marks Tey	17	6	8	8	4	2	3	11
Southcot	18	0	8	10	4	3	4	0

Applications to be addressed to Mr. DAVIS, Accountant, Bishopsgate-station.
By Order, C. RONEY, Secretary
Bishopsgate Station, June 1, 1850

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS.—Gentlemen desirous of obtaining Shirts in the very best manner in which they can be made, are solicited to try FORD'S EUREKAS, the most unique, and the only perfect fitting Shirt made. Detailed catalogues, containing lists of prices, and directions for self-measurement, sent post-free. Patterns of all the new coloured shirtings sent post-free, on receipt of six postage stamps.—Richard Ford, 185, Strand, London,

SHIRTS.—E. FLINT continues to supply gentlemen with the Best Shirts, six for 35s: Guth: and Coloured Shirts, also Boys' Shirts. E. J. Single Shirts at Wholesale Prices. FLINT'S old-established Warerooms, 48, Ludgate-hill, London: and 30, King Scond, Brighton

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT is a garment made without gathers. "It may confidently be recommended for its nicety of fit, and great ease and comfort."—Morning Herald. In all qualities and prices, at WILLIAM REID'S, 51, Conduit-street, Regent-street. N.B. Printed flannels for dressing-gowns, cravats, and hose

PARASOLS.—W. and J. SANGSTER respectfully solicit an inspection of their extensive stock of Parasols, emulating of the most elegant and fashionable covers in Glace and figured silks Plain and Moire, Lined and Unlined. Patentees of the ALPACA PARASOLS, which gave such universal satisfaction last year, 22,000 having been sold during the season 140, Regent-street, 94, Fleet-street; 10, Royal Exchange; 75, Cheapside.

ROYAL PAPIER MACHE WORKS and SHOW ROOMS.
JENNENS and BETTRIDGE, Manufacturers, by distinct appointments, to the Queen, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the Royal Family, 4 and 5, Hanway-street West, Belgrave-square, London; and 99, Constitution-hill, Birmingham.

SCHWEPPE'S SODA, POTASS, MAGNESIA WATERS, and AERATED LEMONADE, continue to be manufactured as usual in the largest scale at their several establishments in London, Liverpool, Bristol, and Derby. None is genuine without a label, with the name of their Firm "Schweppe and Brighton SELTZER WATER constantly fresh.—51, Strand, London.

ROOK RIFLES, AIR-GUNS, AIR-CANES, &c., for shooting rabbits, rooks, sea-fowl, &c. with ball; small birds with shot, fish with harpoon and line, &c.—Prices from 63s each. REILLY, Gun-maker, New Road street.

PRELOAR'S COCOA-NUT-FIBRE MATTING WAREHOUSE, 42, Ludgate-hill.—There are many worthless imitations of this much-approved matting, but the best and only genuine fabric is that manufactured by T. PRELOAR and SONS, Lancaster-hill, London.

"GRAHAM and HEDLEY'S ROLL COCOA A perfectly pure, and so well prepared that it will not, with water or milk, a bland, aromatic, substitute, and highly nutritious article of diet."—(Signed) ANDREW URE, M.D., F.R.S., &c., Analytical Chemist and Professor of Chemistry.—Sold retail by Grocers and Tea-dealers; wholesale, at Ons, Swan-yard, Bishopsgate-street

ATMOSPHERIC AIR and COAL GAS, combined in certain proportions, yield an INTENSE HEAT, which can be applied with economy to Chemical, Culinary Manufacturing, and Domestic purposes.—Apparatus for the above, and the PATENT AIR STOPPER VENTILATOR in use in operation at G. RICKETT'S Manufactory, Agar-street, Strand

THE NEW PATENT SHOWER-BATH, and every improved Bath, at reduced prices. Purchasers should not fee do until they have inspected our stock, or sent for Catalogue (gratis and post-free).—R. and J. SLACK, 336, Strand, opposite Somerset House.

COCKERELL & CO.'S BEST COALS ONLY. Purfleet Wharf, Earl-street, Blackfriars; Bacon Wharf, Lower Stamford-street, Pimlico; and No. 1, Coal Exchange. Cash price, 18s per ton

BULLOCK'S SEMOLA.—A highly nutritious and agreeable food, for invalids. Infants. Ladies who are sucking, and persons of delicate constitution, prepared from the finest Genoa wheat, and consisting of the stamina, principle of that grain. Semola is recommended by the profession to mothers of families, as a most wholesome, and invalids generally, as far superior to arrow root, tapioca or other similar articles of food. Sold in packets, 1s, 2s 6d and 5s each, by LLOYD BULLOCK, 22, Conduit-street, London, and all Chemists and Druggists

CITY DOMESTIC BAZAAR!!!—The Proprietor of the above Establishment is desirous of making known to his patrons and the public generally, that he has REMOVED from 33, Ludgate-hill, to 9, Old SAILEY (one door from the Bailey), where ladies will find SERVANTS, with good characters, to suit their approval, and servants may here meet with the acquaintance of speedily being hired. March 29, 1850

IMPORTANT INVENTION for VARICOSE VEINS and WEAKNESS.—SURGICAL ELASTIC STOCKINGS and KNEE-CAPS, for the relief and cure of these painful and frequently dangerous complaints, are drawn on by the application of a gentle and uniform pressure, and are recommended by the faculty for their portability, for which the house has obtained so large a share of public patronage, for 5s 6d, 7s 6d, 10s 6d, 12s 6d, 15s, and 21s each, postage free. All goods ordered arrange free.—At SMITH'S Cabinet, Bedding, and Upholstery Warerooms, 78, Bage-gge-walk road, next door to Clerkenwell Police court.

CARPETS.—BRIGHT and CO.'S PATENT Power-loom BRUSSELS CARPETS.—These Goods are strongly recommended to the Trade and the Public as the cheapest and best that they are woven by Steam Power, and are, therefore, more firmly made than any other Brussels. The back and warp goods, which is the same good quality of Worsted throughout, whereas in the common Brussels the dark colours are generally made of an inferior Worsted. They are printed by a patent process, and by particular machinery and the colours are more durable, and will stand three severe tests than those of any other description of carpet. The most perfect accurate of an almost unlimited variety of shades or colours; patterns are, therefore, more accurate, as there is greater scope for design. They can be offered at a price about 20 per cent below that of goods of equal quality made in the ordinary mode. In quality, in pattern, in variety of colours, and in price, the Patent Power-Loom Brussels Carpets offer great advantages to the Public.—Wholesale, 30, skinner-street, Snow-hill, London. 22, New Bond-street, Brighton

MANY have assumed the use of the word PALETOT; but the ONLY PATENTEES of the design and name are Messrs. Nicoll, the universal outfitters, 114, 116, 118, 120, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill. Merchant Clothiers, Paletot Patentees, and Manufacturers of Coats, who have agents in every principal Town in the United Kingdom and on the Continent. Address as above, NICOLL, REGENT-STREET or CORNHILL. 10 and 22.
N.B. The Paletot Coat forms a department for PALETOTS & Co.

The 116 (the next book) is devoted for MILITARY and DIPLOMATIC UNIFORMS.
No. 114, for youths and every novel or established article of costume.
No. 118 is exclusively for BOYS' and YOUTHS' CLOTHING, of unusual excellence, and at 22 CORNHILL. Specimens of all may be seen.
In each department skilful and intelligent Assistants attend, and the admitted fact, "That an article to be really cheap should be real y good," is practically sustained
WATERPROOF ENGLISH CLOTH and SHIPPING DRESS at the rear in WARWICK-STREET, and CHANGE-ALLEY, in the CITY.
H. J. and D. NICOLL,
114, 116, 118, 120, REGENT-STREET, and 22, CORNHILL.

MEMENTOS of the BEAUTIFULLY made and Mounted in Fine Gold, at about one-half the usual charge. Bracelets in 7s each; Brooches from 6s each; Chains from 3s 6d; Rings from 3s 6d; Devices for Lockets from 1s 6d each. A Book of Specimens sent free to any part of the kingdom for two post-age stamps.—G. DEWDNEY, Artist in Hair, 172, Piccadilly street, City, London

CHILDREN'S HAIR.—PRINCE ROSALIE'S Properties of ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL and ODONTO (its ornitho state, accurately its growth, sustain it in infancy, and continue the possession of healthy vigour, and beauty in age, and prevent [illegible] to the latest period of human life, tortoise and [illegible] of hair, scurf and impurity, and render it the most [illegible] ornament.
* * Many spurious imitations are offered for sale, the purchasers of which are requested to observe that the wrapper of the genuine total loss of their Hair has convinced them that they have been using a compound of mutton suet and perfume, and that original ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL. It is, therefore, highly necessary to see that the wrapper bears the name of ROWLAND & SONS, 67, family bottles (equal to four small), 10s 6d; and double that size, 21s.—Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 67, Hatton-garden; and by Chemists and Perfumers.

COLES'S PATENT TRUSSES are the best in use. Manufactory, 3 Charing cross [illegible]

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, Newtown, London.—The following is a list of Agents for the Sale of MORISON (the Hygeian) MEDICINES, and of the BRITISH COLLEGE MEDICINE, in London and its vicinity:—268, Strand (John Lofts, Jun.), the Egyptian Office. 68, Quadrant, Regent-street; and 253, Cambridge-street, Edgware-road, Mrs Gould; 1, Park-place, Mile-end-road, Mr Lofts, 63, Oxford-street, Dorchester and Hanway, perfumers; 20, Newgate-st, Mr Gee; 22, Cornhill, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, Mr Hall; 4, B

HIS EXCELLENCY JUNG BAHADOOR RIDING UP A GRANARY AT PATNA.

EXTRAORDINARY FEAT AT PATNA.

A CORRESPONDENT at Berhampoor, in Bengal, anticipating the interest attached to the visit to this country of his Excellency Jung Bahadoor, Commander-in-Chief and Prime Minister of Nepaul, has favoured us with the accompanying Sketch of an extraordinary feat performed by his Excellency during his stay at Patna.

The exploit consisted in riding to the summit of a large masonry granary on the back of a hill pony, which animals are famous for their sure-footedness; and a more trying experiment, both to the rider's nerves and to the pony's paces can scarcely be conceived; the height of the dome is about 200 feet, with two most peculiarly awkward and dangerous staircases leading to the summit.

This granary was the first of an intended series proposed to be built at all the principal towns in the province of Behar, in order to avert famine and want during the years of excessive drought; the occasion of its being built was the dreadful famine of A.D. 1770, when nearly one-third of the population of Behar was swept away—men eating men, and mothers their children. What prevented the completion of the intended series of these granaries, does not appear. Fortunately, since A.D. 1770, no such famine has again occurred in Behar.

EXHIBITION OF 1851.—On Tuesday, a public meeting was held at Woolwich, in the Riding-school, Royal Artillery Barracks, in support of the proposed Exhibition. Sir Thomas Dowman, C.B., R.C.H., presided.

THE PRELIMINARY CRUISE OF THE ROYAL YACHT TO GIBRALTAR.—The Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, Captain Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, is receiving on board six weeks' provisions and stores at Portsmouth. Next week her officers and crew will be removed on board her from the Royal George yacht hulk, when preparations will be made for the forthcoming cruise to Lisbon, Gibraltar, &c

OLD BELL, BELONGING TO THE CORPORATION OF RYE.—(Engraved at page 381.)—The handle is formed of three cupids standing back to back. The reliefs on the body of the bell represent the story of Orpheus charming the beasts by his music. Orpheus is seated, and fiddling, and a lion standing near him; the other figures are those of a bear standing on his hind-legs, a stork, and a sphynx. Such a design for an article bearing the prayerful inscription "O Mater Dei, memento mei," affords a singular illustration of the curiously mingled feeling of the time (A.D. 1566) in which it was made.

A CURIOUS FACT FOR THE HISTORY OF NEWSPAPER LITERATURE IN THE REIGN OF QUEEN VICTORIA.—The quantity of paper printed and published for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of May 4th was sufficient to cover sixty-two acres, or a space of 171 miles a yard wide; placed sheet upon sheet, it would form a pile 300 feet high; cut into slips of a quarter of an inch wide, it would extend 25,000 miles, or once round the earth. The weight of paper printed was thirty tons; the columns of the letterpress would reach 2197 miles, and would occupy 3660 men during one year to make a fair copy of the whole. The duty received by the Government for the paper alone was £699, and the stamp duty £1041 12s. 8d.; making together, for one week's publication, £1731 12s. 8d. The ink consumed in printing exceeded six hundred pounds in weight; fourteen grains being the average quantity used in printing a single copy of the paper. The following may interest our advertisers:—In an ordinary publication of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS the paper alone, on which any advertisement is printed, is worth considerably more than the sum charged for that advertisement: but on the above date, if a square inch of the paper occupied by an advertisement, and charged about 5s., were cut out of every printed copy, the whole would weigh fifteen pounds, worth about 12s. To this must be added the cost of composition, printing, publication, advertisement duty, stamp duty, and delivery all over the world.

NEW SAFETY YACHT.—Mr. W. W. Bonney, of St. John's, Fulham, has constructed a patent safety yacht; a specimen of which now lies opposite the Royal Humane Society's receiving-house on the Serpentine, in Hyde-park, for the inspection of noblemen, nautical men, and persons interested in saving lives on the coast or rivers, or on board sailing or steam vessels. This yacht, only 13½ feet long, 4 feet 10 inches wide, and 2½ feet deep, sails well when full of water and men, and with 8 cwt. of iron ballast. The disposition of the latter, and certain other improvements, it is stated, render it impossible to capsize her. Life-boats, yachts, fishing, or other boats, may be built on this plan, or it may be adapted to boats, &c. now built. For humanity's sake, such boats should be placed on board all passenger and other vessels, and adopted as life-boats along our coast. The safety yacht is in hull clinker-built, planks of gutta percha (or other materials) cemented and copper-rivetted together; the sides are doubled from the bilge upward to the spar-deck, and are divided into water-tight compartments, as are also the fore and aft parts, and the outer gunwales; the keel and keelson are of iron, the latter is grooved to receive the ribs, and all are bolted together; the deck is double-laid, the upper diagonally, with marine glue; the bilge-timbers are deeper than usual, acting as extra keels; they, with the buoyancy of the outervale, and the iron keel and keelson as counterpoise, ensure safety.

CAPTURE OF CHINESE JUNKS.

THIS gallant affair took place off Hong-Kong, on the 23rd of March, when her Majesty's steam sloop Reynard, Commander Peter Cracroft, captured two piratical junks, and several of their crew. In the Sketch, the pirates are represented in the act of landing on the beach at the foot of the precipitous hills which skirt that part of the coast. Their retreat was attempted to be cut off by a fire of round and grape-shot over them, until a boat from the Reynard detached in pursuit under the command of the First Lieutenant (Fuge) came in the line of fire, and rendered it necessary for it to be discontinued. He succeeded in capturing three of the pirates, and seven more were taken in the junks, on board of which were also three women (one wounded in the head) and three fishermen, two of whom were severely burnt by stink-pots, and the third had a musket bullet through the chest. They defended themselves with more than ordinary courage and obstinacy in the first instance; the pirates numbering upwards of fifty, while there were only fifteen of the unfortunate fishermen and three women; and they did not surrender until two of the latter were killed and five wounded. On the Reynard's approach, upwards of twenty of the pirates jumped overboard, and attempted to gain the beach by swimming; but the distance was too great; and, though a boat was sent as speedily as possible to pick them up, only four were saved, the rest going to the bottom. A few escaped in a small sampan to Green Island; and, though an active search was made for them, the increasing darkness and the numerous and intricate hiding-places which the island affords, rendered it unsuccessful.

The entire number of pirates captured amounted to fifteen, one of whom died on the following day; and the greater portion of the rest were expected soon to expiate their crimes on the gallows, at West Point. Sixteen were drowned, and the remainder have escaped for the present. Captain Cracroft was particular in ordering that the pirates should, if possible, be taken alive.

H. M. S. "REYNARD" CAPTURING TWO PIRATICAL JUNKS OFF HONG KONG

PARLIAMENTARY PORTRAITS.

THE HON. EDWARD HENRY STANLEY, M.P. FOR LYNN REGIS.

THE Hon. E. H. Stanley, whose maiden speech on Sir E. F. Buxton's motion on the condition and prospects of the West Indies was characterized by Lord Palmerston as talented, able, displaying the only example of consistency amongst the promoters of the motion, and reminding the House of the eloquence and tact of his noble father, is the eldest son of Lord Stanley, of Bickerstaffe, and the youngest member of the House of Commons. He was born July 21st, 1826, and educated at Rugby, which he entered in 1840, under the mastership of the eminent Dr. Arnold, and soon after whose sudden death, in 1842, he left the school; and, completing his preparation for the University at home, he entered at Trinity College, Cambridge, and having gained a declamation and other prizes, graduated, in February, 1848, taking mathematical honours and a first class in classics. In March of the same year, within a fortnight from his having left college (Mr. Gregson, who was returned with Mr. Greene at the general election of 1847, having been unseated upon petition), he was called upon to contest the borough of Lancaster in the Conservative interest, in opposition to Robert Baynes Armstrong, a barrister of the Northern Circuit, and Recorder of Manchester and Bolton. After a severe contest Mr. Stanley was defeated, the number polled being—Armstrong, 636; Stanley, 620. Mr. Stanley afterwards unsuccessfully petitioned against the return on the ground of bribery and treating; and, in the June of 1848, left England for America, where he travelled both in the States and Canada, visited almost every town of any importance in the Union, journeyed over the prairies of the Far West, and made his way into the rarely explored territories of the Hudson's Bay Company. At New Orleans, in the February of 1849, he received intelligence of his election, without opposition, for King's Lynn, a borough with which he had not previously had any, either personal or political connexion. Informed of his election, Mr. Stanley lost no time in returning to England, and introducing himself to the constituency who, unsolicited and in his absence, had chosen him as the successor of the lamented Lord George Bentinck—whose ability and zeal, and the position of confidence in which he stood with all classes of Conservatives, were earnestly and with fit tribute to his memory and worth dwelt upon in his address by Mr. Stanley, who further declared himself a Conservative, in favour of Protection, and opposed to the repeal of the Navigation Laws.

THE HON. E. H. STANLEY, M.P. FOR LYNN-REGIS.

During the last session, though never absent from any important debate, and always an attentive listener, he did not attempt to address the House, being probably of opinion that the wisest course a young member can pursue is to prepare himself to speak on every question that comes before the House, but to refrain from speaking until he has become thoroughly acquainted with the spirit and forms of the House, and from all speaking for mere speaking sake.

Shortly after the close of the session, Mr. Stanley again crossed the Atlantic, with the special purpose of seeing for himself the condition of our West Indian possessions, and visited British Guiana, Trinidad, Jamaica—crossed the Isthmus of Panama, and passed down the coast of the Pacific, as far as Guayaquil—crossed the Andes, and spent some time at Quito and in the interior of South America. At George Town, British Guiana, he was entertained at a public dinner given in the October of 1849, and attended by the Governor and all the principal British residents. At Jamaica he remained more than a month, and on his return to this country published the results of his observations and enquiries in a Letter to Mr. Gladstone, under the title of "Claims and Resources of the West Indian Colonies." His speech on Friday night (May 31st) was heard not merely with such attention as the courtesy of the House always accords to first efforts, but with expectations founded upon the high fame of his father as a debater, and which were not disappointed, and upon his own right to speak, from personal inspection of the condition of the very places in debate. He expressed the opinion, founded upon the authority of Colonel Reid, Lieutenant-Governor of Barbadoes, that free cannot compete with slave labour, even in Barbadoes, the most thickly peopled, completest tilled, and highest labourers at lower wages than any other of the colonies; and he drew the conclusion, that the competition, therefore, pressed more heavily upon the other colonies in proportion to the poverty of their soil, the fewness of their labourers, and the consequent higher rates of wages. He argued that the introduction of emigrants from Africa could only meet the emergency by reducing the condition of the labourer to the level of slavery; that the African squadron had not answered its intent, and that no amount of armed force could put an end to a trade where one successful venture was sufficient to compensate for five failures. He urged that England owed a debt to the West Indies. Slavery at first was an English institution. England had abolished slavery, and had professed to compensate the owners for the emancipation of the slaves; but had given, so far as the West Indies were concerned, but £17,000,000, where the commissioners sent out had set down £43,000,000. From Canada to Jamaica, from the St. Lawrence to the Esequibo, he could state, that local thinking men considered that themselves and properties had been made the victims of theories; and he implored the House to consider whether the tendency of present legislation were not to encourage the employment of slave labour, and to neutralise the great Act of Emancipation. He claimed the authority of the late Mr. Deacon Hume and Sir Robert Peel for the opinion, that sugar formed an exceptional case, and that, without inconsistency to Free-Trade, the West Indies might be protected by differential duties as against slave-labour; and this he claimed for them, as a measure of justice.

Our Portrait is from an excellent Photograph.

THE NEW ACT TO ALTER PLEADINGS.—On Monday, the new act, 13 Vic., cap. 16, to enable the judges of the courts of common law at Westminster to alter the forms of pleading, was issued. By virtue of this act the judges will forthwith prepare rules and orders for altering the mode of pleading, &c. in actions at law, and also in the mode of entering and transcribing pleadings, judgments, and other pleadings in actions at law, and in the time and manner of objecting to errors in pleading and other proceedings, and in the mode of verifying pleas and obtaining final judgments without trial in certain cases, and regulations as to the payment of costs, &c. The rules or orders, which will be framed in a few days, are to be laid before Parliament and not to be valid for three months, and may previously be declared suspended by proclamation or resolution. This act, termed "Lord Campbell's act," became operative on Friday, and is now a statute of the United Kingdom, applicable only to the common-law courts at Westminster. It is the first of several practical reforms.

The amount received by the Treasury from the treasurers of the several county courts in England and Wales, from their establishment to the 1st of March, 1850, is £21,500, the whole of which has been advanced to the treasurers of county courts, the funds in whose hands have been insufficient to defray the liabilities of late courts of requests in the respective districts, or the expenses incident to the holding of county courts in the same.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLER, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1850.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 431.—Vol. xvi.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1850. [Sixpence.

SUNDAY IN ENGLAND.

The two words, the "Sunday" and the "Sabbath," are not synonymous. They convey different meanings, and represent different social habits and religious observances. It is essential at the present time, when an over-zealous and indefatigable, though doubtless well-meaning and conscientious, minority of the people are attempting to assimilate the humane and genial Sunday of the Christians to the severe Sabbath of the Jews, that these social and religious differences should be clearly stated and permanently remembered.

The Sunday, as commonly observed in England, and in other parts of Protestant Europe (Scotland alone excepted), is neither a rigidly Jewish, nor a strictly Puritanical day. It is a day of cessation from toil—a day devoted to the exercise of religion—a day in which rational-minded men (forming the large majority of the people) think it not inconsistent with the example of the Saviour, and the inspired teachings of his Apostles, that works of necessity and mercy should be done—and a day, moreover, which the toil-overburdened multitude of cities prize as their peculiar day of blessing, in which they may walk, as well as pray, in the fields, to enjoy the pure breeze of Heaven, and refresh their spirits in communion with nature and the God who made it. The Saviour of mankind walked through the corn-fields with his disciples on the Jewish Sabbath, and was sternly rebuked by the Pharisees and the hypocrites for the desecration of the day which they alleged that He had committed. Every Christian remembers the answer that He gave. The English Sunday has taken the form and spirit of its observance from these ideas, and has become a day in which all necessary, merciful, and charitable work may be done; and a day in which all clearly unnecessary work is left undone: a day of cheerful piety, not of gloomy fanaticism; and a day especially consecrated to the relief of the toiling, and to the harmless pleasure and necessary relaxation of the poor and struggling multitudes of men. It is a day, also, of social arrangement and compromise, in which the baker of a neighbourhood cooks the dinners that otherwise might employ a hundred cooks in a hundred households, and in which one man does a half or a quarter of a day's work, in order that a thousand men may have a day of total cessation from labour.

Very different from the Sunday is the Sabbath of that class of religionists, half Puritanical, half Jewish, who have lately been agitating in and out of Parliament for a "bitter" observance of the day, and who wish to compel all the world to conform to their peculiar notions. Scotland is the Paradise of these, no doubt, highly respectable and piously-minded, but most tyrannical persons; and it is well that the people of England should know the practical effect of the Sabbath which they have instituted there, and which a similar class seek to institute here. No one would object to them, if, in the exercise of their civil as well as religious rights, in the freedom of their own consciences, and in the observance of what they may firmly believe to be a solemn duty towards their Creator, they should refrain from all labour, necessary as well as unnecessary, merciful as well as unmerciful, on the Sunday; that they should neither wash their hands nor their faces; nor clean their boots, nor allow them to be cleaned; nor cook, nor take a walk in the fields; nor smile, or even so much as look cheerful, on the Sabbath-day. If they please, they may carry their fanaticism to these, and even to greater lengths, and call it religion; but when they invoke the aid of the Legislature to compel the whole community to conform to the same gloomy rigidity, the principles both of civil and religious liberty are outraged, and the heart as well as the intellect of the country revolts against the tyranny. In the northern portion of this island, the Sabbath is outwardly observed in conformity with these ideas; and the practical and well-known, but most deplorable, results are the gross oppression of the poorer classes, and a vast increase of public immorality. The law stops the running of public vehicles in Scotland upon the Sabbath, and prohibits railway-trains, stage-coaches, omnibuses, and steam-boats. But the law cannot prevent a man from employing his own carriage and horses to travel whithersoever he pleases. The rich man rides out for pleasure, for change of air, or to perform works of necessity, charity, or mercy. If he desire to visit a dying friend or relative, who resides beyond the limits of ambulation, his carriage is at command, and post-horses are to be had for money, although the railway-train or the steam-boat may not be available. But the inexorable law of the Ultra-Sabbatarians, powerless against the rich man, is all-powerful against the poor. The toiling mechanic or labourer, and the small tradesman of a town, may, it is true, hire a cab, if he can afford it, but he cannot take his seat in the cheaper and more convenient omnibus. He cannot go into the fields beyond comfortable walking distance; and if his father, his mother, his wife, or his child were dying on the Sunday morning at thirty miles' distance, within an hour's ride by the railway, and desired, as the last blessing which this world could afford, to see his face before yielding up the immortal spirit, he could not be allowed to perform the solemn duty of once more beholding the object of his affection. The rich man might obey the dictates of nature and piety, and rise above the law by paying for the privilege, but the poor man could have no such opportunity. To such an extent has this gloomy and unsocial fanaticism been carried, that at a meeting of the Sabbatarians, at Glasgow, three or four years ago, a minister of the Gospel declared, before a large and approving audience, that were his wife dying in Edinburgh on the "Sabbath" day, and requested to see him before she expired, he would not travel on that holy day to gratify her wish! We believe that not even the Ultra-Sabbatarians in the House of Commons would act upon their Sunday in the manner of this zealot upon his "Sabbath." But such are some of the results of Sabbath fanaticism in a country where law and opinion have sanctioned the "bitter" observance of this day of rest. Another result is, that the law, though it can compel the outward, cannot compel the inward observance. It cannot compel the jaded mechanic to forego the fresh air altogether, and pass the whole day in the crowded town. It cannot force him to go to church; but, in its practical operation, it can and does force him into the whisky-shop. Any one who has been in the streets of Paisley, Edinburgh, Dundee, Greenock, or Glasgow on a Sunday, must have observed the crowds of listless, sickly, intemperate men, loitering at the corners, leaning against posts, smoking pipes, and indulging in vulgar and obscene conversation. Ultra-Sabbatarianism has not been able to refine the minds of these men; but it has been enabled to brutalize them, by making the Sunday a day of gloom instead of cheerfulness—a day of vacuity, instead of repose. It has denied them cheap excursions by railway or by steam-boats, to scenes of natural beauty and magnificence, where even the rudest of men sees God in his works; where the sickly find health; and where the unreflecting are taught by the great moralities of nature to lift their minds above the immoralities of the town: but it has not denied—because powerless to do so—the more sensual and degrading indulgences of the whisky-shop and worse places.

CHRIST WITH THE DISCIPLES IN THE CORN-FIELD."—PAINTED BY HENRY WARREN.—EXHIBITION OF THE NEW SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER-COLOURS.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

We do not imagine that the people of England really wish to change their Sunday into such a Sabbath as we have sketched (and, for the truth of the portraiture, we appeal to every intelligent Englishman who has ever passed a Sunday in Scotland). For this reason they should be on the alert to mark with their strong and immediate disapproval the efforts of those men in Parliament, and out of it, who of late years, and more particularly at the present time, have set their faces against even the necessary and charitable labour performed by a few for the social advantage and the religious convenience of all. Their great object at present is to stop the whole operations of the Post-office in London and in the provinces from twelve o'clock on Saturday night to twelve on Sunday night. Favoured by an accidental majority, obtained in a thin House, they have addressed the Queen, praying for an inquiry into the whole subject, which her Majesty, acting on the advice of Ministers—who but a few days previously recorded their sentiments on the opposite side—has resolved to grant. If as successful as they wished on this point, their next step would be to stop travelling, and forbid the running of railway trains, steam-boats, and omnibuses. They would restrict the power of locomotion on the Sunday to the wealthy alone; they would extinguish the fire in the baker's oven, and force many scores of poor men, whose only opportunity of dining comfortably with their families occurs on the Sunday, to eat cold the only joint that they can afford to buy, or force their wives to cook it at an expensive rate, and with much discomfort and labour. They would shut out the poor London mechanic and his family from Greenwich, Richmond, and Bushy Park, unless he chose to walk, and perform the hard labour of carrying his infants in his arms. They would, practically, confine him to the public-houses and gin-palaces, or the Sweedenbalis, and to the delights and indulgences which those too familiar places would afford him. The common sense, as well as the social habits of the people, would not tolerate such an interference with the public health, the public morality, and the public liberty. Even if successful in preventing the servants of the nation employed in the Post-office from performing the small labour required of them, in the general interest, the ultra-Sabbatarians could not entirely stop the pulsations of the "mighty heart" of the community. Public necessity would invent other means to accomplish its object; and now and flourishing concerns, acting as Parcels Conveyance Companies for the Sunday, would perform the work of the Post-office, and employ, in all probability, fifty or a hundred times as many men as are now employed by the Government. The only difference would be, that the rich alone could avail themselves of the new system. Some years ago a Sabbatarian in the House of Lords objected altogether to Sunday trains, but, after some discussion, he so far yielded to the arguments of those who urged their necessity, as to assent to the running of a morning and evening train, provided that no second and third class carriages were attached to it. The ultra-Sabbatarians, though we must do them the justice to admit that they may not be aware of the tendency of their proposed legislation, act in the spirit of this zealous member of the Upper House, and interfere, not with the comforts of the rich but with the necessities of the poor. There is, however, but little danger that they will be intimately successful. They have snatched, by accident, a small victory, and there their triumph will end. As friends of the better, and not of the bitter, observance of the Sunday—as friends of cheerful religion—and remembering the Divine words, that the Sabbath was ordained for the benefit of man, and that man was not made that he might be a slave to the Sabbath, we trust that the Sabbatarians will content themselves with keeping the day in the manner most consonant with their own principles; and that they will allow others, who have as much right to liberty of conscience as they have, the quiet enjoyment of the same privilege.

EXHIBITION OF THE NEW SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER-COLOURS.

In our notice of the opening of this popular Exhibition, we characterised the painting of "Christ with the Disciples in the Corn-field," by Mr. Warren, the President of the Society, as the great work of the collection in point of size and prominence. Upon the preceding page we have engraved this masterly production. It is No. 76 in the catalogue, where, appended to the description line, is the following text:—

> At that time, Jesus went on the Sabbath-day through the corn; and his disciples were an hungered, and began to pluck the ears of corn, and to eat.
>
> But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the Sabbath-day.
>
> But he said unto them, Have ye not read what David did, when he was an hungered, and they that were with him?—Matthew, xii. 1, 2, 3

For the felicitous composition of the picture, and the nice rendering of the landscape portion, we have already awarded high praise to the painter.

EXHIBITION AT THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

The Exhibition of Old Masters, opened on Monday last, at the British Institution, is not by any means a favourable display of the riches of this country in works of art. Yet it should be seen, and will well repay a visit. There is more, however, to instruct than to admire.

The Italian, Spanish, Flemish, and French schools of art are very imperfectly represented by third-rate specimens; and many of these with more than doubtful names affixed to them in the catalogue. The "Promotheus" by Rubens, belonging to the Duke of Manchester, is, it is true, a noble example of Rubens' knowledge; but it is not a pleasing specimen, and is rather a gallery picture than a picture for a private collection. The small landscape by Rubens (the property of Mr. Rogers, the poet) is a well-known and much-admired picture of this favourite painter. The Vandykes, seen there in number, are none of them genuine.

The Dutch school is well supported by a long and large landscape, by Cuyp, the property of J. J. Martin, Esq., and only recently brought to light from the lumber of a back garret; by Lord Carlisle's small water-piece, by the same delightful painter; and by Mr. Hope's Ruysdael and Adrian Vandervelde.

A poor insipid picture, said to be by Greuze (No. 131), is a solitary example of the French school.

Of pictures painted in England by foreign artists, Lord Yarborough's three-quarter portrait of Henry VIII., by Holbein, is a choice example. The face has been somewhat rubbed, but the dress is perfect, and full of beautiful Holbeinesque detail. This interesting historical portrait was presented by the Monarch himself to Sir James Worsley, the ancestor of Lord Yarborough. A still finer picture, by Holbein, of the same Monarch, is at Warwick Castle.

Three portraits, in one place, by Cornelius, of the time of Charles I., and two portraits in one, by old Stone, a painter of the same reign, are of importance in the history of art in this country. They are the property of the Duke of Northumberland.

Two portraits, male and female, by Hogarth, are full of character and colour. Sir Joshua Reynolds is not ill-represented by a hit-kat of Mrs Braddyll, so charming, engraved by Watson, as "The Snake" and "The Fancy Dress Wedding" more than sustain the reputation of Wilkie. "A Scene from Molière," by G. S. Newton, is replete with character—something between Wilkie and Leslie, and rich in a tone of colour which Mr. Frith seldom fails to imitate successfully. "A Sea-shore Scene," by Collins, is not a good specimen of the master. Two small landscapes, by Crome, of Norwich, fully entitle him to the appellation he loved the most—that of the Norfolk Hobbema.

A very characteristic likeness of Claverhouse, at the age of twenty, by an unknown artist, is hung too high to be seen to advantage. The face is full of chivalry and honour. At the period when the picture was painted Claverhouse was in the French service.

FINE ARTS.

MR. BRASSEY.—A portrait of this eminent railway contractor has been painted by Mr. Newenham, for its subscribers, who have been limited to the agents and sub-contractors of its subject, and who are so numerous, that a subscription list, to which no sum was permitted beyond ten pounds—and many sums were as low as one pound—amounted to no less than fourteen hundred pounds. This may suffice to show the extent of Mr. Brassey's undertakings, which at one time, we are told, occupied as many as 30,000 persons in his service and employ. The portrait in question does great credit to the artist: it is exceedingly unassembable, and the attitude is one of remarkable ease. In the manipulation of the drapery, also, much skill is evident. It strikes one at once as the veritable likeness of a man of extensive business, in his ordinary habit, and at his daily occupation. The countenance is bland and benevolent, and the whole bespeaks a generous and intelligent mind. The work is intended for a present to Mrs. Brassey, after being engraved for distribution among the subscribers. It was still on view at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi-terrace.

MR. BEHNES' STATUE.—The statue of the "Startled Nymph," by Mr. W. Behnes, is now exhibiting at the gallery of Messrs. Graves, Pall-Mall. The object of terror is the lizard, to which her attention is suddenly directed. She looks downward at it with intense anxiety, the whole attitude being expressive of surprise and fear. The whole is distinguished by elegance and taste, and the work is worthy of being found hereafter in the collection of the well-instructed amateur.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

Whilst friends and foes alike, with equal ill-will, discuss the new project for increasing the salary of the President of the Republic, Louis Napoleon seeks popularity by mingling amongst the people with all the affectation of equality, and of the free and easy tone of manner and intercourse presumed to be characteristic of society in a Republic; while, at the same time, he takes care to infuse so much of the style of a Royal "progress" into his journeyings as may be thought appropriate to the dignity of the Grande Nation, and indicative of the necessity for an increase of his civil list. On Saturday he left Paris, by the Northern Railroad for St. Quentin, to preside there at the opening of a branch line.

He was very well received at the various stations along the line of railway; and on his arrival at St. Quentin, at two o'clock, he found the Bishop and clergy, and all the local authorities of the district, the National Guards, and soldiers of the line, assembled in readiness to receive him. Upon his descending from the train in front of the station, at a little to the right, were placed fauteuils for the President and the Ministers. The Bishop of Soissons, in full pontificals, assisted by the Vicar-General and a numerous body of clergy, performed the religious ceremony. As soon as each person occupied the place allotted to him, the Bishop, with mitre on head and crozier in hand, advanced a few paces to where Louis Napoleon was seated, and addressed him in the midst of universal silence. He said that religion was happy when blessing the useful industry of man, and calling down the favour of Heaven on the improvements and inventions useful to mankind. He congratulated the President on the readiness with which he had yielded to the wishes of the inhabitants to open in person the railroad. He reminded him that his uncle had also visited, when Consul, in 1801, when Emperor, in 1810, that spot, to encourage and hasten on the immense work of the canal of St. Quentin. The President replied in a becoming manner to the Prelate; and immediately afterwards the engines advanced to receive the Episcopal benediction. The Bishop descended from the platform, and sprinkling holy water on the engine, pronounced three sacramental words. The President took from the Bishop's hand the Bishop's ring, and received his paternal benediction in return. He then mounted on horseback, and, accompanied by the ministers and his orderly officers, proceeded to the spot where the National Guards of St. Quentin and the neighbouring towns were drawn up. Having reviewed the troops, the President proceeded to the theatre, where a banquet was served up at half-past six o'clock. Ten long tables extended over the stage and pit united. The hall was splendidly decorated and lit, and crowded with spectators, for the greater part ladies. The President had on his right the Mayor of St. Quentin, M. Baroche, the Bishop of Soissons, and General d'Hautpoul. Baron Rothschild, the director of the railway, MM. Bineau and Lacuée, Messrs. Fould and Achille Fould, were on his left. When the dessert was served the Mayor delivered a short address of thanks to the President for attending the inauguration, and the President replied in a suitable speech.

He returned to Paris on Monday night, having expended 20,000 francs in various donations for local purposes of charity.

With respect to the proposed measure of augmenting the salary of Louis Napoleon, the committee of the Chamber, to which it was referred, appear to have not yet agreed on any resolution, and the members of the committee keep the nature of their deliberations a secret. There appears to be no doubt of the intention of all parties to come to a compromise, but it is not yet known what shape it will take. The Mountain party seem disposed to do something beyond paying the President's actual debts, but they cannot agree as to what the further concession will be. A considerable number of members, who do not approve of giving a permanent allowance of 3,000,000f. to the President, and who still do not see how Louis Napoleon can accept of less, after his formal declaration that he would not agree to any modification, are disposed to grant the full amount of his demand, but to limit it to one year; so that the question will be again brought forward this time next year.

M. Thiers set Paris for England on Monday evening, for the purpose of paying a friendly visit to the ex-King of the French, whose health is in a very unsatisfactory state. M. Thiers, before starting, took leave of the President of the Republic, and acquainted him with the object of his travel, who only appreciated the sentiment of propriety and delicacy which led to it. It was added that Count Mortier, who left Paris for Normancy some days since, also purposed paying a visit to the exiled Monarch.

PRUSSIA.

The Government have availed themselves of the late attack on the King to promulgate a decree restricting the privileges of the newspaper press. It contains fourteen articles, or paragraphs, supplying the provisions supposed to be deficient in the law of last year. The chief points are the registration of the system of caution-money, varying in amount, according to the frequency of publishing, and the importance of the locality where the journal appears. Non-political papers are exempted, and dangerous and hostile journals are deprived of the privilege of transmission by the Post-office. The introduction of journals from other countries may be prohibited by the Minister of the Interior. The most important provision states that certain offences against the articles of the decree are not to be tried by a jury, but according to the old system.

The decree was immediately put in force. On the 9th instant the National, the organ of the Moderate Democrats, and the Allemd-Post, that of the extreme party, were both seized by the police authorities.

The King is gradually recovering.

By the upsetting of a barge on the Wichsel, nearly 100 persons, forming part of a religious procession, were drowned near Neumark, had been drowned; the greater part of the pilgrims were women.

GERMAN STATES.

The "Rhine-Hessian monster trial," which had been going on for a long-time at Mayence, in Hesse, and incidentally several hundred prisoners implicated in the rebellion of last year, and accused of high treason, has been brought to a close. It being the first case of importance since the introduction of trial by jury, as well as from the number of persons interested, in the result, not only the court itself, and the avenues leading to it, but the whole city was crowded, and steamers and railroads brought an immense influx to bear the verdict. The court opened at seven o'clock in the morning, and the President immediately began summing up the evidence for and against the prisoners. His speech lasted four hours, and the jury then retired to consult, which occupied another four hours, when they returned their verdict of "not guilty" on each of the ninety-seven counts laid against the prisoners, who were forthwith released, to the general joy of the people.

ITALIAN STATES.

Naples supplies the only point of interest this week. The state trials commenced on the 1st inst. There are forty-two prisoners, amongst whom are the ex-Minister, Baron Poerio, Settembrini, and other ex-Deputies. The first day's proceedings closed by the Crown lawyer demanding death for the whole forty-two, as being "accused against the sacred person of the King," by forming a sect called the United Italians. The trial was not concluded on the 4th inst., the latest date of our accounts.

HOLLAND.

On Monday morning, the mortal remains of Prince Maurice, the beloved son of the King, were committed to the earth, amid the sympathy of a large body of mourners and spectators. The Queen has presented Count Von Sylandt, the physician who attended the young Prince with unwearied care, with a valuable gold snuff-box, set with brilliants and ornamented with her Majesty's cypher.

UNITED STATES.

Accounts to the 30th ult. have been received from New York.

All public interest was absorbed in the news of the buccaneering expedition under Lopez against Cuba.

The affair has turned out a complete failure. General Lopez landed at Cardenas, a small town of 3000 or 4000 inhabitants, about 90 miles from Havannah, on the 17th ult. His forces consisted of some 500 men, who took possession of the town after a slight and ineffectual resistance. The garrison, composed of about 60 soldiers, was driven into a church, and, after the loss of three men, surrendered. The General landed in the steamer Creole, which left New Orleans on the 7th inst., and had several other vessels previously left that port with 1000 or 1500 men. The greatest excitement was produced at Havannah by the movements of Lopez. The city was placed under martial law, the resident foreigners were ordered to enrol, several thousand militia were organised, and every preparation was made for a vigorous resistance. The troops at Matanzas amounted to 1500, and 800 were immediately despatched from Havannah to reinforce them and march against Lopez. Three thousand more of 44 guns each were sent to the vicinity of Charges, to keep an eye on Woman's Island, near Cape Catoche, Yucatan, where it was reported a large body of troops were collected.

In the accounts of 4 days later date it is stated that after landing and burning the Government house, the invading troops remained in peaceable possession of Cardenas, but soon proceeded to collect their wounded, and prepare for a safe retreat. They returned on board the Creole, and made their escape to Key West. They were closely pursued by the Spanish pro-steamer Pizarro, but succeeded in getting away. The Governor of Cardenas, with two other officers, who had been taken prisoners, were put on board a fishing-smack, on condition that they should exert their influence to save the lives of those who remained behind.

General Lopez, with one of his aides, Major Sanchez Essnaga, arrived at Savannah shortly afterwards, and were promptly arrested by the United States marshal, under orders from the President, and carried before the judge of the District Court. No one appearing to accuse the parties, and no evidence being presented to authorise their commitment, they were discharged from custody, and left Savannah immediately for Charleston. Such is the termination of a wild and unjustifiable enterprise for the invasion of Cuba, and with it expires the reputation and influence of Lopez as a military leader, he having thus shown himself inadequate to the conduct of even a marauding expedition.

CALIFORNIA.

By the arrival of the steam-ship Crescent City at New York on the 25th ult. from Chagres, we have dates from California to the 21st of April.

A meeting of merchants had been held for regulating the price of gold dust, raising its value from 16 dollars to 17 dollars, and placing it in circulation as a regular currency. The proposal was not received with favour. It was decided to reject the California coins and quicksilver gold in trade. The mines continue to be abundantly productive.

A party of explorers, in search of a harbour in the newly discovered Trinidad Bay, met with a fatal disaster about the end of March, five of them having been drowned in the surf while attempting to land in a boat.

A large fire had taken place in Sacramento city, consuming many warehouses, and a good deal of other valuable property.

CANADA.

The Canada House of Assembly has had under consideration propositions for an Elective Legislative Council and the election of all Government officials, also an address to the Queen to pay the Governor's salary out of the imperial treasury, and for reducing the expenses of the civil list. The address was carried in the Assembly by a vote of 44 to 18. The motion for an elective Legislative Council was negatived by a large majority, there being 13 for and 53 against the change.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

We have received accounts from the Cape to the 13th of April, inclusive. The Cape Town papers publish the heads of a petition, which was to be proposed to the inhabitants for adoption at a public meeting, announced for the 23d of April. It prays for a single legislature for the colony of the Cape of Good Hope, and for a suffrage to be based on the occupancy of a tenement worth £50.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

JUDGMENT.—THE ITALIAN OPERA HOUSE, COVENT-GARDEN, IN RE EDWARD THOMAS DELAFIELD.

On Tuesday, Mr. Commissioner Fane delivered a most able and lucid final judgment in this case, on the opposition to the bankrupt's certificate. He said:—

> This is a very remarkable case, and very unlike those which usually appear in this court. The bankrupt, on coming of age, in 1845, found himself entitled to a fortune left him by an uncle, who died about 1825, which, with its accumulations, amounted to £100,000 and upwards. He was also entitled under his father's will to a reversionary interest of £6000, payable on the death of an aunt. His father and uncle had been partners in the brewery of Combe, Delafield, and Co., and he was entitled to a share in the business, or the winding up of the concern. He thus became entitled to interest on his capital of £40,000 at five per cent., and to a share in the annual profit besides, which usually amounted to £2000. The reversionary interest of £6000, payable on the death of an aunt. His father and uncle had been partners in the brewery of Combe, Delafield, and Co., and he was entitled to a share in the business, or the winding up of the concern. He thus became entitled to interest on his capital of £40,000 at five per cent., and to a share in the annual profit besides, which usually amounted to £2000. His affairs have been fully investigated. At the end of 1848 he was a ruined man. On the 29th of July, 1849, the fiat issued against him. He owns £60,000, his assets about £1000. His affairs have been fully investigated. His creditors are satisfied that the truth has been told—his last examination was passed without opposition, and he now asks for his certificate. The assignee objects, partly on public, and partly on private grounds. The public grounds resolve themselves into reckless personal expenditure, and an unfair making away of his remaining assets shortly before his bankruptcy. The private grounds have reference to the marriage of the bankrupt in March, 1846.

The Hon. Commissioner having then traced the progress of the bankrupt from affluence to destitution, proceeded with the following wise and just observations:—

> He intimated that I ought in granting this certificate to attach the condition that the bankrupt shall pay 10s. in the pound on his debts out of future assets, and a decision something like that in Lord Huntingtower's case may be cited to support me. I do not know the exact particulars of that case; I only know it was very severe law. But I confess I have no inclination to attach such a condition to a certificate in any case. I refused to do so in Sullivan's. The world of ordinary men to whom we live is one in which every man is struggling for himself, and accumulation is struggling for a subsistence in that struggle it is difficult enough for any one to win his way, even with character clear and something to begin with. What, then, must it be for one who has to run the gauntlet encumbered? A company doctrine is far more wholesome one. It is better to lay it down that a creditor shall not have a direct or indirect, upon rich relatives, and thus shock the giving credit to the young and foolish. It is the too great prevalence of that credit which is the life-blood of the bankrupt law—which, though intended to check the unwholesome credit which is given to the idle, such as that given in Lord Huntingtower's case, and which is in this have a tendency to impede that wholesome credit which, by enabling struggling industry to exercise its calling, is the source of public wealth. And on whose benefit am I to impose the burden of this condition? Shall the assignee, or for that of the general body of creditors? If for the assignee, I answer that he knew at the time he lent the money that he was lending to a spendthrift—that the money was to meet past or future extravagance. Why should the law go out of its way to aid such lenders? There are public enemies. They foster extravagance, encourage idleness, and disturb the happiness of families. Even those who advance money to enable others to educate themselves, or go into business, must submit to the loss of what they have lost, if circumstances turn out unfavourable; and if this be the fate of those who advance money for praiseworthy purposes, why should it not be the fate of those who advance money to supply extravagance? I have a the loss of what he has been so sure to lose. No punishment for persons who thus interfere between the young and their natural advisers and protectors.
>
> On the whole, I think, upon full consideration of all the circumstances, that I shall best discharge the duty entrusted to the learned commissioner by withholding without attaching any condition. I hope that the terrible lesson he has received may be of use to him in after-life.

Certificate granted accordingly.

SUMMER CIRCUITS OF THE JUDGES.

On Tuesday, the days for holding the assizes on the Northern, Norfolk, and Western Circuits were finally arranged and fixed by the Judges appointed to preside thereon, viz.:—

NORTHERN.—Judges, Mr. Justice Wightman and Mr. Justice Cresswell.—York, Monday, Wednesday, July 10, at the Castle or York; City of York, the same day, at the Guildhall of York; Durham, Wednesday, July 24, at Durham; Northumberland, Monday, July 29, at Newcastle; Town of Newcastle, the same day, at the same place; Cumberland, Saturday, August 3, at Carlisle; Westmoreland, Monday, August 5, at Appleby; North Division of Lancashire, Wednesday, August 7, at Lancaster; South Division, Saturday, August 10, at Liverpool.

NORFOLK.—Judges, Mr. Baron Alderson and Mr. Justice Patteson.—Buckinghamshire, Saturday, July 13, at Aylesbury; Bedfordshire, Tuesday, July 16, at Bedford; Huntingdonshire, Wednesday, July 17, at Huntingdon; Cambridgeshire, Saturday, July 20, at the County Court, Cambridge; Norfolk, Thursday, July 25, at the Castle at Norwich; City of Norwich, the same day, at the Guildhall of Norwich; Suffolk, Friday, August 2, at Ipswich.

WESTERN.—Judges, Mr. Justice Coleridge and Mr. Justice Talfourd.—Wiltshire, Wednesday, July 10, at Devizes; County of Southampton, Saturday, July 13, at Winchester; Dorsetshire, Friday, July 19, at Dorchester; Cornwall, Thursday, July 25, at Bodmin; Devonshire, Wednesday, July 31, at the Castle at Exeter; City of Exeter, the same day, at the Guildhall of Exeter; Somersetshire, Wednesday, August 7, at Wells; Bristol, City of, Tuesday, August 13.

The days of the Oxford, Midland, Home, and North and South Wales have not been finally fixed.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

ROYAL ASSENT.

The House met at half-past four o'clock, when the Royal assent by Commission was given to the following bills:—Exchequer Bills Bill, Process and Practice (Ireland) Act Amendment Bill, Parish Constables Bill, Acts of Parliament Abbreviation Bill, Sunday Fairs Prevention Bill, Licensed Victuallers and General Fire and Life Assurance Company (No. 2) Bill, Carlisle Gaslight and Coke Company Bill, Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons of Glasgow Bill, Colonisation Assurance Company Bill, Elgin Guildry Fund Society Incorporation Bill, Exeter and Crediton Railway Bill, Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh Bill, Nottingham Freemen's Allotments Bill.

The Lords Commissioners were Lord Langdale, the Earl of Minto, and the Earl of Carlisle.

ENCUMBERED ESTATES

The Marquis of WESTMEATH moved the second reading of the Encumbered Estates Act Amendment Bill, the object of which, he said, was to prevent large estates with very small encumbrances from being sold under the commission; likewise to fix a minimum below which property should not be sold; also to give personal protection to proprietors during the time their estates are being brought under the operation of the act, in order to allow them to look after their affair.

The noble Marquis instanced sales of estates at 7¾, 8, and at even 14 years' purchase, and called on the Government to amend the act, unless they actually desired to see the whole property of Ireland confiscated.

The Earl of CARLISLE admitted that the Irish landlords were involved in circumstances of hardship and inconvenience, but he did not think it would be desirable to disturb the legislation of the last year, and it was not in the contemplation of the Government either to repeal or dispense with any of the leading provisions of the Encumbered Estates Act. It was not to be denied that estates had been sold under the commission at very disadvantageous prices, but, on the other hand, some estates had been sold under it at unexpectedly high prices.

The Duke of RICHMOND remarked that the fact that estates had been sold at 7¾ years' purchase was prima facie proof that the act of last year required amendment.

The Earl of GLENGALL denounced the act as nothing less than downright robbery, confiscation, and plunder, and declared that if Parliament would not grant redress to the people of Ireland, they would meet in Dublin and redress themselves; for they were determined not to allow their property to be torn from them to please the unprincipled agitators of the Manchester school. Not less than fifteen millions of property had been brought under the Encumbered Estates Commission, and he (Lord Glengall) held in his hand fifty cases of properties sold at from 1¾ to 14 years' purchase. He defied the Government to carry out the act. Should they attempt it they would be met by rebellion, and they would deserve it.

The Marquis of LONDONDERRY deprecated such strong language, but was favourable to the bill.

Lord CAMPBELL opposed the bill.

The Earl FITZWILLIAM, Lord BEAUMONT, and the Earl of WICKLOW supported the second reading of the bill.

The Earl of CARLISLE rose again, and said that, having heard from so many of their Lordships a desire that the Encumbered Estates Act should be altered slightly, to the extent that property, when a receiver was appointed, and when the debt due on it did not amount to more than a half of its value, should not be brought within the jurisdiction of the commission, he did not feel himself called on to divide against the bill; he would therefore consent to its being sent down to the House of Commons, there to be considered with another bill (the Solicitor-General's) on the same subject.

Lord STANLEY hoped that the limitation of the discretion of the commissioners would not be confined to the single point indicated by Lord Carlisle, but that they would also be limited with regard to the number of years' purchase at which estates should be sold. Last year their Lordships were assured that the commissioners would never sell estates below their fair and reasonable value; but was 10, 8, 7¾, or 14 years' purchase a fair and reasonable value? The noble Lord asked the Government if they would object to produce a return of the estates sold, the amount of their respective encumbrances, and the number of years' purchase at which the sales were made. Should they produce that return, he believed that it would show that the freehold properties (not head-rents) sold under the commission had not averaged 9, 10, or, at most, 12 years' purchase-money.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE intimated that the required return would be furnished, if moved for. He declared that, in his opinion, it would be unjust and impracticable to attempt to fix a minimum price for the sale of properties in Ireland.

The bill was read a second time.

AUSTRALIAN COLONIES BILL.

Lord BROUGHAM presented a petition from persons interested in the Australian colonies, praying to be heard against the Australian Colonies Bill, either by themselves or by counsel, at their Lordships' bar. The noble and learned Lord moved that the petitioners be heard at the bar.

The Earl GREY opposed the motion, and said he should also object to the motion which Lord Montcagle had placed on the notice paper, viz. that Mr P. Scott be heard at the bar against the bill. The noble Earl objected to hear the petitioners whose case Lord Brougham brought forward, because they were not petitioners against the bill, and he objected to hear Mr. Scott because he was not specially instructed as agent on this bill.

After a lengthened discussion, their Lordships divided—

For Lord Brougham's motion—Contents	.. 25
Non-contents	.. 33
Majority against the motion	.. —8

No division was taken on Lord Montcagle's motion.

On the motion to go into committee on the AUSTRALIAN COLONIES Government Bill,

The Bishop of OXFORD moved, as an amendment, that the bill be referred to a select committee. He considered that if ever a bill was marked by most injudicious handling of great interests, it was this. It was mischievous in almost all its clauses—was a case of ultimate assertion of presumption on the one hand, and of ignorance on the other. The right rev. prelate gave notice of his intention to propose clauses with reference to the position of the Church of England in the Australian colonies.

Earl GREY thought a speech so utterly condemnatory of the bill would have more coma sently terminated with a motion that it be committed that day six months. To refer it to a select committee would, however, though in an indirect manner, lead to the same result—the loss of the measure for the present session. The noble Earl entered at great length into the details of the bill, and defended its principles and provisions.

Lord STANLEY said that if the bill were to be a final measure he should be obliged to vote for the motion to refer it to a select committee; but, as he was anxious to agree to all that portion of it that was necessary to give the colonies the benefit of free institutions, he would consent to go into committee on the bill, provided he got the assurance that the clauses from 30 to 35 would be rejected, and that the clauses providing for a federal constitution would be expunged.

The Earl GREY could not give the required assurances, though he would not consider the rejection of the clauses respecting the federal constitution as fatal to the bill.

Their Lordships divided

For going into committee—Contents	.. 34
Non contents	.. 21
Majority for the Government	.. —13

No progress was made, and the committee on the bill was postponed to Tuesday.—Adjourned at one o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

SUNDAY LABOUR IN THE POST-OFFICE.

Sir GEORGE GREY delivered Her Majesty's reply to the address of the Commons relative to the collection and delivery of mails on the Sabbath, in which her Majesty promised to comply with their request, and to give directions accordingly. This communication was received with loud cries of "Oh, oh!"

Mr. THOMASINE required whether any exemption would be made in favour of foreign correspondence—for instance, in the case of an American packet arriving in Liverpool with letters of the greatest consequence for merchants in London and elsewhere.

Lord J. RUSSELL observed that the directions her Majesty had given were in the terms of the resolutions of the House, and no exemption would be made.

THE NEW HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.

On the report of the Commons Supply,

Mr. HOME moved a reduction of the vote from £103,610 to £100,610, with the view to lessen the amount by the sum proposed in the estimate for the expense of the Commission of Fine Arts, until the Houses of Parliament may be habitable for the transaction of public business.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER opposed the motion. He said that, though he should object to a committee to inquire into the whole proceedings since the commencement of the buildings, he would not object to a committee to inquire into the accommodation of the New Houses.

Sir R. PEEL did not think that Mr. Barry should be held responsible for the alterations from the original design, which had been made at the desire of both Houses of Parliament. The right hon. baronet approved of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's suggestion to suspend operations until a committee shall have reported on the nature and extent of the arrangements necessary for the accommodation of the House.

Mr. B. OSBORNE declared that the ventilation of the new chamber was most defective, and loosely hinted that the Chancellor of the Exchequer entertained the covert design of getting rid of the Country party—his political opponents—by kindling them with foul air in the lobbies on the occasion of some grand division.

Mr. HUME seemed inclined to withdraw his amendment, saying that he would prefer, if he could obtain it, a committee of inquiry.

Mr. B. OSBORNE objected to the withdrawal of the amendment.

The House divided

For the original vote	.. 111
Against it	.. 62
Majority against Mr. Hume's amendment ..	.. 49

Mr. HUME then moved for a committee to inquire into and examine the various reports, statements, and plans of the architect, and into the manner in which the works had been conducted, and into the alterations made, the projected works, &c.

Lord J. RUSSELL said that all the required information would be furnished to the House in a few days, and he, therefore, thought it would be inconvenient to appoint the proposed committee.

The House divided—

For the proposed committee	.. 55
Against it	.. 81
Majority against Mr. Hume's committee ..	.. —30

The report of the vote in committee of supply was then confirmed.

ABOLITION OF THE LORD-LIEUTENANCY OF IRELAND.

On the motion for the second reading of the Lord-Lieutenancy Abolition (Ireland) Bill,

Mr. GRATTAN declaimed against the measure in unmeasured terms, and moved, as an amendment, that the bill be read a second time that day six months.

Mr. HAMILTON should support the amendment, because the abolition of the Viceroyalty had been proposed by the Government as a fragmentary measure. Had the whole administrative system of government in Ireland been remodelled, he might have acted otherwise.

Mr. MAURICE O'CONNELL, Colonel DUNNE, and Mr. GROGAN opposed the bill.

Mr. ROEBUCK and Mr. O'NEALY supported it.

Lord J. RUSSELL defended the measure, as one that was expedient, and that would be productive of beneficial results.

Mr. ANSTEY moved the adjournment of the debate.

Lord J. RUSSELL resisted the motion, and the House divided.—

For the adjournment	.. 63
Against it	.. 188
Majority against adjournment ..	.. 125

Mr. SCULLY made another motion for adjournment; and, after a few observations from Sir R PEEL, Lord J. RUSSELL gave way, and the debate was adjourned to Monday next.

The House adjourned at one o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

The Court of Chancery (County Palatine of Lancaster) Bill was read a third time and passed, on the motion of the Earl of Carlisle.

AUSTRALIAN COLONIES.

The House went into committee on the Australian Colonies Government Bill.

Lord MONTEAGLE moved an amendment to the first clause, with the object of creating a Legislative Council and a Representative Assembly in each of the colonies of New South Wales and Victoria.

Earl GREY insisted that the Australian colonies did not now possess the materials for double chambers. He opposed the amendment.

Lord ABINGER and Lord WODEHOUSE supported the amendment; Lord LYTTELTON and the Earl of St. GERMANS opposed it.

Their Lordships divided—

Contents	.. 20
Non-contents	.. 72
Majority against the amendment ..	.. —2

Lord LYTTELTON proposed the introduction of a clause, after clause 24, enabling the Governors of the Australian colonies to regulate the sale of waste lands, with the advice of their Legislative Councils. On a division, the numbers were—

Contents	.. 18
Non-contents	.. 28
Majority against the amendment ..	.. —10

The Bishop of OXFORD then moved the clause of which he had given notice, enabling the Church of England in the colonies to lay down rules for its own internal government, to emanate from an assembly of the Bishop, clergy, and laity. The Right Rev. Prelate, however, did not press the clause to a division, on receiving an assurance from the Government that an inquiry should be instituted as to the best mode of dealing with the question.

The House resumed, and the report on the bill was brought up.

Adjourned at a quarter to one o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

The House had a morning sitting, which took place in the new building. The discussion, in committee, of the Metropolitan Interments Bill was resumed, and proceeded up to clause 33 inclusive.

The Drainage and Improvement of Land Advances Bill was read a third time, and passed.

At the afternoon sitting,

Mr. MACKINNON moved for a Select Committee to investigate the revenue, condition, and expenditure of Ramsgate and Margate harbours, which, after some discussion, was, on division, carried by 78 to 47: majority, 31.

A proposal by Sir GEORGE PECHELL, to include Dover, was rejected by 71 to 60: majority, 11.

BONDED SPIRITS.

Lord NAAS then moved that the House resolve itself into a committee to take into consideration the present mode of levying the duty on home-made spirits in bond. His Lordship described the different modes in which foreign spirits are estimated for the purposes of duty, and showed the unfairness of the system by which home-made spirits are gauged, without regard to the loss between the time of bonding and the time of selling.

Mr. WILSON said that foreign spirits were subject to a differential duty, which was to be considered as an equivalent for the loss sustained by the waste of home-made spirits in bond. He contended that, in former times, the distillers did actually lose the duty on the waste, because they were obliged to pay the duty immediately on distillation; but upon their application for leave to bond their spirits, they obtained it, and thereby gained a certain credit for the duty; but they ought not to make that circumstance a foundation for a new concession in their favour. He therefore opposed the motion.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER also spoke in opposition to the motion. He declared that, if it were carried, either fourpence per gallon must be added to the duty on home-made spirits, or the amount must be deducted from colonial spirits. The British distiller would, he contended, gain nothing by the change.

The House divided—

For Lord Naas's motion	.. 85
Against it	.. 53
Majority against the Government ..	.. —32

The House resolved itself into a committee of the whole House, Mr. E. B. Roche in the chair, and two resolutions in accordance with Lord Naas's proposal were agreed to, the Chancellor of the Exchequer declining to offer further opposition then, and contenting himself with simply crying "No." The resolutions were reported to the House amidst loud cheers and laughter.

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.

Lord JOCELYN moved for papers not already laid before Parliament, referring to the general question of railway communication in India, together with copies of any correspondence which may have taken place between the home authorities and the Madras Government in reference to the proposed railway between Madras and Arcot. The noble Lord contended that the report of the committee of 1847, and of Colonel Sims, established that the main means of internal communication in India were quite inadequate for the requirements of commerce, and that the construction of railways in that country was most desirable. The object of the noble Lord's motion was to give an opportunity to the President of the Board of Control to state his views respecting the two lines guaranteed.

Mr. WILSON offered no opposition to the motion, but he urged what had been done by the East India Company during the last few years as a proof that they were not chargeable with indifference to railway communication in the country under their administration. He also referred to the great increase that had taken place in the cultivation of indigo and sugar in India, to establish that the productions of that country had not been neglected. The hon. member justified the selection of the Calcutta and Bombay Railways as experimental lines. He assured the noble Lord that the East India Company and her Majesty's Government were disposed to extend the same privileges to the Presidency of Madras as they had to Calcutta and Bombay, as soon as they were in possession of the necessary information. A letter had already been despatched to the Governor of Madras to obtain the requisite information, and no time would be lost in giving that presidency the advantage of a guarantee similar to those given to the other two presidencies. He contradicted the reports lately current respecting the East India and Great Indian Peninsula Railways, and declared that they were progressing in a manner entirely satisfactory to the East India Company and the Government, and that their prospects were better now than at any former time.

Sir J. HOGG declared that the East India Company and the Board of Control had a disposition to give a preference to the Madras line; but the fact was that when they wished to keep the Madras Company alive, it dissolved itself, and therefore it was impossible to support a monopoly. The right hon. gentleman gave an emphatic pledge that no time should be lost in promoting a railway in Madras, and in extending railways through India.

The motion was agreed to.—Adjourned at eleven o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The House assembled in the new chamber.

LANDLORD AND TENANT BILL.

Mr. PUSEY moved the committal of the Landlord and Tenant Bill.

Colonel SIBTHORP opposed the bill, on the ground that it would disturb the amicable relations now subsisting between landlords and tenants. The hon. and gallant member moved, as an amendment, that the bill be committed that day six months.

After a discussion, the House divided—

For going into committee	.. 65
Against it	.. 22
Majority	.. 43

The bill passed through committee, after much debate.

CHANCERY REFORM.

Mr. TURNER moved the second reading of the Court of Chancery Bill, the object of which was to diminish the delays and expenses attend ng proceedings in equity. The hon. and learned gentleman having described the immense quantity of property under the control of Chancery, and given instances of the gross injustice and delays under the present course of proceeding, detailed the principal provisions of his measure, the leading remedy proposed by which was proceeding by special case, to be agreed upon by the parties in the cause. The bill, he said, had been submitted to the equity judges, and had obtained the unqualified approval of Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, and the general approval of the Master of the Rolls. The Lord Chancellor likewise had expressed his entire approbation of the principle of the bill.

The SOLICITOR-GENERAL concurred fully in the object of the bill, and had endeavoured to carry it out in the measure he had introduced, and which was waiting the decision of the House of Lords. The hon. and learned gentleman suggested some improvements in the bill, with the view of carrying out its principle further than was proposed by its framer.

After some observations from Mr. P. WOOD and Mr. ANSTEY, the bill was read a second time.

Mr. T. HODGES moved the second reading of the Burgesses' Lists Bill.

Colonel SIBTHORP opposed the bill; and moved, as an amendment, that it be read a second time that day six months

Alderman SIDNEY, Sir GEORGE GREY, Mr. HUDSON, and other hon. members opposed the bill.

Mr. BERNAL supported it.

The bill was thrown out without a division.

RATING OF SMALL TENEMENTS.

On the motion for the third reading of the Small Tenements Rating Bill,

Mr. P. SCROPE moved, as an amendment, that it be read a third time that day six months.

After a short discussion, the House divided—

For the third reading	.. 94
Against it	.. 15
Majority for the bill	.. —79

The bill was read a third time; but some new clauses having been proposed the debate on them was adjourned.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

THE COURT OF CHANCERY (COUNTY PALATINE OF LANCASTER) BILL.

This Bill was read a third time and passed, after a protest from Lord Campbell, who considered the Bill wholly unnecessary.

UNIVERSITY REFORM.

Lord MONTEAGLE moved for copies of letters addressed by the First Lord of the Treasury to the Universities of Oxford and of Cambridge, on the subject of the issue of a Commission of Inquiry; and copies of any resolutions or communications entered into or made on behalf of those Universities, in relation to the same subject.

The motion was agreed to, after a desultory conversation, in which Lord BROUGHAM [and the Duke of WELLINGTON reiterated their objections to the Commission of Inquiry.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

THE COURT OF CHANCERY (COUNTY PALATINE OF LANCASTER) BILL.

This Bill was read a third time and passed, after a protest from Lord Campbell, who considered the Bill wholly unnecessary.

UNIVERSITY REFORM.

Lord MONTEAGLE moved for copies of letters addressed by the First Lord of the Treasury to the Universities of Oxford and of Cambridge, on the subject of the issue of a Commission of Inquiry; and copies of any resolutions or communications entered into or made on behalf of those Universities, in relation to the same subject.

The motion was agreed to, after a desultory conversation, in which Lord BROUGHAM [and the Duke of WELLINGTON reiterated their objections to the Commission of Inquiry.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

SEWERAGE OF THE NEW HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.

Mr. GREENE rose to ask Viscount Errington whether there was any intention of erecting a steam-engine at the corner of Palace-yard for the purpose of forcing the contents of the sewer to a higher level. If there be such intention, whether it was proposed that such steam-engine shall permanently remain, or is it only to be placed there for a temporary purpose; if for a temporary purpose, how long may it be probably required to remain there? He would ask whether it was the intention of the parties in charge of the engine to stir up the contents of the sewer at this hot season of the year? (A laugh.)

Lord ERRINGTON said there was an intention of erecting a steam-engine in Old Palace-yard. The drainage of the Westminster district had been long under the consideration of the Westminster Commissioners of Sewers with a view to the improvement. The object for which the steam-engine would be erected was for the purpose of bringing the sewer in St. Margaret-street up to the level of the sewer in Great George-street. With regard to the second question, the present state that the engine would remain until the sewer was finished, and it would then be removed and the ground made good. The Commissioners had had great complaints that the sewer was unavoidably necessary.

The County Courts Extension Bill, and the Public Libraries and Museums Bill, passed through committee.

The discussion of the clauses on the Marriages Bill was resumed in committee, and, after some progress was made, the House resumed.—Adjourned.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

SIR GEORGE TALBOT, BART.

SIR GEORGE TALBOT, of Belfast, in the county of Antrim, was the younger son of Captain Henry Talbot, Esq., of Mickleham, Surrey, and Belfast, Antrim, a scion of the great English house of Talbot, who was created a Baronet of Ireland on the 31st May, 1790. Sir George was born on the 14th March, 1763, and succeeded his second cousin Sir Charles Talbot, as third Baronet, in November, 1812. He married, on the 14th May, 1797, Anne, daughter of the Rev. Thomas Preston, of Swainton, by whom he leaves two daughters. Sir George Talbot died on the 10th instant.

JAMES SMITH, ESQ., OF DEANSTON.

THIS eminent agriculturist was born in the City of Glasgow, on the 3rd JANUARY, 1789. His father was a respectable merchant there, whither he had come from his birth-place, Galloway, in the south-west of Scotland. His mother was daughter of James Buchanan, of Carston, a landed proprietor in the west of Stirlingshire. Mr. Smith's father having died when he was only two months old, the care of his education devolved upon his mother, who was aided in her task by five of her brothers, all of them remarkable for enterprise and energy. In Smith they found an apt and ready pupil.

From his earliest youth he took remarkable interest in farming operations, and in the steam engine. When about 14 years old, while at his uncle's cotton-works establishment, at Deanston, in the west of Perthshire, he built by the side of a little brook a miniature cotton-factory, of several floors in height; he constructed a water-wheel and machinery, and having placed it in its proper position, he covered it over with a brick arch, or dome, which required considerable skill in constructing. Mr. Smith, after passing some years at a private school, finished his education at the University of Glasgow. He was appointed to the management of the Deanston works at the age of eighteen, when he had to put all his knowledge and energy to the undertaking of regenerating a dilapidated establishment, and of collecting and training the people, to the amount of eleven hundred. The undertaking, which had so successful a result, absorbed the chief part of his time for several years. He did wonders with the labouring population under him. The village which he built at Deanston for their accommodation was, in all points, a model for imitation. As a proof of his wise and salutary government, there never was a turn-out of his workpeople within a period of upwards of thirty years, though, during the same time, such things were but too rife elsewhere.

Whilst engaged in these valuable avocations, Mr. Smith was one of the most active and useful magistrates of his county, and he served for more than twenty years as Commander of a troop in the Yeomanry Cavalry of the district. Mr. Smith owes his public fame to his numerous suggestions and inventions for the improvement of agriculture. His machine for reaping corn—his turn-wrist plough, for working the fields in one uniform surface, without ridges and furrows—and his web chain harrow, are everywhere known. For a model of his reaping machine sent to the Imperial Agricultural Society of St. Petersburgh, Mr. Smith received a massive gold medal, transmitted through the Russian Ambassador. His own farm, at Deanston, became a point of attraction for all improving agriculturists—a vast number of whom, of all ranks, crowded every year to visit it from the different counties of England, Ireland, and Ireland, and from the continents of Europe and America. Mr. Smith has been the inventor and chief promoter of the modern system of thorough drainage—that is, the drainage through the land by pipe drains, instead of carrying the land by surface drains. He lately acted as one of the Commissioners for inquiring into the means of improving the Health of Towns, and it is feared that he pursued the subject with an assiduity fatally injurious to his constitution. He was especially active in his occupation as a Superintending Inspector of the General Board of Health. Mr. Smith closed his useful career very suddenly. He was, on the 10th instant, found dead in his bed, at the house of his cousin, Mr. Buchannan, of Catrine, Ayrshire, by all who knew him, and particularly by those who were in his employment, the death of this truly great and good man will be deeply lamented. His loss to society at large will be a severe one. He leaves behind him a name deserving of lasting memory and honour in the agricultural records of his country.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL THOMAS GEORGE FITZGERALD, OF TURLOUGH PARK, CO. MAYO.

THE Fitzgeralds of Turlough Park are a distinguished branch of the ennobled stock of Desmond. Their original estates, situated in the county of Waterford, were confiscated for the family's devotion to the Royal cause.

The gentleman whose decease we record was eldest son of the late Charles Lionel Fitzgerald, Esq., of Turlough Park, by Dorothea his wife, eldest daughter of Sir Thomas Butler, Bart., and grandson of Captain George Fitzgerald, of Turlough, by Lady Mary Hervey his wife, sister of Frederick Earl of Bristol. He was born 5th June, 1776, and married twice: first, in 1806, Delia, daughter of Joshua Field, Esq., of Heaton, co. York; and secondly, in 1819, Elizabeth, only daughter of James Crowther, Esq., M.D., of Boldshay Hall. For many years he resided at Maperton House, co. Somerset, and acted as a Deputy-Lieutenant of that shire.

Colonel Fitzgerald died 5th June, 1850. His uncle was the well-known George Robert Fitzgerald, notorious in the last century as "fighting Fitzgerald."

THE BLENKINSOPP FAMILY.—We have been favoured with a communication from a Correspondent with reference to the notice of Miss Porter, in our Journal of last week, as to Miss Porter being (with the exception of her brother, Dr. Porter) the last surviving member of that family. It appears that a first cousin of Miss Porter, the daughter of her maternal brother, is still living, and a resident of Carisbrooke, in the Isle of Wight.

SOYER'S MAGIC STOVE.—On Monday afternoon, M. Soyer had the honour of displaying his last culinary invention, the magic stove and kitchen, before the following distinguished personages:—The Hereditary Prince of Lippi Detmold and suite, Sir Benjamin and Lady Hall, Lady Morgan, Lady Talbot, Lord Beauchamp, Lord Henry Loftus, Mrs. and Miss Scudamore, the Hon. G. C. Agar, Mr. Arthur Barrington, and Mr. Theodore Bunsen. After witnessing the cooking on the dining-room table, of several dishes, and having tasted them, the whole of the distinguished company expressed their great admiration of the entirely new system of cookery.

"RHEDYCINA," WINNER OF THE OAKS STAKES, AT EPSOM

"RHEDYCINA," WINNER OF THE OAKS.

We have engraved the winner of the Oaks, run for on Friday, the 1st inst.

"Rhedycina" was bred by Mr. Leidiard, of Reading, and was sold by him to Mr. Worley. She was trained by a young man named Goodwin, at Newmarket, and was brought to the post—untried since last year—in good condition.

"Rhedycina" was No. 7 on the cards, which number also won the Derby, the Grand Stand Plate, and the Innkeepers' Plate. There was another parallel between the winners of the Derby and Oaks: both were "sent to the right-about" only the evening previous to victory; and from the same cause, viz. the pending demand for forfeits due by a previous owner, which, for a short period, was imagined to militate against Rhedycina's coming to the post.

The following details of the settling day for the Derby and Oaks are from Bell's Life in London:—The principal winners were three or four of Lord Zetland's friends, to the tune of nearly £40,000. His Lordship himself, who never ventures more than a trifle upon his horses, won only £600; his coachman won £20001 and the whole of his establishment threw in for—to them—good stakes. The extent to which the public threw in will be gathered from the fact that Mr Davis alone paid upwards of £40,000 to parties who had taken tickets for Voltigeur and Rhedycina! How much more he paid at the Corner we have not heard, but it must have made an enormous aggregate. One Irish gentleman won £27,000, the greater part of which has been invested in the purchase of an estate in Ireland.

THE "ASCOT" RACE CUPS.

In no branch of the Fine Arts have the artists of this country made greater progress than in the art of modelling statuettes, and more particularly in modelling groups in which horses and animals are introduced; and in nothing have the artisans employed in the higher branches of manufactures reached a higher reputation than in the manufacture of the designs of artists in the precious metals. It may, indeed, be called a national art, and a national manufacture, by which such beautiful and classic illustrations of ancient fables, and of historical events, have been made the means of decorating vases, cups, and such-like prizes, for the rewards of the successful candidates for honour and victory on the race-courses of these islands. It is, moreover, very gratifying to observe, that, whilst horse-racing has improved our breed of horses, and thereby enabled us to mount our cavalry regiments in a manner superior to the cavalry regiments of the Continental nations, and to render the exportation of horses a matter of great commercial importance, it has, at the same time, improved the national taste for what is good in the cultivation of the arts; and drawn forth the genius and the talents of men whose works are an ornament to the country, and whose reputation has exalted Englishmen in the estimation of foreigners. In former days, what were called Racing-Cups were Cups, and nothing more—mere awkward vessels, fit for the rugged squires who contended for the possession of them; and of so rude and inelegant appearance, that, when seen in these days, they excite surprise at the rusticity of our ancestors, and derision at their total want of good taste. Of late years, the gradual, though rapid, improvement in everything connected with the luxuries of life, has introduced different feelings, and a more correct estimate of what is beautiful, and what is the contrary to it; and the result of it has been to call forth the patronage of the wealthy, and the energies of the men of talent. This improvement is obvious to all; and in nothing is it more conspicuous than in the "Racing Cups" which have been run for at Ascot Heath during the past week. The "Cups" are three in number, of which the "Emperor's Vase"—being the sixth presented by his Imperial

"WANOTA," WINNER OF THE ASCOT STAKES.

Majesty the Emperor of Russia, in token and remembrance of his visit to Ascot Heath, in the year 1844, when he accompanied her Majesty Queen Victoria to the races—is the most valuable, both from the intrinsic worth of the silver employed in its manufacture, from the very admirable manner in which it has been manufactured, and the masterly design and execution of the model by the eminent artist employed. The artist is Mr. Cotterill, who, to a perfect conception of the beautiful in art, unites the very rare faculty of being able to embody his ideas, and to carry out in the execution of them the minutest details with force and correctness. The manufacturers of this vase are the Messrs. Garrards, of Panton-street, Haymarket, goldsmiths to the Crown, to whose reputation the manner in which Mr. Cotterill's efforts have been rendered in silver will add fresh laurels. The vase, with the plinth, is between four and five feet in height; the top of the base, on which the principal group is placed, surmounts a representation of the means employed to cleanse the Augean stables, by the turning of the stream of a river through them. On its base are seen the figure of Hercules, who, having destroyed the tyrant Diomedes, is about to strike with his club one of the horses of the miscreant, who is represented in ancient mythology to have fed his rapacious stud on the flesh of his captives. The figure of the god is admirably delineated; it is a perfect model of strength, activity, bodily and mental energy; the outline is graceful, and the development of the muscles perfect; the figure is full of life, and is idealised to a degree without the character of strength being lost or diminished. The other figures in the group, viz. the prisoners of the tyrant just slain, are equally well conceived and executed. They tell the tale of the ancient myth almost as well as if it were written in a book; whilst the fierceness of the horses, and their thirst for blood, are visible in every attitude and attribute. This group, or groups, is very felicitous: there is grandeur of effect, assisted by such a judicious use of accessories, that the details assist instead of diminishing the breadth of the design. The "Vase" itself rises from the base, as may be seen in our Illustration, and is appropriately decorated with figurative emblems of the Labours of Hercules. In the front is one of the birds of Stymphalus, an Arcadian lake, in the neighbourhood of which they existed, and with their iron beaks destroyed all that came within their reach, till Hercules put an end to their predatory career. The handle of the Vase is formed of the folds of the Hydra. The ornaments are all in allusion to the labours of the principal figure. There are the heads of the boar, the stag, the bull, and the dog Cerberus, properly introduced and aiding in the general design. This Vase is a most valuable contribution to the fine arts. It may not be amiss to transcribe the legend, which is the same as those used on former occasions, and is thus:—

Ludorum Ascotiensium numen, quibus ipse interfuisti Regina Victoria hospes meus Jun., MDCCCXLIV., solemne certaminis equestris promium, instituit NICOLAUS, fortes Russiæ Imperat

The next Cup, called the "Queen's Cup," being the gift of her Majesty Queen Victoria, is of a character totally distinct from the Emperor's Vase. It is of a less, imposing appearance, and certainly not of so high a style of art; nevertheless it is a most beautiful specimen of the powers of English artists and artizans, and justly entitled to very honourable mention. It is modelled by Mr. Cotterill, and manufactured by Messrs. Garrards. The plate, which is a faithful representation of the original, will best display to our readers the accessorial facts. It will be seen that these are in very correct taste, and that the introduction of the chains is a very beautiful addition, and something new to the English school. The Cup is what is called a Spanish flagon, of the sixteenth century, and is peculiar in its shape. The group on the base represents Arab huntsmen attacking a lioness, who stands at bay to defend herself and her cubs. The whole is remarkable for the animation of the scene—the correctness of the costumes, the character of the animals introduced, and the apparent energy thrown into the figures. A more elegant prize, or a more beautiful piece of plate, can hardly be conceived.

The Third Cup, called the "Royal Hunt Cup," is also entitled to be mentioned with honour, and is inferior in design and execution to neither of the preceding. It is manufactured by Messrs. Hunt and Roskill, of New Bond-street, after the design and model of Mr. Alfred Brown, an artist of deserved reputation, and of a reputation which each ensuing work increases. It is of the Italian or Venetian school, the cup being more flat than in the Greek or Etruscan vase, and coming under the class TAZZA: it is very elaborately chased, and the inside is richly gilt and burnished. The stem by which it is supported is formed of the stalks and leaves of thistles, and the leaves spread out beneath it. On the base is a group, consisting of a deer newly killed, and two deer dogs, by which its death has been occasioned. These dogs are portraits of two celebrated hounds in the possession of Lord Bessborough, her Majesty's Master of the Buck-hounds. They and their victim are finely modelled—indeed, they are equal to anything that art has yet produced in the portraiture of animals. The base rests upon a plinth of ebony, fastened with oak-leaves in silver, supporting shields, left blank for the name and arms of the owner of the successful horse.

We can only repeat what we have said before, that these three Cups prove a great advancement in national taste, and are sufficiently excellent to challenge all competition, and to defeat it.

THE QUEEN'S GOLD CUP.

THE EMPEROR'S VASE.

THE ROYAL HUNT CUP.

THE ROYAL MEETING ON ASCOT HEATH.

Her Majesty is all for the sea-service.
And Ascot mourns her Queen insatiis nervus.

Altered from BYRON.

ONCE again a fair welcome to our Royal sport! But Smellfungus asks, "Wherefore write? the theme has already been long exhausted." Emerson shall answer in the indignant phrase wherewith he traces the character of "Europe's Hannibal:"—"To whit heaps of cowardly doubts is not that man's life a reply." When he appeared, it was the belief of all military men that there could be nothing new in war—as it is the belief of men to-day that nothing new could be undertaken in farming, or in our social manners and customs; and as it is at all times the belief of society that the world is used up. But Bonaparte knew better than society, and, moreover, knew that he knew better. I think all men know better than they do—know that the institutions we so volubly commend are go-carts and baubles, but they dare not trust their presentiments Bonaparte relied on his own sense, and did not care a bean about other people's. Read our rhapsody; what it lacks in material shall be made up in "myth."

If Pindar sang horse-races, what should hinder our muse from being as pliable as Pindar. Annually, during a night in June, there springs up a city of canvas around the wild bloom of Ascot Heath. As if stricken by the wands of thousands of enchanters, the "land of brown heath" becomes a carnival—a masque of characters, such as it hath not entered into the mind of man to conceive. There abound Gitanas, with swarthy skins, and eyes that remind you of the eagle. . .

And there are classes, scandal and fantastical,
Scamps of all nations, Christians, Turks, and Jews,
And conjurors and clowns, with feats gymnastical
Cockneys and Yankee-doodles and Hindoos.

Migratory hordes, whose whereabouts from September to May is as much a secret as the swallow's, and whose profession is palmistry in all its branches.

Behold a pantomime in real life: processions of harlequins and columbines, clowns in cavaleades; and store of pantaloons. "Jean," peradventure, but shod in shapely vellington of peerless Japan. Look at these groups of graceful girls—fresh and fragrant as "chaplets of sweet summer buds." How brave are the youths that wait upon them! How comely the matrons they call mothers, and those warm and wholesome elders! Ah! surely it is well to have papas whose paper is good for a plum. This latter relates to the gala show mise en scène, as Jenkins would say. The good old times quoths I when mammas were farthingales, and their spouses hats, even as the monkeys at the Zoological Gardens. Do you remember the "Dandyzette" and "Dandy Fi" Conceive a "coal-scuttle" leghorn, as in mockery, set upon a brow of alabaster. Gaze (but carefully) on its successor—that ray of rosy silken gauze, which Madame Marocain calls a chapeau. Call to mind the "inexpressibles" known a score of years ago as "Cossacks," perilous protuberances scandalising man's fair nether proportions, and contrast them in your mind's eye with "the dainty device of the modern "unmentionables." Ascot, a threadbare theme! "Jeames" would write you a three-volume novel on "A Fortnum and Mason lunch on the Cup day.'

The tryst of pride forming the title of this notice took place during this instant week of pleasant summer tide. It opened under the most flattering skiey influences, and with a carte of sport which in quantity is only inferior to its quality. But London knew the fair-haired daughter of the Isles "was at her palace by the sea," and therefore poured forth her citizens with niggard hand. Tuesday was the worst of its anniversaries as regards company known to the modern turfite: but for those who did do rendezvous, it was full of interest; all the appointments and appliances were perfect. The ground was in the best condition for racing—horses abounded, so did Stakes and Plates; and—far more than all—so did money; what more would you have? a first-class meeting is matter of course. With practical routine it is not our province to meddle—that is elsewhere provided for. The returns are the text, to which this gossipping appendix stands in the relation of a running accompaniment. Next in succession after the Trial Stakes came the sweepstakes of fifty sovereigns each for two-year olds, in the Ascot Derby—both won by animals in Lord Chesterfield's name—both of which had passed into other hands—which was, also, a trial—but of patience, instead of paces. The Ascot Stakes—a sporting handicap, won by Wanota—was, probably, a race thrown away, by confiding a jockey too strictly to riding orders. There can be no doubt, had Nat not waited so long with Vampyre, but that he would have won: as it was, he beat Wanota in the stride after they had cleared the chair. The Gold Vase brought out half a dozen: it will be seen, one of them was Mildew, so lately a leading favourite for the Derby, but who ran "nowhere," which is as much as to say the judge gave him no place. The Vase distance is two miles, the last moiety a very trying course. The race was done at honest speed throughout, and finished by Mildew who was never set going till abreast of the Grand Stand -winning in a canter. The fact is, he went twice as fast as his horses, and pulled up with his flanks in as tranquil repose as if he had merely walked from his stable to scale. This is the same Mildew, who, after the Derby, was discovered to be "a rearer," "too thick in the wind to raise a gallop at the end of a mile," "another impostor of the Bolingbroke school," and so forth. Such is the stuff the turf is made of. Capt. Bastard, however, has probably gallantry enough to prefer her Majesty's prize to pounds, shillings, and pence. A great deal was said about a Mr. Glen having "scratched" his horse Damask, at the eleventh hour, for the Ascot Stakes. He is a baker, and those who meddled with his wares burnt their fingers: "those who play at bowls must expect rubbers."

These notes and comments having only reference to the Ascot meeting in its gala character, we pass the by days, and confine what follows to the great Cup rendezvous. The day was fresh, with a pleasant wind, and joyous with a glad sunshine. There was a pitiless dust, it is true, and terrible havoc was made of toilettes passing gay and gallant. Nevertheless, smiles, rich and rosy, lit up dishevelled faces, and "all went merry as a marriage bell." By noon the Heath in the neighbourhood of the stands was a promenade, such as you see at Chiswick on a Flower Show, or in Kensington Gardens when "the band plays," upon a scale of a mile to an inch. The attendance, though not as great as we have often seen it, was a vast improvement upon that of Tuesday. The carriage line extended almost to the turn, and the stands and enclosures were bumpers. You missed the pomp and circumstance of the Royal cortège—indeed, there were not even the servants of her Majesty's Buck-hounds, in their scarlet and gold liveries, to give the usual character to the arrangements. The sport was, however, excellent, and admirably conducted. There were seven races, and some of them full of interest for the turfite. His Grace of Richmond having walked over for the Windsor Forest Stakes, a Sweepstakes of 50 sovs each for three-year-olds brought half-a-dozen to the post, Cariboo winning in a pretty set-to. The Visitors' Plate then being disposed of, the Emperor's Cup was set before us. Five went for it, including the two best racers in existence—the Flying Dutchman and Canezon. Of the issue, all that can be said is, that Lord Eglinton's modern Eclipse having waited upon his horses to the turn into the straight ground, then came to the front, out them all down with his flying stride, and won as he pleased in a canter. The Turf has produced nothing superior to the Flying Dutchman, if his equal, in the present century. He is the property of a true sportsman; he is trained as a gentleman's horse should be trained, at home, with a view to produce the amusement of the course; and the welkin rang with hozannas at his victory. For the St. James's Palace Stakes six were telegraphed, but Royal Hart being objected to, five only ran. The winner was Nutcracker, but with a struggle very different from the effort which made his jockey (Marlow) victorious in the preceding race. Eleven went for the New Stakes, for two-year olds, and Mr. Payne's Citadel was the winner. The list was wound up with the Stand Plate, and the day's excitement, so far as the Olympic portion of it went, was over. A lovely afternoon saw the brilliant assembly break up, and this closed the beau ideal of an English metropolitan holiday.

Friday, an off day, does not claim record in this our current calamo memoir. Ascot, like Epsom, has but two days which challenge public interest; briefly we have touched on these, and our pleasant task is over.

ASCOT RACES.—TUESDAY.

The racing commenced at half-past one, with

The TRIAL STAKES of 5 sovs each, and 50 added.—Mr. W. Stebbings's Flatcatcher (Rogers), 1. Duke of Rutland's Nina (Boyce), 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 50 sovs each.—Lord Chesterfield's brother to Drakelow (J. Marson), 1. Mr. Greville's Genevra (Flatman), 2.

The ASCOT DERBY STAKES of 50 sovs each.—Mr. Ford's c. by Lanercost, out of Concertina (Bartholomew), 1. Duke of Richmond's Ghillie Callum (Flatman), 2.

The ASCOT STAKES of 25 sovs each.—Lord Clifden's Wanota (J. Marson), 1. Duke of Richmond's Vampyre (Flatman), 2.

The GOLD VASE, given by her Majesty, added to a SWEEPSTAKES of 20 sovs each.—Mr. Bastard's Mildew (Flatman), 1. Duke of Richmond's Officious (Kitchener), 2.

The THIRD YEAR of the FIRST ASCOT TRIENNIAL FOAL STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 100 added.—Mr. Bastard's Vatican (Templeman), 1. Lord Eglinton's Eithiron (Marlow), 2.

The WELCOME STAKES, of 20 sovs each, with a bonus, by independent subscription, of 5 sovs each.—Mr. Gratwicke's The Countess (Flatman), 1. Major Martyn's The Swede (W. Abdale), 2.

The FIRST YEAR of the SECOND TRIENNIAL FOAL STAKES of 10 sovs, with 100 added.—Lord J. Scott's Miscrimia (Whitehouse), 1. Mr. Halford's Mr. Merryman (Templeman), 2.

PRODUCE STAKES.—Lord Exeter's Cora walked over.

WEDNESDAY.

CORONATION STAKES of 100 sovs each.—Lord Orford's f by Slane (F. Butler), 1. Lord Exeter's Celia (Flatman), 2.

WINDSOR TOWN PLATE of 50 sovs.—Mr. Hughes's f by Cowl out of Calandine (Cowley), 1. Duke of Richmond's f by Pantaloon (W. Harlock), 2.

HER MAJESTY'S PLATE of 100 guineas.—Captain Lowther's The Gent (Dockeray), 1. Duke of Rutland's Fire-eater (Boyce), 2.

WINDSOR STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 100 added.—Mr. Greville's Cariboo (Flatman) and Mr. Batson's Thistledown (Sly) run a dead heat. Stakes divided.

ROYAL HUNT CUP, value 200 sovs, with 100 added. Mr. Higden's Hagley (Thick), 1. Lord Exeter's Clelia (W. Harlock), 2.

FERN HILL STAKES of 15 sovs each, with 50 added.—Mr. Ford's f. by Slane out of Receipt (Dockeray), 1. Mr. Howard's Prestige (Holloway), 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 40 sovs each. Lord Exeter's Utrecht walked over.

THURSDAY.

The WINDSOR FOREST STAKES of 50 sovs each.—Duke of Richmond's Officious walked over.

SWEEPSTAKES of 50 sovs each.—Cariboo, 1. Thistledown, 2.

The VISITORS' PLATE of 100 sovs.—Fernhill, 1. Give-and-take, 2.

THE EMPEROR'S VASE.

Flying Dutchman	.. ..	1
Jericho	.. ..	2

The ST JAMES'S PALACE STAKES of 100 sovs each. Nutcracker, 1. Sergius, 2.

The NEW STAKES of 10 sovs each.—Citadel, 1. Heart of Oak, 2.

The STAND PLATE of 70 sovs.—Mr. S. Herbert's Radulphus (Sly), 1. Lord Exeter's Breslaw (W. Harlock), 2.

FRIDAY.

SWEEPSTAKES of 50 sovs each.—Lady Geraldine colt, 1. Brington, 2.
SWEEPSTAKES of 20 sovs each.—Lady Geraldine colt, 1. Calalpa, 2.
THE FIRST CLASS of the WOKINGHAM STAKES.—Wallflower, 1. Cora, 2.
THREE HUNDRED SOVEREIGNS, the gift of the Great Western Railway Company, added to a sweepstakes of 10 sovs each.—Thistledown, 1. The Swede, 2.
THE SECOND CLASS of the WOKINGHAM STAKES.—Wonflark, 1. Penniq, 2.
THE BOROUGH MEMBERS' PLATE.—Colt by Mus, out of Virago, 1. Defaulter, 2.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The aristocratic reunion at Ascot will be followed next week by one of a very different character, on the far-famed Moulsey Hurst, offering not only a fair amount of sport, but lots of "fun" for those who are not sticklers upon ceremony. It is but justice to the present management to state that they have materially raised the character of the racing, and that the meeting, in other respects, has undergone a change for the better. In addition, there will be meetings at Beverley and Sutton Park—their pretensions are not very formidable. The aquatic arrangements comprise a regatta at Durham, on Monday and Tuesday, a pair and four-oar race at Putney on Tuesday, and the Royal London Yacht Club match on Wednesday.

TATTERSALL'S.

ASCOT STAKES,

4 to 1 agst Vampyre	7 to 1 agst Wanota
6 to 1 —— Collingwood	8 to 1 —— Retall
	10 to 1 agst Damask
QUEEN'S VASE.
2 to 1 agst Officious	3 to 1 agst Miss Ann — 4 to 1 agst Little Jack
FOUR-YEAR OLD TRIENNIAL
3 to 1 agst Eithen (t)	7 to 2 agst Gatherley
3 to 1 —— Monsoer	5 to 1 —— Mr. Merlon
THE EMPEROR'S PLATE.
11 to 8 on Flying Dutchman	7 to 4 agst Cannon — 10 to 1 agst Peep-o'-day Boy
DERBY
20 to 1 agst Hippolytus	33 to 1 agst Ironmaster — 50 to 1 agst Constellation
33 to 1 —— Cacus	40 to 1 —— Bye to Ellerdale — 50 to 1 —— Goliah
	50 to 1 agst Lightfoot

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, June 16. Second Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 17.—St. Alban.
TUESDAY, 18.—Battle of Waterloo, 1815.
WEDNESDAY, 19.—Sir Joseph Banks died, 1820.
THURSDAY, 20.—Accession of Queen Victoria.
FRIDAY, 21.—Queen Victoria proclaimed. Longest Day.
SATURDAY, 22. —Sun rises 3h. 44m., sets 8h. 19m.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 21, 1850.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
6 20	7 0	7 30	8 2	8 30	9 15	9 48
A M	A M	A M	A M	A M	A M	A M
10 5	10 46	11 26	0 8	0 49	1 31	2 16
P M	P M	P M	P M	P M	P M	P M
10 50	11 30	11 57	12 34	1 15	2 0	2 45

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—GRAND EXTRA NIGHT.—LA TEMPESTA.—It is respectfully announced that a GRAND EXTRA NIGHT will take place on THURSDAY NEXT, JUNE 20th, 1850, when will be presented, the highly successful New Grand Opera by Halevy, the Poem by Scribe, founded on the "Tempest" of Shakespeare, and composed expressly for Her Majesty's Theatre, entitled LA TEMPESTA. The Incidental Dances by M. Paul Taglioni. The Scenery by Mr. Charles Marshall. The Costumes executed under the superintendence of Madame Copere. Dramatis Personæ:—Alfonso (King of Naples), Signor Lorenzi; Prospero (Duke of Milan), Signor Coletti; Antonio (his brother, the usurper), Signor F. Lablache; Ferdinand (Prince of Naples), Signor Bacchini; Gaetti; Trinculo, Signor Ferrari; Sagnano, Mr. Aldridge; Miranda, Mdlle. Ida Bertrand; Spirit of the Air, Mdme Giuliani; Ariel, Mdlle Carlotta Grisi; Caliban, Signor Lablache; and Miranda, Mdme. Somaug. Director of the Music and Composer, Mr. Balfe. With various Entertainments in the BALLET DEPARTMENT, in which Mdlle. Carlotta Grisi, Md.le. Amalia Ferraris, Mdlle. Maria Taglioni, M. Charles, and M. Paul Taglioni will appear.—Applications for Boxes, Stalls, and Tickets to be made at the Box-office of the Theatre.

FRENCH PLAYS, ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Under the Express Patronage of her MAJESTY.—Mr. MITCHELL has the honour to announce that his BENEFIT is fixed to take place on WEDNESDAY EVENING, JUNE 19, when will be presented an attractive Entertainment, combining all the talent at present engaged at this theatre. Mr. MITCHELL respectfully begs the favour of an early application for Boxes and Stalls. 23, Old Bond-street.—June 8, 1850

MADLLE RACHEL.—FRENCH PLAYS, ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—MR. MITCHELL respectfully announces that the performances of the eminent tragic queen Mademoiselle Rachel are definitively arranged to commence on the 24th inst. Mr. MITCHELL is also respectfully announced that Mademoiselle Rachel is positively limited to twelve Representations, which cannot possibly be exceeded. Boxes and stalls, at Mr. W. MITCHELL'S, Old Bond-street, 23, 24, 1 Bond-street.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr W BATTY.—Enormous attraction.—WATERLOO FETE.—In commemoration of the glorious 18th of June, will be revived (for six nights only) the Grand National Spectacle of the BATTLE OF WATERLOO (which has not been produced since 1838, the celebrated will commence at Seven o'Clock, with the AFFGHANISTAN WAR. To be followed by Batty's Wonders in the Circus Olympic and the wonderful and Astonishing Feats of the Extraordinary Elephant. To conclude with the Grand spectacle of the BATTLE OF WATERLOO.—Box-office open from 10 to 5.—Private Box Office open from 11 to 4.—Stage Manager, Mr W Weal.

MR. ALBERT SMITH will give his new ENTERTAINMENT, THE OVERLAND MAIL, every Morning (Tuesdays excepted), at ST. MARTIN'S HALL, Long's Royal Library, at 3 and 8.—Stalls, 3s.; Tickets and Seats to be had only at ST. MARTIN'S HALL.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The Subscribers and the Public are respectfully informed the EIGHTH and LAST CONCERT will take place at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on MONDAY NEXT, the 17th inst. Conductor, Mr. COSTA. Single tickets (with reserved seat), £1 1s; single tickets (ditto), £1 10s; trigan tickets (ditto), £2 2s, to be obtained of Messrs. ADDISON, 210, Regent-street. G. W. BUDD, Secretary.

MUSICAL UNION.—SEVENTH and DIRECTOR'S MORNING CONCERT, FRIDAY NEXT, JUNE 21st, at THREE O'CLOCK.—WILLIS'S ROOMS.—Quartett, E minor—Spohr, three violins, M. sainton, Grut's Sonata in C, Op. 28—Beethoven: pianoforte, C. Halle. Vocal piece, Mdlle. Grahmann Quartet in C, No. 37—Haydn: first violin, Herr Ernst. Pensées Fugitives, (Solo) by the conductor. Pianoforte, Mr. Charles Coote. "La Truite," for piano. 5 Haller. Vocal Piece Duet: pianoforte, Mr. Charles Coote. Hall and Pratt. Aria, "Par Ricordarmi" (Jessonda) Spohr Mr. Sims Reeves. Quartet, E flat—Mozart: Cooper (harp), Jarrold, JOHN ELLA, Director

For tickets, inquire at CRAMER and Co's.

BENEDICT'S ANNUAL CONCERT.—ERNST and PIATTI.—These two eminent Performers will appear at Mr. BENEDICT'S GRAND CONCERT, to be given in the EGYPTIAN HALL, MANSION HOUSE, on MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 24th, in addition to whom, all the most eminent artists then in town will be engaged.—Boxes, £2 2s; and Tickets to be had at the Box office of the Theatre, and of Mr. Benedict, 2, Worcester square.

MR. HENRY WYLDE'S SECOND MATINEE MUSICALE will take place at WILLIS'S ROOMS, on MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 24th, when he will perform Mozart's Quartett in E flat, Beethoven's Trio in G, and Beethoven's Sonata in E flat, Op. 81. Tickets, 7s. 6d. and 7s. to be obtained at Messrs. CRAMER'S, Regent-street; and of Mr. WILLIS, 140, New Bond-street

MR. JOHN PARRY'S ENTERTAINMENT.—MUSIC HALL, STORE STREET.—Mr. JOHN PARRY will have the honour of giving an entertainment at the above HALL, on Monday next, the first time entitled "NOTES, VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL," commencing at Half past Eight.—Tickets to be had of the principal Music Sellers. Stalls and Private Boxes to be had only of Messrs. OLLIVIER, 41 and 42, New Bond-street; and at the Hall.

BURFORD'S PANORAMA ROYAL, LEICESTER-SQUARE.—JUST OPENED, a VIEW of the celebrated and interesting LAKES of KILLARNEY, taken from Ross Castle, comprising the numerous adjacent islands and surrounding beautiful scenery. The VIEW of the ARCTIC REGIONS, with the Effects of Sunrise and Water, and of POMPEII, are also now open. Admission is to each View, or 2s 6d to the three; schools, half-price. Open from Ten till dusk.

VALLEY OF THE NILE.—Additions have been made to this Panorama. The Nubian Desert, from the Second Cataract to Dongola. Wardrobe by Fire Light. March of the Memnonium. Morning Prayer. The Harem at a High-Priest is added to the Curiosities. Both banks of the River are shown in the Painting.—EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly. Daily, at Three and Eight. Admission, 1s; Pit, 2s; Stalls, 3s. Children at Schools, half-price.

HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY'S VISIT to IRELAND, is narrated by a GRAND MOVING DIORAMA, with some of the most charming Scenery in that country, including the lovely Lakes of Killarney, by Mr. E. PHILLIPS, now open at the CHINESE GALLERY, Hyde Park Corner. Daily at 3, Evening at 8.—Admission, 1s; Reserved Seats, 2s.—An interesting Historical Record of the Event may be had at the Gallery.

INDIA OVERLAND MAIL.—DIORAMA GALLERY of ILLUSTRATION, No 14, REGENT-STREET, Waterloo-place.—Additions. Pictures MADRAS. A Gigantic MOVING DIORAMA, ILLUSTRATING the ROUTE of the OVERLAND MAIL to INDIA, depicting every object worthy of notice on the line of route, from Southampton to Madras and Calcutta, accompanied by descriptive detail and [illegible] Evening at Eight o'clock. Admission, 1s; Stalls, 2s; Reserved Seats, 3s. Doors open half an hour before each representation. Tickets may be secured at the Gallery.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—During this Week the ALPINE SINGERS will perform daily, at Four; and at Eight. Half-past Eight, a Second Lecture on the Photography of [illegible] by Mr. Delamotte, Jun. Every Evening at Quarter past Nine. [illegible] Right. Dissolving Views, Diver and Diving Bell, &c. [illegible]

CREMORNE GARDENS. IMMENSE ATTRACTION.—In consequence of the extraordinary sensation created by the perilous and daring Ascent of Mons. ANTONIA up a SINGLE ROPE, 226 Feet long, and his descending, standing, on the same with the unparalleled Antipodean Tableau by the DUGLAN FAMILY, Mr. SIMPSON has the honour to announce the repetition every evening, until further notice, of this performance. Half a Pound—No 6, Some Song or, by Messrs. John Sharp and Gideon—Tableaux Vivans—Master Taylor the Double-headed Youth—Magnificent Display of Fireworks from the Palace of Paris, by Mr. Usher. Admission, 1s.; Children, Half-price. On TUESDAY, JUNE 18th, a Waterloo Fete, on a scale of unequalled splendour and on THURSDAY, JUNE 20th, a Grand Gala, under the immediate patronage of his Excellency the Ambassador from Nepaul.

GREAT EXHIBITION in 1851.—Westminster Committee.—The great number of notices of intention to exhibit received by the Westminster Committee, and the necessity of immediately forwarding the returns to her Majesty's Commissioners, induces the Westminster Committee to urge all persons resident in the City and Liberties of Westminster desirous of becoming exhibitors to send, on or before the First day of July next, to the Secretary of the Committee, Mr. G. H. DREW, 25, Parliament-street, a notice of their intention, with a general description of the nature of the object to be exhibited, and the space required for its exhibition

Printed forms for the return may be obtained on application to the Secretary, and any further information from the Local Commissioners:—

Mr. J. Brown, 336, Regent-street.	Mr. T. J. Miller, 7, Millbank-street
Mr. J. G. Crace, 14, Wigmore-street.	Mr. W. G Rogers, 10, Carlisle-street, Soho.
Mr. Stephen Lewis, 193, Regent-street.	Mr. E Snell, 27, Albemarle-street.

June 4, 1850.

SCOTTISH FETE.—In consequence of her Majesty's Drawing-room having been fixed for the 20th of June, the GRAND COMPETITION in Reel and Fling is POSTPONED until MONDAY, the 1st, and TUESDAY, the 2nd of July, when it will take place under the joint direction of the Highland Society, of which his Royal Highness Prince Albert is chief, and the Scottish Society, of which the most noble the Marquis of Breadalbane is President. A Grand Banquet will take place on Wednesday, the 3rd, when the prizes for archery, putting the stone, throwing the hammer, tossing the caber, racing, Highland dancing, performances on the great Highland bagpipe, &c., will be presented to the successful competitors JOHN BOUCHER, Hon. Sec.

Hanover-park, Peckham.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE of GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND.—ANNUAL MEETING, 1850, to be held at OXFORD, commencing on TUESDAY, JUNE 18, and terminating on Tuesday, June 25. Patron: The Rev. the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Oxford. President: The Most Noble the Marquis of Northampton, F.R.S., F.S.A.—Tickets will be granted by the Great Western Railway Company, on producing a "F rm, which can be procured on application at the apartments of the Institute, 26, Suffolk-street, Pall-Mall. H. BOWYER LANE, Secretary.

EXHIBITION of ANCIENT and MEDIÆVAL ART, the Society of Arts, 18, John-street Adelphi.—ADMISSION THREEPENCE.—In order to render this Exhibition available to intelligent artisans and mechanics, the price of admission on and after MONDAY the 17th, will be Threepence (except on Saturdays, when it will be 1s., as before.) Hours of Admission from Eleven to Eight. Catalogues 1s., and 3d

SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS.—The FORTY SIXTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, at their Gallery, 5, PALL-MALL EAST, from Nine till Dusk. Admittance, One Shilling. Catalogue, Sixpence GEORGE FRIPP, Secretary

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS.—The SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of the SOCIETY is NOW OPEN, at their GALLERY, 53, PALL-MALL, nearly opposite St. James's Palace, daily from Nine till dusk.—Admission, 1s; Season Tickets may be had of the keeper at the Gallery.

JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

WEEK of FETES!—ROYAL SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—MONDAY, JUNE 17, Grand Fete and Pyrotechnic Display, to welcome his Excellency General J. B. K. BANAJEE, and his distinguished Suite, who will honour the Gardens with their presence.—TUESDAY, JUNE 18, Grand Waterloo Fete.—WEDNESDAY, JUNE 19, Grand Floral Fete and Flower Show, by the Royal South London Floricultural Society.—THURSDAY, JUNE 20, Magnificent Fete in honour of her Majesty's Accession to the Throne.—Feeding the Animals, Half-past Five; Concert, Half-past Six; Passage of the Alps, Eight; Fireworks, Half-past Nine.—Admission, as usual, One Shilling.

THE HIPPOPOTAMUS, presented by H.H. the Viceroy of Egypt to the Zoological Society of London, is exhibited daily from One to Six o'clock, at their GARDENS in the REGENT'S PARKE. The Band of the 1st Life Guards will perform, by permission of Colonel Hall, every Saturday, at four o'clock. Admission, ONE SHILLING, on Mondays, SIXPENCE. D. W. MITCHELL, B.A.

FOR CANTERBURY, the first-class passenger ships SIR GEORGE SEYMOUR, 850 tons, and the CHARLOTTE JANE, 700 tons, chartered by the Canterbury Association, are appointed to sail from the Port of London on THURSDAY, the 20th of AUGUST, calling at Plymouth for passengers. For terms of passage, and other particulars, apply to WILLIAM HOWLETT, Shipping Office of the Canterbury Association, Superintendent of Shipping, 18a, Billiter-street.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

L'NA.—The cause of the repetition of the first quartering is the necessity of making the shield even and quarterly, which is only one other quartering. The internal coat would occupies the first quarter

J F L.—Lady Ashley's address in the country is "St Giles's House, Cranbourne, Dorsetshire;" in town, it is most probably at the "Earl of Shaftesbury's, 24, Grosvenor-square"

A YOUNG CORRESPONDENT.—"Chess Studies in Classical," by Bal

L M. Upper Harley-street—The picture should be sent

Y.—The only means is to send the farce to the Manager of a Theatre

P M S, Cork—Mr Wise's "System of Aërostatics," just published by spool, Philadelphia, may be had of Chapman, 142, Strand

AN AUTHOR, Greenwich.—We cannot inform you

G B H S, Hailsham, cannot compel the person in question to provide for him

C S is thanked; Bridge's account is returned to him per post

M P M, Helston—The quantity of ink used in printing our Journal for May 4 is under rather than overstated

S B.—Rhare have been published with our Journal three large views of London, and one of Dublin and Edinburgh, besides that of Rome

THE SISTERS, Portland-place.—The arrangement of the imperious misconduct of the person at the "Grand Annual Morning Concert," at the Hanover-square Rooms, are recommended to take the case to the Magistrate

H e, Totnes—See Mr Christopher's work on Port Natal, just published

A COUNTRY CORRESPONDENT.—We are not interested in the question

A CONSTANT READER, Manchester.—To give you the information required, would encourage a system which we disapprove

A Y, Crewe—Address to the Publishers of the Author's works; a good plan, whenever the private residences of men of letters are not known

H S, Season Lodge, is recommended to purchase the collection of Hampshire coast fossils to Mr. Tennant, Strand

T T Brige—By the Bankrupts Act, 6 Geo 4, c. 16, s. 49, it is enacted that the issuing of a commission against a master shall be a complete discharge of an indenture of apprenticeship

FUSTICE.—£300 would be a fair sum for the copyright of a novel in three volumes, by a popular author

ARCHITECT will perhaps send the drawings when the building is commenced. It is not our rule to engrave "proposed" edifices

LOUNDAS.—The architects are not entitled to the crest of her family

A C E. The trout, however long in clause, may be resumed at any time by those to whom it belongs. There is no question of precedence between armorial bearings, whether arms of court. We cannot say, with certainty, as to the extinction of the family in question

STANDARD.—The Earl of Rosebery is Knight of St Kirby's "a demi wivern, displayed, &c. Motto, Jdiet at mon pays"

CAROLINE EDWARDS.—The Irish prelates are Peers of Parliament alternately, four in each session. Lady Laura Grattan's maiden name was Tolemache. She is sister of the present Earl of Dysart. Lady Christian Isabella Gordon is second daughter of Henry David Earl Aboyne, present Earl of Dundas. The Christian names was consequently, Marie

A D A.—The initials R.A. are affixed to a Royal Academician

FLEMISH.—The translation is, "I am the reward of virtue." The usage of the crest and motto would render the bearer liable to the tax on armorial bearings

S F.—The crest of the family of Cholmondeley is—"An eagle rising arg, the dexter claw sable resting on an escutcheon az. charged with a bugle horn stringed, or, gorged with a collar gemelle as. and bulling in the beak an oak branch slipped ppr. Motto—Nil desperandum"

Προθυμος—The most distinguished of Napoleon's Generals still living is Marshal Soult

Κηρυξ.—The arms are—Gules, a staff of six arg. and gu. a chief or. Crest: A dexter hand ppr. holding up a buckler or.

SUBSCRIPTOR.—Commissions in the East Indian Army are not purchasable, but are in the gift of the Directors

A SUBSCRIBER.—There are three societies in London for the relief of distressed governesses, viz.:—1. The Society of Sc—tchmen, Queen's Arms Tavern, Newgate-street. 2 The Society of Schoolmasters, 73, Great Russe.-street. 3 The Church of England Schoolmasters' and Governesses' Mutual Provident Association, Hall, though the latter is a mutual assurance fund. (See tan "Charities of London," by Sampson Low, but just go intend to a very useful manual to all who enjoy "the luxury of doing good"; a Christian spirit with which the work is imbued entitles it to the highest recommendation, independently of its utility as a book of reference)

H Lake—We do not answer law questions

BEAT, Kent—Nothing-all—1. The book in question may be had at any circulating library. 2. We have not seen the piece of new stone

L. E W.—We cannot possibly spare room for the list

A Z—Mackay's "Western World" contains the latest account of the United States

J N E—Trent is near Tonbridge Wells, in Kent

A. E. B, Hamstoe—We regret that we cannot avail ourselves of the memoir in question

C C, St. Germans, is not liable J J E R—Next week, if possible

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

The Vale of Cedars.—Social Position.—Watson's Reply to Goode.—Black's Tourist.—English Settler's Guide to Ireland.——Jaylin's Eldorado. Two vols.——Hope Leslie.——Autobiography of Leigh Hunt. Three vols ——A Glance at the Exhibition of the Royal Academy.——The Charities of London. Mosaic.—The Wandering Flowers.——Ricordo della Notte.——L'Addio.—The Fairies' Invitation.——The Blush.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1850.

In commenting last week upon the departure of the great piratical expedition to Cuba, we did not anticipate that we should this week have to record its utter, and almost ludicrous, failure. The ancient King of France, and his fifty thousand men, whose celebrated march up and down hill has hitherto been the aptest and most popular illustration of large promise and small achievement, must yield the palm of absurdity to Lopez and his blackguards. The "great" General seems to have utterly failed in his anticipations of popular sympathy in Cuba; and, as if he had had a misgiving from the first, took especial precautions for beating a safe retreat. He landed upon the island, took a small fort, killed two or three men, got frightened and discouraged, and finally turned tail and fled into the steam-vessel which brought him, with all, or nearly all, his men behind him. The result is fortunate for the Government of the United States; fortunate for Spain, in rendering unnecessary any further expenditure either for self-defence or for the punishment of the pirates; and most particularly fortunate for Lopez and his army. We suppose that the persons, whosoever they may be, who provided the two millions of dollars which this gigantic, but easily discomfited project, has already cost, have had enough of it for the present, and that we shall hear no more for a time of the annexation of Cuba. As for General Lopez, having escaped the death which the Count de Mirasol would assuredly have inflicted upon him, had he remained many hours longer in Cuba, he must betake himself to the "diggings," if he wish to prosper in this world; for he will certainly have but small chance of success in the military line, after a failure so monstrous in a project so wicked.

But there are two considerations connected with this question which are of infinitely more importance than the fate of Lopez, or the designs of those who planned the expedition: these are the political morality of the people and Government of the United States, and the system pursued in Cuba by the Spanish Government. Upon the first question, every day adds strength to the conviction, that there will never be any permanent peace among our brethren in the great Transatlantic republics, until they shall fairly meet the question of slavery. It is that unhappy and irritating question which has created not only the popular sympathy for the Cuba buccaneers, but which prompted the unjust war against Mexico, which threatened to embroil the States with Great Britain in the matter of the Oregon territory, which witnesses a large party to covet the possession of Canada and the whole of the West India islands, and which creates a lust for dominion dangerous to the stability of the United States themselves and to the general peace of the world. Every conquest and accession of territory made by the Americans necessitates another conquest and another annexation to maintain the equilibrium between slavery and abolition. If a state be annexed, which, like California, declares against slavery, the slavery interest must make a war or commit a robbery to balance it in the Legislature. If, on the other hand, a slave state be annexed, the abolition party must urge the Union into a war, lest the great cause of human freedom, and the equality of civil rights for the black skin as well as the white, should be thrown back, and the enemies of justice gain a triumph. Thus, the immoral and unchristian institution of slavery which the southern states maintain continually leads to immoral and unchristian results in the general policy of the Commonwealth. Just as one lie is the parent of a thousand, so is one wrong the fruitful source of a countless progeny of others like it.

The institution of Slavery is no doubt as much a misfortune as a crime. It was implanted in the Union before the civilisation of the world had sufficiently advanced to recognise the brotherhood of all men, and it has since grown up as a question of property, affecting thousands of individuals whose slaves are as essential to their worldly position as their land or their oxen, or their money in the bank. But embarrassing, complicated, and perilous as the question may be, the great American Union can have no repose until it be fairly and finally settled. Either with her own citizens or with the world, it will continually be the source of disquiet and warfare. It cannot be the permanent domestication of the national character, of which the Cuban expedition is only the most remarkable because it is the latest manifestation.

As regards Cuba itself, it is possible that the danger it has escaped will lead the Spanish Government to debate seriously whether it considers the island worth keeping. General Lopez was not entirely wrong when he asserted that that beautiful and productive territory was grossly misgoverned and overburdened with taxation. Spain may drain her "milch cow" too dry; and there is no danger of the dominion in Cuba, not simply from the white, but from the black population. Spain has, in contravention of treaties, permitted a yearly importation of slaves into the island —slaves whose average term of life, under the horrible system in practice, is but eight years; and at some future, and possibly not remote day, they may, as they form, with the free men of colour, a clear majority of the population, endeavour to establish a Black Republic upon the model of that of Hayti. The white population may also endeavour to cast off the yoke of distant Government, from whom they receive no advantage. Spain is a decaying nation, and relies upon her rich colonies for supplying her with funds which, under a wise commercial system, she might levy at home; yet she is not so totally effete, were there any wisdom among her statesmen, as to be unable to govern Cuba upon a fairer and less oppressive system than the present. To Spain herself the question is of far more importance than it is to the world. Indeed, we question whether it would not be greatly to the advantage of Cuba to be an independent state; and Spain richly merits the loss—not only for her general misgovernment of the island, but for her wicked connivance at the Slave-trade, in contravention of her pledged honour, and of solemn treaties with Great Britain, France, and America.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT OSBORNE.

The Queen and Prince Consort have passed another week in perfect retirement at Osborne; among the only guests being her Majesty's august relatives, the Duchess of Kent and the Prince of Leiningen, both of whom returned to Frogmore on Wednesday.

Her Majesty and the Prince have taken frequent carriage and walking exercise, and continue, we rejoice to add, in the enjoyment of perfect health.

The Hon. Charles A. Murray had the honour of joining the Royal dinner party on Monday and Tuesday last.

Her Majesty will hold a Privy Council at Buckingham Palace on Wednesday next, the 19th instant.

FASHIONABLE ENTERTAINMENTS.

Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston gave a grand banquet on Saturday, at their mansion in Carlton-Gardens, to a distinguished circle of the nobility. After the banquet, her Ladyship received a brilliant circle of the nobility and gentry. Royal Highness Prince George was amongst the visitors, arriving shortly before eleven o'clock, accompanied by Major the Hon. James Macdonald. His Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar also honoured the réunion with his presence.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge and the Duchess of Gloucester honoured Miss Coutts with their company on Tuesday, at Holly Lodge, Highgate. A select circle of the aristocracy were invited to meet their Royal Highnesses.

The Duchess of Inverness had a dinner-party at Kensington Palace on Monday, the guests at which included her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, his Royal Highness Prince George, their Royal Highnesses the Infanta Don Juan of Spain and the Archduchess Beatrix of Este, his Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, Baron Wydenbruck, the Duchess of Sutherland, the Duchess of Bedford, Lord Castlihge, Lady Palmerston, Lady John Russell, and Lord and Lady Jocelyn.

Lord and Lady Stanley gave a splendid entertainment on Saturday last, to a distinguished circle, including the Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter and Lady Mary Cecil, the Earl and Countess of Shaftesbury and Lady Anna Maria Seade, the Earl of Powis, the Earl of Euston, Viscount and Viscountess Mahon, Viscount and Viscountess Newport, Viscount Castlihge, Lord Dunkellin, Lord Brooke, M.P., Lord George Manners, M.P., the Hon. G. Murray, the Hon. E. H. Stanley, &c. Lady Stanley afterwards opened her saloons for the reception of a brilliant assemblage of the leading members of the aristocracy. Their Royal Highness the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, attended by Mr. E. St. John Mildmay and Lady Augusta Cadogan, honoured her Ladyship with their company. His Royal Highness Prince George and his Grace the Duke of Wellington were also present.

The Marquis of Salisbury, as Lord-Lieutenant of the county of Middlesex, gave a grand entertainment on Saturday last, at his Lordship's mansion, in Arlington-street, to a very numerous body of noblemen and gentlemen in the commission of the peace for that county, and to the colonels and officers of the county militia.

The fourth and last soirée of the President of the Royal Society was held on Saturday last. The réunion was honoured by the attendance of the Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, the Napoleon Archduke and Duchess, and a large number of scientific and literary men.

Lord John Russell left his residence at Pembroke Lodge, Richmond Park, at eleven o'clock on Thursday morning, for the Kingston station, and travelled by the London and South-Western Railway to Gosport, en route to Osborne, on a visit to her Majesty the Queen.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

The Public-houses (Scotland) Bill was read a second time, and ordered to be committed, on the motion of Lord EDWARD.

CHANCERY COURT OF APPEAL.

Lord BROUGHAM stated, that this measure, which stood for second reading that evening, was not a new bill, for it was introduced as long ago as last session, and had been lying in abeyance ever since, for the consideration of their Lordships and the public. It dealt with a dry subject, but when their Lordships remembered the sufferings which they and their families and titles suffered from the injuries existing in the Court of Chancery, they would at once see the importance of a measure which had for its object the removal of some of those evils. However, as the question was one of great difficulty, and requiring very mature and deliberate consideration, he begged to withdraw the bill at present for a more eligible opportunity.

The bill was then, by leave, withdrawn.

The following bills passed through committee: The Distress for Rent (Ireland) Bill, the Encumbered Estates (Ireland) Act Amendment Bill, the Judgments (Ireland) Bill, the Estates Leasing (Ireland) Bill, and the Australian Colonies Bill.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

The Sheriffs of London appeared at the bar, and presented a petition agreed to by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the city of London, in Common Council assembled, praying that the Interments Bill may not pass into a law as it now stands.

VENTILATION OF MINES.

Mr. WYND rose to ask the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if, as the reports of Messrs. Stokes and Phillips are now presented, it was his intention to introduce any measure for the better ventilation and inspection of mines and collieries?

Sir G. GREY said, a bill had been prepared on the subject, and he hoped to lay it before Parliament almost immediately.

TRANSPORTATION OF MR. SMITH O'BRIEN.

Sir LUCIUS O'BRIEN begged that the House would bear with him for a short time while he brought before it the case of his brother, Mr. Smith O'Brien (Loud cries of "Hear, hear.") His excuse for doing so was, that the treatment of his brother had been the subject of comment in the public prints. (Hear.) From a letter which he had received from Van Diemen's Land, dated the 31st of January last, he found that his brother had for three weeks previously been in such a bad state of health that his life was despaired of. It appeared that when he arrived there he refused to take a ticket of leave, although his companions availed themselves of the privilege, and the consequence was, that he was placed on a small island known as the island of Maria. He was there treated with the greatest kindness by the inhabitants; but shortly after his arrival orders came that no person should be allowed to hold conversation with him, except his religious instructor. The habitation in which he had to take up his abode was badly situated, being exposed to the turbulence of the wind and the powerful rays of the sun, so that he could not take exercise for an hour in the evening. Such being his position, his health rapidly declined, and the medical inspector was compelled to request the authorities to adopt some change in respect to his treatment. (Hear, hear.) Now he (Sir L. O'Brien) knew very well that if he were to go to Van Diemen's Land, he should not be able to convince his brother that he was in the wrong. Then the question arose, would the Government pursue a person to death? If a man was obstinate, would they persevere in a treatment of him that would bring him to his grave? (Murmurs.) His brother thought he was in the right; he (Sir L. O'Brien) thought discreetly, and his brother never received the least encouragement from him. But would the Government pursue that man to an extremity which would cause the loss of his life? Under these circumstances, he (Sir L. O'Brien) thought this was a moment when the House should consider whether the treatment which he had described should be continued. (Hear, hear.)

Sir GEORGE GREY said that every member in the House would sympathise with the hon. member (Sir L. O'Brien) on this occasion. Had the hon. member apprised him (Sir G. Grey) of his intention to bring this matter before the House, he should have had an opportunity of consulting the despatches on the subject, and been the better able to throw some light on the matter. The hon. member had truly stated that the Government had wished to act with as much indulgence in this case as was consistent with their public duty; and they issued instructions to the Governor of Van Diemen's Land, on the arrival of the hon. gentleman's brother and three other persons, to offer them tickets of leave, provided they would not avail themselves of that indulgence to leave the island. That was thankfully accepted by three of the convicts, but it was positively refused by the brother of the hon. gentleman. The Governor, acting in conformity with instructions which he had received, placed the hon. gentleman's relative on a part of the island appropriated to the reception of convicts, but assigned him separate apartments. The hon. gentleman was correct in stating that a ticket of leave was worth acceptance, he (Sir G. Grey) regretted to say; but he had had communication both with the bishop, with the chaplain, and other persons, and every indulgence had been shown him, consistent with the painful duty which they had to discharge.—(Hear, hear.) And he (Sir George Grey) thought if any complaint was to be brought against the Governor, it was for showing more indulgence in this case than he was entitled to show.—(Hear.) With regard to a relaxation as to his treatment, he (Sir G. Grey) only knew it from a communication which he had received from the hon. member; but he (Sir G. Grey) had no doubt that if the health of the hon. member's relative was to be endangered, that such relaxation would take place as was accorded in similar cases.

FACTORIES BILL.

The House then proceeded to consider the amendments to this bill on the report.

Sir G. GREY then proposed an amendment, the effect of which would be to limit that every young person, and every female above the age of 18 years, who shall be employed in any factory, or shall be allowed to remain in any room where any manufacturing process is carried on in any factory, shall not work on any part of the time which by the notice then fixed up in such factory in that behalf are mentioned as the times allowed for meals, shall be deemed to be employed contrary to the provisions of the said restrictions as amended by this act.—Agreed to.

Lord ASHLEY then proposed an amendment, the effect of which would be to bring children within the protective provisions of the bill, so as to prevent their working by relays.

On a division, the amendment was lost by a majority of one; the numbers being—For the amendment 159, and against it 160.

Lord J. MANNERS proposed an amendment in clause 1; the object of which was to make the measure in effect a ten hours bill, by substituting the hour of half-past five instead of six o'clock.

After considerable discussion, the committee divided, rejecting the amendment by a majority of 181 to 149.

The bill as amended was reported to the House.

METROPOLITAN INTERMENTS BILL.

The consideration of this bill in committee was resumed; and, the remaining clauses having been agreed to, the bill was ordered to be reported.

The House adjourned at one o'clock.

SURGICAL OPERATION UPON A LEOPARD.—The cheetah, or hunting leopard, recently presented to the Zoological Society by the Pasha of Egypt, having accidentally broken one of its legs during its gambols in the cage in which it is kept, amputation of the limb was deemed advisable, and the operation was skilfully performed on Monday last by Professor Simonds, of the Veterinary College, Camden Town. Previous to undergoing the operation the animal was made to inhale chloroform by applying to its mouth and nostrils a sponge moistened with that liquid and fastened to the end of a stick. Its dislike to this part of the process was very loudly expressed; it, however, soon fell under the influence of the chloroform, which evidently rendered it totally insensible to suffering, as it lay perfectly motionless and quiet during the operation and until its removal from the operating-table, and placed on some clean hay in its den. When it speedily revived and moved about on its remaining three legs as though nothing had occurred.

THE DUBLIN MAYORALTY.—The return to the mandamus, that "the office of Lord Mayor is not void," has been pronounced by the Queen's Bench to be a valid return, and so the long-vexed question of the mayoralty may be considered as at rest. No further attempt to oust Mr. Reynolds could be made before next November, and then he would be within a few weeks of retirement in due course. It is said, that the party in the corporation opposed to Mr. Reynolds's retention of civic dignities will proceed with the actions commenced against him for damages, for illegally acting as Lord Mayor after his name was struck off the burgess roll. The Court was unanimously of opinion the return was valid; the motion, therefore, to quash it was disallowed, but without costs.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The accounts of yesterday (Friday) from Paris represent the difference between France and England to have been amicably adjusted. Lord Normanby, it appears, was exceedingly anxious to bring the question to a satisfactory conclusion as soon as possible, in order that her Majesty's Ministers might be better able to meet the motion of Lord Stanley on Monday next.

The Bill for augmenting the President's salary continues to give some uneasiness to the French Cabinet, the committee on the measure being much divided on the subject. It is said that if the project be rejected by the Assembly, the Ministry will immediately resign

M. Duchatel and the Duc de Broglie are about leaving Paris for two country, to pay their respects to the ex-King.

RUSSIA.

The Russian Government has addressed a pointed note to the English Cabinet, repudiating the notion that British subjects living in Turkey or Naples owning the late revolts have any just right to claim indemnity for the losses they suffered during those disturbances. Should such unjust demands be enforced by arms (the note adds), Russia will then find itself compelled to indicate, in the most precise manner possible, the conditions upon which it will grant to British subjects the right of residence and of property within the Emperor's dominions.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

SCHOOL FOR THE INDIGENT BLIND.—A general meeting of the members of this society was held on Thursday, at the London Coffee House, Ludgate-hill; the Right Hon. Lord Radstock in the chair. The report stated that the objects of that institution were to impart to the indigent blind a sound moral and religious education, and to instruct them in a trade by which they might provide wholly or in part for their future subsistence. The number of pupils had been gradually increased from fifteen males to seventy-five males and seventy-six females. The number which had been admitted from the 1st of March to the 1st of June amounted to 152; and the treasurer's account showed a balance in their favour of £461. After a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated.

EASTERN COUNTIES RAILWAY.—On Thursday a special meeting of this company was held, at the London Tavern; E. L. Betts, Esq., in the chair; when that portion of a bill promoted by the Eastern Union Company, for power to the Eastern Counties Company to purchase the Harwich Railway and Pier, was disapproved, and cannot, therefore, become law; the directors declining to recommend the bill, on the ground that the Eastern Union Company had introduced more stringent clauses than they had approved of.

NORTH LONDON COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.—The first half-yearly distribution of prizes took place on Thursday, at the new vestry-room, Old St. Pancras Church, on which occasion the friends and parents of the pupils were present. The chair was taken by the Rev. Thomas Dale, M.A., Vicar of St. Pancras; and the meeting having been addressed by several reverend gentlemen, who made some very eloquent and appropriate remarks on the various branches of study, the several prizes were awarded to the successful candidates. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the day.

BROMPTON HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION.—On Wednesday, the eighth anniversary festival of this excellent charity took place at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street; Lord Feversham in the chair, supported by the Rev. Lord Sayo and Sele, the Rev. R. Montgomery, Mr. S. C. Hall, F.S.A., and other active supporters of the institution. The company assembled to the number of 100 guests: it had been announced that the Nepaulese Ambassador and his suite would be present; and a table of the choicest fruits, very tastefully decked with flowers, was prepared exclusively for the distinguished strangers. In the course of the evening a message was received from the Ambassador, stating, from indisposition, his inability to be present. The message was brought by one of his Excellency's suite, who was received with due respect, and, upon invitation from the noble chairman, took a seat upon his right hand, and remained a spectator of the proceedings until after the better health of the Ambassador had been drunk, when the Nepaulese gentleman conveyed his acknowledgments to the company, and retired. After the customary loyal and national toasts had been drunk, the report was then read by the hon. secretary. Lord Feversham proposed—"Prosperity to the Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest;" and, in the course of his address, advocated the claims of the charity with such effect, that the subscriptions received during the evening exceeded £1500. The "Noble Chairman," and several other toasts, followed. The festival was also honoured by the Ambassador's dinner maintained the high reputation of Messrs. Staples's establishment. The musical arrangements, by Mr. Gratian Cooke, assisted by Miss Ransford, Mr. J. A. Sporle, Mr. Leffler, &c., were highly approved of; and Mr. Tee o was an efficient toast-master. The society's report stated that since March 1849 200 patients have been received into the hospital, being an increase of seventy-eight over the number in the preceding year. The number of out-patients during the past year has been 1176, being an increase of 176. There are now waiting their turn for admission into the hospital 141 patients; so that the completion of the building has very strong claims upon public benevolence.

ROYAL GENERAL DISPENSARY.—A meeting of the governors of this institution took place on Wednesday, at the Dispensary, Aldersgate-street; Mr. Wood in the chair. The report stated that the total number of patients admitted during the year 1849 was 14,691, which consisted of 9139 from the entry-book; 3761 casualties; 1921 were under cure; 15,032 had been cured and relieved; and 98 only had died. The chairman stated, that, owing to the numerous expenses which had attended their exertions, they had been compelled to sell out £700 of their funded property, which had narrowed the income. He had been, when the public saw the benefits which this charity had conferred, they would come forward and assist them. This institution was the first hospital founded in England, and had always sustained the character of a general rather than a local charity; but its objects were to supply gratuitous medical and surgical relief to the sick poor, without regard to their places of abode, and visiting at their own habitations poor persons residing within the limits or liberties of the City, who might not be able, from the nature of their diseases, to attend the dispensary. The annual disbursements, independent of all subscriptions and donations, exceeded the annual income by £300

EAST INDIA HOUSE.—On Wednesday a Court of Directors was held at the East India House, when Sir Timothy Vansittart Stonhouse, Bart., was appointed a provisional member of council at Madras. Lieutenant-General Sir William Maynard Gomm, K.C.B., appointed on the instant Commander-in-Chief of the Company's Forces on the Bombay Establishment, was further appointed second member of council at that presidency.

QUEEN ADELAIDE MEMORIAL FUND.—A public meeting was held on Wednesday, in Sackville-street, Piccadilly, London, for the purpose of forming in honour of the memory of the late Queen Adelaide, to be applied to the relief of orphan daughters of naval and marine officers; Admiral Sir Charles Adam, G.C.B., in the chair. Amongst the gentlemen present were "Commissioner" Pilfold, Capt. Malcolm, the Hon. Capt. Maude, Rear-Admiral Vernon Harcourt, the Venerable Archdeacon Robinson, &c. The Chairman stated that the only provision for the destitute orphan daughters of naval men was the "Compassionate Fund," which was very limited in its application; and the "Royal Naval Female School," at Richmond, received only a limited number, as well as the "Adult Orphan Institution" in the Regent's Park, neither of which were wholly gratuitous. The resolutions which were passed stated that the Committee had the sanction of Queen Dowager, and consequent withdrawal of her powerful patronage and liberal support from the benevolent institutions of this country, more especially those connected with the naval service, would be injurious to the interests of widows and orphans of naval and marine officers; and that, to meet the exigency, it was desirable to raise a fund, to be called the "Queen Adelaide Memorial Fund," and that a subscription be entered into every year by which the fund for the purpose should be admitted to contribute: Also, that a society be formed for the administration of such fund, to consist of a president, vice-president, and a committee, the number of which council be limited to thirty, with power to fill up vacancies, and that three should form a quorum; and that the object of the society was to grant and towards the establishment of female orphans in any respectable situation in this or other countries, and to afford casual relief to such female orphans as shall be above the age when they cease to receive grants from the compassionate fund, the aid to cease on their marriage, and that local committees be formed on each of the naval outposts, and in such places as may be approved.

WESTMINSTER FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETY.—A public meeting was held at the Town Hall, Woolwich, on Monday evening last, for the purpose of explaining the principles and objects of this institution. Mr. Alderman Duncan, when Mr. J. Duncan at some length exhibited the great and beneficial results which society has every reason to expect—politically and morally—will be effected by the operation of Freehold Land Societies, not forgetting to impress upon the audience their value to the individual as a profitable investment of capital and as one of the best kinds of savings-bank, and as inducements to motives of prudence and forethought amongst the industrious classes.

MERCHANT TAILORS' SCHOOL.—On Thursday, the feast of St. Barnabas, according to annua. custom, the election of scholars of Merchant Tailors' School as Probationary Fellows and Exhibitioners to St. John's College, Oxford, and to the University of Cambridge, took place at the school, when the examination of the senior scholars in the presence of the President of St. John's College (Dr. Wynter), one of the Senior Fellows, the Master of the Merchant Tailors' Company (Mr. Compton), the Wardens, and the Examiners, Professors Browne and Malkin, the Lecturer and Warden, the President of the Royal Society, and those of the school (Dr. Hessey), the other masters, and a large assemblage of visitors, including many ladies, the party adjourned to the school room, where the usual oration were delivered by the senior scholars. Prizes were also distributed by Dr. Hessey. After the examination had terminated, the Merchant Tailors' Company gave a splendid banquet, to which they invited a numerous and very distinguished assemblage of guests. The galleries were crowded with ladies.

THE HOLLOWAY RAGGED SCHOOL.—This institution, which was established in 1848, in order to afford religious, moral, and useful instruction gratuitously to the most ragged and destitute children in and about Holloway, celebrated its anniversary on Tuesday evening, at the Corner, which was at the London Tavern, was in the customary excellent style of that establishment. Mr. Sheriff Nicoll presided, and after the usual loyal toasts, the chairman proposed the toast of the evening, "Prosperity to the Holloway Ragged School," and called upon his audience to testify their appreciation of such institutions by a liberal contribution. It was stated, during the evening, in order to show the necessity for these establishments, that from among the inhabitants of a district in Holloway, which included about sixty houses, there had been convictions for criminal offences during the past year amounting to nineteen in number. The subscriptions received during the evening amounted to £200.

INFANT ORPHAN ASYLUM, WANSTEAD.—On Monday, the annual meeting of this institution was held at the London Tavern, to receive the report of the committee, and to elect from a large number of candidates an additional number of orphans into the asylum. Mr. S. R. Graves, M.P., presided. Mr. Buckler read the report. It stated that the number of orphans in the asylum at the date of the last report (April 30, 1849) was 288. There had since been admitted by election 120, and by special rule from the infirmary 4 (24). Of these, 62 had left on the completion of their term. The deaths from the epidemics of infancy had been 13, and from all other causes 11. There now remained on the establishment 335, and that number would be increased by the election of that day. Not a single case of cholera occurred at the asylum during the whole period of the visitation. At the last annual meeting the committee were instructed to take measures for a public appeal, with a view to extend the benefit of the institution. At the time of the general thanksgiving, £5000 were contributed in consequence of the appeal, a circumstance which had enabled the committee to receive a larger number of children into the institution Legacies to the amount of £745 had been received since the last anniversary; annual subscriptions, £4531 17s. 6d.; life subscriptions, £2223 1s. 3d.; the presentations, £202 10s.; deducting expenses, there remained in the hands of the treasurer the sum of £310 6s. 4d. The adoption of the report having been moved and seconded, some conversation arose on the circumstance of there having been four chaplains within a very recent period, all of whom had left the institution. The secretary stated that it was very difficult to get a chaplain, as, although there were many applicants, they all objected to the appointment when they were told the nature of the duties and shown the house they had to live in. The service was now performed by the rector of Wanstead, who was non-resident. Several gentlemen condemned the course the committee had taken with respect to their chaplains, more especially as the Bishop of London had positively declared that he would not license a non-resident chaplain. The report was at length adopted, and officers for the ensuing year were elected. It was then resolved, on the motion of Mr. Alderman Finnis, that a detailed account should be published of the total amounts expended on the children (independent of the amounts expended on the management of the children); it being stated that £42,000 had been expended on the building. After the election of forty children as inmates of the asylum, and the transaction of some routine business, the meeting separated.

THE LEICESTER-SQUARE SOUP KITCHEN.—Although employment is very general at the present season amongst the humber classes of the community, yet the applications for relief at this institution have averaged, for the last month, no fewer than about 500 a day. In the winter season, the average ranged as high as 1800 to 2000. Other objects besides those originally contemplated by its founders have been projected and carried out by the committee of the establishment. For some months past they have been fitted up for the use of those who are houseless and friendless, and in March last a registry was opened, where the names and occupations of those seeking employment are gratuitously entered. This registry has been attended with excellent effects; for, out of 606 applications made to the secretary since it was established, upwards of 300 have, by that means, been placed in various situations. Independent, too, of the usual class of paupers who are fed at the soup-kitchen, the children belonging to ten ragged schools are daily supplied from the same establishment.

CONSECRATION OF A CHURCH IN SOUTHWARK.—On Monday morning the Bishop of Winchester consecrated a church in Southwark under somewhat peculiar circumstances. The building, which is one of ancient date, stands in St. George's-fields, and has been known as a chapel in connexion with the Philanthropic Society. The removal of the society's premises to Redhill, near Reigate, rendered the chapel useless for the purposes to which it had hitherto been devoted, and arrangements were consequently made with the rector of St. George's that an ecclesiast cal district should be assigned to the chapel, and that henceforth it should become one of the parochial churches. In order to carry out this object, the ceremony of consecration was rendered necessary, and Monday was appointed by the Bishop for that purpose. The Bishop has licensed the Rev. G. E. Tate, M.A., late curate of Great Warley, Essex, to be the first incumbent of the district church.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.—On Saturday afternoon, a most melancholy accident occurred in one of the ponds situated in the vicinity of the Lower Heath, Hampstead, which resulted in the death of Mr. Sibley, schoolmaster at Kentish Town, and of the son of Mr. Barnes, aged thirteen, a pupil of Miss Elliss, Camden-town. It appears that Mr. Sibley had left Highgate with his pupils, for the purpose of walking to Hampstead, as was his usual custom on Saturday afternoons, and while in the vicinity of the ponds he was alarmed by the cries of a youth who was bathing, and seeing his dangerous and perilous situation, without a moment's hesitation, or even removing his coat or hat, plunged into the pond, which is of considerable depth, to rescue the unfortunate youth. In the struggles which ensued from his noble and generous attempts to save the sinking lad, he became so faint and exhausted (although a very good swimmer) that, after several ineffectual efforts to gain the bank, they became victims to a watery and premature grave. The body of the unfortunate gentleman was taken out in about sixteen minutes, but life was completely extinct, although medical assistance was speedily procured. The body of the ill-fated youth could not be found until, by the peculiarity of the construction of the ponds, which contain a narrow gully or ditch at the bottom, and his disconsolate father and friends were occupied for many hours in endeavouring in vain to discover its locality. On Sunday morning dawned they resumed their painful labours, and at five o'clock the body was found not very far from the spot where they had both sunk. What throws an additional gloom over this fearful catastrophe is the fact that Mrs. Sibley had actually started from Highgate to meet her ill-fated husband, and the melancholy event was abruptly communicated to her by the pupils, the sudden shock almost depriving her of reason.

FATAL ACCIDENT DURING BATHING.—A young man lost his life whilst bathing in the Serpentine on Sunday morning. Although the officers of the Royal Humane Society were on the spot immediately the alarm was given, they failed to raise the body till life had become quite extinct. The body was under water about ten minutes, and was not once seen by the visitors from the mount of its first disappearing. The unfortunate deceased was an artificial flower maker, and a fine young man about 21 years of age. This is the second accident that has happened within the last few days.

FIRE AT THE ST. MARTIN'S DISTILLERY.—On Monday morning, at a few minutes before nine o'clock, a fire, which at one period threatened destruction to the whole of the surrounding property, broke out in the extensive premises in the occupancy of Messrs. Deschamp and Montcourey, as patent distillers, situate in Castle-street, Leicester-square. The engines from Chandos-street brigade and numerous other stations were soon in operation, which at length had the desired effect of extinguishing the flames, but not before 200 gallons of spirits in the cellar were destroyed, and the spirit-casks and building severely damaged by fire and water. The damage, which is considerable, will fall upon the Land-and-Tenant Fire Office

SCAFFOLD ACCIDENT.—On Monday afternoon, between three and four o'clock, a scaffold, on which seven men were employed, at the new buildings, Calthorpe-street, Camden-town, sudden y gave way, and the whole of them were forced to the ground from a height of about 30 feet. The present moment, therefore, all fell at the same time and they were buried beneath it. A number of men set to work, and the poor fellows were speedily extricated. Mr. Palgrave, the builder, of Elm-street, stationed a fireman at the top of the flames, but one 250 gallons of spirits in the cellar were destroyed, and the spirit-casks and building severely damaged by fire and water. The damage, which is considerable, will fall upon the Land-and-Tenant Fire office

SCAFFOLD ACCIDENT.—A fearful accident, attended with fatal results, occurred on Wednesday evening, at the house of Mr. Vaughan, oil and colourman, Stone's-End, Borough. One of Mr. Vaughan's female servants being gone to the top of the house, which is four stories high, either for the purpose of cleaning windows or enjoying some fresh air, it is supposed she suddenly gid. y, and was precipitated from a height of sixty feet to the pavement below, without the slightest break to her fall. On being picked up, the unfortunate woman was found to have had her brains dashed to atoms, besides several other parts of her body being dreadfully mutilated.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—Births registered in the week ending Saturday, June 8:—Males, 720; females, 698: total, 1358. Deaths during the same period: Males, 490; females, 434: total, 844. The deaths in the previous week were only 736. In the three corresponding weeks of 1847-49 the deaths ranged from 786 to 971; and, taking the corresponding weeks of ten years, the average is 861, or, round in the ratio of population, 926. The present month, therefore, shows a decrease on the average equal to 95. With the increasing warmth of the weather, the mortality from diseases of the respiratory organs steadily declines. Excluding consumption, the deaths in this class in the last four weeks have been successively 145, 138, 105, and 94; and during this period the mean temperature has risen gradually from 47 deg. to 59 deg. In the same weeks the deaths from consumption have been 124, 125, 103, and 141; showing a sudden increase in the last, and an approach to the corrected average, which is 167. In the zymotic or epidemic class of diseases, 172 fatal cases are enumerated, having been in the preceding week 207, and the average being 201. Small-pox carried off 9 persons, scarlatina 19, and hooping-cough 25, the three epidemics all showing a decrease on the average. Measles, however, which destroyed 26 children, an amount differing little from the average, has suddenly increased on the previous week, when there were only 13 deaths. Typhus also exhibits a decrease, for while there were only 25 deaths in the former week, there were 39 in the la . which, however, is not more than usual at this period. Diarr.œa and dysentery appear to be on the rather more prevalent, as the last three weeks have numbered 13, 19, and 22. On the 3d of June, the wife of an engineer, aged , died at 21, Chatham-place, Lock's-fields, St. Mary Newington, of "vomiting and purging" on the following (12 days), and on the 4th of June, at 31, Turnmill-street, Clerkenwell, the daughter of a labourer, aged 13 months, died of "cholera infan.a (12 hours)" and on the 31st of May, at 38, Ashe-street, Hoxton Old Town, the daughter of an engraver, aged 1 year, died of "cholera (2 days)." A man, of 36 years, who is described as having been habitually intemperate, died of "delirium tremens, apoplexy." Another fatal case of intemperance is also recorded. Three children were suffocated in bed. It appears, from the information of deaths in public institutions, that in the last four weeks in workhouses, 59 in hospitals (of which 6 were in military and naval establishments), and 7 in lunatic asylums.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The mean reading of the barometer in the week was 29 878; the daily menn was above 30 in. on the first three days of the week. The mean temperature was 55° 3'; it was above the average of the same week in seven years on the last four days, and below it during the rest; the highest in the sun was about 104° on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday The wind was in the east on the first three days; it veered to the south-west on the afternoon of Wednesday, and continued generally in that direction throughout the rest of the week.

UNITED LAW CLERKS' SOCIETY.—On Tuesd y, the 18th ult., the anniversary festival of this society took place at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Mr. Justice Talfourd in the chair. From a statement of the present condition of the society, it appeared that to members disabled by illness, during the year, the society has paid various sums, amount together to £1193 2s. 6d.; and the total expenditure, on account of illness since the last dissolution, is £2,000. There are still four members in receipt of the superannuation allowance. one member receives yearly £36 8s., the other three £31 4s. each. This allowance is granted for life to all members permanently disabled from following their employment.

GAMBLING IN CALIFORNIA.—The Sacramento Transcript gives the following:—"By a gentleman who arrived in this city on Wednesday evening, we learn that an affray took place at Bird's store on the Middle Fork, in which two lives were lost. It appears that two men, one named Thomas Wright, the other Helm, got into a dispute about a game of cards, in the midst of which Wright drew a revolver, and shot Helm through the neck, killing him instantly. He then turned upon a brother of Helm's, who, it seems, had been involved in the difficulty, and, while attempting to fire at him, fell by the arm, and at the same time inflicted several deep wounds in the side of Wright, which caused his death in a few moments. The brother of Helm has not been implicated since the occurrence, and it does not appear that he was at all in fault

ARAB SERPENT CHARMERS,

AT THE GARDENS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY, REGENT'S-PARK.

THESE remarkable persons, whom our artist had an opportunity of sketching at their first performance, state that they are of the tribe called Rufaiah, who hand down the mystery of serpent-charming from father to son, and whom the most venomous species have no power to injure.

Rufai, whom they regard as the founder of their craft, appears to have been a Mussulman saint. His tomb still exists in the neighbourhood of Bozrah, and is frequently visited by the Rufaiah desirous of paying honour to his memory. It is said to be infested by great numbers of serpents of various species; but they are strictly controlled by the spirit of Rufai, and are forbidden by him to injure the pilgrims, who enter freely and fearlessly among them.

Whatever amount of faith is to be attached to their legend, it is certain that the Rufaiah now in this country handle the Egyptian cobra—which they call haiem nousacher—in a manner which evinces their entire fearlessness of its bite. They irritate it, soothe it, receive its open-mouthed attack, or its gentle caress, as their own caprice or the request of the spectators may suggest.

The boy is the most active operator, and generally monopolises nearly the whole of the performance; the old man, Jabar Abou Haijah, occasionally supporting him. Jabar is held in Egypt to be the father of the profession: he acted as collector to the French savans in 1801, and has been conversant with snake-lore from his earliest youth.

THE SERPENT-CHARMERS AT THE GARDENS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY, REGENT'S-PARK.

After exhibiting three or four cobras together, in the exact and striking pose which is common to the Egyptian and to the Indian species, they generally conclude their performance by a feat, of which we are at present unable to suggest a solution. Catching up a serpent without any apparent premeditation, the boy opens its mouth, either spits or blows into it, and then throws it down apparently lifeless. As it falls, there it lies, dank and limp, until he chooses to take it up. After two or three passes through his fingers, it recovers its suspended vitality, and on being placed again on the ground, exhibits itself instantly in as rapid motion as if no interruption had occurred to it.

The practice of serpent-charming among the Arabs appears to differ essentially from that of the Hindoos. It is certainly as old as the time of Mohammed, and probably derives its origin from a period of the most remote antiquity.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE COMMODORE FOR THE EAST INDIES.—It is understood that Captain Lord George Paulet (1833), who formerly commanded the Carysfort, 26, in the Pacific, will succeed Captain Plumridge as second in command on the East India and China station, and that he will hoist a second-class broad pendant on board the iron screw steam-frigate Megæra, fitting at Sheerness, with expedition, to be ready by the 10th of July for commissioning.

UNATTACHED PAY TO GENERAL OFFICERS.—To the unattached pay of 2os. per diem Major-Generals J. Wheatham and T. W. Robins have now succeeded, from the 22nd ult. Major-General Whetham has not seen much service since the assault on Monte Video, for on that occasion he was so desperately wounded as to be obliged to submit to amputation of the right leg. Major-General Robins began his war services in the Guards, under Sir John Moore, and subsequently joined the 7th Hussars, and was with them in the Peninsula and at Waterloo.

THE ARCTIC EXPEDITION.—The vessel purchased by Lady Franklin, in order to proceed by a different route from the other expedition in search of her noble husband, and named the Prince Albert, took her departure from Aberdeen harbour on Wednesday evening week. The vessel was fitted out by Messrs. Dudbie, and is of small dimensions. Lady Franklin arrived on Monday, and, after taking a friendly interest in the arrangements, witnessed from the pier the departure of the vessel. The Prince Albert was tugged out of the harbour about eight o'clock. She is manned by about twenty superior seamen, under the direction of Commander Forsyth.

A Royal warrant has just been issued to the army, revising the rates of pay granted to trumpeters, drummers, buglers, and fifers, to be hereafter appointed or reappointed: viz. Life Guards, 2s. 1d.; Royal Horse Guards, 1s. 10d.; Cavalry of the Line, 1s. 5d.; Foot Guards, 1s. 2d.; Infantry of the Line, West India Regiments, Cape Mounted Riflemen, 8d. Helena Regiment, and Royal Newfoundland Companies, 1s. 1d.; Royal Canadian Rifle Regiment, 1s. 2d.; Royal Malta Fencible Regiment, 10d.; and Ceylon Rifle Regiment, 9½d. Those who are appointed at home before the date of the warrant, and abroad before the 1st of September, 1850, will be continued in receipt of their present pay; but, if reappointed after those dates, their pay will be issued according to the new scale.

THE ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY.—The second exhibition of plants and fruits took place on Wednesday, and the fête was certainly most successful of the season. The eagerness to gain admission to the gardens even before the appointed hour for the opening of the gates was unusually great; and the tickets distributed, exclusive of those of the Fellows, amounted to no less than 18,000 for this and the succeeding show, of which number it was calculated that upwards of 16,000 were used during Wednesday. The exhibition fully maintained their former well-earned reputation, the collections being both choice and abundant. The display of fruit was extremely good considering the lateness of the season, a circumstance to which may be attributed the comparative smallness of the quantity sent for competition. A great novelty in the exhibition were some cut specimens of the new Water Lily, Victoria regia, grown at Ston House, the seat of the Duke of Northumberland: two of its enormous leaves measured more than five feet in diameter. There were also shown some very beautiful vases of flowers modelled in wax. The chief feature of the gardens, however, still continues to be the magnificent assemblage of American plants, without exception the most unique of all the floricultural expositions hitherto seen. The bands of the three cavalry household regiments were in attendance. Among the company were their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge, Prince George, and the Princess Mary, attended by Lady Augusta Cadogan, the Baroness Ahlefeldt and Mr. Edmund St. John Mildmay, the Dukes of Wellington and Norfolk, the Marquisses of Sligo and Ailsbury, the Earls of Egremont and Rosebery, Lord Walsingham, Barons Colborne, Bianey, and Goldsmid

NEW MODE OF EXTINGUISHING FIRE.—On Saturday, Mr. Phillips, the inventor and patentee of a mode of extinguishing fires by the employment of carbonic acid and nitrogen gases, which is now well known to the public, attended at the practice range, in the Plumstead Marshes, to exhibit the working of his invention. The Marquis of Anglesey, Master General of the Ordnance, Lord Brougham, and a great number of distinguished persons, attended to witness the experiment. A tolerably large and substantial wooden house, which was stored with furniture, consisting of deal chairs and table, cheap mattresses, &c., had been erected. All things being ready, some combustible materials were placed inside the house and fired. The heat soon cracked the windows, and thus, by allowing the free admission of air, neutralised the power of the gases employed in the process, rendered all attempts to subdue the flames vain, and, notwithstanding active efforts on the part of the inventor, the whole building was soon wrapped in a sheet of flame, and ere many minutes had elapsed, the destruction of the building was inevitable. There was a general feeling of regret expressed on the part of all present at the failure of the experiment.

BIRD'S NEST IN A LETTER-BOX.

MR. ALFRED SMEE, in his very interesting volume, entitled "Instinct and Reason," adduces many curious instances of birds selecting strange localities for their nesting-places; but we question either of his instances exceeds in singularity the specimen here illustrated, from a sketch by Peter Bearblock, Esq., of Hornchurch.

The penny postage having greatly increased the bulk as well as the number of postal communications, the apertures through which the letters are put have been proportionally enlarged: and, in this case, it has facilitated a strange departure from general rule. Withinside the door of the Post-office at Squirre's-Heath, near Hornchurch, a pair of those beautiful birds, the blue tit-mouse, having entered by the orifice made for the posting of letters, have contrived to carry thereon an incredible mass of materials for nidification, as feathers, hair, and moss, covering the entire floor of the box some inches deep; in the centre of which they have made their little nursery, and are now rearing ten little ones. The hen kept her post, while sitting, three weeks, notwithstanding being daily covered up with letters and newspapers; as many as thirty of the former having been removed from around her on severa occasions. With this interruption, besides letters and newspapers continually dropped into the box, the bird has built her nest, laid her eggs (each about the size of a pea), and carried on incubation; all the ten eggs have been hatched, and, at the date of our Correspondent's letter, this moderate family were expected to come out into the feathered world in a few days.

BLUE TITMOUSE'S NEST IN A LETTER-BOX NEAR HORNCHURCH.

THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S FETE AT CHISWICK.

ON Saturday, the second fête of the season took place at the Society's Gardens Chiswick. The weather was splendid; and the company of high fashion and very large number, there being from 5000 to 6000 persons present.

Among the noble and distinguished persons early in the grounds were the Duke and Duchess of Bedford, Duke and Duchess of Northumberland, Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, Marchioness of Westmoreland, Marchioness of Waterford, Countess of Jersey and Lady Clementina Villiers, Countess of Macclesfield, Lord and Lady Bridport, Lady Rolle, Marchioness of Exeter, Lord and Lady Canning, Baron Brunnow (the Russian Ambassador) and Baroness Brunnow, Lord and Lady Morley, Lord William Fitzroy, Lord and Lady Wharncliffe, Earl Grey, Earl of Zetland, Lord Sondes, Earl of Orkney, and Lord Portman. The Nepaulese ambassador, and the other members of the mission, were also present, and excited very great interest. They were dressed in their national costume. The Ambassador, in addition to the other costly articles of his apparel, wore a pair of rich light satin trowsers. The three individuals constituting the mission appeared exceedingly delighted with the appearance of the grounds, and the vast assemblage of beauty and fashion by which the gardens were graced; as well as with the music of the 1st Life Guards, the Horse Guards (Blue), and the Coldstream Guards.

The exhibition was one of the best for some years past, the state of the weather for the previous fortnight having been very favourable. The Victoria Lily was again the great floral attraction. It excited even more attention than it did at the May exhibition: it will be found engraved in No. 399 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

The second fête of the season is usually considered best for company, and the display on Saturday supported this distinction. The May exhibition is the best for flowers, and the July for fruit.

We have engraved a portion of the large Conservatory in the Gardens: its entire dimensions are 184 feet long, 25 feet high, and about 30 feet wide.

THE GREAT CONSERVATORY IN THE GARDENS OF THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY, AT CHISWICK.

AMERICAN CIVILIZATION IN CALIFORNIA.—I forgot to notice in my last the brutal conduct of certain Americans in this country, and the butcheries they committed on a number of innocent Indians. It appears that a party of twenty-four armed horsemen from the Red Woods proceeded to a ranch, set fire to the rancherie, and chased about one hundred Indians to the mountains. They then proceeded to another ranch, where, determined that they would not allow their victims to escape, they came stealthily on them, and shot down 6 men. They then proceeded to another place, but their game had fled. Then to another, where they killed two and wounded one. They have since threatened to kill every male and female in the country; but an end was put to their horrible career. Several are now in chains awaiting trial. They will, no doubt, have to suffer the punishment their infamous savage crimes demand. There has since been a repetition of the same conduct by other Americans, but a few are caught, and I hope such brutalities will be heard of no more.—Californian Correspondent of the Morning Chronicle.

Letters from Rome state that the Ambassador from the Sublime Porte had received orders to pay his respects to the Pope of Rome on his way to Vienna.

SCENE FROM HALEVY'S NEW OPERA OF "LA TEMPESTA," AT HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.—"LA TEMPESTA."

"La Tempesta," given for the first time on Saturday, forms a new epoch in lyrical art. Since the days of the great impresario Barbaja, when composers and artists of genius were as numerous as they are now rare, the lyrical stage has yearly become more needy in its repertoire. With the exception of that extravagant composer, Verdi, the Italian maestri have disappeared. On account of the extreme rarity of a complete troupe of first-rate talent, and of the necessity of concealing vocal mediocrity, and in consequence of the tendency of an age in real life, itself become essentially dramatic, increased plot, action, and intensity

SIGNOR LABLACHE AS "CALIBAN."

M. SCRIBE.

of interest have been required; so that Da Ponte or Metastasio himself would not satisfy the exigences in the present day of audiences in great European capitals; and Rossini would expose himself to a very critical measure of sibilation if he were to give us another opera with a libretto like those with which he achieved some of the greatest of his first successes. In spite of these circumstances, and of England being the country in all the world that spends most money on lyrical music, no effort for at least a quarter of a century was made to obtain an opera expressly composed for the peculiarities of a troupe, by a dramatist joined to a composer of eminence. Mr. Lumley made the first attempt in this direction. But Verdi, the only Italian composer left, had already exhausted the melody that characterises "Nabuco" and "Ernani;" and it is difficult to decide what is most condemnable in "I Masnadieri," the music or the libretto. In the immense success of the second effort made at Her Majesty's Theatre here is nothing to excite surprise. The most rising composer of the day, the greatest librettist as well as dramatist of the age, have written an opera expressly for such performers as Sontag, Grisi, Giuliani, Bancardé, Coletti, and Lablache; the smaller parts are excited by artists of merit; and the spirting of Carlotta Grisi, with a select bevy of danseuses, is interwoven like a thread of gold with the whole tissue of the opera. If this be added the exceedingly beautiful ballet, the dexterous introduction of English melody awakening still further national predilection, and that the authors themselves have been personally, and most laboriously and sedulously, at work for the last month, superintending the production of this opera, the fortunes, present or to come, of this noble work cannot astonish.

MADAME SONTAG AS "MIRANDA."

Having marked the position this opera assumes in lyrical annals, and having previously given, last week, the plot, we shall as briefly as possible state in what form the successive scenes and morceaux presented themselves on the night of performance. One of the essential differences betwixt Shakespeare's and Scribe's plot is, that the English "Tempest" (except in a passing description) is without a tempest—a most important subject for a composer to treat. The tempest in the opera forms the prologue. First comes an introduction: a pianissimo passage represents the hushed whispers of the winds, the lull of the elements previous to the outburst; then the wind instruments whose sounds swell out and then almost die away, exquisitely describe the fitful state of the elements; during which the curtain rises. King Alfonso and Antonio are seen sleeping in a tent on the deck of a ship; their dreams are troubled. A chorus of avenging invisible spirits, as in an ancient Greek tragedy, is heard threatening the vengeance of Heaven for the cruelty of the Princes to Prospero. Ariel, under whose commands the mortal tempest is administered, appears with her attendant spirits, bearing torches, and infuses new elements of terror in the dreams of the guilty King and usurping Duke. At her call, the winds rise, the ships tossed by the violence of the waves; the Princes wake—their followers and the crew rush out in dismay from their cabins, and express their terror in a magnificent clashing chorus of dramatic feeling, colouring, and action. They then fall on their knees, and sing a soft-toned prayer on the appropriately chosen modal of the Sicilian prophesy: it offers a charming contrast to the previous chorus. The anger of Heaven appears for the time to be calmed by this prayer: but soon the raging of the elements is renewed; the music, vocal and instrumental, expresses a despair—the waves sweep the decks—the ship is engulphed, and the curtain falls. This prologue lasts twenty minutes. We have engraved its finest scenic passage.

The first act opens in the spacious and well-wrought elves before the cavern-abode of Prospero, which, above all when Ariel appears in the distance, forms a tableau of real enchantment. Carlotta Grisi makes her entrée, so lightly tripping to that tune of "Where the bee sucks" as to realise the very idea of airy wings, and not her feet: the national English song, most splendidly orchestrated and varied, wound up the delight of the audience to enthusiasm. Then occurs the terza d'entrata of Miranda (Sontag), in a passage of beautiful simplicity, admirably united to the character, with the addition of certain passages also fitted to display the charming execution of the vocalist. Prospero (Coletti) joins his daughter; he calls Caliban (Lablache), the Quasimodo and the hero of this opera, and a trio follows, in which the stern vengeance of the father, and the lowering indignation of Prospero, and the sweet conciliatory spirit of Miranda, are most admirably represented, and with the utmost dramatic feeling. Prospero then dismisses Caliban to his servile duties, Miranda to repose within the cave, and summons forth Ariel to give account of what she has done with the ship, the passengers, and the crew. Some words which here he addresses to Ariel, show how ingeniously M. Scribe has rendered consistent the employment of Carlotta Grisi, in person so apt a representative of "the delicate Ariel," "the dainty sprite." The Ariel of the "Tempests" is supposed to have been deprived of speech by the sorceress Sycorax—

> Gentle Ariel,
> Beloved and faithful sprite,
> To whom Heaven has denied the gift of speech,
> But give to thee, in its place,
> A grace that speaks,
> A gesture that dances,
> All thou would'st utter—

as Prospero eloquently discourses to his "minister of grace."

With the seventh scene of this act appears Fernando, led on to the abode of Miranda by a chorus of invisible spirits—a chorus of which Mdme. Gulfani, behind the scenes, sings a strofa with a spirit worthy of an accomplished artiste. Fernando's first aria (sung with most melodious tone and pathos), "Mal ti lamenghi un misero," is an opportunity ill-deemed for the delectation of amateurs, and will, doubtless, be doomed to the use of peripatetic musicians, and perpetuated by grinders of street organs. It is almost immediately followed, on the entrance of Miranda, by a duet, "Per me pur finora," which ends the first act; and in which the firm, melodious tones of the tenor hold the motivo, whilst the soprano is allowed to disport herself in horizere, such as those in which Mdme. Sontag has no equal

With the second act, the interest, both musical as well as dramatic, increases tenfold. Here the artistic magnificence of this opera in all respects is demonstrated to the most ordinary observer: Caliban, wandering about the island, finds the cave where Sycorax is imprisoned, is told by his mother where three flowers grow, each of which will afford him the accomplishment of a wish. Caliban's triumph first over Ariel, whom he imprisons in a tree, and next over Fernando, and his brutal love, affords the composer and Lablache the opportunity of displaying all the treasures of their respective arts. Lablache's interpretation of the character of Caliban, in this second act, exceeds all praise; he has realized all Shakspeare dreamt of, and makes the spectators for an hour unmindful and careless for what the wretched-singing Caliban of the English stage. Sontag, representing Miranda, indignant innocence in the power of brute force, displays likewise the most delicate traits of dramatic truth. The chorus of spirits which succeeds, expressed by composer and vocalist, in the duet, scene III., "Pure mi scuota," is truly beyond all ordinary commendation. The delight of the audience was still further increased in the next scene, during which, leaving away with Miranda, encounters the crew of the ship. At the beginning of this scene, Farocli, in the costume of a young mariner, sings a bribolà "Nostr'omo l'mozzo" with something of the spirit and humour of a boy of the chorus, which presents this great vocalist in a new point of view, and will unquestionably add to her fame; grace, ease, sprightliness, and energy she displays in turn, and the scene is received with enthusiasm. As intoxicated with Caliban drinks, and his voice and his motions are contrasted with the laughter of the crew, and the despairing tones of Miranda, a still more admirable performance takes place. Caliban's drunken song, "Se tutto gira," with a broken curious rhythm, to which he dances, fills up to an overflow the measure of the audience's delight. The motionless lethargy with which Miranda, as she retires, strikes, by means of the talisman she has purloined, this assemblage of eccentric dancers as the curtain falls, makes this second act finish with a dramatic effect worthy of its conception.

The third act, though inferior to the second, contains some very remarkable morceaux. At the rise of the curtain Antonio and Alonzo are discovered, overwhelmed with fatigue and anxiety: Alfonso fearing that Ferdinand has been unable to escape from the wreck; Antonio fears for his own existence. Both are tormented by remorse. These sentiments are well expressed in the duo, "Non è reposo," which was sung in a very creditable manner by Messrs. Lorenzo and F. Labiache. At its conclusion Prospero enters, and, in the fine trio which ensues, reproaches them with their crime. Coletti acquitted himself, as a consummate artiste that he is, of that part of it which fell to his share, and displayed, in his acting, more energy and feeling than is even his wont. Prospero then discloses his love and grants forgiveness to his two enemies. Ariel is next appearing at his call, by his superior power he releases her from her prison, when he learns from the spirit, whose pantomime is most expressive and graceful, the abduction of Miranda. After vowing deadly vengeance, he, by the agency of Caliban's son, the sigal when Miranda appears, and in a recitative, replete with pathos, describes the passion Ferdinand has awakened in her. She expresses her dread that it should be a spell the young stranger may have cast upon her. Sycorax, in whose rods is close by, immediately takes advantage o her error, and feigning to be one of Prospero's invisible messengers, urges her to put to death the impostor who has designs upon her father's life and throne. She raises the fatal knife, and, as Ferdinand is seen asleep; she looks at him, and in an aria, "Questa fronte," in which the composer has admirably blended her love for her father, and the resolution she has to obey his orders, nerves herself to strike the fatal blow. She is about to strike, when Ferdinand wakes, and, in the duo which follows, Miranda acquaints him with the barbarous advice she has received, whilst the young Prince expresses his readiness to receive death at her hands. At this moment, however, under the influence of Caliban, who here awakens-ed from the magic trance, advances, and, instead of immolating the two lovers, as Caliban, wishes, lall at the feet of their Prince. Prospero, Alfonso, and Antonio appear, and Miranda throws herself into her father's arms in varied accents of those of Rode, which were applauded from every part of the house. The scene then changes, and discovers one of the most beautiful specimens of scene-painting that can be imagined. A gorgeous vessel under full sail is seen advancing to the shore, while the chorus sang once more the tune of "Where the bee sucks"—a most happy idea of the composer's, who deserves no less praise for the manner in which it was introduced than for the admirable ring given to it by the instrumentation. At the close of this magnificent display, the curtain falls as the vessel reaches the shore; when arti.ses. composer, author, conductor, and impresario, were all called forward to receive the plaudits in varied accents of delight. Second, such a truly artistic work is seldom been seen on any stage; it is full of charming contrasts, employs every resource of modern art, and is free from all that is meretricious, glaring, and noisy. It was repeated on Tuesday and Thursday with increased effect.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Mr——'s "Roberto il Diavolo" was received, on its first representation, on Saturday last, with acclamations of delight, with such strong demonstrations of gratification as proved the increasing popularity of this great work, with its present powerful cast, including, as it does, Grisi and Castellan, Mario and Tamberlik, Mei, Massol, Polonini, Lagliadoni, and Formes

On Tuesday was the seventh performance this season of the "Huguenots." There was a very fashionable and numerous attendance, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge occupying her Majesty's box. An announcement was made that, owing to the hoarseness of Mdme. Castellan, Mdlle Vera had undertaken the part of Margarita de Valois, at a very short notice. When, however, the curtain dropped at the end of the first scene, and it rose again on the first scene of the second act, omitting the whole of the scene in the Château of Chenonceaux, which includes the scena of Margarita, the chorus of bathers, the recitatives of Valentina, the duo between the Queen and Raoul, the second song of the Page, and the Oath of Reconciliation, a disturbance ensued, which completely stopped the progress of the "Ra ta plan" chorus. At length, Mr. Harris, who arranges the spectacle at this theatre, appeared, and addressed the house, stating, that, as Mdlle. Vera had only received the part at five o'clock, it was absolutely necessary to omit the second scene of the first act. This explanation was not satisfactory, but the malcontents were still strong, and it was only when Grisi crossed the stage, in the bridal procession, that peace was restored, and the opera was then heard with the usual enthusiasm to the last. The necessity of omitting so important a part in an opera, according to the Parisian system, is never felt under the Italian management: this is a great mistake, for nothing can be worse than a change of opera at the eleventh hour.

Rossini's "Semiramide" has not been received on Thursday night, Mdme. Castellan and Signor Ronconi sustaining the parts of Arsaca and the Ghost, for the first time, but, owing to the continued indisposition of Mdme. Castellan, the opera was changed to "Lucrezia Borgia," with the second and third acts of "Masaniello."

NEW STRAND.

On Saturday, Mrs. Glover made her farewell appearance in the character of Mrs. Montpurgo, and was enthusiastically received. After the performance, she was led before the curtain by Mr. Farren, and, in addressing the audience, showed much feeling, being able to say little more than that she had been fifty-three years on the stage, and was greatly indebted to them and to Mr. Farren for the brief engagement. We are happy to learn that a benefit at least, if not a farewell at one of the largest houses (perhaps, Her Majesty's) is intended for this distinguished actress, which the Queen has consented to patronise.

On Monday, an adaptation from Scribe's "Kaoul and Liebe," by Morris Barnett, was produced. It is in three acts, and entitled "Power and Principle." The part of Louise Müller was admirably sustained by Mrs Stirling. Mr. Barnett has contrived to give to the drama a happy ending, according to him, Count Ferdinand of Ehrhalt (Mr. Leigh Murray) wrings the secret from the villain Wurmz (Mr. H. Farren), just before his impending marriage, and, rushing into the presence of his mistress, prevents her from taking poison. Nor is this the only instance in which the original has been modified: characters have been omitted, and the incidents compressed; so that now the situations are brought closely together, and each act concludes with a striking tableau. The wife of the first act reward, Baron Von Kalb, was performed by Mr. Compton, who rendered it sufficiently ridiculous. Mr. Barnett has himself performed the old musician and father; and, although the part was considerably reduced, illustrated the character with those touches of effect which, in passages of pathos, render this actor irresistibly pathetic. The piece was perfectly successful.

Mr. Farren has, we understand, become the lessee of the Olympic.

HAYMARKET.

On Saturday a new piece was produced, which had precedence of Mr. Douglas Jerrold's "Catspaw." It is an adaptation by Mr. Webster of the French drama "Un Mari Anonyme" (a piece already Anglicised for the Lyceum), and bears the title of "None but the Brave deserve the Fair." The part of Pierre Laroi was performed by Mr. Webster himself, who exhibited in it his nonchalance and manly bearing proper to the adventurous character. The Lady Isabella de Tremulo was supported very powerfully by Miss Reynolds, who indicated, by nice shades of feeling, the rising interest she was doomed to experience for her husband's bridegroom. When, in the second act, Don Flores returns and claims her for his wife, her love became touching in its obvious fidelity and force. The affair with the Army proved very effective; and the catastrophe, turning upon the hero's delicate sense of honour in a trying crisis, was exceedingly pleasing. The curtain fell with applause; and, on being called before it, Mr. Webster acknowledged the authorship of the piece.

SADLER'S WELLS.

The profits of the performances for the Exposition in 1851 have been paid to the City of London Committee, and amount to £107.

M. SCRIBE.

INDEPENDENT of the interest his genius excites, as long as the higher drama will be considered the most refined and intellectual entertainment of society, no educated person can think of M. Scribe without some feeling of gratitude. His works, in the original, or copied, translated, imitated, and too often travestied, defaced, and mangled, have amused the whole world, from Paris to Constantinople, from St. Petersburgh even to Mexico. Nor has the English stage been the least benefitted by him. We could mention the name of a manager of one of our first theatres, who says, that, whenever he was in any difficulty for want of novelty, he always resorted to the translation of one of Scribe's pieces, with the greatest success. He is the author of ten comedies in five acts, and of twenty in one, two, or three acts—all of the highest order, given at the Théatre Français, or Gymnase, where he always knew he achieved his first triumphs. As a lyrical poet, he is equally without a rival, whether for the number or the beauty of his libretti. He has written the poetry of upwards of forty grand operas, and nearly as many comic operas. To these must now be added his libretto of the "Tempesta." In all his extraordinary productivity, he has written 340 works, independent of his novels, such as "Piquillo Alliaga," &c.

Although so hale and active, and possessing such a flow of spirits, that he appears at least fifteen years younger than Scribe, even in the form in Paris on the 24th December, 1791. His father was a silkmercer near the Pillliers des Halles, in the Rue St. Denis. His lively wit was discerned by all his friends at an early age, and its talent, destined that the powers of his mind should have ample pasture, placed him at the great college of St. Barbe. Shortly after reaching his majority, he began his dramatic career, by writing a vaudeville for the Gymnase, that favourite theatre of Monsieur Bourgeois, and soon after he gave proof that peculiar wit and elegance, that "parfum de noblesse et de bonne société" which distinguish the letters of Sévigné and the works of M. Scribe, although in a modern and more familiar form. The refinement and delicacy of the Scribe's vaudeville naturally led to his being engaged to write for that Théâtre Français, where he showed himself in an age successively disfigured by the exaggeration of romantic writers, the loathsome doctrines of Socialism, a worthy successor to Molière. In a state of society where dramatists were reduced to despair, no longer finding amusing and striking types of human character, such as afforded the models of "Les Precieuses Ridicules," "Le Misanthrope," and "Le Tartuffe,"—in the monotony of an age devoted to small intrigues, M. Scribe still held up his mirror to nature, and delighted the world by the startling reflection of petty passions at work in all their serious reality, so triumphantly exemplified in "La Camaraderie." To describe M. Scribe's career, and the progress of his successive works, would demand a volume. The result, the rewards he enjoys, however, is gratifying to state. He has received every species of honorary decration: he is a commander of the Legion of Honour, and has received crosses from almost every Sovereign in Europe a slight return for the enjoyment of his works, pirated and performed daily all over Europe. He is a member of the immortal Quarante de l'Academie. Although he derives no profit from his works out of France, he has acquired, by labouring as his pen for many years, from five in the morning to seven in the evening, a noble independence. He is elegant in his manners near Paris, or at his larger domain in the provinces, he spends his life amidst his family and friends, sending forth constantly new stores of amusement for the world at large, and not forgetting to do substantial good to the smaller circle around him.

ALMACK'S.—The next ball of the second subscription, which was to have taken place on Thursday, has been postponed by the ladies patronesses until Thursday, the 20th instant, by which time Mr. Hartley will have had his first drawingroom The last ball is fixed to take place on the 4th of July.

The Marchioness of Londonderry has issued invitations for a morning party at Holderness House, on Saturday, the 22nd inst.; and for a fête at Rosebank, on Tuesday, the 2nd of June.

THE GREAT EXHIBITION OF 1851.—An amateur performance will be given in aid of the funds of the above Exhibition by several members of the Marylebone Literary Institution and Gymnasium, at the Hanover Rooms, and at the Olympic Theatre; the performances will be "Love's Sacrifice," and "Charles XII."

THE WATERLOO BANQUET.—A pen-and-ink copy of the large engraving of the Waterloo Banquet, after Salter's picture, has been executed by Mr. B. W. Browne, an amateur artist, at Wymeswold, near Longuborough. It was begun shortly after the engraving made its appearance, and was completed in two months. A very figure has an accurate likeness exquisitely finished, and every line of detail is faithfully given.

AN ECCENTRIC CHARACTER.—Two or three weeks since, an aged and wealthy bachelor named Hartley, who resided several years in France, died at Calais. When a young man, he had lived in Southampton, where he had considerable property. Mortified by some domestic misfortune while residing in that town, he locked up his house, furnished as it was, and went abroad. From that time he never appeared in it, and left it to be sold; and there it stands in the High-street, with a dwarf brick wall and trees and weeds before it. Some years ago a disreputable fellow was seen on the roof, and on being questioned by the police, had forced his way into the house, and were secretly carrying off the furniture. Mr Hartley owned a large piece of garden ground near the Southampton Railway terminus, which he refused to sell, although he might have had a handsome price for it. The Itchen Bridge Company took a portion by act of Parliament, but he refused to accept the price awarded, and the money is now in the bank into which it was paid The other portion is still a large garden, although it is built up around, and a small town It was owing to the obstinacy of Mr. Hartley in refusing to sell his garden, that the original plan of the streets near this spot was altered, and that curious circular street was formed leading from the railway station to the High-street. Mr. Hartley visited Southampton occasionally very privately, but few of its present inhabitants ever saw or knew him. Every one imagined that he was a misanthrope, and that he disliked both the people and the town. It appears also that he was ostentatious of showing indifference to religion. Singular to say, after he was dead, it was found by his will that he desired to be buried in a London Wesleyan burial-ground, and that he has bequeathed to the corporation of Southampton certain property for the purpose of forming a library and scientific institute in that town, which will amount, it is fully believed, to a sum not less than £20,000 or £25,000. A member of the London Stock Exchange and a Southampton solicitor are his executors.

MUSIC.

CONCERTS.

Mrs. Anderson, pianiste to her Majesty, and musical instructress to the Princess Royal, gave her annual morning concert on Monday at the Royal Italian Opera. The fashionable assemblage in the boxes and stalls proved the high estimation in which the talents of Mrs. Anderson are held. The first part of the concert was devoted to the performance of Mendelssohn's music to the tragedy of Sophocles, "Œdipus Coloneus." This composition was the last of the series of works produced at Berlin during the composer's engagement with the King of Prussia. The overture, choruses, and incidental music to the "Antigone" of Sophocles was Mendelssohn's first undertaking in 1841, which Mr. Benedict states, in his interesting sketch of the Life and Works of the deceased composer, was completed in the short space of eleven days. In 1843, he wrote the music to the "Midsummer Night's Dream;" in 1844, the music to Racine's tragedy of "Athalie;" and, in 1845, he completed the "Œdipus at Colonos." The only time the last-mentioned work has been heard in this country was at Buckingham Palace; and the production by Mrs. Anderson at the Royal Italian Opera, by the kind and gracious permission of her Majesty, created, therefore, great interest. Amongst the auditory, we noticed Halévy, Ernst, Sir George Smart, Mr. Ayrton, &c. We gave the poem in our last publication. Mr. Bartley recited very impressively an elucidative monologue, with here and there portions of the text of the tragedy, arranged by Mr. Bartholomew. The tradition that Sophocles read the "Œdipus at Colonos" to his judges, when accused of being incapable of managing his own affairs, and of having become childish from old age, by his unnatural children, and that, after the reading of the tragedy, the judges conducted the poet in triumph to his house, created for the second "Œdipus" more interest than the gentler emotions abound infinitely more than in the "Œdipus Tyrannus;" and if the former were presented with scenic adjuncts, it would powerfully enlist the sympathies even of an audience in the year of grace 1850. The music which Mendelssohn has composed for the chorus of aged Coloneans, and the accompanied recitatives to the dialogue, are quite worthy of his genius. He has, with extraordinary tact, avoided all pre-existing forms—he has seized the couleur locale, and the imagination is transported to the period, when the ancient Greek Chorus refracted the action of the scene as the orator of the human race—the "ideal spectator," as Schlegel has happily expressed it. The appeal of Antigone to the Coloneans, on behalf of her aged father and blind sire, has a most beautiful current of instrumental and of quisite beauty. The incentive to the fight for the rescue of the daughters of Œdipus is a colossal conception, replete with classic grandeur. The exciting themes are treated with wild picturesqueness. The passage descriptive of the flight of Œdipus are fine inspirations. The lament of Antigone for the disappearance for ever of her father—"the earth mysteriously expanding to receive the victim of fate"—is most touching: the solemn tones of the trumpet, followed by the phrases for the wood band, are wondrous creations of the composer's genius. The chorus finale of consolation to the afflicted children is massive and magnificent. The overture, short, but this noble work did not generally produce the impression which its manifold beauties merited, must be ascribed first to the nature of the Greek chorus, to write for which necessarily excludes much variety in idea and treatment; and although each piece, taken separately, if analysed, would be found full of fine melodies, still the effect of the whole in continuity on a miscellaneous auditory, not well acquainted with the tragedy, would be considered heavy and monotonous. With the stage accessories, there would be, in the overture, great relief. Under Costa's direction, the orchestra played admirably the accompaniments; but the choristers were sadly at fault, and they sang with a defective intonation most unusual with them. The music is acknowledged difficult, it is true; but more rehearsals ought to have been bestowed. The thanks of the musical public are not the less due to Mrs. Anderson, for her taste and spirit in bringing forward this elaborate production; and we are convinced, that, if "Antigone" and "Œdipus," at any future period, should be presented with the stage appliances and adequate choral and orchestral resources, there will be found a musical and classical public ready to appreciate such noble compositions. In the second part of the concert, Mrs Anderson performed Beethoven's Choral Pianoforte Fantasia with her usually intellectual interpretation; and, with Salnton, executed Dohler's Tarantella for Piano and Violin, in which she was much applauded. Salnton gave a violin solo; and the band performed with marvellous spirit and precision Beethoven's "Leonora" overture and Weber's "Jubilee." The vocal gleanings by Grisi and Mdme. Castellan, Tamberlik, Marcati (tenors), Massol, Rommi, Zelger, Tamburini, Formes, and Gueco (basses), were from Rossini, Meyerbeer, Mozart, Donizetti, and Gueco, familiar to the public ear. The chorus sang a Madrigal by Greaves, and one by Beethoven: so that the miscellaneous selection was full of interest; and as judicious musical entertainment, this was a model programme, although the omission of the splendid Septnor of the Duel, from the "Huguenots," as originally announced, was felt as a deprivation of a great treat from Marcati.

The eighth and last concert of the Amateur Musical Society took place last Monday night, at the Hanover Rooms.

On Tuesday afternoon, the Directors of the Musical Union gave an early morning concert, at Willis's Rooms, in honour of Herr Ries's Trio, in E flat major, for piano, violin, and violoncello, composed by Eckert, a native of Berlin, who was a pupil of Mendelssohn, and who has gained glory in Germany and Holland by a grand opera, "Children of Europe." To these must now be added his libretto of the "Tempesta." In all his extraordinary productivity, he has written 340 works, independent of his novels, such as "Piquillo Alliaga," &c.

Although so hale and active, and possessing such a flow of spirits, that he appears at least fifteen years younger than Scribe, even in the form in Paris on the 24th December, 1791. His father was a silkmercer near the Pillliers des Halles, in the Rue St. Denis. His lively wit was discerned by all his friends at an early age, and its talent, destined that the powers of his mind should have ample pasture, placed him at the great college of St. Barbe. Shortly after reaching his majority, he began his dramatic career, by writing a vaudeville for the Gymnase, that favourite theatre of Monsieur Bourgeois, and soon after he gave proof that peculiar wit and elegance, that "parfum de noblesse et de bonne société" which distinguish the letters of Sévigné and the works of M. Scribe, although in a modern and more familiar form. The refinement and delicacy of the Scribe's vaudeville naturally led to his being engaged to write for that Théâtre Français, where he showed himself in an age successively disfigured by the exaggeration of romantic writers, the loathsome doctrines of Socialism, a worthy successor to Molière. In a state of society where dramatists were reduced to despair, no longer finding amusing and striking types of human character, such as afforded the models of "Les Precieuses Ridicules," "Le Misanthrope," and "Le Tartuffe,"—in the monotony of an age devoted to small intrigues, M. Scribe still held up his mirror to nature, and delighted the world by the startling reflection of petty passions at work in all their serious reality, so triumphantly exemplified in "La Camaraderie." To describe M. Scribe's career, and the progress of his successive works, would demand a volume. The result, the rewards he enjoys, however, is gratifying to state. He has received every species of honorary decration: he is a commander of the Legion of Honour, and has received crosses from almost every Sovereign in Europe a slight return for the enjoyment of his works, pirated and performed daily all over Europe. He is a member of the immortal Quarante de l'Academie. Although he derives no profit from his works out of France, he has acquired, by labouring as his pen for many years, from five in the morning to seven in the evening, a noble independence. He is elegant in his manners near Paris, or at his larger domain in the provinces, he spends his life amidst his family and friends, sending forth constantly new stores of amusement for the world at large, and not forgetting to do substantial good to the smaller circle around him.

ALMACK'S.—The next ball of the second subscription, which was to have taken place on Thursday, has been postponed by the ladies patronesses until Thursday, the 20th instant, by which time Mr. Hartley will have had his first drawingroom The last ball is fixed to take place on the 4th of July.

The Marchioness of Londonderry has issued invitations for a morning party at Holderness House, on Saturday, the 22nd inst.; and for a fête at Rosebank, on Tuesday, the 2nd of June.

THE GREAT EXHIBITION OF 1851.—An amateur performance will be given in aid of the funds of the above Exhibition by several members of the Marylebone Literary Institution and Gymnasium, at the Hanover Rooms, and at the Olympic Theatre; the performances will be "Love's Sacrifice," and "Charles XII."

THE WATERLOO BANQUET.—A pen-and-ink copy of the large engraving of the Waterloo Banquet, after Salter's picture, has been executed by Mr. B. W. Browne, an amateur artist, at Wymeswold, near Longuborough. It was begun shortly after the engraving made its appearance, and was completed in two months. A very figure has an accurate likeness exquisitely finished, and every line of detail is faithfully given.

AN ECCENTRIC CHARACTER.—Two or three weeks since, an aged and wealthy bachelor named Hartley, who resided several years in France, died at Calais. When a young man, he had lived in Southampton, where he had considerable property. Mortified by some domestic misfortune while residing in that town, he locked up his house, furnished as it was, and went abroad. From that time he never appeared in it, and left it to be sold; and there it stands in the High-street, with a dwarf brick wall and trees and weeds before it. Some years ago a disreputable fellow was seen on the roof, and on being questioned by the police, had forced his way into the house, and were secretly carrying off the furniture. Mr Hartley owned a large piece of garden ground near the Southampton Railway terminus, which he refused to sell, although he might have had a handsome price for it. The Itchen Bridge Company took a portion by act of Parliament, but he refused to accept the price awarded, and the money is now in the bank into which it was paid The other portion is still a large garden, although it is built up around, and a small town It was owing to the obstinacy of Mr. Hartley in refusing to sell his garden, that the original plan of the streets near this spot was altered, and that curious circular street was formed leading from the railway station to the High-street. Mr. Hartley visited Southampton occasionally very privately, but few of its present inhabitants ever saw or knew him. Every one imagined that he was a misanthrope, and that he disliked both the people and the town. It appears also that he was ostentatious of showing indifference to religion. Singular to say, after he was dead, it was found by his will that he desired to be buried in a London Wesleyan burial-ground, and that he has bequeathed to the corporation of Southampton certain property for the purpose of forming a library and scientific institute in that town, which will amount, it is fully believed, to a sum not less than £20,000 or £25,000. A member of the London Stock Exchange and a Southampton solicitor are his executors.

MUSIC.

CONCERTS.

Mrs. Anderson, pianiste to her Majesty, and musical instructress to the Princess Royal, gave her annual morning concert on Monday at the Royal Italian Opera. The fashionable assemblage in the boxes and stalls proved the high estimation in which the talents of Mrs. Anderson are held. The first part of the concert was devoted to the performance of Mendelssohn's music to the tragedy of Sophocles, "Œdipus Coloneus." This composition was the last of the series of works produced at Berlin during the composer's engagement with the King of Prussia. The overture, choruses, and incidental music to the "Antigone" of Sophocles was Mendelssohn's first undertaking in 1841, which Mr. Benedict states, in his interesting sketch of the Life and Works of the deceased composer, was completed in the short space of eleven days. In 1843, he wrote the music to the "Midsummer Night's Dream;" in 1844, the music to Racine's tragedy of "Athalie;" and, in 1845, he completed the "Œdipus at Colonos." The only time the last-mentioned work has been heard in this country was at Buckingham Palace; and the production by Mrs. Anderson at the Royal Italian Opera, by the kind and gracious permission of her Majesty, created, therefore, great interest. Amongst the auditory, we noticed Halévy, Ernst, Sir George Smart, Mr. Ayrton, &c. We gave the poem in our last publication. Mr. Bartley recited very impressively an elucidative monologue, with here and there portions of the text of the tragedy, arranged by Mr. Bartholomew. The tradition that Sophocles read the "Œdipus at Colonos" to his judges, when accused of being incapable of managing his own affairs, and of having become childish from old age, by his unnatural children, and that, after the reading of the tragedy, the judges conducted the poet in triumph to his house, created for the second "Œdipus" more interest than the gentler emotions abound infinitely more than in the "Œdipus Tyrannus;" and if the former were presented with scenic adjuncts, it would powerfully enlist the sympathies even of an audience in the year of grace 1850. The music which Mendelssohn has composed for the chorus of aged Coloneans, and the accompanied recitatives to the dialogue, are quite worthy of his genius. He has, with extraordinary tact, avoided all pre-existing forms—he has seized the couleur locale, and the imagination is transported to the period, when the ancient Greek Chorus refracted the action of the scene as the orator of the human race—the "ideal spectator," as Schlegel has happily expressed it. The appeal of Antigone to the Coloneans, on behalf of her aged father and blind sire, has a most beautiful current of instrumental and of quisite beauty. The incentive to the fight for the rescue of the daughters of Œdipus is a colossal conception, replete with classic grandeur. The exciting themes are treated with wild picturesqueness. The passage descriptive of the flight of Œdipus are fine inspirations. The lament of Antigone for the disappearance for ever of her father—"the earth mysteriously expanding to receive the victim of fate"—is most touching: the solemn tones of the trumpet, followed by the phrases for the wood band, are wondrous creations of the composer's genius. The chorus finale of consolation to the afflicted children is massive and magnificent. The overture, short, but this noble work did not generally produce the impression which its manifold beauties merited, must be ascribed first to the nature of the Greek chorus, to write for which necessarily excludes much variety in idea and treatment; and although each piece, taken separately, if analysed, would be found full of fine melodies, still the effect of the whole in continuity on a miscellaneous auditory, not well acquainted with the tragedy, would be considered heavy and monotonous. With the stage accessories, there would be, in the overture, great relief. Under Costa's direction, the orchestra played admirably the accompaniments; but the choristers were sadly at fault, and they sang with a defective intonation most unusual with them. The music is acknowledged difficult, it is true; but more rehearsals ought to have been bestowed. The thanks of the musical public are not the less due to Mrs. Anderson, for her taste and spirit in bringing forward this elaborate production; and we are convinced, that, if "Antigone" and "Œdipus," at any future period, should be presented with the stage appliances and adequate choral and orchestral resources, there will be found a musical and classical public ready to appreciate such noble compositions. In the second part of the concert, Mrs Anderson performed Beethoven's Choral Pianoforte Fantasia with her usually intellectual interpretation; and, with Salnton, executed Dohler's Tarantella for Piano and Violin, in which she was much applauded. Salnton gave a violin solo; and the band performed with marvellous spirit and precision Beethoven's "Leonora" overture and Weber's "Jubilee." The vocal gleanings by Grisi and Mdme. Castellan, Tamberlik, Marcati (tenors), Massol, Rommi, Zelger, Tamburini, Formes, and Gueco (basses), were from Rossini, Meyerbeer, Mozart, Donizetti, and Gueco, familiar to the public ear. The chorus sang a Madrigal by Greaves, and one by Beethoven: so that the miscellaneous selection was full of interest; and as judicious musical entertainment, this was a model programme, although the omission of the splendid Septnor of the Duel, from the "Huguenots," as originally announced, was felt as a deprivation of a great treat from Marcati.

The eighth and last concert of the Amateur Musical Society took place last Monday night, at the Hanover Rooms.

On Tuesday afternoon, the Directors of the Musical Union gave an early morning concert, at Willis's Rooms, in honour of Herr Ries's Trio, in E flat major, for piano, violin, and violoncello, composed by Eckert, a native of Berlin, who was a pupil of Mendelssohn, and who has gained glory in Germany and Holland by a grand opera, "Children of Europe." To these must now be added his libretto of the "Tempesta." In all his extraordinary productivity, he has written 340 works, independent of his novels, such as "Piquillo Alliaga," &c.

Although so hale and active, and possessing such a flow of spirits, that he appears at least fifteen years younger than Scribe, even in the form in Paris on the 24th December, 1791. His father was a silkmercer near the Pillliers des Halles, in the Rue St. Denis. His lively wit was discerned by all his friends at an early age, and its talent, destined that the powers of his mind should have ample pasture, placed him at the great college of St. Barbe. Shortly after reaching his majority, he began his dramatic career, by writing a vaudeville for the Gymnase, that favourite theatre of Monsieur Bourgeois, and soon after he gave proof that peculiar wit and elegance, that "parfum de noblesse et de bonne société" which distinguish the letters of Sévigné and the works of M. Scribe, although in a modern and more familiar form. The refinement and delicacy of the Scribe's vaudeville naturally led to his being engaged to write for that Théâtre Français, where he showed himself in an age successively disfigured by the exaggeration of romantic writers, the loathsome doctrines of Socialism, a worthy successor to Molière. In a state of society where dramatists were reduced to despair, no longer finding amusing and striking types of human character, such as afforded the models of "Les Precieuses Ridicules," "Le Misanthrope," and "Le Tartuffe,"—in the monotony of an age devoted to small intrigues, M. Scribe still held up his mirror to nature, and delighted the world by the startling reflection of petty passions at work in all their serious reality, so triumphantly exemplified in "La Camaraderie." To describe M. Scribe's career, and the progress of his successive works, would demand a volume. The result, the rewards he enjoys, however, is gratifying to state. He has received every species of honorary decration: he is a commander of the Legion of Honour, and has received crosses from almost every Sovereign in Europe a slight return for the enjoyment of his works, pirated and performed daily all over Europe. He is a member of the immortal Quarante de l'Academie. Although he derives no profit from his works out of France, he has acquired, by labouring as his pen for many years, from five in the morning to seven in the evening, a noble independence. He is elegant in his manners near Paris, or at his larger domain in the provinces, he spends his life amidst his family and friends, sending forth constantly new stores of amusement for the world at large, and not forgetting to do substantial good to the smaller circle around him.

ALMACK'S.—The next ball of the second subscription, which was to have taken place on Thursday, has been postponed by the ladies patronesses until Thursday, the 20th instant, by which time Mr. Hartley will have had his first drawingroom The last ball is fixed to take place on the 4th of July.

The Marchioness of Londonderry has issued invitations for a morning party at Holderness House, on Saturday, the 22nd inst.; and for a fête at Rosebank, on Tuesday, the 2nd of June.

THE GREAT EXHIBITION OF 1851.—An amateur performance will be given in aid of the funds of the above Exhibition by several members of the Marylebone Literary Institution and Gymnasium, at the Hanover Rooms, and at the Olympic Theatre; the performances will be "Love's Sacrifice," and "Charles XII."

THE WATERLOO BANQUET.—A pen-and-ink copy of the large engraving of the Waterloo Banquet, after Salter's picture, has been executed by Mr. B. W. Browne, an amateur artist, at Wymeswold, near Longuborough. It was begun shortly after the engraving made its appearance, and was completed in two months. A very figure has an accurate likeness exquisitely finished, and every line of detail is faithfully given.

AN ECCENTRIC CHARACTER.—Two or three weeks since, an aged and wealthy bachelor named Hartley, who resided several years in France, died at Calais. When a young man, he had lived in Southampton, where he had considerable property. Mortified by some domestic misfortune while residing in that town, he locked up his house, furnished as it was, and went abroad. From that time he never appeared in it, and left it to be s

TOWN TALK AND TABLE TALK.

The Season is at its height. The grand campaign of show and ffte, ball and out, meeting and exhibition, is waging merrily. Not to be outdone in the general activity, both Houses of Parliament are talking away with a perseverance wonderful in this hot weather. The Commons have their heads at work, and their hands are at it in their new house by noon. The Lords scorn evening delights, and listen to each other up to the small hours. Downing-street is besieged with deputations. Secretaries of State are badgered by the most infinitesimal of questions. The gilded halls of clubs resound with the chatter of multitudinous members, and bow-windows are fought for fiercely. Everybody, in fact, is in town, and everbody is bent upon showing it, and so the social activity. The animal spirits, the intelligence, the scheming, the counter-scheming, all the vigour, and life, and soul of the capital have worked up in their annual crescendo, to the grand crash which, echoing through the swarming brilliant West End, proclaims to all the world the culminating point of the London Season.

All the Exhibitions are flinging before the dazzled eyes of society all their wealth of coloured canvass or Carrara marble. The strains of scores of concerts are rising conflictingly into the over-laden atmosphere. The purveyors of open-air entertainments watch us, in the cool grayness of the evening, from their rockets shot off, and to eat ices under trees The Hippopotamus has arrived, and receives his friends. The Junk has made its way into the very bowels of the land. All the clever people and all the wonderful people passable for clever, from the four corners of the earth, and a great many other corners besides. And oh! what a well-amused nation we ought to be, if entertained by only one tithe of the clever things they say and do to please us. Not a concert room, not a casino, not an institution-room, but has its tenant. A mighty huntsman brings the trophies of his lion chases to Hyde Park Corner. A renowned Parisian dramatist makes his first bow to a London audience. Gentlemen come from Australia to tell of kangaroos and boomerangs; from New Zealand, to exhibit all manner of interesting tokens of the at-tawai Cannibal Islands. Learned birds, who tell fortunes as they have winged their way hither from Paris; and, if all tales be true, we are soon to be still further refreshed by the novelty of a Black prima donna. And, happily, our indefatigable catterers provide for all ranks and degrees. Hampton Court Palace, with beer-barrels in them, holds the serious ones; and the most wicked-looking broughams; Cowes-built yachts upon the river rock to the surge of a steamer conveying five hundred smoke-dried Cockneys to have a sniff at salt water gentlemen, lounging in opera stalls discuss the progression of Norway or the Levant after the season is over; gentlemen passing a cool evening under the trellis-work of a suburban garden, decide upon the merits of a fortnight by the sea, or a ten pounds excursion up the Rhine. There is no blindness to the lowest amusing ourselves. All Mayfair went the other day to Chiswick to see the flowers; all Rag-fair went to Mildenhall to see a couple of bullies beat each other for the "Championship."

But, really, the great sight of the whole—the great exposure of the four million eyes which are winking and blinking this moment in London, is nothing more nor less than the Princes from Nepaul and their diamonds. People look at these glittering personages, and begin to have doubts as the "Arabian Nights" being a work of fiction. What if they have arrived here flying through the air on a magic carpet! What if they have a tent packed up in a turban big enough to cover a regiment! What if they bear signets carved with the seal of Solomon, and giving them power over the King of the Genii. What if Fees and Fays flutter invisibly about them. What if they have a retinue of Africanc magicians, and eat cream tarts and lambs stuffed with whole ehio nuts. For myself, I have an inward comfort in believing that all the jewels displayed by their Oriental Highnesses were found sticking to the pieces of flesh carried by the eagles out of the Valley of Diamonds, and it would be difficult to divorce me from the creed that the gentlemen in question are near relations to Prince Camaralzaman, King Beder, Noureddin, and the fair Persian—to say nothing of Aladdin, Ali Baba, Sinbad, and that 'cute fisherman, who did the genl in such magnificent style, when the latter was fool enough to re-pack himself in the copper vessel. At all events, if the Nepaulese noblemen were so connected, they could not excite more lively curiosity than they do. At Chiswick, last Saturday, the poor men were nearly smothered by inquisitive ladies and gentlemen.

A story is whispered about, touching a late dispatch of Lord Palmerston's to Admiral Parker which, though very much too good to be true, is also too good to be left out even if not true. It is said that the private instructions to the English Admiral at Athens directed him, in case the French fleet should offer any molestation to certain operations, to dispatch them to Marlborough's Nose's head about attacking or capturing, but a simple direction as to destination when these operations should have been performed. Cool, this, and refreshing in such hot weather. The very common off-hand English style of talking about naval engagements with the French, never, however, was better exemplified than in an anecdote recently told me by a large ship-builder, of one of his hands—an old man-of-war's carpenter, who had occasion to pass some time at Toulon. Some French naval officers spoke a little English, scraped acquaintance with the old tar veteran, and one day chanced to ask him his opinion of a peculiarity in the rig of a newly-launched French war corvette. "Why, sir," replied Jack without, observes, the least intention of being anything but perfectly polite—"why, sir, you see I don't much like it myse.f. It may suit your notions, but it don't suit mine. Howsumdever, there's no great harm done; for a carpenter's crew can change it in the course of the corvette passage into Portsmouth Harbour, you know."

The New House of Commons, with its lofty roof, traceried windows, and stately proportions, contrasts oddly with the rough style of the temporary fittings-up—the coarse lining of the rude deal planks loosely nailed together. A few months of observe, sticking out at the joinings of the compartments of the roof, whole bunches of shavings, which Mr. Barry seems not to have had time to sweep away. This same ceiling is as yet but loosely put together—bright streaks of daylight showing through each crack and crevice. There are many complaints made as to difficulty of hearing; but it is the opinion of some of the most experienced reporters, that, as soon as people's ears get a little accustomed to the new chamber, they will hear very nearly as well as in the old. The extreme height of the Hall produces, no doubt, a certain degree of echo; but I suspect it is almost impossible to construct an apartment of the stately dimensions and great height demanded by Gothic architecture, without experiencing a degree of this unremovable difficulty in the way of first-rate acoustic arrangements. The first thing which strikes in the New House is its comparatively small size. It is certainly less than the House of Lords, and its area appears still more narrowed by the huge, ugly, lump of gallery, which blocks up nearly a quarter of the length of the chamber, and is certainly as atrocious an excrescence as ever was put together. It must, of course, come down, and the longitudinal benches be extended from end to end of the hall. When this is done, the appearance of the House will be beautifully symmetrical—more chastely and creatively so, I think, than even the House of Lords.

The story about the Duke of Wellington's Waterloo breeches, which has compelled so conspicuous a place in the newspapers for the last two or three days, and the piquancy of which has been so sadly taken away by Mrs. Loudon's letter stating that it was a note from her late husband which the Duke, some twelve years ago, read as having been addressed to him by the Bishop of London. This story, I am informed, was built upon the following simple fact:—The Duke did not make two minutes reading the communication. He took "C. J. London" to mean "C. J. London;" but he did not interpret "Waterloo Beeches" as "Waterloo Breeches;" and the answer which he returned to the right rev. Prelate was that he was very welcome to do any thing he pleased with the beeches, except cut them down. I saw his Grace the other evening produce a smile in the House of Lords, by manufacturing an extempore ear-trumpet out of a sheet of foolscap, an instrument he quietly turned to the deafened ear of Lord Glengal, who was hallooing rather than speaking about the sale of Irish encumbered estates, not three feet from his Grace's elbow. The ear-trumpet so applied, struck me as significant; and if the reader will refer to the report of the Earl of Clarendon's speech, or last Tuesday's papers, and if he will bear in mind also that the rather extreme sentiments therein contained were uttered almost at the full pitch of the speaker's voice, he will perhaps be inclined to favour a little theory (I say a little theory) of the sudden ear-trumpet assumption of deafness, nature, was nothing more or less than a species of quiet ironical manœuvre or quiz upon the Bonarges-like vehemence of the Irish orator. This, however, is of course a matter of opinion.

The long-vexed question of an international copyright with our transatlantic cousins shows symptoms of rising to a speedy crisis Up to a recent period the Yankees had all the advantage of the defective state of the law. They could steal freely from our literary richness; whereas, not only had they little of their own to be robbed of, but their handful of authors took very good care to secure English publishers, and, therefore, English copyrights, for their works. Two instances, however, a recent law decision has wrested from the Coopers and Irvings of the States; so that English booksellers have now a perfect right to treat American authors as American booksellers have long been in the habit of serving English authors. And mine is something just to the point et tabulas, if Yankee maybe reprinted and sold for a shilling in New York, why may not Cooper be reprinted and sold for a shilling in London? At all events, the reprisals system will puzzle no more. Yankee neighbours to inform us that they are to leave the embassy, which I hear Mr. James, the novelist, is to undertake to the States, with a view of making preliminary arrangements for a full and satisfactory code directed against all future international literary freebooting.

A. B. R.

By the construction of the new landing-quay at the south pier, Dover, for the convenience of the Continental traffic, steamers can leave and enter the harbour an hour earlier and an hour later than formerly. This renders the disagreeable necessity of bearing a thing of frequent occurrence, and owing to the rapid progress of the harbour of refuge works, another summer will see that practice totally discontinued.

No arrangement having been come to between the directors of the North British Railway and the engine-drivers lately on their employment, and there being no probability of an amicable arrangement being now effected, steps have been taken by nearly sixty of the men to emigrate to the United States. The necessary funds have been contributed by the engine-drivers on other lines.

A parcel of gutta-percha sheet was shipped on board the Brighton, Dundee trader, by Mr. John Taylor, of Newcastle, on the 1st of March, and the vessel was last at Holy Island, during the gale of the 6th of that month. The revenue officers found the gutta-percha at Warren Water, near Hamburgh Castle, the week before last. Although it had been exposed to the action of the sea for nearly three months, the water had not penetrated beyond the outer surface of the material, the gutta-percha being equally as good as when shipped.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

C M J, Birmingham.—1 The Problem is neat, but much too easy, and the game has moderate merit. 2. The notes on the Evans Gambit between Messrs Kieseritzky and Horwitz, at page 138 of the "Handbook," are unimpeachable. If Mr H had played in the way suggested by the author, he must have won easily, for how could Black possibly save his K or bring the K Book into play?

Sir G S.—The move proposed for White's 27th, in the game you allude to, will not do. Black may reply with 27 Q to K 7 th, and escape. See the variations on this remarkable partie, recently published in the Chess-Player's Chronicle of May last

M K, Paris.—Received with thanks. The duplicate copies for the current year shall be forwarded.

F Y, Guernsey.—The game evinces an aptitude for chess in both competitors not often found where the opportunities of cultivating the art are so restricted. We shall be glad to see some future specimens

TIN-TAN-BOO.—Tou pas jamais.

Q.—The earliest denomination of the piece we call the Bishop, among the Indians, Arabians, Persians, Turks, &c., was Fil, or Fill, or Filaz, or Pharzin. From this the Spaniards, adding the Arabian article Al, made Alfil. The Italians subsequently formed of it their Alfiere, and the ancient English, according to Oxnton, their Alphyn, and, as Lydgate has it, their Aulfyn. The French, at an early period, turned this piece Fol, or Fou (an evident corruption of the original Fil), and gave to it the actual French significance. At what exact period this took place, it is, perhaps, impossible now to discover; but that the figure of a fool constituted one of the Chess pieces on the ancient French Chess-board, there is abundant evidence. Will our Correspondent favour us with an address, so that we might see the curious Chess-man to which he alludes? We might then be enabled to form an opinion as to their antiquity

JEDICUS.—You probably refer to the St. George's Chess Club, in Cavendish-square. The subscription is three guineas per annum, and that entitles you to free admission at all times to the Polytechnic Institution. Among the latest accessions to this club, we observe the names of his Excellency Jung Bahadoor, Ambassador from the Court of Nepaul, and the Princes who accompanied him in his Embassy, all of whom, we are told, are devotees to the "Royal game."

S G.—We scan the periodical in question by post, and should strongly advise you to do the same

REBUS.—They have an undoubted right, in our opinion, to insist upon your abiding by the move sent

A MEMBER OF THE LEITRIM CLUB.—The communication referred to never reached us, and the present is scarcely legible

F C, Hatley.—Received with thanks, and acknowledged by letter

PERO.—You will obtain the man at the Polytechnic Institution

CIVIS.—The match between Messrs Mongredien and G Medley is all but finished, the score being—4 Medley, 6; Mongredien, 4. The winner of the first seven games to be victor.

J A L.—It shall be examined; but we have a horror of all "first attempts" in problem making

SOLUTIONS by C S, DICEY-SIDD, M F, R S T, Sir G S, S G, BATH DUO, DERBYON, Dr FIELD, BELLARY, M E R, OTHO, J F, Hyther, R D M, SIR EDMUND; P, Boldon; OLEOSA, S G, C S, Romford; R V, R F, BOMBARDIER F G H, A CANTERBURY REBUKE, F S S, D D, G S, New H T, Rev R S M, FIELD CHESS, MILES, are correct. All others are wrong

 We beg to acknowledge the receipt of an admirable article, the joint production of Major Jaenisch and Mr Schmmoll, of St Petersburgh, on the "TRUE DEFENCE TO THE SCOTCH GAMBIT," together with a highly interesting game and Problem by the same distinguished players. We have also to express our obligations to Messrs Horwitz and Kling for several beautiful examples of end-game play, from their forthcoming work

A pile of communications on Chess must await new, from want of space for the answers, until next week.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 333.

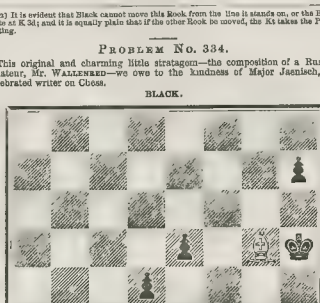
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q takes Kt	P takes Q (best)	3. Kt to K 5th	Q R to Q K 6th (a)
2. P to K 4th	Q R to Q B 6th (best)	4. B to Q B 5th
	And Mates with B or Kt next move.

(a) It is evident that Black cannot move this Rook from the line it stands on, or the B will mate at K 3d; and it is equally plain that if the other Rook be moved, the Kt takes the Pawn, mating.

PROBLEM NO. 334.

This original and charming little stratagem—the composition of a Russian amateur, Mr. ALEXANDER—we owe to the kindness of Major Jaenisch, the celebrated writer on Chess.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White playing first, is to mate in four moves.

 The solution will be withheld for a fortnight.

SECOND MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE, BETWEEN THE LONDON AND AMSTERDAM CHESS CLUBS.

WHITE (London).	BLACK (Amsterdam).
7. Kt takes Kt	B takes Kt
8. B to K 2d	Q to Q B 3d

London to play.

Game in a Match now pending between the President of the London Chess-Club, Mr. MONGREDIEN, and Mr. G. MEDLEY.

(Queen's Gambit.)

WHITE (Mr. G. Medley.)	BLACK. (Mr. Mongredien.)	WHITE. (Mr. G. Medley.)	BLACK. (Mr. Mongredien.)
1. P to Q 4th	P to Q 4th	25. P to K 8th	Q to Q 4th
2. P to Q B 4th	P takes P	26. R to Q B 5th	Q to Q 2d
3. P to K 3d	P to K 3d	27. Q to K R 3d (c)	P to K B 3d
4. B to K P	K Kt to B 3d	28. P to K 6th (d)	Q to Q K 2d
5. Q Kt to B 3d	P to Q B 3d	29. Q to K R 5th	Kt to Q 4th
6. K Kt to K 2d	P to Q K 4th	30. R to K B 3d (e)	Q to K 2d
7. P to Q 3d	B to Q Kt 5th	31. P to K Kt 5th	P takes P
8. Castles	Castles	32. B to Q B sq (f)	P to K R 3d
9. Kt to K Kt 3d	B takes Q Kt	33. R takes Rt	P takes R (g)
10. P takes B	P to Q 6th	34. P to K B 6th	P takes P
11. B to Q R 3d (a)	R to K sq	35. Q to K Kt 6th (ch)	Q to K Kt 2d
12. K to Q B sq	P to Q R 4th	36. R takes P	R K to Q 3d
13. P to K 4th	K Kt to B 5th	37. Q takes R P	Q takes Q
14. K B to Q Kt sq	B to Q R 3d	38. R takes Q	Q R to K sq
15. Q B to Q Kt 2d	Kt to Q 2d	39. B to K B 5th	R to K Kt 2d
16. Q to K Kt 4th	K Kt to B 5th	40. K to B 2d	Q R to K B sq
17. B to K 4th	Q to K R 5th	41. K to Kt 3d	R takes B
18. Q to K B 3d	K Kt to K 2d	42. P to K 7th	K R takes P
19. P to K B 5th	P to K 4th	43. R takes R	K Kt to K 8th
20. K Kt R 5th	Q Kt to K B 3d	44. R to K Kt 6th (ch)	R to K 2d
21. Kt takes Kt (ch)	Q takes Kt	45. R takes P	K R to Kt 8th (ch)
22. P to K Kt 4th	Q R to Q sq	46. K to R 4th	Q R takes R
23. Q to K Kt 3d	P takes P	47. B takes R	Q to K 7th
24. P takes P (b)	Q to Q 3d	And wins.

(a) A good move, because it affords him an opportunity of bringing his Q Rook to guard the attacked Pawn

(b) These Pawns well marshalled must prove formidable enemies, one would think, ere long.

(c) Threatens P to K 6th anon. (d) "The cry is still, 'They come!'"

(e) We should have marched onward with the Pawn; and, in that case, the following is not an unlikely termination:—

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK
30. P to K Kt 5th	P takes P	34. R takes P	K Kt to B sq
31. Q R takes Kt	P takes R	35. R to K 8th, and wins.
32. P to B 6th?	P takes P!

(f) P to K B 6th looks tempting. In that case, if Black simply took P with P, it is not clear that White gains much by his motion. If however, the P were taken with the Kt (a very natural move), White seems to have an advantage For example:—

WHITE.	BLACK	WHITE.	BLACK
32 P to K B 6th	Kt takes P	34 Q to K R 7th (ch)	Q takes Q (See)
33 B takes K R 7 (ch)	Kt takes B (best)	35. P takes Q (ch), and ought to win.

(g) R takes R would have cost him the game very soon.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 584.—By W. C., Manchester.

White K at his sq, R at Q B sq, Kt at K B 6th, P at K B 2d.
Black: K at his Kt 8th, Ps at K Kt 7th and K B 6th.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 585—By W. G., of York.

White: K at his R sq, Q at her sq Bs at Q B 8th and Q Kt 6th, Kts a. Q 5th and Q B sq, Ps at K Kt 4th and Q R 4th.
Black: K at Q B 3rd, Q at K Kt 2nd, Bs at K R 4th and Q 3rd, Kts at K R 2nd and Q B 6th; Ps at K B 5th, K 2nd and 4th, and Q K 6th

White playing first, mates in three moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

The proposed banquet by the Mayors of England to the Lord Mayor of London and the Commissioners of the National Exposition, is fixed to take place at the Guildhall, York, in the first week in August next. Prince Albert, it is said, has accepted the invitation sent by the Lord Mayor of York, and will be present.

That dreadful scourge, the cholera, has begun its ravages in Europe already. Hitherto in the present summer it has confined its fatal influence to America. But we learn from Pergue, in Bohemia, that the progress it has made there lately is fearful. On the 26th ult. 47 persons died of the epidemic, and, among them several highly-esteemed men in the upper circles.

The Cheshunt penny bank was opened last Monday evening, and a considerable number of depositors attended. The promoters are sanguine of success.

On Sunday Lieutenant Webber was handling a loaded pistol in Charter-house-square, when by some mischance the weapon went off. The charge passed through his hand, and produced lock-jaw, from the effects of which he expired in a few hours. Lieutenant Webber was son to the late Dr. Webber, Dean of Ripon.

The Essex Herald, after referring to the hitherto mysterious absence of Mr. James Rickards from the town of Maldon, states that it is now accounted for by the discovery that he is an alleged defaulter in his accounts as collector to the Essex Provident Society.

The vessel Mary Glover, arrived from New York, has brought the very large quantity of 37,664 bushels of Indian corn, comprising more than the entire cargo; and the vessel American, from New York, has brought 41,895 bushels of this description of grain of American produce.

The appearance of the young flax-crops in Ireland is reported as very satisfactory. They are, in most cases, looking remarkably well. Some stalks of flax have been exhibited, grown near Belfast, already 21 inches in length, and increasing at the rate of nearly two inches daily.

The English Roman Catholic Peer Lord Vaux is at present on a visit to his extensive Irish estates in the county of Kilkenny; and his tenants hail with great satisfaction his Lordship's visit, as he is known to be an excellent landlord to those on his English property.

The tenants from Cork, Limerick, Kilkenny, and most of the other chief towns in Ireland, state that new potatoes of the finest quality are already making their appearance in considerable quantities in the markets, and not the least trace of disease is to be observed.

The Earl of Ernle is visiting his estates in Sligo and Mayo, and has announced to his tenants a reduction of 15 per cent. in his rents.

The Leinster Express publishes, on the authority of a private letter from Liverpool, that a sailor, arrived lately from Sydney, reports that two days before he landed an account was received there of the death of Mr. Smith O'Brien, but that the statements of his ill-treatment were untrue.

The Drogheda Argus says that there is no immediate likelihood of a vacancy for that borough by the elevation of Sir William Somerville to the Peerage

The floating of the first tube of the down line of rail of the Britannia Bridge took place on Monday, in the presence of a vast number of spectators. The result was in every respect successful. The engineers present were Mr. Brunel, Mr. Locke, Mr. G. P. Bidder, Mr. G. R. Stephenson, Mr. Hankshaw, &c.

At Cambridge University, the Chancellor's gold medal for the best English ode on the late Queen Adelaide has been adjudged to Julian Fane, of Trinity College. Sir William Browne's medals have been adjudged to the under mentioned:—Greek ode, Philip Perring, Trinity College; Latin ode, William Raynes, Clare Hall; Epigrams, William Wayte, King's College.

Last week, Sir John Guest, Bart., M.P., of Canford House, presented the inhabitants of Merthyr Tydvil with £1000 towards a new Town Hall, about to be erected in that borough.

Between nine and ten o'clock, on Wednesday evening week, the promenades on the boulevards and the quay of Paris observed all at once the northern part of the sky brilliantly illuminated by a meteor; and at the same time the same phenomenon was observed at Rouen, Boulogne-sur-Mer, and other places.

The opening of the South Wales Railway is definitively arranged for Tuesday, the 18th inst.

The deliveries of tea in London last week were not quite so large, being 616,486lb.

It is with great regret that we have heard that Mr. Samuel Rogers, the poet, met with a very severe accident on Thursday night week, on his return home from dining with a friend. Mr. Rogers was knocked down by a cab in crossing the street, and has ever since continued in such danger as to cause very serious alarm to his numerous friends

Joseph Ady has been lodged in Giltspur-street Prison on a charge of defrauding the Post-office by sending 1400 unpaid letters which were returned.

A private in the 69th French regiment of the line was sentenced to death by court-martial, in Paris, on Friday week, for having twice struck a corporal of his company.

John Gill, an aged pauper, residing in the village of Tunstall, near Richmond, Lincolnshire, died last week On examining his house, a sum of money, amounting to £20 0s 8½d., was found concealed in a drawer. He had applied at the Union before his death for an additional 6d. a week.

Kossuth's children left Pesth, by steamer, on the 26th ult., for Kutayen, in Asia Minor, where their parents are. They were accompanied to the quay by a crowd of persons, who bade them farewell in the most touching manner.

On and from the 2nd of September next a modification of the present West India mail route scheme will come into operation. The steamers will no longer call at Barbadoes, but will go direct, on the 2nd and 17th of each month, to St. Thomas and Chagres, returning by the same route. Branch steamers will convey toe mails to and from St. Thomas and Jamaica, the Mexican Gulph, the Spanish Main and the Windward and Leeward Islands.

On the 14th ult., one of the ground seines of Penzance, at Pendower, Cornwall, caught 300 mackerel, and on the 4th inst. the seines brought in about 12,000 mackerel and about 10,000 herrings. The boats at St. Ives have been taking from 300 to 400 mackerel per boat, which have sold at a very low price at 4s. to 6s. per 120. The Mount's Bay boats continue to take a great deal of mackerel. They were sold at Newlyn and Mousehole for 3s. per 100 of six score, and at Penzance three for a penny.

Nicholas Everard, condemned to death for parricide, was executed on Monday last at St. Thiebault (Haute-Marne). When informed on Sunday night that he had only a few hours to live, he testified no emotion. He remained calm to the last, attended the mass of the guillotine with firmness, and composedly delivered his head into the hands of the executioner

The police of Paris have succeeded in arresting a band of 31 housebreakers, composed almost entirely of liberated convicts, having a centre of operations at Bercy. Among the articles found on the premises in the house of the receiver were many valuable pictures, jewellery of all kinds, watches, &c., and wrapped up in an old stocking a sum of 5050f. There was also a quantity of plate, the crockets of the Mont de Piété, where, if wanted, could be redeemed.

Lord Londesborough has presented, through Sir William Burnett, Director-General of the Medical Department of the Navy, to the museum of the Royal Naval Hospital at Haslar, a magnificent specimen of the mummy, from Upper Egypt, which will form a most interesting addition to the splendid collection of this institution

On Saturday last, a hive of bees, belonging to Mr. Newton, yeoman, of West Dean, Sussex, first Orton, near Carlisle, gave forth a new swarm, which immediately alighted upon Mr. Newton's face and neck, to his great surprise and consternation. After enduring this state of things for nearly an hour, he was at length released from his rather perilous situation without having suffered the least injury, and the "little busy bees" were safely lodged in a new hive. It is unnecessary to say, that, had he made the least resistance to the irascible insects, the consequences might have been fatal.

A heavy pressure has been sent from Chatham to Sunderland, to be placed there on the battery on the north side of the harbour, where there has not been anything of the kind for a considerable time; and a thirty-two pounder has been sent to Berwick-upon-Tweed, intended for the practice of the coast-guard men stationed there in the art of gunnery, with the view of afterwards drafting them into the navy should they be required. The gun is to be mounted on the walls at the flag-staff position towards Spittal Beach.

The reports on the subject of the growing wheats in the north of England are generally favourable: they do not appear to have grown to the extent frequently observed at this season of the year; nevertheless they exhibit signs of health and vigour. In some parts rye is in full ear, and the barley and oats, as well as beans and peas, exhibit a promising appearance.

The Cork, Blackrock, and Passage Railway was opened for traffic on Saturday, when the first train left Cork for Passage at nine o'clock. Notice could be more satisfactory or encouraging to the company than the amount of passenger traffic which the line obtained during that day and yesterday. There are two stations on the line: one at Blackrock, on the cutting near Dundanion; and the other, which is called the Douglas-station, half way between Cork and Passage

A vessel arrived from Stettin has brought the large quantity of 225 puncheons of potato spirit, consigned, and also 130 casks of potato flour, the produce and manufacture of Prussia.

The Trafalgar, East Indiaman, landed, on Monday last, in the East India Docks, a remarkably beautiful elephant, which has been purchased for the Royal Surrey Zoological Gardens, and (out of compliment to the hero of Trafalgar's achievements the ship was named) christened "Nelson."

The English fishing-boats the Wonder and the Hunt were seized and taken into Havre a few days ago by the French Government, under the pretence that the number of oars, nails, and cows was more than allowed by the treaty. A return has just been published stating the number of live cattle exported from Ireland to Great Britain in each year, from [illegible]. The number of oxen, bulls, and cows was from 86,464 (1846) [illegible] to 394,179 (1847) to 244,961 (1849); that of swine from [illegible] to 58,053 (1849). These figures are not the result of actual enumeration, no record of the trade between great Britain and Ireland having been kept since 1825, when it was placed under coasting regulations, but are gathered chiefly from printed market and shipping returns.

CONSECRATION OF ST. BARNABAS CHURCH, PIMLICO.

ON Tuesday, one of the most remarkable Churches lately erected in the metropolis was consecrated by the Bishop of London, in the presence of the Bishops of Oxford, Salisbury, and Brechin, Archdeacons Thorpe, Manning, and Harrison, the Rev. Dr. Pusey, the Rev. W. Sewell, the Rev. J. Keble, and upwards of 200 other clergymen connected with what is usually termed the High Church party, all of whom appeared in full canonicals, and presented a very imposing assemblage. There were also present, the Earl of Carlisle, Earl Nelson, Lord Campden, Lord Fielding, Lord Castlereagh, Sir John Harrington, Bart., Lord John Manners, M.P., Mr. A. J. B. Hope, M.P., Mr. Bramston, M.P., and other noblemen and gentlemen.

The new Church and College are dedicated to St. Barnabas, and are situate in that part of Pimlico which abuts upon Chelsea, and have long been looked upon with much interest.

The first stone of the College was laid on St. Barnabas' Day, 1846: it includes lodgings for two schoolmasters, and a matron and servant, and four school-mistresses; schools for boys, girls, and infants, about six hundred in all, twenty-four of whom are to be on the foundation, to be clothed, boarded, and lodged, as well as educated gratuitously. The residentiary house is constructed to hold four clergymen, whose duty it will be to attend to the parochial duties of the parish, and to minister in the Church. They will also teach in the Schools, and have the special superintendence of twelve choristers on the foundation. The Church is intended to be entirely free, without pews or paid seats, and will be capable of holding 700 persons in open benches. The Schools were opened on St. Barnabas' Day, 1847.

The Residentiary House was completed in 1845, and is now occupied by the president and three curates. The buildings are constructed of Kentish rag-stone, both externally and internally, having dressings and spire of Caen stone.

The roofs of the Church, chancel, sacristy, and choir vestry are of oak.

The cost of the Schools, Residentiary House, and Church, with the enclosing walls and appurtenances, will be about £20,000, exclusive of private offerings of decoration. The freehold site of the College was the munificent gift of the late Marquis of Westminster. The funds have been provided by the voluntary contributions of the Inhabitants of St. Paul's parish, and specially the congregation attending divine service in that church. The style of the architecture is the first pointed (early English), and which appeared to the trustees of the College best adapted for the poor man's church.

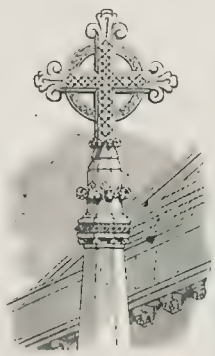
ST. BARNABAS CHURCH AND COLLEGE, PIMLICO.

The decorations of the Church are of the most superb description, the chancel especially being resplendent with colour and gilding. The altar, canopies to the sedilia, and other parts, are very richly gilded, whilst the roof is splendidly painted. The roof to the nave is well designed, and the chamfered edge of the timbers is painted with flowers on a white ground, giving relief in point of colour, and adding much to the effect of the interior. From our representations, an idea of the general character of the edifice can be formed; our exterior View showing the Church and collegiate buildings, whilst in our interior View, taken from the nave, looking east, the arrangement and decorations are carefully shown. Of the small Vignettes, one shows the font, with its elegant enrichments fully delineated; and the other, the upper part of the spire in the court-yard of the College.

The dimensions of the interior of the Church are as follows:—The length, 97 feet from east to west, including the chancel (30 feet deep). The width of the nave and aisles, 51 feet; and the height of the nave, 5 feet. The height of the tower and spire is 170 feet. The general arrangement is a nave with north and south aisles; a tower at the west end of the north aisle a south porch, a chancel with aisles, a sacristy and choir vestry, all attached, connecting the Church to the other portions of the College. There is a crypt under the eastern part of the chancel. There is a peal of ten bells, the private and personal gifts of various members of the parish, each person giving a bell. The windows throughout the Church every one of stained glass—are also the gifts of private individuals. The altar, the font, the holy vessels, the illuminated office-books for the service of the altar, the vestments, the corona lucis in the chancel, the eagle of brass, together with several other costly ornaments, are also gifts. The warming apparatus is the gift of a private individual.

The organ, of great richness, variety, and immense power, was built by Messrs. Flight and Son, under the superintendence, and from the plan, of the Rev. Sir Frederick G. Ousley, Bart.

The internal fittings are entirely of oak, executed by Messrs. Jordan and Co.



CROSS IN QUADRANGLE.

INTERIOR OF ST. BARNABAS CHURCH, PIMLICO.

The stone carving, the font, altar, and several other works, are by the hands of Mr. White, displaying great beauty and variety in their execution.

Mr. Potter has supplied the smiths' work and greater part of the brass-work; but the gates to the rood, the corona, credence-table, and plate are by Messrs. Hardman, of Birmingham.

The stained glass forms a series of subjects from the life of St. Barnabas, and is entirely from the factory of Mr. Wailes, of Newcastle.

The decorations to the chancel and nave are by Mr. Bulmer, of Sheffield. The builders employed were Messrs. Higgs and Son, the architects, Messrs. Cundy.

Full choral service was performed by the Rev. T. Helmore and the boys of her Majesty's Chapel Royal, after which a sermon was preached by the Bishop of London. The consecration services were to be continued during the week, the sermons to be preached by the Bishop of Oxford, Dr. Pusey, Archdeacon Manning, the Rev. W. Sewell, and the Rev. F. Bennett. It is understood that Mr. A. J. B. Hope, M.P., has been one of the principal contributors towards the new Church and College of St. Barnabas.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

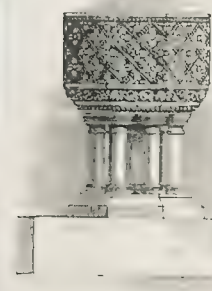
OXFORD.

The Encænia, or Commemoration of Founders and Benefactors, was held in the theatre on Wednesday, when the honorary degree of Doctor in Civil Law was conferred on—The Right Hon. General Viscount Gough, G.C.B. Major Herbert Benjamin Edwardes, C.B. Major Henry C. Rawlinson, C.B. The Hon. Sir Edward Hall Alderson, Knt. John Ayrton Paris, M.D., F.R.S. Messrs Adcocks, Trinity College, Cambridge; and Bailey were admitted ad eundem. The Prize Essays and Poems were recited by their respective authors before a splendid and crowded audience, and much applauded. Lord Gough and his companions were greeted with rapturous plaudits on their entrance and on their quitting the theatre.

DR. ELLERTON'S THEOLOGICAL PRIZE ON THE DIVINE APPOINTMENT OF THE SABBATH.—This subject, as appointed by the judges, for an English essay, is proposed to members of the University on the following conditions; viz.—1. The candidate must have passed his examination for the degree of B.A. or B.C.L. 2. He must not on this day (June 11) have exceeded his 28th term. 3. He must have commenced his 16th term eight weeks previous to the day appointed for sending in his essay to the Registrar of the University. In every case the terms are to be computed from the matriculation inclusively.

ST. AUGUSTINE'S COLLEGE, CANTERBURY.—It is intended to raise, in St. Augustine's Missionary College, a permanent memorial of the late Queen Dowager, in the shape of a scholarship bearing her name. Upwards of £200 have already been raised towards the accomplishment of this object, the principal contributors being Lord Lyttelton, Lord Robert Grosvenor, M.P., Sir Walter Farquhar, Bart., the Venerable Archdeacon Churton, the Rev. Ernest Hawkins, B.D., Secretary to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, and the Rev. C. E. Kennaway, M.A., Vicar of Campden.

APPOINTMENTS AND PREFERMENTS.—The Rev. J. Hutchinson to be one of the Canons of Lichfield Cathedral. The Rev. Frederick Anthony Stansfield Marshall, to be one of the Minor Canons of the Cathedral Church of Peterborough. The Rev. T. Corser, Rector of Stand, to be one of the Rural Deans for the diocese of Manchester. The Rev. E. W. Tufnell, to be Rural Dean of the prebend or canonry of Major Pars Altaris, ancienty founded in the Cathedral Church of Sarum. The Rev. O. Crewe, to the Rectory of Astbury, Chester. The Rev. Edward Knight James, to the Rectory of Penmaen, Gower. The Rev. Joseph Lawson Sisson, to the Rectory of Edinthorpe, Norfolk. The Rev. Samuel P. Field, to the united Rectories of Bonige-cum-Debach, Suffolk. The Rev. G. Wilcock, to the Rectory of St. Martin's, Colchester. The Rev. William Magnall Kerr, to the Rectory of Nevendon, Essex. The Rev. Edward Wyndham Tufnell, to the Rectory of Betchingstoke, near Devizes. The Rev. James Penny, to the Rectory of Steepleton Iwerne, Dorset.



FONT.

TESTIMONIALS.—The following clergymen have recently received testimonials of esteem and affection:—The Rev. James Milner, late Curate of Monkwearmouth, from the Rev. B. Kennicott and other friends. The Rev. H. Woodward, Curate of St. George's, Wigan, from the congregation. The Rev. J. B. Broadbent, late Curate of St. George's, Chorley, from the teachers of the Sunday-schools. The Rev. Joshua Fawcett, Incumbent of the Holy Trinity Church, from the parishioners of Low Moor, North Bierley. The Rev. F. Clay, late Incumbent, from the congregation of Skerton Church. The Rev. George Grey Cashman, Curate of All Saints', Southampton, from the parishioners. The Rev. Christian Frederick Nowell, from the parishioners of Holy Trinity, Upper Chelsea, on his departure. The Rev. L. A. Cliffe, from the inhabitants of Trull, near Taunton, on his departure. A few friends in the neighbourhood of Leamington have just evinced their esteem for his private character and ministerial usefulness, by presenting, on the 11th ult., the Rev. Theodore Shaw with an elegant inkstand.

The Bishop of London has appointed the Rev. George Smith Drew, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge, to the incumbency of St. John the Evangelist Church, Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square, rendered vacant by the resignation of the Rev. William Cook, M.A. His Lordship has licensed the Rev. Cornelius Hart, M.A., to the incumbency of Old St. Pancras Church, rendered vacant by the promotion of the Rev. George Smith Drew, M.A., on the nomination of the Rev. Canon Dale.

GENERAL ANDRE SANTA CRUZ.

THIS valiant soldier has just arrived in this quarter of the world as Minister Plenipotentiary from the Republic of Bolivia to the English Court. He has before visited Europe in the character of exile; but his misfortune is in a measure repaired by the importance and dignity of his present position.

GENERAL ANDRE SANTA CRUZ.

General André Santa Cruz was born in 1794, at La Paz, the capital of one of the provinces of Bolivia, and is a direct descendant, through his mother, from the Incas of Peru. He began his military career immediately upon quitting college, in the Spanish army, wherein he attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He joined the liberating army in 1820, when Peru proclaimed her independence, and, by his valour and tactics, largely contributed to maintain the proclamation. In 1821, as a reward for his services, he was promoted to the rank of Colonel, and, in conjunction with General Sucre, assisted to raise the standard of liberty in the state of Ecuador. It was in the course of this campaign that the battle of Pichincha was fought, in which Santa Cruz distinguished himself at the head of his advanced guard. These services attracted the attention of General Bolivar, and won for him the rank of General of Brigade. He was next engaged with General Bolivar in the celebrated campaigns of Xemiu and Ayacucho, which closed the wars of independence, in 1824.

The achievements of General Santa Cruz in the course of these campaigns were rewarded by the dignity of Grand Marshal of Peru, and the government of the departments of Chuquisaca and La Paz. His sagacious administration in his latter capacity marked him out as the fittest Governor of Peru, to which high post he was quickly nominated by his admirer and friend General Bolivar. The national records of this period bear ample testimony to the enlightened policy and the systematic prudence with which General Santa Cruz presided over the destinies of Peru. He retired from his post in 1827, in consequence of the defection of part of the army from his staunch friend Bolivar, and accepted the comparatively insignificant appointment of Minister Plenipotentiary to the Governments of Chili and of Buenos Ayres. In 1829, a serious rebellion, that threatened irretrievable disasters, having broken out in the Republic of Bolivia, the friends of order appealed to their old friend General Santa Cruz as being the only man capable of re-establishing public tranquillity. His firmness and mercy had the rapid effect of calming the excited spirits of the rebels; and, as soon as public confidence was restored, he placed the financial affairs of the country on a firm footing, and, in conjunction with wise counsellors, drew up the civil and penal codes, which were published within the period of his discretional government. In 1831, the National Congress elected him Constitutional President of Bolivia, and Captain-General of the National Forces; and, moreover, confirmed the clause in the will of General Bolivar, which bequeathed the medal of honour to him. His occupation of the Presidential chair, to which he was re-elected in 1835, was marked by unusual commercial and financial prosperity; and the yearly revenue always exceeded the annual expenditure. He paid great attention, also, to the diffusion of knowledge.

Peru, harassed and divided by internal dissension, turned, as his native country had turned in the hour of trouble, to General Santa Cruz. It was proposed to form a confederation of the two republics. This proposition was carried out, and solemnly ratified in 1835; whereupon the Peruvians, under the protection of their former chief magistrate, laid down arms, and prepared to enjoy the blessings of peace. The Confederation was confirmed, by a convocation of the congresses of Chetami, Huawra, and Tapacari in 1836, and General Santa Cruz was named "Protector of the Confederation." In his capacity of protector, the General made a triumphant entry into Lima, in 1837, where the deliberations of a General Congress of the Confederation were at once opened, and the constitution of the Confederation was determined upon. The Protector's liberal policy secured the sympathy and esteem of all enlightened nations; gave an impetus to native enterprise and industry; and, above all, restored the credit of Peru, by acknowledging and liquidating the English liabilities. This prosperous state of things was suddenly checked by the appearance of a hostile Chilian fleet, which seized upon the fleet of the Confederation in the port of Callao, without any previous declaration of war, and by the landing of a Chilian expedition on the Intermedios, accompanied by a handful of Peruvians who were hostile to the Confederation. This expedition was soon subdued by the skill of General Santa Cruz, who exacted from it the treaty of Paucarpata, and then allowed free egress from the territory of the Confederation. This generosity on the part of the Protector was met by treachery on the part of Chili directly her army was once more on Chilian ground. At this time the Government of Buenos Ayres made an unsuccessful attack upon the Confederation. The enemies without having been successfully repulsed, the prosperous condition of the Confederation continued, till General Orbegoso (one of the founders of the Confederation) rebelled, and enlisted the troops under his command in his cause. This infernal rebellion afforded a fresh and favourable opportunity for renewed hostility from without, and the result was that within a short space of time Chilian troops occupied Lima. On the appearance of General Santa Cruz, however, the foes were compelled to evacuate and re-embark. Defeated in this direction, the Chilian troops directed their course to the northern provinces, where Orbegoso's rebel band were collected. General Santa Cruz, in the ardour of his determination to rid the territory of the Confederation from this treacherous foe, undertook a march of 200 leagues, under the severity of which many of his troops sank, and the result of which was his defeat at Yungay, by his rebel forces. The defection of Generals Ballivian and Velasco, who commanded two powerful divisions of the army of the Confederation, made this disaster irretrievable. General Santa Cruz was obliged to retire to Guayaquil, whence he subsequently betook himself with his family, to Europe. He has lately been accredited by his native country Minister Plenipotentiary in London and Paris.

There are few public men who have held so many important public trusts with such universal popularity. The liberality of the General's views, his sagacity in council, and, above all, the purity of his patriotism, and the unselfish nature of his administrations, are claims upon the gratitude of South America that will command wider recognition in times to come even than they obtain at the present time.

PRESENTATION OF A TESTIMONIAL TO DR. JEREMIE,

BY THE STUDENTS OF HAILEYBURY COLLEGE.

IT may be in the recollection of our readers, that, a short time since, Dr. Jeremie resigned the appointment of Dean and Professor at the East India College, at Haileybury, in consequence of his election to the Regius Professorship of Divinity in the University of Cambridge. Although this step was not an unexpected result of the elevation of Dr. Jeremie, it was no less the occasion of deep regret to the students at Haileybury, whose veneration for a gentleman who united in his person so many qualities of gentleness, than of firmness, in the execution of his duties, was only equalled by their admiration of his profound scholarship. His learning and his kindness had won the regard and affection of all; and they determined to express at once their admiration and their regret, by presenting the retiring Dean with a testimonial which should remind him in after times of the services he had rendered, and of the gratitude of those on whom they had been conferred; and, for this purpose, the superb design here engraved was selected.

The Testimonial is a handsome clock, three feet in height, and two in width. The clock is surmounted by a magnificent bronze statuette of Michael Angelo in his studio, modelled by Funchère, and cast by Vittor; supported by a pedestal, enriched with mediæval mouldings and ornaments in cernolo; and, laterally, by caryatides in bronze. An appropriate inscription in Latin is engraved on a black marble plinth. The statuette and the caryatides are beautifully executed. The testimonial was prepared under the direction of Messrs. Phillips, Brothers, of Cockspur-street, from whose establishment it was procured.

The presentation took place on the 30th ult., in the library of the College, the students being all assembled for the occasion. Dr. Jeremie, upon entering the room, was received with the warmest congratulations.

Mr. Currie, the senior of the College, then advanced to the place occupied by Dr. Jeremie, and presented the testimonial amidst the applause of the assembled students.

An address to the reverend Doctor was also read; and Dr. Jeremie replied to the students with much earnestness and emotion. At its conclusion, the students pressed round the Doctor, and cordially shook hands with him.

Thus terminated a proceeding alike honourable to Dr. Jeremie, to the students individually, and to the establishment which developed the high qualities which won, and the generous gratitude which gave the graceful tribute.

The addresses are reported in full in the Hertford Mercury for the 25th ult.

TESTIMONIAL PRESENTED TO THE REV. J. AMBRAUX JEREMIE, D.D., BY THE STUDENTS OF HAILEYBURY COLLEGE.

We regret to report the sudden death, by apoplexy, at Rome, of Wyatt, the eminent sculptor, who for the last twenty years resided there, working out those graceful creations of the chisel which enrich so many European and British galleries.

It is said that Mr. Sergeant Murphy will again be a candidate for the representation of Cork, on the retirement of Mr. Fagan.

PARLIAMENTARY PORTRAITS.

LORD NAAS, M.P. FOR KILDARE COUNTY

RICHARD SOUTHWELL BOURKE, Lord Naas, eldest son of the present fifth Earl of Mayo, was born at Dublin in 1822, and having been educated for the University by a private tutor, entered Trinity College, Dublin, in 1840; in 1844 took his degree of A.B.; in the same year was appointed, under the Lord-Lieutenancy of Earl de Grey, to the commission of the peace for the county of Kildare; and the greater part of the following year he spent in travelling over the Continent, making some stay both at St. Petersburgh and Moscow and on his return wrote a work under the title of "St. Petersburgh and Moscow," published by Colburn, in 1845, and which met with considerable public favour. In 1846 he was appointed a Gentleman of the Bedchamber to the Earl of Heytesbury, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland from July 1844 to July 1846.

LORD NAAS, M.P. FOR KILDARE.

At the general election in 1847, in conjunction with the Marquis of Kildare, he contested the county, on Protectionist and Conservative principles, against John Augustus O'Neil, and was returned, after a severe contest; the numbers being —Marquis of Kildare, 544; Lord Naas, 413; John Augustus O'Neil, 301.

In 1829, this John Augustus O'Neil was a Tory member for Hull, and voted against the Emancipation Bill. At the subsequent general election, the tables were so completely turned against him, that his carriage, under the supposition of his being in it, was thrown over one of the bridges. He, however, escaped, and by 1847 having changed both his religious and political faith, appeared as a Radical, Repeal, and Roman Catholic candidate for Kildare.

In the sessions of 1847 and 1848, Lord Naas, except as an attentive listener, took no part in the debates. His first speech was in favour of the Habeas Corpus suspension of 1848, as necessary to the peace and security of life and property in Ireland. Since then he has taken part in almost every Irish debate of any importance, speaking always to the purpose, and very briefly.

In the present session, he has spoken in support of Mr. Poulett Scrope's motion for a special commission to inquire into the condition of the union of Kilrush, and the means for its amelioration. He seconded Mr. F. French's motion on the Irish Poor-Law; and moved that Sir John Romilly's Bill for Security of Advances on Properties Sold under the Irish Encumbered Estates Commission, should be read a second time that day six months, on the ground that such special enactment to facilitate borrowing for purposes of purchase, was the way, of all others, to perpetuate the evil of the continuance of Irish properties in the hands of middlemen and persons with insufficient capital for their efficient improvement and profitable cultivation.

On Tuesday last, Lord Naas moved that the House should resolve itself into committee, to take into consideration the present mode of levying the duty on home-made spirits, as a grievance upon the home, and unjustly in favour of the foreign and colonial manufacturers. The quantity of British spirits for payment of duty being measured on going into, and the foreign and colonial on being taken out of bond, he urged that Irish, Scotch, and English manufacturers were compelled to pay duty upon larger quantities than they actually received from the bonded warehouses, no allowance being made for evaporation and waste in store; and the result being that the home manufacturers were practically deprived of the advantage of allowing the spirits to become aged; whilst the foreign maker having his measured for duty only on being taken out of bond, suffered no loss from their continuance in the warehouse, but the quite unimportant one of a diminution in quantity at first cost, and had, therefore, practically, a premium on age, and therefore quality, against the home producer. So forcibly was the case of injustice made out, that in a House of 138 members, 85 voted with Lord Naas, and but 53, notwithstanding the Government opposed the motion, against him; and the majority included members of all parties.

His Lordship has also been a hard worker upon committees sitting last session upon the Ministers' money, and Irish Fisheries Committees, and being now a diligent member of the committees upon the Kilrush Union, the Irish Petty Sessions, and the important committee obtained by the honourable member for Athlone, upon the Irish Prerogative Court.

Lord Naas married, in 1848, Blanche Julia, third daughter of Colonel Wyndham, of Petworth, Sussex.

Our portrait is from a photograph by Kilburn.

LORD LONDESBOROUGH'S CONVERSAZIONE.

ON Monday afternoon, a large party of noblemen and gentlemen, consisting for the most part of Fellows of the Society of Antiquaries, assembled at Lord Londesborough's splendid mansion in Piccadilly, for the purpose of witnessing the interesting process of unrolling a mummy which had been recently brought from Thebes by C. Arden. The specimen was a very perfect one, and the richness of the case, with its gold embellishments and hieroglyphical characters, led to the belief that the investigation of the body would reveal certain peculiarities not commonly met with in mummies of Egyptian preparation. The inscription on the external surface of the case was read thus, "Ankh-sen-hesi," or "She who lives by Isis," thus at once determining the sex of the individual.

EYE, OF SILVER.

SILVER SCARABÆUS.

Mr Birch, previous to unrolling the mummy, favoured the party with a short sketch of embalming. The term "mummy," he said, came from the Arabic mum, a drug, and was not Egyptian, the body being called ate in that tongue, the embalment kars or qiots, and the mummy sah. The practice dates from the third and fourth dynasties, in all probability from 3000 B.C., and was continued until 709 A.D. Mr Birch then went through, and explained the process of embalming, as described by Herodotus, with its three grades and cheapest mode, and the process, and compared the historian's account with the facts eliminated by the examination of mummies. The classification of mummies is yet in its infancy. Of the third and fourth dynasties, few, if any, remain; they were ejected, perhaps, to make room for their successors. The jackals may have mangled some, and decay, probably, reached others. Even of the eleventh dynasty there is no known mummy. In the next dynasty, about 1800 B.C., bitumen is first used, and from the nineteenth century to the age of the Roman Empire, specimens are numerous of every grade.

After explaining in detail the various methods of bandaging up the body, sometimes in as many as 46 rounds of swathing, Mr. Birch proceeded to describe the cartonage or first pasteboard enclosure for the body. This is formed of compound layers of linen covered with lime, and moulded to the form of the body, and painted with a conventional face and numerous decorations. Among these, the most curious described by Mr. Birch was the illustration of the 125th chapter of the Book of the Dead—"The going into the halls of Double Truth, and how every one is cleansed of his sins and made to see the faces of the gods." Osiris, on his throne, with the balance before him, weighs the heart of the dead man against the feather of truth, whilst the Ibis-headed Thoth records the result. The dead man's introducer leads him to Truth or the Two Truths, and his prayer is, "to be allowed to pass through the paths of darkness, and be enrolled among the followers of Osiris in the gate," &c. As he moves on, everything around him begins to speak. The floors, the floor, the lintels, the proof, all ask him to tell their mystical names ere he proceeds; whilst on the cornice of the hall sit the forty-two demons who are fed on the blood of the wicked, and represent the sins. In front of the gates of judgment the impersonation—the afflicter of the wicked—in a gate, from whence issue the flames of hell. Beside him are the two issues of life—the returner to the earth, and the emblem of new birth; and before these the deceased recites a list of forty-two sins which he has not committed.

Our notice of Mr. Birch's admirable sketch is necessarily very brief. The dusty labour of stripping off the fatally rags for rags of all kinds were used in swathing up the mummies—and the avidity with which antiquaries nearly at once during which time many speculations were hazarded as to the result of the examination: it frequently happening that nothing beyond the materials used in the process is found amidst all the folds in the Egyptian's inheritance—and sometimes to have taken away the more valuable articles intended to be buried with the dead. The first discovery, however, was that of the dorsal strap of leather extending in a sheerson shape from the head to the heels, and by which the body is lead to any important result. A roll of papyrus was next brought to light, inscribed with portions of the Egyptian ritual. The body being exposed, and the flank incision laid bare, the heart appearing from which was stamped the hieroglyphic figure of a human eye—was removed, and some further careful exploration revealed a very unusual feature, namely, a silver plate over the region of the heart; and this was a long narrow plate, on which was stamped a scarabæus with outstretched wings. On removal, the plate was found to be covered with writing, with great care, all the fingers being encased in silver previous to the application of the coating of bitumen. The figure of Apis was also found enveloped in linen bandages between the legs, and the grains of wheat from the deposited beneath the folds of the mummy. It was thought that the lady thus unhouselled by the curiosity of modern antiquaries was one of wealth and rank, who lived from one thousand to twelve hundred years before Christ, and that she had been preserved from the present time; but the body was so much charred in embalming, that the limbs fell asunder very easily.

The mummy was one of the most interesting that has been examined for some years, and the visitors present are much indebted to Lord Londesborough for the privilege of inspecting it.

By the special kindness of Lord Londesborough, one of our Artists was permitted to witness the unrolling the mummy, and to take sketches of the silver plates found upon it; and we present them to our readers, premising that in our Engravings they are represented of much smaller size than the originals. Silver ornaments, we should observe, are very rarely met with in mummies.

THE GORHAM CASE.

THAT the Bishop of Exeter and his advisers would have recourse to every means the law could be tortured into allowing, to stop the execution of the judgment of the Privy Council, we were aware, and stated as much three weeks ago. We were not surprised, therefore, that a smaller motion was made in the Court of Exchequer on Thursday week that was made in the other two courts, for a rule to show cause why a writ of prohibition should not issue to stay the Arches Court from giving institution to Mr. Gorham; but we are surprised that the Court, though it is rather notorious for raising nice points of law, should have taken a different course from the other Courts, and granted the rule. It professes to wish not to differ from the other Courts, but it also professes to be ignorant of some questions at issue, especially how the matter in dispute touches the Crown, and it grants the rule that counsel may enlighten its ignorance. The return to the rule was made on Saturday, when the Attorney-General raised an objection to the want of jurisdiction in the Court, which the Court overruled. The argument on the case is to be begun on the 29th, and be continued de die in diem till it be concluded. Another month of agitation for the Church is supplied by the wish of some of the judges of the Court who hear counsel to receive information from the researches of counsel on doubtful points of law.

On Wednesday, the Attorney-General moved, in the Court of Queen's Bench, that a writ should be issued to the Archbishop of Canterbury to command him to inquire and certify to the Court upon the matters in which issue had been joined in a certain suit of quare impedit, in which the Queen was plaintiff and the Bishop of Exeter defendant—the present case. The writ being issued, the Archbishop would call before him the parties concerned in carrying the decision on the issues into execution, and return the same into the court at Westminster. The Lord Chief Justice said the Court was bound to award the writ, and the writ was ordered. Another step, therefore, is taken, with a view of bringing the matter to a close; but it remains to be seen whether, like many other legal proceedings, it will not complicate it still more. The present writ is an unusual, though not unexampled, proceeding.

Arrangements have been made for holding a great public meeting of the clergy and laity of the Church of England on the 27th inst., for the adoption of certain resolutions with reference to the late decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of "Gorham v. the Bishop of Exeter," and the consequences arising therefrom. The principal men connected with the High Church party will be present, to take part in the proceedings. The promoters are anxious to secure the countenance and support of all who feel that a tacit acquiescence by the Church of England in the recent decision of the Privy Council would be an "inspeakable" misery. An address to the Throne will be moved at the meeting, setting forth the Church's rights as to spiritual freedom, reminding her Majesty of the declaration prefixed to the articles of religion, and praying therefore the Royal licence that convocation may be summoned for the express purpose of vindicating or authoritatively declaring the doctrine of the Church of England on Holy Baptism. Many of the highest ecclesiastical dignitaries have expressed approval of the proposed course of proceeding, and have intimated their intention of being present at the meeting.

ANNUAL INSPECTION OF THE ROYAL MARINES AT GOSPORT.—The annual inspection of this corps was made by Major-General Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, G.C.H., and Colonel John Owen, K.H., the Deputy Adjutant-General of the Royal Marine Corps, on Tuesday and Wednesday. The above gallant officers and their staff arrived on the ground at Forton, at eleven, A.M. The state of the arms and accoutrements, mess-rooms, officers' quarters, marine gun batteries, &c., was found satisfactory; and the field movements at Haslar were executed in a manner which reflected the highest credit upon the men, and drew from the Generals the warmest praise. The firing was precise and effective, and the admirable discipline of the men most apparent.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS FOR THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Consols opened heavily on Monday, prices from Paris quoting a decline in the French rentes. The news, however, of the unsuccessful attack on Cuba by the American Lopezites, joined to the enhanced value in the market of the public, afterwards gave a buoyancy to prices, and the closing quotations were 96½ to 97. An improvement of ¼ marked the opening on Tuesday; and as the settlement of the approaching Consol account proceeded, prices further advanced, quoting 97¼ at the close of business. Wednesday was principally occupied in arranging balances, and some alarm was felt about an extensive bear account, which has, however, since been settled for the present. The low rate of money for the next fortnight dates for present arrangements, and the Account seems generally to have been rather bearish than otherwise. Thursday was settling-day, no apparent difficulty occurring in the performance of the bargains. Prices at the close of business, Consols quoting 97⅛ to ¼ for Money, with great firmness. Bank Stock has been done as high as 209; Exchequer Bills, 68 to 71. Consols open on the 17th of July for the transfer of the future quarter's dividends will, consequently, be the prices for delivery at that day. At the close of the week, Bank Stock quoted 208, Reduced, 96½; Consols, 97⅛; New 3½ per Cent. Annuities, 98¼; Long Annuities, to expire Jan., 1860, 8¼; Ditto, 30 years, Jan. 5, 1850, 8⅞; India Bonds, under £1000, 88 pm; South Sea Stock, Old Annuities, [illegible] Consols for Account, 97⅛, Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 68 pm; Ditto, £ 0, June, 68 pm; Ditto, Small, June, 68 pm.

Without any extraordinary fluctuation in the Foreign Market, prices have been well supported until the close of the Account, when a sight tendency to recede was apparent. This was most perceptible in Mexican, which, on Thursday, receded from Monday's price of 31⅝ ⅜ to 31¼ ⅜. Russian Five per Cent. Stock has been done at 108, Peruvian at 77⅜ to 78⅜, and Buenos Ayres Bonds at 83. Closing prices were for—Brazilian Bonds, Small, 88; Danish Bonds, 1825, Five per Cent., [illegible]; Grenada Bonds, One-and-a-Half per Cent., 18⅜; Mexican, Five per Cent., 1845, Ex Jan. Coupons, 31⅜; Ditto, Account, 31⅜; Ditto, Small, 31⅝ Portuguese Four per Cent., 34⅜; Russian Bonds, 109; Ditto, Four-and-a-Half per Cent., 95⅜; Ditto, Scrip, 3⅞ p; Spanish, Five per Cent., 1840, 17⅝; Ditto, Three per Cent., 38⅛; Ditto, Account, 38⅜; Venezuela Bonds, Deferred, 12. Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cent., 12 Guild., 7/8; Ditto, Four per Cent. Certificates, 86⅝.

Thursday was another dull day in the Share Market, and, on the Account being closed, prices yielded in several instances. There has, however, been a better business doing this Account than for several preceding, a greater degree of confidence being displayed in the best descriptions. Aberdeen, ½; Ditto, Preference, ¼ dis.; Ambergate, Nottingham, Boston, and Eastern Junction, ½; Buckinghamshire, 17½; Caledonian, 9⅜; Ditto, New, £10 Preference, 6⅝; Eastern Counties, 7⅛; Ditto, New Preference, 3 per Cent., 11⅛ dis.; East Lancashire, 7½; East Lincolnshire, Guaranteed Six per Cent., 28⅝; Great Northern, 10¾; Ditto, Five per Cent., Preference, 10⅝; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), 31⅛; Great Western, 59⅜ ⅝; Ditto, New, £7 8 pm; Hull and Selby, 96¾; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 40⅛; Ditto, Fifths, 2; Leeds and Bradford, 94½; London and Blackwall, 4⅛; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 82⅛; Ditto, Guaranteed, Five per Cent., 111; London and Greenwich, 11; London and North-Western, 110; London and North-Western, New Quarters, 12⅛; Ditto, Fifths, 12⅛; London and South-Western, 64½; Ditto, New £50, 24⅛; Midland, 37⅛; Ditto, £50 Shares, 8⅛; North British, 7⅞; North Staffordshire, 7⅛; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 9⅛; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 15½; Royston and Hitchin, 5½; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, New, Guaranteed, 9½; South-Eastern, 14⅛; Ditto, Registered, No. 4, 5; Wear Valley, Six per Cent.; Guaranteed, 26½; Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth, 4⅛; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 15½; Do., Newcastle, Extens., 9⅛; Do., G.N.E., Pref., 2⅛; York and North Midland, 17⅛; Ditto, Pref., 7⅛; Northern of France, 13⅝; Paris and Rouen, 22⅛; Rouen and Havre, 5; Sambre and Meuse, 5⅝.

The national stocks were closed on Friday for the dividends. The market, however, was somewhat active, and prices had an upward tendency. The three per Cents. for the account, ex div., were done at 97⅛. The Foreign Bonds and Railway Shares moved off steadily, and the quotations were well supported. The Unfunded Debt was steady.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—Notwithstanding that the arrivals of English wheat during the present week have been on the increase, the show of samples of that grain here to-day was small; nevertheless, the demand for all kinds, owing to the limited number of buyers in attendance, ruled very inactive, at barely previous prices. From abroad, 13,000 quarters of wheat have come fresh to hand. Selected qualities changed hands to a fair extent, at full rates of Monday last; but secondary and inferior sorts were a dull sale, at the quotations were almost nominal. No English barley offering, and the supply of foreign did not exceed 6210 quarters. Grinding parcels were quite as dear. Malting and distilling sorts were scarce and dearer. Malt, the supply of which was on the increase, moved off slowly at late rates. Good sound oats were quite as dear, and the value of other kinds was fairly supported. Beans, peas, and flour, were dull, and cheaper.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 1720 quarters; barley, 40; malt, 3510; oats, 1290; flour, 3210. Foreign: wheat, 13,210; barley, 6310; oats, 13,550; flour, 1290 sacks.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 37s to 43s; ditto, white, 40s to 46s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 37s to 42s; ditto, white, 40s to 45s; rye, 30s to 32s; grinding barley, 19s to 21s, distilling ditto, 25s to 25s; malting ditto, 36s to 37s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 46s to 48s; brown ditto, 42s to 45s; Kingston and Ware, 48s to 50s; Chevalier, 52s to 54s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 15s to 18s; potato ditto, 17s to 20s; Youghal and Cork, black, 14s to 15s; ditto, white, 16s to 18s; ditto, brown, new, 16s to 17s; grey peas, 34s to 37s; grey peas, 34s to 36s; maple, 34s to 36s; white, 35s to 37s; beans, 35s to 37s per quarter. Town-made flour, 32s to 37s; Suffolk, 27s to 32s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 27s to 32s, per 280 lb.—Foreign: Dantzic and wheat, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s, per quarter. Flour, American, 22s to 23s per barrel; Canada, 24s to 25s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Canary seed is in moderate request, at the late decline in value. In all other seeds we have little doing, that the quotations are almost nominal. Cakes very dull.

LINSEED, English, sowing, 54s to 56s; Baltic, crushing, 40s to 42s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 38s to 44s; Bombay, shipped 32s to 36s per quarter. CORIANDER, 16s to 18s per cwt.; brown mustard-seed, 8s to 11s; white ditto, 6s to 8s per bushel; TARES, 3s 8d to 4s 6d per bushel; English rapeseed, new, 23s to 25s; maltting ditto, 36s to 37s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 46s to 48s; brown ditto, 42s to 45s; Kingston and Ware, 48s to 50s; Chevalier, 52s to 54s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 15s to 18s; potato ditto, 17s to 20s; Youghal and Cork, black, 14s to 15s; ditto, white, 16s to 18s; ditto, brown, new, 16s to 17s; grey peas, 34s to 37s; grey peas, 34s to 36s; maple, 34s to 36s; white, 35s to 37s; beans, 35s to 37s per quarter. Town-made flour, 32s to 37s; Suffolk, 27s to 32s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 27s to 32s, per 280 lb.—Foreign: Dantzic and wheat, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s, per quarter. Flour, American, 22s to 23s per barrel; Canada, 24s to 25s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Canary seed is in moderate request, at the late decline in value. In all other seeds we have little doing, that the quotations are almost nominal. Cakes very dull.

LINSEED, English, sowing, 54s to 56s; Baltic, crushing, 40s to 42s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 38s to 44s; shipped 32s to 36s per quarter. CORIANDER, 16s to 18s per cwt.; brown mustard-seed, 8s to 11s; white ditto, 6s to 8s per bushel; TARES, 3s 8d to 4s 6d per bushel; English rapeseed, new, 23s to 25s per last of 10 quarters; linseed cakes, English, £3 0s to £3 5s; ditto, foreign, £2 10s to £2 15s per 1000; rapeseed cakes, £4 10s per ton; coriander, nearly 40s to 45s per cwt.; canary, 60s to 66s per quarter. English clover seed, red, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s. Foreign, red, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 6½d to 7d; of household ditto, 4½d to 6d per 4lb loaf.

Imports Weekly Average.—Wheat, 23s qr.; barley, 27s 1d; oats, 15s 7d; rye, 23s 7d; beans, 34s 4d; peas, 35s 6d.

The Next Week's Average.—Wheat, 30s 2d; barley, 22s 8d; oats, 15s 8d; rye, 21s 3d; beans 34s 8d; peas, 35s 6d.

Duties on Foreign Produce.—Wheat is 0d; barley, 1s 0d, oats, 1s 0d; rye, 1s 0d; beans, 1s 0d; peas, 1s 0d.

Tea.—Public sales of 8000 packages have been held this week. 2000 changed hands, at a decline of 1d per lb. on good and fine kyssons. No alteration took place in other kinds

Sugar.—During the week the demand for refined for near sugar has ruled very [illegible] and the terms are lower; the quotations have fallen 6s per cwt. Refined goods is moderate. Brown lumps are selling at 49s 6d; and good to fair grocery, 50s to 52s per cwt.

Coffee.—Native Ceylon qualities have sold heavily, at 42s per cwt, which is now a nominal figure. In other kinds there is a steadier business doing.

Rice.—Our market is in a very inactive state, and last week's quotations are with difficulty supported.

Provisions.—Owing to the falling-off in the importations, the demand for Dutch butter is steady, and last week's rates are fairly supported. Fine Friesland is selling at this to 6½; fine Holstein and Kiel, 64s to 68s; and inferior and surplus, 44s per cwt. and upwards. Fine Cambridge, —s to —s; fine Carlow, —s to —s; and fine Clonmel, —s to —s. Irish have given way 1s to 2s per cwt. Kilkenny, firsts, landed, 70s to 72s; Carlow, 68s to 70s; Limerick, 65s to 66s; Waterford, 60s to 65s; and South Cork, 60s to 62s per cwt. We have had a steady demand at full prices for Hams, and Irish have let better. Fine Dorset, 74s to 76s, inferior and middling, 56s to 66s, fine Devon, 60s to 66s per cwt. Bacon is firm, as to the 1st quarter in Dec. to the 1st of March, and has improved in value. Small Waterford has changed hands, at 56s to 58s; heavy, 52s to 53s per cwt. Hamburg bacon is quoted at 50s to 52s per cwt. Clover seed is still very firm.

Tallow.—P Y C on the spot is still selling at 36s 9d to 37s; and for forward delivery, 38s 3d per cwt. Town tallow, 36s 6d per cwt. Rough fat, 2s per 8 lb.

Oils.—Our market is in a very inactive state. In prices, however, we have no material change to notice.

Coals, Wool, and Straw.—Meadow hay, £3 8s to £3 10s; clover ditto, £3 0s to £4 8s; and straw, £1 1s to £ 2s per load

Potatoes.—The season for old qualities is now nearly closed, yet nearly 800 tons have arrived this week from the Continent. The trade is heavy, and prices are uncertain.

SMITHFIELD (Friday).—Beasts, 2700; sheep and lambs, 14,000; calves, 280; pigs, 270. Hutton, 198; Cambden, 156 6d; Stewart's, 168 per ton.

Hops (Friday).—Good and fine hops are very scarce, and in moderate request, at fully last week's prices, in all other kinds we have very few transactions to notice. The fly has made its appearance in some of the plantations in sussex and Kent. The duty remains at £100,000.

NEW SEED and EAST KENT POCKETS.—New Weald of Kent ditto, £6 0s to £8 0s; New Sussex ditto, £5 3s to £8 3s; Farnhams, £10 0s to £13 0s; Yearling Kents, £2 2s to £4 0s. Yearling Sussex, £3 10s to £5 5s per cwt.

Smithfield (Friday).—Our market to-day was tolerably well, but not to say heavily, supplied with beasts, in time of year considered. The primest Scots commanded a steady sale, at Monday's quotations. Otherwise, the beef trade ruled heavy, at barely last week's prices. There was a considerable increase in the numbers of sheep, all the primest of which moved off steadily, at full last week's currency in value. The supply of calves was extensive, owing to which the demand was in a very inactive state, at a decline in prices of from 2d to 4d per 8 lb. From the side of Wales, 300 sheep and lambs came fresh to hand. Pigs moved in good supply and heavy demand, at barely late rates. In pigs next to nothing was doing. Milch cows sold slowly, at from £14 to £18 each, including their calf.

PER 8lb to sink the offals:—Coarse and inferior beasts, 2s 8d to 2s 10d; second quality ditto, 3s 0d to 3s 4d; prime large oxen, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime Scots, &c., 3s 8d to 3s 10d; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; second quality ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; prime large ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; prime coarse-woolled ditto, 4s 8d to 4s 10d; prime South Down ditto 5s 0d to 5s 2d; large coarse calves, 3s 10d to 4s 2d; prime small ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 6d; large hogs, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; neat small porkers, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; lambs, 5s 10d to 6s 0d. Suckling calves, 18s to 22s; and quarter old store pigs, 16s to 21s. Total supplies: Beasts, 745; oxen, 170; sheep and lambs, 11,800; calves, 310; pigs, 290. Foreign supplies: Beasts, 155; sheep and lambs, 900; calves, 180. Scotch: Beasts, 200; sheep 90

Newcastle and Leadenhall (Friday).—These markets were inactive to-day. In prices, however, we observe no change took place.

LEEDS (Friday).—Inferior beef, 2s 2d to 2s 4d.; middling ditto, 2s 6d to 2s 8d.; prime large ditto, 2s 10d to 3s 0d; prime small ditto, 3s 0d to 3s 2d; large pork, 2s 10d to 3s 4d; inferior mutton, 2s 8d to 3s 0d; middling ditto, 3s 0d to 3s 4d; prime ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; veal, 2s 8d to 3s 4d; small pork, 3s 6d to 4s 0d; lamb, 5s 10d to 6s 10d. ROBT. HEBERT

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, JUNE 11.

LORD CHAMBERLAIN'S OFFICE, MAY 27

Notice is hereby given that her Majesty will hold a Levee at St James's Palace, on Wednesday, the 3rd of July next, at two o'clock.

Notice is hereby given that her Majesty will hold Drawingrooms at St James's Palace, on the following days, as two o'clock—Thursday, 30th June next; Tuesday, 9th July next.

N.B The Knights of the several Orders are to appear in their collars at the Drawingroom on the 28th of June next, in lieu of wearing a collar day

COMMISSION SIGNED BY THE LORD-LIEUTENANT.

2nd Regiment of Royal Bucks Yeomanry Cavalry: B Knox, Esq, to be Captain, vice Beauclerk.

BANKRUPTS

G HAINES, Northampton, grocer R CAMPLING, Northampton, haberdasher. G KILNER, Dalton, Yorkshire, coal-merchant. M JARVIS, Leeds, wool-merchant. T SMITH, Liverpool, clerk-engineer. J WALKDEN, Liverpool, draper. T BAXENDALE, Bolton-le-Moors grocer. J HARROP, Macclesfield, silk-dyer.

FRIDAY, JUNE 17

FOREIGN OFFICE, JUNE 13.

NOTIFICATION.—It is hereby notified that Viscount Palmerston, her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has received from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty the copy of a despatch, dated 19th of February last, from the Commodore in command of her Majesty's ships on the west coast of Africa, enclosing the copy of a minute, dated the 24th of November, 1849, and received by him on the said 19th of February last, from the Commander of the French Royal Forces on that coast, announcing that he had landed the [illegible] which had been previously imposed by him upon that part of the coast which lies between the rivers Grand Bassam and Assinie.

WAR OFFICE, JUNE 14.

2nd Life Guards: Hon C S B Hanbury to be Cornet and 2nd-Lieutenant, vice Fitzroy.

1st Dragoons: Cornet G Paynter to be Lieut, vice Brighton. Cornet G Paynter to be Lieut, vice Reeve. 3rd: J D H Hill to be Cornet, vice Lewson. 4th: Cornet W W R Wilmot to be Lieut, vice Longcroft. 5th: Cornet R Ellis to be Lieut, vice Goad; R J Montgomery to be Cornet, vice Swinton. 6th: R B Cunliffe to be Cornet, vice Norbury. 7th: C J Hutchinson to be Cornet, vice Lamb

7th Light Dragoons: Lieut W Bathurst to be Captain, vice Viscount St. Lawrence: Cornet and Adjutant J Tronsery to have the rank of Lieut; Cornet C G Fraser to be Lieut, vice Bathurst. 10th: Captain J H Wilson, from the 97th Regiment, vice Lieut T Y Jollies to be Captain, vice Dickson: Cornet J Miller to be Lieut, vice Dallas. 16th: C Steel to be Cornet, vice Parish. 17th: Sir W Gordon to be Cornet, vice Morgan.

13th Regiment of Foot: Genl Cadet A Bainbrigge to be Ensign, vice Murchison. 15th: G W Allen to be Ensign, vice Lindsay. 19th: Ensign H Pilgrim, Lieut T Y Jollies to be Captain, vice Dickson: Cornet J Miller to be Lieut, vice Dallas. 26th: C Steel to be Cornet, vice Parish. 27

NEW BOOKS, &c.

THE AUTHOR OF "EMILIA WYNDHAM"
In a few days.
A DELAIDE LINDSAY.
A Novel Edited
BY THE AUTHOR OF "EMILIA WYNDHAM," &c.
Also, now ready,
LA VENDEE. An Historical Romance. By A. TROLLOPE, Esq 3 vols

III
ANNE DYSART; a Tale of Every-day Life. 3 vols
"Remarkable for its talent and acuteness."—Literary Gazette.
HENRY COLBURN, publisher, 13, Great Marlborough street.

Published, by Permission, in the Press of Paris
THE LIFE of a FAIRY. By NELSON LEE. Illustrated by ALFRED CROWQUILL. Price 1s.
London: J. and D. A. DARLING, 136, Bishopsgate-street.

Now ready, crown octavo, price 6s.
FUN, POETRY, and PATHOS; or, the COMICOPIA: a Miscellany. By WILLIAM YOUNG BROWNE. With a superb Fairy Illustration, by Leech
EFFINGHAM WILSON, Royal Exchange.

ROBIN'S CLASSICAL LIBRARY FOR JUNE.
HORACE, literally translated into English prose. By C SMART, M.A. A new edition, revised, with copious Notes, by T. A BUCKLEY, B.A. of Christ Church. The precious volumes are, Euripides, Virgil, Livy, Aristotle, Sophocles, Plato, Thucydides, and Herodotus, all with engraved busts.
HENRY G BOHN, York-street, Covent-garden.

BOHN'S ILLUSTRATED LIBRARY.—LODGE'S PORTRAITS of ILLUSTRIOUS PERSONAGES of GREAT BRITAIN, embellished with 240 Portraits, beautifully engraved on steel. Vol 8, which concludes the work
HENRY G. BOHN York-street, Covent-garden.

BOHN'S SHILLING SERIES.—TAYLOR'S EL DORADO, or PICTURES of the GOLD REGIONS. Two Volumes. Just ready.
HENRY G. BOHN, York-street, Covent-garden.

HENRY'S COMMENTARY on the BIBLE, Abridged, 2 vols 18mo. New Edition (containing upwards of 5000 pages), published at £5 6s. Reduced to 40s the Set. A scheme for the encouragement of the larger Commentaries on Scripture, the Publisher has determined to bring the best edition of Henry's Commentary more generally within the reach of Families and Students: subscribers, for a limited period at the above extremely low price.
HENRY G. BOHN, York-street, Covent-garden.

CHEAPER THAN ALL.
SCOTT'S COMMENTARY on the BIBLE; with the Author's last Additions and Improvements: also further Improvements, particularly in respect to a more distinct arrangement of the Practical Observations, and the addition of Headlines of Contents. The genuine Copyright Edition (formerly published by Messrs. Seeley, Fleet-street, and Nisbet), with Henry Four very highly-finished Wood-Engravings and Maps, complete in three volumes, elegantly printed in large imperial 8vo, published at £4 4s, now reduced to £1 10s

JOHN G. BOHN being proprietor of one of the two sets of stereotype plates of the latest genuine edition of Scott's Commentary (purchased by him from Messrs. Seeley and the other shareholders), begs to call attention to this fact, and at the same time to announce that he has now in preparation a new edition, which will further reduction in its price, with the view of bringing it within the reach of every one. The text and arrangement of this edition will be that of every other. The paper and execution of this edition, and the beauty of its embellishments, are considered, it will be evident, the most nothing short of a very large and sale has at all reimburse upon the actual outlay for paper and print. But the publisher looks forward to such a rapid extension of the sale, and relies on the cordial support of those who take an interest in the dissemination of sound and pious knowledge, that he is induced to venture further, and may be had of all booksellers, or direct from HENRY G. BOHN, York-street, Covent-garden.

ROAD AND RAILWAY GUIDE THROUGH ENGLAND AND WALES, &c.
Now ready is published, price 10s 6d,
A NEW EDITION, GREATLY ENLARGED, OF BLACK'S PICTURESQUE TOURIST, and ROAD AND RAILWAY GUIDE THROUGH ENGLAND and WALES, with Travelling Maps, and Thirty elaborately constructed Maps and Plans. Containing a full and accurate description of the Cities, Towns, Watering-places, Mansions, and Gentlemen's Seats of Interest in upwards of 2000 Names, and embracing a List of the Inns in all the Towns and Villages. The volume is of large size, closely printed, and portable.

Also, NEW EDITIONS of
BLACK'S PICTURESQUE TOURIST of SCOTLAND, 8s 6d
AND ADJACENT ISLANDS, 10s 6d
A NEW AND ECONOMICAL TOURIST of SCOTLAND, 3s 6d
A PICTURESQUE GUIDE to the ENGLISH LAKES, 7s
A GUIDE BOOK to EDINBURGH, 2s 6d
A GUIDE BOOK to GLASGOW, 2s
A TRAVELLING MAP OF ENGLAND, 4s 6d
A TRAVELLING MAP OF SCOTLAND, 4s 6d
A TRAVELLING MAP OF IRELAND, 4s 6d
A MAP OF THE ENGLISH LAKE DISTRICT, 7s 6d
A MAP OF SOUTH WALES, 1s 6d
A MAP OF SOUTH WALES, 1s 6d
A COUNTY MAPS OF SCOTLAND, 1s and 1s 6d each
A MAP OF EDINBURGH AND ENVIRONS, 1s 6d
BOTH'S MEMORIAL OF SCOTLAND, 5s
MAPS OF GREAT EUROPE, 1s each
ADAM & CHARLES BLACK, Edinburgh, and sold by all Booksellers.

LIST OF NEW WORKS
Just completed, or in the press
MESSRS. DICKINSON'S GALLERIES of ART, 114 New Bond-street.
Lieut.-General Lord Viscount GOUGH, G.C.B. Engraving by H Cousins from a Picture by F. R. Pickersgill, R.A.
Major-General the late Sir A. GALLOWAY. Engraving by Joubert, from a Picture by F. R. Pickersgill, R.A.
His excellency Sir WALTER HILLSBURY. Engraving in Mezzotint, from the Picture in the possession of Lady Roberts
The late Earl of AUCKLAND, K.G. Engraved in line, by T. Thomson, from Jos Brown, sq by Lowes Dickinson
Rev. HENRY MELVILL, Principal of Hayleybury College. To be executed in Lithography, from the Drawing by J. and A. Dickinson
Major-General Sir HOWARD DOUGLAS. Executed in Lithography, from a Miniature by Cruikshank
Rear-Admiral DUNDAS, M.P. Executed in Lithography, from the Drawing by [illegible]
Captain [illegible]STON, M.P. Executed in Lithography, from a Miniature by Lowes Dickinson
GEORGE CARR GLYN, Esq Executed in Lithography, by Lowes Dickinson
PORTRAIT OF SHAKSPERE. The Picture, by FORD MADOX BROWN, Esq., is on view, by Cards, at the Publishers', order to his being engraved
HIGHLAND PASTIME and THE COMPANION By EDWIN LANDSEER, Esq., R.A., Two high-y-finished Art Facsimiles in Colours
THE CALENDAR of NATURE; or, the SEASONS of ENGLAND. By the Honourable Mrs. GROVE (Cradock) Edited, with a Preface, by the Right Honourable LORD JOHN RUSSELL
OUR SALVOIE. Executed in the highest style of Lithography, from an ancient Picture
CALCUTTA and its ENVIRONS. By the late SIR CHARLES D'OYLY, Bart. The Work consists of Thirty Views, executed by
THE PASSAGE of the RIVER CHUMBAL and the BATTLE of CHILIANWALA. Two Plates, from Pictures by Captain CHARLES BEAUCLERK, 60, Pall-mall, S.W.
THE VARIOUS TRIBES of SOUTHERN AFRICA Edited by CHARLES W. READE, Esq.
ELEMENTARY and COMPREHENSIVE DRAWING BOOKS, containing Studies of Animals, Heads, Figures, Landscapes. Nine Parts complete
All Departments of Artists' Lithography, viz. Portraits, Landscape, Ornamental Work, &c, are executed and printed in the Establishment.

MESSRS. DICKINSON'S CLASSES for the STUDY of DRAWING are open daily
A Circulating Portfolio now contains specimens by Harding, Front, Finding, Prout, Cox, Fripp, Richardson, &c., and a choice assortment of Drawings by the late P. Dowlut have been selected from the late sale of his works

VADE MECUM for SKETCHING from NATURE. A portable compendium of every requisite for the above Drawing Book containing Studies of Animals, Heads, Figures, Landscapes. Nine Parts complete and Specimens of Artists' Lithography, viz. Portraits, Landscape, Ornamental Work, &c, are executed and printed in the Establishment.

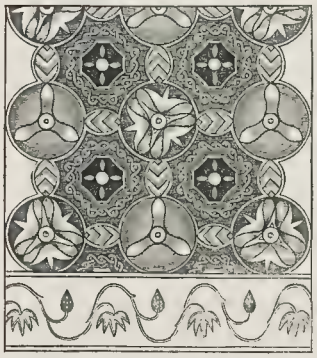
MESSRS. DICKINSON'S CLASSES for the STUDY of DRAWING are open daily
A Circulating Portfolio now contains specimens by Harding, Front, Finding, Prout, Cox, Fripp, Richardson, &c., and a choice assortment of Drawings by the late P. Dowlut have been selected from the late sale of his works

VADE MECUM for SKETCHING from NATURE. A portable compendium of every requisite for the above Drawing Book containing Studies of Animals, Heads, Figures, Landscapes. Nine Parts complete

THE LIVES of the PAINTERS, Sculptors, and Architects. By GIORGIO VASARI. Translated by MRS. JONATHAN FOSTER. Illustrated with numerous Portraits, Plates, and Woodcuts. Vol. I. Cimabue to Perugino. Price 5s.
"Vasari's Lives of the Painters is the most delightful book of gossip that ever was written."—Sir Joshua Reynolds

DISCOVERY OF A ROMAN VILLA, NEAR PAU.

THE VALLEY OF GAN, NEAR PAU.



FROM ROOM A.

IMPLUVIUM, C.

(Continued from page 430.)

Two other English gentlemen, Mr. Bradshaw and Mr. Hodgson, have joined in the work. The whole, when exposed to view, will be a valuable addition to the attractions of Pau, being the completest thing of its kind found in the neighbourhood, perhaps in France, or even in Italy."

We have since been favoured with the following letter, accompanying a nicely-executed set of sketches of these remains.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

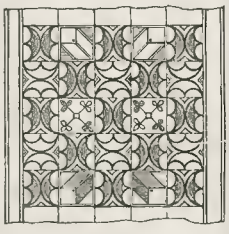
Pau, Basse Pyrénées, May, 1850.

I ENCLOSE a Sketch, plan, and section of a Roman building discovered in this neighbourhood by Mr. Sabine Baring Gould, a young Englishman passing the winter at this place, as mentioned in your Paper of the 6th April. I have likewise made sketches of the mosaics in the different rooms, which I also send.

The remains are situated in the pretty valley of Gan, about a mile from Pau: it lies within a short distance of the river Nez, and runs north and south, or nearly so. The road leading to it crosses a bridge called the Pont d'Oly (? Aulœ Lat., the same word in the patois of the country signifying also "Palace" or "Hall"). You will perceive it was a large building, having been 123 English feet in length, with chambers of considerable dimensions, A and B having been from 23 to 26 English feet long, by 22 wide.

The centre piece, or Impluvium, is a basin for holding water, being below the surface of the rest of the building, and having two leaden pipes opening into it—the one being probably to admit water, the other to carry it off. The wall round it is cased and capped with marble, and probably fish were kept and fed in it.



PASSAGES F F.

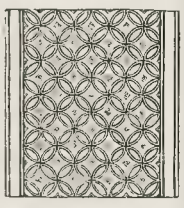
The mosaics are mostly in a good state of preservation, the more remarkable from their having been so little below the surface of the field. Rooms marked A B, and the passages F G, are in a particularly perfect state.

As you take much interest in works of art, whether ancient or modern, I have sent the enclosed to you, thinking they might find a place amongst the illustrations of your interesting Paper.

The Prefect and Mayor, indeed the French and English of all classes of this place and its neighbourhood, have taken the most lively interest in the excavations, which have been visited daily by hundreds.

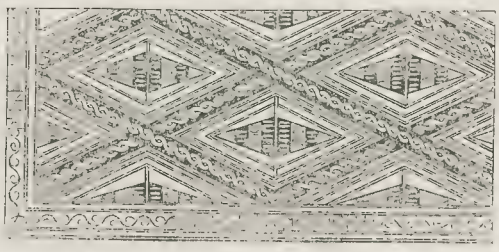
It is now in the possession of the town of Pau, which has obtained it from the owner of the land, and is about to cover it with a roof to protect it from the weather.

I learn from good authority that the Government have been written to on the subject; and, from the plans, &c., forwarded, have decided on sending an employée of the department des Beaux Arts to inspect and report on it.—Your obedient servant, A SUBSCRIBER.

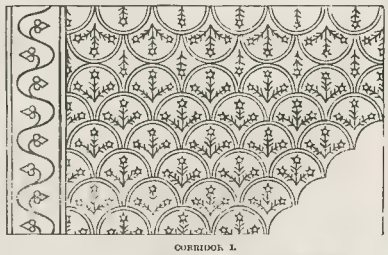


PASSAGES G G.

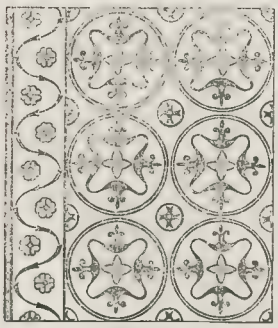
CENTRE-PIECE A.



ROOM D.



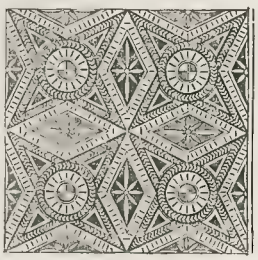
CORRIDOR I.



ROOM B.

ROOM E.

We have engraved the whole of our obliging Correspondent's Sketches, showing the picturesque locality of the discovery, and the most beautiful portions of the remains.



CORRIDOR M M.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1850.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 432.—Vol. xvi.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 22, 1850. [Sixpence.

THE SABBATH AND THE SUNDAY.

We are compelled to return this week to the subject of the Christian Sunday in England, and to the efforts of those who wish, against the convictions and consciences of the people, to convert it into a Jewish Sabbath. What are the Ministers about? In opposition to their own sentiments, solemnly recorded in the House of Commons, that the general stoppage of the Post-office on Sunday would be an unjust and unwarrantable interference with the rights of the people, they have permitted the Sabbatarians to filch a majority in a thin House when the question was not expected to be practically discussed, and have proceeded to give the resolution, thus accidentally agreed to, the force of a deliberately passed act of the Legislature. On Thursday, the following extraordinary document was issued from the Post-office.

By Command of the Postmaster General.—Notice to the Public, and Instructions to all Postmasters, Sub-Postmasters, and Letter Receivers.

General Post-office, June, 1850.

On and after the 23d instant, there will be no delivery of letters throughout the United Kingdom on Sunday, nor will there be any collection of letters, whether by messengers, letter-carriers, receivers, &c., on that day.

A collection, however, by means of boxes will still be permitted on Sunday, as at present, at the receiving offices, whether in towns or in the country, and at the chief offices, in towns, &c., it being clearly understood, that letters deposited in the receiving boxes shall remain unsorted and untouched until the Monday, and that there shall be no attendance of postmasters or their clerks at the window of the Post-office on Sunday.

The present practice of detaining letters addressed to the metropolis itself, when posted on Saturday, until the dispatch on Sunday, will not be disturbed, with the exception that the bags containing such letters must be closed on Saturday night, and as the mails will be transmitted on Sunday in the usual manner, it will be necessary that some person shall attend to dispatch the bags alluded to as well as to receive or forward those bags that have arrived from other offices.

Postmasters taking upon themselves to deliver letters to any parties whatsoever, in contravention of these orders, will be most severely punished.

This document took the public by surprise. It was never imagined that such a change would be imposed upon the people by the mere good-will and pleasure of the Crown, acting in this case on the advice of the Ministry; and we are quite certain that the regulations neither can nor will be submitted to. The effect of the stoppage ordered in the first paragraph is not only to deprive the greater portion of the country of the advantages hitherto enjoyed of receiving letters on the Sunday, but to deprive them of their correspondence on the Monday also; and although newspapers are not expressly named, they are of course included. The late editions of the Saturday morning, the Saturday weekly, and the Saturday evening papers are to be detained in London for twenty-four hours after their publication, to the positive injury and annoyance of millions of people, and to the serious damage of all newspaper property. It is not too much to assert that this change will be a social revolution, and that it will interfere with the habits, comforts, interests, necessities, and feelings of vast masses of the people in every part of Great Britain and Ireland.

Never was such a great change attempted to be enforced in a free country by such an agency as that which has been set in operation to fill Great Britain with discontent. The most popular Ministry that ever held power in England could not safely make such an attack upon the long-formed habits of the people; and we have yet to learn that the Russell Administration is either so beloved or so strong as to be permitted to make themselves, in this way, the tools of a sour minority of intolerant bigots. The proceeding is not simply vexatious and tyrannical; it is unconstitutional; and to attempt to carry it out without a special Act of Parliament—thrice read and debated in the Commons, thrice read and debated in the Lords, and solemnly agreed to by the Sovereign—is to make an innovation upon public policy in the highest degree mischievous and perilous. If Lord John Russell be converted suddenly to Sabbatarianism, and if Sir George Grey and Sir Charles Wood have changed their views, and now follow the preaching of Sir Andrew Agnew, and not the dictates of that common-sense which has hitherto guided them, it is their duty to bring the subject before Parliament, and take the deliberate vote of that body upon it. Perhaps, however, Lord John and his colleagues are giving the Sabbatarians free scope in this matter, to convince them by the argumentum ad absurdam? Perhaps they wish to let the bitter observers of the Sabbath see the utter impracticability of their scheme, by allowing them to try their hands at it? If so, we think the Ministers should not play so dangerous a game. It is easier to excite than to allay bigotry in any country; and our liberal ministers—men with professions of liberal opinions and of religious toleration scarcely cold upon their lips—have either wilfully or carelessly played into the hands of their adversaries, and inflicted an injury upon the public sentiment which it will take years to remedy.

But the change will not be permitted. It is quite impossible. If—as we do not believe—Parliament should deliberately sanction it, the public necessity will invent means to accomplish its end. There are some Sabbatarians, we verily believe, who would prevent the birds from singing on the Sunday, and carry out the Jewish principles of the Sabbath to the Levitical extent of stoning the Sabbath-breaker to death. But such Sabbatarians do not form the majority. They cannot force their opinions upon the consciences of the people. They cannot compel the observance of the day in conformity with their ideas. Nature will have its course, even on the Sabbath. A bustling minority out of the House may obtain an Act of Parliament, or they may accidentally work upon a Ministry like the present, and obtain an ukase from the Post-office, having the effect of an Act of Parliament, but they cannot revolutionise the habits or change the opinions of the people. If a law be oppressive, necessity will find means to evade it; and it is no more possible to prevent the people from having letters or newspapers on the Sunday, if they wish for them, than it would be to prevent them from smiling, or eating, or breathing on the Sunday. The sole effect of the change will be to create additional labour on the Sunday. Where one man is employed under the present system, twenty will be employed under the system that will come into operation on Sunday next. Letters will be made into parcels; brown will simply supersede white envelopes; string will be used in addition to wax or wafer. Private companies, employing thousands of people throughout the length and breadth of the land, will perform the work now performed by the Post-office, at a much smaller expenditure of labour than Sabbatarianism would force into activity. The new system cannot last. If Parliament do not come to the rescue, the people will take the matter into their own hands, and do what is needful, without the Post-office. We leave it to the religious and conscientious among the Sabbatarians, to decide whether they will be the gainers by the conflict which they, and they only, have provoked.

The following is the reply of the Committee of Congress of the United States to a memorial on the employment of Post-office authorities on Sundays. We recommend it to the serious perusal and consideration of all the Sabbatarians in this country:—

Do not all men in this country enjoy every religious right which martyrs and saints ever asked? Whence, then, the voice of complaint? Who left that, in the full enjoyment of every principle which human laws can secure, wishes to arrest a portion of these principles from his neighbour? Do they complain that men, less conscientious in relation to the Sabbath, obtain advantages over them by receiving their letters and attending to their contents? If so, their motive is worldly and selfish. But if their motive be to induce Congress to sanction by law their religious opinions and observances, then their efforts ought to be resisted, as in their tendency fatal both to religious and political freedom. Why have the petitioners confined their prayer to the mails? Why have they not requested that the Government be required to suspend all its executive functions on that day? Why do they not require us to enact that our ships of war shall not sail; that our cities shall not march; that officers of justice shall not seize the suspected, or guard the convicted? They seem to forget that Government is as necessary on Sundays as on other days of the week. The spirit of evil does not rest on that day. It is the Government, even in its functions, which enables us all, even the petitioners, to worship in our churches in peace. Our Government furnishes very few blessings like our mails. They bear from the centre of our republic to its distant extremes the acts of our legislative bodies; the decisions of the judiciary, and the orders of the executive. Their speed is often essential to the defences of the country, the suppression of crime, and the dearest interests of the people. Were they suppressed one day in seven, the embarrassments would be more than supplied by public expresses; and, besides, while the mail bags might rest, the mail coachesand rail trains would pursue their journey with the passengers. The mail bears from one extreme of the country to the other the affectionate and kindly words, preserving a communion of heart between those far separated, and increasing the most pure and refined pleasures of our existence; also the letters of commercial men convey the state of the market, prevent ruinous speculations, and promote general as well as individual interest; they bear innumerable religious letters, newspapers, magazines, and tracts, which reach almost every house throughout this kingdom. Is the conveyance of these a violation of the Sabbath? The advance of the human race in intelligence, in virtue, and religion itself, depends in part upon the speed with which a knowledge of the past is disseminated. Without ag interchange between one country and another, and between different sections of the same country, every improvement in moral or political science, and the arts of life, would be confined to the neighborhood where it originated. The more rapid and the more frequent the interchange, the more rapid will be the march of intellect and the progress of improvement. The mail is the chief means by which intellectual light irradiates to the extremes of the country. Stop it one day in seven, and you retard by the same amount the progress of society. So far from stopping the mail on Sunday, the committee would recommend the use of all reasonable means to give it a greater expedition and a greater extension. What would be the elevation of our country, if every new conception could be made to strike every mind in the Union at the same time? It is not the distance of a province or state from the seat of Government which endangers its separation, but it is the difficulty and infrequency of intercourse between them.

THE PATENT IMPULSORIA.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

To stop the mails one day in seven would be to thrust the whole of the distant parts of this kingdom one day's journey from the seat of Government. But were it expedient to put an end to the transmission of letters and newspapers on Sunday, because it violates the law of God, must the postmasters be held wrong in their efforts? If the arm of Government be necessary to compel men to respect and obey the laws of God, do not the heads of families possess infinitely more power in their respective families? Are they willing to train, and see if they can oblige their children and servants to respect the observance of the Sabbath within their respective houses; for, if it be sinful for the mail to carry letters on Sunday, it must be equally sinful for individuals to write, carry, receive, or read them. It would seem to require that these acts should be made penal to complete the system. Travelling on business or recreation, except to and from church, all printing, carrying, receiving, and reading of newspapers—all conversations and social intercourse, except upon religious subjects, must necessarily be punished, to suppress the evil. Would it not also follow as an inevitable consequence, that every man, woman, and child should be compelled to go to church or meeting-house? And as only one sect, in the opinion of some, can be deemed orthodox, must it not be determined by law which that sect is; and compel all other sects and persons to hear those teachers and contribute to their support? If minor punishments would not restrain these practices, would not the same system require that we should resort to imprisonment, banishment, the rack, and the fagot, to force men to violate their own consciences, or compel them to listen to doctrines which they abhor? It is the duty of this Government to afford to all classes the protection and the advantages of our benignant institutions on Sunday, as well as on every day of the week. The mail is the only agent the first day of the week as a time which man is bound to keep holy, and devote exclusively to his worship, would it not be more congenial to the precepts of Christians for the petitioners to appeal exclusively to the great Lawgiver of the Universe to aid them in making men better—in correcting their practices by purifying their hearts? Government will protect them in their efforts to do all these good acts. When they shall have so instructed the public mind, and awakened the consciences of individuals as to make them believe that it is a violation of God's law to carry the mail, open post-offices, or receive letters on Sunday, the evil of which they complain will cease of itself, without any exertion of the strong arm of the civil power.

THE SUNDAY QUESTION—THE POST-OFFICE.

Neither Ministers nor the House of Commons have yet done with the Sunday Post-office Labour question. The Parliamentary Sabbatarians have, indeed, snatched an easy victory from a careless House, and a supine, half-hearted Government—the majority of which, we believe, would vote against it if they could.

Her Majesty has returned a "most gracious answer," promising that "directions shall be given accordingly" (which the faithful Commons received with cries of "Oh!")—a very ambiguous phrase, but self-suppression restrains the worst consequences of this piece of fanatical folly has been summarily defeated —and the half-million of petitioners are, we presume, extremely delighted. But, for all that, we are still only at the beginning of the business. Parliamentary resolutions may repose, but they neither annul nor modify, the facts and necessities of social life; no imaginable amount of petitioning will make an impracticable project work well; and an absurdity gains nothing by being called a "great principle." Time and tide proverbially wait for no man; and a scheme which assumes the periodical stagnation of the ceaseless current of human affairs which proceeds on the hypothesis that, during a certain number of hours in every week, nothing can possibly take place in any part of Great Britain to necessitate or justify an immediate resort to the ordinary means of communication between distant localities—is sure to encounter very formidable difficulties in the working. Were it possible to look with the coolness of mere spectators on such a matter as the weekly suspension of all written intercourse between man and man, we might promise ourselves no little amusement from watching the flounderings of a Sabbatarian Cabinet and Legislature in their endeavours to reconcile a rigid observance of canonical hours with the practical exigences of human life.

Even on Sabbatarian grounds we do not see how the act of carrying a letter on the Sunday can be treated as necessarily and ipso facto sinful. Mr. Newdegate himself sees no objection "to the delivery of letters between members of families;" and although this strikes us as rather a stretch of liberality on his part, it is, after all, merely a question of degree—for every family has a centre somewhere. The most rigid definition of Sabbatical obligation invariably contains a saving clause for works of "necessity" and "mercy;" and no man of the commonest candour, be his theological creed what it may, will deny that cases are constantly arising, in the ever-varying emergencies of domestic and social life, in which Sunday letter-writing comes under one of these two categories, and is, consequently, an actual duty. If, then, the Sabbatarians maintain the principle of this duty, on what decent plea can it prohibit private persons from adopting their own means of meeting a social exigency, and of discharging a social obligation? From the moment that the authorities abdicate their functions as the sole medium of the nation's correspondence, any interference with the private arrangements which individuals may make for supplying their own necessitiesin this respect, becomes a wanton and gratuitous tyranny. In fact, were it only for consistency's sake, the project of a Sunday without letters ought to have been supported by the advocates of Post-office Sabbatarianism; for, as most of our readers will remember, it was explicitly urged, at the very beginning of the agitation of last autumn, that the carrying of letters was notoriously nothing more than one of those accidents which official lâches has of late rendered so discreditably frequent; and there is, we suspect, far more of pique and pertinacious than of genuine deference to the Divine Law in the resolution of the House of Commons to "carry out" what he sarcastically terms "the deliberate wish of that House." It would be truly shameful to allow a great question of social and administrative economy to be huddled up in this style; and it is the boundden duty of all who would avert the infliction of what the Chancellor of the Exchequer calls "an exceedingly great hardship and inconvenience to all classes, and especially to the poorer classes," to take care that the matter shall at least undergo one night's thorough discussion.—Morning Chronicle.

LIST OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT who voted for the recent alteration in the Post-office. Electors will do well to remember the names in this list at the next election.

Anderson, A	Duncan, G	Hotham, Lord	Perfect, R
Archbold, Hon H	Duncuft, J	Humphery, Alderman	Plumptre, J P
Bateson, T	Edwards, H	Jolliffe, Sir W G H	Pugh, D
Beaumont, T	Evans, W	Keating, R	Pusey, P
Bernard, V	Farrer, J	Lacy, H C	Richards, R
Blandford, Marquis of	Forster, M	Lewisham, Viscount	Rokeries, T J A
Booth, Sir R G	Fuller, J	Lockhart, A E	Scott, Hon D
Bromley, W	Fuller, J W	Lockhart, W	Smith, J A
Brotherton, J	Galway, Viscount	Mackenzie, Sir E	Stanley, E
Bruce, C L G	Gaskell, J M	Maher, J	Stanton, W H
Burghley, Lord	Gladstone, Rt Hon W E	M'Taggart, Sir J	Strickland, Sir G
Buxton, Sir J N	Goddard, A	Meagher, J
Childers, J W	Gooch, E S	Milner, W M E
Cobbold, J C	Greenall, G	Moody, C A
Cowper, H	Grosvenor, Lord R	Morris, D
Cowper, T	Halsey, T P	Mostyn, Hon E M L
Craven, C	Hamilton, G A	Mundy, W
Currie, H	Hastie, Alex	Munro, G S
Davies, D A S	Hastie, Arch	Newdegate, C N
Davison, E	Head, Sir G	O'Brien, Sir L
Dickson, S	Heald, J
Drummond, H H	Hildyard, T B T	Osvald, A
Duff, G S	Hodgson, R	Palmer, Robert
Duff, J	Horsman, E	Pearson, C

THE PATENT IMPULSORIA.

THIS ingenious means of applying animal power to the working of railways, so as to supersede the costly locomotive engine, has lately been invented in Italy, and exhibited experimentally upon the South-Western Railway. It consists in introducing the power of horses into the train of carriages, by which they transmit their acting power to the leading wheels. This transmission is conveyed by a very simple means, rendering useful both the driving power of the animals and their own weight. The horse being thus introduced into the Impulsoria, is placed upon a perfect rectilinear, artificial ground, or platform, turning so easily, that the animal, which is yoked to the shafts, when it walks, does not itself advance; but, what amounts to the same thing, the platform itself is pushed back. By this artificial ground introducing the horses into the carriage in order to get more speed from the surplus of the acting power, had been long thought of; and the principle has been several times attempted in England, France, and Italy, but hitherto without success.

The new machine, whose inventor is Signor Clemente Masserano, from Pignerol, Piedmont, has been brought from Italy to England, and deposited at the Nine-elms terminus of the South-Western Railway, where it may be seen working on the line. It has been made for two horses only, and they work it very well on the pedicella. More than thirty waggons have been already experimentally drawn by it up the very inclined line of the station. For working it up and down the station, a waggon is fastened to it, when it attains a speed of seven miles an hour. In the experiment to be made on the great line, it is expected to gain a speed of from fifteen to twenty miles an hour; and it is calculated that an engine of two horses more will turn out a speed superior to that of a steam-engine. The Impulsoria runs either way, like the steam-engine; but the driving horses do not change direction or movement. They can instantly be stopped, without opposing the machine, and the machine likewise be stopped while the the horses continue to walk on the pedicella, without transmitting motion to the leading wheels.

By the simple manner in which the horses exercise their moving power on the new machine, they can work easily the usual time (commonly about eight hours a day). During these eight hours, the Impulsoria can run at least over thirty miles eight times; and four horses do not consume more than two shillings each per day, it would be an expense of eight shillings only, instead of £6 on account of coke only, the cost of which is skepsce each mile run.

Such economy of the utmost consequence to the numerous interests engaged in the railways, subject to enormous working expenses. According to the statements by Dr. Lardner, in his valuable work on "Railway Economy," the locomotive power and rolling-stock absorb always more than half, and often four-fifths of all the working expenses. But the principal advantage of the new machine will be to afford very cheap locomotion on all branch lines, thus extending the advantage of the railway to localities hitherto impracticable from the expense of moving power.

The directors of the South-Western Railway were the first to receive the Impulsoria on their line, where they have granted every facility to its ingenious agent; for which purpose they especially appointed the engineer-in-chief of the locomotive department, Mr. Gooch, and his assistant Mr. Trevethick

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The all-absorbing topic in Paris still continues to be the proposed measure for augmenting the salary of the President of the Republic, or, as it is more generally called, the Dotation Bill. The committee appointed to examine the bill for the augmentation of the salary of the President of the Republic have decided by a majority of nine to five, not to support the Ministerial measure, but to recommend to the Assembly merely to grant a specific sum of 1,600,000f. "towards the expenses of the installation of the President of the Republic." This resolution was adopted by the committee, after having, for the second time, heard the explanations of the Ministers of Justice, the Interior, and Finances, and having received from them the renewed assurance that the President and the Cabinet would not accept of any compromise, and that they were determined to have the whole of the sum originally demanded, or nothing.

In the course of the discussion in the committee, M. Kerdrel proposed, as an amendment, a resolution to the effect that a credit should be granted of 2,160,000f., which is nearly the sum demanded by the Government, but that it should be granted, not as an annual allowance, but as one definite sum, under the form of "expenses of installation in 1849, and supplementary expenses of representation for 1850." This amendment was rejected by the committee; but it is stated that, if it had been adopted, the Government would not have accepted M. de Kerdrel proposal to bring it before the House, by way of an amendment, on the report of the committee, which has not yet been presented to the House; and if it is adopted, it will amount to the conceding the sum demanded, subject to an annual revote, however, as the extraordinary credit, so as to bring it under the control of the Legislature. The adoption of some compromise or other of this kind appears to be the only means that offers of solving the difficulty. The Ministers continue determined to be satisfied with nothing short of the acceptation of the whole bill. The rejection, or the modification of it, will, it is believed, most certainly cause their retirement from office.

As if to complicate matters still more, in other quarters, General Changarnier (Commander-in-Chief), and General Hautpool (Minister of War) are violently opposed to each other; and the former has threatened to give up his command, unless the latter be forced from office. It is thought that when the Dotation Bill shall have been rejected by the Assembly, the President of the Republic will remove General Hautpool to some other post of official duty

The French Government received on Tuesday, by telegraphic dispatch, the announcement of the defeat of the English Cabinet upon Lord Stanley's motion. The intelligence soon spread, and, generally, the result was considered a triumph obtained by the French Ministry, and as an openly recognised proof of the justice of the policy it had pursued throughout the negotiations upon the Greek question. It was thought that Lord Palmerston would have to retire from office if not supported by a counter vote in the House of Commons. The interest of the affair, however, was eclipsed by that felt with respect to the Dotation Bill.

M. de Girardin has taken his seat in the Assembly for the Bas Rhin, and has, in consequence, given up the editorship of the Presse.

SPAIN.

Our Accounts from Madrid are of the 14th instant. The names of the Prince or Princess to whom the Queen is to give birth were already agreed upon. If a Prince, he is to be called Ferdinand, and will be the eighth King of that name; and if a Princess, the Queen has desired that she should be christened Ferdinanda Isabella Christina.

PRUSSIA.

The new restrictive press law in Prussia is being carried out with severe activity, both in Berlin and in the provinces. Several journals have been interdicted circulation through the different post-offices, which, for the most part, it is said, must end in their total suppression. The proprietors and editors of the public journals were about to hold a meeting to deliberate upon the measures that should be adopted in the present crisis of their affairs; for to continue their labours under the repressive system, was deemed, by most of these gentlemen, to be both dangerous and ruinous.

The King's recovery was considered complete, and no more bulletins would be published.

DENMARK.

Advices from Denmark of the 16th instant report that the King contemplates abdicating, and that Prince Frederick will succeed him. It is expected will marry the daughter of the Dowager Grand Duchess Helena of Russia, will succeed to the throne.

UNITED STATES.

The accounts this week from the States are still chiefly taken up with the late unsuccessful piratical expedition to Cuba, under General Lopez

Official information has been received at Washington of the execution of four Americans at Cuba, and of the imprisonment of between 100 and 200 others. The Spanish authorities refused to allow the commander of the United States' squadron permission to see the prisoners, or to permit them to be taken to the United States for trial. The frigate Cougress had sailed from Cuba to intercept the Spanish vessel containing upwards of 100 Americans taken prisoners from the island of Contoy, near Yucatan. She was followed by a Spanish man-of-war. Despatches had been sent from Washington to the authorities of Cuba, stating that the arrest of the Americans on any other island will not be recognised or permitted. Contoy is said to be a neutral territory, and the men taken there had not been actually engaged in hostilities. To this demand the Cuban authorities had made no reply; consequently, the Consul had called upon his Government for powers to second his demand. Orders had therefore been sent from Washington to despatch such portions of the squadron as could be immediately collected at Havannah to assist in pressing the demand. Should the authorities refuse, the Consul was instructed to inform the Government; and in the meantime the squadron was to intercept all communications with the port. Instructions had also been issued, that, if the Spaniards captured the remainder of the vessels of the expedition, they were to be taken from them, if necessary, by force. The atrocities of Cuba appear to be not unnaturally embittered against the United States' Government, and had refused any information as to the number, name, or probable fate of the prisoners, who were closely confined.

CANADA.

The session of the Canadian Parliament at Toronto shows an effective majority on the side of the Ministry. The Inspector-General had stated in the House that the Canadian Government will not grant freedom of navigation of the St. Lawrence to the United States, unless the latter assent to reciprocity.

WEST INDIES.

We have accounts this week from Jamaica to the 23rd ult. The whole island was suffering from the continued dry weather.

There had been several public meetings held for the purpose of welcoming Messrs. Chandler and Alexander, delegates from the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society, at which resolutions were passed condemning the acts of the Government, and petitions prepared to the Houses of Lords and Commons for the exclusion of slave-grown sugar from the British market. The cultivation of cotton was still occupying a good deal of attention, and several parties had commenced operations.

The intercourse between Kingston and Chagres was considerably on the increase. A very large number of the inhabitants of Kingston was continually leaving for Chagres by every steamer that left for that place.

The news from Cuba has been anticipated.

At Barbadoes the heat was intense, and the season unusually early.

The drought at Antigua, which had lasted for so long a period, continued, and a general fast was proposed to be observed, and supplications to the Almighty offered up in all the churches and chapels for a mitigation of the severity of the weather. The agricultural prosperity of the colony was seriously affected by the want of water and the great heat.

The drought at Grenada had also been very severe, but, at the latest date, somewhat relieved by a few occasional showers.

The Trinidad papers state that great excitement had been created in Port of Spain by the receipt of a circular fully confirming previous accounts of gold in large quantities having been discovered in the Turnary river, district of Upata, in Angostura, of Columbia, province of Carthagena. A rich mine is said to have been opened, from which samples have been obtained in gold dust and grain of various sizes. Of the latter the average size was that of the coffee berry, and the standard of fineness was 24 carats. Important benefits were expected to arise from this discovery, and the local paper observes, "Port of Spain will become the Chagres and the Panama of this gold region!"

From the French Islands the most deplorable accounts have arrived. About 100 houses at Guadaloupe have been burned; and the Government had found it expedient to proclaim martial law in the island. At Martinique, too, incendiary proceedings were rife. The printing-office of the Courrier de la Martinique was attempted to be fired. All is disorder at both islands.

INDIA.

We have intelligence this week from Bombay to the 11th of May. Throughout India, in the Punjaub, and on the frontier of Affghanistan, all is tranquil. A party of about 1,000 Affghans, who were on their way to cantonments at Peshawur have been seized, and are now imprisoned by an officer in the service of Dost Mahomed, whose object appears to be to render the occupation and possession of the province of Peshawur by the British Government more difficult and as impossible as he can, which means he hopes to render its ultimate restoration to Affghanistan more feasible.

A large quantity of military stores have been seized whilst being conveyed on camels from Delhi towards the north-western frontier; the carriers declared that such stores had been purchased at Delhi, and were intended for sale in the Punjaub; but three apparent strong grounds for concluding that such stores had been abstracted surreptitiously from Delhi arsenals, with the connivance of the subordinates of that establishment, and that this system of depredation has been carried on for some years.

The Governor General passed through Meerut on the 27th April, and was expected to arrive at Simlah on the 30th of April. His Lordship is stated to be far from well, suffering from chronic dysentery; it is hoped that the climate of the hills may effectually restore his health. Sir Charles Napier reached Simlah on the 21st of April, and on the 24th, after being five months and twenty-one days under canvass, and having marched about 1264 miles.

A notice is reported to have taken place in the Bombay Presidency, within fifteen miles of the seat of the Hon. the Company's Native Courts of Justice. An inquiry is being made into the circumstances of the case.

Cholera prevails in the interior of the Bombay Presidency, but no further deaths from that cause have occurred among the European inhabitants and soldiers in the island of Bombay.

The Small Cause Act came into operation at Calcutta on the 1st of May. There are three judges, each of 1500r. and one 1000r. per month. Nothing has transpired concerning the introduction of this act at the other presidencies. There has long been a Small Cause Court at Bombay, presided over by the judges of the Supreme Court, in which the fees are considerably lower than those proposed in the new Small Cause Court Act. The Indian Government is said to have abandoned the prosecution of the legislative scheme familiarly known as the "Black Act," the object of which was to subject Europeans to the jurisdiction of the native District Courts of law.

The commissioners appointed by Lord Dalhousie, at the request of the English Government, to investigate the circumstances attendant on the suppression of the late Cabul insurrection, arrived at Simlah on the 26th of April. A Court of Inquiry is sitting at Lucknow, regarding the late affair at the fort of Bentah, in which Lieutenant Elderton lost his life, and on the conduct of Capt. Wilson, who commanded the detachment engaged against the Zemindars.

WRECK OF THE "ORION" STEAMER, AND LOSS OF LIFE

On Tuesday evening it became known, through the medium of the electric telegraph, at Liverpool, that the Orion steamer, a regular packet running between that town and Glasgow, was wrecked on a sunken rock off Portpatrick, on the coast of Scotland, between one and two o'clock on the same morning, having sailed from Liverpool on the previous (Monday) evening.

The Orion went down immediately after she struck, and the passengers and crew retreated to the rocks, a few of which, it is stated, at once capsized, owing to the number that crowded into them, and almost all perished.

The exact number lost is unknown at present, as the accounts vary; but about 50 appear to be the actual loss. The weather was fine; but the mate says that a slight fog prevailed at the time. Several of the surviving passengers say that it was clear weather. One half of the funnel is above water, the depth at the place where she sank being from six to seven fathoms.

Among those who were drowned, is Surgery in the Glasgow University, brother of the Messrs. Burns, the owners of the vessel, is mentioned. His body had been washed ashore before the survivors left the scene of the catastrophe.

As soon as the accident was discovered from the shore, a number of boats put off, and picked up all that could be seen floating on the loose portions of the wreck, or swimming to escape from it.

The place where the wreck lies is not 150 yards from the shore, and quite close to the lighthouse of Portpatrick.

The night was beautifully clear and the sea perfectly calm; and the only way in which it is sought to account for the untoward event is, by supposing that the officer of the watch had endeavoured to pass between the well-known sunken rock on which she struck and the shore.

The Orion was originally fitted up with water-tight bulk-heads, and thereby divided into four or five compartments; and it has therefore been a matter of surprise that these should not have been the means of keeping the vessel afloat. The probability, however, is, that she struck so severely that the central compartments, whilst, give the greatest buoyancy, were all completely stove in.

Mr. Fleming, one of the survivors, stated that he was aroused from his sleep by the shock of the concussion, and his first impression was that a collision had taken place. As soon as he tumbled out of bed he found the water rushing into the cabin; and before he had time to dress, beyond drawing on his trousers, the water was in the steerage. He immediately mounted upon deck, and soon found himself afloat amidst the crowd of passengers. He clung to the rigging of one of the topmasts, and was thus providentially saved.

Captain Henderson, the commander of the Orion, and his first mate, both remained at the scene of the wreck, to give every aid to the unfortunate passengers, and to use every effort to recover any of the property that could be saved.

The latest information leads to the belief that one hundred and fifty persons have been saved, leaving the fearful number of fifty whose fate is doubtful. The names of those survivors who have been actually seen (which, with thirty-five of the crew, amount to 140) are as follow:—

Lieut Maurice Jones, R N, and John Matthew Jones, Esq (brothers), Major John Mann, R I C S, Richard Price, Esq, Master D Donaldson (son of Major Donaldson), Thomas Kidston, Mr, Mrs, and Miss Anderson, Glasgow, Mr Wm J Walker, John Nicol, M D, Peter M'Clelland, Peter M'William, Mr Vallager, John Roberts, Dougald Cameron, Lawrence Bannatyne, Mrs Bannatyne, Mrs Buchanan, Miss Buchanan, Mr and Mrs Lindsay, Mrs and Miss Roby, Wm Anderson, Wm Priest, Mr Edwin Alfred Marshall, Mrs Williams, Mrs Pearse, Henry Jackson, John Stevens, John Roberts, Mr and Miss Hunter, Mrs and Miss Whitehead and Miss Hannah Whitehead, Miss Jemmt Colquhoun Jamieson Isabella Duncan, Jas Gibson, Mrs Gibson, Mr John F Reois, Miss Ogner, John M'Cal, Jas Lyall, Alexander Lyall, Wm M'Kenzie, jun, William M Moss, Alfred Moss, Mr John Pearce, Capt Koschna and lady, Miss Farquharson, Jas Comins, Laurence Gladstone, Mr Laurence Gladstone, Mr Thomas Williams, Mr John M'Nair, Alexander M'Neil, Mrs White, Caroline Lorber or Forbey, William Band, Caroline Martin, Mrs Hunter, Elizabeth Colquhoun, Joseph A Richards, Robert M'Clelland, Pat Hand or Kane, John Bergen, William Gardner, Mrs Gardner, Rev Mr Clark, James Walker, John Oldman, Messrs Woolford, Magnus Tait, John Tait, John Walker, John Mills, Henry Thomas, Andrew Forbes, Robert Bell, William Kelly, James Paine, John Morrison, Duncan Campbell, Peter Ramsay, William Morrison, Mrs Morrison, Mr Thomson, Mary M'Nicol, Johnson Stewart, Archibald M'Intosh, Caroline Marsden, Mr Edward Hurst, William Drew, Elijah Parsons, William Gaston, and John Archibald and Master W Archibald G Lamb. Crew all saved except three drowned.

Passengers, 100; crew and officers, 35. Total, 140

Ten more known to have been landed, who left by coach.

Twenty-two bodies have been found, and the following recognised:—

Professor Burns, Mrs Captain M'Neil, Mrs M'Neil, Mr John Pearce, Anna Splott, E Splott, Mr Roby, Mr Jago, Mary-Ann Splott, Mr Marshank, the steward and the carpenter of the ship, and one boy.

The following are reported drowned

Mr F Bennet, Captain M'Neil, Mrs M'Neil, and two daughters.

A Mr. Splott, on his way to Australia, with his wife and two daughters, lost the entire family, and £700 in money. He was left at Portpatrick in a most distressed state of mind.

The following is the latest list of passengers lost (so far as is yet ascertained) :—

Dr Burns, Mr Burns, Mr M'Neil, Mrs M'Neil, and two daughters; Miss Pugh, infans child of Mr Morrison; Mr William Marshbank, Mrs Splott and two daughters, Miss Morris, niece of Dr Burns, Mr Bubnett, Mr Jago, Mr Roby, two children named Fraser, Mr Ross, Alexander Graham, John Pearce, Master James Holkett, Mr Hurst, the child and servant of Mrs Whitehead, Miss Nicolet, the steward, the ship's carpenter Dunn, and one of the cook's boys. The bodies unowned—An aged man, with grey whiskers and light grey hair; an aged man, with dark whiskers, and dressed in dark clothes; a female child, five years old, and a letter in his pocket, addressed to Mr Robert Donaldson; a very stout gentleman, having a letter addressed to Dr William Lamond, London.

The following communication respecting the locality on which the Orion struck has been published

Commander Bevis, R N

SIR,—As you are aware, I commanded her Majesty's steam-ship Jaseur for about nine years carrying the mails between Portpatrick and Donaghadee, and knew the whole coast well between Corsewell and the Mull of Galloway. The Captain of the Orion, I observe, reports her "to have struck a little to the southward of Portpatrick," and, as the chart shows deep water there, I deem it not out of place to apprise you that, of my own knowledge, there is a ridge of rocks, known and called by fishermen the "Rushes," running out at least 150 yards or more from the shore: there is no beacon or buoy on them, but it may myself sounded those rocks. I remain, sir, your most obedient and humble servant, (Signed) W. W. OKE, Lieutenant, R.N.

MUSIC.

CONCERTS.

The Philharmonic season terminated on Monday night, at the Hanover-square Rooms, with the eighth concert. The symphonies were Mozart's in C minor (the minuette encored), and Beethoven's in A, No. 7 (the allegretto re-demanded). The overtures were Spohr's "Berggeist" and Weber's "Jubilee." Under the vigilant bâton of Costa these works were splendidly played. Halévy, who was present, expressed his warmest admiration of the execution in the two symphonies. The solo instrumentalists were Mr. Benedict, who performed a MS. pianoforte Concert-Stück, and Ernst, who played a violin fantasia on a theme from Halévy's arrangement of Hérold's unfinished opera, "Ludovic." These performances were much applauded, the executive skill of the respective players being well known. The Concert-Stück of Benedict has some good points. Our present impression is, that it is too diffuse and patchy: the three movements are connected together, thus drawing the line of demarcation between this Concerto and Concert-Stück, the forms of the latter being a creation of Weber. As it would appear that, as regards pianoforte concertos, nothing new can be created, the use of the word "fantasia" would much simplify the conceptions of future writers, and, what is more to the purpose, circumscribe the pieces. Mr. Benedict has instrumented his work with ability, although in some combinations he identifies his instrument too much with the tutta: the pianoforte ought in fact to be strictly obligato, to be effective. Mdme. Dulcken sang the Page's first song from Meyerbeer's "Huguenots;" and Miss Lucombe gave a very intellectual reading of Cimarosa's "Deh! parlate," which was much applauded by Mdme. Pasta (as well as the audience), and the two highly gifted English artists, Misses Lucombe and Dolby, also sang duos from Rossini's "Donna del Lago" ("Bianca e Falliero") and Spohr's "Jessonda," the room was crowded to excess. There is a talk of erecting a new Music Hall, sufficiently large for Philharmonic performances, which the present arena is ill-adapted for in every respect. The subscription has been urged this season, and is likely to be greater next year. Every true amateur will be pleased at the prosperity of our society, the management of which is, however, open to objections on the ground of not supplying sufficient novelties, and of not always providing the best solo players and singers. Let us have no desire, most assuredly, to see the Philharmonic institution turned into an experimental society, like that of the unfortunate association of British musicians. The Symphonies of Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, and Mendelssohn are standing error, and there are but eight concerts in the year to hear them in perfection; the Directors, therefore, must be cautious in the selection of new compositions.

On Tuesday, was the directors' matinée, at the seventh meeting of the Musical Union, at Willis's Rooms: the attendance at which was numerous and fashionable. The scheme comprised Spohr's Double Quartet in E minor, op. 87, executed by Sainton, Goffrie, Hill, and Platti; Dalcffe, Watson, Reed, and Pratten; the adagio, minuet, and finale of Haydn's Quintet in C, Op. 57, led by Ernst; Beethoven's Pianoforte Sonata in C, Op. 53, played by Herr Halle; "Pensées Fugitives," of Stephen Heller and Ernst, executed by the composers; "La Tremolina" for violin solo, by Stephen Heller; and the scherzo and adagio of Mendelssohn's duo in D, Op. 58, rendered by Hallé and Piatti. Mdlle. Graumann, M. Jules Stockhausen, and the Hungarian vocalists sang divers pieces. The last meeting will be on Tuesday, July the 2nd.

M. Godefroid's harp-playing, at his concert at Willis's Rooms, last Saturday morning, was most brilliant, and he was immensely greeted. He was seconded by Madame Wartel, a classic pianiste of note from Paris; M. Sainton and Signor Piatti; with Mdlle. Schloss, Mdlle. de Rappitn, Miss C. Browne (a pupil of Manuel Garcia), Signori Brignoli, Ciubatta, and M. Jules Lefort, as vocalists.

A grand concert was given last Monday morning, at the Hanover Rooms, under the patronage of her Majesty, Prince Albert, the Duchesses of Kent, Gloucester, and Cambridge, &c., for the benefit of the family of the late lamented Dnicken. The band of Her Majesty's Theatre, with Tolbecque as leader, and Benedict, Balfe, L. Sloper, Kiihe, H. Dulcken as conductors; Dc Kontski, the clever violinist; Dreyschock, the great pianist; M. Godefroid, the harpist (who was doubly encored); Miss Sophia Dulcken, pianiste (niece of Mdme. Dulcken), gave their services besides the following vocalists—Mdlle. Angri, Mdme. Giuliana, Miss Catherine Hayes, Miss Dolby, Mdlle. Cora Slotti, a débûtante of promise, and a pupil of Schira; Mdme. Lemaitre, Miss M. Williams, Messrs. Nottes, Signori Cs.olari, Belletti, Marras; Herr Stigelli, Herr Brandt, Herr Formes, &c.

Doms J. and R. Ciebra, the clever guitarists, gave their second concert last Wednesday evening, at the Hanover Rooms. Miss Dnakin on Monday had a matinée musicale at the Harley-street Rooms.—Mr. and Mrs John Roe gave their annual concert at the Music Hall on Wednesday, assisted by Misses Poole, Messen.t, Murrell, Woodford, Roe, Mrs. Wilson, Messrs. Sims Reeves, Willy, Bessan, Heberle, Seguin, F. Chatterton, &c.

Jules Benedict, the pianist and composer, gave his annual concert on Friday morning, at Her Majesty's Theatre. His varied talents and personal character have made the writer of the "Gipsy's Warning" deservedly popular in this country, in which he has been so many years a resident. The present concert was additionally interesting, as Benedict, in September next, will depart with Mdme. Benedict for the United States. As usual, the selection of the programme was of colossal proportions, combining the operatic company, chorus, and band of the establishment, under the direction of Mr. Balfe, and led by Mr. Charles Hallé, Mr. Queen, Mr. L. Sloper, the pianists, Ernst and Molique, the violinists; Virtue, the celebrated horn player; and Mr. Ap Thomas, the harpist. Our paper will be at press before this concert has terminated, but in the scheme we remark that Gardeni was to make his first appearance this season, that besides Sontag, Frezzolini, and Catherine Hayes, Madame Charton's services were secured. The quartette for four performers on two pianofortes, composed by Osborne, and executed by him, Hallé, L. Sloper, and Benedict on one of the lofty and graphic items, as exemplified in the finale of the Andante of Beethoven's Kreutzer Sonata, played by Ernst and Benedict; a Pianoforte Concertante for two pianofortes, executed by Hallé; and solos by Piatti, Molique, &c., completed the list.

An evening concert took place on Friday, at Highbury Barn, at which Misses Birch, Dolby, and Lucombe, Messrs. Sims Reeves, T. Williams, F. Smith, and Brizet, were engaged; and, on the same evening, Mr. J. J. Hockley, the organist of St. Saviour's, Haverstock-hill, had a concert at the Princess Rooms.

Mr. R. Blagrove's third concertina concert, assisted by Giulio Regondi, Messrs. G. and F. Case, &c., was given on Thursday, at the Mortimer-street Rooms.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—Miss Hinckesman will give her second and last chit concert, on Monday evening.——M. de Kontski, the violinist, will have a matinée musicale on Monday.—In the evening, Mr. John Parry will present, for the first time, a new musical entertainment.——The Sixth meeting of the Beethoven Quartett Society will take place next Wednesday; and Mrs. A. Newton's concert.——The fourth and last concert of the Royal Academy of Music will be given next Saturday (the 29th).——Sophie Loder, the pianist, who is about to visit Russia, his health having been re-established at Gräfenberg——Pedro Soller, a first-rate oboeist in Paris, is no more; he was attached to the Italian Opera orchestra for many years.——Mdlle. Wagner has performed at Mayence, Frankfort, and Berlin, in the part of Fidès in the "Prophète," she has a powerful organ, but it lacks flexibility.——Meyerbeer's work is still playing at Vienna, Hamburg, and New Orleans, with the greatest success.——A new opera, by Frederic Kücken, called "Nezletta," has been successfully produced at Venice.——M. Amadée Achard, the musical critic, who was so dangerously wounded in a late duel at Paris with Savalette, has been appointed, with equal success in Marseilles, Amsterdam, the Hague, Hamburg, Dresden, Vienna, Leipzic, Frankfort, Schwerin, Antwerp, Dusseldorf, Cologne, Sonderhausen, Darmstadt, New Orleans, &c. The instrument—created by Thurnder, performed at Meyerbeer's musical soirées must have been very intense, as all the stalls and boxes of the pit, grand and front tiers, were disposed of on the day before Some changes have been made in the cast since last year. Madame Castellan, who was the original representative of Bertha in Paris, appeared here for the first time, in that part. Zacharie, the chief Anabaptist, formerly sustained by Marini, is now in the hands of Herr Formes; Jonas, the tenor Anabaptist, is allotted to Signor Marrasti, vice Mei, for whom the music was not at all adapted. Tagliafico, Polonini, Bernard, Lavia, Carlotti, and Mario resume their former characters. The lateness of the hour at which the opera terminated, and the crowded state of our columns, preclude any lengthened notices in the present publication.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

The excitement created by "La Tempesta" continues unabated, and crowded houses attest its increasing popularity at each performance. The great feature in this opera is the attention which, under the personal superintendence of the Scribe and Halévy, has been bestowed on all the minor details so essential to the perfect production of any dramatic work, and which neglected would take from a piece all its scenic illusion. The chorus, which in this opera, play not the least important part, deserve special commendation not only for their precision in the execution of the music, but for the spirit and vis dramatica with which they deliver the various sentences which they sing, supported in the pantomimic action by the corps de ballet. Any one not acquainted with the subject might easily understand it from their pantomime. Lablache has added largely to his fame by his creation of Caliban, a part which differs from any that he has ever performed, partaking of the character of the most instinctive brute and of the demon. Mdme. Sontag is the realisation of Shakspeare's idea of Miranda. Her acting in the second part, when about to fall into the power of Caliban, is a masterpiece. Her Miranda, amidst her gentleness, loses not feminine sway: her innocence commands and bids defiance, even in despair. Lablache's acting imparts reality to the prestigo. Next to Lablache and Mdme. Sontag, Mdlle. Parodi comes in for a large share of praise: both her acting and her singing being excellent. Signori Coletti, Lorenzo, and F. Lablache acquit themselves with distinction, and support admirably Sontag and Lablache. Last, though not least, Signor Lucardé claims his share of applause. He would be perfection if he would only throw a little more warmth into his acting, for there are times when he looks like anything but Shakspeare's idea of a

Lover
Sighing like furnace, with a woful ballad
Made to his mistress' eye-brow

His singing, however, is so beautiful, that his occasional fits of lethargy are not perceived. The success of this work shows that the time of eminent composers has not passed away. Italy and Germany have paid their tributes. France, however, bids fair, if not to outstrip, at least to equal her musical neighbours on the other side of the Rhine and the Alps, whilst the librettists of the day surpass all their predecessors.

Balfe and Scribe leave London this week, overwhelmed with marks of estimation of their private worth and with public ovations.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

One of the finest performances we have ever heard was the fifth representation of of Meyerbeer's "Roberto il Diavolo," on Saturday night; although one of the chief characters, the Princess Isabella, was undertaken by Mdlle. Vera, at a very short notice, in consequence of Mdme. Castellan's illness. Mdlle. Vera is an ensemble that we must eulogise so strongly—the admirable choral singing—the wondrous precision and delicacy of the orchestral accompaniments—and the general efficiency of the performance. Mdlle. Vera acquitted herself creditably; the Alice of Grisi is now one of her finest impersonations; the Roberto of Tamberlik is unrivalled—his singing of the duo in the cavern scene and the trio in the finale is beyond all praise, quite equal to the sensation he created the first evening of Formes, albeit rough, is very effective and imposing in many points. The opera altogether excited an enthusiasm which proved how much it has gained in public estimation since it has been executed with a powerful cast—including, as it does, leading artistes in very subordinate positions, and, above all, Mario singing the music of the troubadour Rambaldo, in a style to elicit a rapturous encore for the duo with Bertrama.

On Tuesday night there was a very fashionable assemblage to witness the revival of Rossini's "Gazza Ladra." Owing to the severe cold of Madame Castellan still preventing her from singing, Grisi resumed the interesting part of Ninetta, which, in the year 1833, she first made her appearance in this country. Seventeen years of continued exertion have in no way diminished her dramatic powers, and, except in florid passages, her voice is as fine as ever. Her histrionic genius was magnificently developed on this occasion; her simplicity and artlessness as the village maiden were charmingly depicted in the first scene, and the powerful emotions created by the accusation of theft and condemnation to death on circumstantial evidence were equally faithfully portrayed. In the Pezzo of Mdlle. de Meric was interesting, full of animated action, and very nicely sung, especially in the brindisi, "Teechiano," and in the duo, "Eeben per mia memoria," with Grisi. Mario's Gianetto was sung with the most impressive feeling. The Fernando of Tamburini is justly recognised as an incomparable piece of acting; he "makes up" for the part in the head like Napoleon; in the trial scene, he received, with Grisi, the honour of a special ovation. The Podesta of Tagliafico, the Lucano of Lavia, and the Giorgio of Corbilli, are also excellent performances, worthy of especial notice; but the Podesta, or village magistrate, of Ronconi stood in the foreground as a strikingly original conception, powerfully interpreted. His has gained a high name in Paris by this delineation: here it was seen for the first time. It must be placed in the category of the most remarkable impersonations of this great lyric artist, to whom broad farce seems the smaller as Warning does tragedy. Podesta is a jovial, yet a wily, malignant, and pompous authority, whose sensuality and malevolence are relieved by grotesque grimace and humorous sallies. In his aria d'entrata, "Un piatto è preparato," the chuckling with which he proceeds to delight that his plan to win Ninetta must succeed, was most unctuous; and those exquisite vocal phrases, which no singer can employ with more tact and taste than Ronconi, were delivered with humour. Throughout he completely fixed the attention of the audience, frequently provoking the utmost hilarity, and with marvellous versatility breaking from his comic vein to display his tragic points. The overture was encored with acclamation. "La Gazza Ladra" is one of Rossini's noblest inspirations: exquisitely scored, its gaiety in the introduction is spontaneous, joyous, and melodic; and there is a progressive development of musical resources, as the dramatic interest increases, remarkable for the lofty and graphic scene, so exquisitely illustrative of the accusation, of the trial of Ninetta, and of the procession to the execution—the march in which is most beautiful and impressive. There are few operas more calculated to display the contrasts of light and shade in the musical treatment; and under Costa, therefore, the effect was very striking—many important portions of Rossini's original score having been restored by the musical director.

The great musical event of the season was the revival, on Thursday night, of Meyerbeer's "Prophète," with the return of the gifted Viardot, in her celebrated character of Fidès. This work was expressly composed for the Grand Opera in Paris, and the Royal Italian Opera here, by special contract with M. Scribe, the author of the libretto, and M. Meyerbeer. It was produced with signal success in the French capital, on April 16, last year, and at the Royal Italian Opera, on July 24 following. The opera was performed here ten times last season, to crowded houses, the close of the season only interrupting its triumphant career. Madame Viardot, the original Fidès, has played that part upwards of fifty times in Paris; and she recently gave fifteen representations in Berlin. She has since sung Fidès in three languages, French, Italian, and German, in three of the most musical cities of Europe—Paris, London and Berlin. In addition to these places, "Le Prophète" has been transmitted with equal success to Marseilles, Amsterdam, the Hague, Hamburg, Dresden, Vienna, Leipzic, Frankfort, Schwerin, Antwerp, Dusseldorf, Cologne, Sonderhausen, Darmstadt, New Orleans, &c. The instrument—created by Thurnder, performed at Meyerbeer's musical soirées must have been very intense, as all the stalls and boxes of the pit, grand and front tiers, were disposed of on the day before Some changes have been made in the cast since last year. Madame Castellan, who was the original representative of Bertha in Paris, appeared here for the first time, in that part. Zacharie, the chief Anabaptist, formerly sustained by Marini, is now in the hands of Herr Formes; Jonas, the tenor Anabaptist, is allotted to Signor Marrasti, vice Mei, for whom the music was not at all adapted. Tagliafico, Polonini, Bernard, Lavia, Carlotti, and Mario resume their former characters. The lateness of the hour at which the opera terminated, and the crowded state of our columns, preclude any lengthened notices in the present publication.

SURREY.

On Monday the once celebrated melo-drama of the "Forest of Bondy; or, the Dog of Montargis," was added to the other entertainments at this theatre.

ASTLEY'S.

"The Battle of Waterloo" was, on Monday, revived here, with all the effect which distinguished it on its first production.

ST. JAMES'S.

On Wednesday Mr. Mitchell took his benefit, on which occasion "Les Extrêmes se Touchent," "Catherine," "Un Caprice," and "Roger Bontemps" were performed. The house was crowded with a fashionable and brilliant audience. Her Majesty, also, was present.

HAYMARKET.

"The Enchanted Isle," of the Brothers Brough, was revived on Thursday, being designed as a burlesque on the "Tempest"

SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—The Royal South London Floricultural Society held their second grand miscellaneous flower-show for the season at these gardens on Wednesday. The flowers exhibited were particularly fine, and comprised many beautiful plants, both indigenous and foreign; they were disposed in tents scattered over the gardens, one of the largest of which was devoted to geraniums, and contained some remarkable specimens.

GENERAL POST-OFFICE, JUNE, 1850.—On and from the 1st of July next, the following regulations will come into effect:—1. That all letters posted at any road sweeping-office for places within the United Kingdom must either be prepaid by stamps, or be sent unpaid, as money prepayment for inland letters posted at such offices will be abolished. 2. The postage of foreign and colonial letters may be paid in money at all rural receiving-offices for forwarding these where no money prepayment has hitherto been allowed. 3. The letter-boxes at the rural receiving-offices will in no case be closed until within ten minutes of the time fixed for the despatch of the mail.

THE NEW ORDNANCE SURVEY OF LONDON.—The sum granted for the survey was £24,000; the sum expended, £19,000; the difference of £5000 to be applied in liquidation of the expense of engraving a map, which will comprise about 900 sheets of paper (technically termed double-elephant), each sheet measuring about 3 feet by 2 feet. The survey extends some distance into the environs of London. The map complete will measure 100 feet in length, by 72 in breadth. In addition to the large map, it is proposed to publish another, on a reduced scale, of one foot to a mile. The map so prepared would occupy 44 sheets, and measure 22 feet by 14 feet.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

The Waterloo banquet took place on Tuesday, at Apsley House, when there was a numerous attendance of the companions in arms of their noble entertainer. His Royal Highness Prince Albert honoured the banquet with his presence.

An American authority gives the following classification of the population of Cuba in 1850:—Creole whites, 520,000; Spaniards, 35,000; troops and marine, 22,000; foreigners, 10,560; floating population, 17,000: total of the white population, 605,560. Free mulattoes, 118,200; free blacks, 87,370; slave mulattoes, 11,100; black slaves, 425,000: total coloured population, 641,670. Grand total of the entire population, 1,247,230.

The town-council of the ancient town of Wells have voted the sum of £20 guineas to the funds now rasing for the Exhibition of 1851.

The Indian Times describes a new mode of curing the cholera which has been adopted by the civil surgeon of Howrah, in every instance as yet with complete success. The treatment consists in making the patient inhale a certain quantity of oxygen gas. About fifteen European seamen, who have been brought into the hospital in various stages of the disease, have been perfectly recovered by this means.

The tailmasters around Dudley and its neighbourhood have at length offered their men the old wages again, and in consequence the nailors' strike is now at an end. Orders appear to come in more freely, and a considerable accumulation has taken place during the month past without work, so that at the present time all hands are fully employed.

The site of the proposed park for Finsbury comprises the open fields between Highbury and Holloway, bounded by the Great Northern Railway and the reservoirs of the New River Company in the Green-lanes. The northern, eastern, and southern districts of the metropolis have already been provided with parks at the public expense—the northern is the only district for which no such provision has been made.

At a meeting at Waltham Abbey, last week, in support of the Exhibition of 1851, Captain Tulloh, superintendant of the gunpowder manufactory, and the artificers and men in his department, subscribed one day's pay to the funds. Captain Yorke, of the Royal Engineers, and the men under his command, at Waltham, have signified their intention of doing the same.

On Saturday evening a wooden building, used as a temporary goods station, or warehouse, by the Leeds and Thirsk Railway Company, in Wellington-street, Leeds, accidentally took fire, and in less than half an hour was burnt to the ground. Five goods-trucks, partly laden with leather, stationery, &c., were very much damaged.

The Paris Presse, in its last weekly commercial bulletin, states that 40,000 workmen are employed in executing orders of articles of Prussian manufacture There will, it says, be specimens of all kinds of articles sent to the London Exhibition, accompanied by great numbers of visitors.

At the residence of Mrs. Fisher, Grimsby-house, near Banbury, Oxfordshire, a nightingale has recently built its nest in a rose-tree which is trained against one of the columns of the portico of the house. The nest partly rests on the tree and partly on the column; and the feathered songster appears to be as much at home, and warbles as sweetly, as though the nest were in a more retired spot.

An industrious widow of the name of Grant, who keeps a bakehouse at Cow bridge, in Wales, had her house robbed last Saturday night of all the money she happened to have in it—a sum of about £4. The keys were adroitly extracted from under her pillow while she was asleep.

The following gentlemen have been chosen honorary and corresponding members of the Imperial Library of St. Petersburgh:—The Earl of Ellesmere, president of the committee of the British Museum; Mr. Wilson, director of the library of the East India House; Mr. E. Edwards, of the British Museum; and Mr. Evans, of London.

A telegraphic despatch from Vienna, in the Allgemeine Zeitung of the 13th inst., announces that on the 1st October next the line of customs between Austria and Hungary will be abolished. This removes one of the great impediments to a great Custom-union for Germany.

An association is now in process of formation for the purpose of promoting locality in Scotland the organization of a movement in favour of the principle of Free Emigration to British Industry. The president of the incipient society is the Duke of Montrose, its Vice-President the Earl of Eglinton.

On the 6th of May the ship Seithe, 600 tons burden, was burnt at her anchorage in Bombay harbour. She was just ready to sail, and there seems to be no doubt that her destruction was the work of incendiaries. This is the tenth vessel belonging to the port of Bombay which has thus perished within these last eight years.

On the 28th of April a hurricane occurred in the upper portion of the Bay of Bengal, by which four ships were seriously damaged, and the salt water was driven up the river Hooghly so as to flood the adjacent country, and thereby render saltpetre in such vast quantities unprocurable.

After the battle of Moodkee, Lieutenant Brockman of her Majesty's 80th Regiment was among the missing. It is now discovered that he was waylaid and murdered by a party of Thugs, one of whom has confessed his crime, given the place of burial, and pointed out the position of the unfortunate officer's remains, which have been identified by the presence of some regimental buttons.

An opulent merchant, William Sheepshanks, Esq., of Leeds and Hargrogate, is about to erect and endow a church in the hamlet of Bilton, near Harrogate, where there is a rapidly increasing population unprovided with church accommodation, except at a considerable distance. The Rev. Thomas Sheepshanks, A.M., only son of the gentleman, is the incumbent of the parish in which the new church is intended to be built.

The parish clerk of Gressford, Mr. De Newnes, has been suspended by the Vicar, the Rev. Mr. Wickham, for marrying his brother's widow.

On Monday last, in Southampton Water, a huge monster was seen in pursuit of another fish; and a short time after, an immense conger eel was seen on the mud (it being low water), also what it was that was thought to be a porpoise. The conger, which was about five feet in length, was at once taken; the other, being of immense size and weight, required the assistance of several men to get it off the mud into the boat; its weight was between 4 and 5 cwt. and it proved to be a sun-fish.

The French Academy has just decreed to M. Emile Augier, the author of "Gabrielle," the prize of 7000f. which had been offered for the best dramatic work which should inculcate principles of rectitude and morality.

A gentleman named Kelly, an extensive farmer in the county of Roscommon, Ireland, was some years ago was rewarded £2,000, has, at the age of 69 years and over, emigrated lately with his family, and accompanied by some others of the same class, to America, carrying with him only £300, the wreck of his property.

By the breakage of tackle to which a large mass of ironwork was attached at the Brighton terminus, London-bridge, Edward Rowe, aged 29, was on Monday last instantly crushed to death, and J. Hackett and G. Howson frightfully injured.

The Rev. R. Sadleir, prebendary of Castleknock, near Dublin, has been appointed sub-dean of St. Patrick's, on the resignation of the Venerable the Archdeacon of Dublin.

On Friday week, Mr. William Aitken, gamekeeper to the Hon. Colonel M'Adam Cathcart, of Craigcaughlan, Scotland, shot, near the Camlerg plantations, a woodcock, in good condition. This is considered as a rare occurrence, for the woodcocks generally return to the north about the 1st of May.

Two printers, named Brault and Magnier, have been sentenced by the Police Court of Paris to 3000f. fine each, for having printed two songs, entitled "The Foreign Invasion" and "The Cry of the People," without having put their names to them.

The Rouen journals of the 17th of June announce the loss, by collision at sea, of the British iron ship the Cat, Captain Harvey, and another vessel. The name of the other vessel is unknown. Both foundered at once; and only two sailors escaped by the boat which came out of the wreck.

The directors of the Newmarket Railway company have issued a public notice, stating that from the 30th instant the company will cease to carry or convey passengers and goods upon the line. The working expenses for a long period having exceeded the receipts, and negotiations with the Eastern Counties Company and other parties for working the line having been unsuccessful, it is believed, are the reasons for closing the line.

A private of the 5th French Regiment of Light Infantry was sentenced to death by court-martial in Paris on Monday, for having violently assaulted a Lieutenant at Courbevoie, on the 22nd of May last.

Mr. Swinburne, an English engineer, has arrived in Switzerland to make the preliminary preparations for laying out lines of railway previous to the arrival of Mr. Stephenson, who is expected in August.

A gentleman in Exeter received last week from Northampton a bundle of asparagus of extraordinary size, containing 120 heads, averaging 14 inches in length, and weighing 21 lb.

The Tuscan Monitor, of the 10th instant, publishes a decree of the Grand Duke, appointing the commission which is to examine the productions intended to figure in the London Exhibition. Sir George B. Hamilton, the English Minister in Florence, is one of its members, and the commission is to meet under the presidency of the Minister of Finance and Commerce.

On Tuesday, that portion of the South Wales Railway between Chepstow and Severn Tunnel was opened by the discharge of a gun, the ringing of bells and firing of cannon at Chepstow, Newport, Cardiff, and Swansea. A vast concourse of people assembled at the station, and the special train started from Chepstow at nine o'clock.

The "May fly" having come on, the Duke of Leeds and other veteran anglers have returned to angle in the Driffield trout streams, Yorkshire, the weather for which has been favourable of late, and the sport good.

Two very beautiful stained glass windows have recently been added to the east end of the parish church of Doncaster. The subject of the south-east window is "Christ's Charge to Peter," and has been presented by Mrs. H.——b of Doncaster. That at the north-east end is the gift of Richard Newsham, Esq., of Preston, and the subject "Moses Striking the Rock," for which Murillo's noted picture at Seville has given the idea.

The Annual National Archery Meeting, hitherto held at York and Derby, is to be held this year in Warrender Park, Edinburgh, in the month of July.

SKETCHES ON THE WESTERN COAST OF AFRICA.

THE ANCHORAGE OFF THE TOWN OF BONNY RIVER.

We have been favoured by an accredited Correspondent with the accompanying Sketches, or, what he not inappropriately terms them, "A Peep at the Rivers on the West Coast of Africa." They were taken during surveys of the Bonny and Old Calabar and other Rivers; they are very characteristic of the life and manners of the country, with which our acquaintance is comparatively slight; although the interest attached to this part of the world is continually reviving at home and abroad by the exertions making for the civilisation of the natives. First, of which falls into the Bight of Biafra, between 5° and 4° 30′ N. lat., and near 7° E. long.

BONNY RIVER,

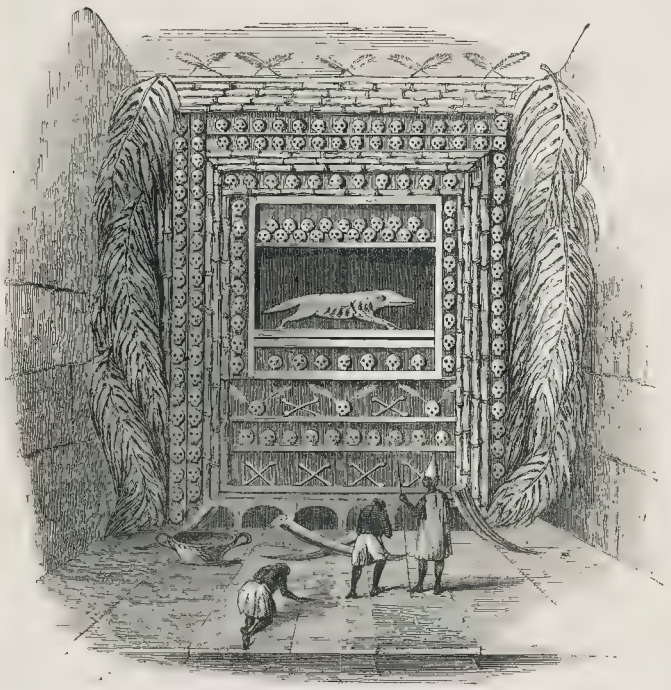
Our visit (says our Correspondent) to the Bonny, though our stay was short, gave me a slight opportunity of observing the state of oil trade and condition of the natives. The town is situated about fifteen miles from the Bar or entrance of the river, which ought to make it, comparatively speaking, a healthy anchorage for our traders: but, the swampy shores of the stream, which at high water are inundated, counteract the salubrity of a sea breeze. After heavy rains, a tropical sun acting on decomposed vegetable matter, engenders the most deadly fever, so fatal to our merchant seamen belonging to the palm-oil vessels. Trade, I may say, is prospering; the time of vessels in the river averages from five to seven months; fine ships from four to six hundred tons. The Bar is good 3½ fathoms at low water.

In my Sketch of the Shipping, you will see the comfortable and cool way of housing these vessels over; it is a sort of matting supplied from the shore, and having it two-thirds up the masts gives plenty of ventilation and protection from the sun. It costs about £70 in goods. Bonny at one time was the chief market for slaves, who, according to Captain Adams's statement, were sold there to the annual number of 20,000, the greater part of whom were brought down from the Eboe country. The town is mean, being built of stakes driven into the ground, wattled and plastered, and is surrounded by a marshy country, overgrown with timber. The canoes are large, capable of containing, perhaps, 130 people. Salt of good quality is manufactured and sent up into the interior. Our traders bring out a quantity of that article, and the natives would rather buy it from them than make it themselves. We have no Missionary station up the river, but King Peppel (whom I shall introduce presently) was rather anxious for "white man to come and teach boy-book." Human sacrifice is still kept up, but to no very great extent; it is very difficult to find it out, as great secrecy is kept. They used, at one time, to sacrifice four young persons a year at the mouth of the river, by stringing them to the overhanging trees, with their feet and hands just touching the water; this was done to bring plenty of vessels into the river for trade, and to propitiate the spirit of the river.

I must not omit to mention the hospitality we received from the supercargoes and captains of the British ships, and their kindness and willingness to oblige and assist us in our wants will not be forgotten.

The amount of oil averages from £50,000 to £100,000 sent to Liverpool per annum; and, when we look at the market it opens for our own manufactures, the rivers of Africa are not to be despised.

I next send you a slight Sketch of the Fetish, or



JUJUH-HOUSE, OR HOUSE OF WORSHIP.

JUJUH-HOUSE,

or House of Worship used by the natives of Western Africa. It assumes a curious and savage appearance, inasmuch as it is chiefly constructed of the skulls of captives taken in war; and in the centre, the Gawna. It is considered the chief Jujuh, which is stuffed and placed as you see in the Sketch. This animal is allowed to roam about the towns unmolested; in fact, should a native be seen hurting it in any way, death would be his reward. I met, in my walk in the village, three or four of them. This drawing was taken in the town of the Bonny River, I having gained permission from the King to be allowed to enter this curious specimen of their houses of worship. You will observe the heads with feathers stuck into the sides: they represent the skulls of chiefs. A few elephants' tusks are thrown before the altar, gifts of rich natives to their Jujuh; on the left there is an earthenware vessel, constantly kept filled with rum, for the use of the Jujuh. Their mode of worship is in a kneeling posture, prostrating themselves sometimes flat on the stomach. The Priest, or Jujuh-man, is of great importance; and on grand days, when they make a sacrifice of a goat or any animal, it is wonderful to see the rush to get a drop of its blood. Human sacrifice is common, but always kept a secret from the traders of England. The King has made a written statement, asserting, as far as his power is concerned, he is willing to put a stop to the horrible practice; but the laws prevent their chief entering into any agreement regarding the religion of his people. The only difference of the Jujuhs of the various towns and villages is the assuming different animals. Some have the alligator, &c. The Jujuh is entirely constructed of bamboo and mud surrounded by palm-leaf.

I now beg to introduce to you

KING PEPPEL,

who is about 32 years of age, having reigned nearly ten years. He is a great dealer in palm oil, and a very cunning trader; his influence with the people is very small, and from his exertions in traffic he is not much liked by the native gentlemen of Bonny. He has a sort of palace, but very badly furnished; and musters about thirty wives, to whom he appears to devote the greater part of the day. His complexion is a very light brown, and from all appearances has something to boast of in having a little white blood in his veins. The commander, in the course of conversation about his presents, wanted a list to send home for next year. He wanted white man to teach boy to read, powder-guns, and a sword to pass every sword—which means the best that can be got. He was half inclined to add an English wife, but appeared a little ashamed; though he had a most beautiful picture in his private room of an English damsel at her toilet, for which, he said, if it was only alive, he would give all he was worth.

His memory is excessively strong—in his conversation mentioning the different battles that have been fought, and all the leaders. General Napier is his great favourite, after "the Duke:" he was glad to hear of his going to India again. Nelson was much admired by his Majesty, as he termed him. "Make war-palaver for sea." He visited the Rattler, on which occasion a sumptuous repast was given by Captain Cumming to all the captains and supercargoes in the river, to meet the King.

The Sketch is taken as he was sitting outside his house, in deep thought at what he should have for his next present.

We then visited

OLD CALABAR,

which falls into the Bight of Biafra, about two miles N. by W. of Fernando Po. It ranks next in importance to the Bonny; and affords access to a considerable trade. The town is named Ephraim, and is more regularly built than the African towns generally. The English trading ships are larger in tonnage, they average from 300 to 1000 tons, and consequently are much longer loading, thus exposing them to the deadly effect of the fever; and, from their lying up so far from the mouth of the river, they are debarred from the fine sea breeze which the Bonny anchorage has every day. I should certainly say it was the most unhealthy river; still we had only one death, which was universally regretted by all on board—it was our worthy chief-engineer, an officer much respected and liked by the men and officers. The inhabitants of this town number from 6000 to 7000; their European wants are much the same as at Borneo. The average importation of British manufacture is from £20,000 to £30,000 annually, the export of oil averaging double the import of goods.

The Sketch represents Ephraim Town, with the British merchant ships at anchor, and H. M. steam-sloop Rattler saluting King Eyo on his approaching the ships to pay a visit to the steamer. His canoe held upwards of 100 people, the greater part of whom were well armed, and called the King's body-guard. He had another large war-canoe following him. His residence is two hours up the river, called Creek Town, and is worth a great deal of money, his store-houses being crammed with European articles, besides a great number of slaves, and he has upwards of 300 wives. We visited his palace at Creek Town, and found it handsomely furnished with elegant tables and chairs, magnificent sofas, splendid looking-glasses; and prints of the principal public characters of England, as well as views of sea and land engagements, in handsome gilt frames. I particularly noticed one picture, young girls playing at blindman's-buff; it was a French production, and the old King said it was his greatest favourite. After refreshment, Captain Cumming amused him with a sham fight with the ship's boats, which delighted him very much; and he left the ship highly gratified by his reception. This river at one time exported upwards of 15,000 slaves annually.

SKETCHES ON THE WESTERN COAST OF AFRICA.

KING PEPPEL, OF BONNY-TOWN.

I forgot to mention the hospitality shown by Mr. W., the Presbyterian missionary, who resides on a hill at the back of Creek Town, and who kindly asked us up to his house, and invited me to luncheon. He has established a school, which amounts to from 70 to 100 of each sex. He is a great friend of King Eyo, in spite of his having so many wives. There is a school at Ephraim Town, and a chapel well attended.

I now portray

KING ARCHIBOLD DUKE,

Chief of Old Calabar town, as he appeared on the quarter-deck of her Majesty's steam-sloop Rattler, wearing his crown and state sword. His loins were covered with a rich silk, and round his neck and ankles he wore a quantity of coral beads. His age is about twenty eight years; and he was created King about eight months ago, at the death of his uncle, Duke Epheram, who had so many slaves immolated with him as a human sacrifice. The custom of the country is, that any great personage dying, all his property is locked up in his house, and left to decay. I went to the house, and looked in at the window, and, to my surprise, saw large mirrors, English chairs, tables, &c.—in fact, the appearance of an English drawing-room. This was the house of the last King, made of iron, and sent out from Liverpool at his desire. It is instant death to those who dare to enter it, by the laws of their country. Archibold Duke is King of the lower town, opposite to which the ships anchor.

Eyo Honesty's palace is called Creek Town, some distance up the river, and is considered much superior and richer. He derives his name, Honesty, from being upright and just in his oil trading with our merchants.

All the captains and me ants of our traders were invited on board on both occasions to meet these Kings; and Captain Cummings, with his usual liberality, gave them a sumptuous déjeûner on the quarter-deck. Our large gun astonished them very much, from the King downwards putting their head in the muzzle to try the calibre: it is a 68-pounder.

We sent our boats up the Benin, where trade is less extensive, the slavers lying too close. For miles around the Bight, palm oil is not of much value. The river runs up into the Eboe country: the capital, situated upon a river coming from the N.E., is large, and apparently contains about 15,000 inhabitants. The King of Benin is fetish, i.e. he is worshipped by his subjects as a god, and must not on any account be supposed either to eat or drink. However, his Majesty does not disdain the occupation of a merchant. The Warree country, inclosed by two branches of another stream flowing through this alluvial district, is beautiful and fertile. The King had just died, and a sort of Queen appeared to rule in his stead. The place is very small—about five miles in circuit—and appears as if it had been dropped from the clouds: even in the dry season the water is a foot deep on the ground.

THE SLAVE TRADE.—HER Majesty's schooner Bermuda, Lieut. Jolly, arrived at Port Royal, Jamaica, on the 21st of May, with the Brazilian brigantine Clementano (of Rio Janeiro), Josa Gonsales Bandeira, master, which he captured after 49 hours' chase from the Isle of Pines. The prize is a remarkably handsome vessel, well coppered, and of the burthen of 187 tons; and had on board, at the time she was taken, 280 slaves, many of whom have since died from want of food, which was completely out on board the slaver at the time the capture took place. A Jamaica paper says:—"The agent-general of immigration, and the gentlemen of the mixed commission, were summoned to Spanish Town yesterday forenoon, by express, to confer with his Excellency the Governor as to the disposal —we suppose—of the slaver and her cargo. The slaves, it seems, have been landed at Ocho Rios, and having once touched British soil are, of course, free; but we are told that, according to the treaty stipulations, which have been so religiously observed by her Most Catholic Majesty's subjects, if taken under Spanish colours, both ship and slaves should be sent to the Havannah, and if it be really so, we are rejoiced to learn that the miserable slaves being landed are in any case beyond Spanish jurisdiction; for we cannot suppose for one instant that they will be given up after entering a British port, much less after having stood on British soil. The ship may be condemned here, or sent to the Havannah, or given up altogether, for what we care; but we do trust that not one soul of her LIVING cargo will be given up to the rapacious and unprincipled man-stealers of Cuba. The demands of Cuban slavery have been too long supplied with victims in the same way. Captured slaves have been allotted to the Cuban planters in thousands, but the emancipados who have been released from their bondage cannot be counted by hundreds, scores by scores; and, therefore, we trust that our Government will not be any party to a further increase of victims. The present capture proves the truth of what we have all along advocated, namely, the propriety of blockading the coasts of Cuba and Brazil; and we congratulate Lieutenant Jolly on being the first to demonstrate practically the truth of our arguments. The African blockade withdrawn, and a dozen such active cruisers as the Bermuda set to watch the coasts of Cuba and Puerto Rico, and we should soon see an end to the slave trade."

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.—On Wednesday, the 149th anniversary of this society, which was incorporated by Royal charter, in the year 1701—"For the receiving, managing, and disposing of such funds as might be contributed for the religious instruction of her Majesty's subjects beyond the seas; for the maintenance of clergymen in the plantations, colonies, and factories of Great Britain; and for the propagation of the Gospel in those parts"—was solemnly celebrated in the cathedral church of St. Paul. The proceedings created great interest, and drew together a large number of visitors, both clerical and lay. Amongst them were—the Archbishop of Canterbury; the Bishop of Winchester, Bangor, Chichester, &c. Full choral service was performed. The Bishop of Oxford preached the sermon, selecting for his text the 20th verse of the 19th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, "So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed." From a statement of the society's operations which was presented, it appeared that, for more than fourscore years, that is, from its foundation in 1701 to the period of American independence, in 1783, the chief field of the society's labours was in the colonies which now form the United States. At the commencement of the revolutionary war, in 1776, nearly 80 missionaries were maintained by the society in the colonies of New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, North and South Carolina, and Georgia. Many of the missionaries, when driven from the independent States, settled in Canada, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia. The principal spheres of the society's present labours are Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Bermuda, the West Indies, the Cape of Good Hope, India, Ceylon, Australia, Van Diemen's Land, and New Zealand. The sum of £1858 was received during the year, towards the Emigrants' Spiritual Aid Fund; 18 chaplains, or religious teachers, were sent out in emigrant vessels. With regard to the financial condition of the society, for 1849, the total income, exclusive of rents dividends, special funds, &c., was £53,000. The society's whole foreign expenditure from its general fund, for the year 1849, might be ranged under two heads:—In the British colonies, £35,729; for heathen countries, £21,994. The number of baptised converts under the pastoral care of the society's missionaries in India was about 18,000.

THE NEPAULESE AMBASSADOR.—On Tuesday (last week), a Daguerréotype of his Excellency was cleverly executed by Messrs. Beard the likeness is admirable; the Ambassador was not in full costume, but wore in his turban a large ornament of diamonds, pearls, and emeralds, with an aigrette.

BONNEY'S SAFETY YACHT.—On Saturday afternoon, some interesting experiments were made with this new vessel upon the Serpentine, in Hyde-park. The yacht was hauled over, and thus half filled with water; but, on being released, she righted immediately: she was then baled quite full, and in that state she sailed and answered her helm well. She was then pressed down by the mast-head, with her sails set, until she was bottom upwards, when, the pressure being removed, she at once righted.

EPHRAIM TOWN, WITH OLD CALABAR.—KING EYO-HONESTY'S CANOE.—HER MAJESTY'S STEAM-SLOOP "RATTLER" SALUTING.

KING ARCHIBOLD DUKE, CHIEF OF OLD CALABAR.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, June 23.—Fourth Sunday after Trinity. Summer commences.
MONDAY, 24.—St. John the Baptist. Midsummer Day.
TUESDAY, 25.—Battle of Bannockburn, 1314.
WEDNESDAY, 26.—George IV. died, 1830.
THURSDAY, 27.—The 178th day of the year.
FRIDAY, 28.—Queen Victoria crowned, 1838.
SATURDAY, 29.—St. Peter.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING 29, 1850.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
1	1	1	50	2	10	2	30	2	50	3	10	3	30

MADLLE RACHEL.—FRENCH PLAYS, ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—MR. MITCHELL respectfully announces that the performances of the eminent Tragedienne Mdlle. Rachel are definitively arranged to commence on MONDAY, JULY 1. He is also respectfully announced that the engagement of Mdlle. Rachel is positively limited to Twelve Representations, which cannot possibly be exceeded. Boxes and stalls, at Mr. W. MITCHELL'S Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street.

FRENCH PLAYS, ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—MONDAY next, the new and highly successful Vaudeville, entitled ROGER BONTEMPS; with other Entertainments. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26, Mons. LAFONT'S BENEFIT, and the Last Night but One of his Engagement, on which occasion will be given (for that night only) the popular Comédie-Vaudeville of JEAN; or, le Manoir Sujet; with other Entertainments. The First Performance of the Eminent Tragédienne, Mdlle RACHEL, is definitively arranged for MONDAY, JULY 1st.—Subscriptions for the remainder of the Season may be arranged at Mr. MITCHELL'S Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street; and at the Box-office of the Theatre, which is open daily, from 11 till 5 o'clock.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. BATTY.—The best ventilated Theatre in the Metropolis.—Increased attractions in the Scenes of the Arena, supported by the most accomplished Artistes in Europe.—On MONDAY, JUNE 24, 1850, the Entertainments will commence at Seven o'Clock, with the AFFGHANISTAN WAR. To be succeeded by a most attractive routine of Equestrian Wonders in the SCENES of the CIRCLE. To conclude with a comic Ballet.—Box-office open from 10 o'Clock till Four. Stage Manager, Mr. W. YOUNG.

MR. ALBERT SMITH will give his new ENTERTAINMENT, THE OVERLAND MAIL, every MONDAY EVENING, at WILLIS'S ROOMS. Tickets and stalls to be had only at SAMS'S Royal Library, St. James's-street.

MR. HENRY WYLDE'S SECOND MATINEE MUSICALE will take place at WILLIS'S ROOMS, King-street, St. James's, on MONDAY MORNING, JULY 8, when he will perform MOZART'S Quartet in E flat, Beethoven's Trio in G, and Beethoven's Sonata in E flat, Op. —. Tickets, 10s. 6d. and 7s., to be had of Messrs. CRAMER and Co., Regent-street, and Mr. MILLS, 140, New Bond-street.

MR. JOHN PARRY'S ENTERTAINMENT.—MUSIC-HALL, Store-street.—MR. JOHN PARRY will have the honour of giving an entirely new Entertainment at the above Rooms, on EVENING NEXT, and EVERY EVENING until further notice, VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL, commencing at Half-past Eight.—Tickets to be had at the principal Musicsellers. Stalls and Private Boxes to be had only of Messrs. OLLIVIER, 41 and 42, New Bond-street; and at the Hall.

SCOTTISH FETE.—THE GRAND ANNUAL COMPETITION for CHAMPIONSHIP in ARCHERY and the SCOTTISH NATIONAL SPORTS and PASTIMES will take place in HOLLAND'S PARK, NOTTING HILL, on MONDAY, the 1st, and TUESDAY, the 2nd of JULY, under the Auspices of the Highland Society, of which his Royal Highness Prince Albert is Chief, and the Scottish Society, of which the Most Noble the Marquis of Breadalbane is President. The Sports and Pastimes will consist in Archery, Putting the Stone, Throwing the Hammer, Tossing the Caber, Foot Racing, Broadsword and Target Combats, opposed to the Bayonet, by the Officers of the Strathspeys and Reels, and performance on the Great High-land Bagpipe. Tickets for the Grand Stand (extending right and left of the Royal Box), One Guinea. Tickets for the Wings of the Grand Stand, Half-a-Guinea. Tickets for any part of the Field, Five Shillings. All the above Tickets will give admission on both days of the Fete. One ticket of any rank will admit Two Children under ten years of age. Vouchers for the Grand Stand can be had only of the Patrons, a list of whom, with programmes, and tickets for the other parts of the field, may be had at the Libraries and principal Musicsellers.

Honorary-park, Peckham. JOHN BOUCHER, Hon Secretary

THE HIPPOTAMUS, presented by H.H. the Viceroy of Egypt to the Zoological Society of London, is exhibited daily from 9 to Six o'clock at their GARDENS in the REGENT'S PARK. The Band of the 1st Life Guards will perform, by permission of Colonel Hall, every Saturday, at four o'clock. Admission, ONE SHILLING; on Mondays, SIXPENCE. D. W. MITCHELL, Sec.

ROYAL SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—MONDAY, JUNE 24, and three following days, DANSON'S PANORAMIC VIEW of the ALPS, with the PASSAGE of the ARMY of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, arrival of the Emperor, "Nelson," Promenade Concert, by the entire Band of the 1st Life Guards, the new Hungarian Quadrille, Derby-day Galop, and the Grand Gorka March and Quick Step; the March dedicated to the Hungarian Ambassador, by permission of Field-Marshal Prince Schwartzenberg.—Doors open from 9 A.M. Feeding the Animals, Half-past Five; Concert, Half-past Six; Passage of the Alps, Eight; Fireworks, Half-past Nine. Admission, 1s.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS.—THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of this SOCIETY is NOW OPEN, at their GALLERY, 53, PALL-MALL, nearly opposite St. James's Palace, daily from Nine till dark.—Admission, 1s. Season Tickets may be had of the Secretary.

JAMES FAHEY, Secretary

HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY'S VISIT to IRELAND. Illustrated by a GRAND MOVING DIORAMA, with scenes of the most charming character on the road, from the Victoria Station, by the [illegible] Railway, now open to the CHINESE GALLERY, 295, Park Lane. Daily at 3, by Gas at 8.—Admission, Reserved Seats, 2s. An interesting Historical Recollection Evening on Wednesday at the 3 o'clock Performance.

VALLEY OF THE NILE.—Additions have been made to the Panorama. The Nubian Desert from the Second Cataract to Dongola. Wadee Halfa. Upper Nubia. Mendeli. Mouth of Nile. Approach to Memphis. Pyramids of Ghizeh. Valley of the Nile, with a high-flyer at Cairo. Boats on the Nile. Banks of the River as shown in the Panorama. EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly. Daily, at Three and Eight. Admission, 1s, Private Stalls, 3s. Children and Schools half price.

INDIA OVERLAND MAIL.—DIORAMA GALLERY of ILLUSTRATION, 14, REGENT-STREET.—Additional Picture, MADRAS.—A Gigantic MOVING DIORAMA, ILLUSTRATING the ROUTE of the OVERLAND MAIL to INDIA, from Southampton to Madras and Calcutta, now OPEN DAILY.—Morning, Four; Afternoon, Three; Evening, Eight.—Admission, 1s; Stalls, 2s 6d; Reserved Seats, 3s. Doors open half-an hour before each representation.

COLONEL FREMONT'S OVERLAND ROUTE to OREGON, TEXAS, and CALIFORNIA, across the Rocky Mountains, as surveyed by the United States Government, portraying the thrilling scenes that occurred to Colonel Fremont and party, and Sir William Drummond Stewart and party, while crossing the Rocky Mountains, &c. Discovery of the great Salt Mines. NOW EXHIBITING at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, every morning at Half-past Two; evening, a Quarter to Eight.—Admission, 1s; Stalls, 2s.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—During this week the ALPINE SINGERS will perform daily at four, and in the Evenings at half-past Eight.—LECTURE by J. H. Pepper, Esq., on the APPARENT CONTRADICTION of EUCLID. MONDAY, July 1, a quarter-past Three, and every Evening at Eight.—LECTURE by the Rambler four on VOLTAIC ELECTRICITY daily at Two, and every Evening at a quarter past Nine. NEW SERIES of DISSOLVING VIEWS, illustrating some of the WONDERS of NATURE in the ARCTIC REGIONS and CEYLON.—DIVER and DIVING-BELL, &c. Admission, 1s.; Schools, Half-price.

MISS BIRCH and MISS ELIZA BIRCH beg to announce to their Friends and Pupils that they have REMOVED to No. 39, HEREFORD-STREET, PARK-LANE, where they continue to give Lessons as heretofore.

THE PROVIDENT SOCIETY of DANCERS and TEACHERS of DANCING. The next GENERAL MEETING of the Society will be held at Twelve for One o'Clock, on THURSDAY, JUNE 27, in the Saloon of the THEATRE-ROYAL HAYMARKET, by the kind permission of Mr. Webster. All Members of the Profession, members of the Society or not, are invited to attend the meeting. Natives and Foreigners, who want females as ashoonlin as soon as possible, further particulars may be obtained of Mr. AW, the Secretary, at the Office, 96, St. Martin's-lane, London.

JAMES BYRN, Chairman.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

J T W [illegible] by Saltillo, admirable, and not a relation of the Count de Monte [illegible]. We have not given the sketch referred to.
A V [illegible] music by Miss Birch, Miss Catherine Hayes, Miss Lucombe, Mr. Balfe, Mr. Benedict, Mr. Wallace, and Mr. Williams.
A P, [illegible] regret that we cannot accept
A N [illegible] shall receive attention.
L A M [illegible] the puzzle.
C [illegible] Wife, and [illegible] both by the same hand.
C [illegible] has been attributed to three or four persons, yet not positively traced to any.
E K [illegible] to the Report on Intramural Interment, by the Board of Health, the deaths from cholera in London alone, last year, were 16,000. The total number of deaths in Great Britain, from same cause, in 1848-9, was 62,000.
AN ABLEBE—See the "Startling Hand-book of Oil-Painting."
AN AMATEUR ACTOR—By no[illegible] of a manager.—[illegible].
D E W, Aberdeen—Bu[illegible]. Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise."—It is from Gray's Ode on the Spring.
A S [illegible] Professor of Elocution.
A S [illegible] The Duke of Wellington [illegible] Peers of the House of Commons.
A [illegible]
Z [illegible] Spain possesses about 300 miles of the coast of the Bay of Biscay, France about 220 miles.
A SUBSCRIBER may hear of a [illegible] of a new waterproof boat-cloak, by applying to Parker and Co., 244, Strand, Vauxhall.
N M, Handsworth—Gunmaker's name of Cramer, Beale, and Co.; not [illegible], Regent-street.
DON ARLEQUIN—Mirella a "Holy Family," by Sir Nelson [illegible], was purchased by Parliament in 1837, for £3000. Apply to the secretary of the New Water-Colour Society.
J A L has misunderstood the subject of the first article in our Journal. [illegible] noted Regulators, not Sheraton's Reading.
W H R, Great Queen-street—Mr. Albert [illegible] was thirty-four last month.
J N [illegible] history will give the information required. Trans was a misprint for brant.
B S D "Taylor's Short-hand," improved by Harding.
A B C—The statement of the late Lord George Bentinck, that we held the island of Cuba as a territorial security for the Spanish debt, is thus explicable: The [illegible] of Cuba were [illegible] Spanish debt; but we have never had possession of the [illegible] have a treaty guaranteeing its possession to Spain.
A C [illegible] was [illegible] for the murder of Mr. Paas, of Holborn; but the [illegible] for four days, in consequence of the ingrossful conduct of the [illegible].
A [illegible]
AN OLD SUBSCRIBER—[illegible] Mr. Peacock [illegible] Tower and [illegible].
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

vantageous to the consumers, and that to take gas from the old companies would be a direct violation of a social duty, and encouragement to monopoly. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the evening.

ANNIVERSARY OF HER MAJESTY'S ACCESSION.—Thursday being the 13th anniversary of her Majesty's accession, the bells of the metropolitan churches rang merry peals in honour of this event; and at one o'clock the Park and Tower guns fired Royal salutes.

BANQUET IN HONOUR OF THE NEPAULESE MINISTER.—The East India Company entertained his Excellency General Jung Bahadoor Koonwar Ranajee, the Minister from Nepaul, on Saturday evening, at a grand banquet, at which a large party assembled to welcome the distinguished guest and his companions. The company included some of the principal functionaries of state, members of both Houses of Parliament, and a number of gentlemen of eminence connected with India and the East India Company. The entertainment was provided at the London Tavern, and all the resources of that establishment were employed to do honour to the occasion. The tables, glittering with their massive and elegant ornaments, had been prepared with admirable taste and skill. Mr. Shepherd, the chairman of the Court of Directors of the East India Company, and the president of the evening, entered the dining room about seven o'clock, accompanied by his Excellency the Nepaulese Minister and his brother, the Honourable Jaggut Shumshere Jung Bahadoor Koonwar Ranajee, and Colonel Dhere Shumshere Jung Bahadoor Koonwar Ranajee, attired in the brilliant and magnificent dresses proper to Orientals of their rank and station. As the guests proceeded to their places, the Coldstream band, which was stationed in the gallery, played a grand Indian march. His Excellency took his seat on the right of the chair; his countrymen, with Lieutenant Lall Singh, a member of the suite, having place at the head of another table, which occupied the middle of the apartment. By the Minister's side was Captain Cavenagh, his interpreter; and his Excellency's private secretary, Mr. Macleod, and another interpreter, were seated with his Excellency's brothers. There were also on the right of the chairman his Excellency the Belgian Ambassador, General Viscount Gough, G.C.B.; Lord Stanley, Sir J. C. Hobhouse, Bart., M.P., President of the Board of Control; Mr. Wigram, Lord Ashley, M.P.; Lord Broughan, Mr. Fox Maule, M.P.; Mr. E. Ellice, M.P.; Lord Chief Justice Wilde; Lieut.-Gen. Sir W. Gomm, K.C.B.; Rear-Admiral Sir T. Cochrane, K.C.B., &c. Not permitted by the laws of cast to join the temporary breaking of the rich viands which these tables, his Excellency and party retired to the drawingroom as the banquet commenced, and there partook of lychus (a sweet Chinese fruit, in appearance like a walnut), and of peaches, nectarines, and other delicate fruits; returning to the company at the table by the time dinner was over. Speeches of the usual complimentary character were delivered, that of his Excellency being spoken in his native tongue. It was interpreted by Captain Cavenagh.

GRAND ENTERTAINMENT TO THE DIGNITARIES OF THE CHURCH AT THE MANSION HOUSE.—On Wednesday the Lord Mayor gave a splendid entertainment to the Prelates and other dignitaries of the Church, upon the occasion of the anniversary of the meeting of the Archbishops, Bishops, and Clergy, for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts. The banquet was given in the Egyptian Hall. Amongst the company were his Grace the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of Bangor, Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, Bishop of St. David's, Bishop of Oxford, Bishop of St. Asaph, Bishop of Norwich, Bishop of Limerick, Bishop of Down, Bishop of Toronto, the Hon. and Rev. Montague Villiers, the Hon. and Rev. H. Legge, Hon. and Rev. Dunglas Gordon, the Very Rev. the Dean of Bangor, the Ven. Archdeacon Sinclair, the Rev. Canon Dale, Rev. Canon Ayler, Rev. Canon Jennings, Master of the Temple; Dr. Russell, Dr Spry, &c.

THE ETON FESTIVAL.—The annual festival of the noblemen and gentlemen educated at Eton College took place on Wednesday evening, at Willis's Rooms, King-street, St. James's. About 80 persons sat down to dinner the Earl of Falmouth filling the chair; and among the Etonians present were: Lord Wodehouse, Lord Lyttelton, Lord Crowhurst, the Rev. Dr. Hodgson (Provost of Eton), Sir Thomas Winnington, Bart., &c. In the course of the evening the noble chairman and the provost delivered some able addresses; "Floreat Etona" and "Esto Perpetua" being the great toasts after that of "The Queen and Royal Family" The company separated shortly after eleven o'clock.

ST. BARNABAS CHURCH, PIMLICO.—It having been previously announced that Dr. Pusey would preach a sermon on Tuesday, this morning, was, if possible, fuller than on the day of consecration. As early as five o'clock a great number of persons had assembled in the immediate locality of the new structure, and at six o'clock, although the servi e was only announced for seven, the church was crowded. As the clock struck seven the choir chanted the 48th Psalm, which was followed by the evening service; after which Dr. Pusey delivered a discourse of one hour and ten minutes' duration, in the course of which he alluded to the present internal commotions of the country, and to particular stress upon the recent decision in the Gorham case. There were several hundred persons who could not obtain admittance, but who remained outside during the whole of the service; the termination of which was announced by a peal from the bells of the church: it was nearly ten o'clock before the congregation had dispersed.

STAMFORD-HILL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The exhibition of this society was held on Wednesday, in the beautiful grounds of Josiah Wilson, Esq. The grounds were thronged by a very large assemblage of the most elegant company, and the weather was most propitious for the occasion. An immense marquee was pitched under the flowers, &c. were arranged in beautiful order. Here and there, under a tent of smaller dimensions, the company promenaded for the purpose of viewing the various plants and flowers for which prizes had been awarded. The show was one of the most beautiful specimens were a Polygala oppositifolia, from the Cape of Good Hope; a splendid Azalea, tea-scented Safrano, a beautiful variety of fuchsias, Aphelexis humilis, Erica ventricosa, Cineraria, Calceolaria, Pelargoniums, Verbenas, &c. The geraniums were magnificent. The show, on the whole, was one which was highly creditable to the Society, and the pleasure of the day was much enhanced by the performances of the band of the 2nd Regiment of Life Guards.

THAMES ROWING CLUBS.—On the discontinuance of the Royal Thames Regatta, it was determined that the prizes which had been contended for over the Putney course on two consecutive days, should be rowed for periodically during the season, at stated intervals. Accordingly, on Tuesday evening, the first portion commenced with the Silver Challenge Cup, for four oars, and the Silver Presentation Cups, for pair oars. The only boats that had been entered were the Oxford University Club, for the fours, and Messrs. Chitty and Hornby, of the same, who were twice successful in the two regattas of last week, for the pair oars. The consequence was, that the cups were taken off by a "walk over" in both cases. The second series of the Thames boat-races is announced for the 16th of July, and will consist of the contest for Mr. Evan Morris's coat, badge, and freedom, and the pair oars with watermen.

FIRE AND LOSS OF LIFE.—On Monday morning, between two and three o'clock, a fire broke out at 12, Phœnix-street, a narrow thoroughfare running out of Grower-street, Soho, which was attended with the loss of two lives. A Mrs. Harding, who occupied a portion of the second floor, attempted to make her escape by the window, but, after holding on by her hand for some time, was compelled to let go the house beneath, and her death was attended with enormous. Her son, who had made the most courageous efforts to save her, was so burnt as to be obliged to be removed to the hospital. One of the daughters of Mr. Nicholls, whose family were also lodgers in the house, was literally burned to a cinder. Every article of furniture and wearing-apparel belonging to the different lodgers for there were six or seven families living in the house—was consumed, and the premises completely gutted before the flames were extinguished.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—Births registered in the week ending Saturday, June 15th.—Males, 685; females, 672: total, 1260. Deaths during the same period.—Males, 373; females, 427: total, 800. Taking the corresponding weeks of 1840–9, it appears that the deaths were never lower than 750, which occurred in 1841, when the population was less than at present: and that they rose in 1848 to 1000. The average of the ten weeks is 851, or, raised in proportion to increase of population, 928; there was, therefore, a decrease last week on the corrected average amounting to 128. In the zymotic or epidemic class of diseases, the deaths communicated were 107; and of these 90 were registered as comprises, small-p x was fatal to 9 children, and scarlatina to 19, both still considerably under the average; measles was fatal to 20, and hooping-cough to 30, both of which are near the usual amount. Typhus, on the other hand, seems to prevail most fatally; in the last three weeks it carried off successively 26, 30, and 43 persons, and has now risen rather above the average of the ten corresponding weeks, in which it varied from 17 to 69. One person died of ague, and 3 of remittent fever; 2 of influenza and 1 of purpura. On the 8th of June, aged 13, Tyssen-street, Bethnal-green, the son of a combmaker, aged two years, died of cholera after 33 hours' illness. Diarrhœa and dysentery were fatal to 18 persons, all except 3 having been children. This is not quite equal to the average registered in the same week of 1847-9. In the corresponding week of last year 38 deaths occurred from the two complaints, and, at the same time, 12 were caused by cholera. Last year the woman died after childbirth in 6 of which cases puerperal fever was the cause of death. Diseases of the respiratory organs, exclusive of consumption, were fatal in 92 cases. Their gradual decrease as the temperature increases is shown by the numbers returned in the last five weeks—namely, 149, 134, 105, 94, and 92. The mortality of consumption is still below the average; the number of fatal cases last week was 129. Five women were registered last week who had reached 95 years of age or upwards. On the 10th of June, at 5, Britannia-gardens, St. Mary Islington, died the wife of a labourer died from "decay of nature," after having lived—if such statements, without the corroboration of registers of births or baptisms, can be credited—to the extraordinary age of 110 years and 9 months. Her name was Catherine O'Flaherty; she was a native of Claymorris, in the county of Mayo, in Ireland, and "continued (adds Mr. Martin, the registrar) in full possession of her faculties, and, two days before her death, could thread a needle without the aid of spectacles." Her son, who made this statement to him, is a labourer, and is sixty-seven years old

A woman, aged forty years, died in the London Hospital, to which she had been brought from Bow, of "inflammation of the arm, from the sting of a bee." A young woman was found dead in a dust-bin, from suffocation, produced by a fall, under the influence of what the coroner's jury describe as an "alcoholic fluid." Four children were suffocated in bed.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The reading of the barometer at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, was above 30 in. on Sunday; the mean reading of the week was 29.702. The mean temperature of the week was 58, and rather less than the average of the same week in seven years. On the first three days it was above the average, and the excess on Tuesday amounted to 7°8, on the last three days it was below the average, and on Saturday it was less than the average of that day by nearly 13. The wind was generally in the south-west.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

SUNDAY POST-OFFICE REGULATIONS.

Lord BROUGHAM observed, on this subject, that he entertained grave doubts whether the Crown could direct the abstinence from the delivery of post-office letters on Sunday. Many of his legal friends had no doubt, however, but that the order of the Crown was illegal, inasmuch as it was issued on the address of one House only. It would, it was contended, be illegal to act upon an address of both Houses; but he took up the ground that there were certain taxes levied on the delivery of letters. Now, if that delivery was stopped on Sunday, why not on Monday or any other day; why should not the delivery of letters be stopped altogether?

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE thought that the observations of the noble and learned Lord were worthy of consideration.

PARLIAMENTARY FRANCHISE (IRELAND) BILL.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE moved the postponement of the order of the day in the committee on the Parliamentary Franchise (Ireland) Bill to Thursday next.

Lord STANLEY had received notice of the intended postponement, but he thought it would be convenient to know whether the motion would certainly come on upon Thursday.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said that was a subject over which he had no control.

Lord BROUGHAM. It had better be postponed to Monday.

Ultimately it was fixed for Friday next.

ACCOMMODATION OF FOREIGN MINISTERS IN THE HOUSE.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE moved the resolution of which he had given notice with relation to the accommodation provided in the Lords'-ips' House for foreign Ministers. He would not further allude to the circumstance which they must all deplore, in consequence of which a most eminent member of the diplomatic body had been deprived of that seat which he thought he had a full right to occupy; more especially as on the door by which he had entered was inscribed, "For the Members of the Diplomatic Body." That eminent person, therefore, who was well known, my Lordships, urged that he had a right to the seat which he occupied. The mistake was most unfortunate; and, in order to obviate such mistakes for the future, he moved the appointment of a select committee to inquire and report upon the accommodation to be furnished to foreign Ambassadors in their Lordships' House.

After a conversation, in which Lord BROUGHAM, Earl GREY, and other noble Lords took part, the motion was agreed to.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY

AMENDMENT TO MR. ROEBUCK'S MOTION.

Mr. HUME gave notice that he should on Monday night, move, as an amendment to the motion of Mr. Roebuck, to omit all the words after the word "That," and to substitute the following words: "Taking into consideration the general policy or her Majesty's Government under circumstances of difficulty, this House is of opinion that on the whole it is calculated to promote the best interests of this country, and therefore deems it expedient to continue their confidence to the present Ministry." (Cheers and laughter.)

EXAMINATION OF OFFICERS.

Colonel REID rose to ask the Secretary-at-War, in reference to a circular recently issued from the Horse Guards regarding the future promotion of lieutenants and captains of the army, whether the educational examination to which officers of such rank are to be hereafter subjected will be conducted by civilians or by a board of military officers; whether officers who may be serving, or have served abroad, and who may have been in action, are to be declared unfit for promotion unless they possess a knowledge of "Euclid, algebra, logarithms, trigonometry, mensuration, geography, and history" whether officers who have risen from the ranks are to undergo the prescribed examination; and in what manner it is intended that the examiners shall be paid?

Mr. FOX MAULE said, as regarded the examinations, that the examinations would not commence until after July, 1852, it was not yet announced whether they would be officers or professors; after that period all officers would have to undergo the examination. With respect to the officers who had risen from the ranks, owing to the excellent system of schools established in the army, he had no doubt that officers rising from the ranks would be perfectly able to undergo any examination.

TREATMENT OF MR. SMITH O'BRIEN.

Mr. MOSKELL wished to ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether Mr. Smith O'Brien was allowed to procure at his own expense such articles of food and clothing as were necessary for a person in his condition, also whether he was subject to military confinement, and whether he could hold correspondence with any person in Maria Island, where he had been placed? The hon. gentleman also asked a series of other questions respecting the treatment of Mr. Smith O'Brien.

Sir G. GREY, said it was quite impossible for him to enter into the minute details of the treatment to which one individual was subjected out of some thousands who, having been convicted by the laws of the country appropriate, were now undergoing that punishment. (Cheers.) The right hon. Baronet then alluded to the refusal of Mr. Smith O'Brien to accept a ticket of leave on his arrival at the colony, and stated that the only alternative under those circumstances was to put him in the same position as any other convict. He had been removed to Maria Island, where he had good quarters, was relieved from coercive employment, was allowed liberal rations, and permitted to take exercise between sunrise and sunset within two hundred yards of the house. He (Sir G. Grey) concluded had acted with the utmost forbearance, and he was afraid that the only charge that could be urged against them was that they had acted with two much leniency. (Hear, hear.

NATIONAL EDUCATION (IRELAND).

On the motion for going into Supply,

Mr. HAMILTON rose to move, "That an humble address be presented to her Majesty, praying that she will be graciously pleased to direct that such a modification of the system of national education in Ireland may be made as may remove the conscientious objections which a large proportion of the clergy and laity of the Established Church entertain to that system as at present carried into operation; or otherwise, that means may be taken to enable those of the clergy and laity of the Established Church, who entertain such conscientious objections, to extend the blessings of Scriptural Education in Ireland." The hon. gentleman contended that the clergy of the Established Church in Ireland considered that they were peculiarly bound to maintain the principles of the Reformation; and they were of opinion that the present system of national education was entirely at variance with the principles of the Reformation. They claimed the privilege of being treated in the same manner as their brethren of the Established Church of England. They objected entirely to the rules and regulations of the National Society for Education, and the means by which it carried out its objects. He believed that a latitudinarian or secular system of education was most repugnant to Roman Catholics and Protestants; therefore, anything tending to that end would be very objectionable.

Mr. WALPOLE seconded the motion.

After a long discussion, in which Mr. STANLEY and Lord J. RUSSELL strongly defended the present system of national education, the House divided, negativing the motion by a majority of 225 to 142.

Some votes in Committee of Supply were then taken, and the House adjourned.

THE EXHIBITION OF 1851. -CITY OF LONDON COMMITTEE.

On Thursday a meeting of this committee was held at the Mansion House, at which nearly fifty members were present. Mr. William Evans, F.S.A., in the chair. There were also present Colonel Reid, Colonel Lloyd, and Mr. H. Cole, of the Royal Commission.

The first business that was brought forward was the recommendation of local commissioners to represent the various interests in the City of London, preparatory to their appointment by the Royal Commission. The following gentlemen were reported as having signified their acceptance of the nomination by the local committee:

For the respective departments of the Mineral Kingdom—Mr Ucliff, Professor Graham, Professor Quekett, Messrs Ohlsard, Pollatt, S Hart, C Pearce, W Tite, and Sir J Duke, Bart, M P.

For the Vegetable Kingdom.—Doctor Lindley, Doctor Royle, Sir W J Hooker, Professor Solly.

For the Animal Kingdom—Professor Owen

For the Sections of Machinery—Messrs J M Rendell, T Wicksteed, J Blyth, Adams, Dent, Frodsham, Locke, M P, Thornthwaite, Dunkerly; Professor De Morgan. Messrs Andrew Rose and Gilbert, Professor Taylor, Professor Lawrence, Messrs Clarke, Mordan, Wilkinson, Meehi; Doctor Ryvis, Mr Silvester. Professor Cowper, Messrs S Prentice, J Robinson, W Bird.

For the Sections of Manufactures.—Messrs J C Wakefield, C Warwick, B Gomeck, Rawlings, H Tucker, D Evans, C Swaisland, J Christy, De la Rue, H Spicer, A Wilson, J Evans, J Gray, J D Alcroft, Alderman Sidney, M P.

For the Sections of Sculpture—Messrs Ashburton, Lord Colborne, Mr Weeks, Mr Wyon, R.A., Mr W Tite. Professor Cockerell, Mr O Jones. Captain Ibbetson, Professor Green.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—We understand that the Council of the Society have appointed a committee, of which Mr J. H. Mapleton is chairman, to take steps for forming an exhibition of articles of utility and design registered during the year 1850, and, if thought advisable, during 1849 also. It is intended that the exhibition shall take place in the Society's room about the end of this year.

STATE APARTMENTS, WINDSOR CASTLE.—The Gazette of yesterday (Friday) evening contains the following notice:—"That, in consequence of the repairs and alterations now in progress within the Upper Ward of Windsor Castle, the State Apartments will be closed from the 1st of July next, until these works are completed, which will be duly announced."

ACCIDENT TO CAPTAIN PEEL, 6TH ROYALS.—The Nenagh Guardian (Tipperary) contains the following:—"About 11 o'clock on Monday night, as four of the officers of the dépôt of the 6th Regiment stationed here, were returning from a fishing excursion on the Shannon, and when within twenty yards of the barracks, the left wheel of the car was driven accidentally on the top of a heap of clay which was dug out of the side of the street where a channel is being made. The horse and car were immediately upset, and three of the officers were dashed with violence to the opposite side of the road; but Captain Peel, who was driving at the time, attempted to jump off, when one of his feet was caught in a leather strap which was attached to the seat, and he was thrown across the water table. He had no support under his legs, and while in that position the horse and car capsized on him. Unfortunately, the wheel fell on his legs and thighs; and, painful to relate, fractured the two bones of the right leg immediately above the ankle, broke his left thigh, and dislocated his left shoulder. The other officers escaped unhurt. The unfortunate gentleman was instantly extricated from his awful position by sub-constables Maher and Creighton, who were on night duty, and conveyed to his quarters, where medical assistance was quickly procured. We understand the ill-fated gentleman is son to Colonel Yates Peel, and nephew to the ex-Premier. The accident is deeply deplored by his brother officers."

THE PAVILION AT BRIGHTON.—The purchase of the palace and grounds having been completed, Mr. Good, the Surveyor to the Woods and Forests, has given up the possession of the late Royal property, now the property of the inhabitants of Brighton, to Mr. Slight, as representative of the commissioners of the town, so that it is expected the grounds will be thrown open to the public in the course of a very few days.

ROBBERY OF PLATE.—On Thursday evening, between six and seven o'clock, a robbery of plate took place at the residence of — Thompson, Esq., Sussex-square, Hyde-park. It appears that the plate was, after the family had dined, put into a basket in the pantry by the butler, who, upon going therein in about half an hour afterwards, discovered that the whole of it, consisting of 65 pieces, and of the value of about £35, had been abstracted. An entrance must have been effected by the area gate, which, as also the kitchen-door, had been incautiously left open.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

According to the accounts of yesterday (Friday), the Government, it is said, had agreed to accept the Dotation Bill as an extraordinary credit, or as a vote from year to year, in order to reconcile some of the existing differences; but the President of the Republic is opposed to this decision of the Cabinet, by which the difficulties are considerably increased.

Some individuals engaged in the secret manufacture of gunpowder have been arrested in the Faubourgs

An old soldier, named Kolumbeski, born in Poland, and said to be 126 years of age, has recently obtained admission into the Hôtel des Invalides. The veteran has seen no less than ten forms of Government in France.

The Paris journals have at length found time to attend to the late debate in the House of Lords on Lord Stanley's motion; and while they express a regret at the tone of the debate, they do not forget to contrast the gentlemanly demeanour and high-bred courtesy of the disputants with the vulgar and impertinent behaviour of too many of those composing their own representative Assembly.

PRUSSIA.

We learn from Berlin of the 18th inst. that the first stone of the monument to be erected to the memory of those soldiers who lost their lives in the revolutionary conflicts of 1848 and 1849, was laid on that day by his Majesty, who was enthusiastically cheered, it being the first time he had appeared in public since the attempt made upon his life. The ceremony was imposing, and crowds assembled to witness it.

GRAND WATERLOO FETE AT PORTSMOUTH.

On Tuesday, the celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo was marked by the extraordinary demonstration at Portsmouth; and was taken occasion of most appropriately for the presentation of their new colours to the distinguished 28th, by a grand review of all the troops in garrison on Southsea Common. The day was brilliant throughout.

At nine o'clock, a special train left the Waterloo station with Lord Gough and his suite, stopping at Woking and Basingstoke, and arriving about half-past twelve at Portsmouth, where his Lordship was met by the railway authorities, a guard of honour, and the officers of the various regiments, who escorted him to the head-quarters of Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, the Commander of the garrison. Trains of people about this time came teeming in by both the South-Western and Brighton and South Coast Railways; and it is stated that no fewer than ten thousand persons came by the two lines into Portsmouth during the morning to witness the spectacle. By seven o'clock, when the troops in garrison, consisting of the 28th, the 50th, and the 82nd regiments, the Royal Marines, and Royal Marine Artillery, had encamped, the scene was of the most animating description; and, including the military and multitude, there could not have been fewer than 50,000 persons present. The vessels in the harbour, the Excellent, Vernon, Hawke, Victory, Rolla, and other guard ships, strung up their colours and charged their guns; and in this and a variety of ways the time was occupied until Lord Gough, with Lord Frederick Fitzclarence and the general officers of the various regiments, came upon the ground, at about one o'clock, where they were met by the Mayor, Mr. B. Brimble, and the members of the corporation, in their robes. In presenting to Lord Gough a congratulatory address, the Mayor took occasion to remark upon the harmony and good feeling that existed amongst the civil, military, and naval authorities of the port of Portsmouth.

Lord Gough, in replying to the address, said that though a soldier ought never to be exposed to praise, he could not help but feel gratified by the flattering mark of attention from the corporation and people of Portsmouth. With them he felt that on that day they could not do too much honour to the gallant chief whom England delighted to honour, and who, he trusted, he would long continue to honour, as the pride of her military prowess. (Cheers.) It had always been his endeavour to follow in the steps of that illustrious chief. (Cheers.)

The next business, which commenced about two o'clock, was the inauguration of two elegant statues, sculptured by Milligan, of his Grace the Duke of Wellington and Lord Nelson, and which have been munificently presented by Lord Frederick Fitzclarence to the people of Portsmouth and Portsea Islands. Here was erected a large triumphal arch, hung with flags and trophies, with the words "England expects every man to do his duty," in the centre; and on either side, over the respective statues, the words "Peninsula" and "Nile." In the ceremony connected in unfurling the flags with which the statues were enveloped. The inauguration of the statues passed off amid enthusiastic cheering, after a few words from Lord F. Fitzclarence, to the effect that he presented them as a testimony of his respect for the inhabitants of Portsmouth, for whom he felt delight in dedicating them. (The two statues were engraved in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS for May 18 last.)

At this juncture, great excitement was caused throughout the field by a sudden feu de joy from the batteries along the esplanade, announcing that the Queen and Prince Albert, en route from the Isle of Wight, were on their way in the Royal yacht, with the intention of touching at Portsmouth in their transit. A tremendous rush was made for the shore; and along the whole of the esplanade, presenting a magnificent appearance from seaward, the entire body of military were drawn up. The yard-arms of all the ships hauled with sailors, and three separate salutes were fired from the forts along the coast, while the Royal yacht came as near the esplanade as practicable. The whole of the military then presented arms amid reiterated salvos of artillery; and Her Majesty and Prince Albert, having acknowledged the salute, steamed up to the Clarence Victualling Yard, and entered the Royal train for London.

A number of admirable field operations were then gone through, exhibiting all the practical minutiæ of actual warfare; the passing and repassing of the troops, advancing into line and forming into column, continued until nearly three; when the presentation of the new colours to the 28th, by Lady Augusta Fitzclarence, took place, and was performed in the following manner:—Major-General Love, the Adjutant-General of the Forces, the Rev. Mr. Gleig. The ceremony was commenced by piling the regimental drums, and throwing the new colours over the old. The torn and tattered ones were then handed, by word of command, into the hands of Sergeant Mackie, of Alpin, to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne;" the whole regiment presenting arms while the new colours were borne forward by Majors Adams and Wheeler, and waved in the face of the whole regiment. Inscribed with the various battles in which the 28th ones had been conquered by the right, and retaining as heroic them, the honour of the British Crown, the purity of our most holy faith, the majesty of our laws, and the integrity of our happy constitution.

Rescue, we pray that thy servants here present (not forgetful of thine exceeding mercies vouchsafed to their regiment in times past, and all the forces of our Sovereign Lady the Queen, wherever stationed and however employed) may behave themselves manfully in maintain a conscience void of offence towards thee and towards men; always remembering that of soldiers and all men required in their several callings, and that to be faithful unto death and to meet death, let it come in what form it may, was, in the integrity of a pure heart, is able to look to Thee as a God reconciled to him through the blood of atonement.

After the delivery of this impressive prayer, Lord F. Fitzclarence, mounted on horseback, addressed the regiment, referring specially to the gallant conduct of the 28th at Quatre Bras and at Waterloo, where the accomplished soldier Moore so brilliantly distinguished himself; and where the regiment were attacked in square, and reduced to a mere handful, repulsing the assault made on their flank, and at the same moment presenting a front to the rear in the work of great victory. "You," said his Lordship, "saw the death of the great and good soldier Abercrombie, as you had witnessed the death of the illustrious Wolfe." (Cheers.) You 28th have done wonders for your country. Few are your numbers, indeed, now have done more. You are now in the presence of a distinguished corps, who have run the race of gallantry with you in the service of their country, and who have endeavoured to cover themselves with equal glory. You are surrounded, my men, by the Queen's Own Regiment, by the 82nd, the Royal Marines, and the Royal Artillery. They look not, my men, on the magnificence of your achievements with anything like an eye of jealousy, but rather with looks of gratulation, complacency, and pleasure. To-day you receive your colours in the presence of one of the most distinguished one of the most gallant, and one of the most beloved general officers in the Queen's service, and who has honoured us with his presence to-day—I mean Lord

INAUGURATION OF THE STATUES OF NELSON AND WELLINGTON, ON SOUTHSEA COMMON.

Gough." (Long and enthusiastic cheering.) His Lordship concluded by calling upon the men to give three cheers for her Majesty.

The charge of the gallant commander, who was surrounded by Lord Gough, Lady Augusta Fitzclarence, the officers and corps of the 28th and other companies, with the vast crowd of spectators, was answered by loud and deafening peals of hurrahs, firing of salutes, and the national anthem. The effect was brilliant and electric.

Lady Augusta Fitzclarence then presented the colours, and Colonel Messiter having returned thanks for the regiment, and Lord Gough having touched the colours, they were trooped round the field amid the firing of cannon and martial music.

At seven o'clock a splendid banquet was given in the King's Rooms to Lord F. Fitzclarence, at which there were present the Marquis of Ormonde, Lord Saltoun, Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, Sir Francis Baring, Admirals Capel and Preston, Captain Fraser, Sir George Taunton, Mr. Bonham Carter, Sir George Wombwell, Admiral Davies; Colonels Menzies, Gibson, Stevens, Maxwell; Majors Robinson, Bender, Gillan, Slater; Serjeant Gazelee; Reverends G. R Gleig, Veck Gleed; Aldermen Jones, Owen, Orange; Drs. Ingledew, Rolfe Smith, Carter, Sleight, and upwards of 300 of the gentry. The band of the Royal Marines was in attendance. There was a ball in the evening at the King's Rooms, some old English sports, and displays of fireworks.

The 28th Regiment, we understand from their gallant Colonel, has returned from foreign service, seven years of which were in New South Wales and six years in the East Indies.

PRESENTATION OF NEW COLOURS TO THE 28TH FOOT, AT PORTSMOUTH

RAMSGATE HARBOUR.

RAMSGATE.

It is curious to note with what rapidity fashion and its indispensable accompaniment, wealth, have enabled humble fishing villages upon our coast to rise, within a few years, to the rank of important towns. The history of Ramsgate presents a striking instance of this good fortune. It was anciently a poor fishing-town, consisting of a few meanly-built houses on the coast of the Isle of Thanet, which here fronts the south-east: it had a small wooden pier. After the revolution of 1688, some of the inhabitants engaged in the Russian trade, by which they acquired wealth, and this led to the improvement of the town. When the practice of families from London and elsewhere resorting to the sea-side became general, Ramsgate was one of the earliest frequented spots, though for some time eclipsed by the superior gaiety of Margate. The improvement of the harbour by the erection of the piers and other works in the middle and latter part of the last century, gave another impulse to the prosperity of the town. Early in the present century, a stone lighthouse was erected on the west pier; a small battery is fixed at the end of the east pier. The latter is one of the longest piers in the kingdom, exceeding 3000 feet; the western pier extends about half that length. They are built of Portland and Purbeck stone, and Cornish granite. The harbour includes an area of forty-eight acres, and furnishes a convenient shelter for vessels which are obliged by heavy gales to run from the Downs. It is provided with basin, and floodgates for scouring it from the drifted sand or mud. At the entrance to the eastern branch of the pier is an obelisk, fifty feet in height, which commemorates the embarkation of George IV. from here, on his visit to Hanover, Sept. 25, 1821; and here the King landed, Nov. 8 following, on his return. He was right loyally received; and shortly after his Majesty was graciously pleased to direct Ramsgate to be called a Royal port in consequence of which the customs was removed here from Sandwich, and Ramsgate henceforth became a more flourishing place than the ancient cinque port of which it is a limb.

Another great work at Ramsgate is the Shipway, constructed in 1838-9, for the repair of damaged vessels. It was built according to the patent of Messrs. Morton, of Leith, who furnished the iron-work and machinery. It is 480 feet long, and 60 feet wide; and the apparatus is calculated to draw up vessels of from 400 to 500 tons burthen.

Our draughtsman has shown in the accompanying View as much of the harbour as could be introduced consistently with pictorial effect. The group of fishing craft is characteristically picturesque. In the distance is shown the lofty Lantern Tower of St. George's Church, closely resembling St. Dunstan's in the West, Fleet-street. Below are the well-appointed hotels and lofty houses fronting the harbour, with the older streets in the rear; and to the right is the Mount Albion estate, where the mansion known as Albion House was, if we remember rightly, tenanted by her present Majesty when Princess Victoria.

CRICKET.—DRAWN BY DUNCAN.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

During a debate in the House of Commons, on the 11th instant, some important details were stated of the noble Harbour at Ramsgate:—

Mr. Mackinnon rose to move for a select committee to inquire into the revenue, condition, and expenditure of Ramsgate and Margate Harbours. The trustees of Ramsgate Harbour derived a revenue of £21,500 from dues paid by vessels on entering and passing the harbour, and £4500 from other sources, making a gross revenue of £26,000. The whole of that sum was expended on the trustees, although a Parliament had appointed a sum exceeding that which they were empowered to accumulate, but had made no reduction of dues. They ought to lessen the expenditure £7000 or £8000 a year, to diminish the surplus, which had reached £58,465, to £50,000, and to reduce the dues. He was not disposed to praise the motion, but wished rather that the hon. member for the city of London (Mr. Masterman), one of the trustees, would inform him what was intended to be done in the matter.

Mr. Masterman could assure the hon. member that the trustees of Ramsgate harbour had no wish to shrink from inquiry; and the more inquiry there was the more satisfied were they that they would come out clear of it, being conscious that they had discharged their duties. It was under consideration of the trustees to make a reduction in the surplus; and, with reference to the dues, he might, without giving a positive pledge, which, as an individual trustee, he could hardly give, assure the hon. member that in every case in which there was reason to believe that alteration was contemplated to be made, with a due regard to the interests of the public and of the trust. (Hear, hear.)

Sir F. Baring defended the trustees; and Mr. Mackinnon offered to withdraw the motion, if the hon. member for the City of London would pledge himself to do his best to have the dues for Ramsgate reduced one half.

Mr. Masterman thought it very unreasonable that he, as an individual trustee, should be called on to say he would reduce one item or the other. He had stated that the subject had been long under the consideration of the trustees, that there was an earnest desire on their part to do justice to all parties, and he had no hesitation in saying a reduction was in contemplation, but what it was to be, it would be very indiscreet for him to say. (Hear.)

The House divided on the motion for the appointment of the committee. The numbers were—

For the motion	.. ..	78
Against it	.. ..	47
Majority	.. ..	—21

CRICKET.

Hur was the prettiest fellow
At foot-ball or at cricket;
At hurling chase, or snaile race,
How footly hur could prick it

THUS sang mirthful Tom d'Urfey, about a century and a half since—and the above line is believed to be the earliest mention of the game of Cricket, national though it be. It has been, from the first, popular among all ranks: here it was reared and matured, and hence it has an additional hold on our esteem. It is, in every sense, a game of the people generally, from the highest to the lowest: it excites no envy by its exclusiveness, as it equally engages the attention of the Prince and the peasant.

"We have several instances of Royal cricketers. George the Fourth formed a cricket ground adjoining the Pavilion, at Brighton, on which, if we mistake not, he has himself often figured both as batsman and bowler; and the Royal Clarence Cricket Club, at Hampton, was instituted by his late Majesty William the Fourth. The late Duke of Richmond and the Duke of Hamilton were not only warm admirers of Cricket. The late worthy and venerable Duke of Bedford patronised it as an exercise particularly calculated to keep up the manly character of the people, and his opinion of it was worthy of his patriotism and his acumen. By associating together the active, the ardent, and the dexterous of every grade, it encourages a friendly feeling between parties at other times widely separated, and that without destroying the respect and deference due to rank and wealth."—Bloxam.

Kent has ever ranked first among the counties for its cricketers; and from one of its noblest domains has our Artist pictured the game in the accompanying Illustration.

The Cricket season commences late in May, and is, therefore, now in full force.

Cricket has its changes as well as all other things mundane. In 1746, we read of "a challenge given by Colonel Sackville, on the part of the county of Kent, to play all England; and it proved to be a well-contested match, as will appear from the manner in which the players kept the field. The hitting, however, could neither have been of a very severe nature, indeed, safe, as may be gathered from the figure of the bat at that time, which was similar to an old-fashioned dinner-knife—curved at the back, and sweeping in the form of a volute at the front and end. With such a bat the game can have been all for show.—It would be barely possible to block: and when the practice of bowling length balls was introduced, and which gave the bowler so great an advantage in the game, it became absolutely necessary to change the form of the bat, in order that the striker might be able to keep the ball from the wicket. It was, therefore, made straight in the pod; in consequence of which a total revolution, it may be said a reformation too, ensued in the style of play."

Shortly after the great match in the Artillery Ground, May 22, 1775, a match was played between the Hambledon Club and all England, at Sevenoaks, when "Aylward fetched the extraordinary number of 167 runs from his own bat: one of the greatest feats upon record in the annals of Cricket; for it must be borne in mind that his success did not arise from any loose playing or incompetence on the part of his opponents—there would then have been no merit in the triumph; but he had to stand against the finest bowling of the day—that of Lumpy."

We quote these memorabilia of the "noble game" in Kent from Nyren's "Cricketer's Guide," edited by C. C. Clarke.

IRELAND.

THE LORD MAYOR OF DUBLIN.—Mr. Reynolds, M.P., is experiencing the full force of the hostility of his opponents in the Corporation. On Saturday last, he was served with nine writs of summons for penalties of £50 each for acts done in his capacity of Lord Mayor. These proceedings are taken under the recent Process Act passed by Parliament, which places Members of Parliament on the same footing in relation to law proceedings as ordinary subjects. Appearance must be entered in the usual eight days after service, and declarations and pleas follow, the same as in term.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE POOR-LAW.—The Hon. and Rev. S. G. Osborne, who is at present on a tour in Ireland, on visiting the metropolitan workhouse, left in the visitors' book a dismal record of the condition of the workhouse of that city. He says:—"The scarcity of clothing forces the inmates to shifts most repulsive to the human mind. The crowding of the children produces disease of the eyes, and utterly forbids all moral attention to them; and in one part of the boys' hospital I saw the rain coming through the roof on a convalescent patient's bed."

AMERICAN PACKET-STATION.—The following announcement appears in Saunders's News Letter:—"The Government have at last consented to grant a commission of inquiry into the suitableness of one of the Irish ports for an American packet-station."

BAPTISM OF MORMONITES.—On Sunday evening, at dusk, the inhabitants of Pentonville-hill were somewhat astonished at seeing two carriages drive up to the Pentonville-baths, containing ladies and gentlemen in the most fashionable manner, who entered the bathers' boxes, and began stirring themselves for the bath. In the meantime, the Rev. Mr. Cook, of the Pickering-street Mormonite or Latter-day Saints' place of worship, having addressed the auditory, plunged into the water, his dress being made of Mackintosh's water-proof-cloth, and there awaited the arrival of the ladies about to be baptized. He gave out a hymn, in which all present joined. After a short interval, the ladies made their appearance in bathing-dresses, and after having plunged about the water for some minutes, they were immersed three times, after which the rev. gentleman blessed them, and the ceremony of baptism according to the rites of the Latter-day Saints' religion was terminated. The singing of a hymn closed the proceedings. It was stated that the ladies were suddenly struck with the ideas of the Mormonites relative to baptism, and at once consented to become followers of them. Their names did not transpire, though, from their appearances, they would appear to belong to the richer classes of society.

PRINTING FOR THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.—On Monday the report of the select committee on printing for the House was printed. By a resolution of the committee the profits of the printers on work performed by order of the House will be reduced 20 per cent on the contract of the present and succeeding year. The committee, in 1849, made an arrangement by which the public bills should in future be printed by the Queen's printers, and the expense of resetting the type when a bill is passed from one House to the other has been avoided, this change has worked satisfactorily. With regard to "additional papers," the committee state that they have already made large reductions in the expense of parliamentary printing so far as it comes under their consideration The average saving, by abstracting papers which would otherwise have been printed, has amounted to £8000 per annum.

BROMPTON CONSUMPTION HOSPITAL.—The beautiful chapel, built by the Rev. Sir H. Poole, Bart., Prebendary of Lincoln, will be consecrated on Thursday next by the Lord Bishop of London.

DUBLIN ROYAL SOCIETY.—The Triennial Exhibition of Manufactures is announced to commence on the 8th of next month. The Exhibition of 1847 was visited by upwards of 20,000 persons.

LARGE ROSE TREE.—Mr. Buxton, of the Wandsworth-road, florist, has, in his grounds, a rose-tree 10 ft. in height and 28 ft. in circumference, with the extraordinary number of 2000 roses in bloom.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

The debate on Lord Stanley's motion excited the most intense public interest. The crowd of strangers seeking admission to the public gallery was so great, that the hall had to go away. The members of the House of Commons could not find standing room, and the galleries devoted to ladies were filled to crushing. The thronged state of the House gave rise to the following incident of a remarkable character:

A STRANGER IN THE PEERESSES' GALLERY.

Lord BROUGHAM: I am sorry to address your Lordships on such a subject; but I have given notice to the party (the Prussian Ambassador, Chevalier Bunsen, who sat in the peeresses' gallery), and he refuses to comply with the orders of the House. No gentleman has a right to be in the peeresses' gallery—nobody has a right to be there but peeresses and the daughters of peers. (Hear.)

Lord CAMPBELL (who acted as Speaker to the House): Peeresses and the unmarried daughters of peers.

Lord BROUGHAM: If he does not come down, I shall move your Lordships to enforce the order of the House. It is the more intolerable, as the gentleman has a place assigned him in this House; and he ought to take his place, for he is now excluding two peeresses. ("Hear, hear," laughter, and marks of surprise)

The gentleman referred to still continued in the peeresses' gallery.

Lord BROUGHAM said—I now move that the standing order be enforced. Do not suppose that I do this in any spirit of discourtesy. (Hear, hear.) I gave ample notice to the gentleman, that, if he did not come out of that place, where he has no right to be, I should address your Lordships on the subject.

The usher of the Black Rod and a messenger then entered the gallery, and the Chevalier Bunsen left it, accompanied by several ladies. [During the whole of the observations of the noble and learned Lord, mingled astonishment and merriment were exhibited in the House and in the gallery appropriated to peeresses.]

GREECE.

Lord STANLEY submitted, according to notice, the following resolution:—"That, while this House fully recognises the right and duty of the Government to secure her Majesty's subjects residing in foreign states the full protection of the laws of those states, it regrets to find, by the correspondence which has recently been laid upon the table by her Majesty's command, that various claims amounting to pecuniary satisfaction, and of a character highly aggravated in amount, have been enforced by coercive measures directed against the commerce and people of Greece, and calculated to endanger the continuance of our friendly relations with other powers." The noble Lord began the speech with which he prefaced his motion by saying that he did not know whether or not, at the moment when he was addressing their Lordships, the differences that had unhappily arisen between France and Great Britain had been brought to an amicable conclusion; but he did not believe that the noble President of the Council would again press for a postponement of the discussion on this most important question; and, moreover, should such a request be preferred, he was not prepared to accede to any further postponement. Indeed, he doubted if the delay which had already taken place had not had the effect of retarding the final settlement of these differences. But this portion of the question was merely parliamentary; to that one which he wished to place before their Lordships. It was far from his wish to trouble them with all the matter contained in the papers laid before Parliament, but he could assure them he had risen from the perusal of these papers with feelings of regret and shame at the part which his country had been made to play in these Greek transactions—all the prodigality of folly, the lavish expenditure of misdirected ingenuity displayed by our Minister in the conduct of them. The object of the motion he submitted to the House was, not to call attention primarily to the misunderstanding between France and England, and ask for a decision as to which party was in fault, or to declare that the peace of Europe was likely to be disturbed, but to obtain the affirmation that the course taken by her Majesty's Government in respect to the claims on Greece had been pursued by a violence, by an unnecessary interference, by an absence of communication with other powers, calculated to endanger our friendly relations. We might, and probably would, escape the danger; but the question was, had or had not the Government rashly and unnecessarily created that danger? He asked their Lordships to declare that the claims urged upon the feeble Government of Greece were doubtful in justice or exaggerated in amount, and that they had been pressed forward in a manner that would have aroused the indignant refusal of a powerful state, and that in some degree excused the provarications of the weak state of Greece. The noble Lord proceeded to describe and ridicule the various claims urged upon Greece, and to detail the various causes of quarrel between the English and the Greek Governments. In reference to the case of Sumachi, the blacksmith, who was alleged to have been tortured by Athenian police, Lord Aberdeen had upon our having demanded reparation and punishment first, and then inquiry, and upon our having subsequently let the affair entirely drop. The case of the Spitfire, and the outrage by her officers, who were rescued by Greeks from their being discovered to be English, his Lordship ridiculed as utterly contemptible as a ground of quarrel. He denounced our conduct in regard to the plundered Ionian Islands, which would have been a fitting subject for treatment a foreign representative would receive here who should act as our representative had done towards the Government of Greece. The affair of Pacifico, he said, was that in which we had to blame both Greece, and to detail the various causes of quarrel between the English and the Greek Governments. In reference to the case of Sumachi, the blacksmith, who was alleged to have been tortured by Athenian police, Lord Aberdeen had upon our having demanded reparation and punishment first, and then inquiry, and upon our having subsequently let the affair entirely drop. The case of the Spitfire, and the outrage by her officers, who were rescued by Greeks from their being discovered to be English, his Lordship ridiculed as utterly contemptible as a ground of quarrel. He denounced our conduct in regard to the plundered Ionian Islands, which would have been a fitting subject for treatment a foreign representative would receive here who should act as our representative had done towards the Government of Greece. The affair of Pacifico, he said, was that in which we had to blame both Greece, and to detail the various causes of quarrel between the English and the Greek Governments. In reference to the case of Sumachi, the blacksmith, who was alleged to have been tortured by Athenian police, Lord Aberdeen had upon our having demanded reparation and punishment first, and then inquiry, and upon our having subsequently let the affair entirely drop. The case of the Spitfire, and the outrage by her officers, who were rescued by Greeks from their being discovered to be English, his Lordship ridiculed as utterly contemptible as a ground of quarrel. He denounced our conduct in regard to the plundered Ionian Islands, which would be

The Earl of CARLISLE opposed the clause, and read a communication he had received from the commissioners, to show that the estates which had been sold at one and a half at seven and a half years' purchase were peculiarly circumstanced, and had produced their full value.

Lord STANLEY said the question was, should a limit be placed on the discretion of the commissioners. He considered that the principle of the clause was that no estate should be sold without the consent of the proprietor. He supported the clause.

The Earl of WICKLOW, the Earl FITZWILLIAM, and the Earl of STRADBROKE opposed the clause.

The Earl of DERBY and the Earl of GLENGALL supported it.

Their Lordships then divided—

For the clause—Contents	32
Non-contents	30
Majority against the Government	2

The clause was added to the bill.

The Marquis of WESTMEATH moved the addition of a clause to protect the proprietors of estates from arrest upon their property being placed under the commission.

The Earl of CARLISLE objected to it, but would not divide. He would leave the bill as it had been amended to the undivided responsibility of the noble Marquis of WESTMEATH.

The clause was added to the bill, which then passed.

The Distress for Rent (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed, on the motion of the Earl of LUCAN.

The Small Tenements Recovery Bill and the Landlord and Tenant (Ireland) Bill were read a second time.

ACCOMMODATION FOR FOREIGN MINISTERS.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE: With regard to the accommodation to be given to foreign Ministers and Ambassadors, I do not wish to advert to the circumstances which have drawn our attention to it; they are sufficiently painful, but I believe it arose out of an unfortunate misapprehension. A foreign Minister, of the highest character, and for whom, as an individual, I have the highest respect, was obliged to leave the situation which he was entitled to occupy under his view of the circumstances, but which he certainly had no right to under our regulations. It now appears that the conclusion we must come to is this—that we have no place where a foreign Minister can sit. There is a place where they can stand. I shall, therefore, propose, on Friday, the appointment of a committee for the purpose of effecting arrangements, and appropriating a place which shall be devoted to the use of foreign Ministers and Ambassadors. I believe, my Lords, in all assemblies of the globe, accommodation of this kind is afforded.—Adjourned to Friday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

After a series of interrogations on the subject of sewers and cesspools in Westminster and under the New Houses of Parliament,

GREECE.

Mr. B. OSBORNE asked Sir J. Walsh when he would call the attention of that House to the affairs of Greece, as the papers which he had asked for had been granted, and were all on the table. (This question was received by the House with tremendous cheers.)

Sir J. WALSH, who evidently laboured under great embarrassment, replied, that he had not moved for any papers, though he had on one occasion, on the spur of the moment, put a question to the Government relative to the affairs of Greece; but he did not know that by so doing he was placing himself in such a prominent position as would oblige him to undertake the serious task of calling the attention of the House of Commons to the Greek question. (Ironical cheers followed this reply.)

Mr. B. OSBORNE closed the interrogation by remarking, "Then I understand that the hon. baronet does not propose to make any motion founded on the papers laid before Parliament."

Sir J. WALSH attempted to make an observation, but he was obliged to give way before the storm of laughter, ironical cheers, and cries of "Order" that arose.

CULTIVATION OF COTTON IN INDIA.

Mr. BRIGHT moved for an address to the Crown, praying her Majesty to appoint a commission to proceed to India to inquire into the obstacles which prevent an increased growth of cotton in that country, and to report upon any circumstances which may injuriously affect the economical and industrial condition of the native population being cultivators of the soil within the presidencies of Bombay and Madras. The honourable member said, that his constituents were agreed upon the propriety of his motion, and that Manchester was convinced that the prosperity of its trade was intimately connected with the question. The entire trade employed nearly two millions of the population, and had a greater capital engaged in it than any other trade in the United Kingdom; therefore, it was of the utmost national importance to have the raw material for this extensive manufacture obtainable, if possible, from our own colonies. He contended that the East India Company had all the information that the most intelligent commission could collect already available, and that it could do nothing that the East India Company had not already done, and was willing to do. If the men of Manchester wished really to encourage the growth of cotton in India, they had only to secure a certain remunerating price for a certain quality of cotton, and then it would be found that the issuing of the commission would be unnecessary. In his opinion a Royal commission would be more demanding the East India Company; in fact, each Governor-General was in himself a Royal commission, and it could not be said that they had neglected their duty of inquiry. If he thought a commission would result in any good, he, for one, would not oppose it; but, as he did not think it would forward it, he recommended the House not to agree to it, and he advised the hon. member not to press his motion.

The motion was supported by Sir E. Colebrook, Mr. G. Thompson, and Mr. W. Patten, and opposed by Mr. Newdegate, Sir J. W. Hogg, Mr. Mangles, and Col. Sibthorpe.

Mr. BRIGHT replied. As this was the first time the question was brought before the House, he would be satisfied with the discussion, and would, with the permission of the House, withdraw his motion.

Several members objected to the withdrawal, and the motion was negatived without a division.

SUNDAY LABOUR IN THE POST-OFFICE.

Mr. FORSTER moved for leave to bring in a bill to repeal so much of the Acts 7th Will. 4, and 1st Vic., c. 36, and other acts, as prohibited the transmission of letters on the Sunday otherwise than through the Post-office.

Colonel THOMPSON seconded the motion.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER could not agree to the motion, though he considered that the vote come to on the other night was an unfortunate one, that it would lead to a violation of the law, to the desecration of the Sabbath, and to a greater amount of fraudulent Sunday labour than heretofore existed, but the House of Commons having passed the resolution, the Government felt bound to carry it out.

Mr. AGLIONBY hoped that some opportunity would be given to the House to reconsider a resolution that had been carried by surprise, and that was not in accordance with the opinions of the country.

Mr. HEALD opposed, and Mr. G. THOMPSON supported the motion.

Lord J. RUSSELL said it was obvious that the resolution would be the establishment of a general Post-office, and therefore he would not assent to it. But he could not help saying, that though he thought it his duty to advise the Crown to conform to the address of the House, he did not share in the opinion that it was advisable to come to such a resolution.

After a few words from Mr. NEWDEGATE, the motion was negatived without a division.

On the motion of the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, a committee to inquire into the accommodation to be afforded in the new House of Commons was appointed.

The report, as amended, of the County Courts Extension Bill was agreed to; as also was the report, as amended, of the Landlord and Tenant Bill.

THE EXHIBITION OF 1851.

Colonel SIBTHORP moved for a return of the number of trees already marked and proposed to be cut down in Hyde Park, for the purpose of making room for the buildings and grounds for approach, that are to be appropriated to the use of the proposed Exhibition of the Industry of all Nations, in the year 1851; with a statement when, and by whose authority, the demolition of such trees is to be carried into effect. He had seen a group of ten trees which were marked for being cut down; they were most valuable, the youngest amongst them was not less than forty years old. In the time of Charles II. these parks became public property, and it was a robbery of the subject for the benefit of the foreigner to destroy British property in order to enable them to show their goods. He believed that the exposition of 1851 was the greatest and grossest fraud that had ever been practised on the public.

Lord SEYMOUR said that the commissioners had informed him that they would require a number of trees to be cut down; he therefore desired them to have the trees which they wished to have removed marked. But he had not received any official notice where those which were so be cut down.

Mr. F. MACKENZIE trusted that notice would be given of any trees which were to be cut down.

Lord SEYMOUR: No; certainly not. I will be responsible for all trees that are cut down.

Lord J. MANNERS: What is the use of the responsibility when the trees are cut down?

The motion was withdrawn.—Adjourned at a quarter before two o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The House sat from noon, to six o'clock.

SCHOOLS IN SCOTLAND.

Lord MELGUND moved the second reading of the School Establishments (Scotland) Bill. He impressed on the House the necessity of passing such a measure, the object of which was to extend the advantages of education in Scotland, and to separate from the educational institutions those sectional distinctions which interfered with their usefulness

Sir G. CLERK contended that the most excellent results had flowed from the parochial schools, by which 600,000 children had received instruction, and which formed a portion of a general system of education, whose influence had rendered Scotland pre-eminent for religion and morality. The right hon. baronet moved, as an amendment, that the bill be read a second time that day six months.

Mr. F. MAULE was prepared to give his cordial support to the principle of the bill, because he believed that it was politic to legislate on the subject, and that it would be impolitic for the House to refuse to entertain the question. If the House would not make some reforms in time, reform of a more sweeping character would inevitably be forced forward. He was not prepared to press the details of the bill, but, the principle being affirmed, some inquiry might follow.

The House divided—

For the second reading	94
Against it	100
Majority against the bill	—6

The bill was consequently thrown out.

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

Mr. SOTHERON moved the second reading of the Friendly Societies Bill. The hon. member said that the number of societies in the United Kingdom was 33,000, with 3,098,000 members; that the annual revenue of these societies was £4,980,000, and their accumulated capital £11,350,000. The objects of the bill were twofold—to consolidate the existing laws that regulate enrolled friendly societies, and to protect unenrolled societies.

Mr. COCKBURN seconded the motion, and the bill was read a second time.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

GREECE.—MINISTERIAL STATEMENT.

Mr. ROEBUCK, whose rising attracted general attention, and led to great silence among the hon. members, put the question of this this new field, that, in the following year, they found it necessary to establish a Liverpool shipping and commission agency, and, at the recommendation of Lawrence, his brother Omerod resigned the entire management of the manufactory to the eldest brother, and established at Liverpool the firm of Omerod, Heyworth, and Co. From Rio, the firm soon extended itself establishing branches at Bahia, Fernambuco, Buenos Ayres, Lima, Valparaiso, and Monte Video. The plan adopted by the Heyworths being to raise to the position of junior partners such of their young men as showed distinguished business ability, and to give them the management of branches, the several branches worked well together.

LAUNCH OF THE "PELICAN," STEAM-SHIP, AT CORK.

LAWRENCE HEYWORTH, ESQ., M.P. FOR DERBY.

With the exception of a short visit to England, Lawrence Heyworth remained for seven years in South America. In 1815, Sir James Chamberlain came out as Consul-General, with a patent from George IV., allowing him to levy a tax of 4 per cent. upon all English goods arriving at Rio, and which would have given him some six or seven thousand a year. This imposition Mr. Heyworth at once resisted, urging its injustice towards British merchants, and the impossibility of their being legally compelled to pay it. The resistance brought him some persecution from the Consul; but he was successful in preventing the impost, and the whole matter is remembered in Rio with scarce less regard than is had here to Hampden's resistance of the ship-money.

In 1816, Mr. Heyworth returned to England. Our restrictive tariff upon sugar, coffee, and other produce of South America made it necessary for his firm to have an establishment at Hamburg, and he accordingly formed, in 1817, an agency under the name of Jackson, Heyworth, and Co.

In 1817, Mr Heyworth visited their commercial agents at Trieste and Leghorn, extending their transactions with those ports, and saving at Trieste a valuable cargo from a failing house. In 1819 he again visited Hamburgh, sold a large stock of coffee which the partner was holding over, and realized by that single transaction a profit of not less than £20,000. On his return, in the same year, Mr. Heyworth purchased the estate of Yew Tree, near Liverpool; and, in 1820, married Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Aked. From this time he took no very active part in commercial affairs. He was one of the first to perceive the practicability and importance of railways, and was one of the earliest of their promoters, inducing his brother to join him in withdrawing his capital from commerce, and investing it in the iron ways. This he did, not only on the ground of profit, but of national advantage.

In 1835 the first disposed of their several establishments, at home and abroad, to junior partners, who still continue to prosper in the several branches of business founded by Lawrence Heyworth. Mr. Heyworth first took any part in politics upon the agitation for the repeal of the Corporation and Test Acts. He was the second chairman of the Liverpool Free-trade Association; was appointed, in 1839, one of the three deputies to the first great conference at Manchester, when the deputies were charged to go only for a fixed duty, to which, however, he refused to consent, and produced a powerful impression upon the meeting, which afterwards influenced the entire agitation, by his assertion of the moral importance of free-trade and the right of the people to untaxed bread. From that time he was one of the most zealous members of the League, was the first to offer a subscription of £1000, on the condition of fifty others giving a like amount, and was on all occasions by far the largest subscriber in Liverpool. He was also from the first a zealous supporter of the temperance cause, opening his house to its advocates from all parts of the world, and himself incurring no small amount of labour in its advocacy. In 1845, he refused a seat for Stafford, because it was to be gained only by keeping open house for the electors, and encouraging corruption and drunkenness.

Being a director of the North Midland Railway led to his being invited to contest Derby, on the uncasting, on petition after the general election, in 1847, of the Hon. E. Strutt and the Hon. E. F. Gower; and in August, 1848, he was returned for that borough, with Mr. M. T. Bass, the numbers polled being—

Bass	995	Freshfield	778
Heyworth	912	Lord	760

Mr. Heyworth has spoken but seldom in the House. His chief speech was in support of one of Mr. Cobden's motions for financial reform, when he urged the importance of direct over indirect taxation, and was heard with the full attention of the House. He is in favour of Universal Suffrage and Vote by Ballot, and opposed to Church-rates, and all attempts of the State to endow the Roman Catholic Clergy. He is exempt from serving upon committees; but has, however, expressed his willingness to do so, and is in other respects a diligent member, having in the last year been present at 124 of the 219 divisions of the session. Mr. Heyworth is a magistrate for the county of Lancaster.

Our portrait is from a photograph by Kilburn.

LAUNCH OF THE "PELICAN" IRON SCREW STEAM-SHIP.

THE launch of this beautiful specimen of ship-building took place on Tuesday, the 11th, at five o'clock, at Cork, and affords an instance, in addition to the many signs perceptible every day to a close observer, of the ardent disposition in Ireland to set herself right.

To all those taking an interest in naval affairs, the steady and rapid onward course of this vessel has been a theme of admiration; her after fortune, let us hope, will prove, that when Erin's children have those with head, heart, and capital to guide them, they are able to earn a portion of renown such as has been so well won by the British empire.

The Pelican is stated to have been laid down on lines closely assimilating to those of the Ayaz, a powerful and well-tried steam-ship between Cork and London, and both belonging to the Cork Steam-Ship Company.

The measurement of the Pelican aloft is 220 feet; breadth of beam, 28 feet; and depth, 17 feet; to which when her spar deck of 7 feet is added, her entire depth will be 24 feet. Her amount of tonnage will approach 850 tons, and her steam-power about 200 horses; which, added to the beauty and symmetry of her form, will, it is confidently expected, render her a match for the finest screw-ship now sailing.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed on the directory, with their excellent chairman, Mr. Pike, who thus, at a period when all looked gloom, commenced such an undertaking, and thus at once found employment for an establishment of 250 persons.

Notwithstanding the vast crowds who assembled, on pile, quay, and water, owing to the judicious arrangements of the directors, not a single accident occurred. All present admitted that anything of its kind so splendid as the launch of the Pelican they never witnessed.

The vessel is built in compartments, and was christened in due form by Miss Pike.

PLATE PRESENTED TO GENERAL WEMYSS.

THIS handsome piece of plate has just been presented by the town of Manchester to Major-General Wemyss, C.B., and must be a very gratifying testimonial to the gallant soldier.

It is a massive Candelabrum, thirty-two inches in height; the design consisting of an oak-tree upon a rough base of rock; the branches supporting the lights, and a central vase, with a cut-glass dish. Around the trunk of the tree are models of private soldiers of the three regiments in which General Wemyss has served—the 50th, 71st, and 92nd. On one of the faces of the base is engraved the following inscription:—

Presented to Major-General Thomas James Wemyss, C.B., by the Inhabitants of the City of Manchester, in testimony of their esteem and regard, and of the high value which they entertain of the efficient manner in which, during a period of twelve years, he has discharged the important duties of Assistant Adjutant-General of the Northern District.

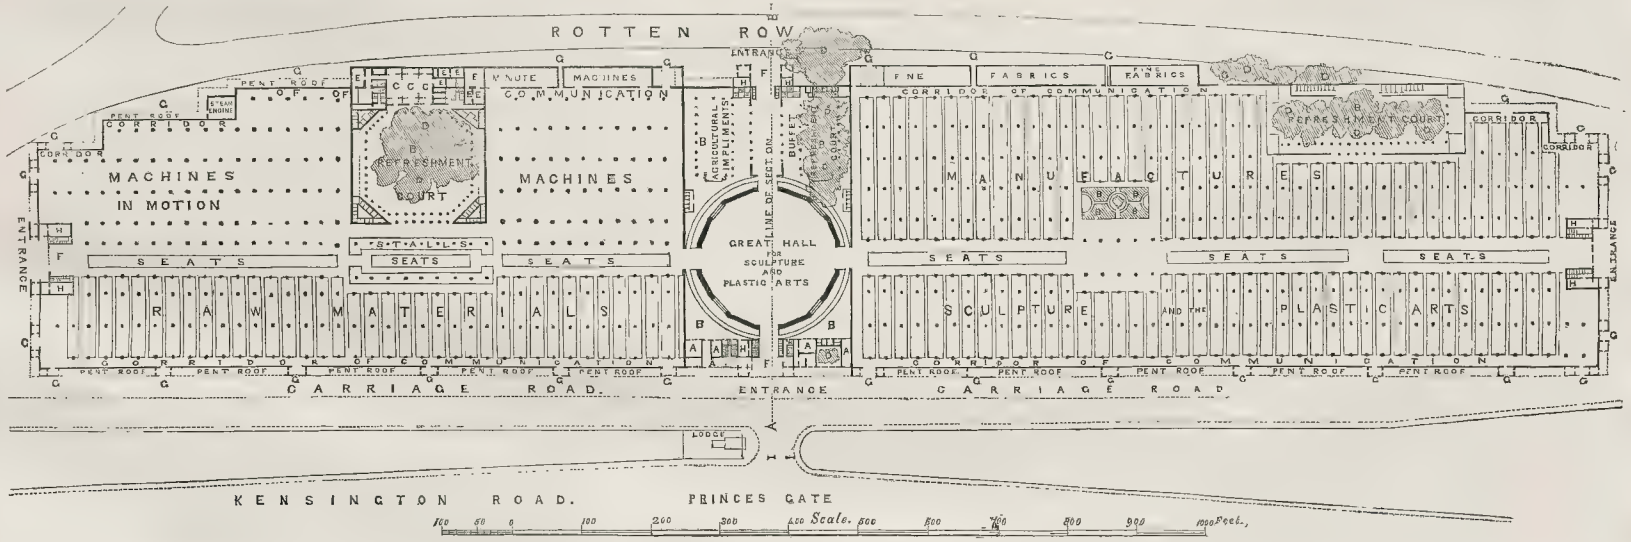
Upon the other faces of the Testimonial are engraved the arms of General Wemyss, and those of the town of Manchester.

The cost of the Testimonial is 250 guineas. It has been got up at the manufactory in Duke-street, Lincoln's-Inn-fields, now carried on by Smith, Nicholson, and Co. (successors to the late Benjamin Smith), and it is most creditable to the taste and skill of that establishment.

PLATE PRESENTED TO GENERAL WEMYSS.

LATEST NEWS OF MR. LAYARD.—Letters have been received from our enterprising countryman so late as the 10th of April, and dated from Arban, on the river Khabour. Our readers will remember that the last accounts from this quarter in the Literary Gazette mentioned Mr. Layard's purpose of penetrating into the Desert, which he has now done, and explored for three weeks, meeting with numerous traces of ancient population, though not so productive of antiquities as was hoped for. His present site, however, is richer in archæological remains, and is important, as these are undoubtedly Assyrian, and thus establish the fact of the extent of that empire. Two winged bulls and other fragments have been discovered among the ruins. The country around is described as beautiful. The meadows rich in herbage, and the banks of the Khabour literally gemmed with flowers. Mr. Layard was desirous to examine this river to its mouth; but the Arabs in that direction were hostile to those whom he ranked among his friends, and amid whose dromedaries, flocks, and tents he was located. The Sheikh and his ladies and all the tribe were kind and hospitable; and we trust arrangements may be made with the inimical parties wherever they interpose between Mr. Layard and his interesting discoveries. In his letter, that gentleman says that he thinks Major Rawlinson wrong in some of his topography, and that the chronological deductions cannot as yet be considered settled.—Literary Gazette.

BUILDING FOR THE GREAT INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION, TO BE ERECTED IN HYDE-PARK.



REFERENCES.—A A A. Executive Offices. B B B. Gardens. C C C. Exhibitors' Retiring-Rooms. D D D. Trees. E E E. Offices for Refreshment Department. F F F. Hall. G G G. Doors of Exit. H H H. Accountants.

GROUND-PLAN OF THE BUILDING FOR THE GREAT INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION, TO BE ERECTED IN HYDE-PARK.

PROPOSED BUILDING FOR THE GREAT EXHIBITION OF 1851.

THE building to be erected for the Great Exhibition of Industry of all Nations, to be held in Hyde-park, in 1851, has at length been decided on by the Building Committee, and confirmed by the Commissioners.

Our prospective Engraving gives a faithful representation of what this monster edifice will when built, though representations and words will give to the mind no idea of the enormous space in length and width the building will cover. As comparison is, probably, the best test that can be adopted, we may state that the building will be more than four times the length of either Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral, or York Minster, and that it will be in width more than double the width of St. Paul's or York Minster at the transepts, it being above 2200 feet long and 450 feet in width. The main building will be 60 feet in height, and the dome more than 150 feet in height and 200 in diameter. This cupola will, therefore, be 11 feet in diameter larger than that of St. Peter's at Rome, and 45 feet larger in diameter than that of St. Paul's. The plot of ground the building is to occupy is on the south side of Hyde-park, between the Kensington-road and that part of the park known as Rotten-row; and much nonsensical correspondence has lately been in some of the daily journals respecting the injury which will be done to this portion of the Park by the erection of the building, the enormous amount of traffic which will be hereabouts, the withholding from the public so large a slice of the Park, and great complaints have been made that some of the trees must be removed. These objections are easily disposed of, for the plot of ground is the very best which could possibly have been selected for the purpose, from its contiguity to the highroad, thus enabling the great mass of the visitors to jog down to the Exhibition in cabs or the more comprehensive vehicles—omnibuses, which, from their not having the privilege of entrée, will certainly do no harm to the roadways in the Park; and as to depriving the public of a place of great resort, we imagine, from what we have seen, that about one hundred persons per day traverse its greensward, as, in fact, it seems a terra incognita to the Cockneys, whose notions of Hyde-park are bounded by Rotten-row, all beyond being debatable land. We visited the spot on Monday, and noticed that the only trees marked for destruction are some half-dozen small ones—the more venerable and larger trees being most religiously preserved; and, with the exception of the trees we have mentioned, the whole space destined for the Exhibition is one unbroken grass-plot.

In our View, we should observe, that, for the sake of showing the building, we have removed a row of trees skirting the carriage-drive in the Park, but in reality they will not be touched.

The simple massive character of the design made for the great building contrasts oddly with the praises lavished by the building committee on certain drawings sent in competition, especially on those executed by foreigners; as those drawings were praised for qualities which, according to the terms of the competition, they should not have possessed. In the Builder of June 15 is an admirable letter on the subject, which we extract. What would the architects who formed the committee have said to a similar decision in a competition in which they themselves were interested?

PART II. contains, what, I suppose, is to be taken as the best exposition of the merits of contributors that the committee can give, which commences by stating, in a tone of commendation, that, "not confining themselves to suggestions only, which were invited by the programme, a large proportion of them are remarkable for elaboration of thought and elegance of construction." That I would contend, is clearly a breach of the specified conditions, viz. that suggestions only were to be given; that the plan or drawing sent in was to be a mere outline sketch, upon a single sheet, and the committee even recommended that it would be most convenient merely to trace it upon the common paper on which the "plan of site" was supplied to the public, a space being left upon the sheet for sketches of any sections or elevations that might be necessary to illustrate the design; and that a written description, limited also to "a single sheet," was all the exposition of their ideas that authors would be allowed to give. With these conditions before them, the commendation of the committee in the above case is a palpable act of injustice towards others who, very properly observing the letter of those conditions have been debarred from developing their talent, by producing "elaborated designs, elegantly executed." The report goes on to say, that "illustrious Continental neighbours have especially distinguished themselves [in designing a temporary building for an exhibition] by compositions of the utmost taste and learning, worthy of enduring execution, and calculated to exert a powerful influence on architectural illustration of the subject [the conditions strictly enjoined contributors not to enter into architectural detail], when viewed in its highest aspect, and, at all events, exhibiting features of great originality, research, and grace, which your committee have not failed to appreciate." It then places in contradistinction to these no doubt admirable, but out-of-place productions of foreigners, the "practical character of the designs of our own countrymen," which it states, "as might have been expected, has been remarkably illustrated in some very striking and simple methods, suited to the temporary purposes of the building, due attention having been paid by them to the preliminary means allotted to them of the undertaking." Yet, notwithstanding this comparison, clearly and indisputably in favour of our own countrymen, as regards the object sought and the conditions stipulated by the committee, we find by the selected list of those authors who are to receive "the highest honorary distinction" the commissioners can award, that the committee can only discover, out of 193 English and 38 foreign contributors, three Englishmen entitled to reward, the remainder being given out of the eighteen selected being foreigners; or, as regards the whole numbers, in proportion of 1 to 65 of "our own countrymen," the authors of the "striking and simple methods," as admirably suited to the temporary purposes of the building;" and 1 to about 2½ of foreigners, who, in designing for a temporary building, to be simple, cheap, and readily constructed, have so overshot the mark as to produce "compositions" commendable only for their "utmost taste and learning, and worthy of enduring execution." Surely something must be wrong here either the report or the selected list; possibly both.

In conclusion, I cannot help avowing the opinion that a wrong, though I believe unintentionally, has been done to many of the 240, who so readily and "generously" responded to the call, for their ideas; more particularly as I know, from personal inspection, that at least one of the plans altogether omitted from the report contains five of the leading features of the approved design.

It is not too late to make amends, as it is quite competent for the committee, when their approved plan is published, to accompany it by a supplementary report, classifying the plans in some such order as I have suggested, and thereby do justice to all the contributors, without confounding the reward due for the really useful suggestions, with that sought by those who have distinguished themselves by displaying their eminent architectural attainments, irrespective, and even in violation, of the chief conditions of the competition.

FINE ARTS.

ROBERTS' PICTURE OF THE DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM.

This celebrated and in some respects wonderful composition is now on view at the Hanover-square Rooms, previous to its being engraved in colours by Mr. Louis Haghe. The minute accuracy of the work, as furnishing a complete plan of the sacred city, as it was in the days of Titus' invasion, with the pictorial effects of colour and outline thrown in, to indicate that sublime event in the world's history, cannot be too much admired. It is with great propriety that the proposed engraving is designed to be in colour; no other mode could so properly convey the gorgeous effect of the original. The grandeur of the artist's work is especially striking; and it is impossible to contemplate with a religious spirit this magnificent production of Mr. Roberts' pencil, without being filled, in the language of the poet, "with thoughts that do even lie too deep for tears." The awful scene is full of sublimity; and visitors should lose no time in taking advantage of the present opportunity of seeing this extraordinary and admirable picture.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.—Monsieur Schmid, Professor of Painting to the King of Prussia (resident at 17, Bentinck-street), has just finished a full-length portrait of the Duke of Cambridge, which is intended to be presented by his Royal Highness to the Hanoverian Regiment, of which his Royal Highness is Colonel.

GALLERY OF ILLUSTRATION.—A beautiful picture of Madras has been added to the Dioramas of the Overland Route, which increases in popularity with each exhibition.

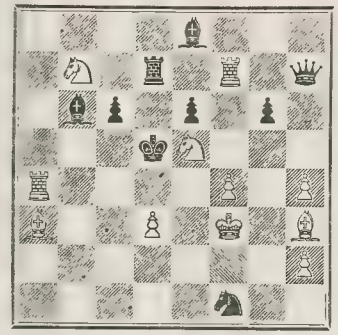
GREAT EXHIBITION OF 1851.—The competing designs for the medal prizes are on view at the Society of Arts, in Adelphi-terrace, Adelphi: they amount to about 120, and are of all degrees of excellence, from the most simple and humble to the most elaborate and ambitious. Of the former, more than one is amusing; of the latter, several highly meritorious. As the selections are not yet made, we abstain from particularising those of which we most approve, especially since it would be impossible to enter into a detailed description of the numerous groups that claim deserved and studious attention. The whole will leave a pleasing impression on the mind of the visitor, both as touching the greatness of our country and the inventive skill of our countrymen. As an example of what may be expected from the Exposition next year, it is full of promise.

The annual examination of the Boys' Model School, in the Borough-road, connected with the British and Foreign School Society, took place on Wednesday. Sir Edward N. Buxton, Bart., M.P., took the chair. The room was crowded with visitors. In addition to the ordinary branches of education, the children were examined in geography, drawing of maps, and in natural philosophy. Many very beautiful specimens of drawing and designing were exhibited, and the electric telegraph was worked by the boys as illustrative of a lesson on electricity. At the close the chairman expressed the great pleasure he had experienced in witnessing the proficiency of the children.

CHESS.

 Answers to Correspondents are unavoidably postponed.

PROBLEM NO. 335.
By CÆCUS.
BLACK.



WHITE.

White, playing first, to checkmate in five moves.

SECOND MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (London).	BLACK (Amsterdam).
9. Castles

Amsterdam to play.

CHESS IN THE PROVINCES.

The following well-contested Game came off between Mr. Harrwitz and the Rev. G. Salmon (one of the best players in Ireland), at the recent assemblage of the Yorkshire Chess-players.

(Ruy Lopez Knight's Game.)

WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	35. B to Q Kt 4th	K to R 2d
2. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	36. Q to K 8 2d	K R to Q sq (e)
3. K B to Q Kt 5th	K R to Q 3d (a)	37. P to K R 3d (f)	Q Kt to K B sq
4. P to Q B 3d	K Kt to B 3d	38. P to K Kt 4th	Q Kt to K 3d
5. Q to R 3d	Castles	39. P to K Kt 5th	P takes P (g)
6. Castles	Q Kt to K 2d	30. P takes P	Kt takes P
7. P to Q 3d (b)	P to Q B 3d	31. Q to K R 5th (ch)	K to Kt 3d (h)
8. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 2d	32. R takes Kt (ch)	Q P takes R
9. Q B to K Kt 5th	Q Kt to K Kt 3d	33 B to K Kt 4th	Q to her B 2d
10. Q Kt to Q 2d	P to Q 4th	34. B to K B 6th (ch)	K to Kt 2d
11. K B to Q Kt 3d	P to K R 3d	35. Q to K Kt 4th	K R to K Kt sq
12. Q B to K 3d (c)	Q to Q 3d.	36. K to K R sq	Q R to K sq
13. K Kt to K sq	K R to K sq (d)	37. P to K R 4th	K R to his sq
14. P to K Kt 3d	Q B to K R 6th	38. K to K Kt 2d	R to his 3d
15. K Kt to Kt 2d	B takes Kt	39. R to K Kt sq (i)	Q R to K Kt sq
16. K takes B	P to Q 5th	40. B to K Kt 3d	Q to her R 4th
17. Kt to Q B 4th	P to Q 2d	41. B to K R 4th	R to K R sq
18. P takes P	P takes P	42. P takes Kt	P takes P
19. B to Q 2d	P to Q Kt 4th	43. R to K R sq (i)	K R takes R
20. Kt to Q R 3d	P to Q R 5th	44. B to K 8th (ch)	Q R to K Kt 2d
21. P to K 5 4th	P to Q R 6th	45. K takes R	Q to K 8th (ch)
22. B to Q sq	B to Q 3d	46. Q to K Kt sq	Q to K R 5th (ch)
23. Q R to Q B sq	B takes Kt	47. Q to K R 2d	Q takes Q (ch)
24. P takes B	Q R to Q B sq	48. K takes Q

And White won in a few moves more.

(a) This is called by Jaenisch the "superlatively cleso defence," and appears to us a "superlatively" bad one.

(b) P to Q 4th is better Chess: for example—

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
7. P to Q 4th	Q Kt to K Kt 3d	9. Kt takes B or Kt	Retakes
8. P takes K P	B or Q Kt takes P	10. P to K B 4th, and Black must have a disagreeable game.

(c) We should have preferred exchanging pieces; but White declined doing so, as he wished to prevent the mounting of the other Kt to K B 5th.

(d) If P to Q 5th, White would have answered with Q Kt to Q B 4th, and then have taken the Pawn with Pawn.

(e) Anticipating Q B to his 5th.

(f) White might now have played Q B to Q B 5th, and, if the Rook were removed, B to Q Kt 6th; but he seems to have recommended Black a giving up the exchange.

(g) This is not well played. (h) Still worse

(i) White failed here to perceive the opportunity his opponent's last move opened for him. He had now simply to play R to K B 5th, and the game was won off-hand.

(j) Better, perhaps, to have played the Bishop to Q 3d; or, better still, the Rook to K R sq. Taking the Kt would evidently have been imprudent

(f) Not half so good as taking the K Kt P at once with the Bishop

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 886.—By W. G., of Beverley.

White: K at Q R sq, Q at K 4th, Rs at K 8th and Q 2d, Bs at K R 7th and Q R 5th, Kt at Q Kt 4th, P at Q B 3d.

Black: K at his B 3d, Q at K 4th, Rs at K B 7th and 5th, Bs at K Kt 2d and Q B 3d, Kts at Q 8th and Q Kt 8th; Pa at K B 2d, K 7th, Q 3d, Q B 2d, and Q Kt 3d.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 887.—By M. BORELLY (La Régence.)

White: K at Q B 2d, B at K 4th, Kt at Q B 4th, P at Q 3d.

Black: K at Q 5th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

APPOINTMENTS AND PREFERMENTS.—The Rev. R. Scott, to the Rectory of South Luffenham, Rutland. The Rev. H. Bisse, to the Rectory of Winford, Somerset. The Rev. G. B. F. Potticary, to the Rectory of Girton, Cambridgeshire. The Rev. E. Duncombe, to the Rectory of Barthomley, in the diocese of Chester. The Rev. G. Valden, to the Rectory of Twywell, Northamptonshire. The Rev John Chapman, to the Vicarage of Newport, Hertfordshire. The Rev. B. Hutchinson, to the Vicarage of St. Michael, St. Albans. The Rev. John Richard Errington, to the Vicarage of Ashbourne, with Mapleton, Derbyshire. The Rev. Samuel Reynolds Hole, to the Vicarage of Caunton, Notts. The Rev. William Sercold Wade, to the Vicarage of Redbourn, Herts. The Rev. George Hustler, to the Vicarage of Appleton-le-Street, Yorkshire. The Rev. William Price Jones, late incumbent of Chorlton, Staffordshire, to the Vicarage of Clee, near Grimsby, Lincolnshire.

TESTIMONIALS.—The following clergymen have recently received testimonials of esteem and affection:—The Rev. Andrews Reeve, late curate of Pitminster, Somerset. The Rev. T. B. H Brown, from the inhabitants of Flint. The Rev. William Gover, from several subscribers to the parochial schools of St. Andrew, Holborn. The Rev. W. Dawson, incumbent of Rampside, from several friends. The Rev. G. S. Drew, late incumbent of Old St. Pancras, from the congregation.

TESTIMONIAL.—The Rev. G. S. Drew, M.A., who has just been licensed to St. John the Evangelist, Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square, was, on leaving the incumbency of Old St. Pancras Church, presented by the congregation with a testimonial of respect—a clock, value 27 guineas, bearing an appropriate inscription.

THE GORHAM CASE.

The general meeting of the clergy, appointed to be held on the 27th instant, has been postponed till after the decision of the Court of Exchequer.

ST. BARNABAS CHURCH, PIMLICO.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

Connaught-place, June 15, 1850.

SIR,—In justice to those excellent individuals to whom the merit of having raised St. Barnabas Church, Pimlico, is due, I feel it my duty to inform you that you were misinformed as to my having been one of the principal contributors to that good work. My contribution was limited to one of the moveable fittings.

I remain Sir, your faithful and obedient servant,

A. J. B. HOPE.

SNOW IN JUNE.—On Saturday morning, between the hours of nine and ten o'clock, there was a slight fall of sleet and snow at Lincoln, sufficient to lie upon the flag pavement. The mornings and evenings have been very cold.—Boston Herald.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

RETURN OF THE COURT TO BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, Prince Alfred, the Princess Royal, the Princess Alice, the Princess Helena, the Princess Louisa, and the infant Prince, and attended by the Countess of Gainsborough, Hon. Elizabeth Lennox, Colonel the Hon. Charles Grey, Colonel Bouverie, and Mr. Birch, left Osborne at five minutes past two on Tuesday afternoon, embarked in the Fairy Royal yacht, crossed to Gosport, and travelled to town by a special train on the London and South-Western Railway. The august party proceeded from the Nine Elms station in five Royal carriages, escorted by a detachment of the 16th Lancers, to Buckingham Palace, where they arrived at six o'clock.

Her Majesty the Queen of the Belgians and their Royal Highnesses the Prince Augustus of Saxe Coburg Gotha and the Princess Clementina arrived at Buckingham Palace, at five minutes before six o'clock, on Tuesday afternoon, on a visit to her Majesty. The Queen of the Belgians was attended by the Countess Van der Straten Ponther and Dr. Carswal.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by the Marquis of Abercorn, Gen. Bowles, and Colonel Bouverie, honoured the Duke of Wellington with his company at dinner, at Apsley House, on Tuesday, the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo.

On Wednesday the Queen held a Court and Privy Council. At the Court, Senor Isturitz had an audience of the Queen, and delivered to her Majesty his credentials as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from her Catholic Majesty the Queen of Spain. The Privy Council was attended by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Lord President, the Lord Privy Seal, the First Lord of the Treasury, the Secretaries of State for the Home, Foreign, and Colonial departments, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the President of the Board of Control, the Lord Steward, the Lord Chamberlain, the Master of the Horse, and the Groom of the Stole to Prince Albert. The Earl of Cottenham having resigned the Great Seal, Lord Langdale (Master of the Rolls), the Vice-Chancellor of England, and the Hon. Baron Rolfe, were sworn in as Keepers of the Great Seal, and received their commissions as Commissioners for the custody of the Great Seal. The Great Seal was delivered by the Queen to Lord Langdale, as First Commissioner.

After the Privy Council, General Jung Bahadoor Koonwur Ranjee, on a special mission from the Sovereign of Nepaul, was presented to the Queen by Sir John Hobhouse, President of the Board of Control. His excellency was accompanied by his two brothers, Colonel Jeggut Shumshere Jung Bahadoor, and Colonel Dhare Shumshere Jung Bahadoor, and was attended by Captain Cavenagh, of the Honourable East India Company's Service, and Mr. Macleod, private secretary to his Excellency. His Excellency delivered a letter to the Queen from his Highness the Sovereign of Nepaul, and also delivered the interesting and valuable presents sent to her Majesty by that Prince.

THE QUEEN'S DRAWING-ROOM.

On Thursday the Queen held a Drawingroom, which was one of the most brilliant courts ever held by her Majesty. The suite of State saloons, and also the ball-rooms, were all filled with nobility and gentry soon after two o'clock. Being the anniversary of her Majesty's accession to the throne, the principal knights of the different orders of knighthood were their collars; the Lord Chief Justice of England and the Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer wore their gold collars of SS with the portcullis; the Equity Judges and the Hon. Baron Rolfe wore their gold robes; the Envoy from the Sovereign of Nepaul and also the officers of the mission appeared in magnificent Eastern costume newly covered with the richest gold embroidery, the costume of the Envoy being of green velvet. The turbans of his Excellency and also those of his two brothers were adorned with a profusion of diamonds, pearls, and emeralds, and the Envoy also wore a collar of emeralds of large size.

The Queen's Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms was on duty in the state saloons, under the command of Major Harmar, the standard-bearer.

Her Majesty's body guard was on duty in the palace as usual, under the command of Captain Kincaid, the Exon in Waiting.

The Queen and Prince Albert arrived at St. James's Palace at two o'clock, from Buckingham Palace, and were received by the Lord Steward, the Lord Chamberlain, the Master of the Horse, and the Groom of the Stole to Prince Albert.

Her Majesty and the Prince were attended by the ladies and officers of the household in waiting.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge (attended by her lady in waiting and Major Baron Knesebeck), his Royal Highness Prince George, his Serene Highness the Prince of Lehmgen, and his Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, were present at the Drawingroom.

The Queen wore a dress of pink satin, with silver (made at Spitalfields), over a petticoat of white satin. The train was richly trimmed with pink and silver ribbon and white tulle. The petticoat was trimmed with white ribbon and tulle, and also with bunches of white lilies and green leaves

The ornaments of the dress were ornamented with diamonds. Her Majesty's head-dress was formed of feathers and white lilies, set with diamonds.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge wore a train of blue moire-antique over a crape petticoat of the same colour. The train was richly trimmed with point lace and blue rosettes. The petticoat was richly covered with point lace, and was ornamented with blue satin. Her Royal Highness wore a tiara of large pearls and diamonds. The head-dress was composed of feathers and lace lappets. The ornaments of the dress were ornamented with large brilliants and sapphires, and the necklace and earrings were en suite.

Before the Drawingroom, her Majesty, according to annual custom, received a deputation from Christ's Hospital. The deputation, which was numerous, was ushered to the Royal presence by Sir William Martins, Gentleman Usher in waiting, consisted of Mr. Wm. Gilpin, the Treasurer; Mr. Thomas Poynder and Mr. Jonathan Hubbard, two of the governors of the institution, accompanied by the Rev. William Webster, M.A., the mathematical master; Mr. William H. Rose, the drawing-master, and the forty boys of the Royal Mathematical School founded by King Charles II., and was most graciously received.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert honoured the performance of the French plays with their presence on Wednesday evening, on the occasion of Mr. Mitchell's benefit.

Her Majesty the Queen of the Belgians, and his Royal Highness the Prince Augustus of Saxe Coburg Gotha, took leave of the Queen and Prince Albert on Wednesday morning, and quitted Buckingham Palace soon after eleven o'clock, attended by the Countess Van der Straten, Colonel de Mortkerke, and Dr. Carswall, and proceeded to the railway station at the Bricklayers' Arms, en route to the Continent.

FASHIONABLE ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Marchioness of Westminster opened the saloons of Grosvenor House on Saturday afternoon, for the reception of company, from three to six o'clock. The invitations, which were exceedingly numerous, included the Duke of Wellington, his Excellency the Nepaulese Ambassador, and his two brothers, and all the leading members of the aristocracy. Upwards of one thousand guests were present.

On the same evening Lady Palmerston had a very large assembly of the leading members of the political and fashionable world, at her residence in Carlton Gardens.

On Monday the Duke and Duchess of Norfolk gave a magnificent entertainment, at Norfolk House, to his Grace the Duke of Wellington and a distinguished party of the nobility. The Duchess afterwards gave an evening party.

Lady Feversham gave a very brilliant ball on Tuesday night, at the family mansion in Belgrave-square. The Nepaulese Princes honoured her ladyship with their company on the occasion, arriving about eleven o'clock. His Grace the Duke of Wellington was also present. His Grace came from Apsley House, after having presided at the Waterloo banquet.

The Duke and Duchess of Norfolk entertained a distinguished party at dinner on Wednesday evening, at Norfolk House. After the banquet, the Duchess had an assembly, which was honoured with the presence of his Royal Highness the Prince George of Cambridge, the Nepaulese Princes, and a very numerous circle of the leading members of the aristocracy and fashionable world.

On the same evening, Viscount and Viscountess Combermere gave an elegant entertainment, at their mansion in Grosvenor-square, to her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge and a select circle of the nobility. The visitors to Viscountess had afterwards a musical soirée, at which Mdlle. Anschütz delighted the company by the exercise of her great vocal and instrumental talent.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester had a dinner party on Monday, at Gloucester House. The company included her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent (attended by Lady Anna Maria Dawson and Baroness de Speth) and Her Serene Highness the Princess of Leiningen.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge was present in the House of Lords during the debate on Monday evening.

The Duke of Wellington's grand Waterloo banquet, on Tuesday evening, at Apsley House, was given to 80 general and field officers. The banquet was served at half-past seven in the Waterloo Gallery.

Prince Joseph Poniatowski, Minister Plenipotentiary from Tuscany to the French Court, has arrived at the London Hotel, Albemarle-street, from Paris.

His Excellency the Turki-h Ambassador has returned to the residence of the Embassy, in Bryanstone-square, from an official visit to the King of the Netherlands at the Hague.

The Earl of Ellesmere has returned to town from a cruise in the Mediterranean and Lisbon.

ALMACK'S.—The second ball of the last series of these fashionable réunions took place on Tuesday night, at Willis's Rooms and proved one of the most brilliant réunions of the season. Many of the ladies present were their Drawingroom dresses, and the scene altogether reminded one of Almack's in its palmiest days.

THE POET WORDSWORTH.—Her Majesty the Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert have presented £50 to the fund for placing a whole length effigy of Wordsworth, in Westminster Abbey, and a monument to his memory at Grasmere, Westmoreland.

The Paris papers announce the appointment of M. Sallandrouze de Lamornaux as special commissioner on the part of the French government, for communicating with the Royal commission in this country for the Exhibition of 1851.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The racing fixtures this year have not been made with a regard to the general interests of the turf or to the convenience of the public, several weeks having been almost "blank," which might have been made available for meetings that will now mass closely each with others of superior importance, and, as a natural result, the weaker will go to the wall. This will be the case next week, Bibury clashing with Newcastle, and dividing the Ring, but attracting so small a section of it that as a meeting for speculation it will be a failure; fortunately for the sport, Stockbridge comes to its aid, with four or five interesting produce stakes, but drawing the stewards into the grand mistake of spinning the joint lists into three days. The Newcastle meeting will commence on Monday, and the cumbrous four days, the Northumberland Plate being on the list for Tuesday. The Bibury Club open the pleadings on Wednesday, and Stockbridge on the following day. There will also be a meeting on Monday at Macclesfield, and at Ludlow on Wednesday and Thursday.

The principal Cricketing fixtures are the match on Monday at Lord's, between the M. C. C. and Ground and County of Sussex; one on Tuesday, at Kennington Oval, between the South London and Shoreham Clubs; one Thursday, at Lord's, between the M. C. C. and Ground and the Oxford University (return match), an All England match at the Oval on the same day; and on Saturday, at Eton, between the M. C. C. and Etonians.

The Aquatic calendar is virtually blank.

HAMPTON RACES.

We were once in the habit of considering hunting at Epping, racing at Hampton, and fishing in the Serpentine, as the three great types of peaceful enjoyment. We suspected, however, last year, that the natural simplicity of the second of these recreations was being corrupted; and last week the fact became established that the authorities are trying to spoil Hampton Races by making them good.

Formerly there was a character—a very bad one, it may be urged, but still there was a distinctiveness about the little festival which gave it an interest quite unique. Har to itself. With the exception of some of those determined turtles, who would back their horses to beat anything in Egypt provided the Pacha would give them a clear course, and who would be attracted to Kamschatka by the programme of a good steeple-chase, there were few persons present from London. The spectators chiefly consisted of the inhabitants of the towns and villages adjacent; the owners of many of the horses were quiet men residing in the vicinity of "the Hurst," whose notions of a stud would have caused a sneer on the lip of Scott or Day, if those eminent artists in horse-flesh had considered the men worthy of any attention at all; and a few of the half-bred animals themselves must have been familiar acquaintances of those who were about to make their money upon their merits. The London public cared as much for the result of the contests as they would for the name of the victor in a jumping-in-sacks match, and the matter seldom attracted general attention except when one of the so-called "half-bred" horses turned out (like the heroes with marks on their arms in melodrama) to be of irreproachable ancestry on either side. In the case of a winning horse, this little discovery did not affect the matter favourably as it would with the long-lingered "Augustus" of a romance; and the fact of such concealments having existed serves principally to point out one respect in which the horse is certainly superior to man. The former animal, when of good descent, has been known to pass through life modestly as a "half-bred;" the latter, if of the obscurest origin, will frequently indulge in false boasts as to the nobility of his blood.

Hampton Races, then, until within the last two years, bore no more resemblance to those of Epsom than a village fair is like that of Greenwich; and the great, but now, alas! departed glory of the course—the "Master of the Ceremonies," we believe, he was called—was no more like his successor, the intelligent, but uncharacteristic, Mr. Hibburd, than "Richardson's Show" is like the Royal Italian Opera.

Speaking of that temple of art, Richardson's Show, leads us naturally enough to the subject of amateur performances. Hampton Races were at one time a species of amateur performances; not, however, of mere amateurs—we shall, perhaps, have to look among a lower class of animals than horses for their parallels. We mean, those amateurs who have received some little instruction; who have learned just enough to be able to forsake nature, although they can never succeed in reaching art. Well, every one knows that a great deal of fun, not precisely of the dramatic kind, is what is expected at a representation of this kind—which is the reason why tragedies are almost always selected. But once educate the amateur, and you spoil him; teach him only to walk the stage properly, and he is a ruined man. None of the Greenly will go to see him afterwards, because it is not certain that he will make them laugh.

Occasionally, however, we must confess, one meets with an amateur who ultimately becomes more like a professional. Such was the case with Mr. Hampton equestrian theatre went far to convince us, that, although our art has been rather damaged by the superior style in which the entertainment is now given, it is not impossible at work, and that the exhibition will at last be a perfect one; or (to reverse the natural course of things) she "mounts," which once appeared so ridiculous to us, will, in due time, and under the patronage of the Jockey Club, assume all the dignity of the "mountain."

Hampton Races, then, have now lost their original character to a great extent, and are becoming more like a mere imitation of Ascot than anything else. Even the assemblage has been even larger this present one, and there is every probability that it will continue annually to increase. Harsh, however, should actually be the case, we are afraid that some means must be taken for the repression of public curiosity; there was scarcely sufficient space (to speak of "accommodation" would be absurd) for the crowds who were present on Thursday, and—but to be short, it is a mathematical impossibility to stow away half London on Moulsey Hurst.

There was one peculiarity about the people who hurried to the half fair, half-race, on Thursday: no one knew which horse was the favourite. Of course, there were half betting-men with "Ruff's Guide to the Turf" by heart, and thoroughgoing gentlemen, now all about ostrich feathers, whiskers, jockey, and other mysteries not over intelligible to the uninitiated, without reference to any "guide" whatever; and these men knew the favourite, but they kept it a secret, or in one case only imparted the information with a more profound and melancholy ignorance as to the merits of a race, and a more daring preference for the beauties of nature (though we must confess to the charms of the surrounding scenery), was never perhaps exhibited. Nor was this all; for actually caught a gentleman eating a sandwich after the horses had started, and it was rumoured that a young lady was seen sketching only a few moments before the animals—i. e. the more fortunate ones—reached the winning-post.

Candidly, we don't think the public look upon Hampton Races as mere races. To begin with, they are wrong if they do; for it is ha'f a fair: and, then, many of the people who there seem to have been undecided between an excursion to the races and a pic-nic, and very wisely to have united the two. Indeed we strongly recommend the Thursday in the race-week to pic-nic parties. A pic-nic in a fine season, with Ewin a race added to it, is indeed a delight.

It is amusing, if one does know the horses which are going to run, to observe the airs which certain animals give themselves at Hampton who would be beneath notice at Ascot. We have seen Hampton having been entered with a brougham; we have not been thought worthy of being placed at the very end of a betting-list; we have seen these quadrupeds canter up to the winning-post as if they had been so many Flying Dutchmen, when, in fact, they had just as much chance as anything more wonderful than a no-sale so, by a horse who never won anything particular, out of a celebrated loser." Ninth-rate London actors assume in a similar manner, when they go to the provinces: at Hampton, we have the "starring" system among horses.

Looking philosophically at the question, we have found it impossible to decide whether the increased number of visitors (facilitated, of course, by the railway) has been the cause of the improvements in the races, or whether the improvement in the races has occasioned the increase in the number of visitors.

In conclusion, Hampton has one particular merit. It is one of those few racing places which possess attractions of their own, quite independently of the race-course.

WEDNESDAY.

The STAND PLATE of 30 sovs, added to a sweepstakes of 5 sovs each.—Sir J. Hawley's Queensberry (G. Brown), 1. Captain Lowther's Bastinado (Dockeray), 2.

The SCURRY and MIDDLESEX STAKES (handicap) of 20 sovs each, with 50 added. Lord Exeter's Little Jack (J. Mann), 1. Mr. E. Jones's Doolity (S. Mann), 2.

The CLAREMONT STAKES of 10 sovs each.—Lord Strathmore's FAUX PAS (Wakefield), 1. Mr. Gully's Solomon (A. Day), 2.

The COMMERCIAL STAKES of 15 sovs each. -Mr. Carew's Ers (Captain Little), 1. Mr. Rowley's Tit-bit (Owner), 2.

A PLATE of 30 sovs.—Heats.—Mr. H. Mills's Equiria (Maton), 1. Mr. Bagley's Christiana (Thick), 2.

THURSDAY.

The RAILWAY PLATE of £50.—Sherbert filly, 1. Kremlin filly, 2.

The SCURRY STAKES. -Lady Frances, 1. Laundry Maid, 2.

The QUEEN'S PLATE. -Mr. Powney's Kathleen (Maton), 1. Sir J. Hawley's Queensberry, 2.

MONDAY.—A small amount of business was done at the following prices :—

SURREY AND MIDDLESEX STAKES. 3 to 1 agst Doolity (1).

NORTHUMBERLAND PLATE

5 to 1 agst Knight of Gwynne (1) | 8 to 1 agst Rabbi | 8 to 1 agst Raby

ST LEGER

5 to 2 agst Voltigeur | 17 to 1 agst Knight of Avenel | 25 to 1 agst King of Oude
5 to 1 —— Cincher (1) | 20 to 1 —— Ma'die

DERBY.

25 to 1 agst Hippolytus (1) | 20 to 1 agst Bounds Dundee | 40 to 1 agst Golna
30 to 1 —— Newminster | 40 to 1 —— Trumpington | 50 to 1 —— Cincher (1)

LATEST BETTING.

SURREY AND MIDDLESEX STAKES.

5 to 1 agst Kithiron | 5 to 1 agst Knight of Gwynne | 8 to 1 agst Glaucus
10 to 1 agst Snowstorm

GOODWOOD STAKES.—15 to 1 agst Windischgraetz (1)

GOODWOOD CUP.

6 to 1 agst Montes. | 6 to 1 agst Orestes. | 7 to 1 agst Cossack. | 8 to 1 agst Pitsford.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.

The annual contests amongst the yachts of this club, for the Grand Challenge Cup, took place on Wednesday, but, although the day was admirably suited for an excursion, there was too little wind to test the weather-powers of the yachts. The following yachts were entered to contend :—

Names.	Tons.	Owners
Whisper	15	Thos. Everitt, Esq.
Isabel	10	Hollis Knox, Esq.
Rival	10	J. T. Helme, Esq.
Alligator	20	Henry J. Smith, Esq.
Frolic	18	Alfred Cox, Esq.
Mor Park	20	Sir E. Browne, Bart.
Phantom	20	R. Lane, Esq.

It was a fine race, one minute per ton being allowed to all yachts exceeding ten tons to those not exceeding it, and half a minute to those which did exceed it. Yachts not exceeding ten tons to allow half a minute per ton to those of lesser tonnage. The Challenge Cup had been originally presented to the club by J. T. Hawes, Esq., and was held by Mr. E. Brown, the owner of the Mor Park, the conditions of the race requiring that it should be won two consecutive seasons by the same yacht to become the permanent property of the owner. The distance to be sailed was from Blackwall to Gravesend and back. The whole of the boats were at their stations, with the exception of the Lizzet, which had been withdrawn.

The start took place under the direction of Mr. E. Browne, the Rear-Commodore, at five minutes past eleven, and the usual alacrity was exhibited by the whole of the crews in setting the immense quantity of canvass with which each boat was covered. At this moment the steamer Ivanhoe made a dash to the front to show a flag out, and each courted the "catspaws" with which they were ever and anon favoured. The Rival got a slight start, the Frolic was second, the Alligator third, the Phantom, and the Whisper fifth. Zephyrus was ordered for a month in the neighbourhood of the contending yachts, and the Frolic gallantly led the way down, followed in gallions by the Phantom; the Rival, Whisper, and Alligator lying in their wake. Again the wools were beckoned, and for a minute or two there was as smooth as a bowling-green, the yachts being indebted to the tide under them for their tardy progress.

The three leading boats rounded at Gravesend in the following order :—The Frolic, 4 h. 36 m. 53 s.; Whisper, 4 h. 57 m. 32 s.; Phantom, 5 h. 3 m. 55 s. After rounding they all set square-sails, and each began to make the best of her way back. The advantage which the Frolic had at the time was fortunately maintained, and the boats arrived at Blackwall in the following order :—The Frolic first, at 7 h. 28 m. 40 s.; the Whisper, 7 h. 51 m.; the Phantom, 8 h. 1 m. 10 s. The very handsome prize was duly presented to Mr. Alfred Cox, the owner of the Frolic, by the Rear-Commodore, with a very deserved compliment upon the nautical skill of all parties.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

SHIPS IN THE ROYAL NAVY.—On Monday a return, obtained by Mr. Adams, was printed, showing that the total number of vessels in commission and in ordinary on the 1st of January, 1848, was 448, and the total number on the 1st of January, 1850, 402. Of these, 13 were first-rates, 32 second-rates, 20 third-rates, 26 fourth-rates, 41 fifth-rates, 29 sixth-rates, 77 sloops and brigs, 11 packets, 20 surveying-vessels, troop and store-ships, 20 cutters, schooners, and yachts, 137 steam-vessels, 12 mail-packets, and 8 guard-ships (steamers). The total number of vessels sold, lost, and broken up since the 1st of January, 1848, was 95. The total quantity of timber expended in the construction and repair of ships of war in 1847 was 63,617 loads, and, in 1848, 61,441. The total number of persons employed in the dockyards in 1847 was 13,138; and in 1848, 11,898.

CONTRACT FOR SMALL-ARMS.—The contract of 60,000 old flint muskets have been selected from store, and are to be brazed with bumps for the use of copper-caps—50,000 for land service, and 10,000 for the marines. They are to have new stocks and new locks.

THE INFANTRY SWORD.—The Infantry are about to have a steel scabbard, as the leather ones are constantly breaking. The sheath will be no larger than the one now in use. This will be a great improvement, and needs no comment.

ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY, WOOLWICH.—The usual half-yearly examination of the cadets belonging to the practical class of the Royal Military Academy took place on Tuesday in the hall of the Institution in the Royal Arsenal, when several of the students passed for commissions in the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers, to which they will be gazetted in a few days. Lieutenant-General Sir Thomas Downman, after congratulating the gentlemen cadets on their satisfactory manner in which they had passed their examination, called forward Mr. William Stirling, and presented to him a regulation sword for general behaviour and excellent military conduct in support of discipline when a corporal; and to Mr. Jebb, under-officer."

ROYAL NAVAL SCHOOL.—The annual examination and distribution of prizes to the pupils of this school took place on Tuesday morning at the Naval School, New-cross, Rear-Admiral Bowles, C.B., M.P., in the chair. The report of the committee in the various branches of study were read by the secretary. They were very satisfactory in every respect. The chairman having distributed the prizes, the proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the gallant officer for presiding on the occasion.

Tuesday being the thirty-fifth anniversary of the memorable battle of Waterloo, the customary ceremony of trooping the guards for the duty of the day was at an unusually early hour this morning. At seven o'clock the regiments in honour at Buckingham and St. James's palaces, and the minor guards furnished by the battalions quartered in the metropolis, were marched on to the parade-ground facing the Horse Guards in St. James's-park. The Scottish Life Guards and cape of the Foot Guards were decorated with laurel leaves. The line having taken double open order, was minutely inspected by the field officer on duty; the guards of honour at the palace were then marched to the Park-road-wood, preceded by the band, to receive the colours of the Foot Guards, which were surmounted by an immense branch of laurel. The guards then took up a position on the right of the line, the remainder of the troops saluting, with arms presented, as the colours passed.

The American papers tell us that a Mrs. Swisshelm, who had acquired some celebrity as an editor, has turned congressional reporter, and is now one of the hons of the Senate Chamber. The New Englander says :—"The old reporters eye her askance, and do not seem to relish such an intrusion upon their gallery; but she don't care for them."

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The English Market was rather heavy at the commencement of the week, apprehensions existing that the result of the Cuban expedition might yet lead to a cessation of friendly relations between Spain and the United States. Consols on Monday were languid, at 95¾ to 96 ex div., and on Tuesday receded to 95¾ ⅞; the closing quotations, however, being the same as on the preceding day. But, on Wednesday, greater confidence prevailed, and an advance to 96 to ⅛ for the opening was the last quotation. The question to be put to Lord John Russell, in the House of Commons, with regard to mercantile intentions upon the late defeat in the House of Lords, excited some conversation in the City on Thursday, but without any detriment to prices. Money continued so plentiful, and in such superabundance, that dividends must still further increase the amount of capital for investment, added to the present comparatively quiet state of Continental affairs, form, together, fair grounds for anticipating a much larger business. Bills and India Bonds are in demand, and Bank Stock has an upward tendency. The market was firm at the close of the week, prices standing—Bank Stock, 208; Reduced, 96¾; New 3½ per Cent. Annuities, 98¾; Long Annuities, to expire Jan. 1860, 19 3-16; India Bonds, £1000, 96 dis.; Ditto, under £1000, 88 pm; South Sea Stock, Old Annuities, 95¾; Consols for Account, 96¼; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 67 pm; Ditto, £500, June, 67 pm; Ditto, Small, June, 67 pm.

The principal feature in the Foreign Market has been the various fluctuations in Mexican. From the tenor of the advices by last week's foreign mail, a decline in prices occurred on Monday, the closing quotations being 30 ex div. On Tuesday the market again yielded 29½, being the lowest quotation. But on Wednesday prices rallied, the committee having notified that the Severn had brought to England on behalf of the bondholders, 60,726 dollars, which, added to the sum already deposited in the Bank of England, makes 723,312 dollars. Quotations rose upon this to 30⅜, but a reaction has since reduced them to 30¼. Russian Stock continues to creep up, and Danish is also advancing. Spanish Stock is firm, at an advance upon last week's prices, and the market is generally good, at the following rates:—Brazilian Bonds, New, 1843, 85¾; Buenos Ayres Bonds, Six per Cents, 86; Danish Bonds, 1825, Three per Cents, 73; Ditto, Five per Cents, 1847, 102; Dutch, 2½ per Cent. Certificates, 59; Ditto, Two-and-a-Half per Cent., 54; Mexican, Five per Cent., 1846, Account, 30½; Portuguese Five per Cents, 85½; Russian Bonds, 109½; Ditto Scrip, 4 p. 1; Spanish Five per Cents., 1840, 17½; Ditto, 1841, 14½; Ditto, 1842, 13¾; Ditto, 1849, 12½; Ditto, Three per Cent., Account, 38½; Venezuela Bonds, Deferred, 11¼; Dutch Four per Cent. Certificates, 88½.

The Share Market has been quite so active during the past week, prices consequently yielding in a few instances. The closing rates are—Buckinghamshire, 17½; Caledonian, 86; Ditto, New, £10 Pref., 9⅞; Eastern Counties, 7⅞; Ditto, Extension, 5 per Cent., No. 3, 6 pm.; Great Northern, £50 Shares, 5 per Cent. Pref., 10½; Gt. Western, 58½; Ditto, New £17, 7¾; Hull and So.by, 97; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 46; Ditto, Fifths, 2½; Ditto, New, Gua. 6 per Cent., 142; Ditto (W. Riding Union), 3⅛; Leeds and Bradford, 94½; London and Blackwall, 4¼; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 70; Ditto, New, 12½; London and Southwestern, 60; Midland, 36½; Ditto. £50 shares, 38½; Ditto, Consolid. Bristol and Birmingham, 6 per cent., 123; North British, 7⅞; North Staffordshire, 6½; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 9½; Scottish Central, 12½; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 6 per cent., 123; North British, 7⅞; North Staffordshire, 6½; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 9½; Scottish Central, 12½; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 6 per cent., 123; Scottish Midland Junction, 2½; Shrewsbury and Chester, 3½; Stockton and Darlington, 8¾; Vale of Neath, 4½; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 19½; Ditto, Newcastle Extension, 9½; Ditto, Great North of England, Preference, —; York and North Midland, 15½; Ditto, Preference, 7½; Boulogne and Amiens, 4½; East Indian, 7½; Paris and Rouen, 2½; Sambre and Meuse, 2½; Australasian Bank of London, 24.

Very little business was transacted in the Consol Market on Friday, and the quotations had a downward tendency. The Three per Cents, ex. div., were done at 95¾ 96. In the Unfunded Debt very few sales or purchases took place. Foreign Bonds and Railway Shares were flat, but not lower.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—Increased supplies of English wheat—5,510 quarters—have been received up to our market this week, coastwise. To-day the receipts were large, were trifling; but we had several of Monday's unsold samples on offer. Owing to the prevailing fine weather for the growing crops, and the small number of buyers in attendance, the demand for all kinds of wheat of home produce was in a very inactive state, nearly the week's quotations. From abroad upwards of 12,000 quarters of wheat have come in. Fine qualities of both red and white were held at full rates of currency. In the middling and inferior kinds next to nothing was doing. In English barley scarcely a transaction took place. The supply of foreign was seasonably large. All kinds were a slow sale, but not cheaper. Malting produce was in ample supply, and heavy demand, at last week's prices. Not only any English oats were on show, and the quantity of foreign was not large. On the whole the trade was steady, at late rates. Beans, peas, Indian corn, and flour were very dull in sale.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 2510; barley, 520; malt, 2930; oats, 7021; flour, 1560. Irish: oats, —. Foreign: wheat, 12,940; barley, 6570; oats, 12,523; flour, —quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 37s to 42s; ditto, white, 40s to 48s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 37s to 40s; ditto, white, 40s to 42s; rye, 26s to 28s; grinding barley, 19s to 21s; malting ditto, 23s to 25s; malting ditto, 26s to 27s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 46s to 48s; brown ditto, 43s to 45s; Kingston and Ware, 48s to 52s. Chevalier, 53s to 55s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 15s to 18s; potato ditto, 17s to 22s; Youghal and Cork, black, 14s to 16s; ditto, white, 16s to 18s; tick beans, new, 25s to 26s; ditto, old, 24s to 27s; grey peas, —; maple, 24s to 26s; white, 23s to 24s; harlers, 25s to 27s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 32s to 37s; Suffolk, 27s to 32s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 27s to 29s per 280 lbs.—Foreign. Dantzig red wheat, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 30s to 32s per barrel; Canada, 30s to 32s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—As the season for sowing is now over, the demand for all seeds is heavy, and the quotations are almost nominal.

Linseed, English, sowing, 54s to 56s; Baltic, crushing, 43s to 42s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 39s to 44s; Hempseed, 32s to 36s per quarter; Coriander, 16s to 20s per cwt.; brown Mustard seed, 8s to 11s; white ditto, 6s to 9s per bushel. Tares, 3s 6d to 4s 6d per bushel. English rapeseed, new, £24 to £25 per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, £6 to £6 5s per 1000; foreign, £5 5s to £7 10s per 1000; Rapeseed cakes, £4 to £4 5s per ton. Canary, 50s to 60s per quarter. English Clover-seed, red, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; trefoil, —s to —s; ribgrass, —s to —s; Foreign, red, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; Dutch, —s to —s; Hamburgh, —s to —s per cwt.

Average of Weekly Average.—Wheat, 39s 11d; barley, 21s 9d; oats, 16s 11d; rye, 27s 8d; beans, 32s 10d; peas, 27s 3d.

The Last Quarter's Average.—Wheat, 37s 8d; barley, 22s 5d; oats, 16s 1d; rye, 31s 11d; beans, 32s 8d; peas, 26s 10d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 1s 0d; barley, 1s 0d; oats, 1s 0d; rye, 1s 0d; beans, 1s 0d; peas, 1s 0d.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 6d to 6½d; of household ditto, 5d to 5½d per 4lb loaf.

TEA.—The demand for common sound congou is steady, at 9d to 9½ per lb. In other kinds of the last three qualities, 10s 6d to 11s per cwt. Good Assams meet a steady sale, at 1s per lb.

Sugar.—More business has been doing in raw sugar than for some time past, and prices have consequently improved. Refined goods are in limited request. Grocery lumps, 69s 6d to 69s, and good grocery, 62s 6d to 64s per cwt. English crushed dull, at 57s 6d to 59s.

COFFEE.—Native Ceylons are quoted at 42s per cwt. for good ordinary. Plantation as well as foreign coffees are somewhat neglected.

RICE.—Bengal parcels are a slow sale, at 10s 3d to 10s 6d for good bold pearly white. Foreign quiet.

Provisions.—Since our last report a steady business has been doing in foreign butter, at 72s to 74s per cwt. Friesland is quoted at 64s to 66s; fine Kiel and Hanover, 62s to 66s; and inferior and surplus, 44s and upwards. New Irish butter is coming forward. Of bacon, the demand is extremely small. Prime mild cured of year Curing, Cornish, and Kilkenny, 56s to 62s. Cork, 60s to 63s; Waterford, 64s to 66s, and Limerick, 64s to 66s per cwt. In English, butter very little is doing. Fine mostly Dorset, 72s per cwt.; and for delivery during the last three months, 76s. Devon, 62s to 70s per cwt; fresh, 6s to 10s per dozen lbs. Bacon firm, and quite as dear. Prime small Waterford, landed, 56s to 58s; heavy, 50s to 54s per cwt. Hams, Limerick bacon, has advanced 1s to 2s per cwt. American is dull at former prices.

Tallow.—P Y C on the spot is in moderate request, at 36s 9d to 37s; and for delivery during the last three months, 36s 6d to 36s 9d per cwt. Town tallow, 36s 3d per cwt, net cash.

Oils. Linseed oil is in good request, at 30s per cwt. Otherwise, our markets is heavy.

Spirits.—Rum, Jamaica—Kelshaw hay, £2 8s to £3 14s; other ditto, £2 5s to £3; and strawy, £, 2s to £1 10s per load.

Spirits.—The brandy market is still far from active; yet prices are fairly supported. Rum and corn spirits command very little attention.

Wool.—The public sales are progressing steadily. The total quantity to be offered is 46,000 bales. Good and fine qualities have purchased full prices, but the inferior kinds have given way 5d per lb.

Provisions.—Old qualities are now out of season. New ones are selling at from 3s 0d to 16s 0d per cwt.

Potatoes (Friday).—East Adairs, 1l; Holywell, 14s; Tanfield Moor, 12s 6d; Gosforth, 13s 9d; Washer, 13s; Howden, 13s 6d; and Whitworth, 12s per ton

Hops (Friday).—The accounts received from the plantations this week are generally favourable. The bine has made rapid progress from in Kent and Sussex. Fine colours hops are in moderate demand, at full prices. In all other kinds very little is doing:

Sussex, 4l 4s to 4l 10s; East Kent pockets, 5l 5s to 6l 15s; new Weald of Kent ditto, 4l 5s to 5l 5s; new Sussex ditto, 4l 5s to 4l 15s; new Farnhams, 6l 10s to 7l 15s, Yearling Kents, 3l 10s to 4l 10s; old ditto, 1l 10s to 2l 10s; old hops, 1l to 2l 5s.

Smithfield (Friday).—Notwithstanding that the supply of beasts in to-day's market was limited, owing to the time of year considered, the demand for the dead description of stock ruled heavy, at barely Monday's decline in the quotations. The number of sheep was seasonably large, and of full average quality. Calves were in poor request at barely last week's rates. In consequence of the arrival of another 900 Marines offering from Germany. Prime small lambs sold at previous rates. In other breeds very little business was transacted. Calves were in large supply and heavy demand, at very dear prices. Pigs are little wanted, at late rates, but the value of meat is nominal. Beasts, 3,140 in number, were disposed of at from 3s 4d to 4s 2d per 8lbs.

Sheep, 17,200 in number, were disposed of at from 3s 8d to 4s 6d per 8lbs.

Calves, 280 in number, were disposed of at from 4s 0d to 5s 0d per 8lbs.

Pigs, 240 in number, were disposed of at from 2s 8d to 3s 4d per 8lbs.

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday). These markets were excessively heavy to-day, and prices were with difficulty supported:

Per 8lb by the carcass.—Coarse and inferior beef, 2s 8d to 3s 4d; middling ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime large ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime small ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; large ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; middling ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime ditto, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; prime coarse woolled ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; large lambs, 5s 0d to 5s 4d; small ditto, 5s 4d to 5s 8d; prime small ditto, 5s 8d to 6s 0d; large hogs, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; neat small porkers, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; lambs, 5s 0d to 5s 4d. Suckling calves, 18s to 22s; and quarter of store pigs, 16s to 21s each. Total supplies: Beasts, 320; cows, 120; sheep and lambs, 16,200; calves, 320; pigs, 200. Foreign supplies. Beasts, 1000; sheep and lambs, 800; calves, 200. Scotch: Beasts, 75; sheep, 81

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, JUNE 18.

LORD CHAMBERLAIN'S OFFICE, MAY 27

Notice is hereby given, that her Majesty will hold a Levee at St. James's Palace, on Wednesday, the 3rd day of July next.

Notice is hereby given, that her Majesty will hold a Drawingroom at St. James's Palace, on Tuesday, the 9th day next, at two o'clock.

BANKRUPTS

C ANNELL [illegible], grocer, picture-dealer, Q Great Tower-street, City, builder. W J BUCK, Shrubland Cottages, Queen's-road, Dalston, dealer. H WOOLLEY, West-terrace, Upper Kennington-lane, Lambeth, and manufacturer. W GRIFFITHS, Bartlett-street, Hoxton, Middlesex, brass-wire-bed manufacturer. A and W PRICE, Tonbridge-place, New-road, ironmongers. J CAGLIS, Noble-street, Wood-street, City, victualler. N HEDGE, Putney-bridge, Putney, surrey. J DONEY, Lumber, Bermondsey-street, Southwark, carrier. B BROWN, Newton, Montgomeryshire, coach builder

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

J and S LIVINGSTON, Glasgow and Leith, merchants. T HAMILTON, Glasgow, manufacturer. J BEATTIE, Dundee, baker.

FRIDAY, JUNE 21.

WAR-OFFICE, JUNE 21.

2nd Dragoons: Cornet and Adjutant W Miller to have the rank of Lieutenant; Cornet J A Freeman to be Lieutenant, vice Amphlett.

4th Light Dragoons. Capt A F Steele to be Captain, vice Read.

7th Foot: Lieut F Mills to be Captain, vice Grant; Lieut D Fraser, to be Lieutenant, vice Mills; Ensign B B Beresford to be Lieutenant, vice Fraser; Lieut J Somerville to be Captain, vice Colborne; Ensign F W Buxton to be Lieutenant, vice Peacocke. 31st: Second Lieut J Tisdell to be First Lieut, vice Barnard. 37th: Ensign G H Crampton to be Lieutenant, vice Becher; Ensign R G Dennis to be Ensign, vice Crampton. 54th: Ensign G B Harman to be Lieut, vice Forsee. 44th: Lieut W Parker to be Capt, vice Massy. 50th: Capt B G Wyvern to be Capt, vice Brevi.Major G F Levy. 84th: Ensign A F Loyd to be Lieut, vice Wyvern. 69th: Lieut F G W Fearon to be Capt, vice Cole.

Memorandum: Lieut Col Sir J Scott, K.C.B., to have the rank of Colonel.

UNATTACHED.—Capt the Hon J Colborne to be Majr

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, JUNE 18.

Royal Regiment of Artillery. Brevet Major W Hutt to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Macbean; Second Captain A G Burrows to be Captain, vice Fraser; First Lieutenant G J Strange to be Second Captain, vice Burrows; Second Lieutenant F Lund to be First Lieutenant, vice Strange.

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY THE LORD-LIEUTENANT

Royal Mid Lothian Yeomanry Cavalry. Lieut Sir A M Gibson, Bart, to be Captain, vice Ramsay. Cornet G Mitchell-Innes to be Lieutenant, vice Sir A M Gibson, Bart; W Ramsay to be Cornet, vice Mitchell-Innes.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

T CROFT, Nag's Head, Ivery mahala, Whitechapel, cow-keeper. W and H HARRIS, Wrexham paper-mills, Denbigh. J MOODY, Aldersgate-street, stock-manufacturer.

BANKRUPTS.

R COPLAND, Union-street, Whitechapel, linen-draper. THE GENERAL COMMISSION, SHIP, LOAN, and INSURANCE COMPANY. H WILLIAMS and J WELCH, Great Distaff-lane, City, builders. B P BLACKWELL, Vernon-buildings, Gray's-inn, solicitor. Joseph S GILLATT, Chapel-street, Grosvenor-square, dentist. J BUGNARD, Stamford Rivers, Essex, baker. J CHURCH, Wilson-street, Bristol, draper. W H SMITH, Mere, Wiltshire, Montgomeryshire, ironmonger. W JAMES, Beaufort, Brecknockshire, provision-dealer. J MURRAY, Sunderland, Durham, shipbuilder.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

T HENDERSON, Edinburgh, baker. W NAIR, Glasgow, dealer in flour. J WADDEL, Dundee, manufacturer. A M'LARLINE, Blairgowrie, baker. J HOUSTON, Paisley, draper.

BIRTHS.

At 21, Lowndes-street, Viscountess Chelsea, of a son.—At 66, Chester-square, the Hon Mrs Anson, wife of the Secretary of the Admiralty, of a son and daughter.—At 81, Lennard-place, Mrs Lennard, wife of the Hon Mrs Tottenham, of a daughter.—At Broome Place, Norfolk, the wife of the Rev John Jarrett Raven, Rector of Loddon, of a daughter.—At Sandringham Rectory, the wife of the Rev R Drake, of a daughter.—At Middleton-Stoney, Oxon, the wife of the Rev Thomas Ramsay, of a son.—At Teddington Manor-house, the wife of Capt Bennet, of her Majesty's 7th Lancers, of a daughter.—On the 18th instant, at 34, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, the wife of W. C. Courtney, Esq., of a daughter.—On the 19th instant, at 29, Devonshire-square, the wife of Charles R. Ritchie, Esq., Grenadier Guards, of a son.

MARRIAGES

On the 12th instant, at Trinity Church, Ryde, Isle of Wight, by the Rev Arthur John Wade, [illegible] Rector of Bursledon, Hants, [illegible] Rector of Ashton, Northamptonshire, and [illegible] the Hon Mrs Tottenham, of a daughter.—At Broome Place, Norfolk, the wife of the Rev John Jarrett Raven, Rector of Loddon, of a daughter.—At Sandringham Rectory, the wife of the Rev R Drake, of a daughter.—At Middleton-Stoney, Oxon, the wife of the Rev Thomas Ramsay, of a son.—At Teddington Manor-house, the wife of Capt Bennet, of her Majesty's 7th Lancers, of a daughter.—On the 18th instant, at 34, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, the wife of W. C. Courtney, Esq., of a daughter.—On the 19th instant, at 29, Devonshire-square, the wife of Charles R. Ritchie, Esq., Grenadier Guards, of a son.

MARRIAGES

On the 12th instant, at Trinity Church, Ryde, Isle of Wight, by the Rev Arthur John Wade, [illegible] Rector of Bursledon, Hants, [illegible] Rector of Ashton, Northamptonshire, and [illegible] the Hon Mrs Tottenham, of a daughter.—At Broome Place, Norfolk, the wife of the Rev John Jarrett Raven, Rector of Loddon, of a daughter.—At Sandringham Rectory, the wife of the Rev R Drake, of a daughter.—At Middleton-Stoney, Oxon, the wife of the Rev Thomas Ramsay, of a son.—At Teddington Manor-house, the wife of Capt Bennet, of her Majesty's 7th Lancers, of a daughter.—On the 18th instant, at 34, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, the wife of W. C. Courtney, Esq., of a daughter.—On the 19th instant, at 29, Devonshire-square, the wife of Charles R. Ritchie, Esq., Grenadier Guards, of a son.

MARRIAGES

On the 12th instant, at Trinity Church, Ryde, Isle of Wight, by the Rev Arthur John Wade, [illegible] Rector of Bursledon, Hants, [illegible] Rector of Ashton, Northamptonshire, and [illegible] the Hon Mrs Tottenham, of a daughter.—At Broome Place, Norfolk, the wife of the Rev John Jarrett Raven, Rector of Loddon, of a daughter.—At Sandringham Rectory, the wife of the Rev R Drake, of a daughter.—At Middleton-Stoney, Oxon, the wife of the Rev Thomas Ramsay, of a son.—At Teddington Manor-house, the wife of Capt Bennet, of her Majesty's 7th Lancers, of a daughter.—On the 18th instant, at 34, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, the wife of W. C. Courtney, Esq., of a daughter.—On the 19th instant, at 29, Devonshire-square, the wife of Charles R. Ritchie, Esq., Grenadier Guards, of a son.

MARRIAGES

On the 12th instant, at Trinity Church, Ryde, Isle of

NEW BOOKS, &c.

MR. COLBURN'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.
13, Great Marlborough-street.

I.
THE HISTORY of RELIGION. By the celebrated JOHN EVELYN, Author of "Sylva," &c. Now first published, by permission of W. J. EVELYN, Esq., M.P., from the Original M.S., in the Library at Wotton. Edited, with Notes, by the Rev. M. H. EVANSON, B.A. 2 vols., 8vo. Portrait, &c.

II.
GERMANIA: Its COURTS, CAMPS, and PEOPLE. By the BARONESS BLAZE DE BURY. 2 vols 8vo. (In the press.)

III.
THE COUNTRY GEAR-BOOK; or, the Field, the Forest, and the Fireside. By WILLIAM HOWITT, Author of "The Book of the Seasons," &c. 1 vol, with Numerous Illustrations, 10s. 6d. bound. (Just ready.)

THE NEW NOVELS.

I.
ADELAIDE LINDSAY. Edited by the Author of "Emilia Wyndham," "The Wilmingtons," &c. (Just ready.)

II.
MORNINGS at MATLOCK. By Dr. SHELTON MACKENZIE, Author of "Titian," an Art Novel." (Just ready.)

III.
LA VENDÉE; an Historical Romance. By ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Esq. Brigo, &c. Master. 3 vols. (Nearly ready.)
"A very interesting and spirit-stirring tale, in which the exciting scenes of the Vendean Campaign are depicted with much force. As an historical novel, its charms are many."—Messenger.

IV.
ANNE DYSART, the SCOTCH MINISTER'S DAUGHTER. A Tale. (Now ready.)
"A fascinating work of art"—Examiner
"Very superior to the generality of novels."—Spectator.
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

NOTICE.—This day is published,
THE ILLUSTRATIONS of the REMAINS of ROMAN ART.
London: GEORGE BELL, 186, Fleet-street.

This day is published, in 8vo, with numerous Illustrations, price 8s. handsomely bound and gilt,
NINEVEH and PERSEPOLIS: an Historical Sketch of Ancient Assyria, Babylonia, Media, and Persia, with Notices of recent researches in those countries. By W. B. W. VAUX, M.A., of the British Museum.
London: ARTHUR HALL, VIRTUE, and Co., 25, Paternoster-row.

Now ready, crown octavo, price 5s.
FUN, POETRY, and PATHOS; or, the COSMOPOLITA: a Miscellany. By WILLIAM YOUNG BROWNE. With a superb Fairy Illustration, by Leech
EFFINGHAM WILSON, Royal Exchange.

Just published, 1 vol., crown octavo, 6s. cloth,
THE ENGLISH SETTLER'S GUIDE through IRISH DIFFICULTIES, or, a Handbook for Ireland, with Reference to Present Circumstances.
Dublin: HODGES and SMITH, Grafton-street. London: J. W. PARKER, West Strand.

OPENING OF THE SOUTH WALES RAILWAY.
Second Edition, much enlarged, with Maps and Cuts, price 8s. 6d.,
THE BOOK of SOUTH WALES, the BRISTOL CHANNEL, and MONMOUTHSHIRE, and the WYE. By CHARLES FREDERICK CLIFFE, Author of "The Book of North Wales."—London: HAMILTON, ADAMS, & Co. Bristol: H. OLDLAND

Post 8vo, 3s. 6d. cloth,
A HANDBOOK of FIELD BOTANY; comprising the Flowering Plants and Ferns indigenous to the British Isles—arranged by the Natural system. By W. STEELE, A.B., M.B., T.C.D., &c.
"Here is another of those useful manuals which enable the student of British Botany to ascertain the names of plants without difficulty. The Book will be a very useful travelling companion."—Professor Lindley's Gardeners' Chronicle.
Dublin: JAMES MCGLASHAN, 21, D'Olier-street. London: WILLIAM S. ORR and Co. Sold by all booksellers.

This day is published in 8vo, illustrated with 240 Engravings, price 7s.
DRAWING from OBJECTS. By HANNAH BOLTON.—A new and practical work, showing the superiority of drawing from an object to the comparatively useless method of drawing from copies, and containing plain rules in still plainer language in relation to sketching from Nature. The whole forming a Handbook upon Drawing equally adapted for the Teacher, the Parent, and the Artisan; being an abstract of upwards of 30 years' practice, during the last six years, to nearly Two Thousand pupils
London: GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, 5, Paternoster-row.
Sold at the Rooms and Colonial School Depository, Gray's-inn-road.

PRESENT STATE OF EDUCATION IN AGRICULTURAL DISTRICTS. Price 6d.
A LETTER to the LORD BISHOP of NORWICH on the ESTABLISHMENT of ADULT SCHOOLS in AGRICULTURAL DISTRICTS. By a COUNTRY CLERGYMAN.
London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS. Norwich, CHARLES MUSKETT.

THE ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY VOLUME, PART III., price 1s, contains:—Sacred Streams, the River Clarence—The Captivity of Israel—The Vision of the Glory of God—The River Ulai. In Topography. Daniel's Vision—Haman and Mordecai—The River Jordan—The Dividing of the Waters—The Baptism of Our Lord—The Words of Jordan—The Translation of Elijah—Naaman, the Syrian—The Swimming Ox—Ezekiel's Vision, &c. &c.
C. COX, 12, King William-street, Strand.

RAILWAY LIBRARY.—NEW VOLUME. Price One Shilling, or cloth 1s. 6d. each.
"Each Volume contains a complete Work, printed with a clear type, on good paper and well bound."
HOPE LESLIE, BY MISS SEDGWICK.
Also, in this Popular Series,
The Light Dragoon
Sam Slick
Sense and Sensibility
Red Rover
Jane Sinclair
Waterwitch
Long Yarn
Last of the Mohicans
Prairie
Miriam Coulton
Pride and Prejudice
Hungarian
Lionel Lincoln, &c. &c.
London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and Co., Soho-square; and all booksellers, newsmen, and railway stations.

POPULAR LIBRARY.—NEW VOLUMES.
Price One Shilling in fancy bds, or bound in cloth, 1s 6d.
ELIOBARD. Two Vols. By BAYARD TAYLOR.
KNICKERBOCKER'S HISTORY OF NEW YORK. By WASHINGTON IRVING.
Also, in this Series,
WASHINGTON IRVING'S CONQUEST of GRENADA.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S LIFE and VOYAGES of COLUMBUS, 2 vols.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S COMPANIONS of COLUMBUS.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S TOUR on the PRAIRIES. Abbotsford and Newstead.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S SKETCH-BOOK.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S TALES of a TRAVELLER.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S KNICKERBOCKER HALL
WASHINGTON IRVING'S LIFE of OLIVER GOLDSMITH.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S LIFE of MAHOMET.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S SUCCESSORS of MAHOMET.
HERMANN MELVILLE'S TYPEE, or a Residence in the Marquesas.
HERMAN MELVILLE'S OMOO, or Adventures in the South Seas.
EMERSON'S REPRESENTATIVE MEN.
* * If ordering the above (the only One Shilling Edition), be pleased to specify in the POPULAR LIBRARY Edition.
London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and Co., Soho-square; all booksellers, newsvendors, and railway stations.

THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY'S PRIZE MODEL COTTAGES.—On the 20th of June was published, price 2s 6d in boards, and 3s in cloth, with seven pages of illustrative plates, the Prize Essay, specification and Estimates, with Plans, Sections, Elevations, and Working Drawings, for the construction of a PAIR of COTTAGES for AGRICULTURAL or other LABOURERS; by HENRY SCRIVENER, Esq., Architect, of Lincoln's-inn; being the same for which the Royal Agricultural Society of England awarded their First Prize.—London: ELLIS and SON, Threadneedle-street; and, by order, of all Booksellers

DR. GULLY ON THE WATER CURE.
Just published, Fourth Edition, price 6d.
THE WATER CURE in CHRONIC DISEASE; an Exposition of the Cause, Progress, and Termination of various Chronic Diseases of the Digestive Organs, Lungs, Nervous System, and Skin; and of their Treatment by Water, and other Hygienic means. By JAMES M. GULLY, M.D., Fellow of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, London.
London: JOHN CHURCHILL. Malvern: HENRY LAMB.

Lately published, 8vo, price 1s., or sent post free for 1s. 3d.,
BIELEFELD'S TARIFF of PAPIER-MACHE FRAMES, containing 114 Engravings, including the Patent Machine-carved, Burnished, Gilt, and Bronzed Frames, to be had in 11-ft lengths, without join, or made up complete.
"The Frames of Mr Bielefeld possess the best characteristic of fine carving" —Art Union Journal.
By her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.
The Works, 15, Wellington-street North, Strand.

CHEAP MUSIC, bound and classed in volumes.
Eighty shillings' worth at full market price for 8s., comprising Overtures, Airs from operas; Piano Solos, easy and difficult; Waltzes, Quadrilles, Piano Duets, Songs, Glees, and Sacred Music (Vocal), by Bellini, Balfe, Diabelli, Lütze, Labitzsky, Strauss, Schubert, and all the first authors. The public will observe the Music is all new, and clean copies. A choice of two hundred volumes always on sale at WALKER'S Q.Q Established Cheap Music Warehouse, 17, Soho-square. The new Catalogue gratis, on receipt of two stamps.

THE BOOK of 100 BEVERAGES; containing Receipts for all kinds of Summer Drinks, Effervescing Beverages, Sherbets, Lemon and Kali, Lemonades, Fruit Drinks, Syrups, Fruit Vinegars, &c., &c. By W. BERNHARD. HOULSTON and STONEMAN, Paternoster-row, and all booksellers and newsvendors.—Price 6d., cloth gilt; post free for eight stamps from the author, 3, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

CHESS.—A LADY will be happy to GIVE INSTRUCTION in this fashionable and interesting Pastime to LADIES in London or its vicinity. First references to pupils of distinction.—L. S., 3, Bloomsbury-square.

FRENCH and ITALIAN LANGUAGES.—Mons. LACOMBRAINE, a native of Orleans, once a Professor in Paris, Tours, and Florence, has just OPENED EVENING CLASSES for the FRENCH and ITALIAN LANGUAGES at 9, Frederick-place, 19, Seaz-street, Leicester-square.—Schools, private families, and Gentlemen attended at their residences. Terms moderate.—Apply personally, or by letter post-paid.

UNFURNISHED or FURNISHED HOUSE or VILLA RESIDENCE WANTED, at a distance of about Six, Eight, or Ten Miles from the Bank, suited for a retired gentleman's family. Please to state all particulars, and address B. C., care of Mr. Magnus, Stationer, 127, Fenchurch-street, City. N.B. Must be in a healthy situation

PICTURES.—GLASGOW.—Large Collection of good Paintings and Drawings on View for Private Sale, at ALLAN and FERGUSON'S Lithographic and Engraving Establishment, 70, Buchanan-street, Glasgow.—A few Cabinet Gems by old masters, of the very highest order of excellence.

CIRCULATING PORTFOLIO of WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS by the BEST MASTERS. Messrs. DICKINSON and Co. beg to inform those who are studying and use the Art that they have on hire Drawings by all the First Masters of the day; viz. Harding, Prout, Cox, Fielding, Topham, Jenkins, Absalon, Oakley, Fripp, &c. Messrs. D. have added to their Circulating Portfolio a choice assortment of Sketches and Drawings by P. De Wint, selected from the late sale of his works.—DICKINSON and Co., 114, New Bond-street. Can be sent to any part of the United Kingdom.

PIANOFORTES.—TOLKIEN'S splendid lossed Piccolos, with 6½ octaves, G G. Full, Metallic Plate, only £6 guineas. Parties requiring a first-rate instrument for a little money will do well to purchase at TOLKIEN'S old established house, 37, 38, and 39, Rupert-street, Leicester-square.—Drawings of the instruments sent post free. Old instruments taken in exchange.

PIANOFORTES.—OCTYMANN and PLUMB would recommend parties before purchasing to inspect their Stock, which consists of PATENT DUPLEX-CHECK, REPEATING, and SINGLE-ACTION PIANOFORTES, at prices within the reach of every purse. Second-hand Pianofortes in good condition. 56, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, exactly opposite the grand entrance of the British Museum Manufactory, Piccadilly-street, Bedford-square.

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES, and £10 10s. GOLD LEVERS, at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House, are universally allowed to be more than half a minute per week. The great reduction of price sets aside all rivalry, either of the Swiss manufacturers or any house in London, for the same quality; and never could be given before. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s., one will be sent Free.—Jones's Sketch of Watches, Free by Post.

ELECTRO SILVER PLATED SPOONS and FORKS, of the best quality:—Table Spoons or Forks, 40s per dozen; dessert spoons or forks, 29s per dozen; tea spoons, 18s per dozen; gravy spoons, 8s each; soup ladles, 8s each.—T. COX SAVORY and Co., silversmiths, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street).

THE BEST ENGLISH WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, request the attention of purchasers to their Stock of London-made GOLD PATENT LEVER WATCHES, which manufactured by themselves in their own houses. In Silver Cases, with the Detached Escapement and Jewelled, the prices are Four Guineas and a Half, Six, and Eight Guineas each; or, in Gold Cases, Ten, Twelve, Fourteen, and Sixteen Guineas each. The very large Stock offered for selection includes every description, enabling a customer to select that which is more particularly adapted to his own use. Each watch is warranted.

MUSICAL BOXES.—An extensive assortment of fine-toned BOXES, of superior quality, by the celebrated makers, Messrs. Nicole Brothers, Geneva, playing upwards of 600 airs, expressly selected from the most favourite Operas by Rossini, Bellini, Donizetti, &c., together with the most eminent English Pieces, are now on Sale. A Catalogue of the Airs, with Size of prices, is now published, and may be had, gratis, on application to T. COX SAVORY and Co., Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street).

ORNAMENTAL CLOCKS.—Recently received from Paris, a large variety of FOURTEEN-DAY CLOCKS, to strike on Bells, Gongs, and Sub-bases, in Ormolu, Bronze, Marble, Oak, Rosewood, and Walnut Cases. The designs are Pastoral and Historical, and include a few of great merit in the Louis Quinze style. Prices from Four to Forty guineas each, and upwards. A. B. SAVORY and SONS, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Statue of the Duke of Wellington

THE DESIGN of PLATE.—All young Housekeepers should lay in a stock of the Designs for the useful furnishing. Its colour is the nearest approach to that of silver which can yet been produced, and it is fully equal to it in durability, both and wear. No other metal equals it in durability. It is manufactured in the genuine Old Silver Patterns, Plain Beaded Shells in Tea, Dessert, and Table-spoons, Dessert and Table-forks, Fish-carvers, Waiters, Salvers, Sets of Fish and Table-castors, Liqueurs, Bottle-stands, &c. The same articles Electro-Silvered, Fiddle Pattern, Engine-turned, and are now standy on sale. Also, the DEANEAN PLATE POWDER, at 6d and 1s per box.—GEORGE and JOHN DEANE, opening to the Monument, London Bridge.

BROWN and GREEN'S PATENT KITCHEN RANGE is the most economical, cleanly, and convenient. It requires no grate for a smoky chimney.
BROWN and GREEN'S Improved OPEN FIRE RANGE, with Patent Self-acting Kitchen Boiler, 17s. 6d. per foot.
BROWN and GREEN'S SELF-ACTING COTTAGE RANGE is fixed complete, with every needful with a remarkably small quantity of fuel Price, with oven and boiler, 16s. per foot.
Delivered carriage free, to London, Birmingham, Peterborough, and various other towns. For prospectuses, &c., apply to BROWN and GREEN, Luton, Beds.

MANY have assumed the use of the word PALETOT, but the ONLY PATENTEES of the design and material used in this unexpensive and fashionable garment are MESSRS. H. J. and D. NICOLL, Merchant Clothiers, Patent Patentees, and Manufacturers of Cloth, who have agents in every principal Town in the United Kingdom and its Colonies. Their London Address being RETENT-STREET or CORNHILL; 53 to 61.
No. 114, REGENT-STREET, forms a department for PALETOTS, &c.
No. 116 (the next house) is devoted for MILITARY and DIPLOMATIC UNIFORMS.
No. 118, for ROBES and every novel or established article of costume.
120 is exclusively for BOYS' and YOUTHS' CLOTHING, of unusual excellence; and at 22, CORNHILL, specimens of all may be seen.
In each department skilful and intelligent Assistants will wait the admitted fact, "That an article to be really cheap should be really good," is practically sustained.
WHOLESALE WOOLLEN CLOTH and SHIPPING ENTRANCE for the trade in WARWICK-STREET, and CHANGE-ALLEY, in the CITY.
H. J. and D. NICOLL,
114, 116, 118, 120, REGENT-STREET, and 22, CORNHILL, 23, CORNHILL.

KHOREE is a new Importation by the Messrs. NICOLL, through their Agent in India. It is a Cloth strongly well adapted, when formed into a PALETOT, for the RACE, the SEA-SIDE, or any Marine Excursion; most generally during the approaching warm weather. It has the peculiarity of resisting or counteracting, to a most remarkable degree, the intense heat of the sun's rays, and is so light (WEIGHING BUT SIX OUNCES) that it can be conveniently worn over another Coat, which is thus effectually preserved from dust, and as it occupies little room, will be more easily than a pocket-handkerchief, it may be concealed in the same manner as a shawl. Its cool appearance, combined with its most gentlemanly appearance, is very durable, and, when soiled, becomes new again by the simple process of washing. The price is 8s. 6d. per yard, 54 inches HALF. The adaptation of this article to the manufacture of PALETOTS is overseen by Messrs. NICOLL.
H. J. and D. NICOLL,
114, 116, 118, 120, REGENT-STREET, and 22, CORNHILL, LONDON

LONDON and SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.—WINDSOR LINE and HAMPTON COURT.—EARLY SUMMER EXCURSIONS (Sundays excepted), on and after the 17th of June.—In order to afford daily facilities to the population of London to reach the country in the quickest and cheapest manner during the summer months, the Directors of this Company have determined to attach Second Third-class Carriages from the Waterloo Station to the Trains specified below, on the Richmond, the Loop, and the Hampton Court Lines, at the following fares:—

To Putney, Barnes, and Kew (including stations short of these places), and back ... ... 1s.
To Richmond, Twickenham, and Hounslow (including stations short of those places), and back ... ... 1s.
To Kingston and Hampton Court (including stations short of these places), and back ... ... 1s.

ON THE RICHMOND AND LOOP LINES.

DOWN.			UP.
8 7 P.M.	Loop Line	5 P.M.	Twickenham and Loop
8 ,,	Twickenham and Loop	4 5 ,,	Loop Line
8 ,,	Twickenham,		Twickenham and Loop
8 ,,	Twickenham and Loop	6 30 ,,	Loop Line
6 15 ,,	Twickenham and Loop	8 20 ,,	Twickenham and Loop
8 ,,	Loop Line		Twickenham and Loop

On Mondays and Tuesdays, in addition to the above, Third Class Carriages will be attached to the Train from Waterloo, at 9, 10, and 11.

ON THE HAMPTON COURT LINE.

DOWN.		UP.
1 30 P.M.		4 45 P.M.
3 30 ,,		6 45 ,,
5 45 ,,		8 45 ,,
8 35 ,,

On Mondays and Tuesdays, in addition to the above, Third Class Carriages will be attached to the Train from Waterloo, at 11 in the forenoon.
By order,
CORNELIUS STOVIN, General Manager of Traffic.
Waterloo Station, 6th June, 1850.

HORTICULTURAL and other FETES.—CHARLES VYSE begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and Public, that his son having returned from Paris, he can now ready for their inspection an elegant assortment of PARISIAN and ENGLISH MILLINERY, selected from the first artistes in Paris.—CHARLES VYSE, 30, Lodge-lane, St. Paul's, Manufacturer to the Queen and Royal Family.

FOREIGN SILKS—RIGG and SON, Old Bond-street, SELLING OFF, on account of Mr. Rigg retiring from business, the whole of the Rich and Valuable Stock of Velvets, Satins, Brocha, Glacé, and Fancy Silks, Laces, Shawls, Mantles, &c., is now on Sale, at very reduced prices. No. 61, Old Bond-street, late Tinkler, Rigg, and Co.

THE WONDER of the AGE! the Fashion! the Dress! at No. 54, Edgware-road, a Thousand New and Handsome Printed Muslin and Organdie Dresses, made up in the first style of fashion, with three and four deep flounces, including full complement of corsage, &c. at the extraordinary price of 7s 9d each.
Messrs. J. HUNT and CO., 51 to 54, Edgware-road

PARASOLS.—W. and J. SANGSTER respectfully solicit an inspection of their extensive stock of Parasols, consisting of the most elegant and fashionable colours in Moires Antiques, Silks, Satins, and Moires, lined and Unlined. Patentees of the ALPACA PARASOLS, which have such universal satisfaction last year, 30,000 having been sold during the season. 140, Regent-street; 94, Fleet-street; 10, Royal Exchange; and 75, Cheapside.

MAGASIN de RUBANS de PARIS, 213, REGENT-STREET, opened for the Sale of Robands exclusively This Ravishing Repertory for all that is new, chaste, and elegant in this favourite and delightful Trimming adjusted to the Costume of Costume, is now literally teeming with productions which, from their Novelty, Beauty, and Cheapness, Design, and Matchless Excellence manufactures of delight and wonder from each beholder. Artistes being constantly employed in designing for this Establishment, it contains everything bought here select.—P. W. HARDWICK, 213, Regent-street.

NEW SILK, MUSLIN, and LACE MANTLES, Cottes, Jackets, &c., of the latest and most approved Parisian fashions.—HAYWARDS (Biddle and Co.) respectfully invite the attention of Ladies to their Mantle Department, which is now supplied with a pleasing and elegant variety, from the simple Mantelet, suitable for morning wear, to the most elegant and expensive Mantle, beautifully trimmed with black lace, and now the prevailing fashion.—HAYWARDS (Biddle and Co.), Lacemen, 81, Oxford-street, opposite the Pantheon, London; and 37, King's-road, Brighton.

ELEGANT MUSLINS.—Thousands of elegant MUSLIN DRESSES are now offering for sale, at 5s 6d per dress or any length cut at 4½d the yard. They are the newest patterns, fast colours, and cannot be had elsewhere. An immense and valuable stock of postage-stamps, a dress in any of the fashionable colours namely, chocolate, blue, pink, lilac, green, black and white, or plain muslin with an elegant border, and sufficient for a full dress. Beautiful long cloth or shirting calico, twelve yards for 3s 11½d; prime finely made linen, 3s 6d per yard; and a rich black gros de Naples for 3s 6d. Merchants and who scale buyers will find this a desirable opportunity.—Address, ROWLAND HOOPER, muslin printer, 93, Oxford-street

BLACK FLOUNCINGS, SHAWLS, SCARFS, VEILS, &c., in REAL LACE; also an extraordinary IMITATION of the same, of Nottingham manufacture, at a very moderate price, at HAYWARDS (Biddle and Co.), Lacemen to the Queen's Family. Established 1776. They respectfully solicit the attention of Ladies to an extensive variety of articles of the newest and last style of fashion in made-up LACE GOODS, comprising Mantillas, Jackets, Cosines, Sleeves, Canezous, Berthes, Chemisettes, Collerettes, Collars, &c., from the simplest and least expensive kind, to the RICHEST BRUSSELS LACES of all descriptions. Patterns of Laces sent by post, or articles forwarded for choice, on receipt of a London reference or deposit.—HAYWARDS (Biddle and Co.), Lacemen, 81, Oxford-street, opposite the Pantheon, London; and 37, King's-road, Brighton.

SILKS, BAREGES, MUSLINS, and LACE.—W. W. SHEATH, 264, REGENT-STREET, begs to announce that he is selling the Richest Black Mere Antique Silks, at 5s guineas the dress.
Very Rich Glacé Foulé de Soies, 35s the dress.
Striped and Checked Silks, 21s, 25s, and 29s the dress.
Superior French Barèges, 9½d, 11½d, and 2s the yard.
Fashionable Organdie Muslins, 9½d, 1s, and 1s 3d per yard.
Fashionable Organdie Muslins, 9½d, 1s 0d, and 1s 3d per yard.
The Best English Ditto, 6½d per yard.
Black Lace Mantles (last Parisian Fashion), 42s 6d per yard.
Real Honiton Falls, from 10s 6d each.
Real Brussels Ditto, from 21s each.
Black Lace Shawls, from 12s 9d to 7os each
BLACK and WHITE SILK VELVETS for BONNETS, from 12 to 30 guineas the sets
Patterns sent free to any part of the kingdom.
Address W. W. SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

BONNETS.—PARISIAN MILLINERY.—To Cash Purchasers wishing to avoid the charges of private Millinery, the undersigned submits the following prices:—Fashionable Silk Bonnets, all colours, Cap, &c., complete, 12s 9d to 16s 9d; Mourning Ditto, 16s 9d to 21s; Fashionable Straw Bonnets, 5s 6d, 6s 9d, and 8s 6d; Dowas' Bonnets, with Double Crape Veil, 14s 6d to 16s 9d; Silks or Black Lace, elegantly finished, 15s to 18s 6d; Aeraphana Crape, all colours, 10s 6d; Ditto, the next thickness, 12s 6d; Ditto, the best, 14s 6d; Bonnets, with Double Crape Veil, 14s 6d to 16s 9d. More fashionable or more becoming Bonnets cannot be procured at any price: Patterns of Bonnets, Ribbons, Crapes, &c., sent free to any part.—Grandbourn House, No. 39, Granbourn-street, Leicester-square.—Proprietress, Mrs. WEST and SON.
* * Country Milliners supplied with Patterns Bonnets monthly.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN.
Now Ready, Checked, and Glace Silks, 1s 9½d, 1s 11½d, 2s 6d, and 2s 9d per yard.
Elegant ditto, 2 wide, 3s 9½d to 3s 6d per yd.
Beautiful Glace Silks, 2 wide, the new shades, 3s 6d to 4s 9½d to 6s 6d, real value 3s 6d and 4s 6d.
Plain Black Silks, Satins, and Black Watered and Damask Silks, Ottomans, Armures, and Black Dress Satins, at one-third less than the usual prices. An immense assortment of yard of new printed Jaconets and Organdie Muslins (fast colours), 9½d and 6½d per yard.
Superb Designs in Swiss, Cambrian, and French ditto, 9½d, 1s 0½d, and 1s 3½d per yard.
A very large assortment of Balzarines and Barèges, at 9½d, 10½d, and 1s 0½d per yard.
Black and all Colours in Plain French Barèges, at 1s 1½d, worth 1s 9d.
Address, BEECH and BERRALL, 49, Great Ryder-street, Pimlico.
N.B.—All parcels to the amount of £5 forwarded to any part of the country, carriage paid.

WHOLESALE PRICES.—Damask Table Linen, Linen Lawns, Sheetings, Cape Cloths, Long Cloths, Diapers, Huckabacks, Carpets, &c.—The DIRECTORS of the NATIONAL LINEN COMPANY, (Limited), respectfully announce that they have now forwarded to all parts of the country their Wholesale Price Current, which will not soften like common hair. Improved Clothes-brush, that cleans horsehair in one-third the time. An immense stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponge, at METCALFE, BINGLEY, and Co.'s only Establishment, 1939, Oxford-street, one door from Hollis-street.—Metcalfe's Alka-line Tooth-Powder, 2s per box.

PAPER-HANGINGS.—COTTERELL BROTHERS, 500, Oxford-street (a few doors from Holles-street), beg to call the attention of the public to their extensive HANGINGS, selected with the utmost care from all the principal French and English manufactories. A stock of from 30,000 to 50,000 pieces to select from, enables them to supply any quantity of every printed class, and colour, for immediate use. Parties in the country should send for the Trade list, which contains many hundred patterns, with Cotterell's celebrated Penny Paper for bedrooms, will be sent post-paid on receipt of 1s. 6d. in postage-stamps. COTTERELL'S Warehouse, complete designs for walls and ceilings are well worth the inspection of persons about to furnish. Oxford-street Paper Hanging Warehouse, No 500, a few doors from Holborn; also at Bristol and Bath.

MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT.—A new and elegant preparation for the Hair, compounded on rational principles, and which once used will at once supersede the filthy stuff sold as Bear's Grease, Circassian Cream, or various oils with ornamental names, which possess not the slightest power to render a beauty. The MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT, used as directed in a Treatise on the Hair sold with each pot, will soon render the Hair clean, lustrous, and curly. Price 2s. each.
Sold by all perfumers and medicine vendors in town and country.—Wholesale London Agents:—Messrs. Barclay and Sons, Farringdon-street; Edwards, St. Paul's Church-yard; Sutton and Co., Bow Church-yard; Hanger, 131, Oxford-street; and Hannay and Co., Oxford-street.

ROOK-RIFLES, AIR-GUNS, AIR-CANES, &c., for shooting rabbits, rooks, sea-fowl, &c. with ball; small birds with shot, fan with harpoon and line, &c.—Prices from 6ds each.—REILLY, Gunmaker, New Oxford-street.

PIGEONS to be DISPOSED OF.—Almonds, Kites, Duns, Agates, Cream-colour, all bred from Almonds; Yellow, Red, and Black Mottles, mottled bred, all Tumblers.—Communications, in the first instance, by pre-paid letter, to the breeder, J. M. E., 7, Islington-green, London.

SCOTTISH FETE.—Competition for Champ. ploughip in ARCHERY, at Lord Holland's Park, 1st and 2nd of July. Every requisite in Archery Trunks, of the best quality, at the lowest prices, at GEO. JACOBS'S, 32, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross. A complete equipment, comprising every requisite (target and stand excepted, which is 18s extra), for a lady, 36s; for a gentleman, 40s. A few very handsome specimens of Spanish Yew Bows, by Anderson and others, the property of a gentleman, to be disposed of.

SCHWEPPE'S SODA, POTASS, MAGNESIA WATERS, and AERATED LEMONADE, continue to be manufactured as usual on the largest scale at their several establishments in London, Dublin, Edinburgh, Bristol, and Derby. None is genuine without a label with the name of their Firm. Germau and Brighton SELTZER WATER, constantly on hand.—Bath-st. Barnard-street, Londo

WANTED.—COUNTRY AGENTS for the sale of LA VENO BENO, an article of great merit and general consumption. A handsome Income may be realised by the district.—Communications agents, Burwood Villages, Kent to indicate packets, at 1s. each. Apply to WARDELL and Co., 1, Old Jury, Cheapside, (opposite Bow Church), City of London.

CITY DOMESTIC BAZAAR!!!—The Proprietor of the above Establishment is desirous of making known to his patrons and the public generally, that he has REMOVED from 5, Old Change, to 3, OLD BAILEY (one door from Ludgate-hill), where Ladies will find SERVANTS, with good characters, waiting for engagements. Superior here meet with the acquisitions of speedily being hired.—March 26, 1850.

"GRAHAM and HEDLEY'S ROLL COCOA is perfectly pure, and so well prepared as to afford, with hot water or milk, a mild, pleasant, salutiferous, and highly nutritious article of diet.—Signed, JAMES DREW UNE, M.D. F.R.S., Analytical Chemist and Professor of Chemistry."—Sold retail by all Grocers and Tea-dealers in Town and Country.—Cocoa, Swan-yard, Bridgewater.

MEMENTOS in HAIR, beautifully made and Mounted in Fine Gold, at about one-half the usual charge Bracelets from 7s each; Brooches from 10s each; Chains from 3s 6d; Lockets from 4s 6d each. A Sample of Hair, and a Book of Specimens sent free to any part of the Kingdom for two postage stamps.—H. LEWIS, Hair Artist, 173, Fenchurch-street, City, London.

THE REGISTERED ALBUM of ORNAMENTAL HAIRWORK sent free for two stamps. Ladies and Gentlemen may see their own hair worked in any souvenir without extra charge. A splendid assortment constantly on hand, ready for inspection.—C. OLIVIERS, Artist in Hair, 35, Old Compton-street, Soho.

CHILDREN'S CARRIAGES, INVALID CHAIRS, SPINAL BEDS, and a variety of light HAND CARRIAGES, from 10s. to 30 guineas, on Sale or Hire, at the Manufactory, Rustic-House, INGHAM, 39, City-road, Finsbury-square.—N.B. Inghan's Gig-lamps.

SHIRTS.—E. FLINT continues to supply gentlemen with the Best Shirts, six for 33s; Outfit and Coloured Shirts equally low. 67, Strand (3 doors from E. Bright's) Shirts a Specialité. Prices.—FLINT'S old-established Warrooms, 48, Ludgate-hill, London; and 38, King's-road, Brighton.

THE KNICKERBOCKER SHIRT is a garment made without gussets. "It may confidently be recognised for its sheep of fit, and great ease and comfort."—Morning Herald. In all qualities and prices, at W. CARTER'S, 53, Cornhill-street, Regent-street. N.B. Printed flannels for dressing-gowns, cravats, and wool

SHIRTS.—Comparison the only way to judge of Quality.—WHITELOCK and SON, 160 Strand (established 85 years), invite purchasers to compare the Shirts they supply for 4s 6d each, ready washed, with those advertised by other houses 6 for 26s; and their 6s 6d ones with any at 9s; also their fine linen, 10s 6d, with any at 14s 6d. Gentlemen waited upon in any part of London; and parcels sent to any part of the country, upon receipt of the price and its extra for part postage. The measure requisite is eight round the neck, chest, and wrist. Guaranteed fit, and very best work.

SIX Very Superior SHIRTS for 31s 6d, from Measure.—Fashionable Shapes, Coloured Shirts, a choice of 300 new designs, six for £1; or six very best Dress (to measure), for 26s. Patterns for selection sent by post.

a shaped Shirt, upon an entirely new principle, six for 34s—the best fitting Shirt ever made. Self-measure (a card) and Patterns (many returned. Printed price list, with patterns and directions for self-measurement, free.
RODGERS and Co., Shirt Makers, 50, St. Martin's Lane, and No. 37, Sackville-street, of New-street, Covent-garden, London. Established Sixty Years.

BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. —The original, and by far the best, requiring no preparation, other than washing and ironing. Instructions for every variety of household linen and wearing-apparel against loss or mistake; for which reason he cannot be too much guarded against spurious imitations.—Prepared by the inventor, JOHN BOND, 28, Long-lane, West Smithfield, City.—Sold by most Chemists, Stationers, and Medicine-venders. Price, in a Bottle.

PATENT INDIA-RUBBER VELVET HATS, Patentees, JOHNSON and Co., 113, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street.—Six years' experience has proved the value of this invention. These Hats, together with their peculiar mode of ventilation—by means of a valve—not only preventing an accumulation of perspiration, render them at once superior to any that have hitherto been manufactured and offered to the public.—JOHNSON and Co., Hatters to the Queen and Royal Family, 113, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street

OLD FEATHER BEDS RE-DRESSED and PURIFIED by STEAM with Patent Machinery.—This new process of dressing and renovating all impurities, but, by expanding the feathers, the bulk is greatly increased, and, consequently, a bad sea-soned much fuller and softer. Charge for dressing, 3d per lb. Old and tough mattresses are effectually cleansed and re-made: Bolster and re-turned carriage free, within five miles.—HEAL and SONS' List of Bedding, containing full particulars of weights, sizes, and prices, sent free by post on application to their factory, 196 (opposite the Chapel), Tottenham-court-road.

GERMAN SPRING MATTRESSES, permanently elastic, very durable, and cheap.

3 ft. 0 in. wide	£2	8	0
3 ft. 6 in. ditto	3	0	0
4 ft. 0 in. ditto	3	12	0
4 ft. 6 in. ditto	4	4	0
5 ft. 0 in. ditto	4	16	0
5 ft. 6 in. ditto	5	8	0
6 ft. 0 in. ditto	6	0	0

Top stuffing, all Horse-hair.

3 ft. 0 in. wide	£4	4	0
3 ft. 6 in. ditto	4	16	0
4 ft. 0 in. ditto	5	8	0
4 ft. 6 in. ditto	6	0	0
5 ft. 0 in. ditto	6	16	0
5 ft. 6 in. ditto	7	8	0
6 ft. 0 in. ditto	8	0	0

Elegant ditto, 6 wide, 3s 9½d to 3s 6d per yd.
Beautiful Glace Silks, 2 wide, the new shades, 3s 6d to 4s 9½d to 6s 6d, real value 3s 6d and 4s 6d.
Plain Black Silks, Satins, and Black Watered and Damask Silks, Ottomans, Armures, and Black Dress Satins, at one-third less than the usual prices

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 433.—Vol. XVI.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1850. [Sixpence.

THE MALT AND BEER QUESTION.

Much has been said and written of late years upon the subject of Corn-laws and cheap food. It is high time that something should not only be said, but done, upon the subject of Malt-laws and cheap drink. If Bread be the staple food of the people, Beer is their staple drink. All classes—the teetotallers excepted—enjoy good beer, and are interested in having it cheap. Even the gentler sex—whose graceful predilection for tea renders them less dependent for refreshment on the "extract fair of malt and hops"—are by no means uninterested in the Beer question. What affects the health and comfort of their fathers, brothers, and husbands, affects them also; and they themselves, whether of high or of low degree, share the national taste for the national beverage, and do not object to partake either of humble home-brewed or the choicest Guinness. The English people—as was sung long before the Anti-Corn-law League came into operation—still hope that the time will come—

> When England, first of nations,
> Instead of grinding down her poor,
> Shall double all their rations—
> Shall give them larger penny loaves,
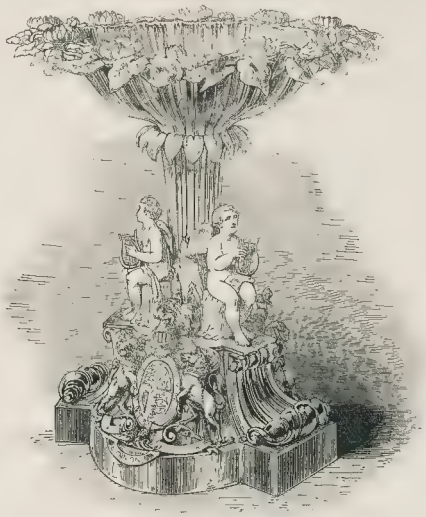
> With cheaper beer, and stronger; and do not see why, if bread has been cheapened to the consumer, beer should not be subject to a corresponding reduction. The price of bread rises and falls with the price of corn; but, somehow or other, the price of beer remains stationary. Though malt in one year be cheaper by twenty-five or even fifty per cent. than it was in the year preceding, the beer-drinker derives no benefit from the abundance which has produced the cheapness. Not one fraction of a farthing per cent. is suffered to reach him in the shape of a reduction of price. The farmer who grows the barley, and sells it cheaply because his harvest is abundant, is made to pay the famine price for his beer. This is evidently not Free-Trade; and the farmer begins to complain of the injustice of establishing Free-Trade to his injury in one commodity, without establishing it to his benefit in another. The price of beer is important to all classes of the community, but is especially important to the farmer as the manufacturer of the elementary article from which beer is brewed. Two causes are alleged for this state of things: the operation of the oppressive Excise duty upon malt; and the monopoly of the great brewers. A word or two upon each of these branches of the subject is necessary for the due exposition of the case.

The Excise duty upon malt shares, with all other Excise duties the odium of a mischievous interference with the processes of manufacture, and of a positive impediment to trade. Nothing can be said in its favour, even by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, except that it is very productive—that, if he remove it, he must perforce draw the same amount of money out of the pockets of the people in some other way—that he knows of no other way—that none other has been suggested—and that, therefore, it is better that things should remain as they are. There is no doubt of the productiveness of the tax. In the year 1844 it yielded for England the sum of £4,285,777; for Scotland, the sum of £546,345; and for Ireland, the sum of £161,003; or for the United Kingdom, £4,993,235—within a fraction of five millions. Some agriculturists imagine and assert that these five millions are a tax paid by agriculture, and forming a great and peculiar burden upon the land. But this is not strictly correct. Like all other taxes, its amount ultimately falls upon the consumers of the article taxed; and the agriculturists suffer not alone, but in common with all who drink beer—who may be said to form the great bulk of the people of this country.



THE ROYAL FONT.

CHRISTENING OF THE INFANT PRINCE ARTHUR, IN THE ROYAL CHAPEL, AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.—(SEE NEXT PAGE)

To a certain extent, however, the agriculturists are justified in asserting that they have a greater reason to complain of the tax than the rest of their fellow-countrymen. Besides the portion of the five millions which they pay as consumers, they suffer from the decreased demand for the article they grow, which is consequent upon the enhancement of price, and the interference with the processes of manufacture necessarily caused by the unwelcome, vexatious, obstructive, and mischievous visits of the excisemen. All these things, however, while they tend to make beer dearer than it would otherwise be, do not operate to keep its price at the invariable standard. They form a direct burden to the extent of five millions sterling, and an indirect burden difficult to estimate, although certain to be considerable; but they do not justify the uniform famine price charged by the brewers of England. We heartily wish, for the sake of the farmers, and for the sake also of the manufacturers, operatives, and dwellers in towns, that the Malt Tax could be repealed; but, until that happy consummation, we must look elsewhere to discover the causes that keep up the price of beer, and agitate in another direction for the remedy of the evil.

We must look at the average prices of barley for the last ten or twelve years, if we wish truly to ascertain who are the monopolists that prevent a free trade in our drink. "We find," says a daily contemporary, "that, from 39s. 6d. a quarter in 1839, barley gradually fell to 27s. 6d. in 1842—a decline of about thirty per cent. Thence it rose to 44s. 2d. in 1847—an advance, from 1842, of no less than seventy per cent.; and during several weeks of 1847 the price was 55s. and upwards—or cent. per cent. above the average of 1842. During the last three years the article has been pretty steadily falling; and for the six weeks ending the 8th instant the average is 22s. 5d.—a fall of exactly sixty per cent. since the spring of 1847. Yet, through all these remarkable changes in the prime cost of the brewer's raw material, the selling price of his manufactured article has remained unchanged—our beer, ale, and porter are not a farthing per pot cheaper, nor the value of a farthing per pot better."

The whole difference, therefore, goes into the pockets of the great brewers, the most gigantic monopolists of the present day. The question remains, how much have they been clearing during the years of cheapness and abundance, over and above the profits which satisfied them and made them rich in the years of comparative scarcity and of decidedly high prices? The quantity of malt annually made in the United Kingdom averages, after all allowances for increase of bulk in the barley during the process of malting, four millions and a half of quarters. As all this is made into beer, ale, and porter, it follows that a decrease of twenty shillings a quarter in the price of malt, lasting for a twelvemonth, would put exactly four millions and a half pounds sterling into the pockets of the brewers. One great London firm uses 115,000 quarters of malt per annum, and has been levying at this rate the magnificent profit of £115,000 a year over and above the ordinary, and, as everybody knows, the handsome profit which it derives from its business in those years when the price of malt is upwards of forty shillings the quarter. The English people have rather a liking for a grievance, and here, we must confess, is a grievance that only requires a little publicity to swell it into a very formidable one, and bring the brewers to their senses. If, instead of abusing, from day to day, the impenetrable traitor of Tamworth, and expending so much superfluous energy upon the miserable tin kettles and warming-pans of Signor Pacifico, our daily contemporaries would commence a vigorous "ventilation" of the malt and beer question, they would render good service to all classes, and to the farmers more particularly, and would speedily enlist as much popular sympathy as would compel the brewers to debate with themselves the policy and expediency of relaxing their gripe upon the pockets of the people. At any time—and perhaps more especially in this hot weather—the cheapness of drink would be a captivating theme. Money is said to be a drug in the City; it seeks a field for investment, and cannot find it. But with such enormous profits to be made in the brewing business, it is possible that some enterprising capitalists may relieve the Bank of a portion of its superabundant gold, and establish breweries to supply the public with as good, and wholesome and far cheaper beer than they can at present obtain. Ten per cent. is a large bait for capitalists; but when brewers, under the present system of monopoly, clutch 90 or 100 per cent., it is not a: all unlikely that a little wholesome competition will be brought to bear against them. The present leviathans of the beer market are powerful but not invulnerable; and four millions and a half of unjust profits are rather too much to divide among them.

CHRISTENING OF THE INFANT PRINCE AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

The baptism of his Royal Highness the infant Prince, third son of her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, took place on Saturday, in the chapel within Buckingham Palace.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, his Royal Highness Prince George, her Royal Highness the Princess Mary, his Royal Highness the Prince of Prussia, his Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, his Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen, his Grace the Duke of Wellington; the Belgian, Portuguese, and Prussian Ministers; the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Earl of Minto, Lord John Russell, Sir George Grey, Viscount Palmerston, Earl Grey, Sir Charles Wood, Sir Francis Baring, Sir John Hobhouse, the Earl of Carlisle, the Right Hon. Fox Maule, Sir William Somerville, and others invited to the solemnity, assembled in the old dining-room, at the Palace, at six o'clock, the hour fixed for the ceremony being conducted to an adjoining drawingroom, and were conducted to seats in the chapel.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, the Bishop of Chester (Clerk of the Closet), the Bishop of Oxford (Lord High Almoner), with the Rev. Henry Howarth (rector of the parish of St. George, Hanover-square), the Hon. and Rev. Gerald Wellesley (Resident Chaplain to her Majesty), the Rev. Lord Wriothesley Russell (Deputy Clerk of the Closet), and the Rev. Henry George Liddell (Chaplain to his Royal Highness Prince Albert) assembled in the room adjoining the old dining-room, and took their places at the communion-table.

The procession of the sponsors for his Royal Highness the infant Prince was formed

Her Majesty the Queen and the other Royal personages having taken their seats, the Great Officers of the Household, the Mistress of the Robes, the Groom of the Stole to his Royal Highness Prince Albert, with the Vice-Chamberlain and the Lord and Groom in Waiting to the Queen, and the Lord and Groom of the Bedchamber to his Royal Highness Prince Albert, took their places near the Queen and his Royal Highness.

The Treasurer and Comptroller of the Household took their places behind the sponsors.

As the Queen and Prince were entering the chapel, the March in Handel's "Occasional Oratorio" was performed. When the procession had all entered, the following chorale, composed by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, was performed:—

The choir was composed of Mr. Francis, Mr. Hobbs, and fourteen gentlemen, and ten young choristers of her Majesty's Chapel Royal.

Sir George Smart presided at the organ.

The Queen's private band was in attendance, and the master, Mr. Anderson, conducted the musical performances.

After the chorale, the Lord Chamberlain, accompanied by the Groom of the Stole to his Royal Highness Prince Albert, conducted the infant Prince into the chapel, his Royal Highness being carried by the head nurse, and attended by the Countess of Gainsborough.

The Archbishop of Canterbury commenced the baptismal service, and on arriving at the part for naming the child, the Countess of Gainsborough handed the infant Prince to the Archbishop, when his Royal Highness was named Arthur William Patrick Albert.

The Countess of Gainsborough received Prince Arthur after he had been baptized, and at the conclusion of the service his Royal Highness was reconducted from the chapel.

A hymn—

I will give thanks to Thee, O Lord, and magnify thy holy name;
How great and wonderful art Thou in all the world!—Palestrina, A.D. 1574.

and Beethoven's "Hallelujah".

Hallelujah! to the Father, and the Son of God!
Praise ye the Lord, ye everlasting choir, in holy songs of joy!
Worlds unborn shall sing his glory, the exalted Son of God!

concluded the musical performance.

The Archbishop having pronounced the benediction, the Queen and Prince Albert, preceded by the sponsors, and followed by the Royal and illustrious visitors, retired from the chapel to the room adjoining the old dining-room, where the register-book was brought by Mr. Lingard, Sergeant of her Majesty's Chapels Royal, and here the act of baptism was attested.

The March in "Judas Maccabeus" was played on her Majesty quitting the chapel.

The Queen, the Prince, and the Royal personages then passed up the grand staircase to the Throne-room, where her Majesty was joined shortly before eight o'clock by her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester. The remainder of company continued in the Green Drawingroom.

The Queen wore a dress of white watered and brocaded silk, with a broad flounce of Honiton lace, trimmed with white satin ribbon. Her Majesty also wore a diadem of emeralds and diamonds, and ornaments of emeralds and diamonds to correspond. From the centre of the Star of the Noble Order of the Garter was suspended a most splendid George set in brilliants; the ribbon itself was confined on the left shoulder by a diamond clasp. The Queen also wore the garter as an armlet, the motto being formed of diamonds.

The infant Prince had a robe and mantle of Honiton lace over white satin, with a cap to correspond.

The Princess Royal, the Princess Alice, and the Princess Helena wore dresses of white watered silk with satin stripe, trimmed with white satin ribbon and silver fringe; the silk woven at Spitalfields.

The dress of her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent was of the richest white watered silk, of English manufacture, trimmed with blonde, having diamond ornaments down the front, and the stomacher adorned with brilliants. Her Royal Highness' head-dress was formed of feathers, blonde lappets, and pearl and diamond ornaments. The necklace and earrings were diamonds.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge wore a dress of white silk, trimmed with point lace, the stomacher being enriched with emeralds and diamonds. Her Royal Highness' head-dress was composed of white flowers and diamonds. The necklace and earrings were emeralds and diamonds.

Her Royal Highness the Princess Mary wore a white net dress over white silk.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert wore a field-marshal's uniform, with the collars of the orders of the Garter and the Black Eagle (of Prussia), with four stars set in diamonds of the Garter, the Thistle, St. Patrick, and the Bath, and the ensigns of the Golden Fleece.

Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Prince Alfred wore the Highland dress.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Prussia wore a Prussian uniform, with the collar of the order of the Black Eagle.

His Royal Highness Prince George wore the uniform of a Major-General, with the ensigns of the order of the Garter.

His Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar wore the uniform of the Grenadier Guards, and the insignia of a foreign order of knighthood.

His Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen wore a Bavarian uniform, with the collar of the order of the Garter.

The Duke of Wellington wore a field-marshal's uniform, with the collar of the order of the Garter, and the ensigns of the Golden Fleece.

The other members of order of knighthood present wore their collars; all the noblemen and gentlemen appeared in their respective full-dress costumes and uniforms. The Kings of Arms and Heralds on duty at the solemnity wore their magnificent tabards with their gold chains of office, and carried their badges.

A guard of honour (of the Coldstream Guards), with the band of the regiment, mounted in the garden of the palace, and received the Royal family with the usual honours.

Her Majesty was conducted by the Lord Steward and the Lord Chamberlain, at eight o'clock, to a State banquet in the picture-gallery, accompanied by the Royal Family, the Foreign Ministers, the Cabinet Ministers, and the other ladies and gentlemen who attended the christening; the band of the Royal Regiment of Horse Guards playing "God save the Queen" on her Majesty's entrance.

Upwards of eighty guests sat down to dinner.

After the banquet and Sword were given the following toasts, viz.:—

"His Royal Highness the Prince Arthur."

"His Royal Highness the Prince of Prussia."

"The Queen and the Prince."

"The christening cake" was placed in the middle of the dinner-table on the plateau of the magnificent service of gold plate. The top of the cake represented an octagular fountain, ornamented with a number of small vases, filled with miniature bouquets. The fountain rested on a circular plinth, containing a number of painted vignettes, set in silver frames.

After the toast of "The Queen and the Prince," her Majesty rose from the banquet, and proceeded to the White Drawingroom, accompanied by her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, her Royal Highness Princess Mary of Cambridge, and the other ladies present. Soon after which, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, his Royal Highness the Prince of Prussia, his Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge, his Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, his Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen, and the other guests proceeded to the Music-room, when the doors of the White Drawingroom were opened, and the Queen received an evening party.

THE ROYAL FONT.

This interesting Font forms a conspicuous object in the exquisite picture by C. R. Leslie, Esq., R.A., of the christening of the Princess Royal. It consists of a triangular base and pedestal, on either angle of which are the Royal arms. On the top of the plinth, at the base of a shaft of foliage-work, are seated three figures of children playing the lyre. The shaft carries a bowl of peculiarly graceful outline, the rim of which has water-leaves round it beautifully modelled, a single water-lily is in the bowl, producing a charming effect.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

The Queen gave a State ball on Wednesday evening, at Buckingham Palace. The reception was unusually brilliant, the invitations numbering nearly two thousand, and comprising the Royal Family, the foreign Princes in this country, the whole of the diplomatic corps, the Cabinet Ministers and principal members of the Administration, with their wives and daughters; the officers of State, and the ladies and gentlemen of the households of the Queen, the Princes, and the different members of the Royal Family; all foreigners of distinction at present in town; several hundred members of the House of Lords and the House of Commons, and many distinguished officers, both in the naval and military service.

The ladies appeared in new dresses of great beauty and richness, exhibiting every variety of colour and design in the fabrics, which were of the most elegant and costly materials. Jewelled ornaments of the greatest brilliancy and value adorned most of the costumes.

The gentlemen were all in Court dress, officers of the army, navy, and ordnance wearing their respective uniforms, and members of the Administration the full dress official costume. Members of orders of knighthood all appeared in their different ensigns.

The alcove in the Picture Gallery was filled with numerous and beautiful flowering plants, which were most tastefully inserted in all the recesses within the state saloons and the approaches.

At ten o'clock the Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by his Royal Highness the Prince of Prussia, left the White Drawingroom, preceded by the Lord Chamberlain and the Lord Steward. Passing through the State Saloon, her Majesty and the Prince entered the Ball-room, followed by the Mistress of the Robes, the Lady in Waiting, the Maids of Honour in Waiting, &c.

The assembled company followed.

Her Majesty opened the ball with his Royal Highness the Prince of Prussia; the vis-à-vis being his Royal Highness Prince Albert and the Duchess of Sutherland.

The Queen wore a blue silk dress, trimmed with silver blonde, and with white roses (pink and white), and ornamented with diamonds.

Her Majesty's head-dress was formed of a wreath of pink and white wild roses, richly ornamented with diamonds, to correspond with the dress.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, his Royal Highness the Prince of Prussia, and the Duke of Wellington, all wore the same Prussian order of knighthood (the Black Eagle); and Prince Albert and the illustrious Duke both wore the ensigns of the Golden Fleece. His Royal Highness also wore the stars of the four British orders of knighthood. The Prince of Prussia was habited in a Prussian General's uniform.

The Baroness de Brunnow (wife of the Russian Minister) and the Baroness de Cetto (wife of the Bavarian Minister) both wore the ribbon of a foreign order of knighthood.

A number of foreign noblemen and gentlemen, including Prince Ponia'owski and Count Charles de Goltz, appeared in military uniform.

Some of the Scottish nobility and gentry wore the Highland dress.

After the quadrille by which the ball was opened, waltzes, quadrilles, and polkas were danced, including a polka composed expressly for the occasion, and called "Prince Patrick's Polka."

A State supper was afterwards served in the principal dining-room, the table of which was decorated in the accustomed style of regal splendour and magnificence, and, together with a buffet of gold plate, was lit by numerous candelabra, and sconces of silver gilt, filled with wax lights.

A young man, named Adam Jackson, last week, fell from the third story of a new house in Nelson-street, Gateshead. In his fall, his head came in contact with the window-head of the ground-floor, and, although he fell upwards of thirty feet, he is expected to recover.

The Newport Pagnell academy for the education of dissenting ministers, is about to be broken up. It is said to have been founded by the Rev. Mr. Bull, the Rev. John Newton, the poet Cowper, and others, in 1760. The only allusion made to it by the poet in any of his published correspondence, is in a letter to Lady Hesketh, in which he says, "I have a neighbour at Newport Pagnell, the Rev. Mr. Bull, master of an academy there."

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The agitation on the Dotation Bill, which has engaged the attention of all Paris for the last fortnight, has at length been brought to a close in a manner satisfactory to the Government and its supporters, notwithstanding the hostile report of the Committee of the National Assembly, to which the question was referred in the first instance. The subject was brought under discussion on Monday, when M. Fould, the Minister of Finance, who opened the debate, stated that he rose thus early in order that he might explain clearly to the Assembly the question upon which the debate was to turn. He denied that the measure proposed by the Government for the increase of the President's allowances concealed any of the arrière-pensées which people had attributed to it; and, in order to show that such was not the case, he declared that the Cabinet would accept the amendment proposed by the five members of the minority in the committee, and which was to the following effect:—"There is opened to the Minister of Finance, on the exercise of 1850, an extraordinary credit of 2,160,000f. for the expenses of the Presidency." This was the proposition originated by M. Thiers. He should decided, that the measure, put in this form, would leave it open to the Assembly to adopt any course for the next year that it might think proper, and would at the same time preserve the dignity of both powers.

This declaration from the Minister of Finance was received with approbation by a large portion of the majority; but the Legitimists and Republicans were perfectly silent.

When two members only had spoken—and they were adverse to the measure—the general discussion was suddenly brought to a close. This excited great surprise; but it appears to be the tactique of the majority, when obnoxious measures are proposed, to smother all debate, as on the Electoral Law.

After the closing of the general discussion a sharp debate arose as to the order in which the amendments should be taken. The principal speaker was General Changarnier, who strongly advised the House not to haggle about trifles, but, as every means had been taken to isolate the measure, and to show that it was not meant to bind the House or the country as to what they might do hereafter, to pass the measure, as proposed by the minority of the committee, and accepted by the Government. He therefore recommended that the amendment in question should have the priority over all others. This speech had a powerful effect upon the Assembly. The appearance of General Changarnier as the public advocate of the measure induced several waverers to vote for the bill, and ultimately decided the fate of the measure.

The Assembly being consulted, gave the priority to the amendment accepted by the Government.

The Assembly almost immediately divided, when the numbers were—

For the bill	354
Against it	308
Majority for the Ministry	46

The whole of the debate, including the division, occupied only two hours and twenty minutes.

There were some strange things in the division. General Montholon, who has had as much opportunity as any man to become acquainted with the causes which keep poor Louis Napoleon poor, voted against the grant; but whether this was by way of opposition to the President, or because he disapproved of the Ministers having made any concession as to the form of the grant, remains to be seen.

At the sitting of the Assembly on Tuesday, some of its members (amongst them General Lamoricière) who voted against the bill complained of their votes having been wrongly printed in the Moniteur. These errors, however, did not affect the validity of the result.

A modification of the Ministry was talked of. General d'Hautpoul, MM. Ferrier, Rouher, and Bineau are, it is reported, to retire, but not until two or three restrictive measures, consequent upon the passing of the Electoral Law, shall have been brought before, and received the approbation of, the Assembly. One of the principal reasons assigned for this course of policy is, that the revolutionary factions in Prussia and Austria have long had their arrangements prepared for carrying out their insurrectionary designs, and are only waiting the signal from France. The party of order, therefore, living under the government of the Republic, are determined to support the Ministry, and to assist in strengthening it by all necessary restrictive laws, in order that it may efficiently counteract the daring schemes of those abettors of anarchy and bloodshed, whether resident in France or in Germany.

In the Assembly, on Wednesday, the bill relating to certain extraordinary credits required in 1849 came under discussion.

M. Parisot considered some of the expenses incurred as extravagant, particularly that for the repairs of the President of the Republic in the Palace of the Elysée. He concluded by moving a reduction in the credits demanded of 500,000f.

M. Lacrosse defended the sums expended, some of which were necessary to protect the President's life from the danger that then threatened it.

After an angry debate, the amendment was rejected by 424 to 189.

M. Drouyn de Lhuys was making preparations to leave Paris for London, to resume his diplomatic duties.

Baron Gros has arrived at Paris from Athens.

The Moniteur Algérien of the 20th contains the announcement of the burning down of the whole village of Guidjel, by the French troops, and the dispersal of the inhabitants, with the loss of thirty killed, in consequence of a refusal to give up some Arabs who had slain one French soldier and seriously wounded another.

The heat in Paris on Monday was excessive. At two o'clock the thermometer marked in the shade 90½ of Fahrenheit.

M. Langrand, the unlucky editor of the extinct Vaux du Peuple, has been condemned, by default, by the Court of Assizes of Paris, to four years' imprisonment, and a fine of 10,000f.

Twenty seven individuals have been arrested at Belleville. They had been previously under the surveillance of the police. They are all persons who had been transported after the insurrection of June, and who were set at liberty under the amnesty. They were found in close deliberation in a secret society, and a quantity of papers were found which are said to compromise many parties.

ITALIAN STATES.

The Italian journals notice a correspondence between the Piedmontese Prime Minister, the Marquis d'Azeglio, and the Pope's Minister at Rome, Cardinal Antonelli, on the subject of the imprisonment of the Archbishop Franzoni, for opposition to the curtailment of the ecclesiastical privileges of the Church in Piedmont, lately effected by Act of Parliament in that kingdom.

The Marquis d'Azeglio declares that in the facts complained of by the Holy See "the action of the Cabinet and of the different powers of the State has been rigorously restrained within the limits of their respective rights and duties," and that no "other way was open to uphold the former and fulfil the latter." He further expresses a hope that the conduct of the Piedmontese clergy will in such as "to avoid placing the Ministry's Government under the disagreeable necessity of obeying their duty in this respect, from the fulfilment of which alone depends the respect of subjects towards the authorities, their obedience to the laws, and the order and tranquillity of the State." The general tenor of the note is temperate and dignified.

The first experiment of the electric telegraph between Verona and Venice was to be made on the 16th inst., in the presence of the authorities. The public were to be admitted to the use of this mode of communication. The line between Verona and Milan is finished as far as Lonato.

Private letters from Rome, under date the 14th inst., that the Pope had just appointed a commission, selected from the Sacred College, and composed of Cardinals Antonelli, Secretary of State; Altieri, President of Rome and Comarca; Spinola, Marini, Cagiano, and Mattei. In pursuance of the desire of the Pontiff, this Commission had already held two sittings, the first under the presidency of the Pope himself, and the second under that of the Cardinal Secretary of State. This commission has for its object to revise the fundamental statutes, and ameliorate in its scope the whole system. The organization of the State; 2. Its administration; 3. Its finances; 4. Its legislation; and 5. The direction of the territory, for political purposes, into four departments.

At Naples, on the 16th inst., the roof of a barrack fell in, and buried in the ruins 80 soldiers.

UNITED STATES.

We have accounts from New York to the 18th inst., which state in reference to the Cuban affair that all questions relating to prisoners are referred to Washington, to be adjusted between Mr. Clayton and the Spanish Minister. The President has directed rigorous proceedings against all persons known to have incited the Cuban expedition. The Government had received intelligence from Havannah dates of the 6th inst. Her commander received assurances from the Spanish authorities that the prisoners should be honourably dealt with until advices are received from Washington. The proceedings of the late expedition have been well treated. There was no truth in the statement of five having been shot. General Lopez had been again arrested, and was being examined before the United States Commissioners at New Orleans. He was held to bail in 3000 dollars. The American Government were about to prosecute him for infringing the laws of the United States.

Some alarming rumours had been afloat relative to collisions between the naval forces of the two Governments, but happily they were without foundation.

Some apprehensions were entertained of a hostile movement on the part of the Cuban Spaniards against Hayti or Santo Domingo, and in favour of the Spanish population of St. Domingo. The United States agent, Mr. Green, had returned to communicate with his Government.

The Viceroy, from Galway, arrived at Halifax on the 11th inst., having made the passage in less than eleven days.

The Nashville Convention had terminated their sittings, prior to which they agreed to certain resolutions, setting forth to the Congress what they required in the constitutional rights of the southern States, hoping that Congress would not adjourn until it had arranged the controversy.

The writ of error in the case of Professor Webster, lately convicted of murder at Boston, had been argued before the Supreme Court of Massachusetts. The points raised were, that the Court had no jurisdiction in the case, and had no right to try the case, and that neither judgment nor sentence was in accordance with the requirements of the statute. The decision was to be given in a few days.

The American steamer Atlantic, which has brought this news, has made one of the swiftest runs ever made across the ocean, having left New York on the 15th inst. and arrived at Liverpool on Wednesday morning last at four A.M. From the 19th to the 25th she steamed on an average 308 miles each day, her greatest speed being 319 miles.

CALIFORNIA.

We have dates from San Francisco to May 1. The gold-digging is represented as in a highly prosperous condition. The new settlement at Trinidad Bay promises to be a place of a good deal of importance. On a beautiful plateau on the northern shore of the bay, the site of a town has been surveyed, and buildings are now erecting in considerable numbers. The harbour is said to be the finest on the coast, with the exception of San Francisco and San Diego. The Legislature had adjourned, after a session of 100 days, having passed 143 acts, most of which were essential to the complete organisation of the State Government. The people expressed a decided adherence to the position they have assumed in favour of free soil and a free constitution.

MUSIC.

MR. JOHN PARRY'S NEW ENTERTAINMENT, "NOTES, VOCAL AND INSTRUMENTAL."

The Music Hall, Store-street, was filled on Monday night with a fashionable assemblage, attracted by the agreeable announcement that the facetious John Parry would produce his new entertainment. His success was complete: indeed, his musical and dramatic abilities were never developed to greater advantage; and the auditory, for two hours, listened with the greatest delight to the two parts of the performance, which is not a connected narrative, containing any fixed dramatic purpose, but chiefly a series of most amusing sketches of the eccentric characters to be met with in musical society. Amateur singers and pianoforte players are depicted with striking fidelity—the first category being headed "Very curious vocal facts," and the second entitled "The piano taught in six lessons." The "mild or inoffensive gentleman," who warbles like a dove in the warlike strains of the "Red Cross Knight;" the "bravo Inglese," who disposes of the florid passages in the Figaro and Rosina duo with a bravado shake of the head; the "uncertain gentleman," who can never sing in tune; the tender and touching ballad-singer, overcome by his emotions; the tremulous tenor; and the sentimental ballad vocalist, without accompaniment, are every-day acquaintances in one's experience of the amateur world.

The pianoforte playing was equally full of effect of striking the keys, on the theory that it makes more than a year old, convulsed every hearer. The stage of pianoforte tuition—the wrong bass—the hesitation—the bad timist—the ornamental school—the mitre-expressive style—the "funny young lady," who plays a comic country dance with the (an anecdote of Malibran, by the way), giving it the form of grand sacred music, were ludicrously illustrated. The Welsh songstress, in character of a female peasant, with its quaint melody, was much admired. Signor Pratticelo, the Italian singing-master, who composes the opera of "Douglas," in nine acts, and sets the well-known speech, "My name is Norval," in accompanied recitative with "Cuckoo" obligato, was capitally dressed, acted, and sung. The young man, who brought himself an artist, Miss Pheasant and Master Wowski, the friends from the country, are the principal sketches in the second part. Except when the entertainment was interrupted by the hearty applause, the hilarity of the company was incessant. Mr. John Parry hits off the foibles and peculiarities of musical society with such genuine humour, his imitative powers are so varied, and his pianoforte playing is so masterly, that he has created quite a speciality for himself in his "Lights and Shadows" and his new undertaking. "Notes, Vocal and Instrumental," proves how much experience and practice have improved his talents for mimicry. An excellent musician, and possessing an organ of extraordinary compass, he can imitate the soprano or tenore in the highest notes, and the basso profondo in the "deepest—deeper still."

CONCERTS.

Mdlle. Anichini gave her annual matinée musicale on Tuesday at Campden House, Kensington, the residence of Mrs. Wolley. This interesting locality of the Elisabethan style contains a private theatre, in which the programme was performed. The vocalists were Mdme. Frezzolini, Mdlle. Parodi, Miss Catherine Hayes, Mdlle. Ida Bertrand, and the fair bénéficiare, an accomplished soprano; Signori Brignoli, Calzolari, Corsi, Ciabatta, Coletti, Gardoni, and M. Lefort; with Benedict, Pilatti, Vera Beletta, and Sivori, as solo instrumentists. The solo instrumentalists were Signor Piatti on the horn, and Mdlle. Elesi Kruntz, a very clever pianiste, who, as a performer of the classical school, enjoys a high reputation in Paris. The concert was fully and fashionably attended.

Herr Sprenger gave a matinée musicale at the Beethoven Rooms, in Harley-street, on Tuesday.

The sixth concert of the Beethoven Quartet Society took place on Wednesday evening at Mr. Smith Anne-street Rooms. The scheme comprised Haydn's Quartet No. 78 in B flat major; No. 11 in E minor of Beethoven; and No. 3 in D of Mendelssohn. Ernst, Cooper, Hill, Rousseliot, and M. Billet (the latter playing a sonata by the executants).

M. de Kontski, the violinist, had a matinée musicale on Wednesday, at the house of Miss Messent, in Stratton-street, assisted by Mdlle. Nau, Misses Messent and Bassano ;Signori Gardoni, Ciabatta, Salvator, and Belletti, Mdlle. Parodi, Miss C. Loveday, and Mdlle. Sophie Dulcken; MM. Boulanger and Rousseliot.

Mrs. A. Newton gave her annual concert on Wednesday evening, at the Music Hall, assisted by Mdme. Zimmerman, Misses Castle, Sanford, M. Williams, Poole, Mdme. Sherlaerken, Messrs. F. Bodda, Drayton, B. Frodsham, Whitworth, Herr Mengis, Miss Eliza Ward (piano), M. de Kontski, Herr Stebbing, and Mr. Richardson (flute), Herr Heikling (violoncello), and Regondi (concertina), with Lavenu, Amadei, Lindley, and Benedict, as accompanyists.

Miss Hucksemann's second and last concert, at the Sussex Hall, in the City, took place on Monday, aided by Messrs. Silberberg, F. Chatterton, Regondi, Richardson, Jaell, Cramm, and E. Berner, as solo instrumentists. Mr. Mann's Mrs. A. Newton, Misses Poole, P. Horton, Mdlle. Bordet, Messrs. B. Frodsham, Hobbs, Milne, Trenklee, A. Novello, W. H. Seguin, and F. Bodda, as vocalists.

Signor Brizzi, the tenor, gave a matinée musicale on Tuesday at the Queen Anne-street Rooms, assisted by the principal artistes of the Royal Italian Opera.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—The fourth and last concert of the Royal Academy of Music will be given this morning (June 29th).——Mr. Blagrove's last concertino concert will take place on Monday.——A performance of unaccompanied vocal music will be given by the Upper Singing-schools, under Mr. Hullah's direction, on Wednesday.——Scribe and Halévy's opera, "La Juive et la Fée," in rehearsal at the Royal Italian Opera, for Viardot and Mario; Beethoven's "Fidelio," for Viardot, Tamberlik, Formès, &c., will be the earliest novelty.——The "Prophète" has been produced at Rostock and at Pesth; in the last-mentioned city Madame Lagrange was Fidès, and Herr Steger Jean of Leyden.——A new opera, called "Glaucus; or, the Last Days of Pompeii," founded on Sir E. Bulwer's novel—the poem by Herr Bapst, and the music by his brother, Augustus Bapst—will be produced at Dresden this autumn.

A new opera by Robert Schumann, "Genevieve," is announced for Leipzig.

——Great preparations are making at Leipzig, Berlin, Magdeburg, and Hamburg, to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the death of John Sebastian Bach. At Leipzig, 2000 musicians and amateurs will perform several of his best works.

——Vieuxtemps, the violinist, has been giving concerts at Breslau.——The Emperor of Russia, on the proposition of the Minister of the Interior, has just issued a decree regulating the pensions to be paid to retired artistes, native and foreign, of the Imperial theatres.——Schulhoff has been giving his pianoforte concerts at Vienna, Pesth, Prague, and Presburg, with the greatest success.——Mr. Hullah's Orpheus Glee Union will take place on Monday next, at the residence, in Belgrave-square, of Mrs. Shelley.——The Purcell Commemoration took place on Thursday morning at Westminster Abbey, when a selection from his sacred works was performed.

THE CONJURING BIRDS.

A very clever set of conjuring tricks, and performed through the agency of birds, was exhibited on Wednesday, at No. 2, Baker-street, Portman-square, by Mdlle. Caroline Vandermeersch, to a select party. The agency through which the effects were produced was preserved in becoming mystery; and thus the wonder and admiration of the company were adroitly secured. Miss Vandermeersch has an interesting-looking person, and has trained a variety of birds, both American and European, so that at her bidding they hop from their cages, and from a large number of cards arranged with their edges upwards in a tray, select such as may be required to answer any enquiries made by the visitors. Some of these requisitions were puzzling enough, such as secret numbers and letters, and particular cards secretly selected from a pack, and many tricks of the kind usual with wizards of the north, south, east, and west. The curious part of the exhibition is, how the birds have been trained to take their peculiar part to it, and in what manner they are directed to the specific objects of their search? The lady herself has ample opportunities of becoming acquainted with the secrets of the audience; and, indeed, she takes part openly in the selections made, besides uniformly initiating and superintending the whole business of the evening; so that there is nothing positively wonderful in the tricks themselves: a little ingenious manipulation and machinery will account easily enough for all. But in what manner the lady communicates with her little feathered agents is unknown. They certainly receive, or seem to answer, a share of considerable intelligence, exhibiting judgment and choice, sometimes hesitating, falling, and succeeding on a new trial; but still we have a shrewd guess that the means are principally mechanical. However the whole of the performance is amusing and interesting in a high degree. Mdlle. Vandermeersch conducts it in a manner truly elegant and becoming, and the arrangements are all in exquisite taste.

GROTTO-PASSAGE RAGGED INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.—The annual meeting of this institution was held on Wednesday, at the Marylebone Institution, Edwards-street, Portman-square; Lord Ashley in the chair. The chairman commenced the proceedings by stating that, however inefficient their efforts might appear to be, yet still they had realised, in many cases, greater results than could have been anticipated. When they looked upon the lawless class which they had to deal with, and the depravity which they had to contend against, they had every cause to be grateful for the benefits which many had derived from the institution of the ragged schools. The report, being then read, stated that 36 boys had been boarded, lodged, and clothed in the ragings institution; 180 children of each sex, and 40 adults, had been under daily tuition; 70 boys had received instruction in various trades, and 20 of each sex had been provided with a daily dinner. A Sunday-school, with an average attendance of 43, had been in constant operation; and a library and reading-room had been opened; eight boys and three men had been sent to the colonies. The report was adopted, and a vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the meeting.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

"La Tempesta" has been repeated with yet more finely developed lights and shades, and a higher phase of artistic success than was manifested in the earlier performances of this magnificent production of Shakspeare and Scribe. Consideration on every perusal or to whom the splendid work was consigned, had studied individual personation, the opportunity of weighing the composition as an entirety, has enabled the several artistes to co-operate with even increased effect; and, in theatrical diction, to play to each other, with a spontaneity rarely witnessed upon the stage. Such is the impression we have received from witnessing the last two or three repetitions of "La Tempesta." Yet it would be unfair to pass out to those who have not gone through the same process of observation, in what especial portions of the composition this balance of power has become more remarkably evident. If the genius with which each artist has contributed, Lablache, Grisi, and Carlotta Grisi, exist upon a conception, "with the first intention," is too powerful to leave their subsequent delicate touches of colour palpable to the least tutored sense, those who believe in the continual life and freshness of high art will easily comprehend how an inspired artist can, without departing from the original truth of his idea, perpetually render it an ever-varying succession of illustrative lights.

Among the many touches which have added a richer value to the pictures of "La Tempesta," we may cite the instance where Caliban, having possession of the magic flowers, feels his full power over the beauteous Miranda. So long as the eyes of the daughter of Prospero are averted from the gaze of the monster, the brutal instinct is rampant; but the instant they are turned upon him, the might of pure womanhood gains its ascendant, and the witch-begotten savage stands shrinking, trembling, and abashed before the enchantress. Such gradual indication of the drink are also marvellously depicted: the powerless state of the nerves, the semi-somnolency, the physical reaction, and the climax of riotous jollity, are each and all worthy the pencil of a Teniers or a Poussin. The quaint mimicry of Carlotta Grisi, contrasted beautifully with the lubber fiend. Madame Sontag continues to command encores in her principal arias; and the sweet-toned voice of Bancardé in Fernando and the mellow organ of Coletti in Prospero combine to impart a perfect union in the illustration of "La Tempesta."

It is well known that Cimarosa's opera of "Il Matrimonio Segreto" is a work redolent of delicious melody and masterly instrumentation, and that, upon its first production in the private theatre of the Emperor Joseph and his Court, it was encored in its entirety. The lyrical personages on Thursday next at Her Majesty's Theatre, will present an ensemble never witnessed on any stage. Lablache will, of course, sound his great part of the deaf Geronimo; and the sisters will be represented by Mdme. Sontag, Mdme. Parodi, and Mdme. Frezzolini. Independently, however, of this signal attraction, the last act of "Anna Boleyn" will be given for Parodi; and Coletti will appear in his great air in "I due Foscari." In the ballet there will be selections from "Esmeralda," with Carlotta Grisi and her charming "Truandine;" and, in the popular "Ice Ballet," Amalia Ferraris will exhibit her extraordinary dancing.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

There have been four representations of Meyerbeer's "Prophète." The execution of this elaborate production is marvellously fine this season, under Costa's careful and zealous supervision. Mdme. Castellan's Bertha, on Tuesday night, was played and sung with more than ordinary animation and finish. Mario, Polonini, and Formès, as the three Anabaptists, are important. Lablache's will, of course, stand his great part of the deaf Geronimo; and the sisters will be represented by Mdme. Sontag, Mdme. Parodi, and Mdme. Frezzolini. Independently, however, of this signal attraction, the last act of "Anna Boleyn" will be given for Parodi; and Coletti will appear in his great air in "I due Foscari." In the ballet there will be selections from "Esmeralda," with Carlotta Grisi and her charming "Truandine;" and, in the popular "Ice Ballet," Amalia Ferraris will exhibit her extraordinary dancing.

There have been four representations of Meyerbeer's "Prophète." The execution of this elaborate production is marvellously fine this season, under Costa's careful and zealous supervision. Mdme. Castellan's Bertha, on Tuesday night, was played and sung with more than ordinary animation and finish. Mario, Polonini, and Formès, as the three Anabaptists, are important. Lablache will, of course, sound his great part of the deaf Geronimo; and the sisters will be represented by Mdme. Sontag, Mdme. Parodi, and Mdme. Frezzolini. Independently, however, of this signal attraction, the last act of "Anna Boleyn" will be given for Parodi; and Coletti will appear in his great air in "I due Foscari." In the ballet there will be selections from "Esmeralda," with Carlotta Grisi and her charming "Truandine;" and, in the popular "Ice Ballet," Amalia Ferraris will exhibit her extraordinary dancing.

OLYMPIC

This theatre was opened on Monday, to enable Miss Fanny Vining to take a benefit. The house was respectably attended. The bénéficiare appeared in three characters—as Laura Lesson, in "Time Tries All:" as the heroine in a new and original drama by Mr. Spicer, called "My Son-in-Law;" and as the boy Albert, in "William Tell." In all, she acquitted herself to the satisfaction of the audience; and acted, indeed, with considerable taste and judgment. Mr. F. Vining was, as usual, excellent in the Honorable Augustus Callander Yawn; and Mr. Davenport performed William Tell with great spirit, energy, and feeling. Mr. Spicer's comedietta was elegant and lively: well imitated from the best of the French drawingroom pieces. The Nepaulese Embassy were present.

SURREY.

Mr. Creswick has returned to this theatre, and during the week has performed Brutus, in Mr. Howard Payne's tragedy of that name.

STRAND.

"Gwynneth Vaughan" has been revived here, for a concluding piece.

MRS. GLOVER.—Wednesday, the 10th of July, has been fixed for the benefit of this deserving favourite of the public, on the occasion of her final retirement from the stage. The performance will take place at Drury-Lane Theatre, "under the distinguished patronage, and the claims of the bénéficiare, are thus concisely stated in the circular issued on the occasion: "Mrs. Glover has for sixty-four years been a member of the theatrical profession; of that time, fifty-three years she has been devoted to the British stage. From the period her whole career she has occupied a distinguished place in the foremost ranks of genius. She has devoted her earnings to the support of five generations: her grandfather, her parents, her husband, her children, and grandchildren, have successively been mainly dependent upon her exertions. The object of the proposed benefit is, in the first place, to offer a testimony of public respect to merit so rare; and, in the second place, to provide means for the comfortable support of the remaining years of a life worn by long toil, and already beginning to sink under the effects of natural decay."

MDLLE. RACHEL—ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—The celebrated actress Mdlle. Rachel will commence a short engagement at the above theatre, on Monday evening next. Her opening part will be that of Phedre, in Racine's celebrated tragedy of that name. "Bajazet" and the new petite comedy "Le Moineau de Lesbie" will be the performance on Wednesday; and on Friday (for the first time in this country), Corneille's renowned tragedy of "Polyeucte." It is intended, we believe, to give a change of performance every evening

Mr. Albert Smith will give a morning performance at Willis's Rooms, on "Overland Mail" entertainment, at Willis's Rooms, on Wednesday, the 10th of July. The last views, added by Mr. William Beverley, of the great cutting on the Avignon and Marseilles Railway, and the diligence changing horses in Dijon, are eminently beautiful.

Miss Woolgar announces her benefit at the Adelphi Theatre, for Wednesday evening next. The popularity which this young lady enjoys, no less from her talents than her estimable private character, will, without doubt, be fully evidenced on that occasion.

THE NEW SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER-COLOURS.—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Colonel Grey and Miss Anson, accompanied by the Prince of Prussia, honoured the New Society of Painters in Water-Colours, by visiting their gallery on Thursday. Her Majesty was graciously pleased to mark her approbation of the exhibition by purchasing Mr. Warren's classical Egyptian picture of the "Wise Men from the East," and Mr. Corbould's beautiful "Floreire de Nerve."

PANORAMA OF CONSTANTINOPLE.—Mr. Allom has just completed a moving panorama of the Passage of the Dardanelles, Constantinople, and the Bosphorus, from sketches made by the Artist during a ten months' residence in the East.

The cod fishery on the east coast of Finmarken promises to be more than usually productive this season, and in consequence no less than 2500 boats manned by 10,000 men, have already proceeded on their way to the fishing grounds.

The suspension-bridge of Fumel, over the Lot (France), fell in a week ago, while undergoing repair. The fall took place in consequence of one of the piers giving way. Three men were killed, and two were seriously, and it is feared mortally, wounded. A young man fell into the water, and was rescued by a person who had hastened to the spot to render assistance: this person was the young man's father.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The preliminary arrangements are completed for erecting a building on a site of the Rolls estate sufficiently large to contain the public records and archives. The Rolls House, Rolls Court, and present public buildings on the Rolls estate, are intended to be preserved in the first instance for the transaction of business. Besides affording ample room for arranging and preserving the records now in the custody of the Master of the Rolls, the new structure will give room to the public records which may accrue for the next twenty years

On Saturday last, General Garibaldi, the celebrated military leader of the recent Republican movement at Rome, arrived at Liverpool by the steamer Queen from Gibraltar. The general, who was accompanied by an aide-de-camp, looked exceedingly well in health, and appeared in excellent spirits. He will remain in Liverpool for a short time, and contemplates a visit to America.

The Rev. W. Maskell was received on Saturday last into the Roman Catholic Church at the chapel in Spanish-place.

Accounts from the west coast of South America mention that her Majesty's ships Enterprise and Investigator, en route for the Arctic Ocean, had passed through the Straits of Magellan.

Among the passengers that arrived at New York on Saturday, 31st of May, in the packet-ship Yorkshire, were two individuals who were very overloaded, but who had in their possession some £38,000 which was snugly placed in a carpet-bag. After the arrival of the vessel they deposited the money with Messrs. Taber and Bagley, for safe keeping; and then seemed perfectly at ease and secure until the next day, when the real owners arrived, who brought their full description, and the news that they were formerly clerks in the Bank of Ireland, Cork, and had absconded with a heavy amount of specie and bank-notes of various denominations. They were immediately taken prisoners.

Lord Howden, recently appointed Ambassador to Spain, has, it is said, sold his estates in Yorkshire to Lord Londesborough, for £200,000. Grimston is one of the most beautiful houses in England, and contains a splendid collection of ancient pictures, with many valuable pictures and statues, and furniture of the most costly description.

On the arrival of the 2 50 P.M. train from Woolwich on Monday, and while the passengers were at the ticket platform of the London station, the engine having been detached, and being in the act of moving to the rear of the train to propel it into the shed, one of the ticket-collectors imprudently attempted to cross the line, when he was knocked down by the engine. The poor fellow was immediately conveyed to St. Thomas's Hospital, where he shortly expired from the severe injury he had received.

Out of the 35,000 persons liable to contribute to defray the debts of the late Angerstein, Baker, Pyramus, and Davenport Railways, and who have been applied to for that purpose through the Post-office by the official manager, Mr. Sandeman, only 20,000 can be traced, the remaining 15,000 being returned through the Dead Letter Office either as "not known," dead, or gone away.

The total number of emigrants for the United States and Canada that departed from the port of Limerick in the year 1849 amounted to 11,554.

Official returns show that, from the beginning of the season for manufacturing sugar up to the end of May, the quantity of sugar produced in France amounted to 60,000,000 kilogrammes, though in the corresponding period of last year it was only 37,000,000 kilogrammes. The consumption, however, did not increase to the same extent; there remained on hand in the manufactories 14,000,000 kilogrammes, and in the entrepôts 6,000,000 kilogrammes, whilst last year the quantities were only 10,000,000 and 3,000,000 kilogrammes.

The Italian journals state that an amnesty will be granted on the 16th August, the day on which the Austrian Emperor will attain his 21st year, to the exiled Lombards, who will be called on to return to their homes, or their property will be subjected to an absentee tax of 30 per cent.

On the 1st July, a meeting of delegates of all the Lombardo-Venetian towns is to be held at Verona to negotiate the raising of the voluntary (forced?) loan of 120,000 livres.

The Senate of St. Petersburgh has published an imperial ukase, according to which a special committee of inquiry is appointed for examining all scientific works published by private persons, as well as all publications for young people, be they original or translations. The committee, which is instituted for two years, is to pay special attention to the moral tendency and the mode of treating the different books, however, which are subject to the ecclesiastical censorship will not be submitted to this committee.

A duel took place on the 15th inst., ten miles from Turin, between Count Guglielmo and M Suen. The cause was that the latter had written against Manin, and the former had taken his defence in no measured terms. The duel was fought with pistols, it being understood that it should continue till the result was fatal to one of the combatants. M. Soler fired first, and M. Assanti, on the contrary, hit his adversary in the head, and laid him dead.

The President of the French Republic, on the report of the Minister of War, has decreed that, as a souvenir of the glorious death of General de Barral in a recent attack on the Kabyle tribes, the first centre of European population to be created in Algeria shall bear his name.

On Thursday week, two gentlemen, while fishing on the whiting ground, about three miles inside the Eddystone Lighthouse, in a fine yacht, hooked a bottle-nose shark, about thirty inches long, which they secured without much difficulty. In a short time afterwards there was another tremendous pull on one of the lines, and, after a desperate struggle, they succeeded in landing another shark," of the blue species, was brought to the edge of the water, almost in an exhausted state; a bight of rope was then slung just within its tail, and it was hauled into the boat. It measured 6 feet 9 inches in length, and weighed about 60lb.

It cannot be too often repeated at this season of the year that buttermilk applied to parts affected by the fly on sheep and lambs is an infallible remedy.

Recent accounts from Persia mention the discovery of a plot at Tabreez for the overthrow of the government. The scheme was frustrated, and five of the chief conspirators were decapitated. Mr. Herbert has made such progress with the line under the left arm, over the gates of the town. Nine were executed previously.

Very valuable silver lead ore has been discovered at Itchington Hill, near Bristol, in Gloucestershire. Assays have been made, the ore yielding the extraordinary quantity of 70 ounces of silver to the ton.

At Rennison's Baths, Bristol, a celebrated diver, last week, jumped from an elevation of eighty feet, with a pair of boats in his hand, which, before rising to the surface of the water, he had pulled out from his feet.

A vessel of large tonnage, which has just arrived from Bombay, has brought the very large quantity of 6332 bales and 18 half-bales of cotton as a portion of her cargo, consigned to order.

A fatal duel has just taken place at Berlin, between a young Pole named Iomicki, who was serving his term of military service in the Rifles of the Guard, and some person as yet unknown. The Pole was one of those tried with Mieroslawski in 1847, for the insurrectionary movement of that year in Posen. A dispute had occurred between him and his opponent in a public room, and a challenge passed. In the evening Tomicki got a card of absence from his barracks, and proceeded to the appointed spot, where he was found in a field beyond the Copnicker Gate on the following morning. He had been shot through the head. The duel must have taken place with seconds only on the part of the German.

The whole of the Royal Artillery in the garrison at Woolwich assembled in undress uniform at seven o'clock A.M. on Monday, and proceeded to the common, where the troops went through the manœuvres of a sham fight, taking up certain positions in their advance, and retreating when pressed by a greater force or superior tactics. The sham fight was carried on with ten rounds of blank cartridge from each of the guns of the Royal Horse Artillery and field batteries, and six rounds from each of the guns of the mounting. The usual guard-mounting, which takes place daily at 10 A.M., did not take place until 3 P.

A fire broke out on Monday evening, at about twenty minutes past 9 o'clock, in the Sugar Coffee house, 110, Chancery-lane, in the vicinage of the Law Institution. All the inhabitants were quickly got out of the house, and no persons were injured. The upper part of the premises were totally destroyed, and the bottom of the building was considerably damaged. The fire was caused by a lodger in a state of intoxication having ignited his bedclothes.

Busts of Generals de Barral, Regnault, Duvivier, de Brèa, and Negrier (the last four generals were, it will be remembered, killed in the insurrection of 1848) are to be placed in the palace at Versailles, amongst the collection of generals who have fallen in battle.

Workmen are at present occupied in placing in the galleries of Versailles several objects of art recently removed from the museums of Paris. A statue of Napoleon is to be put in a vacant place in what is called the Escalier des Princes, leading to the Galerie des Batailles. In the gallery at the bottom of the staircase, statues of Turgot, Malesherbes, and Laplace are to be deposited. The magnificent bronze doors of the XV. style, Escalinka, are being removed from the passage of the south wing leading to the gardens, and replaced by those of Mansart, the architect of the palace, and Le Notre, who laid out the gardens.

A beautiful and extensive conservatory is now being erected in the gardens at Raby Castle, by the Duke of Cleveland.

At a meeting of agriculturists, held at Northampton, on Saturday (John Beasley, Esq., in the chair), it was resolved to establish a "Mutual Cattle Insurance Society." This step, it was stated, had been rendered necessary from the continued and heavy losses of graziers from pleuro pneumonia, and the practical difficulties in the way of connecting themselves with a metropolitan society.

Last week the wife of James Garth, farmer, of Whitfield Haye, near Rochdale, went into a field and was there attacked by a cow, and had her arm broken in two places, besides receiving bruises in different parts of her body. Another cow in the same pasture immediately came to Mrs. Garth's rescue, drove away her tormentor into the middle of the field, and then returned to Mrs. Garth, licked the blood from her wound, and stood over her as a protectress till assistance was rendered.

The total number of persons detected in illicit distillation in Ireland in 1848 was 1741; of these, 839 were prosecuted, and 692 convicted; in 1849, the number of detections was 2552, the prosecutions 1113, and the convictions 962; in the year ending the 5th of April, 1850, the detections were 2746, the prosecutions 1217, and the convictions 1089.

THE "ORION" STEAMER."

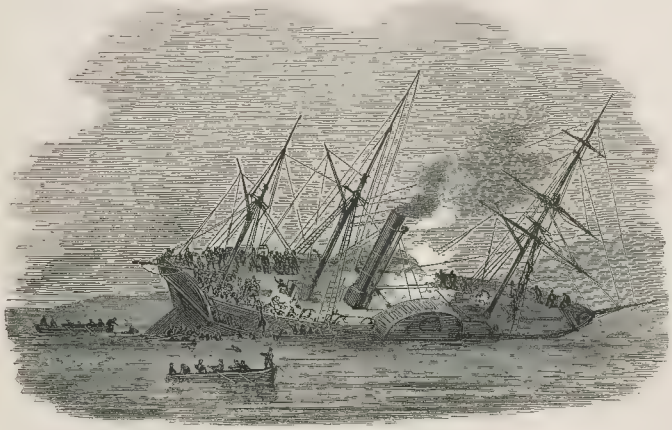
WRECK OF THE "ORION."

In our Journal of last week we recorded this lamentable catastrophe. We are now enabled, by Correspondenze, to engrave the ill-fated vessel, with three Views of her wreck, and give some additional particulars.

(From a Correspondent.)

Dinvio, Portpatrick, 25th June, 1850.

SIR,—I am unable to give you many additional particulars, except that the weather continues fine; the divers also pursue their labours on every favourable opportunity, and considerable property and several dead bodies have been brought ashore—in all, this evening, thirty-six, including those of Mr. Hume, of Glasgow, and Miss Gladston, of Liverpool. Captain M'Neill's corpse has, however, not yet been found. I am still of opinion that at least the lives of nearly one hundred persons have been lost in this heartrending affair. The Barnaugh Rock, on which the Orion struck, is within a few yards of the shore, and of the high cliffs of Catercannan, and exactly, according to the Ordnance Survey recently published, 682 yards right across to Barnaugh Rocks and the cliffs, N.W. from the old Lighthouse, which she had just closely passed. Lieut. Oke's statement as to the Orion having struck on a sunken reef of rocks, 150 yards in length, called "the Bushes;" and that of others, as to her endeavouring to pass between a well-known sunken rock and the shore, are, I should say, mistakes—no such sunken rocks being there. An authoritatively correct statement of facts may, however, be shortly expected, Captain Denham, R.N., superintendent from the Admiralty, having this day arrived at Portpatrick, and being at this moment afloat, inspecting the wreck and cliffs.



THE "ORION" SINKING.

The attention and anxieties of all parties to afford relief to the surviving sufferers are beyond all praise. In addition to those persons whose meritorious conduct has been already noticed, I would particularly mention Captain Hawes, R.N., and his Superintendent, Mr. Hannay, of the Harbour-Works; Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Blair, of Dunskey, were also on the spot at an early hour with large supplies of clothes, and kind invitations to all and sundry to Dunskey House. The fiscal (Mr. Caird), Mr. M'Neil, J.P., Mr. N. Taylor, J.P., from Stranraer, and Mr Sheriff M'Duff Rhind, were also in attendance.

I am yours, very respectfully,

J. MURDOCK, J.P.

Among the latest particulars, it is stated from Portpatrick that the body of Mrs. Smith was recovered on Saturday, with a gold watch upon it, and a purse containing twenty-four sovereigns. The body of Mr. Francis Murrach, late of Alloa, was likewise recovered the same day. On Monday morning, the body of Mr. Hume, wool merchant, Glasgow, was found near the wreck; and the body of a woman and a child, supposed to have been deck passengers, were brought up from the cabin on Sunday. The body of Master Martin, son of the Liverpool manager of the company, has likewise been found.

An attempt, we understand, will be made to raise the ship. Captain Caffin, R.N., who has had considerable experience in matters of this kind, has offered his gratuitous services in any endeavour which may be made for that purpose.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

The first Engraving shows the vessel entire.

The second Illustration is from a Sketch of the Orion, as she appeared just before she went down. It is by a Correspondent, who was on board the wrecked vessel, and who thus describes the catastrophe:—

"Not many minutes after she struck, the bows went down under water, and she heeled over to the starboard side, so much so that no one could stand except by holding by the sides: all was confusion around me; the ladies screaming, and men crying for help from the shore. Some went down to their cabins to save some part of their clothing, and never came up again alive. By this time the vessel had sunk about half; those that could swim jumped into the water, and others were saved by shore-boats, which had now come in numbers, and did every thing to rescue them from drowning.

"Too much praise cannot be given to the gentlemen of Portpatrick for their kindness to the sufferers in housing them and giving them clothing; but especially to Mr. John Oke, son of Lieut. Oke of the Royal Navy, who was the first that took boat and went to save the passengers; and he succeeded in saving 15 or more persons, and afterwards dressed them, and did everything to make them comfortable. "M. V., passenger."

The third Engraving shows the wrecked ship as she lay sunk at Portpatrick, about two gun-shots to the north of the lighthouse; the deck being then considered 18 feet under water, and the top of one of the paddle-boxes being just seen above, it being low-water when she struck, as well as when this Sketch was taken.

The fourth Engraving shows the wreck, as it appeared on the following day, at high water.

SOYER, SCRIBE, AND HALEVY.—Among the five or six hundred dishes provided by M. Soyer at Chancellor-House, Hammersmith, the seat of S. Lumley, Esq., where the élite of fashion, arts, and sciences were present, at his splendid entertainment on Wednesday week, one of the dishes attracted the general attention and admiration of the company, especially that of the great author and maestro, it being the exact representation in miniature of the ship in the "Tempesta" falling in the wave under the magic power of Ariel. The new culinary innovation was named Croustade Shakespearienne à la Halévy-Scribe. The addition of two charitreuses de pêche, in imitation of barrels for cargo, were in the interior of the dismasted vessel; on the top of each was seen, through a very clear jelly, beautifully framed, the portraits of the two celebrated French visitors. The waves were represented by spun sugar and transparent jelly, and the wrecked cargo by grapes, peaches, apricots, &c., floating around the ship. The illustrious guests highly complimented M. Soyer on the appropriate novelty; and Mdme. Scribe observed that it was a pleasing honour bestowed upon her husband; to which M. Soyer replied—"Honour! Madame? No honour could exceed his greatness; for if the shade of Molière were to rise from his tomb, it would be jealous of his talents."

Tiverton Gaol is at this moment empty for the first time during the last 17 years; so that out of a population of 12,000 inhabitants there is not now a single felon in custody.

WRECK OF THE "ORION," AT LOW WATER.

WRECK OF THE "ORION," AT HIGH WATER.

HORTICULTURAL FETE AT CHELTENHAM.—THE LAWN.

CHELTENHAM GRAND HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION.

THIS monster Floral Exposition took place on the 20th inst., and is considered to have been the most brilliant display of the kind ever produced in the provinces, vieing with the great metropolitan far-famed Chiswick Fêtes. The day was most propitious; the sun shone resplendently, though the Old Well Walk afforded refreshing shelter. At early dawn vans constructed for the purpose of conveying plants arrived in rapid succession from various parts of the country, and deposited their burthens of fruits and flowers at the Royal Old Wells, the situation selected for this Floralia.

Immediately on entering the grounds the visitor is struck with the grandeur of an avenue of majestic elms, the length exceeding a quarter of a mile, and its width being thirty feet. The trees are about a hundred feet in height, and more than as many years' growth; the intermediate spaces between them form a series of verdant arches opening upon an extensive and tastefully arranged archery-ground: opposite is a spacious and excellent bowling-green. In the centre of this grateful grove stands the new Pump-room, as shown in the Illustration. It is a stately hall, and the largest room in the county. At one extremity is a stage for dramatic representations, with a green-room, and all other theatrical appointments. The corresponding wing includes a conservatory. In the interior, a balcony is in course of construction, the central portion of which will be appropriately fitted up and designated the Royal box, to be retained especially for the use of her Majesty whenever she may honour Cheltenham with her presence. It will be completed in time for the Nepaulese Ambassador, who has signified his intention of visiting Cheltenham. Facing this tasteful construction is the principal promenade walk, with its orchestra. The remainder of the estate is laid out with great skill and elegance, in lawns, walks, and shrubberies, embellished with rustic seats, rock-work, &c. At nine o'clock, a discharge of cannon, and a merry peal from the bells of the picturesque parish church, sounded "the note of preparation." The Censors then commenced to adjudicate the prizes; the arbitrators being Mr. Thomas Ingram, her Majesty's gardener, Windsor; Mr. Charles Turner, Royal Nursery, Slough; Mr. R. Glendinning, Chiswick Gardens, for the flower department; and the head gardeners of Earl Somers, Eastnor Park; of Earl Fitzhardinge, Berkeley Castle; of Earl Coventry, Croome Park for the fruit and vegetables. These competent judges pronounced the productions to be of the finest description.

PRIZE PITCHER-PLANT.

At one o'clock the Queen's gate was thrown open, when a continuous stream of company for hours poured into the pleasure-grounds, presenting a galaxy of beauty, rank, and fashion very rarely equalled. Between six and seven thousand were present. The specimens of flowers and plants occupied the Pump-room, and an immense marquée, which enclosed the whole of the centre walk.

The fruit and garden esculents, which were remarkable for their extraordinary richness, magnitude, and excellent quality, were exhibited in another tent: in this department, the large pomela or shaddock, and fine Egyptian lemons, attracted much attention. Orchides, calceolarias, pelargoniums, and exotics from every clime were here collected. The Moth Plant of Java, the Stanhopea, and the cotton trees, excited great interest; but the grand magnet was the Chinese Pitcher Plant. Its appearance is inconceivably singular and interesting, having fine large pitchers, perfect and classical in shape, gracefully pendent from the points of the stronger leaves. (See the Illustration.)

The band of the 1st Regiment of Life Guards was in attendance, and played alternately with the corps of musicians attached to the establishment; a third orchestra performed in the Pump-room. The great success of their first horticultural exhibition (on a large scale) must have been particularly gratifying to the residents of Cheltenham; who, it appears, are determined to provide first-class attractions and entertainments for their visitors. They never experienced so gay and full a summer season as the present.

THE ROYAL WELL WALK AND PUMP-ROOM.

The Pitcher Plant was first discovered by Dr. Jack, in the year 1819, in the Island of Singapore, and named Nepenthes Raffleziana, in compliment to Sir Stamford Raffles. In 1845, a Wardian case of the plants was sent to the Royal Gardens at Kew by Captain Bethune, R.N.; and in 1847, Mr. Thomas Lobb, a gentleman sent to the East to collect rare and beautiful plants for Messrs. Veitch and Son, nurserymen, of Exeter, brought home with him a considerable number of this and other remarkable Indian Pitcher Plants. It is from this source the greater portion of the plants now in cultivation have originated.

The plant exhibited by Messrs. Veitch and Son at Cheltenham on the 20th, and here represented, was one of the identical plants brought home by Mr. Lobb. The same plant, with others, have also been exhibited at the great metropolitan shows at Chiswick and Regent's Park, and on all occasions have been greatly admired. It received the first prize at Cheltenham, for new and rare plants with remarkable foliage.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, June 30.—Fifth Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, July 1.—Quarter Sessions commence.
TUESDAY, 2.—Oxford Act and Encænia Commencement.
WEDNESDAY, 3.—Dog Days begin.
THURSDAY, 4.—Translation of St. Martin.
FRIDAY, 5.—Cambridge Term ends.
SATURDAY, 6.—Oxford Term ends.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 6, 1850.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. h m | A.M. h m | A.M. h m | A.M. h m | A.M. h m | A.M. h m | A.M. h m
5 30 | 5 49 | 6 8 | 6 28 | 6 50 | 7 15 | 7 40 | 8 8 | 8 40 | 9 15 | 9 55 | 10 50 | 11 0

FRENCH PLAYS.—ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—FIRST APPEARANCE of Mdlle RACHEL, MONDAY NEXT, JULY 1, in Racine's Tragedy of PHEDRE.—WEDNESDAY, JULY 3, BAJAZET.—FRIDAY, JULY 5, POLYEUCTE, MARTYR. Pauline, Mdlle Rachel. LE MONDAU DE LESBIE. The Characters of Leucadie by Mdlle Rachel.—On SATURDAY, JULY 6, a New Play, in Five Acts, by MM Scribe et Le Gove, entitled ADRIENNE LE COUVREUR. Adrienne, Mdlle Rachel. Boxes and Stalls may be secured at Mr. MITCHELL'S, Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street; and at the Box-office

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—On MONDAY next, JULY 1st and during the week, Lord Byron's MAZEPPA AND THE WILD HORSE, with all its original and thrilling effects. To be succeeded by an unusually varied and attractive routine of Batty's FEATS OF THE ARENA. To conclude with the petite ballet of LOVE IN THE HIGHLANDS.—Box-office open from Eleven till Four. Stage-manager, Mr. W. Wes

MR. ALBERT SMITH will give his new ENTERTAINMENT, entitled THE OVERLAND MAIL, at WILLIS'S ROOMS, on MONDAY EVENING NEXT, and on WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 10.—Tickets and Stalls to be had only at SAMS'S Royal Library, St. James's.—The Entertainment will also be given at Bromford, Ess'ex; at Kensington, July 9th; and Highbury, July 11th.

MR. JOHN PARRY'S ENTERTAINMENT, MUSIC-HALL, Store-street.—Mr. JOHN PARRY will have the honour of repeating his new Entertainment, entitled NOVES, VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL, at the above rooms, on MONDAY EVENING next, JULY 1st, commence ay at Half- ast Eight.—Tickets to be had of the principal Music sellers. Stall's and Private Boxes to be had of Mr. CHAPPELL, 6, and 12, New Bon'-street, and at the Ha l.

MADAME DE LOZANO'S ANNUAL CONCERT on WEDNESDAY EVENING, 17th JULY, at the ROYAL SOHO THEATRE, 73, Dean-street. To Commence at Eight o'Clock.—Mdme. de LOZANO will Introduce, during the Concert, some NEW SPANISH SONGS. Part ers will be duly announced, and meantime, cir'ulars, at the rest dence of Mdme. de Lozano, 11, Berners-street, Exeter-square, or at the principal Music sellers'.

MR. HENRY WYLDE'S SECOND MATINEE MUSICALE will take p ace at WILLIS'S ROOMS, King-street, St James's, WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 10, when he will perform Beethoven's Trio in C, Mozart's Quartet in E flat, and Beethoven's Sonata Op. 13 Tickets, 10s. 6d. and 5s. each, to be had of Mr. MILLS, 140, New Bond-street, and of Messrs. CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent-street.

SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER-COLOURS.—The FORTY-SIXTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, at their Gallery, 5, Pall-Mall East, from Nine to Dusk.—Admittance, One Shilling. Catalogue, Sixpence.
GEORGE FRIPP, Sec.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER-COLOURS. THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, at their GALLERY, 88, PALL-MALL, opposite St. James's Palace, daily from Nine till Dusk.—Admission, 1s.
JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

THE HIPPOPOTAMUS, presented by H.H. the Viceroy of Egypt to the Zoological Society of London, is exhibited daily from One to Six o'clock, at their GARDENS in the Regent's Park. The head of the late Lion of Exeter 'Change will perform, by permission of Colonel Hall, every Saturday, at four o'clock. Admission, ONE SHILLING, on Mondays, SIXPENCE.
D. W. MITCHELL, R.A.

TRAFALGAR MODEL is unequalled in the World, not only as regards a faithful Representation of that great Battle, but also in the effect portrayed in a number of small but well-rigged ships, apparently skimming over a large surface of beautifully imitated Sea. Admission, One Shilling; Children Half-price. Open from Ten in the Morning till Ten in the Evening, at 168, New Bond-street, next to the Clarendon Hotel.

BREES' FRESH SERIES of PANORAMIC VIEWS of NEW ZEALAND is NOW OPEN at the LINWOOD GALLERY, Leicester-square.—The Great Canterbury Plains, Nelson, Otago, Taranaki, New Plymouth (or the Garden of New Zealand), Auckland, Hokianga, the Bay of Islands, with Hell sinking down the Flagstaff, &c From Twelve till Five; and Half-past Seven till Half-past Nine.—Admission, 1s. 3d. and 2s

HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY'S VISIT TO IRELAND—Illustrated by a Grand Moving Diorama, with some of the most charming scenery in that country, including the lovely lakes of Killarney, by Mr. P. Phillips, now open at the Chinese Gallery, Hyde Park Corner. Daily at 3, Evening at 8. Admission 1s.; Reserved Seats, 2s. An interesting historical record of the event may be had at the Gallery.

INDIA OVERLAND MAIL.—DIORAMA GALLERY of ILLUSTRATION, 14, REGENT-STREET.—Additional Picture, MADRAS.—A Gigantic MOVING DIORAMA, ILLUSTRATING the ROUTE of the OVERLAND MAIL to INDIA, from Southampton to Madras and Calcutta, is now OPEN DAILY.—Morning, Twelve; Afternoon, Three Evening, Eight.—Admission, 1s.; Stalls, 2s 6d.; Reserved Seats, 3s. Doors open half-an-hour before each representation

COLONEL FREMONT'S OVERLAND ROUTE to OREGON, TEXAS, and CALIFORNIA, illustrated by a grand moving painting from Washington city, shows eight sublime views of the great Cold Mines, NOW EXHIBITING at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, every morning at a Quarter to Three; evening, a Quarter to Eight. Admission, 1s.; Lower Seats, 2s.

VALLEY OF THE NILE.—The Nubian Desert. War-Dance by Bedouins. March of a Caravan by Moonlight. Morning Prayer. The Mummy of a High Priest and Relics found in the Catacombs. Both banks of the River are shown in the Panorama by T. WILTALER HALL, Piccadilly. Daily, at Three and Eight.—Admission, 1s; Fifty Tickets, 3s. Children and Schools, Half-price.

SCOTTISH FETE.—THE GRAND ANNUAL COMPETITION for CHAMPIONSHIP in ARCHERY and the SCOTTISH NATIONAL SPORTS and PASTIMES will take place on the LORD ROLLAND'S PARK, NOTTINGHAM, on MONDAY, the 1st, and TUESDAY, the 2nd of JULY, under the joint direction of the Highland Society of London and the Royal Caledonian Hunt, Edinburgh.—The Archery Meeting, of which the Most Noble the Marquis of Breadalbane is President. The Sports and Pastimes will consist in Archery, Putting the Stone, Throwing the Hammer, Tossing the Caber, Foot Racing, Broad-sword Exercise, Sword and Target opposed to the Claymore, Highland Reels, Strathspeys and Reels, and Performance on the Great Highland Bagpipe. Tickets for the Grand Stand (extending right and left of the Royal Box), One Guinea; Tickets for the Enclosure of the Grand Stand, Half-a-Guinea. Tickets for any part of the Field, Five Shillings. All the above Tickets to admit to Performances on both days. Only Ladies and Gentlemen of the Royal Toxophilite Society and Archers of Royal Standing are eligible for the Grand Stand. Vouchers for the Grand Stand can be had only of the Patrons, a list of whom, with the prices and tickets for the other parts of the field, may be had at the Libraries and principal Music-sellers

ON TUESDAY EVENING, the 2nd of JULY, a GRAND BANQUET will be given, at the FREEMASONS' TAVERN. Great Queen-street, when the PRIZES, won at the GRAND NATIONAL MEETING, will be presented to the successful competitors. Tickets for the Banquet, One Guinea each; and Tickets for the Ladies' Gallery, 5s. 6d. each; may be had of any of the Members, or at the Bar of the Tavern.

JOHN BOUCHER, Hon. Secretary.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—During this week the ALPINE SINGERS will perform daily at four, and in the Evenings at half-past Eight.—LECTURE by J. H. Pepper, Esq., on the APPARENT CONTRADICTIONS of CHEMISTRY, daily at a quarter-past Three; and every Evening at a quarter-past Nine.—Also, a NEW SERIES of DISSOLVING VIEWS, illustrating some of the WONDERS of NATURE; Scenes in the ARCTIC REGIONS and CEYLON.—DIVER and DIVING-BELL, &c.—Admission, 1s.; Schools, Half-price.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE BANK.—CAPITAL PAID UP, £75,000.

The Directors of the LONDON and WESTMINSTER BANK having accepted the Agency in London of the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE BANK, Notice is hereby given that the London and Westminster Bank receive Deposits and grant Letters of Credit on the Cape of Good Hope, payable to the Cape of Good Hope Bank, to persons who may have payments to make there, payable in Cape Town, free of any charge whatever.
J. E. EDDEN, Chairman.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

G. M. Bolton.—Cheques, formerly more common upon public occasions than at present. They are the result of a request of many persons to receive a single donation, instead of a large number of small ones. The Committee of the Literary Fund, for instance, issued a number of cheques to those who had subscribed a guinea, payable at the door of the Freemasons' Tavern, on the day of the anniversary dinner. Cheques are also frequently issued in the case of benefits at the theatres.

A. M.—ENIGMA.—An engraving of the Koh i Noor diamond, drawn from the original, was given in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS for May 25, 1850. No. 3 Page 345.

A. S.—1. 1848.—No. 1 is thanked, though we have not room to say more than of our suggestion.

R. M.—No. 1 rubbing is from a copper coin of Charles II. of Spain, struck for Majorca. No. 2 is a small copper coin, CAR. II. REX. 1684, &c., on a legend, MAIORICARVM. CAPO. No. 3 impression has been from a similar coin of the Canton of Orbo, in Switzerland. Both are very common.

ANGLOLOS.—No. 1 rubbing is a piece struck by Banks Evans, about between 1662 and 1667. No. 2 and 3 rubbings are from Nuremburg jetons struck about the middle of the sixteenth century. No. 4 rubbing is from a coin of Carthage. All of them are very common TANERY HORUS.—Mr Jerrold's new play of "the Catspaw" is published at 11, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street. The charge of 14s per half-year for our Journal includes double numbers.

SUFFOLK. The Great Britain steam-ship was fitted with her engines at Bristol

CHELTON is thanked: the communication shall be returned, if our correspondent will favour us with his full address

W. D. T, Buntingham.—Two large Views of London, one of Dublin, and one of Paris, have been published with our Journal, in addition to those of Paris and Rome, and may be had by order of any bookseller

J. H. Aberdeen, is thanked for the suggestions for the Aberdeen Railway Terminus

A SUBSCRIBER, Durham.—Address "M. le Dr. Guggenbuhl, Institution pour la guérison des Crétins, sur l'Abendberg, Interlaken, Ct. Berne."

TANERY HORUS.—T Y C means "Two-year-old Course," a short course for two-year-old horses. T M M is "Two Middle Miles," a portion of the B C (Beacon Course), at Newmarket

RUS AD ENTEO.—The variation of the compass at Winchester at present is about 22 degrees 30 minutes

WILLIAM ALDRIDGE.—The differences between the times of sun rising and setting depend upon the different positions of the sun, at the times of the equinoxes, or when the sun is situated on the Equator, the times of sun rising, &c are almost identical at all places; at times when the sun is the farthest from the Equator, the greatest difference takes place, as is shewn in the tables of the ILLUSTRATED ALMANACK, to which you refer, and which are correct

J B B, Brighton, is thanked for his remarks upon Polar temperature

EMILY B.—The Skalya, of Sicily, near Barrastapile, were an ancient Devonshire family: their pyrsical heiress married Hawkins. There were younger branches settled in the noble house hood. The arms were, "Gu. a chevron between three bats, or." The bearings of Spragu were, "Or, three cocks in pale vert between two palets pale wise, a shell gu."

M B.—A baronet's widow, marrying again, retains the precedence of her first husband

A. L. X.—A metre may be measured or changed at pleasure, and without any payment.

F B, A SUBSCRIBER FOR MANY YEARS.—The office of Serjeant-at-Arms to the House of Commons does not entitle the person holding such office to any distinctive mark upon his shield of arms. The arms of the late Sir William Gossett were "Arg. three owls, gu. a fret quarter se. Crest, a hand couped at the wrist, and erect, holding a dagger in pale." Unless the party can show regular proof of the hereditary authenticity of the arms, and of his own right to them, the Heralds will insist on a new grant

M. A. D.—No penalty attaches now-a-days to the false usage of arms.

A C H.—"Coluna non animum" is an extract from Horace: Ep. lib. i. ep. 11. The translation is "You may change your climate, not your mind," and is well rendered by Francis—

"They who through the ventorous ocean range,
Not their own passions, but the climate change."

J M C—The present Earl of Minto had four sons older than Viscount Melgrund, but they all died in infancy or youth: the first-born, who lived the longest, died at the age of ten

A. R. S.—A third son is legally entitled, with his two elder brothers, to bear the family crest during the father's lifetime

BELA.—The Earl of Holland, who suffered decapitation before the gates of Westminster Hall, in March, 1648, for his devoted loyalty to Charles I., was the second son of Robert Rich, Earl of Warwick. His arms were:—"Go. a chevron between three cross-crosslets or." Lord Capel, his fellow-sufferer, bore "Or, a lion rampant between three cross-crosslets fitchée, or"

WIGLAES, Buntingham.—See Tate's "Commercial Arithmetic"

G E.—The Government Annuities are the most secure. Application at the National Debt Office, to the Old Jewry, will ensure every information

A TRAVELLER IN THE BAR.—Try exchange in a few pence in favour of the sovereign

X X X—If he has died without a will, his wife must administer to his effects before she can receive anything at the Bank of England

FIDELIS had better order the latest edition, if he wishes to have the two Gazettes of the same week

A CORRESPONDENT, Ashbury.—Apply at the Government Annuity-office, Old Jewry

A STUDENT IN GEOGRAPHY, Durham, cannot do better than consult the "Penny Cyclopædia," the geographical portion of which is high authority

OLD LUCAS, Exmouth.—We cannot answer for the accuracy of the statement in question, not having witnessed the experiment: time has not suggested our opinion of it

D E, Ireland.—We cannot inform you.

D F P, Madely.—We do not interfere in wagers

S O P, Holyhead.—The à la mode

GALWAY.—Impracticable

W T J Blandford, we consider liable to fine

NEWTON, Devon.—Yes

G M, Stockton.—Perhaps, next week

ARCHÆOLOGIA is thanked

P B S.—We have not room for the lines

C H.—The ladies are not related

TESCO QUIS.—As the lel

NAVAL, Cork.—We are equally puzzled

T H, Brigg, had better not proceed

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Sketches of Northumbrian Castles.—Aunt Jones's Grammar.—One Hundred Beverages.
Music.—"Petit Enfant."—"Les Metamorphoses."

 Owing to the great pressure of intelligence, we are compelled this week to omit our Advertisement Page.

On SATURDAY next will be Published, Price 1s.,

A DOUBLE NUMBER
OF
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS,
WITH A SUPPLEMENT GRATIS.

This NUMBER will contain EIGHT SPLENDID ENGRAVINGS of PICTURES IN THE EXHIBITIONS OF THE PRESENT SEASON.

1. The Wind on Shore. Painted by T. Creswick, A.
2. The Child's Prayer. R. Redgrave, A.
3. Too Truthful. A Solomon.
4. The Roadside Inn at Pourville. C. Rogers. T. F. Marshall.
5. Market-boats at Boulogne. J. Wood. Goodall.
6. The Stirrup Cup. G. F. Herring.
7. The Highland Coronach. R. M'Ian.
8. The Guard-Room. L. Haghe.

CAMO.

EMIGRATION SCENES:

1. The Government Office.
2. Getting on board.
3. Searching for Stowaways.
4. Examination of Passengers.

MEETING OF THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE, AT OXFORD:
Emblematic Groups from various Colleges.
William of Wayntleet's Shoes, Magdalen College.
Queen Elizabeth's Stirrup, Queen's College.
Silver-gilt Chrismatory.
Ancient Salver; and other Antiquities from the Institute Museum.

Paris Fashions for July. (5 Engravings.)
California: San Francisco.
Capture of a Slaver, by H. M. S. V. Pluto.
The Providencia Steamer.
Superb Plate for Presentation to the Marquis of Tweeddale.
Monument at Berlin to the Prussian Soldiers who fell in 1848-9.
Jersey Race Cup, given by her Majesty.
Watering-Places: Herne Bay.
Original Ballad, Illustrated by Harvey; the Music by Rodwell.
Chapel of the Consumption Hospital, Brompton.
Subjects for Eels. Drawn by Duncan.
Villa at Antigua.
Mandrill Baboons in the Zoological Society's Gardens.
Voyage from the Cape of Good Hope to the Mauritius. (Two Sketches.
View of Adelaide, South Australia,

In addition to various other interesting Illustrations.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1850.

MINISTERS have formally confessed in the House of Commons what we anticipated in the few remarks we last week made upon the subject, that they have played a practical joke; and that they have only permitted the friends of the rigid outward observance of the Sabbath to stop all postal communication on the Sunday, to convince them practically of the mischief they intend, and the evil they would inflict upon the country if their views in all similar respects could be thoroughly carried out. But the members of the Government, in disclaiming all sympathy with the ultra-Sabbatarians, and in denying the imputation of any design to convert the cheerful Sunday of Christians into the gloomy Sabbath of Jews and Puritans, have not absolved themselves from the charge of a dereliction of imperative duty or of thoughtless folly, in taking such means to convince them. It was not necessary to create all the confusion, bitterness, and ill-feeling which have been excited throughout the country by the stoppage of all postal communication on the Sunday, in order to give the rigid observers of the Sabbath a lesson of social politics as well as Christian toleration. We fear that Ministers, notwithstanding their good intentions in the matter, must bear the principal blame of this wanton interference with the habits, feelings, wants, and observances of the whole community. It appears that the privation is to continue until the 9th of July at the earliest, when Mr. Locke will bring the whole question before the House of Commons, and take its formal vote, to decide whether for the future we are to have a Sabbath or a Sunday in Great Britain. There can be little, if any, doubt of the result. It is morally certain that the people, after a few weeks' annoyance, will again be permitted the quiet enjoyment of the privileges which they have legally possessed since the first establishment of the Post-office.

From the slight experience already endured, there can be no question that the principal result of the change—if by any extraordinary chance it should be legalised—would be to create an immense increase of Sunday labour. The columns of our daily contemporaries teem with letters upon the subject, detailing the grievances which the writers have endured; and, no doubt, the Post-master-General—to whom we advise all who suffer inconvenience or loss to write their complaints—sees upon his official table the satisfactory proofs of the wrong and the vexation of which he has been the innocent instrument. Lord Brougham related in the House of Lords a case of grievous hardship, which led to the employment of much additional labour on Monday last; and the Correspondents of the Times, Chronicle, and other journals, point out in what manner they have been compelled—being the judges of the necessity and mercy of the case—to employ private messengers instead of the Post-office. One of the first very first, orders that reached London for the transmission of Saturday newspapers by railway parcel, instead of by the Post-office, came from the Exchange of Glasgow, the very focus and capital of Sabbatarianism; and Mr. Chambers, of Edinburgh, has shown how much even the Scotch of the rural districts are inconvenienced by the change, and what a hardship is inflicted upon them without the slightest advantage to a single human creature. In every state of society, it is absolutely essential to make a compromise upon the question of Sunday labour, and to allow a few persons to perform works of necessity and mercy, in order that the general community may rest from their toil. The 15,000 clerks, sorters, and other employés of the Post-office had only nominal work to perform; and, however loudly the contrary may be asserted, were not deprived of the time or opportunity to attend public worship, or to enjoy a due degree of repose for the greater portion of the day, by the light duties imposed upon them. It is surely better, even in a strictly Sabbatarian sense, that these 15,000 men, if such be their number, should perform the small amount of work required of them, of which they do not complain, and which does not interfere with the religious observances of the day, than that five, or ten, or twenty times the number should be employed by private individuals for the same purposes, and at much greater cost. Besides, if we go on in this manner, where are we to stop? If Lord Ashley be the judge of the "mercy and necessity" which, according to his notions, may not only permit, but make praiseworthy the labour of the Lord's Day, he and his friends will not, if they be as sincere as we take them to be, stay their hands at the Post-office. If there be, in their estimation, no "mercy" in allowing a letter conveying intelligence of life or death to circulate over the land on a Sunday, there may, in their opinion, be no necessity for the employment of the police force on that day. All that is urged on behalf of the Post-office clerks may be used with equal force on behalf of the police. A policeman has a soul as well as a letter-carrier has; and if the one must be relieved of his duties on the Sunday, the other should be relieved also. Nay, upon the same principle, we do not see why that very large body of men, stationed at intervals along the thousands of miles that form the coast lines of Great Britain and Ireland, should not be relieved from their Sunday watch. Why, if letters are not to be carried, should the Coast-guard keep a look-out for smugglers on the Sunday? If the one duty be a national sin, so must the other be; and the same law which forbids the postman from doing his work, should protect the policeman, and the members of the preventive and coast-guard service, in Sunday idleness. If the country can do without letters and newspapers on Sunday, it can do without protection from the footpad and the burglar on the same day; and if the State can afford the loss of revenue derived by the Post-office for its Sunday transmission of letters, it can afford to forego the customs' duties upon the brandy and tobacco which the smugglers would introduce during the time that the coast-guard officers might be forbidden to work in their vocation. Necessity and mercy are no arguments with Sabbatarians; and we might, therefore, expect to see them, if they had the courage, hanging these "Parish" policemen and these "Parish" coast-guard under their sheltering wings. But the whole thing is an absurdity, as far as argument is concerned, though no absurdity in its practical operation. We trust, therefore, that the result of the division on Mr. Locke's motion will not only settle this particular question of the Post-office, but that it will teach Lord Ashley and his friends the expediency of keeping the Sabbath in their own way, and the justice and charity of allowing other people to do the same. They are the judges of the mercy that is necessary in their case; all that the public claims, is the quiet enjoyment of a similar right.

But it appears, from the opinions of the best lawyers, that the course pursued by the Post-office and the Government on this question is illegal; and that any person who may have suffered injury from the non-delivery of his letters last Sunday has his remedy in an action against the postmaster who detained them. Custom—ascending beyond the memory of a living generation has the force of law. Upon this point we borrow the following from the Times, merely adding, that the view of the case there taken is supported by legal authority of the greatest eminence:—

The late precipitate proceedings with respect to the Post-office may lead to consequences not expected by those who voted upon the accidental majority of the House of Commons. A grave question has arisen as to the legality of the order lately issued, and the courts of law may probably be called upon to decide the point. The question of either House of Parliament has not the force of law, and we must recur to acts of Parliament to ascertain the powers of the Postmaster-General and the Crown with respect to the delivery of letters. The question may, indeed, be tried in various modes, and the only persons likely eventually to profit by the restriction now imposed are the lawyers. Important letters being delayed or delivery of them refused on the Sunday, an action may be found to lie against the postmaster-general existing them, and the inconsiderate conduct of the Government may thus lead to almost interminable litigation. It ought to be recollected that the business of delivering the letters of the community is a service of a public nature. The community, speaking by Parliament, has determined both to impose upon the Government the obligation of receiving, collecting, and delivering letters, and to prevent all private persons from in any way sharing in the business. For reasons partly of finance, partly of a social character, a complete monopoly has been established. The Post-master-General has been made "a corporation" for this purpose; a certain fixed sum or charge has been settled to be paid by those who send and receive letters; and heavy penalties are imposed on all who shall presume to interfere with the duty of receiving, collecting, and delivering them. For many years the chief consideration of the Government in this matter was the sum collected; the error was the thing regarded. Recently, indeed, seemed to be increased by the Government taking upon itself the duties of the Post-office; certainly also appeared more likely of attainment in consequence of the same proceeding. But many circumstances have occurred to shake the public confidence as to these supposed advantages. All unity and precision and security are likely to be lost, if the late proceeding is to be taken as a precedent. The unreal accident will hereafter have fatal sway over our most important interests; and one great advantage derived from our advance in art, and in our command over the powers of nature, will have to be struck out of the account to be made of the benefits derived from the existence of society.

LORD BROUGHAM'S RECENT EXPERIMENTS ON LIGHT.—On Thursday evening a highly interesting lecture was delivered by Robert Hunt, Esq., at the Whittington Club, in aid of the decorative fund of this society: the subject of the lecture being the elucidation of the late remarkable experiments of Lord Brougham on light, illustrated by the apparatus with which the experiments were conducted, and which was kindly lent by his Lordship for the occasion. Space will not permit us to enter fully into this important subject; we must, therefore, briefly state that Lord Brougham has recently been engaged in the investigation of a peculiar phenomenon which he calls the "diffexion of light." The experiment itself consists in causing a ray of light to fall upon the sharp edge of a knife, or on the point of a needle; the ray is thus "diffected" by the edge or point, and becomes prismatic. Lord Brougham, in addition to other curious phenomena, has discovered that the ray when once diffected, cannot be again diffected in the same direction, but may be diffected in an opposite direction. Mr. Hunt, in conclusion, offered some striking facts explanatory of the remarkable discovery; and it is to be hoped that his kind consideration has been of solid service to the funds of this extremely useful and important institution. All persons, of both sexes, of the middle class, not only resident in London, but also those having occasion frequently to visit the metropolis on pleasure or business, should inform themselves of the character and objects of the Whittington Club: its advantages extend as much to ladies as to gentlemen; and it is, perhaps, the only place in London where a lady can find the comforts and privacy of a home out of her own house.

DASTARDLY ATTACK ON HER MAJESTY.

Shortly after six o'clock on Thursday evening a most diabolical attack was made upon the Queen. Her Majesty, accompanied by a Lady in Waiting and the Royal children, had made inquiries respecting the health of the Duke of Cambridge, at his residence, in Piccadilly.

Just as her Majesty was coming out of the gates of Cambridge House, a man respectably dressed, who had been observed loitering for some time about the carriage entrance, quickly approached the Royal carriage just as it reached the end of the road from the house, and deliberately aimed a blow at her Majesty with a stick, which he held in his hand, striking her on the cheek, and crushing her bonnet over her forehead. The fellow was instantly seized by the people on the spot, and the weapon wrested from him.

Her Majesty immediately proceeded to Buckingham Palace.

The police, who were quickly on the spot, took the offender in charge, and conveyed him to the Vine-street station, where he gave his name Robert Pate, 37, Duke-street, St. James's. He assigned no reason for the act. He said he had been late a Lieutenant in the 10th Hussars. He was locked up, to undergo an examination before the magistrates. It is supposed he is insane.

On inquiry at the Palace, it was ascertained that her Majesty had arrived there perfectly safe, and apparently little alarmed at the outrageous assault that had been committed on her.

In a short time, however, the news had spread to the various club-houses, and the noblemen and others there assembled instantly hastened to the Royal residence, to ascertain, if possible, whether her Majesty had sustained any injury from the prisoner's cowardly attack, and returned happily satisfied at the result that she had sustained no material injury; which was further confirmed by her Majesty's presence, within two hours, in the Royal box at the Covent-Garden Italian Opera.

Mr. Inspector Field, the chief officer of the Detective force, has ascertained that Pate has lodged during the last 2½ years in elegant apartments at 27, Duke-street: his father is described to be a man of large property at Wisbeach.

A reference to Hart's "Army List" shows that the prisoner entered her Majesty's service as a Cornet, and was attached to the 10th Hussars, on the 5th of February, 1841. He was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant on the 22nd of July, 1842, and retired, by sale of his commission, a short time previously to the embarkation of the regiment for India, in 1845.

The prisoner is a respectable-looking man, and slightly bald-headed. He wears mustachios, but has not a military appearance.

RECEPTION OF HER MAJESTY AT THE ITALIAN OPERA.

Shortly before nine o'clock a bouquet was placed in front of her Majesty's box at the Opera, and the expectation thus created soon ripened to certainty; for about half-past nine o'clock the Queen entered the house, and appeared in front of her box. The effect was electrical: in one moment the house rang with applause as loudly loyal as it must have been welcome to her Majesty, who, standing, acknowledged repeatedly, and evidently much affected, the acclamations with which she was for nearly five minutes greeted. The progress of the opera was stayed; the orchestra commenced the National Anthem amidst renewed evidences of congratulation by the audience; Viardot and Castellan appeared in front of the stage, and were immediately afterwards joined in it, although she had no part assigned to her in the opera of the evening. The first verse of the anthem was sung by Castellan, the second by Viardot, and the third by Grisi: the whole audience, of course, remained standing; and as each term which could prove a catchword for an effort of loyal feeling was enunciated, the house rang again and again with peals of ardent cheering, which were renewed at the end of every verse. At the conclusion, her Majesty was hailed with another unanimous burst of loyal feeling, which was vividly echoed by the orchestre—the whole of the company having assembled on the stage. The opera was then proceeded with. Her Majesty, although somewhat pale, looked remarkably well, and evinced by unequivocal marks of approbation her gratification at the execution of many passages of the opera.

EXAMINATION OF THE PRISONER AT THE HOME-OFFICE.

The neighbourhood of Vine-street station was much thronged during the whole of Friday morning by persons who were anxious to catch a glimpse of the prisoner; but he did not leave the station-house till twelve o'clock, when he was immediately conveyed to the Home Office for examination before Sir George Grey, the Home Secretary; and Mr. Hall, chief magistrate of Bow-street, Sir Fitzroy Somerset, and Mr. Burnaby, chief clerk at Bow-street, were also present. The prisoner, on being taken from the station-house in a cab to the Home-Office, was saluted with groans and hisses from the crowd. He was conducted into a room adjoining that in which his examination was appointed to take place, when he sat down in one of the chairs, putting his right arm over the back, and locked his hands together.

The Attorney-General attended to conduct the examination on behalf of the Crown; and Mr. Huddleston, Q.C., watched the proceedings on behalf of the prisoner. The witnesses present at the prisoner's examination, which occupied something more than an hour; but it was ascertained that there were four witnesses who gave evidence on the occasion, viz. Col. Grey, a Mr. Renwick, James Silver, policeman No. 8 A, who actually saw the blow aimed at her Majesty; and Samuel Cooling, of No. 8, Norwich-court, Fetter-lane, bookseller, who distinctly proved that her Majesty had been struck upon her bonnet with a stick, and that the prisoner was the person who had inflicted the same.

The Attorney-General applied for a remand until Tuesday next, for various reasons, which were considered to be perfectly satisfactory; whereupon

Mr Huddleston, who appeared for the prisoner, applied that the examination should be adjourned till Friday next, on the ground that it would be personally inconvenient for him to attend on the first-named day.

The Attorney-General consented, and it was then ordered that the prisoner should be remanded till twelve o'clock on Friday next, when the examination will again be proceeded with at the Home Office.

The unfortunate man's demeanour was, during the whole of his examination, of the most respectful and gentlemanly description. He walked to the cab without a faltering step, under the care of a policeman, and was immediately conveyed to the House of Detention, at Pentonville. His exit from the Home Office did not excite any manifestation of feeling on the part of the public, as but few persons were aware that his examination was concluded until he had been driven away.

FEMALE EMIGRATION FUND.—On Wednesday several members of the committee of the Female Emigration Society and their friends, proceeded by steamer from the Blackwall pier, to see the fifth party of emigrants on board the Northumberland, lying at Gravesend, previous to its departure for Port Phillip. Amongst those who availed themselves of the opportunity of witnessing this interesting scene, were the Marchioness of Drogheda, Lord and Lady Wharncliffe, and the Hon. Mrs. S. Wortley, the Hon. A. Kinnaird, Mr. H. Tuffnell, and the Rev. Mr. Quecket, and Mrs. Owen. On their arrival, the vessel, a fine spacious East Indiaman, was inspected, and general satisfaction was expressed at the accommodation and arrangement for the emigrants. Those who were assembled on the present occasion amounted to about sixty in number, consisting for the most part of young females. They were placed opposite their berths and their names severally called over; and, on each answering to her name a testimonial of character and a copy of the regulations to be observed on board was handed to her. In a few instances, where the parties were unable to read, they were told that they could acquire that advantage during the voyage, as a teacher was on board for the purpose of instructing them. They were then addressed by the Hon. Mr. Kinnaird and the Rev. Mr. Quecket, and the necessity observing obedience, mutual kindness, and good conduct while on board strongly indicated. They were informed of the attention which had been paid to their comforts and necessities on the voyage; and most of them appeared deeply grateful and affected. It may be mentioned that one of the expected emigrants, who had paid for her own outfit, drew back at the eleventh hour, and refused to undertake the voyage, declaring that though a Londoner that she was frightened by the noise of the steamer which conveyed the emigrants to the Northumberland. After the ceremony of inspection was over the visitors partook of refreshments, which had been prepared for them by Mr. Green, the owner of the vessel, and left highly gratified at an event of which many of them had been, not merely the spectators on this occasion, but the active and charitable promoters.

BRIDEWELL HOSPITAL.—On Wednesday, the governors of this excellent institution dined together according to annual custom, in their great Hall, Blackfriars; Alderman Sir Peter Laurie, President of the hospital, in the chair. Next week we shall engrave the banquet, and report the proceedings.

DISCOVERY OF A GIGANTIC BLACK OAK.—Some time ago, while some men were draining a field on the property of Farl Cathcartmuir, at present occupied by Mr. John Stewart, they came in contact with the branches of an old black oak, which they cleared away to make room for the drain, and thought no more of the matter; but a few days ago some of the farm servants, knowing the value of the forest king, went at mid-day, while they had respite from their other labours, and began to dig. They cleared away the earth from about twenty-four feet, and still there was no appearance of an end; but on the contrary, the oak was assuming a gigantic appearance. The operation was resumed by one party after another, until its enormous trunk was exposed to sun and air. It was covered, at an average, with more than five feet of earth. It was more than fifty feet in length, and about three in diameter. The wood is, of the best quality.—Edinburgh Courant.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

The Great Northern Railway Deviations, Amendment of Acts, Alteration of Tolls and of East Lincolnshire Railway Tolls Bill—the object of which was to increase the tolls for the conveyance of sheep and other animals—was postponed to Tuesday next, when it stands for third reading.

The dastardly attack on her Majesty formed the subject of a short conversation, in which the Marquis of Lansdowne, Lord Stanley, and Lord Brougham took part; and several bills on the table having been forwarded a stage, their Lordships adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

THE ATTACK ON THE QUEEN.

Lord J. RUSSELL having noticed this villanous act, the particulars of which will be found in another column, said—What may be the legal character of the crime he has committed, it is, of course, my duty to abstain altogether from touching upon; but I am assured that the feeling which was manifested last night of loyalty and attachment towards her Majesty (cheers)—was universal throughout this country. ("Hear," and cheering.) It now only remains for me to express a hope which I confidently entertain, that after this untoward event our prayers will be the more fervent for her Majesty's safety—(cheers) and that her Majesty may enjoy a long life, and continue to act with benefit to the country. (Loud cheers.)

AFFAIRS OF GREECE.—ADJOURNED DEBATE.

Mr. COCKBURN resumed the adjourned debate on the foreign policy of the Government, which he eloquently and ably vindicated.

The debate was continued by Mr. WALPOLE, Mr. COBDEN, Sir R. PEEL, and Mr. DISRAELI, against the motion; and by Mr. M. MILNES and Lord J. RUSSELL in favour of it.

The House divided—
For the motion	..	..	..	..	..	310
Against it	..	..	..	..	..	264
Majority in favour of Ministers,				..	..	—46

The result was hailed with prolonged cheers, and the House adjourned at four o'clock.

HER MAJESTY'S CORONATION.—Yesterday (Friday) being the anniversary of her Majesty's coronation, the morning was ushered in by merry peals from St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, St. Margaret's, Westminster, St. Mary Abbots, Kensington, St. Mary, Lambeth, and various other metropolitan churches; while from most of their steeples the Royal standard was displayed. The vessels in the river, both above and below bridge, were gaily decorated with flags and streamers. The Park and Tower guns were fired as usual, and similar loyal demonstrations took place at Woolwich, Tilbury Fort, &c.

GRAND REVIEW AND SHAM FIGHT.—On yesterday (Friday) morning the whole of the troops of the Royal Horse Artillery, stationed at Woolwich, assembled on the Common, under the command of General Sir J. Mowman and the staff of officers. Among those present on the occasion were the Nepaulese Ambassador and suite, His Royal Highness Prince Albert, K.C.B., the Marquis of Anglesey, Lord Gough, the Duke of Wellington, and a number of other distinguished officers. After the men, guns, and horses, had been minutely examined, the troops broke into open column and marched past, the Horse Artillery and field batteries at a walk, and the battalions at quick time. The troops went through the manœuvres of a sham fight, taking up certain positions in their advance, and retreating when overpowered by a greater force or by superior tactics. The scene was of a very animated nature, and afforded great delight to the thousands who witnessed it. At the conclusion the whole of the troops again formed in line in the original position they occupied before the fight commenced, and marched forward to salute the staff, the bands playing the National Anthem. They then marched past at quick time, and returned to quarters. A grand ball was given this evening in the mess-room, to which the Nepaulese Ambassador was invited.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE

According to the accounts of yesterday (Friday) the rumour of a Ministerial modification have died away, and it is now thought that no change will take place. Lord Palmerston, and the Queen Dowager, and the Great Exhibition, have excited the most intense interest amongst the politicians of every class in Paris

A great deal of excitement was caused in the Assembly on Wednesday evening by the coarse and violent behaviour of some of its members towards the President, who had called them to order. The latter was accused of partiality and injustice, and was consequently treated with the greatest contempt. The Mountain party cheered the noisy malcontents, and thus added to the disgraceful tumult.

The Socialist papers are filled with invidious remarks on the passing of the Dotation Bill, which they render as offensive as possible to the President of the Republic, by endeavouring to lower him in the estimation of the people.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, accompanied by the Prince of Leiningen, and attended by Major Domeurs, arrived at Ostend on Monday evening. Her Royal Highness was received by General Dupont, his Majesty's Aide-de-Camp. The Royal carriage was in waiting, and immediately took her Royal Highness to the Palace. The King visited his sister in the evening. After breakfast, in the morning, the Duchess of Kent and the Prince of Leiningen set out by the railway for Germany, where the Duchess and the Prince intend to reside in a country-house for some time. On their return to England, their Royal Highnesses will revisit Brussels.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

BOMBAY, May 25.

A terrible calamity has taken place at Benares. Upwards of 1000 persons have lost their lives by the explosion of magazine boats loaded with 3000 barrels of gunpowder.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The racing appointments for the coming week include Whittington on Monday, Carlisle and Newmarket on Tuesday and following days, Tiverton and Tenbury on Wednesday, and Lancaster on Thursday. Of these, Newmarket alone holds out any attractions to the south-country turfites, and they are not at all imposing: however, there will be two or three important sales of blood stock in the course of the meeting, which will probably help to draw a good company; but now that that ill-fated speculation, the Newmarket Railway, is closed, it is clear that more pleasure-seekers will not incur the additional cost of time and money which the road journey from Cambridge would entail upon them.

The Cricket fixtures embrace two matches at Leeds: the first, on Monday, between the Gentlemen of England and Kent; and the second, on Thursday, between the M. C. C. and the Gentlemen of Rugby; these are the only engagements of any interest.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—A trifling amount of business was transacted at the under-mentioned prices:—

NORTHUMBERLAND PLATE.

2 to 1 agst Kithicon	10 to 1 agst Roland	16 to 1 agst Snowstorm
4 to 1 —— Glauca	10 to 1 agst Baron of Gwynne

LIVERPOOL CUP.

5 to 1 agst Cockermouth	7 to 1 agst Windischgrats

GOODWOOD STAKES.

8 to 1 agst Windischgrats	20 to 1 agst Van Diemen	20 to 1 agst Langton

ST LEGER.

2 to 1 agst Voltigeur	9 to 2 agst Colsehor (t)	20 to 1 agst Knight of Avenel
	20 to 1 agst The Italian	25 to 1 agst King of Oude

DERBY.

20 to 1 agst Grecian	33 to 1 agst Consolidation	5 to 1 agst Scott's lot (t)
20 to 1 —— Hippolytus	33 to 1 agst Three Bundles	6 to 1 —— Lord Eglinton's lot
25 to 1 —— Storm	9 to 2 —— J. Day's lot (t)	(t)

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE RACES.—MONDAY.

The TYNE STAKES of 10 sovs each.—Mr. Ewbank's Wish, walked over.

The FIRST TRIENNIAL PRODUCE STAKES of 10 sovs each.—Mr. J. Scott's ns Fly of Lasherton.

The HUNTER'S STAKES of 5 sovs each, and 15 added.—Mr. Cunningham's Little Queen, 1. Mr. F. Nichol ns Smuggler Bill, 2.

The CLUB STAKES of 10 sovs each.—Sir C. Monk's Vanguard, 1. Mr. Wrather's Maid of Masham, 2.

The MAIDEN PLATE of £50.—Mr. Robson's The Sweep, 1. Mr. Binnie's Barnton Boy, 2.

TUESDAY.

The QUEEN'S PLATE of 100 guineas.—Mr. Robson's The Sweep, 1. Lord Stanley's Leggerdemain, 2.

The TYRO STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 50 added.—Mr. Ewbank's England's Glory (Wintringham), 1. Mr. Harrison's Tricksteress, 2.

The NORTHUMBERLAND PLATE of 200 sovs.—Lord Eglinton's Eithiron, 1. Mr. Meiklam's Roland, 2.

WEDNESDAY.

The NORTH DERBY STAKES of 25 sovs each.—Mr. B. Green's Michael Bruton, 1. Mr. Dawson's St. Martin, 2.

The SECOND TRIENNIAL PRODUCE STAKES of 10 sovs each.—Mr. Wentworth's Arath, 1. Mr. J. Scott's Fresto, 2

The CORPORATION PLATE of 60 guineas, added to a sweepstakes of 8 sovs each —Mr. J. Osborn's Acyranthes, 1. Mr. T. Walters's Mystiele, 2.

THURSDAY.

The GOLD CUP.—Cuzzon, 1; Achyranthes, 2.

The MESSEN'S PLATE.—Maid of Team Valley, 1; Osbaldeston, 2.

The LOTTERY STAKES.—Mickleton, 1. Oxford Blue, 2.

The GRAND STAND STAKES.—The Cutler, 1. Tightwaist, 2.

GREAT ROWING MATCH.—The scullers' match between Cole, of Chelsea, and Coitty, of Richmond, which has for some time past created the most lively interest in the rowing circles, came off on Tuesday afternoon, and was one of the most spirited contests upon record: Cole being the winner of Doggett's coat and badge; and Chitty the successful competitor for the coat, badge, and freedom annually given by Mr. Evan Morris at the Thames Regatta. The match was for £20, the distance from Putney Bridge to the Ship at Mortlake, and there had been no less than three steamers chartered to accompany it, the Childe Harold, Lalla Rookh, and Citizen K, which conveyed those desirous of witnessing the event. The men went to their stations about three o'clock. Chitty on the Middlesex side of the centre arch of Putney-bridge, and his opponent on the other. Both appeared in capital condition, Chitty having an advantage in length and size. They started at the same instant: Chitty showed great spirit; and the race was rowed at a killing pace. Cole ultimately won by seven lengths.

COUNTRY NEWS.

The Protectionists of Kent, to the number of upwards of 600, on Tuesday, entertained at a public dinner, in the Corn Exchange, Maidstone, the Earl Stanhope, to whom they also presented a complimentary address on the occasion, in testimony of the high appreciation in which they hold the personal character of the noble Earl, and the services which he has rendered to the industrial interests of the country.

POSTAL SUNDAY ARRANGEMENTS.—From Bristol we learn that the altered postal arrangements in reference to Sundays have formed a subject of general conversation in that city, especially in the commercial circles. The general feeling is, that it offers too great an interruption to mercantile pursuits, and occasions too much inconvenience generally, to be tolerated as a permanent arrangement; although there seems to be a disposition to limit the hours of business on Sundays, and the consequent labour of the clerks and officials to the the lowest necessary point.—On Wednesday a special meeting of the town council of Newcastle-upon-Tyne was held, to take into consideration the recent suspension of Post-office labours on the Sabbath. Several of the leading members strongly condemned the new arrangement, and a resolution and petition against it were almost unanimously adopted.

POST-OFFICE.—One fact is stronger than a column of logic. We give the following illustration of the new Post-office rule:—A farmer in the county gaol for debt had his bail-papers sent up to Dublin. They were examined and found all right. They were transmitted to Cork, and reached here on Sunday morning. From the non-delivery of letters he was kept a prisoner till to-day, thus suffering a whole day's incarceration that might have been prevented.—Cork Examiner.

The Mayor (H. W. Ward, Esq.) and town council of the town of Wisbeach have voted the sum of 25 guineas to the funds raising for the carrying into effect the proposed industrial congress of 1851.

BEWARE OF INCOME-TAX COLLECTORS.—COOPER v. AVISON.—The plaintiff in this case, which was tried in the County Court, on Thursday week, was Mr. Wm. Cooper, a gentleman residing at Delph, in Saddleworth; and the defendant was the ex-collector of income and property-tax, residing at South Crosland. The action was brought to recover the sum of £4 2s. 8d., alleged to have been charged by the plaintiff for the tax due upon property occupied by Mr. Thomas Shires and others, at Engine Bridge, and which had been paid by plaintiff to defendant. Messrs. Batyes and Clay conducted the case, and Mr. Brandfield defended. Vouchers were produced to show that the defendant had claimed, and received from the agents of the plaintiff the sum of £4 12s. annually, in 1844-1845, and 1845-1846, as the amount due upon the property named, while the duplicate assessment-book, which was also produced in court, showed that the amount Mr. Cooper was justly entitled to pay was only £2 16s. annually, and which amount, Mr. Brien had only paid over to the Property and Income-Tax Commissioners. Vouchers for other items were also produced, showing that the amount the defendant had overcharged the plaintiff, and appropriated to his own use, was £1 7s. 1d. for the years in question, although the claim sought to recover was reduced to £4 2s. 8d., because the defendant had not previously been able to ascertain the amount actually paid over by the defendant to the commissioners. As the defendant did not appear in court, his solicitor had no case. His Honor gave a verdict for the amount sought, to be paid forthwith. In the course of the trial, the plaintiff's solicitor said that many property and income-tax collectors were making hundreds of pounds annually by similar fraudulent means. Leeds Intelligencer.

FEAST OF FORESTERS.—On Monday four special trains arrived at Southampton with about 2000 working men, members of the Society of Foresters. About 1000 foresters from Southampton and the south of England met them at the station, and they formed in procession and marched through the principal streets of Southampton. Large numbers of the foresters were on horseback, dressed in green velvet dresses, and caps and feathers, and had bows and arrows, as well as other implements of ancient forestry, slung at their backs. All those on foot had a green sash with a forest horn stuck in it, and they walked two and two with their fingers interlaced with each other. They carried numerous banners and were accompanied by four bands of music. The procession extended more than a mile in length, and was accompanied by an immense concourse of spectators. The procession stopped opposite the house of the Mayor of Southampton, who is a great patron of the order, and the bands played some popular airs. The Mayor welcomed his brother foresters, and dined with them afterwards.

CLERKENWELL PAROCHIAL CHARITY SCHOOLS.—On Wednesday evening the united jubilee of these schools was celebrated by a dinner in the school-rooms, Amwell-street. The chair was taken by W. Nicholson, Esq., and there were 150 guests present. The school-room was tastefully decorated for the occasion; and next week we shall give an Engraving of the interesting scene, with a report of the proceedings.

OPENING OF THE NEW DOCKS AT SUNDERLAND.

On the 20th inst. the Great Dock of the "Port and Harbour of Sunderland" was opened with interesting ceremony.

The want of dock accommodation at Sunderland had long been a subject of complaint, when, in 1845, a company was formed for the construction of extensive Docks, on the plan which has just been completed. The ground on which the Dock is constructed may be said to have been reclaimed from the ocean, the sea having formerly washed the rocks and sands from which it has been excavated. The novel and ingenious idea of making that waste land available for the purposes of trade and commerce, belongs to Jas. Paxton, Esq., who proposed the erection of low walls or groynes on the east side of the Dock. At high-water, the waves previously reached the edge of the Town Moor, and were gradually making encroachments upon it; now, however, they are made to expend themselves upwards of 300 yards further off. The groynes already spoken of are strong walls of masonry—curvilinear in section, filled up with rocks and stones within. They are about 600 feet in length, and 20 feet high at the highest end, gradually tapering to the other point, which extends seawards nearly at right angles to the artificial beach. The intervals between them is four to five hundred feet, and they are filled up partly by the deposits from the sea, but chiefly by the excavations from the Dock. A fine sloping beach seaward has thus been formed.

There is yet a portion of the Dock to complete, and also another outlet to the sea; and when the whole works are finished, Sunderland will form the first port, as to depth of water at its entrance, from the Frith of Forth to the Humber. The length of that portion of the dock which has just been opened is 2000 feet, and the average breadth 440; the width at one point being 360, at another 440, and at another 230 feet, and covering in all 18½ acres.

The entrance from the river is between the Tidal Gauge and the Low Quay; where a spacious tidal harbour has been formed. This communicates with the half-tide basin by two massive lock gates, one 45 and the other 60 feet wide. The lock sill is laid six feet below low water of spring tides, so that there will generally be 20 to 21 feet water over it. The entrance to the dock itself is 60 feet wide; the depth of water at the quays will be 20 feet, and in the middle 24 feet. The length of quays in the dock is 1248 feet, which will easily accommodate 40 vessels; while the dock itself will hold 220 more. The length of quays in the half-tide basin is 1026 feet, accommodating eight vessels, while 30 more can be entered at the quays. The dock will thus be capable of containing 250, and the half tide basin 38 vessels; the depth of water, too, will suffice for ships of the largest tonnage. It is proposed to have a graving dock and slips; this will be of great consequence to shipowners, rendering it unnecessary for them to send their vessels to the river, or other ports for repairs. Ship building and repairing-yards are to be constructed on the barrier embankment, where there will also be warehouses for goods, &c.

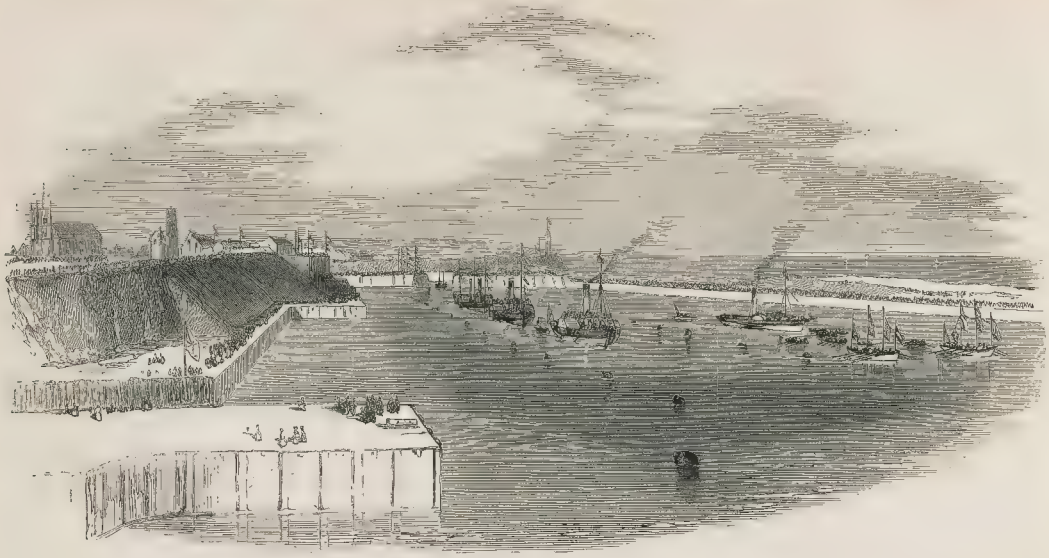
As might have been expected, there is ample accommodation in the Dock for coal vessels, the west quay being almost exclus vely set apart for them; staiths of the most approved construction have been erected here, which empty the coals from the waggons brought by the Durham and Sunderland Railway from the mines. There are, it will be observed, several lines of rails communicating with each drop. Cranes and masting sheers, capable of raising heavy weights, &c., will also be erected.

The contractors for the New Dock are Messrs. Craven and Sons, Messrs. Thompson and Hunter, Messrs. Burlinson, and Messrs. Hawks, Crawshay, and Co., all of whom have performed the work in their several departments admirably.

At an early hour on Thursday, the 20th, the day appointed for the opening of the Dock, the town of Sunderland presented an animated scene. The bells of the different churches rang out joyful peals, flags were flred at intervals, and the High-street presented the most splendid and imposing aspect imaginable—the pavements, windows, parapets, and roofs of every building being densely crowded with anxious and impatient spectators. At a quarter past ten, the space in front of the Dock Office, West Sunniside, Bishopwearmouth, was occupied by all the official persons, municipal and maritime, whose presence was justly required; together with the band of the 33rd Regiment.

The Corporation, headed by the Mayor, with other public bodies and functionaries, walked in procession to the river-side, at the old ferry-boat landing, and there embarked in various vessels, and took part in the scene commencing.

The Lord Durham, with the band of music, was the first steamer which entered the Dock, with gay colours flying; it was succeeded by the two life-boats of the port; four steam-vessels, officially engaged, came next, and in the following order—viz. the William and John, with the "honoured freight" of the Mayor (Wm. Ward, Esq.) and Corporation of the Borough; 2nd, the Sachorse, with the Commissioners of the River Wear; 3rd, the Pilot; 4th, the Firebrand, with the Directors of the Dock Company; and 5th, the Earl of Sunderland, from Seaham Harbour, with crowded decks, on which the band of the most noble the Marquis of Londonderry stood in full costume, and, as the Sunderland boats went ahead, played the genial air of "Auld lang syne." The scene of joyous and brilliant animation presented by old Father Wear at this and the subsequent periods of the ceremonial, will never be forgotten by the many thousands of the sons and daughters of the Wear who witnessed it.



OPENING OF THE NEW DOCKS AT SUNDERLAND.—THE MARINE PROCESSION.

The river itself was studded with every variety of craft that human beings could crowd into it; and every vessel of every description, afloat or on the stocks, was radiant above with gay flags, and below with happy faces and holiday garbs. The banks, the quays, the windows, roofs, parapets, and chimneys of every building overlooking the river (even to the very platform of the church-towers) were densely crowded. This feeling deepened as the vessels advanced slowly to their great destination, guns firing, bells ringing, all the rainbow-lined flags of all vessels (Union-Jack and "Marriott's Code" included) gaily flying from all mastheads and riggings, and every conceivable place of footing for human beings, on both sides of the river, thronged with gaily-dressed spectators.

It was, indeed, a splendid panorama, east and west, on entering the tidal harbour, and half-tide basin, when the ships appointed to be first loaded in Sunderland Docks were sweeping round in the wake of the steamers.

The ceremonial of "entrance" took place about eleven o'clock, and the following vessels were honoured on the occasion in the following order, amidst the deafening acclamations of many thousands, and with a burst of sunshine which seemed to hail the event at the very moment. 1. The Welcome, Captain Robert Hall (owners, Charles Taylor, Esq., of Sunderland, and Brothers), towed by the Hasnell, and ultimately loaded with Haswell Walls'-End coal. 2. The Citadon, Captain George Gray (owner, William Bell, Esq.), towed by the Otter steamer, and ultimately loaded with Belmont coal. 3. The Don, Captain William Watley (owners, Braddyll and Co.), towed by the Pilot steamer. 4. The Susannah, Captain Miles Benson (owner, Mr. John Sanderson Howe, Dock Master), towed by the Whitsell steamer.

The first coals were dropped by Mr. J. Bell into the hold of the Welcome exactly at twelve o'clock, amidst general acclamations from the vast assemblage, and to the appropriate air of the "Bonny Pit Laddie," excellently played by the Londonderry band and the band of the 23rd Regiment.

The four vessels we have named being partially loaded, the various authorities, municipal, naval, and military, the shareholders, with many ladies and visitors, &c., proceeded to partake of a splendid lunch (well and efficiently provided by Mr. Shortland, of the Albion Hotel), in a capacious superstructure on the coal jetty, carefully and tastefully fitted up for the occasion, and with tables spread for 1000 persons. The chairman of the Dock Company (Mr. Hudson, M.P.) presided at the banquet.

After the customary loyal and national toasts had been duly honoured, the chairman addressed the company at considerable length, in the course of his speech stating that the dock had been accomplished within the estimated cost—that it contained twenty-one acres of ground—that the depth of water in it was equal to that of any one in the kingdom—and when the southern outlet was completed, they would have an entrance affording a depth of twenty-six or twenty-seven feet water, with which any ship could come into the port. (Cheers.) In conclusion, the chairman proposed "Success and prosperity to the Sunderland Docks," adding, "A speedy completion to the southern outlet." (Great applause.) The toast was drunk in the most enthusiastic manner, and with all the honours.

The health of Mr. Hudson was then proposed by Mr. J. J. Wright, and was received with great cheering. Mr. Hudson returned thanks, and proposed "the Mayor and Corporation;" followed by a variety of other toasts, including the health of Mr. Murray, the engineer of the Dock. After this, three cheers were given for Mrs. Hudson and Miss Hudson, and the proceedings terminated.

At the conclusion of the banquet about 400 of the workmen employed at the Docks sat down to an excellent dinner (Mr. Brown in the chair); and, after giving a number of loyal and patriotic toasts and sentiments, they all peaceably separated at six o'clock in the evening.

In the evening, a ball, which was numerously and fashionably attended, was held in the Athenæum. The hall was tastefully decorated with flowers and evergreens; a number of beautiful paintings were hung on the walls; and at the head of the room was displayed a banner, bearing the motto of "Success to the Sunderland Docks." The ball was led off by Mr. Hudson and Mrs. Bramwell.

These details have been condensed from the report of the proceedings in the Sunderland Herald.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS,

from drawings by Mr. B. Foster, show the marine procession; and the first shipment of coals in the new Dock.

THE FIRST SHIPMENT OF COALS IN THE NEW SUNDERLAND DOCKS.

PARLIAMENTARY PORTRAITS.

VISCOUNT PALMERSTON, G.C.B., M.P. FOR TIVERTON. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

HENRY JOHN TEMPLE VISCOUNT PALMERSTON, of the peerage of Ireland, son of the second Viscount by his second wife, only daughter of Benjamin Mee, Esq., was born on the 20th of October, 1784, at Broadlands, in Hampshire. In 1795 he was sent to Harrow, under the head-mastership of the Rev. Dr. Drury. In 1800, he left Harrow for the University of Edinburgh, under Dugald Stewart, and remained there until 1803, when he entered Cambridge. No blemen at that time took their master's degree in two years; and, either from their being held to inherit a sufficiency of knowledge, or that to teach them was hopeless, took it without examination. Lord Palmerston, however, had so far made himself known amongst his contemporaries that he had but just taken his degree and come of age, when, on the general election at Pitt's death, in 1806, he was invited to become a candidate for the representation of the University, which he at that time unsuccessfully contested with Lord Henry Petty (Marquis of Lansdowne) and the late Lord Althorp. The defeat, however, in no way discouraged him from future trials.

In 1807 he contested Horsham along with Lord Fitzharris, when they were beaten by the Duke of Norfolk's dominant influence in the borough, both at the election and on petition against the return. But in the same year he was returned for Newport, in the Isle of Wight. At the dissolution in 1808, he again unsuccessfully contested the University with Sir Vicary Gibbs, against Mr. Smyth and Lord Euston, eldest son of the Duke of Grafton.

In January, 1808, the debate on the address turned upon the expedition to Copenhagen, at the close of the previous year, in support of which Mr. Milnes, father of Monckton Milnes, M.P. for Pontefract, made a most able and brilliant maiden speech, and was followed on the same side by Lord Palmerston, also in his maiden speech. On going out in the division, the famous eccentric old Jack Fuller, bowing before Milnes, said "Way there, gentlemen, for the coming Chancellor of the Exchequer" from that time he went by the name of Orator Milnes, though this most able one turned out to be almost the only speech he ever delivered. Palmerston, also, so far attracted attention on the occasion, that he was forthwith appointed a Lord of the Admiralty; and in the following year, Perceval, directed to form a Ministry, and deserted by all the talents, turning to young men of promise, sent for Milnes and Palmerston; and in the recently-published diary of Richard Plumer Ward, himself a contemporary Lord of the Admiralty with Lord Palmerston, there is the following entry upon the subject:—"Lord Palmerston, sent for by Mr. Perceval, was so good as to confide to me that two rulings were offered to him: the Chancellorship of the Exchequer and the Secretaryship at War. These offers were in the alternative of any of them being declined by Milnes, member for Pomfret, father of Monckton Milnes, to whom they were offered. Lord Palmerston consulted me very frankly upon them, and asked if I thought he would be equal to the Seals, either in Cabinet or in Parliament, where he had lately made his début. I told him, and was most sincere, that, in common with all his friends, I thought him quite equal to them in point of capacity; but as to nerves in Parliament, about which he seemed most to doubt, nobody could judge but himself. He said, Petty (Lord Lansdowne), whom I mentioned, had come forward, after having felt his way, and got possession of himself in the House, and that, if he had done the same, he, perhaps, would not hesitate; as it was, he inclined to the second place. Among other topics that I urged, one impressed him—the great difference of his pretensions on our return to office, in the event of our going out.

"He allowed, it much flattered his ambition, but feared the prejudice it would occasion to his reputation, if he failed. I left him inclining to be Secretary at War, and admired his prudence, as I had long done the talents and excellent understanding, as well as many other good qualities and accomplishments, of this very fine young man.

"Oct. 18. Lord Palmerston told me he had declined the Chancellorship of the Exchequer. This he did from diffidence, for which, he said, in the situation of Chancellor, there was no room—as, if he failed, he must ruin himself and all his friends. On the 24th of October, Perceval announced, at the dinner at Merchant Tailors' Hall, that Lord Palmerston was Secretary at War; and on the next day he was, in the customary manner, by introduction to his assistant-secretaries and clerks, duly installed in office."

In 1811, the Duke of Grafton's death, and consequent succession of Lord Euston to the Peerage, caused a vacancy in the representation of Cambridge, which Lord Palmerston again—and this time successfully—contested.

From 1809 to 1828 he continued in office as Secretary at War; and, notwithstanding several severe contests, retained his seat for the University. In April, 1828, he was raised to a seat in the Cabinet, with Mr. Canning. In November of the same year came on the question of the gross corruption of East Retford and Grampound. The Government proposing to include the former in the hundred, and disfranchise the latter, were beaten upon an amendment by Mr. D'Eyncourt; Mr. Huskisson and Lord Palmerston resigned, and the Ministry, which had included Moderate Reformers, and other remaining members of the Canning party, very shortly broke up, and the Duke of Wellington was sent for.

Up to this time, Lord Palmerston, as to speaking, had confined himself to the necessary explanation upon the estimates connected with his department; but in the adjourned debate upon the Roman Catholic Relief Bill, March 18, 1829, he made one of the most effective speeches delivered in the whole course of the contest, tracing the discontent, slow progress, resistance of law, an imminence of actual outbreak in Ireland, to the oppression of the people for the faith of five millions of them, and also pointing out that no principle of the constitution, nothing established by the revolution of 1688, were in any way opposed to the relief of the Catholics. Bewildered the idea of the House being outvoted, and the legislation of the country being overruled by the return of Catholics to Parliament; admitted his fears of civil war if this equal liberty of religion were withheld, and put it to the House to be counselled by this fear as a warning to the wise. This speech at once raised Palmerston in the opinion of the House.

In July, 1830, a proposal was made to Mr. Huskisson to join the Tory Ministry, which he declined, unless with Lords Grey and Lansdowne. In September, the same offer was made to Lord Palmerston, who expressed his willingness to be of any Administration with Mr. Huskisson, or Lords Grey and Lansdowne, but otherwise declined.

In November, 1830, Parliament met. The Emancipation question settled—that of Reform had become urgent. It was clear that the Tories could not carry a second change of such moment, in the face of those they had so little exasperated by their Relief Bill. The Government, therefore, allowed itself to be defeated upon a side motion as to the appointment of a Finance Committee, the question really at issue being Reform. Lord Melbourne was sent for, and, in concert with Lord Grey, framed the famous Reform Ministry, in which Lord Palmerston received the appointment of Foreign Secretary. The revolution had just broken out in the Netherlands, and Lord Palmerston, with far-seeing prudence, rejected the advice to oppose the separation of Holland and Belgium, which it was quite in his power to have prevented, but which could but have postponed a cause of civil war in the Netherlands, and have retarded the spread of liberal constitutional Government.

At the general election in 1831, the support he had given to the Roman Catholic Emancipation lost the noble Lord his seat for the University. He was, however, returned for Blechingley, the borough at that time of Wm. Russell, of Brancepath Castle, and one of those which lent a vote to its annihilation in schedule A. In 1832 Lord Palmerston was returned for South Hants; but at the general election in 1834 was unsuccessful. In November, 1834—Mr. Huskisson had been some time dead—Lord Spencer had just died -Lord Althorp gone to the Lords the Prime Minister, Lord Melbourne, was also in the House of Peers—Parliament was not sitting—the King, seeing no other resource except Lord John Russell, sent for the Duke of Wellington, and suddenly broke up the Ministry, of which the Times said "The Queen has done it."

In April, 1835, the Whigs returned to office, under Lord Melbourne: Lord Palmerston was again at the Foreign Office; and in June of the same year he was returned for Tiverton, which he has since (though he unsuccessfully contested Liverpool in 1841) continued to represent. On this occasion he remained in office until the return of Peel to power in 1841, at the head of a supposed Protectionist Ministry, and a Parliamentary majority gained by ten years' close attention to the registries. This Ministry carried the repeal of the Corn-Laws with the cordial help of Lord Palmerston and his party, who found it not possible any longer, and in the face of the terrible famine in Ireland, to uphold their former proposal of a fixed duty.

In 1846 the Peel Ministry went out; and, in the July of that year, Lord Palmerston was, for the third time, appointed Foreign Secretary.

In a review of the session of Sept. 17, 1846, Lord Palmerston dwelt upon the growing distress of the country, and earnestly objected to the prorogation of Parliament without some distinct statement from the Ministry as to what was to be done on the Corn-Laws—whether they intended to refuse all relaxation of our commercial system, and to stand upon systems of restriction and monopoly, or to make any change. "The right hon. Baronet (Sir R. Peel) had said that he was not prepared to declare that he would never propose a change in the Corn-Laws; but he certainly should not do so, unless at the head of a united Cabinet. In that case, looking at the persons who formed his Administration, I venture (said Lord Palmerston) to predict that he must want something near five years before he can do it." Curiously enough, in just four years and eight months from the date of this speech, Sir Robert Peel brought forward, with a united Cabinet, his measure for the complete repeal of the Corn-Laws.

But, in 1841, Lord Palmerston, however clearly he oresaw the direction of the new Ministry, was not in favour of any sweeping Corn-Law measure. On the 6th of October he urged upon Sir Robert Peel the paramount importance of some definite settlement of the question, and expressed his conviction that the public would never be content with any petty change in the pivot or some slight alteration of the sliding scale; and that, even supposing the existing distress to subside, the country would not be satisfied with any measure short of one which would substantially and bonâ fide permit the introduction of foreign corn at a moderate fixed duty.

At the close of the session of September, 1842, Lord Palmerston again dwelt upon the distress of the country, and urged some change in the Corn-Laws; and, referring to the prophecies as to the Reform Bill, "that it must destroy all interest of the landed party in Parliament, and deliver everything up to the overwhelming tide of democratic power," pointed, not merely to the result of elections since, but the divisions of the session as ample answers. In fact, no less groundless, he declared, were the present fears that, by striking off the fetters which cramped and paralyzed industry, any ultimate injury would be inflicted on owners of the soil; while it was impossible to imagine that Parliament would not soon be induced, by force of reason and of argument, to make great and important changes in our commercial system.

But foreign affairs are the favourite theme of Lord Palmerston. He has been at the head of the Foreign-office for upwards of fourteen years: first, from Nov., 1830, until the dissolution of the Melbourne Ministry, in Nov., 1834; then from April, 1835, to Sept., 1841: and lastly, from July, 1845, to the present time. All his best speeches are reviews of foreign policy. In Sept., 1841, being out of office, and reviewing the session, he claimed "to have handed over to hon. gentlemen opposite the foreign relations in a state as satisfactory, as secure, and as much calculated to inspire just confidence, as they were ever at any former period in the history of the country." In Sept., 1842, Lord Palmerston, reviewing the labours of the late, and the work so far of the then Ministry of Sir Robert Peel, entered at length upon a defence of his foreign policy. They were accused by Lord Stanley of reckless interference with foreign Powers, and charged with having bequeathed many embarrassments to their successors. "The Conservatives had come into office on the 3rd of September, 1841. The Speech from the Throne was delivered Feb. 3, 1842; and the whole of the foreign affairs portion of it, with one exception, was full of what their predecessors had done. The speech expressed satisfaction at treaties for the suppression of the slave-trade with Austria, France, Russia, and Prussia—those were left ready for signature by the late Ministry, and, almost unaltered, had been but signed by their successors; so had the treaty as to the security of the Turkish empire, an essential element in the balance of power and preservation of the peace of Europe. Satisfaction had been received for insults and outrages committed by the Persian authorities upon persons under British protection; the attempt on the part of the Shah to conquer Herat and the western part of Affghanistan had been prevented; diplomatic and friendly intercourse had been restored; and we had obtained a commercial treaty placing us upon the footing of the most favoured nation with Persia, and which thus gave us all the securities and privileges previously enjoyed exclusively by Russia. Negotiations with Spain, Portugal, Naples, and Brazil, which the Royal Speech set down as likely to lead to conventions which might extend trade and commerce, were all set on foot by the late Ministry. The uniform success against China was spoken of in the speech as encouraging the hope of a speedy end of differences, so that the dangerous and difficult enterprise was likely to place on a satisfactory footing our commercial relations with more than 200,000,000 of people. In short, eleven treaties of their making had been laid upon the table, five commercial, two political, and four for suppression of the slave trade. The means by which Government could best promote commercial interests were peace between this country and foreign nations, and peace between the other great powers of the world. For ten years, spite of all predictions to the contrary, and many critical situations, they had maintained peace; and the best proof that they enjoyed the confidence and good-will of other nations was to be found in the differences between them, which, by our good offices, we had brought to desirable conclusions, as in the instance of France and the United States, which, but for our friendly interposition, must have ended in a war; also, in our good offices between France and Mexico, and France and Buenos Ayres. On coming into office, in 1830, the Whigs found 18 treaties of commerce in existence; they had added fifteen, two of which were with Austria and Turkey, and of great importance. In 1839 they had entered into a convention with France, for regulating the boundaries of their respective fisheries between Jersey and the coast of France, and which, from 1815, had remained unsettled, and given rise to frequent collisions amongst the fishermen. The long-vexed question of the United States boundary was also, during their tenure of office, so far advanced as that all doubt as to the right reading of the words of the treaty of 1783, which defined the line, were removed. The opinion of the King of the Netherlands, in January, 1831, was, that neither the features claimed by us nor by America were to be found upon the face of the country. However, Col. Mudge and Mr. Featherstonhaugh, sent out in the end of 1840, found readily amongst the features of our line, but not the American; and so the basis was laid of an amicable settlement of a question since settled, but that at any time might have become a cause of war with the United States."

THE RIGHT HON. LORD VISCOUNT PALMERSTON, G.C.B.—FROM THE PICTURE BY JOHN PARTRIDGE

The speech of Tuesday last, whichmay be considered as a defence of his foreign policy, in continuation of his speech of 1842, and, notwithstanding Palmerston's high reputation as a Parliamentary debater, took the House by storm, so far did it surpass all his former efforts, occupied four hours and a half in the delivery, and throughout was spoken with calm unwearied earnestness, and listened to not only with marked attention, but with an enthusiasm unusual in the House.

The reply to the charge of having caused the overthrow of Guizot—that, if the French were aware that any conspirators in England were in league with a clique in France, for the overthrow of any minister, they would sing the more closely with firm support round that Minister, and treat the hostile league with scorn, was cheered again and again by the whole House, and even in the Strangers' Gallery, so forcibly did the parallel with his own case strike home.

The conclusion referring to our diligent industrial progress, peaceful and undisturbed in the midst of shaken thrones, and revolution, war, and bloodshed throughout Europe, the natural ambition to guide the policy and become the destiny of such a people, and the challenge of a verdict of the House and the country as to whether the principles of the foreign policy of Ministers had been unworthy of us as a political, commercial, or constitutional country; or whether we had done more than was needful to assure respect for our subjects, and to guard them from injustice and wrong abroad, was cheered with enthusiasm not merely by the whole House, but, through the impunity of ostensibly, again by the very strangers in the gallery. For several minutes the cheers were heartily renewed; and the noble Lord, who had been cheered by the people outside on coming to the House, was again cheered as he left by those who had enjoyed the privilege of hearing him from the gallery. But the strongest testimony to the power of the speech is to be found in the fact of the number of members actually convinced, and determined by it to vote in support of the policy of the noble Lord.

The speech not only gave a complete history of the enfranchisement and rise to constitutional form, by our help, of the Greek Government, and met every detail of the recent disputes, and every charge of inconsistency, with, and through the good offices of France, but it reviewed every recent point of our foreign policy, reserving no state secrets, and leaving no moot point unexplained as to our acts, advice, and intentions towards all the states of Europe, during the eventful struggles of 1848. And, whatever difference of opinion may be entertained, there can, at all events, be no dispute that Lord Palmerston has, throughout his whole career of five years in Parliament, and ten years of them in office. One year a Lord of the Admiralty, nineteen years

Pitt, in his famous speech of February 1, 1793, advocating an extraordinary credit and increase of land and sea forces, declared "no consideration was more worthy the attention of the House than to crush and destroy principles which are so dangerous and destructive of every blessing this country enjoys under its free and excellent constitution, as those of the French revolution." It was against the principles which have since, spite of all our battles, made good their ground, that we carried on the long and costly war. The policy of Lord Palmerston has been to oppose no principles—no change amongst any people; to extend the encouragement of England not to violence or revolutions, but to such reforms as prevent revolutions; to leave every nation to change its Government at its will, and to work out its progress to liberal institutions in its own way. Lord Palmerston has been forty-four years in Parliament, and

Secretary-at-War; then Foreign Affairs, four years; the second time, seven years; and now, the third time, five years and of these thirty-six years of office, twenty-nine have been years of peace, though, in the period, France has twice violently changed her form of government, and nearly all Europe has been shaken with revolutions. Amongst treaties concluded by Lord Palmerston, one of the most remarkable is that with the United States and Nicaragua, as to any passage that may be made uniting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, the ratification of which has been agreed to by the Senate of the United States, and which guarantees for ever upon equal terms, whether in time of war, the unlimited right of way by this passage to all nations, and also the free settlement of all people along the route; to that freed Negroes shall be safe there, and coloured men secure from the tyrannies of the petty officers of labour. The treaty was ordered to be laid down this principle of kindly international neutrality as to commerce and settlers.

Lord Palmerston married, Dec. 16, 1839, Emily Mary, daughter of the first Viscount Melbourne, and widow of the fifth Earl Cowper.

Our likeness is from the beautiful Portrait by Partridge, presented to Lord Palmerston, on Saturday, the 22nd inst., by certain members of the House of Commons, with the following address :—

"Ma'ame. We, the undersigned members of the House of Commons, anxious to testify our high sense of Viscount Palmerston's public and private character, and of the independent policy by which he has maintained the honour and interests of this country, request your Ladyship's acceptance of the accompanying portrait, with our warmest wishes for the welfare of his Lordship and yourself."

The deputation, consisting of about ninety members, was introduced by Col. Freestun. Lord James Stuart spoke (addressing Lady Palmerston) of his Lordship's long, arduous, and always successful services—of the high respect and esteem entertained for him by the people of the country, and by the Queen—of the ability by which he had preserved the peace of Europe, and the national gratitude he had so richly earned.

Lady Palmerston, who was much affected, expressed that she felt deeply the compliment, and most the time so considerately chosen for the presentation, and which must be so cheering to her loved husband. His Lordship also addressed the deputation; and, after reference to the principles of foreign policy, said, "The kind expression of your confidence this day, thus flatteringly conveyed, will but stimulate me to an energetic maintenance of the principles and policy thus approved. Gentlemen, I again thank you for the honour you have done me, and I beg to assure you, with all sincerity, that I consider this the proudest day of my life."

This was received with prolonged cheers; and the deputation, in high gratification with their reception, left.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

THE POST-OFFICE ON SUNDAYS.

Lord BROUGHAM said that he must again advert to the regulations which had recently been issued with respect to the Post-office. He had occasion himself yesterday to wish to send to his brother judges of the Privy Council what he considered an important communication respecting some judicial business that was to come on this (Monday) morning. He was at Cheltenham; some sixteen or seventeen miles from London, at the time, and he was told that there was no post: in fact, if he had posted his letter on that day, it would not have arrived in town till to-morrow (Tuesday) morning. He had been informed that a patient had died in consequence of a letter not having been received in due time by the medical adviser. The address to the Crown had been passed by a considerable majority, but he believed that it was in consequence of a surprise, and he verily thought that the words used in council would be to desecrate the Sabbath rather than keep it more holy.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said he was not at all surprised at the statement which had been made by his noble and learned friend. Since his noble and learned friend last mentioned this subject, he had informed himself as to the doubt which had been suggested. He now found that there could be no doubt of the power of the Crown to change the regulations for the operations of the Post-office. This power was given under the provisions of an act of Parliament (2 and 3 Victoria, c. 52). But the Crown having this undoubted power, he would admit that it was one which ought not to be exercised, except in accordance with an address from Parliament. (Hear.)

Lord BROUGHAM said, that he was afraid that, in consequence of the order in council, various surreptitious modes would be adopted for the conveyance of letters, and by this means the revenue would be lessened.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said he was afraid that the alteration would lead to a greater desecration of the Sabbath. (Hear.)

Lord MONTEAGLE said that the order in council was totally opposed to the interests of a great commercial country like England; and therefore, if it continued to remain in force, he had no doubt that many ingenious attempts would be made by individuals to defeat it. (Hear.)

The Public-houses (Scotland) Bill passed through committee, on the motion of Lord KINNAIRD.

In reply to the Marquis of Londonderry, the Earl of MINTO promised to lay on the table certain correspondence relative to the late unfortunate wreck of the Orion steamer.

The Landlord and Tenant (Ireland) Bill went through committee.

On the motion of the Marquis of LANSDOWNE, the Drainage and Improvement of Land Advances Bill was read a second time, after a few remarks from Lord BEAUMONT. Adjourned

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

[The debate on the affairs fixed for this day excited the most intense interest. During Mr. Roebuck's speech the House was unusually full of members, and all the places assigned to peers were occupied. Lord Stanley was present. The strangers' gallery was crowded. During the course of the evening, the Nepaulese Ambassador and suite arrived, and remained for a considerable time, listening with apparent attention to the debate.

STAMPS ON NEWSPAPERS.

Mr. GIBSON alluded to an opinion which prevailed as to monthly publications giving political news (an opinion probably arising from the fact that few of them, if any, were stamped), that they were in the habit to some extent, to evade it. He wished to ask whether they were so; and whether it was true that the Stamp Office had recently interfered with a monthly publication called the Freeholder; and, if so, whether the right hon. gentleman could explain why this should have been singled out to be interfered with, when others in a similar position had been let alone.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he believed monthly publications giving news were liable to stamp duties as newspapers. It is true that a letter had been written recently to the editor of the Freeholder, calling attention to the publication of his paper without a stamp. The Freeholder, however, had not in any sense been "singled out" for such proceeding, but the same course had been taken as in other cases when the attention of the Stamp-office was called to the matter. (No, no.)

Mr. GIBSON: There are hundreds of such cases. (Hear)

THE LATE SCENE IN THE LORDS.—THE CHEVALIER BUNSEN AND LORD BROUGHAM.

On the Prussian Minister's House Bill,

Sir R. INGLIS observed that this was a bill to enable the Prussian Minister to provide a permanent residence, like the French Minister resided in Hertford House (he wished he did at present), the Russian Minister at Ashburnham House, and the Austrian at Chandos House. The hon. gentleman took occasion to pass a severe strictures on Lord Brougham's conduct towards the Chevalier Bunsen in the House of Lords on Monday week last.

Mr ROEBUCK defended his noble and learned friend, Lord Brougham.

Lord J. RUSSELL expressed a hope that the unfortunate scene that had occurred between the Chevalier Bunsen and Lord Brougham, the former would feel assured that both Houses of Parliament held him in the highest respect in his individual as well as diplomatic character.

GREECE. FOREIGN POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT.

Lord J. RUSSELL, in postponing the orders of the day for the purpose of giving precedence to Mr Roebuck's motion, gave utterance to a desire that, as that motion fairly raised a grave question, those hon. members who had given notice of amendments on it would not press them, but allow the division to be taken on the main question.

Mr. ANSTEY yielded to this desire; but Mr. HUME refused to promise anything—he would use his discretion.

Mr. ROEBUCK then addressed the House the following resolution:—"That the principles on which the foreign policy of her Majesty's Government has been regulated have been such as were calculated to maintain the honour and dignity of this country, and, in times of unexampled difficulty, to preserve peace between England and the various nations of the world." The hon. and learned member said he made his motion because he thought that, in a Government like ours, an Administration of which the policy had been condemned by one branch of the Legislature, could not, so long as that condemnation remained uncontradicted by the House of Commons, maintain the interests of England abroad or at home, or hold the reins of power to themselves. He had admitted that no Administration ought to resign in consequence of a resolution of the House of Lords; but, after so plain and unambiguous a resolution as that lately passed by the House of Lords, it was necessary for the House of Commons to say what the opinion of the people of England was on this subject. Although, doubtless, her Majesty's Government were anxious to have the opinion of the House on their foreign policy deliberately pronounced, he (Mr Roebuck) had not, as was insinuated by Mr. Disraeli, framed his resolution or their suggestions to be had never shaped his course in reference to party, or been instigated in his conduct by personal spite. The proposition of the House of Lords was, when deprived of its Nisi Prius gobbledegook and technicalities, a condemnation of the foreign policy of the Government. In his opinion, the principle of the foreign policy of the Government affected two distinct classes of subjects—individual rights and wrongs, and the general dignity and honour of Great Britain. As far as regarded individual rights and wrongs, the object which the noble Foreign Secretary always had in view was, to extend the protection and shield of England to her wandering sons carried by commerce or necessity to all the regions of the civilised world. With respect to the general interests of the country, the policy of the noble Lord had been to maintain the peace of the world, not by truckling to despotism, but by teaching all foreign communities that England, so far as the law of nations would permit, would bring her great moral force and lend her name to the maintenance of constitutional government, neither abetting anarchy on the one hand, nor upholding despotism on the other. By the motion he submitted to the House, he desired them to decide, not whether the existing Government should continue in office, but whether these two great principles, steadily upheld by the Foreign Secretary, should be affirmed by the Commons of England, or whether the antagonistic principles should be adopted. The hon. and learned member proceeded to compare the general foreign policy pursued from 1789 to 1815 with that pursued from 1830 to the present time; and from the general results of these two distinct policies he founded his approbation of Lord Palmerston's foreign policy, originated by the Duke of Wellington in 1830, and wisely followed up by Lord Palmerston from the time when he foresaw the necessity of the separation of Belgium from Holland. The hon. and learned member proceeded to analyse the resolution of the House of Lords, and to examine in detail the objections urged upon the Greek Government; and he vindicated the manner in which the claims had been enforced, and the negotiations which the French Government conducted. He cited the precedent of France urging her claims against Portugal in 1831, and other cases, to justify the conduct of England; and having repudiated the doctrine propounded as the law of nations in the resolution of the Lords, he concluded by appealing to the House to give a clear, positive, unambiguous decision on the broad question he placed before them—the question of the foreign policy of the Government.

Mr. HUME, finding that the amendment of which he had given notice, although pleasing to himself, was not pleasing to others, and desiring, in the existing state of foreign countries, to preserve the Government in power, would not embarrass the question proposed, and would not, therefore, press his amendment.

Sir F. THESIGER opposed and Mr. P. WOOD supported the motion.

Sir J. GRAHAM trusted that, however the House would debate the great question before them, they would get out of the mire they had been for nearly six hours, and argue it on general grounds. It was hardly possible to exaggerate the gravity of the question they had to discuss, for it nearly touched the dignity, the honour, and the interests of the country. For four years, he (Sir J. Graham) had given to the Government an independent support. He had long known, and had for four years been the colleague of, Lord Palmerston, and had found the conduct always honourable and trustful to his colleagues; therefore his feelings were naturally favourable to the Government or to the noble Foreign Secretary. But the motion before the House was not the simple contradiction of the resolution agreed to by the House of Lords, but a distinct vote of approbation, on the narrow ground of Greece, but on the general foreign policy of the Government since their accession to office. The right hon. gentleman addressed himself to the criticism of Lord Palmerston's general conduct. In Spain he found him very anxious to the Government there, disparaging Narvaez in 1846, and lecturing him in 1848; and after the late reconciliation with the Court of Spain he found the noble Lord making the extraordinary declaration that peace but Sir Henry Bulwer was across the Quantic, and employed at Washington, he would advise her Majesty to send Sir Henry Bulwer back to Madrid. In Portugal, in Switzerland, in Italy, he found the noble Lord interfering, and writing insolent despatches, and pursuing a course of tortuous policy, in relation to those countries, which although Lord Hardwicke, Lord Grey commanded a ship there, declared that Sir William Parker had weighed anchor on a fine day, and had entered the Straits deliberately. With respect to Greece, the most important of the claims made was that on the islands of Sapienza and Cervi, and it was by the merest accident that these islands had not been seized by Sir W. Parker in October last. Peremptory orders had been sent out to Sir W. Parker by Lord Palmerston, but for the prudence of the gallant Admiral, a case of war with France and Russia would undoubtedly have arisen. The right hon. gentleman accused the Foreign Secretary of having pursued M. Guizot to the death with a bitter animosity, and of having exhibited generally a want of truth and fair dealing with foreign Ministers. Entertaining these opinions of the noble Lord's conduct, he could not consistently give his vote for the motion before the House.

On the motion of Mr. BERNAL OSBORNE, the debate was adjourned to the next day.—Adjourned at one o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

Lord LANGDALE took his seat on the woolsack at five o'clock.

ROYAL COMMISSION.

The Royal assent was given by Commission to the following public and private bills:—Judges of Assize, Pirates Head-Money Repeal, Greenwich Hospital Improvement, Shrewsbury and Hereford Railway, Firth and Clyde Navigation, Guardian Fire and Life Assurance, South-Eastern Railway (amendments of acts, power to raise additional capital), Railway Companies Clearing, Childwall Associative Workmen, Bodmin and Wadebridge Railway, Worcester and Lincoln Railway, New North-road (amendment of the act of last session), Dumfries and Maxwell Town Waterworks, Cobbe's Divorce. The Lords Commissioners were Lord Langdale, the Earl of Minto, and Lord Granville.

SUNDAY POSTAL LABOUR.

Lord BROUGHAM again drew attention to the inconveniences likely to arise from the recent change in the Post-office regulations, and mentioned the case of a death which had occurred within the last day or two, in consequence of the impossibility of calling in a medical man. Mr Drouyn de Lhuys, and Lord Cowley, had recently been in communication with the Greek Government, and Baron Gros had himself received a draft of the convention from his own Government, and therefore he could not communicate it to Mr. Wyse. The statement was, therefore, utterly untrue; and yet upon that statement mainly was public opinion of the circumstance formed in this country. The charge thus brought against Mr. Wyse also applied to Lord Cowley and Baron Gros; for on the 24th of April, that the English and French Governments had come to an agreement as to the essential basis of the convention that had been signed between the two Powers; and that Mr. Wyse, being in actual possession of information, and knowing of the existence of that convention, had, nevertheless, with a full knowledge of that fact, renewed coercive measures, by which he compelled the Greek Government to agree to his proposal, as far as there was a charge that, as far as Mr. Wyse was concerned, was utterly and positively untrue. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Wyse had received no communication from Baron Gros on the 24th, or at any time earlier than the draft of the treaties to the draft of a convention of any sort or kind. ("Hear, hear," and cheers) Those who made that charge were misled for their information to the statement in the Times of "our own correspondent"—(laughter, and cries of "Hear"); a most valuable auxiliary, by the way, he must say in passing, because on one person who had spoken of the Earl of Aberdeen) had all his best sayings claimed publicly by the Morning Herald; and another was much more obvious, indebted to the correspondent of the Times than to the blue books. The noble Lord then said that all those affairs were now settled, and that the unpleasant difference with France was perfectly adjusted—so completely, that, had it not been for certain discussions in the French Chamber, M. Drouyn de Lhuys would have been most probably then present to hear the discussion. As to the territorial part of the question, it was always understood that the islands claimed belonged to the British Government as part of the Ionian states; and if the Greek Government, by the occupation of either of those islands, it was an invasion of the rights of England. It, however, formed no portion of the treaties agreed upon this occasion, and still remained open. Having thus disposed of Greece, he turned to the speech of Sir James Graham of the previous evening, and reminded the right hon. baronet that he had approved of Portugarence in the case of Belgium and Holland, and of the seizure of the Dutch vessels, which was certainly not done with the consent of Austria, Russia, or Prussia. By the conduct of England, they withdrew from the conference, and Prussia had assembled an army on her confines which caused France to take precautions which would otherwise have been unnecessary. Those three powers were to be congratulated on the peace which had been made—and made no secret of their wishes to keep up the union between the two countries. He admitted that the erection of the small kingdom of Belgium was an experiment, but it was a most successful one, to which he could look with pride and satisfaction as a claim for the confidence of the House of Commons. With respect to the interference with the affairs of Portugal, he put it to any one to say what interest England could have as to whether the throne of Portugal should be filled by Don Miguel or Donna Maria? Manifestly none. But the real question was between absolute and constitutional government, and he thought it quite advisable to support the representative of the latter, for the sake even of the welfare of Portugal itself. As a result, the right hon. Baronet was joined with him in the policy pursued, and was scarcely justified in now turning round upon him for that to which he was himself a party. The noble Lord then stated the circumstances attending the last interference in the affairs of Greece. There, he said, the Crown was in danger, and the Queen had appealed to France, England, and Spain for succour. The course pursued on that occasion was only defensible because any other course would have led to the insurrection by Spain without any of the conditions in favour of the insurgents and of the popular party which England had been enabled to stipulate for. It was said that Costa Cabral was the author of what constitutional government was there to this country? He had only endeavoured that Costa Cabral should be exiled while party feeling ran high, and until the Courts should have entered upon their functions. There was, it never was, intended to have been, the intention to exclude for ever Costa Cabral, or any other individual, from a return to power in Portugal. The case of Spain was precisely similar to that of Portugal, and was defensible on the same grounds; and, although General Narvaez was in power, he could not see in that fact any defeat of the policy of England, for the Constitution was in force and strictly observed. The manner and tone of his (Lord Palmerston's) despatches and conduct were severely criticised; but he would take the liberty of contrasting his despatch which had been condemned with one from Lord Aberdeen, the Foreign Minister of a mild and non-interfering Government. [The noble Lord read a despatch from Lord Aberdeen to Sir Edmund Lyons, dated December, 1845, censuring the Greek Government in the most unmeasured terms for the dismissal of Gen. Church and the appointment of Gen. Grivas. This despatch he compared with his own to Sir H. Bulwer when in Spain, and appealed to the House to say in which of them the tone was the least offensive.] With respect to the note to the Spanish Government, regarding that, as Sir H. Bulwer was in America, he could not be sent again to Spain, which the right hon. Baronet so strongly condemned as a deliberate insult to that country, he had only to say that that note, as well as the one from the Spanish Minister, had been previously submitted to, and agreed upon by, both Governments. He was unwilling to re-open the question of the Spanish marriages, but, as it formed a count in the indictment against him, he felt bound to say that he understood from the noble Lord whom he succeeded, and from what subsequently transpired, that promises had been broken not by Ministers, but by higher personages—in reference to those marriages. Referring to the charge of having pursued M. Guizot to his fall, Lord Palmerston utterly repudiated it; remarking, that, if the French nation thought for a moment that any knot of foreign conspirators sought the destruction of their Minister, and that these conspirators found asylum in their own land, they would scorn the leaguers, and would cling to the Minister against whom such intrigues should be directed. The noble Lord next proceeded to reply to the charges made by Sir James Graham with respect to the interference in the affairs of Switzerland and Italy, to which latter country Lord Minto was indirectly invited by the Pope to aid in the administrative reforms which he was then endeavouring to carry out in Rome, and from thence he was subsequently sent for to Naples, and requested to interfere to settle the affairs of Sicily; and yet all this was called an uncalled-for interference. He denied that the policy pursued by the Government had a tendency to excite revolutions; but it was the easiest way to run down an opponent when he was an advocate for prudent concession, to describe him as a revolutionist. He justified sending the British fleet to the Dardanelles, which he utterly denied could be considered as a threat against Russia or Austria. It was only a measure of support to the Porte, should it be attacked for not surrendering the Hungarian refugees. With respect to the fleet entering the Dardanelles, and the charge that it had been said that it so entered in consequence of stress of weather, he had to explain that the fleet first entered an outer bay and anchored, upon which the Government of the Porte intimated that if bad weather should arise, safer anchorage would be found in the inner bay. For some days Sir William Parker remained in the outer bay, but the weather becoming threatening, he had availed himself of the permission to remove to a safer anchorage. In conclusion, the noble Lord contended that the principles of their foreign policy were sanctioned by the great mass of the people, and that nothing had been done to deprive them of the confidence of that people; and he fearlessly challenged the decision of this political, commercial, and constitutional country on the whole line of his policy.

[The noble Lord's speech, which took nearly five hours in the delivery, was received by the House with the utmost favour, and the conclusion was cheered in the most vehement manner.]

On the motion of Sir J. Walmsley, the debate was adjourned.

The House shortly afterwards rose, at half-past two o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The House sat from noon to six o'clock.

Sir H. HALFORD withdrew the County Rates Bill for the present session, after a discussion.

The Larceny Summary Jurisdiction Bill was read a third time and passed.

Mr. AGLIONBY moved the second reading of the Copyhold Enfranchisement Bill.

Mr. CHRISTOPHER opposed it, and moved, as an amendment, that the bill be read a second time that day six months.

After a debate, the House divided—

For the second reading	..	..	..	103
Against it	..	..	..	84
Majority for the bill	..	..	..	19

Mr. NEWDEGATE moved the second reading of the Accidents on Railways Bill, the object of which was to make railway companies liable for accidents caused by the acts of their servants.

Mr. ELLIS objected to the bill, as a piece of partial and unnecessary legislation, founded on a single case that had occurred on the Midland line. The hon. member moved, as an amendment, that the bill be read a second time that day six months.

Mr. ADDERLEY, Colonel SIBTHORP, and Mr. SPOONER supported.

Mr. LABOUCHERE, the ATTORNEY-GENERAL, and Mr. RICARDO opposed the bill.

The House divided—

For the second reading	..	..	..	53
Against it	..	..	..	103
Majority against the bill	..	..	..	19

The bill was thrown out.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION OF 1851.

Earl TALBOT presented a petition from Kensington against the erection in Hyde Park of the building for the Exposition of 1851.

Lord BROUGHAM complained of the unsightly brick building erected in the open space near St. Margaret's Church, which he hoped was only for a temporary purpose, but in finding fault with this they were straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel, while they were authorising the erection of a huge brick building in Hyde Park. He should either to-morrow or Tuesday give notice of his intention to draw the attention of their Lordships to this subject.

The Irish Franchise Bill was postponed to Monday next.

ABOLITION OF THE LORD-LIEUTENANCY (IRELAND).

The Marquis of LONDONDERRY, having presented petitions from the Lord Mayor, corporation, and trades of Dublin against the proposed abolition of the office of Lord-Lieutenant, proceeded to move the following resolutions:—1. That to abolish the office of Lord-Lieutenant is contrary to the expectations held out by the statesmen who carried the legislative union between the two countries, and who declared that, though her Parliament was reserved, Ireland should retain her Court. 2. That if ever a period were inauspicious for any great change in the accustomed executive of Ireland, it is at a time when three years of famine have reduced her to the utmost verge of despair; when large numbers of the resident proprietors are ruined; when the burden of new poor-laws is in operation; when the forced sales of estates is carrying on; when a rebellion has been only recently suppressed; when agitations of land questions excite to violence and illegal proceedings; and when the great controversy of Free-Trade and Protection convulses the agricultural interests of the country. 3. That considering Dublin is one of the first manufacturing cities in Europe, and justly the pride of all Irishmen, with a population of 300,000, a trade improving between 1833 and 1848 from 600 to 980,000, and a navigation augmenting in like proportion, by 2,000 registered tons, that it is the head quarters of a large army, with law courts presided over by twelve judges, a high court of equity administered by a Lord Chancellor, a college of heralds, an opulent university, and an archæological society, abounding itself in scientific, literary, and charitable institutions; and considering that it differs from Edinburgh by being separated from the Imperial metropolis by a boisterous Channel, while it possesses a Privy Council prepared to take all steps which a public exigency may require, it appears that Dublin is a capital competent to give the civil and military direction which a crisis may require—a crisis which, notwithstanding the increased facilities of communication, may demand instant and local interposition, and which the office of Lord-Lieutenant, now existing for upwards of half a century, has hitherto been found able successfully to cope with and control.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE and Earl GREY, on the part of the Government, deprecated discussion on the subject until the bill relating to it was before the House.

The Duke of WELLINGTON expressed some doubts as to the expediency or propriety of the measure. He thought that some central source of authority would be requisite in Ireland, with which the authorities in this country could communicate in any case of emergency.

The Marquis of LONDONDERRY said that he would not then press the resolutions, and they were accordingly withdrawn.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

THE EXHIBITION OF 1851.—THE PROPOSED ERECTION IN HYDE-PARK.

Sir H. WILLOUGHBY gave notice of a motion for Monday next with respect to the right of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests to erect a building in Hyde-park for the Exhibition of 1851.

Mr. T. DUNCOMBE gave notice that on Monday next he would ask the First Lord of the Treasury when the intended Exhibition of 1851 would close; also whether it was not still the case that the Commissioners of Woods and Forests should re-consider their determination to erect the building in Hyde Park; and whether, in the event of the amount raised, or to be raised, by voluntary subscription being insufficient, it was the intention of her Majesty's Ministers to apply to Parliament, either this year or next, for a grant of public money to defray the expenditure which would be incurred. ("Hear, hear," and cheers from the Protectionist benches.)

BRITISH CLAIMS ON THE NEAPOLITAN GOVERNMENT.

Mr. B. COCHRANE, seeing the noble Lord at the head of the Government in his place, wished to ask him whether any correspondence had passed between her Majesty's Government and the King of the Two Sicilies (not the King of Naples) on the subject of some extravagant and absurd demands made by British merchants in Messina

Lord J. RUSSELL replied, that communications had passed between the two Governments, but as the last despatch intimated that the matter in dispute had been referred to arbitration, the time had not arrived when the papers could be laid on the table

Mr. B. COCHRANE asked, if any threat had been held out to the King that the British fleet would be sent to Naples?

Lord J. RUSSELL said, no such threat whatever had been held out, but he must decline answering any more questions on the subject, as the communications were going on with a friendly Government upon claims that now appeared to be fair and just, and these questions would only have the effect of impeding their recovery. (Cheers.)

GREECE.—FOREIGN POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT.

The adjourned debate was resumed by Sir JOHN WALSH, who condemned the Foreign policy of the present Government, and declared his intention to vote against Mr. Roebuck's motion.

The discussion was continued by Sir H. VERNEY, who supported the Government; and by Sir R. INGLIS, the Marquis of GRANBY, Sir W. MOLESWORTH, Mr. SIDNEY HERBERT, and Mr. GLADSTONE, all of whom commended Lord Palmerston's foreign policy, while Mr. B. OSBALDESTON and Sir G. GREY defended it.

Mr. DRUMMOND also condemned the foreign policy of Ministers; and, on the motion of Mr. COCKBURN, the debate was again adjourned.

The House rose at a quarter past two o'clock.

INTEREST PAID TO SAVINGS-BANKS.—The total amount of loss of interest sustained by the public on account of excess of interest paid to trustees of savings-banks by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt above that received by them from the 20th of November, 1844, to the 20th November, 1849, was £222,905; and on account of friendly societies, £105,153. The calculation includes Ireland and Scotland.

Jenny Lind recently gave six concerts at Stockholm, in aid of the pension fund for the wives and orphans of the performers of the Theatre Royal of that city. The clear profits amounted to upwards of 60,000*l.*

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

AMBIGUUS is thanked for his polite attention, but the diagram forwarded is obviously imperfect

YANKEE DOODLE.—Please bill, consignorially, as you will see by our notice

R. B.—For the etymology and application of the word "Gambit," see the "Chess-Players Hand Book," page 72

W. N.—Will "W. N." explain to us the nature of the answer he re-quires

R. W. P.—Under consideration

T. H. G.—You must address the author of the work in question through his publisher

J. B. E.—Under consideration. New Brunswick. It shall be re-examined

ALPHA. Long—it is. Next week, if we have room

CAICUS.—The key move of Enigma 369 is—1. R to K 5th. Of 381 is—1. Q to B 7th (ch). Of 383, 1. P to Q Kt 4th. Also of 384 is—1. R to K 5th

MARCUS.—The key to Enigma 371 is—1. R to K R 5th; 2. P to K R 4th, &c.

A JUVENILE SUBSCRIBER.—See the notice above to "Caicus."

CALEB.—The Match between Messrs Mongredien and G. Medley has terminated in the latter winning, seven in four games, and four games being drawn.

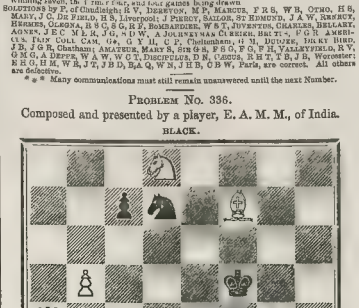
SOLUTIONS by F. of Chudleigh; R. V. Dereton, Devon; P. Marcus, F R S, W H, Otho, H S, Leavy, J, Fair Field, H S, Liverpool; J Percy, Sailor, St Edmund, J A W, Rhenus, Hermes, Oleras, B S C & R P, Bordesdere, W R T, Juventus, Charles, Bellast, Agnes, J E C M R, J G, S D W, A Journeyman Cheich, Brighton, P G H Americus, Jem Golf Cam, Oh, G Y H, C P, Chisholme, H M, Dundee, Dilly Bird, J B, J G R, Chatham; Amateur, Mary S, Sirgis, F S G, F G, F H, Valleyfield, R V, H M G, A Deper, W A W, W G T, Dorchester, D R, Ulcis, R B T, T B, J S, Worcester; E H G, H M, W R, J T, J B D, B A Q, W N, J E B, C B W, Paris, are correct. All others are defective.

* * * Many communications must still remain unanswered until the next Number.

PROBLEM No. 336.

Composed and presented by a player, E. A. M. M., of India.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

CHESS MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE

BETWEEN BERLIN AND POTSDAM.

In February, 1849, a Chess-Club was founded in Potsdam, under the auspices of Herr Grenfisch, a former member of the Berlin Club. At the first anniversary meeting of the Potsdam Club, this year, the young society took the bold resolution to challenge the parent Club at Berlin; and a Match by Correspondence has accordingly been arranged. The contest is to consist of two games; of which, however, the first is to be finished before the other is begun. The following are the opening moves. It will be seen that Berlin, having to begin, has adopted the variation of the Scotch Gambit, which was introduced by Mr. Horwitz some time ago (a).

(Scotch Gambit.)

WHITE (Berlin).	BLACK (Potsdam).	WHITE (Berlin).	BLACK (Potsdam).
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	8. Q to K B 4th (b)	Kt takes Q B P (ch)
2. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d
3. P to Q 4th	P takes P	9. K to Q sq	Q takes Q
4. Kt takes P	Q to K R 5th	10. Q B takes Q	P to Q 3d
5. K Kt to Q Kt 5th	K B to Q B 4th	11. K takes Kt	K takes Kt
6. Q to K B 3d	Kt to Q 5th	12. Q Kt to B 3d	Q B to K 3d
7. Kt takes Q B P (ch)	K to Q sq	13. Q R to Q B sq	Q R to Q B sq
		Berlin to play.

(a) Mr. Horwitz, who had only examined the most obvious consequences of the move he suggested, subsequently abandoned the variation as untenable; but it was taken up afterwards by Mr. Staunton, and shown to be perfectly sound, and a most important feature in this celebrated Gambit. See the "Chess-Player's Handbook," pp. 170-174.

(b) It was by this move, which had been entirely overlooked by all who had practised and written upon the variation, that the "Handbook" established the validity of this peculiar attack.

CHESS IN RUSSIA.

The following games between the well-known author on Chess, Major C. F. de Jaenisch and another amateur of St. Petersburgh, have been kindly forwarded to us by the former for publication.

(Philidor's defence to the K Kt game.)

WHITE (Mr. Schumoff).	BLACK (Major J.).	WHITE (Mr. Schumoff).	BLACK (Major J.).
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	26. P to K 4th	Q to K R 5th
2. K Kt to B 3d	P to Q 3d	27. P to Q Kt 3rd (e)	K R to K sq
3. P to Q 4th	P takes P	28. R to K B sq	B to K 4th
4. Q takes P	Q Kt to B 3d	29. Q to her 2d	P to K R 4th
5. K B to Q Kt 5th	Q B to Q 2d	30. Kt to Kt 5th	B takes K R P
6. Q to her sq	K Kt to B 3d	31. Kt to K B 3d	B to K B 5th (dis ch)
7. Q Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to K 4th	32. Kt takes Q	B takes Q
8. P to Q 3d	Q B to his 3d	33. Kt takes K Kt P	P takes P
9. Q B to K Kt 5th	K B to K 2d	34. Kt to K 7th (ch)	R takes Kt
10. B takes Kt	B takes B	35. P takes R	R to K sq
11. K Kt to Q 4th	Castles	36. R to K Kt sq	R takes P
12. Castles	Kt to K Kt 3d	37. R takes P (ch)	K to B sq
13. P to K B 4th	Q to K 2d	38. R to K R 6th	R to his 2d
14. Kt takes B	P takes Kt	39. P to Q R 4th	R to K 3d
15. B to Q 3d	Q R to Q Kt sq	40. K to Kt 2d	R to K B 3d
16. Q R to Q Kt sq	B checks	41. K to K R 3d	R to his 2d
17. K to R sq	Q to K B 2d	42. R to K B 5th	R takes R
18. P to K B 5th	Kt to K B 5th	43. B takes R	K to B 3d
19. P to K B 6th (b)	Q to her 2d (c)	44. R to K 4th	P to Q 4th
20. P takes P	P takes R	45. K to B 3d	R to his 4th
21. R takes Kt (d)	P takes R	46. B to Q 3d	P to K B 4th
23. Q to K R 6th	Q to her 4th	47. B to Q R 6th	K to Q 5th
24. Q to K Kt 4th	Q to K Kt 3d	48. B to Q 3d	P to K B 5th
25. Q takes K B P	Q to K R 4th

And after several more moves, the game was declared drawn.

(a) By the sacrifice of this Pawn he is enabled to bring his Kt into effective co operation with the other forces immediately.

(b) All this is good play of these.

(c) Taking Pawn with Pawn would have been highly dangerous.

(d) This is better, we believe, than the more obvious method of taking the K Kt Pawn.

(e) We should rather have driven back the Bishop with the Queen Bishop's Pawn.

BETWEEN THE SAME PLAYERS.

(Scotch Gambit.)

Of the opening in this game Major Jaenisch remarks that "it seems to require a more satisfactory analysis. The greatest English authority (see the "Chess-Player's Handbook," page 161) pronounces in favour of the attack. The greatest German authority (see an article by Von der Lasa in the Berliner Schachzeitung, 1848, page 79) holds a contrary opinion. In the hope to decide this question, Messrs. Schumoff and Jaenisch have commenced a series of games at this opening, of which the following is one."

WHITE (Mr. Schumoff).	BLACK (Von Jaenisch).	WHITE (Mr. Schumoff).	BLACK (Von Jaenisch).
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	12. Q to her 5th (ch)	K to K 3d
2. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	13. B to K 5th	Q to K sq
3. P to Q 4th	P takes P	14. P to K B 4th	K to Kt 2d
4. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	15. P to K B 5th	R to K 4th (c)
5. K Kt to K 5th	Q Kt to B 3d	16. P to K B 6th (ch)	K to R 3d
6. Kt takes K B P	Kt takes Kt	17. P to K B 7th	K to Kt 2d
7. B takes Kt (ch)	K takes B	18. P takes Q, becoming a Kt (ch)	R takes Kt
8. Q to K R 5th (ch)	P to K Kt 3d	19. Q to K B 7th (ch)	K to R sq
9. Q takes B	P to Q 3d (a)	20. B Mates
10. Q to Q Kt 5th	R to K sq
11. Castles	R takes P (b)

(a) Since the present game was played, Mr. Schumoff has hit upon a remarkably ingenious mode of carrying on the defence from this point, the variations on which form the subject of an article we have been favoured with by him and Major Jaenisch. Mr. Schumoff's discovery consists in the playing the Q's Pawn to Q 4th, instead of to Q 3d at this moment, and we regret extremely that our limits forbid our giving the copious and interesting analysis by which these writers seek to prove the correctness of their novel defence. The whole of it, however, will be found in the July Number of the Chess-Player's Chronicle, to which periodical we must be content to refer those readers who are desirous of going fully into the subject.

(b) This was an error.

(c) Fatal.

THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.

The Town Hall, Oxford, was numerously filled on Monday evening by members of the Institute and of the University and others, of whom, as usual, a large proportion were ladies. The entertainments were the inspection of a vast number of beautiful prints, drawings, and models, and music. The latter was afforded, except in one instance, by members of the University, under the skilful direction of Charles W. Corfe, Esq., of Christ Church. The exception was a beautiful pianoforte solo, played by Mrs. Kitchingle, a professional lady, who, on this occasion, most kindly volunteered her aid. The rest of the music consisted of selections from the works of the great masters of vocal composition of the Elizabethan age. The whole was extremely well executed, and appeared to afford very general satisfaction.

Refreshments were provided in the Council Chamber, and two very beautiful antique chalices were handed round, filled with cider "cups," one of which was the coronation-cup of Charles II. The noble President, the Marquis of Northampton, and the Vice-Chancellor were present, besides several of the heads of houses. The Town-Hall was most tastefully decorated with a large number of pictures and prints, chiefly, we believe, the property of one of the most zealous members of the local committee, Mr. R. J. Spiers.

On Tuesday morning, a meeting of the architectural section was held. The Principal of Brasenose read a paper by Dr. Whewell, on the Gothic architecture of the Continent; and the Rev. Edward Hill, one by A. Millward, Esq., on some of the peculiarities of Continental churches, as to their form and arrangement. Both papers were replete with interest, and the former of the two could be the work of none but a master of his. About sixty were present, including the Rev. the Vice-chancellor and the indefatigable president.

The concluding general meeting was held in the Sheldonian Theatre, the president in the chair. The proceedings, which commenced at half-past twelve and lasted till half-past two, were begun by the reading of the report by Mr. Tucker, one of the secretaries. The tenor of the report was entirely congratulatory.

The report, and all the propositions made in the course of the meeting, were unanimously adopted. The first of these was the election of new members to serve in the committee.

Invitations were read to the Institute to hold meetings either next year, or soon, in Newcastle, Lichfield (the mention of which place was received with considerable applause), Northampton, Chichester, and St. Albans. The committee, however, suggested for next year Bristol; and this proposition was warmly seconded by Mr. Britton, who especially requested the Institute to bear in mind how great an impulse would be given to the restoration of the cathedral of that city, now going on, should they determine on visiting it. It was, therefore, resolved that Bristol should be the place; but a visit, and, if possible, a congress of the various county archæological and kindred societies, at St. Albans, was settled should be held some time between this and the next annual meeting. Thanks were voted by acclamation to those other places from which invitations had been received, and a hope expressed that the Institute might before long find itself able to visit each of them.

Various resolutions expressing thanks were then proposed, and in every case unanimously adopted.

THE GORHAM CASE.

The clergy of Arnstic, Montgomeryshire, having presented a memorial to the Bishop of Bangor, stating that the decision in the Gorham case has given a latitude of interpretation whereby "the Articles may be construed to mean anything or nothing," and expressing a wish that the right rev. prelate would, with his brother prelates, take measures to remedy such an anomalous state of things; the Bishop replied, on June 10th, and admitted the necessity of applying some remedy to the evil. He also expressed his regret that "the distinguished members of the legal profession who decided the case had not confined themselves to reasons of policy and expediency, and had entangled themselves with questions of doctrine—shoring up their decision by theological arguments that will not bear investigation." The Right Rev. Prelate believes, however, that the importance of the judgment has been overrated; that it applies only to the particular case, and can have no authority over the doctrines of the Church. "The clergy will still hold and teach the same doctrine, as heretofore, on spiritual regeneration by baptism."

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.

A convocation was held on Monday at two o'clock, for the purpose of conferring honorary degrees on the Earl of Clarendon, the Most Noble the Marquis of Northampton, F S A., the president of the Archæological Institute, and on the well-known American historian Prescott. Great numbers of visitors, especially ladies, were present in the theatre, and the candidates were greeted by the assembly with great enthusiasm. They were presented by the Regius Professor of Civil Law, Dr. Phillimore, who, in a few phrases of Latin, set forth the claims which these distinguished personages had for honour in the University of Oxford. The Vice-Chancellor, the Rev. Dr. Plumptre, conferred the degrees in person; and almost all the heads of houses who still remain in Oxford were seated with him on the Doctor's bench.

INSTALLATION OF THE DEAN OF HEREFORD.—The Very Rev. Richard Dawes, A.M., Rector of King's Somborne, Hampshire, was duly installed with customary forms of the ancient Cathedral on Tuesday morning. There was a fashionable congregation to witness the ceremony.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—The Very Rev. Henry Parr Hamilton, to the Deanery of Salisbury. The Rev. Ralph Sadleir, to be Hebdomadal Canon in Cathedral Church of St. Peter, Westminster. The Hon. Charles Colson, Vicar of Great Hormead, Essex, to the Deanery Rural of Buntingford, in the diocese of Rochester. The Rev. John Downall, Vicar of Ottery St. Mary, to the Deanery Rural of Ottery, in the diocese of Exeter. The Rev. J. Hutchinson to the Canon Residentiary and Precentorship of Lichfield Cathedral. The Rev. James Garvey, to the Rectory of Ashby-cum-Fenby, in the diocese of Lincoln. The Rev. William Layng, to the Rectory of Creston, Lincolnshire. The Rev. John Burrell Hayter, to the Rectory of Brighting, Sussex. The Rev. John Ward, to the Rectory of Wath, Yorkshire.

VACANCIES.—Newton-Kyme R., county and archdiocese of York, value £230; no residence; pat., T. Fawkes, Esq.; Rev. E. Dunnicliffe, prom. Bumstead-Helion V., Essex and Cambridgeshire, dio. Rochester; value £174, with residence; pats., Trinity College, Cambridge; Rev. J. Hodgson, dec. Mastership (Head) of Pyrsent's Grammar School, Chudleigh, Devon; salary £30, with residence; testimonials before May 15; Rev. E. C. Collins, resigned.

TESTIMONIALS.—The following clergymen have recently received testimonials of esteem and affection.—The Rev. W. Turner, late master of the grammar-school at Uppingham, from the pupils; the Rev. Joseph Wilkinson, first incumbent of St. Peter's Church, Redcar, Yorkshire, by his parishioners, in grateful remembrance of his faithful services and unchanging attachment to his flock during a period of twenty-three years; the Rev. Thomas Gifford Gallwey, from the inhabitants of Malvern; the Rev. William Bowshew, Curate of Astbury, from the patron, rector, and parishioners, a salver, and a purse containing 300 sovereigns, as an acknowledgment of faithful services rendered in that parish for seventeen years.

JUVENILE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of this society was held on Tuesday night, in Bloomsbury Chapel; the Rev. W. Brock acting as chairman. A short address from the rev. gentleman, the secretary read the report, which stated that, during the last year, the contributions from the juvenile auxiliaries had been larger than formerly; the increase had arisen principally from the formation of new auxiliaries, and partly from some schools having adopted the plan of subscribing one farthing per week, and the teachers one penny. In addition to the regular contributions, nearly £70 has been raised among the children by the delivery of lectures, illustrated by the dissolving views. From the reports transmitted home by the missionaries, it appears that the society's operations are most extended in India, in which country there are 36 missionaries and assistant pastors, 72 native preachers; 45 day-schools, containing 2279 boys and girls; and 14 Sunday-schools, with 1000 scholars. In Ceylon, the West Indies, Africa, and other parts, the objects of the society are also being carried out with more or less of success. Several rev. gentlemen then addressed the meeting.

CONSECRATION OF THE CHURCH OF ST. STEPHEN THE MARTYR, WESTMINSTER.

On Monday, the festival of St. John the Baptist, the new Church of St. Stephen the Martyr, situate in Rochester-row, Tothill-fields, was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of London, with great solemnity.

Our readers will recollect that this stately Church has been built and endowed at the sole cost and charge of Miss Burdett Coutts a large act of munificence which must endear the name and memory of this pious lady to the Christian world. It originated in a sweet impulse of filial affection. Miss Coutts being anxious to raise a memorial to her father, the late Sir Francis Burdett, rightly conceived that no more appropriate mode of carrying her wishes into effect could be adopted than that of building and endowing a church in the heart of that city with which her revered parent's name had been so many years intimately associated. The first stone of the Church was laid July 30, 1847; and a report of the interesting proceedings, with a view of the exterior of the edifice, will be found in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, No. 275. After the foundation-stone had been laid, the works were delayed for some time; but, the schools were proceeded with, the ordinary services of the Church being in the meantime performed in the old chapel, daily consecrated for the purpose. When the Schools were completed, about two years ago, the chapel was taken down, and the building of the Church was resumed, the religious services from that period to the present time having been performed in the large school-room. The Church was finally completed a few weeks since; and the Bishop of London appointed Monday for the ceremony of consecration; and a very large party of ladies and gentlemen was invited to be present upon the occasion. The inhabitants of the districts evinced their gratitude to the founder by a holiday observance of partly closing their shops; and many of the houses were decorated with flags and evergreens.

The company invited began to assemble at half-past ten o'clock, at which hour parties provided with tickets were admitted into the body of the Church. We have already described the exterior. The interior plan consists of a nave 79 feet long by 21 feet wide; north and south aisles of the same length, and 12 feet wide; and a chancel, 43 feet in depth by 21 feet wide. The height from the floor of the nave to the ridge of the roof is 54 feet, that of the chancel 40 feet, and that of the side walls of the aisles 26 feet. The tower, situate at the north-east angle of the nave, opens into the chancel by a deeply-recessed and moulded archway, within which stands the organ, the front presenting a screen of diapered pipes. The chancel has a polygonal ceiling, divided into panels; the ribs are enriched by beautifully carved and emblazoned bosses, bearing various Christia emblems, and the panels are coloured ultra-marine and powdered with stars of gold. The whole canopy springs from a richly foliated string-course. The walls are decorated with Scripture texts, having enriched initial letters; and the reredos is composed of rich diapering, picked out in gold and colour. The altar-table is covered by a superb altar-cloth, presented by his Grace the Duke of Wellington. The carpet within the Sanctuary is of extreme beauty, and has been worked by numerous ladies of distinction, friends of Miss Coutts; amongst whom we may mention Her Grace the Duchess of Northumberland, the Marchioness of Ely, the Marchioness Dowager of Ely, Miss Vernon, Miss Vernon Harcourt, Mrs Pulleu, Lady Loftus Otway, Mrs. E. Majoribanks, the Misses Majoribanks, the Hon. Miss Sidney, Mrs. Jones, Miss Watson, Mrs. Brown, and the infant granddaughter of the Duke of Wellington. The ground is purple, and divided into squares, alternately filled with fleurs de lis and roses and armorial bearings. In the centre are Miss Coutts's arms, supported by the arms of the sees of Canterbury and London, the city of Westminster, and of the deanery. At the angles are the arms of the late Sir Francis Burdett, the Goldsmith's Company; and those of Adelaide and Cape Town; endowed by Miss Coutts. The sedilia are lined with richly embroidered velvet. The chancel is paved with Minton's encaustic tiles, and fitted up with stalls on each side; the westernmost stall on the south side being advanced a little more towards the centre as a reading desk. The lessons are read from a lectern. The organ has been built by Mr. Hill: it is a powerful and beautiful instrument, and cost eight hundred guineas. Over the chancel arch in the nave, the words "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will towards men," are beautifully emblazoned in colours. The nave roof is of oak, and is divided by arched trusses and inter-ties, the arch principals resting upon stone capitals and triple shafts, elaborately carved. The arcade is deeply moulded, and each capital of the clustered shafts has different foliage. The aisle roofs are more enriched than the main roof, but are similarly divided by ornamented trusses, and form arches in their design, the spandrils being filled with geometrical tracery. The pulpit is of Caen stone: the base is plain, supporting a highly enriched corbelled front, and the sides finish in spandrils, filled in by tracery-work. The pulpit is approached through a door in one of the tower buttresses, which contributes to the picturesque effect. The font, at the west end of the Church, is rich in design, and the bowl is ornamented by panels containing Scriptural subjects. The "St. Stephen" window and the west window are by Wailes, of Newcastle; the remaining glass has been executed by Messrs. Powell most successfully in their stamped quarries. The architectural sculpture is by Mr. White. The beautiful decorations of the chancel ceiling, reredos, and the texts over the chancel arch are the work of Mr Hudson and Mr. West. Provision is made for a most complete system of warming and ventilating the Church, as well as the adjoining school and masters' residences. Mr. Ferrey, of Charing-cross, is the architect, to whom the merit of having designed this beautiful Church belongs; and Messrs. Rigby, of Holywell-street, are the contractors.

INTERIOR OF THE CHURCH OF ST. STEPHEN, ROCHESTER-ROW, WESTMINSTER.

THE FONT.

The Church was quite full on Monday morning, a few minutes after the doors were opened. The 600 free seats were chiefly occupied by elegantly-dressed ladies, among whom we remarked the Duchess of Sutherland, the Marchioness of Kildare, Lady Augusta Gordon, the Countess Grey, Viscountess Dungannon and Miss D'Arcy Irving, Lady Seymour and the Ladies St. Maur, Lady Antrobus, &c. The Earl of Carlisle, Viscount Castlereagh Sir William Ross, and M. Ocrs were among the gentlemen present. Miss Coutt occupied a seat near the altar. Among the dignitaries of the Church present, we observed the Dean of St. Paul's, the Hon. and Rev. Lord John Thynne; the Rev. Temple Frere, the Rev. Mr. Repton, the Rev. Evan Nepean, the Rev. W. Tennant, incumbent of the new Church; and the Rev. Richard Hooper, his curate; with many other clergymen of the district. There were also presen the Lord Bishop of Salisbury, the Bishop of Edinburch, the Hon. and Rev. G. Wellesley, the Rev. Dr. Hook, Dr. Jelf, the Rev. T. Cooke, G. Ellice, W. Bennett, &c.

The Bishop of London arrived at eleven o'clock accompanied by his son and chaplain, the Rev. F. Blomfield; and was received by the Rev. Canon Jennings and the Rev. Canon Curteton, with others of the parochial clergy.

The usual preliminary formularies having been gone through, the Bishop of London took his seat at the right of the altar. Miss Coutts was here led forward by Lord John Thynne, the Sub-dean of Westminster; and the Rev. John Jennings, Prebendary of Wes minster: for the purpose of delivering to the Bishop the deed of conveyance, which Miss Coutts did .n a very graceful manner, after which she returned to her seat. The ceremonial was then proceeded with in a very impressive manner. The musical service was chanted by a full choir of professionals, including Messrs. Gray, Barnby, Hobbs, Benson, Machin, W. Barnby, Coward, and Cummings, assisted by the young gentlemen of her Majesty's Chapel Royal, Westminster Abbey, and the Temple Church. Mr. Turle presided at the organ, and was assisted by Mr Hopkins, organist of the Temple Church.

The sermon was preached by the Bishop of London, who selected his text from the First Epistle of St. Peter, chap. iv. verse 11, "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth; that God in all things may be glorified, through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and glory, for ever and ever. Amen." The right rev. prelate made a most eloquent appeal touchingly appropriate to the interesting occasion. After the offertory had been read, a handsome collection was made at the doors.

The Bishop of London, with Miss Coutts and several of her private friends, including the Duchess of Sutherland, the Earl of Carlisle, &c., retired, after the service, to the Infant School-room, where a very handsome déjeûner was served to a party of nearly 200 ladies and gentlemen.

The workmen employed on the building, as well as the children in the schools, and many of the poorer inhabitants of the district, were also regaled during the afternoon with good substantial fare, in a marquée within the grounds of the Church. The Bishop of London made a most suitable address to the workmen; and Mr. Ferrey also addressed them, in proposing the health of Miss Burdett Coutts.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert inspected the Church a few days since, and expressed himself in very warm terms of admiration of its beauties. The Prince also walked through the Schools, and expressed himself much pleased with the method of instruction adopted, and th proficiency of some of the pupils.

Miss Coutts has presented the Rev. Mr. Tennant, the clergyman, with a handsome silver inkstand from the children and teachers of the schools, as a tribute of their affection and regard for him.

The Church, we should add, has seats for from 850 to 900 persons; and on the day of consecration there were nearly 1000 present. The beautiful decoration of the chancel, roof, and walls has been the work of Mr. Hudson and Mr. West. The elaborate scroll iron-work, and the Corona and other metal-work, has been wrought by Mr. Potter, of Southmolton-street. The lectern and Bishop's chair were made by Mr Morant, of Bow-street.

The Communion-plate is of exquisite workmanship, manufactured by Messrs. Catchpole and Son, of Cordell-street. It is a gift to the Church by Mr. and Mrs. Brown, friends of Miss Burdett Coutts.

The tower is extremely solid and massive, and contains a peal of eight bells, by Mears. Provision is made for the most complete system of warming and ventilating the Church as well as the adjoining schools and masters' residences.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS

In addition to a general view of the interior of this magnificent Church, we have engraved the Pulpit and Font; the latter having most conspicuous, among the Scriptural subjects sculptured on the panels, the Baptism of our Saviour, Christ blessing little Children, and the Resurrection.

THE PULPIT.

THE LANDORE VIADUCT, NEAR SWANSEA.

OPENING OF THE SOUTH WALES RAILWAY.

THIS new line of railway was opened with great ceremony on the 18th inst., a day celebrated in the military history of our country, but of late years judiciously selected for the consummation of many magnificent labours of peace. Before noticing the above inauguration, we shall briefly describe the new line, from the Swansea and Glamorgan Herald.—

The South Wales Railway is intended to effect a direct communication with the Great Western line at Gloucester. The line, however, commences near Haglee, about twelve miles from Gloucester, from which point the communication with Gloucester is by the Forest of Dean Railway. From Haglee, the line runs on the western side of the Severn till within about three miles from Chepstow, where it directs its course inland · and on its arrival at Chepstow crosses the river Wye over a bridge, now in course of erection. After leaving Chepstow, the line diverges from the coast, passing by Magor and Bishopston, over the moors, which it crosses in the direction of Newport, and passes over the river by means of a wooden bridge, then through a tunnel about half a mile in length. From Newport, the South Wales again pursues its westerly course, in the vicinity of the coast, and arrives at Cardiff. Immediately on leaving Cardiff, the Taff is crossed by a bridge of wood. The line, leaving the coast, then passes towards the ancient city of Llandaff, from which place it takes a north-westerly direction towards Llantrissent, keeping, however, a short distance to the south of that borough. By adopting this route, the railway communicates with one of the richest mineral districts in the South Wales coal basin. From a point near Llanharan, the line takes a south-western direction, passing near Bridgend, Pyle, and regaining the coast at Lower Kenfig, whence it follows its direction through Aberavon to Briton-ferry. At this point the South Wales again leaves the coast, and, taking a north-westerly direction, arrives at Neath, where, the river being crossed by a wooden bridge, the line commences a steep ascent on arches till it arrives on the high ground a little above Skewen-hill, passing at the base of Drymma mountain. From this point it pursues a westerly direction through Llansamlet, passing a deep cutting which goes through the highest part of the hill which separates the Swansea from the Neath Valley. From the point at which the line emerges from the cutting, it begins to descend the hill into the Swansea Valley, and, passing over the marsh near the Tawe, arrives at the splendid viaduct over the river, which is the subject of one of our Engravings; it then enters, by means of a line originally intended to be a branch line, into the town of Swansea, which is, for the present, the western terminus of the railway.

From Swansea westward the works have been only partially completed.

Chepstow was the starting-point for the ceremony of the 18th. Here an address was presented to the directors, who, shortly after, left in a train for Swansea.

The demonstration was general throughout the line, extending for a distance of 75 miles: banners floated from every available position; the ships in the several ports of Chepstow, Newport, Cardiff, Port Talbot, Neath, and Swansea were gaily decked out; and at every station wreaths of flowers and evergreens and triumphal arches abounded.

The journey downwards occupied four hours, in consequence of the numerous addresses of congratulation presented to the directors by the local authorities. In every corporate town, the utmost hospitality on the part of the authorities and the inhabitants marked the proceedings of the day.

The train stopped at all the stations, of which there are eight, between Chepstow and Swansea, besides the termini.

The arrival at Swansea took place a little after one o'clock, the engine having made the trip from Cardiff to Swansea, including stoppages, in two hours and a half. The engines, which were guided by Mr. Gooch and Mr. Martley, were studded with banners, and gaily dressed with evergreens, and came in in splendid style, amidst the inspiring strains of the military band. The terminus likewise, although not quite complete, was tastefully prepared for the occasion, the interior and exterior being interspersed with a profusion of banners.

At Swansea, as early as six o'clock, the old bells rang merrily; the Royal Institution, the New Town-hall, the Assembly-rooms, the Church tower, the old Norman castle, and other public as well as private buildings, had the British ensign floating majestically from their tops—the shipping, too, were decked out in their best colours in honour of the auspicious event. The influx of strangers rom the neighbouring towns was unprecedentedly large, and by eleven o'clock there could not be less than 20,000 people about the streets.

THE TERMINUS, AT SWANSEA.

In addition to the vehicles that arrived from various parts of the Principality, upwards of 500 persons came by water in the Talbot steamer, from Port Talbot, Aberavon, Cwmavon, Maesteg, Margam, and the neighbourhood; and by the Pearl steamer from Milford, Tenby, and other places.

At a quarter past twelve, the procession was formed in front of the Assembly-Rooms. It consisted of the Mayor, members of the Town-Council, the officers of the Corporation, and a goodly number of the leading merchants and tradesman of Swansea and other towns. They proceeded to the Terminus, where the train, as we have mentioned, arrived a little after one o'clock, by which time the scene had increased to the most imposing description. Not only the Graig, but the neighbouring hills for miles round were covered with spectators, who cheered most lustily. On the arrival of the train, the Directors were met by the Mayors of Swansea, Carmarthen, Haverfordwest, and a select number of gentlemen, inside the station. After the ceremony of introduction was over, Valentine Davis, Esq., the chief Magistrate of Carmarthen, presented a congratulatory address on behalf of the Corporation of Carmarthen.

Mr Talbot, in reply, assured the worthy Mayor, that, although the South Wales directors had not now the means at their command to extend the line to Carmarthen, yet they hoped, next year, they would be able to bring it down to that town. The procession then re-formed, and, accompanied by the directors and visitors, returned to the Assembly-rooms, headed by the fine band of the 77th Regiment. For a portion of these details we are indebted to the Cambrian report.

The next point of attraction was the public breakfast. There could not have been less than 730 persons present; among others, the Mayor of Swansea, Mr. James Pool (in the chair), Lord James Stuart, Viscount Villiers, M.P.; Sir John Guest, Bart., M.P.; Mr. Talbot, M.P.; Mr. Vivian, M.P.; R. Fothergill, Esq., High-Sheriff of the county; Mr. J. P. Barlow (one of the directors), Mr. Saunders (secretary), and Mr. Brunel (chief engineer) of the Great Western Railway; Mr. Williams, secretary of the Vale of Neath Railway; Mr. Coffin, deputy-chairman of the Taff Vale Railway Company; Mr. Baker (chairman), Mr. Walker (director), and Mr. Nash (secretary), of the Gloucester and Dean Forest Railway Company; the Mayors of Newport, Cowbridge, Neath, Carmarthen, Haverfordwest, and Gloucester, the Portreve of Llanelly, &c.

The déjeûner was very splendid. The Mayor, Christopher James, Esq., occupied the chair: he was supported on his right by G. R. M. Talbot, Esq.; and on his left by Viscount Villiers.

The customary loyal and national toasts having been drunk,

Mr. Talbot, in reply to the toast of "The Directors," said: When called upon on occasions of this kind, he had usually considered the compliment to be a one-sided one; but not so on the present occasion, for he thought he might say with truth that the directors of the South Wales Railway Company deserved well at their hands. (Cheers.) They had that day completed the first stage of their magnificent enterprise—an enterprise which had called into play all their patience, all their perseverance, and all the money—(hear, hear)—which could be commanded. He thought the people of that country were not such slow coaches as to be satisfied with stopping their line of railway at Swansea. Carmarthenshire and Pembrokeshire must be brought together. The late Mr. O'Connell, in addressing his countrymen, used to make use of a favourite expression, "This is a great day for Ireland." He (Mr. Talbot) would paraphrase the sentence, and pronounce this "a great day for Wales." What he would enjoin upon his fellow-countrymen was, to travel, travel, travel. (Hear, hear.) After some further remarks, Mr. Talbot gave "The health of the Mayor of Swansea," and

The Mayor of Swansea replied.

On the health of the members for the Glamorganshire boroughs being given, Sir John Guest and Mr. Vivian replied. The latter dwelt on the advantages of railway communication, not only as tending to the comforts of the rich, but adding to the accommodation of the poor.

"The health of the Directors of the Great Western Railway Company" was proposed by Mr. Grenfell.

Mr. Barlow acknowledged the toast, and assured his hearers that he had always regard d the interests of the South Wales and Great Western Companies as identical

"The health of Mr. Brunel, the engineer-in-chief," was next given as one who had "annihilated both time and space."

Mr. Brunel briefly replied; and other toasts followed; and at half-past six o'clock the party broke up, and proceeded to the station.

On its return to Chepstow, the special train arrived there after a quick journey of three hours (75 miles), including stoppages at eight stations. The same manifestations were repeated at each station, and everything passed off without the slightest accident. Every necessary precaution had been taken by the company's officers, and the whole affair was conducted most creditably.

In addition to the public breakfast, there were other festivities. A dinner was given to about 200 of the workmen; the theatre was opened; there was a fine display of fireworks; and a grand ball at the Assembly-Rooms.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

We have engraved the Landore Viaduct, a mile and a half from Swansea—a magnificent wood structure perhaps the most striking object on the line—which conducts the Railway over the river Tawe and the large section of flat or marsh lands which are adjacent to its banks. Commencing on the eastern side of the valley, at Llysnewydd, in the parish of Llansamlet, it terminates on the west at Landore, from which it takes its name.

The contract for this structure was undertaken by Mr. Hennet, of Bristol. The work was begun some time since, but the period of commencing active operations dates no further back than September last; its completion may be said to have been accomplished in the beginning of the present month (June).

The following are the dimensions of the viaduct:—Its extreme length is 1797 ft. 3 in. It consists of 37 spans or trusses. The span of the centre arch over the river is 102 ft. The height from high-water mark to under beam, 73 ft.; to top of rail, 76 ft. The total height, from the bed of the river to the top, is 105 ft. 9 in. In the construction of the viaduct, 2600 loads of wood, or 130,000 cubic feet, have been employed, 350 tons of cast and wrought iron, and 3000 cubic yards of stone-work. The weight of wood and iron-work, exclusive of rails, ballast, &c., is upwards of 3000 tons! Although the operation connected with the construction of the bridge exposed the various artificers employed upon it to great danger, the whole of this vast undertaking, in which hundreds of men have been engaged, has been completed with only three fatal accidents.

The Swansea Terminus, the subject of our second Engraving, has a passenger-station 70 feet by 60 feet, covered with corrugated iron. The contractors were Messrs. Hughes and Jones.

We have to thank Mr. Pring, of the Railway Hotel, for his courtesy to our Artist. From this hotel, which adjoins the Bristol terminus, it may be useful to mention, first rate four-horse coaches run in connexion with the Swansea trains, at reasonable fares, through Henbury, Anst, and Beachly, to Chepstow, a delightful ride through a most beautiful country.

ROYAL GENERAL ANNUITY SOCIETY.—A special festival of the Royal General Annuity Society was held on Wednesday evening, at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street, in aid of the fund for establishing an asylum in connexion with this excellent and expansive charity the object of which is to provide a maintenance for decayed merchants, tradesmen, and persons of the middle ranks of life. The Right Hon. Lord Feversham presided; and a considerable number of the friends and supporters of the institution, including several ladies, were present on the interesting occasion. The chairman, in proposing the toast for the evening, viz., "Prosperity to the Royal Victoria Annuity Asylum," gave an account of the progress of the society from its foundation, explaining the steps which the committee had already taken with the view of erecting a comfortable building for the reception of aged annuitants; and giving it as his opinion that the society would not be complete, or capable of affording all the benefit which such an institution should provide, unless they had an asylum. It was on this account that special exertions were being made to raise funds, and he sincerely trusted that exertions directed towards the accomplishment of an object at once so noble and creditable, would be crowned with success.—(Cheers.) The intention was to erect the asylum at Hounslow. He believed that about £10,000 would be required to carry out this asylum; and though that might appear a large sum, there could be no doubt that, from the way in which the proposition for its establishment had been hitherto received, and the number of friends whom he saw around him, who had come forward to support it, there would be no difficulty in a short time of raising that amount. (Cheers.) The list of subscriptions to the building fund, amounted to upwards of £1000. Among the contributions announced were £50 from the Queen; £50 from the chairman; £100 from Mr. Blakemore, M.P. The proposed building will be formed like the letter E. In the centre will be a chapel capable of holding 300 persons; on one side the residence of the chaplain, and on the other a building for the reception of a library. There will be twenty-eight houses, each of which will be assigned to an annuitant. Each will, therefore, have a distinct residence, with a kitchen, sitting-room, bed-room, and, if possible, a small plot of garden ground.

LICENSED VICTUALLERS' SCHOOL.—The forty-fourth anniversary festival of the Licensed Victuallers' School was held on Wednesday, at Highbury Tavern, Islington; Arthur Kett Barclay, Esq., in the chair. Upwards of 2000 persons were present. The report announced that the governor, J. J. Homer, Esq., had collected, during the past year, the handsome sum of £3,000, and, with its offices, the sum of £1397. The whole contributions amount to £2361 5s. The chairman, in an appropriate address, then proposed "Prosperity to the Licensed Victuallers' School," which now possessed upwards of 1100 children, and which now provides for 116. He trusted that the funds would be sufficiently increased to enable the committee to carry out their intentions, and provide every comfort for at least 200 children, which the institution is calculated to accommodate.

INQUEST.—THE STATE OF THE SERPENTINE.—On Tuesday, an inquest was held by Mr. Bedford, at the Malpas Arms, Charles-street, Grosvenor-square, on the body of Thomas Bellonia, aged 18, the son of a West India merchant, who was drowned in the Serpentine on Sunday morning. Mr. Chorley, the secretary to the Humane Society, said that he had waited on the Duke of Cambridge since the last inquest, and represented to his Royal Highness the necessity of preventing bathing on the north side, from its dangerous state, and his Royal Highness immediately wrote to the Commissioners of Police, but nothing had yet been done. The jury considered it was quite time bathing on that side should be prevented. A new policeman would be enough to carry out any order given on the subject. Verdict, "Accidental death."

A young man lately died at Kirriemuir, Scotland, from a constan bleeding of the gums. Fever supervened upon the weakness consequent upon the discharge, and the patient died. No similar case has been known in the district.

CHAR-A-BANC FOR THE QUEEN OF PORTUGAL.

Two beautiful Chars-à-Banc, that have just been completed at the establishment of Messrs. Thrupp and Co., in Oxford-street, for her Majesty the Queen of Portugal, and are intended for her Majesty's use during the summer sojourn of the Court at the Royal residences of Cintra and Mafra.

The carriages are exceedingly elegant, and are finished in the highest style. We understand that they have been constructed under the direction of the Chevalier Pinto de Soveral, Secretary of Legation, who had the honour to be intrusted with her Majesty's commands on the occasion. The Chars-à-Banc are painted a rich blue, with lines of light blue and white. The seats have caned sides, and are lined with pearl-coloured Spitalfields silk, trimmed with handsome lace, of the grape-vine pattern, designed expressly for these carriages. The lamps are elegant in shape, and richly ornamented with chased brass and Bohemian glass.

We have Engraved one of these beautiful carriages.

CHAR-A-BANC FOR THE QUEEN OF PORTUGAL.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

COLONELCY OF THE 32ND REGIMENT.—It is now decided that Major-General Sir Richard Armstrong, the Colonel of the 90th Regiment, is to be removed to the 32nd, and that Major-General Bell, C.B., is to succeed to the 55th Regiment.

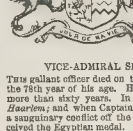
ROYAL FUSILIERS.—This Regiment, which has just arrived home, has been abroad ten years and a half. In November, 1839, the service companies embarked at Cork for Gibraltar; they remained at Gibraltar until December, 1844, in which month they proceeded to Barbadoes; and in May, 1848, they left the West Indies for Halifax, Nova Scotia, at which last station the Royal Fusiliers remained till May last.

CRUISE OF THE ROYAL YACHT.—The Royal yacht, the Victoria and Albert, Captain Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, arrived at Devonport early on Tuesday morning. She took in sufficient coal for five days' consumption on her passage to Lisbon and Gibraltar, calling at St. Sebastian. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, Sir Joseph Copley, and Sir George Wombwell, accompany Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence on this trip.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

VISCOUNT CANTILUPE.

GEORGE JOHN FREDERICK, VISCOUNT CANTILUPE, was eldest son and heir apparent of the present Earl De la Warr, and grandson, maternally, of the 3rd Duke of Dorset. He was born 25th April, 1814, and was formerly an officer in the Grenadier Guards. He sat in Parliament for several years, first for Helston, and afterwards for Lewes. His Lordship had been for some days suffering from rheumatic fever, which at last attacked the brain and proved fatal. By his death, his next brother, the Hon. Charles Richard Sackville West, becomes Viscount Cantilupe, and heir apparent of the honours of the House of De la Warr.



VICE-ADMIRAL SIR JOSIAH COGHILL COGHILL, BART.

THIS gallant officer died on the 20th inst. at Kenilworth-house, Cheltenham, in the 78th year of his age. His services in the navy extended over a period of more than sixty years. In the expedition to Egypt he was Lieutenant of the Heureux; and when Captain of the Rattlesnake, commanded two of her boats in a sanguinary conflict off the Malay coast. He was also at Walcheren, and received the Egyptian medal.

Sir Josiah, second son of the first Sir John Cramer Coghill, Bart., by Mary his wife, daughter of Dr. Josiah Hort, Archbishop of Tuam, succeeded to the title at the decease of his brother, in 1817. He was twice married: by his first wife, Sophia, daughter of James Dodsan, Esq., he had three daughters only; but by his second, Anna Maria, eldest daughter of the late Right Hon. Charles Kendal Bushe, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench in Ireland, he has left Sir John Josselyn Coghill, the present baronet, born 11th Feb., 1826; another son, Kendal Josiah William, and seven daughters, of whom the eldest, Rosanna Louisa, is married to John Harrison Aylmer, Esq., of Walworth Castle, county Durham.

CHARLES BOSANQUET, ESQ.

THIS gentleman, who died at his seat, the Rock, in Northumberland, was a magistrate and Deputy-Lieutenant of that county, and its High Sheriff in 1828. He was likewise a magistrate for Middlesex, and commanded, as Colonel, the London and Westminster Light Horse Volunteers.

Mr. Bosanquet's father, the late Samuel Bosanquet, Esq., of Forest House, Essex, Governor of the Bank of England in 1792, was great-grandson of David Bosanquet, who fled from Languedoc at the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and established himself in England. The learned Judge, Sir John Bernard Bosanquet, was younger brother of the gentleman whose decease we record.

Mr. Bosanquet, of the Rock, married Charlotte, daughter of Peter Holford, Esq., Master in Chancery, and has left two sons, both clergymen, and one daughter.

SAMUEL ELIAS SAWBRIDGE, ESQ., OF OLANTIGH, KENT.

THIS respected and deeply-lamented gentleman was Colonel of the East Kent Militia, and twice sat in Parliament for Canterbury. He was son and heir of the late Alderman John Sawbridge, M.P. for London, and Lord Mayor in 1775: and great-grandson of Jacob Sawbridge, Esq., M.P., one of the Directors of the South Sea Company, in the memorable year 1720, who purchased, temp. Queen Anne, from the Thornhill family, the estate and seat of Olantigh, in Kent.

Colonel Sawbridge was born in 1769, and married, in 1794, Elizabeth, daughter of Brabazon Ellis, Esq., of Wycdiall Hall, Herts, and had issue five sons and three daughters. Of the former, the eldest, John Samuel Wanley, having married the heiress of Richard Erle Drax Grosvenor, Esq., of Charborough Park, Dorset, is the present J. S. W. Sawbridge Erle Drax, Esq., M.P.

A letter from Stettin states that the amount of yellow amber collected this year has been unusually great. Almost the whole quantity obtained was at once bought up for England.

THE TICKET SHOPS.—At Marlborough-street Police-office, on Wednesday last, a lady asked the advice of Mr. Bingham in the following case:—She saw, in a shop in Oxford-street, a mantle marked a guinea, which suited her, and she went in and bought it. She put down the guinea, but she was told she must pay another half-guinea, as the price was a guinea and a half. She declined taking the mantle at that price, and requested to have her money returned. This was refused, and she was compelled to pay the half-guinea. As she conceived she had been imposed upon, she wished to know if she had any mode of obtaining redress. Mr. Bingham said a magistrate could render her no assistance, but he had no doubt she could procure redress at the County Court. A second lady came forward, and made a precisely similar statement, but the occurrence took place in another shop in Oxford-street. The lady said she had been terrified into giving the additional price. Mr. Bingham gave this lady the same advice as he had given the first lady.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. JUSTICE TALFOURD.

In the autumn of last year, a meeting of some friends and admirers of Mr. Justice Talfourd was held at Reading, T. Harris, Esq., mayor, in the chair, when a subscription was opened for the purpose of presenting the learned Judge with a Testimonial of respect from the inhabitants of Reading, his native town. The subscription list was subsequently augmented by a larger circle of Mr. Justice Talfourd's friends and admirers; and the Testimonial was presented to him at his residence in Russell-square, on Thursday evening.

It consists of a chased Silver Epergne, 34 inches in height, manufactured by Messrs. Makepeace and Walford, Serle-street, Lincoln's-inn. A triangular plinth supports a reeded and acanthus stem, from which issue six branches surrounding a vase for flowers. Around the stem are three female figures, representing Justice, Law, Poetry; and upon the faces of the plinth are engraved the arms of Sir Thomas Noon Talfourd, and of the borough of Reading, and the accompanying inscription:—

Presented to Mr. THOMAS NOON TALFOURD, D.C.L., one of the Justices of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas, by his friends at Reading, as a Memorial of the high esteem and admiration in which his character and talents are held in his native town. June, 1850

WOOD PAPER.—At the close of the last century a patent was granted to Matthias Koops for the manufacture of paper from straw, wood, &c. In September, 1800, he declared to the King a "Historical account of the substances which have been used to describe events," in small folio. The volume is chiefly printed on paper made from straw; the appendix is on paper made from wood alone. Both descriptions of paper have borne the test of time extremely well. Murray, in his "Practical remarks on modern paper," speaks of Koops and his inventions with much ignorance and unfairness. —BOLTON CORNEY.—Notes and Queries.

LEAD AND COPPER ORE.—The total quantity of pig and sheet lead imported into the United Kingdom in 1849 was 7215 tons, and of lead ore, 1380 tons; of white lead, 43 tons. Exported in the same year—lead ore, 150 tons, pig and rolled lead, 15,237 tons; shot, 1796; read-lead, 1691; litharge, 982; white-lead, 1675. The total quantity of copper imported in the same year was 72,000 tons, the greater portion of which was retained for home consumption.

A SCAPE-GOAT.—A person in Largo, who had heard it affirmed that rats would disinhabit premises where a goat was kept, had the curiosity to try the experiment, though with but little faith in the recommended antidote. Accordingly, on of these long-bearded mountaineers was procured and lodged in the premises, when, unexpectedly, the long-tailed, ugly, devouring vermin suddenly decamped. The goat has been kept for many months, and nothing in the shape of a rat is now seen near the premises. Some may be apt to class this affair among the ridiculous, but we have been told it is a reality; and surely this mode of making rats flit is as simple as it is singular.—Northern Warder.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

ELECTION OF SHERIFFS.

According to annual custom on Midsummer-day, the Livery assembled at Guildhall on Monday, at noon, for the purpose of electing Sheriffs for London and Middlesex, and the other City officers for the year ensuing. The absence of placards, and the unusually small attendance of spectators to witness the proceedings, denoted with sufficient certainty that there would be no opposition to the prescribed nominations.

At a quarter past one o'clock, the Lord Mayor, accompanied by the Sheriffs and Aldermen, Recorder, Town-Clerk, Town-Crier, &c., made their appearance on the Hustings, and were loudly cheered by their respective friends

The Recorder having addressed the Common Hall upon the subject of the great privilege which they were then called upon to exercise, and informed the Livery that it was their undoubted constitutional right to put in nomination any gentleman w one name might not be upon the list which would be read by the proper officer,

The Common Serjeant read the following list of gentlemen eligible to be chosen Sheriffs, as selected by the Lord Mayor, from which the Livery were to make their choice; namely, Robert Walter Carden, Esq., Alderman and Cutler; Jacob Goodhart, Esq., Grocer; Andrew Caldecott, Esq., Ironmonger; Thomas Wright Lawford, jun., Esq., Draper; George Meek, Esq., Clothworker; John Rudbert, Esq., Cutler; Joseph Bartley, Esq., Spectacle-maker; Thomas Scambler Owden, Esq., Innholder; and Edward Poynder, Esq., Plumber.

The Town-Crier then put the names to the Livery, and

The Sheriff Lawrence and Nicol declared the choice of the Livery to have fallen on Alderman Carden and Andrew Caldecott, Esq (Lond cheers.)

The Sheriffs withdrew to make known the result of the election to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, who had previously retired.

The Lord Mayor and Aldermen having returned to the hustings,

The Recorder re-announced the election of the Sheriffs and the other officers.

Alderman Carden returned thanks.

Mr. Caldecott was then loudly called for; but that gentleman was not present.

The Chamberlain and other officers were then elected, and the Town-Crier dissolved the hall.

NON-DELIVERY OF NEWSPAPERS AND LETTERS ON SUNDAY.

A meeting of proprietors of newspapers was held on Tuesday evening, at Peel's Coffee-house; Mr. Ingram, of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, in the chair. The secretary (Mr. J. Scott) stated that, under the direction of the committee, a circular had been addressed to the proprietors of all the London and country newspapers, any unnecessary interference with its operations is the most unbearable of oppressions and the most galling of insults that can be offered to the people of a free and intellectual metropolis. Instructors, and defender

That her Majesty's Government, in suddenly acting upon the resolve of an accidental majority, by stopping the delivery of the post on Sundays without taking measures to consult the real sense of the honourable the House, has abandoned its duty, and impolitically acted with the property and interests of your petitioners.

That the additional labour of Sunday labour which will be occasioned by the efforts of the newspaper proprietors to protect their property will be threefold that saved by the new regulations.

That the stamp tax upon newspapers has been vindicated as giving the privilege of transmission by post, and that to make this privilege valuable to one class and deny it to another is an act of the grossest fiscal injustice

That the circulation of newspapers on a Sunday is a civilizing act, meritorious to the highest degree in a Christian country, where every individual is supposed to take his part of a duty to the public affairs, and where this day is the only one that affords to many of the industrious classes the opportunity, by the perusal of the public prints, to inform themselves of their duty and rights.

That the business to be transacted by a great number of individuals in the course of the ensuing week is principally furnished by the information, as to matters of fact, and otherwise, communicated by the weekly papers on the Sunday.

That the Sunday is a close monopoly of the most essential means of communication, which [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[

ASCENT OF THE NASSAU BALLOON, FROM VAUXHALL GARDENS, ON SATURDAY.

BALLOON ASCENT AT VAUXHALL-GARDENS.

A GRAND fete was given at these Gardens on Saturday, when the most attractive scene was the ascent of the Nassau Balloon, with Mr. Green and Mr. Rush. Three of the members of the Nepaulese Embassy were present, to whom the balloon, when inflated, was an object of great interest, as was also the ascent. They examined the balloon with great minuteness, and its construction evidently excited their wonder and admiration. As it ascended they stood gazing at it with marked curiosity and attention, and remained on the spot until it was almost lost to view.

We have been favoured by Mr. Rush with the following account of the voyage.

The balloon having passed over a wood not far from St. Paul's Cray, in Kent, Mr. Green observed a favourable situation for descending, which he effected easily in a grass field near the residence of Lord Wynford, at twenty-six minutes after eight o'clock, the distance from Vauxhall being about twelve miles. The servants of his Lordship and the inhabitants of the neighbourhood afforded the aëronauts every assistance.

The altitude attained, according to the calculations of Mr. William Jones, of No. 4, Rupert-street, Haymarket, was as follows:—

	Therm. Deg	Barom. Inches.	Feet.
Upper Station ..	26	15.00	19,161
Lower Station ..	73	30 38	539
Difference			18 631
Mean temperature, 54·5 Fahr., add .			1,373
Altitude			19 304

After Mr. Rush had made the above observations, the balloon continued rapidly ascending, and the barometer fell to 14.30 inches, shewing an increased altitude of 1281 feet, making in the whole 21,185 feet, or four miles and 65 feet.

It will be observed, the decrease of temperature was upon an average of a degree of the thermometer to 538 feet.

LARGE ROSE-TREE (HYBRID CHINA), AT MR. BUXTON'S GARDENS, WANDSWORTH-ROAD.

LARGE ROSE-TREE.

THIS gigantic plant, noticed in our Journal of last week, as growing in the nursery-ground of Mr. Buxton, in the Wandsworth-road, is what is termed a standard rose, of the Fulgian species, variety Hybrid China. This tree, unlike other descriptions of the same plant, improves in size and growth with age; and although 28 ft. in height, and 20 ft. in circumference, and bearing 2060 roses in bloom, it is not so large as it appeared in 1846; the proprietor having cut the branches to prevent their encroaching upon the garden-walk.

THE BLACK PRINCE STRAWBERRY.

FOR this prolific and early kind of strawberry, Mr. Cuthill, of Camberwell, has just received a certificate of merit from the Horticultural Society, for well-ripened examples from the open ground. The Black Prince is now becoming universally cultivated, more especially for early crops: it is well flavoured, and very productive.

The Black Prince also gained a prize from the Botanic Society, Regent's Park, last year, so that it has now been well proved: it travels well, and will keep longer on the plant after it is ripe, and the fruit keep longer after it is picked, than any other sort. It is the king of strawberries for preserving, being ten days before any other good sort, and an enormous bearer. Mr. Cuthill has sold it this year, from the open ground, at four shillings a pound: the sharp frost on the 10th of May cut up all the early blossoms, or he would have had it in much earlier.

Some of the Black Prince Strawberries have been forwarded to the Prince of Wales, in acknowledgement of which Mr. Cuthill has received the following communication:—

"Buckingham Palace, June 23, 1850.

"Sir,—I had the honour to present to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, by permission of the Prince Albert, a dish of Black Prince Strawberries, which you were good enough to leave for his Royal Highness at the Palace, and which have been much approved.

"At the proper season I shall be glad to have some plants of these Strawberries for the Royal gardens.

"I am, yours,

"Mr. Cuthill." "C. B. PHIPPS."

Great quantities of cod continue to be brought ashore at Wick. In Shetland and Orkney the take is also abundant. Last week, in Shetland, the smacks did well. At Reawick the average was about 800—the highest the sloop Nymph, Captain Watts. At Walls, the average was 300; highest sloop, 1000. At Scalloway, average, 950; highest, 500.

The church at Heath has been broken into, and a silver alms-basin, a folio copy of the Homilies, a black silk scarf, and a handsome prayer-book with clasps, stolen from it.

BLACK PRINCE STRAWBERRY PLANT, GROWN BY MR. CUTHILL, [illegible]

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1850.